"I have had picture men tell me they can buy scenarios for $50. I have told them I can get songs for 35 cents, but the ones I want I have got to go after and pay the price. So, in the days to come money will have to be paid for screen plots; for that matter, I can name manufacturers who are paying advanced prices to-day. I know something about this plot business, for I have been thinking in terms of plots for over twenty years. When I get an idea for a song the first thing I do is to write it out in story form. When I get it where I want it, or as near to that point as I can get, I then try to condense it into verse. I try to get into the words of that song a human story, one that will appeal to the heart. If I have had any success in song writing, I believe it is because of this fact."

Mr. Harris had many interesting stories to tell of his experiences and of the incidents leading to the writing of different songs. He has been watching pictures for a long time. He is enthusiastic over the possibilities—over those already developed and over what the future contains. Matching that enthusiasm is his energy—you feel that in talking with him—in listening to him. It looks now as if a goodly share of that energy and enthusiasm were to be diverted to motion pictures—and if it is the industry will be no loser.

CRIMMINS AND GORE JOIN VITAGRAPH.

Dan Crimmins and Rose Gore, of the old variety team of Crimmins and Gore, who have made vaudeville audiences laugh for the past twenty years, have been engaged by the Vitagraph Company to appear in a series of comedy pictures similar in treatment to their recognized line of work on the regular stage. While the team have appeared individually in pictures, they have never worked for the same firm at the same time, and are looking forward with pleasure to their present engagement with the Vitagraph Company. The first picture in which they will appear will be "Officer Kate," a laughable conceit in the picture line, produced under the directorship of Ned Finley.

PUTTING 'EM OUT OF BUSINESS.

Minden, Neb., May 14, 1914.

Editor Moving Picture World.

Dear Sir: Enclosed find check for $3.00, for which please boost my subscription a year. I have been taking The World for a year, and in that time I have put four competitors out of business. The only answer is The Moving Picture World.

The first time I wrote to your projection editor I was stepped on with both feet. Since I have had a chance to get onto his playful ways I have found out that he was only joking. If this doesn't get in before my subscription expires send the numbers that I miss. Yours truly,

Manager Gem Theater. D. C. DOYLE.

Pathe Putting Out News Daily.

Service of Revolutionary Nature To Be Inaugurated June 8. Venture Carries Great Significance in the Trade.

THE PATHE NEWS FILM, which has been before the public in the United States and Europe for a number of years, as a weekly feature in hundreds of motion picture houses, beginning Monday, June 8, is to be offered as a daily feature. For some time cryptic advertising from the Pathe offices has hinted at the big surprise, but the complete announcement of the plan has just been made and is being discussed in trade circles.

While there is no official authority for the statement, it is quite apparent that recent changes in the Pathe company's manner of handling at least a portion of its output in this country, and a marked change in the relations which have existed for years between the company and the General Film Company, have been responsible to no small extent for the birth of the Pathe Daily News, as the new service is to be called.

First of its kind in the field in the United States and altogether without opposition for a long time, the Pathe Weekly has always been quite popular among exhibitors and had been built up commercially until many copies were being sold each week. The development of the Hearst-Selig News Weekly and efforts made in behalf of the competing feature by the General Film Company are conceded to have hurt the distribution of the Pathe Weekly—to such an extent, indeed, that for some time the Pathe people have been renting their Weekly directly to the exhibitors throughout the country, disregarding the General Film Company, from which, the Pathe people claim, a number of exhibitors who wanted the Pathe Weekly were unable to rent it.

In announcing the Pathe Daily, the Pathe Company says that it has been discovered that there is a strong demand for such a service. The personal attention which members of the Pathe force have been compelled to give the distribution of the weekly feature within the past couple of months has probably either made them aware of this demand for a daily service or has created such a demand. That they are convinced that their facilities are superior to the facilities of any other concern for the turning out, not only of a weekly news film, but also of a daily news film, and that they are in a position to set a pace which any and all competitors will follow at their peril, has doubtless also had much to do with the promotion of the new feature.

The Pathe plan for the daily is to provide each exhibitor who buys the service with the livest and snappiest news events of the world, in film lengths of approximately 200 feet, the minute prints of the events have been turned out of the Pathe factory in Jersey City—and at least once a day. Thirty-seven cameramen regularly on the Pathe payroll are constantly operating in the interests of the Pathe news films throughout the North American continent. All told, the Pathe organiation covering the world includes sixty different offices and studios in principal American and European cities. While each Pathe company is independent in a sense, they are all under the same general supervision and work in perfect harmony. For a long time the weekly news film has been a feature of the company's service, not only in America, but in many foreign countries. Because of this, the various Pathe agencies have long been exchanging their best news incidents, on film, and, according to announcement by the Pathe people in Jersey City, not a week passes in which an aggregate of 15,000 feet of news film, sent from all over the world, is not received at the Jersey City plant. Careful editing and selecting from this great mass of "news" has made for the Pathe Weekly the reputation which it enjoys. Following newspaper practices, the Pathe agencies everywhere have been trained to ship their news features just as soon as they are taken and for this reason the undeveloped film is arriving at the Jersey City studio in considerable quantities every day. Selections from the daily arrivals are to be made to provide the daily screen service and the only important changes necessary as far as the Pathe people are concerned will be changes in the matter of distributing the features to the various exhibitors.

Of great value to them in this matter of rapid distribution, it is claimed by the Pathe people, will be their special non-inflammable film, a Pathe invention, which they have long been using in the Pathe Weekly. Although celluloid film of the common variety is barred from the United States mails, the Pathe non-inflammable material goes through without question. Because of this advantage, the plan in getting out the daily is to have the cameramen mail their undeveloped film to the nearest Pathe factory and have the finished print mailed to the exhibitor from the factory.

The inauguration of the Pathe Daily does not mean that the Weekly will be discontinued. The daily service will be provided such exhibitors as want it and the Weekly will be kept up for other exhibitors who think that a news feature once a week, instead of every day, is all that their communities require. Where the exhibitor takes the daily service, the plan is to have him join the several installments of film which he has received from day to day throughout the week and show them as a weekly feature on one of the closing days of the week.

Special pictures incident to the Empress of Ireland disaster off Newfoundland were shown in several of the downtown moving picture theaters Tuesday, June 2, and at the Herald Square Theater the pictures were introduced as "Pathe's Daily News." "Proctor's Daily News" on the same day was made up of Pathe pictures of the same subject matter. The "Strand Review," changed daily at the Strand Theater, is also Pathe service.

The Pathescope

A Remarkable Home Projector.

By F. H. Richardson.

RECENTLY, by invitation of Mr. Charles Warburton, assistant to Willard B. Cook, manager, the writer visited the offices of the Pathé Company and examined their new home projector—"The Pathéscope." This projector is, in some respects, a very remarkable machine. This is particularly true with regard to its simplicity, compactness and handsome appearance. The machine is mounted on a mahogany base, and is self-contained, in the sense that it is complete within itself, including the lamp, and it is to the lamp that I desire to direct particular attention.

While it was thoroughly demonstrated to me that the illumination was amply powerful to illuminate a six-foot picture very well indeed, it comes not from an arc lamp, but from a special type of incandescent globe which has a high power filament so made that the light is all contained in a space of less diameter than that of an arc lamp crater. This lamp is backed by a reflector, and it is entirely enclosed. It occupies a position less than two inches from the aperture opening, and the condensing lens rests right up against the film, within less than ¼ of an inch of the tension springs. It is a unique, and certainly a most effective arrangement.

While the design of the Pathé people is to limit the machine entirely to the use of non-inflammable film, still, there could be no possibility of igniting celluloid film at the aperture through the heat of the lamp, since that is an almost negligible quantity.

The real beauty of this whole lighting scheme, however, lies in the fact that there is no adjustment to be made, and, therefore, the amateur, be it the child, or the mother or father in the home, or the traveling salesman, or office man, can get just as good illustration of the picture as can the most experienced operator. All there is to do is to turn on the switch, which also controls the motor—for it is a motor-driven machine—and watch the picture.

The framing is accomplished in a very simple way, and there is but one sprocket in the entire mechanism, the intermittent movement being of the single "claw" type. The machine is provided with a cover, and when this is in place it very closely resembles the ordinary suitcase, so that all the traveling salesman has to do is to put on the "lid," and he is ready to take the train.

It is almost needless to say that the current for both the motor and lamp can be taken from any ordinary incandescent light socket, since the current requirement is very small.

The rewinder is attached to the machine itself, and the machine is of a very simple type.

The film is made especially for the Pathéscope. It is 1⅛ inches in width as against 1⅜ for the standard film. The pictures are ¾ of an inch wide by 9/16 inch in height. On one side there are four sprocket holes to the picture and on the other only one, though I do not exactly know the reason for this. The Pathé people purpose to supply ample film for the machine. But, after all, the mechanism is, I think, primarily designed for special office and factory work, and in this work it would, of course, handle only special films so that its being away from the standard size would be no objection.

The tension spring, or shoe, is of a very peculiar type, its surface being corrugated, just as though you cut a section up and down out of a washboard. Just what the idea in this is I do not know, but I should suppose it would be a very effective arrangement, though I don't see why it would be superior to the plain, flat shoe. Its length is about 3½ inches.

Taken all together, the machine is, as I stated in the beginning, a very remarkable one, and is unquestionably destined to have a large sale in the homes of wealthy people, and in business offices and factories. The Pathé Company is certainly to be complimented on the ingenuity displayed in the construction of this projector, and particularly on the utilization of an entirely new principle in the lighting of the moving picture.

Doings at Los Angeles.

WHEN the 15,000 English celebrators came to Santa Monica to enjoy their national Empire Day festivities, the cameramen who represent weeklies were right in their element. Each grinder of current events was delighted with the big day. There was a long automobile parade and various athletic games and amusements, making good material for the weeklies.

* * *

The Lasky studio is gradually being outgrown by the big feature company. Manager Fred Kley is rushing around all the time trying to add new buildings and stages. The last acquisition to the studio was a large two story house which was converted into dressing room quarters, and now this is outgrown. An addition is to be built adjoining the building. New scene docks and a paint frame are under construction.

* * *

Hobart Bosworth and his company that went north some time ago returned recently after a successful, in spite of a great deal of fog and rain. During the clear intervals they did some splendid scenes for "An Odyssey of the North," especially around Seattle. One of the Seattle bluecoats got the surprise of his life. Noticing a big crowd around the totem pole blocking traffic, he plunged in, to find an unkempt Eskimo Indian much excited at the sight of the pole, and kissing it. "Here, come on now, get outer here," the arm of the law said, dragging the unresisting Indian to the edge of the crowd, only to be paralyzed to hear the latter say in well cultivated English tones, "Thank you so much. Would you mind doing that again." It was Mr. Bosworth, as "Nazass," who seized the opportunity of adding an effective touch to the scene, which was not in the script. The copper was game and did it twice more. When the maker of these films told us the story, he said "sounds like a press story, but it is gospel truth." The company has started on a new four-reeler, many of the exteriors of which will be made at Lagoona beach.

* * *

Edwin August who recently joined forces with the Horkheimer brothers at the Balboa Features studio, is playing the lead and directing "Their Great Secret." Hal August is in the cast, as is Neva Dolorez, the society actress. Everything is humming at this busy studio, and not a day passes but there is some new addition to this flourishing plant. The new printing room has been completed and the film is being finished here all the time. The heads of the firm are looking about for a new location, which will be larger than the present one.

* * *

Paul Jacobs, known in the Sterling films as "Billie," is fast gaining a celestial position in the moving picture world under the careful and efficient tutelage of Robert Thornby. He is a great little chap and is as interested in his work as he is in eating ice cream cones. Thornby makes the young actor rehearse scenes many times, until he has them "down pat." Thornby directed him ever since he started, in the Keystone films some time ago. There are several other promising youngsters in Thornby's care, and he seems to have them all working to one end, that of making good "kid" pictures.

* * *

Robert Edeson will soon be here and working on "The Call of the North" which will be produced by the Lasky Feature Co., and the studio is now being gotten ready for the new pictures. The last two are nearly finished and will be shipped east soon.

* * *

Harry Pollard, of Beauty brand fame, has taken unto himself a new bungalow up in Santa Barbara. His machine has also received a harmonious coat of paint and the Pollard family is ready for the mad rush of society.

* * *

The Fred Mace company is still producing comedies at the old Majestic studios in Boyle Heights, and the present run of films seems to be pretty good. Everyone around the plant is looking toward the return of the head of the flourishing young concern.

* * *

Francis Ford and Grace Cunard, together with the rest of their company, have returned from San Francisco, Southern California, and Mexico, where they had been making some big real sea pictures. They report an exciting trip.

* * *

Cora Drew, who is playing at the Universal studio under several of the big directors, wrote a letter the other day in which she placed a paragraph which is short and probably is very true, at least with most people. "I cannot say I like pictures better than the real stage, for when one gets a good part it is a great pleasure to know one can play it again and again, while in films it can be done but once—thus one forfeits the opportunity to study and improve on the rendition. In the legitimate drama there are constant opportunities to improve; one's mind dwells on situations until they become almost a part of one's reality.."

* * *

"The Horse Wrangler," a story of western tinge, is being produced by Jack Adolfi at the Mutual studios. It is by the well known writer George Pattullo.

* * *

It is rumored, and seems almost to be a fact, that P. C. Hartigan has signed with Pathe to manage and direct one of its companies at the old beach studio. He has not been seen and the story can not be confirmed.

* * *

The Kalem studio at the beach is one of the nicest little plants on the coast and is well situated, having all kinds of locations right at the front door.

* * *

The Idiot," a heart interest drama of real life, the story of a cripple boy who sacrifices much for his mother, is being produced by Donald Crisp at the Reliance studios. The story is said to be a very strong one.

* * *

Thomas Ross will shortly leave for New York with "The Only Son," the film in which he starred. The custom still prevails of each star taking back his own film.

CLARKE IRVINE.

ERROR IN CAPTION LINE.

Through an error in proof-reading, in our issue of May 30, the title on page 1276 under illustration from the Solax production was given as scene from the "Million Dollar Mystery" when it should have been from the "Million Dollar Robbery." The familiarity of our proofreaders with the well-known Thanhouser production, the "Million Dollar Mystery," undoubtedly accounts for this oversight. Our readers will kindly note this correction.

"The Million Dollar Mystery" is one of the larger serial productions soon to be before the public, and one of those which is to be released by installments on the same day with the published story which will appear in several of the largest daily publications throughout the country. These papers will be the Chicago Tribune, Boston Globe, Cincinnati Enquirer, New York Globe, Buffalo Courier and 200 other newspapers.

Harold MacGrath is the author of this series, working in conjunction with Lloyd Lonergan, the Thanhouser photo-play editor. The Thanhouser Company has gone to practically unlimited expense in the making of "The Million Dollar Mystery," and from the amount of pains that have been lavished on it it can hardly be anything else than a very good production or series of productions. Among other preparations for this series, the Francis Wilson homestead at New Rochelle, N. Y., was purchased especially as a headquarters for the all-star cast that will appear in these pictures. This cast will include Florence LaBadie, Marguerite Snow, Lila Chester, James Cruze, Sidney Bracy, Frank Farrington and Alfred Norton.

In all, "The Million Dollar Mystery" will aggregate 46 reels which will be released weekly in two-reel installments, thus covering a period of 23 weeks, making it the most comprehensive serial production ever done. The first number of the series will be released on June 22.

A LITTLE FILM PARTY IN TEXAS.

On Wednesday night, May 20th, Albert Russell, manager of the Texas Film Corporation, Dallas, Texas, and Jas. B. Kelly, general representative of the Consolidated Film and Supply Co., and their respective and charming wives, gave a "Sympathy Trot" and banquet in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Ned Depinet and Mr. and Mrs. Harry T. Peebles. Both of these couples had just returned from their honeymoons. Mr. Depinet is manager of the Consolidated Film and Supply Co. Mr. Peebles is Dallas manager of the Warner Feature Film Co.

Over 100 guests were present, including all of the representative film men in the city. Among the guests present were the following well known in the film industry of Texas: Messrs. Clyde and George Slater, Messrs, Reise, Buchannon, Hamburger and Goss, of the Souther Feature Film Co.; O. F. Whittle and Mrs. Whittle, of the Wurlitzer Co.; Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Thrash, of the R. D. Thrash Film Co.; Messrs. Underwood and Scott, of the U. S. Amusement Co.; Mr. Earl St. John, of the Mutual Film Co.; Mr. H. T. Peebles and John Botto, of the Warner Film Co.; Mr. Joseph Block, of the Tiche Goettiger Co.; Mr. W. A. Bishop and Mrs. Bishop, of the Dallas Seating Co., and many others. The affair took place at the residence of Albert Russell.

Used Projector on Ocean Liners

J. O'Neil Farrell Arrives in New York City After 35,000-Mile Journey Made to Test Cinioscope—Brings Interesting Yarns of Foreign Climes.

NOT a little has been written about the feasibility or possibility of equipping ocean liners with moving picture theaters for the entertainment of the passengers who are constantly complaining that there is so little to do with one's time while making a long voyage. Attempts have been made by various picture concerns to put the plan over as a commercial proposition, but with indifferent success for the reason that practically insurmountable difficulties have been encountered in working out some of the apparently minor difficulties of this form of entertainment.

J. O'Neil Farrel.

Bringing with him valuable information on this interesting subject, J. O'Neil Farrell, known in moving picture circles not only in the United States but also in Europe and in the Central American countries, arrived in New York City a few days ago after having traveled 35,000 miles on water, principally for the purpose of conducting experiments in this field of moving picture activity which most people believe will ultimately be opened.

Mr. Farrell is an American boy and, for a time, was traveling manager for the C. & K. circuit of theaters, with headquarters in Detroit. Some years ago he went to London and entered the employ of the British & Colonial Film Company, serving them in various capacities, but for the most part, as a director of photoplays. Early this year he sailed from London on the Elders & Fiffes line for Colon, Panama, taking with him a small projecting machine called the Cinioscope, for the purpose of trying it out as a solution to some of the problems which had been encountered in attempting to work out the plan of cinematography aboard ocean liners. Before he landed in Boston, after having completed tests, Mr. Farrell had traveled 35,000 miles.

Attempts have been made to project moving pictures aboard ocean-going vessels with the aid of the ordinary projecting machine. One vessel of the Hamburg American line was equipped in this manner during a trip from Hamburg to New York and return but, following these tests, the service was discontinued for the reason, it is said, principally that the Board of Fire Insurance Underwriters were unwilling to authorize equipment of this kind. It was also found that great difficulty was experienced in making the ordinary projecting machine which operates by means of an electric arc light, keep uniformly at work while the vessel was rolling and pitching, as it could not be restrained from so doing.

The Cinioscope, which Mr. Farrel used, is a machine manufactured in London, which operates with ordinary incandescent electric lamps encased in a gun socket, and in this respect it resembles some other projecting machines which are sold, principally for home use. In that the Cinioscope projects film of the standard size and not the special reels which are prepared by the companies controlling the so-called "home projectors," the Cinioscope differs from most others of this type. Mr. Farrell says that he found it possible to give one or two shows a week aboard vessel all the time he was traveling, sometimes while storms were raging. In this connection he remarks that he is firmly convinced that moving picture programs shown aboard boats materially lessen the discomfort of travelers who are unfortunate enough to become seasick. Looking at a picture, he says, distracts the minds of even the seasick and effects a sort of Christian Science cure by making the patient forget his ailment.

As the result of the tests which Mr. Farrell made, it is very likely that a number of improvements will be made in the Cinioscope which may soon be placed upon the American market. To adapt it for best use on the ocean liners Mr. Farrell has discovered that it will need a more powerful light. The satisfaction the little projector gave and its complete freedom from all of the objectionable features which the Underwriters pointed out in connection with the arc light projector, Mr. Farrell says is most likely to result in a machine of this nature being the first to be adopted for the equipment of moving picture theaters on ocean liners. Mr. Farrell expects to return to London within the next few weeks.

At the Sign of the Flaming Arcs

By George Blaisdell.

THE senior class of Princeton University, at its annual poll, has voted Mary Pickford its favorite actress. Am just wondering what some of the old-line, the legitimate, stage girls and women will think about that, how they feel about it, how they will explain it! The action can hardly be ascribed to familiarity with screen players and unfamiliarity with those of the stage, for these young men probably see more plays on the metropolitan stage than the average New Yorker. Likewise it will hardly be denied that the majority opinion of a body of men just finishing a four-year course at an institution like Princeton is of weight and entitled to respect. The vote is more than a compliment to Little Mary; it is also a compliment to the screen.

* * *

The Screen Club has been fixing up its backyard, or what was its backyard. It is now converted into a "garden." A cement floor has taken the place of the gravel. A nine-foot latticed barrier has been erected on the dividing line. A skeleton roof provides a basis for a canvas covering to shut out the rays of the sun in the early morning—while it may not be necessary to use it for that purpose, still, there is nothing like being prepared—and also the rain. On the platform extending from the level of the grill room floor a fireproof booth has been erected, and in this will be installed a Powers 6-A, a present of the Nicholas Power Company. The screen will be 6 by 8 feet. A lot of work was to be done on the new garden this week, so that everything would be in shape for the reception and entertainment of convention visitors.

* * *

Francis X. Bushman has wired the Screen Club to expect him and his bunch about June 6. The whole "push" will be on the watchout for "Bush."

* * *

During intermission on the opening night of "Cabiria," John Bunny was standing in the lobby of the Knickerbocker. "What a wonderful character is that man Maciste, the Numidian slave," said the Vitagraph comedian. "The Itala Company must have combed Europe to find him. Not only has he a wonderful physique, but he is athletic and he has remarkable nerve." Maciste truly is a wonderful character, and to us he seemed the center of interest of this great subject. Inquiry proves Mr. Bunny's surmise to be correct—the company did discover this giant as the result of a long search; and he was found in a porter on a pier. He looks big, but hardly six feet five inches in height or of a weight of 267 pounds, so perfectly is he proportioned. No wonder he can pick up an ordinary sized man and throw him about as other men toss a baby. It is said that the portrayer of Maciste was rehearsed for four months before the camera, and that for his first scene he was rehearsed two or three score times. The result more than justified the pains. In a large cast containing many fine actors he easily stands in the front rank. He is always the slave; he never reveals consciousness of the fact that he is one of the great figures of the drama. His awakening by his master, Fulvio, at the wheel to which for ten years he has been chained and his joy at the meeting mark the dramatic height of the story. The review of "Cabiria" in the New York American was accompanied by a five-column cartoon of Fulvio, Cabiria and Maciste, but it was the Numidian who most impressed the artist if we may judge from his drawing. So, too, it is likely the public will be impressed.

* * *

It may have been due partly to the decline of the theatrical season, but it is a fact nevertheless that the New York press treated the first showing of "Cabiria" as if it were a big stage production, practically all of the papers introducing their reviews with a "spread" head. This recognition of the silent drama has been slow in arriving, and it has been grudgingly given. Prejudice against the motion picture has been nowhere more deeply seated than in the minds of the old-line dramatic critics—not even among the older producers or among those actors who clung to fossilized tradition. The awakening for all is as healthy as naturally it has been a bit rough.

* * *

Epes W. Sergent sailed on June 4 for Jacksonville, where he will spend a couple of weeks working and resting. As to the rest stuff, it is said that his Jacksonville friends have made elaborate arrangements to have his photograph taken in the event he should in an unguarded moment be detected really relaxing. E. W. S. is "sure" some hustler.

* * *

Fred Mace is by this time on his way to Europe, where he will make pictures in the casts of which are well-known stage persons.

Frank A. Garbutt

Los Angeles Business Man and All-Around Sportsman Who Is Taking a Deep Interest in Picture Production.

IN the Moving Picture World two weeks ago were printed photographs of four men who were prominent in the formation of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, the big feature distributing organizations—Messrs. Zukor, Lasky, Hodkinson and Bosworth. There is printed herewith the likeness of one whom has had much to do with the initiation and crystallization of these plans—Frank A. Garbutt, of Los Angeles, Cal. Mr. Garbutt has been financially interested in pictures now for practically a year, ever since he became the treasurer of Bosworth, Inc.

Out in his own country Mr. Garbutt needs no introduction. One of the Los Angeles newspapers recently referred to him as "the greatest sportsman on this coast." He has valid claim to the title, having, as the article quoted pointed out, "tried his hand at everything, from auto racing and yachting, to flying, and all with signal success." One of these successes was on the occasion when Aviator Martin went after the altitude record "with passenger." He got it, and Mr. Garbutt was the passenger. This feat alone would entitle the treasurer of the Bosworth Company to credit for the possession of nerve. But he has more than that; he has material possessions, accumulated in various big business enterprises, which he is placing behind Paramount Pictures.

Frank A. Garbutt.

Mr. Garbutt has had in mind ever since last December the mutual advantages to be derived by a consolidation of the distributing forces of Famous Players, Lasky and Bosworth. Likewise he has never lost sight of the difficulties to be encountered in devising a working agreement that would be satisfactory to the various interests. He knew in the beginning there was one factor that was vital in the permanent success of any business—a belief on the part of each in the business ability and integrity and producing judgment of the others. It was to participate in the final negotiations in the formation of the new company that Mr. Garbutt recently came to New York. He had intended to remain but three days, but his stay was lengthened to ten before he was able to get away. It was his idea of the situation that all discoverable possibilities of future differences of opinion should be traversed before the signing of papers.

Mr. Garbutt, who in the new combination will represent the Bosworth interests, is described by his business associates as being a wonderful judge of good pictures. He personally sees many productions, and is credited with the ability to look at the other fellow's output from an impartial viewpoint—in other words, inability to see the good in the work of others is not one of his faults. "No matter what pictures we have been producing in the past," said Mr. Garbutt during his short stay in New York, "in the making of subjects for our new program we will put forth every effort to make them still better, and the expense will not be spared. Pictures will be made as near perfect as possible. That means we will not hesitate to take scenes over and over until we have exhausted the possibilities as we see them. I am a great believer in Mr. Hodkinson, the president of Paramount Pictures. I have spent many weeks with him in the discussion of plans for this organization, and I may say it was due to him and to my belief in the soundness of his ideas that I first became interested in pictures in a larger way—in the film industry as a field for investment."

Mr. Garbutt is a strong advocate of artistic advertising material. He thinks many picture manufacturers have been a bit slow to realize the advantages of the higher class of paper, of the quality used by the best theatrical producers. So also he has strong ideas on the value of the human element in business—in team work, in the working together of the men at the head of a concern with one goal in view. While denying any intention of criticising others, he is convinced that the development of the picture industry has not been advanced by the unfortunate dissessions that have marked some divisions of it. Mr. Garbutt favors likewise the creation of a feeling of mutual confidence between the exhibitor and the manufacturer, the furtherance of the idea that the interests of each are identical.

As an illustration of Mr. Garbutt's way of doing business it may be stated that last winter following the first private showing of "The Sea Wolf" in New York City the treasurer of the Bosworth organization was notified that if he would hold it back until late in the spring he could make an initial showing of his first release in the big new Strand and be given a week's run. The picture could have been given any number of one-day bookings if issued immediately. Without hesitation Mr. Garbutt decreed the delay. It is doubtful if ever before in the history of the film business a production was held back for three months in order that it might receive a more elaborate introduction to the public. However, as said before, that is Mr. Garbutt's way of doing business. That his judgment was sound is proved by the accompanying photograph, taken in front of the Strand Theater on the evening of the final day's run of "The Sea Wolf."

Last Night of "The Sea Wolf" at the Strand.

Through an arrangement between Mr. Garbutt and Jack London, the famous writer is at work on a big scenario for a Mexican war picture, to be produced in Southern California, near the Mexican line. Mr. London is now in Vera Cruz with the United States troops, where he is acting as war correspondent. Consequently he is in a position to get his material at first hand, and the filmed product, which by the way, will be one of the first subjects to be released by Paramount pictures when it begins business in September, ought to be worth going a distance to see.

HUTCHINSON RETURNS FROM AUTO TOUR.

Samuel S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Mfg. Co., Chicago, after a trip to New York, covered Northern Illinois and Wisconsin by automobile. Mr. Hutchinson reports a healthy growth of the picture theaters and especially comments on the large percentage of the theaters supplied by Mutual exchanges.

Music for the Picture

Conducted by CLARENCE E. SINN

"Judith of Bethulia."

A COMMUNICATION from Claude Ranzels Hartzell, organist of the Trianon Theater, Birmingham, Alabama, encloses the musical accompaniment to the Biograph release of the above title as played by the writer on April 27, 1914:

First Reel.

Open with "Melody in F." until Judith in prayer; then:
"The Rosary" (Nevin) until she leaves woman with child.
"The Army."—"William Tell." (Lemare-Rossina.)
"Water and Flood Famine."—"Simple Aveu." (Thome.) Then:
"Peer Gynt." (Lemare—Greig.)—three movements; then:
"Toccata."—Widor (from 6th Organ Symphony) until end of reel.

Third Reel.

Start with "Twilight." (Trysinger.) until:
"Judith Before King"—then "A Day in Venice." (Smith-Nevin.)
First movement of "Moonlight Sonata," (Bethoven) until Judith before King; then:
"Idillis" (Lack). Play this through twice, then:
"A Vesper Hymn" (Wilkins) until Judith raises knife to kill; then:
"Idillis-Lack" again until famine scene; then:
"Reverie" (Frysinger). Then first movement "William Tell" until:
Without Their Prince. Then "Priests March" (from Athalia) until end.

Mr. Hartzell continues:

> At one time during the evening I had three singers—soprano, alto and baritone and at the beginning of the picture the alto sang "Ave Marie," and when the part comes where Judith is in tears I had the baritone sing "Oh! Dry Those Tears." When Judith is before the king the alto sang "Love's Old Sweet Song." Then after she kills the king, the soprano sang "Open the Gates of the Temple" and then I played on the organ "Toccata" (Becker) until end of reel.

This looks like a very dignified as well as musical program. Just how much, if any, the singing will detract from the picture I don't know. I have seen pictures in which vocal music added to the effect. In the program given above, Mr. Hartzell seems to have filled the greater part of a reel with vocal music for a part of the evening. Query: Does the first section of the program include first and second reels?

From Another "Gem Theater."

Florence L. Currier writes from the Gem Theater, Barton, Vermont:

> I grant you it is really splendid to have an orchestra of real musicians who properly "cue" the photoplays, but remember there is a large number of smaller houses in the small country towns like ours who could not afford the additional expense, neither could they find an orchestra of musicians.
>
> While your department is certainly an exceptionally good one, you have been rather indefinite as to just what sort of music you thought appropriate for regular releases, and of course that's what we are interested in. We are packing our little house up here—I say "our theater"—although I am only interested in it as being the pianist, but that makes me very much interested. Although we are away up near the Canadian border, our Vermont Yankees know real music and real pictures, and our management takes a great deal of pains to see that they have both.
>
> I have found that for comedies (we run one every night on a four-reel program) the popular rags and one-steps work out splendidly; and as we offer for sale to our patrons each week the music which was played the previous week, I am able to get a line on the kind of music they like best. This is sold at a price slightly less than cost, and you would be surprised to see how eagerly it is picked up and the number of bids there will be for certain numbers.
>
> You understand this is for piano alone. Drums may be added after I leave; personally I believe they fit in to about one, or at most two selections in an evening, and I have not met the drummer who didn't want to be in at all the deaths.
>
> For dramas I keep a folio of selections on the piano at all times; these comprise selections from the North and South, old Battle Hymns, old love songs, marches, etc., which I find very useful, though of course I have a great deal of this memorized. For the intense situations I am able to extemporize, but if I were not there are several good collections of hurry, mysterious, battle and pathetic music to be had, and it only requires a little thought to be able to fit all of it in well. For example, we had "The Octaroon" a short time ago. I wanted to start it with some life, therefore I chose "Yankee Breezes," a medley of North and South. As the picture developed I used several Southern airs—"Old Folks at Home," "In the Evening by the Moonlight," etc., but of course several intense situations coming up in the first reel, I must change quickly to agitato. The second reel offers several excellent opportunities for musical climaxes. At the slave auction I played "Nellie Gray," and for the fire scene I used what would be called "hurry stuff." In the third reel during the chase of the foreman by the Indian, I played minor chords mostly, keeping them in prominence until the climax, and finishing in the last scene with a blending of "Kentucky Home" with "Nellie Gray."
>
> I may add that this picture only serves as an illustration. Think of the adaptation of "Love's Old Sweet Song" and "The Rosary" in the Broken Chord (or Old Musician, I've forgotten which).
>
> Our manager puts the matter of proper music up to me, giving me carte blanche as to expense, though it is not expensive handling it in the way we do. I buy about twenty copies of popular stuff each week, and the most of it is sold (at a reduced rate) the week following. In this way I am enabled to keep up a new stock at slight expense.
>
> One thing more: I could not play if it were not so arranged so I could keep glancing at the picture, and I do not believe the right music can ever be "cued in" unless the pianist or orchestra leader is able to watch the picture. I think the trouble today is more with the pianists of our little houses than with the managers, although I know with some of them it is "Too Much Mustard" from start to finish. I am glad to say I am not working for one of that kind.

Miss Currier has shown us a way to keep up to date with the popular kind of music. I held this letter back until I could get further information from the lady on this point, it appearing to me as containing possibilities for profitable development. The Gem Theater however is not trying to run a music store—merely letting its patrons share the expense of the new music which it likes to hear. Miss Currier buys one copy only of each number—about twenty pieces each week, and these are sold to the first comer some time during the next week.

The expense of music is a great item in picture theaters, particularly when a constantly changing program is demanded. It is difficult—in many cases impossible—to get "professional copies" from the publishers, when one works in a small town. Publishers prefer to "boost" by and through city musicians and singers. It seems to me that the idea advanced by Miss Currier can be used to advantage in most of the smaller places. The expense of music is borne by the theater in which Miss Currier is playing, she selecting it and the managers, Pierce & Caron, paying for it.

OBSERVATIONS

BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN

ACCORDING to reports in the local daily papers the supporters of the Smith-Hughes Censorship Bill at Washington, D. C., are now contending that motion picture censorship by national law is not an innovation; that Congress enacted a law prohibiting iterstate shipment of motion pictures of prize fights and at a subsequent session, in the Tariff bill, gave the Secretary of the Treasury censorship of imported motion pictures. This line of contention is in keeping with nearly all the International Reform Bureau has put forward in its desperate and unjust fight at Washington for the establishment of Federal censorship.

* * *

Assuming that these conditions exist, and without taking the trouble to ascertain whether or not they do, these agitators and fanatics ask why the motion picture interests did not oppose the measures? And if Federal censorship was constitutional then, how can it be otherwise now? If these agitators were susceptible to reason the questions would be satisfactorily answered by reforming the interrogators to the proverb, "God hath made man upright, but they have sought out many inventions."

* * *

Like many assertions made by Rev. Crafts, and his followers, the Acts of the 62nd and 63rd Congress have as much bearing upon the present national censorship issue as the A. B. C. mediation has to do with the anti-bathtub crusade in New Jersey. In referring to the enactments, they give them in part only. They deceive the public. They attempt to hide hatred with false lips. As a matter of fact there is no Federal censorship against foreign films. There is a law prohibiting the importation of certain films, but it only carries with it on option of censorship by the government.

* * *

In order to counteract the deceptive claims made by the crusaders (who, after all, are unconscious puppets in the hands of officer seekers and designing politicians) the uninitiated should be enlightened as to the facts. Public opinion was against the Johnson-Jeffries fight pictures from the start. The motion picture people have never knowingly opposed the public opinion. That is why the Inter-State Commerce Act bearing upon prize fight pictures was not fought.

* * *

The enactment against foreign pictures was a second thought and Congress passed a law against importation of motion pictures of prize fights. In other words it was practically an extension of the previous Act, but to save the Inter-State Commerce Board the trouble of watching for such importations it was decided that the Customs Houses should do the work. In all cases of film importations since that time importers must furnish the government with affidavits that they do not contain prize fight films. Upon production of the affidavits the goods pass through to the appraisers and receive at their hands the same inspection as all other importations. If, however, the required evidence is not forthcoming, then the films are censored. If found to contain prize fight pictures the offending portion of the importation is burned up in the furnaces of the government and the importer has no appeal.

* * *

It must be clear to any reasonable person that these agitators whom God created upright sought the authority given by Congress to the Secretary of the Treasury as an invention to make the uniformed believe that all motion pictures imported are censored and failure to place domestic pictures on the same basis is discrimination. A crafty attempt to turn the tables in argument.

* * *

President M. A. Neff, of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, comes forward with a statement that he is opposed to the Smith-Hughes censorship bill because it is ambiguous and would not create harmony or relieve the present situation. He urges that every manufacturer, renter and exhibitor of films, and the editors of motion picture journals in the United States, as well as members of the National Censor Board, meet in conference at the convention of the league at Dayton, O., next month to discuss the censor question and agree upon plans for the best interests of all concerned.

Mr. Neff's sentiments are being strongly endorsed from the co-operative standpoint, but free expression is given to the opinion that he is not sufficiently aggressive in his opposition to the proposed law and the method of fighting it. The prevailing sentiment is that the Smith-Hughes bill is unconstitutional and those opposed to it must do the fighting now, and at Washington. The time that will be lost in waiting until next month and in discussing ambiguities and plans for harmony may be fatal to the motion picture interests. The Reform Bureau will not wait for mediation. It is not seeking harmony. It wants censorship, and nothing short of that will satisfy it.

* * *

Under existing circumstances but two lines of action devolve upon the motion picture people. The first is to keep pressing the Ohio test case and get it before the United States Supreme Court for final adjudication as to whether official censorship of motion pictures is constitutional. The next is to defeat or stay all censorship enactments until that question is decided. The Supreme Court of the United States is the real battle ground and what it decides will control regardless of what may be done at Washington, D. C., or in any of the other States. The power of that court extends to all cases in law and equity arising under the Constitution of the United States. If the motion picture people are sustained the agitators will have received a quietus from which they will not recover, so long as the picture people do not abuse the privileges.

* * *

It is a pity that the exhibitors of the country are divided. With a solid front the censorship question could be decisively settled with much less loss of time and money than will be involved under existing circumstances. A well-known lawyer said the other day that if all interested were working in harmony he had no doubt that the test case appealed from Ohio, and that now pending in Pennsylvania might be coupled on a case stated plan so as to submit them and have them ruled upon simultaneously. It was his impression that the Pennsylvania case reflects more concise strength than the Ohio one. In Pennsylvania the three chief contentions against consorship are (1) it violates freedom of the press; (2) denies the right of trial by jury; (3) it is class legislation. The Ohio case seems to hinge more upon the question of press freedom. If the exhibitors lose the Ohio case, he said, the Pennsylvania case will still be in reserve because the claims put forward are different in some respects from those in the Ohio case. But if the Supreme Court decides that the question of official censorship is properly before it in the Ohio case and that official censorship is unconstitutional the reformers will have nothing left to do but quietly fold their tents and steal away. The only alternative they may have will be to try and get the Constitution of the United States amended, and it would not surprise me to see them attempting it."

* * *

Although the regular theatrical business (or what was left of it) has only just closed its season the magnates in it have already commenced to tell the reporters what they are going to do to the motion pictures next season. The Shuberts say the outlook for the regulars was never brighter. Lee Shubert is credited with the statement that the moving pictures have been over done. He says the pioneers made millions in the business and attracted a large amount of speculative capital to the field, but conditions existing today are different from what existed two or three years ago. Now, he says, strenuous competition has forced the manufacturers to engage actors who demand higher prices than they were getting on the legitimate stage. The speculative phase of the picture field, he adds, has reached its climax and there is bound to be a reaction.

* * *

Mr. Shubert is about right on the speculative question. Many dull thuds will be heard within the next few months. Some heavy falls have already taken place. But the reaction he predicts will not affect the real picture field. The high priced actors did not embark in the business as speculators. The success of the pictures "with the cheapest class of actors," as Mr. Shubert terms them, was not due to their influx to the field, nor will their exodus from it cripple the business. The rose with any other name will smell just as sweet. From a producing standpoint the field has become overcrowded and a reaction has already set in and the field will settle back to where it was about eighteen months ago. But any manager who hopes that this will revive the former business for the legitimate theaters is kidding himself. The motion pictures are here to stay. They are as firmly established in the hearts of people as they were when the legitimate people thought so and took up the business. Most of them think that there were no real legitimate actors in the field before they came into it, but there were; and many of them can give cards and spades in the game to some of the classiest high priced people and still win out.

Moving Picture Educator

An Everyday Occurrence.

SOMEHOW, somewhere, every day sees the educational picture moving forward. At times it is because of its own powers, at other times because of the advocacy of its users, and again at other times the very controversy aroused by its possibilities is responsible for its progress. From the halls of Congress to the most distant hamlet authorities of the highest and humblest character are engaged in consideration of the proper attitude they must assume towards this to-be-reckoned-with power. It has now become impossible to take up a daily paper without reading something of importance concerning the moving picture. This is all due to the fact that it has become an important factor in the moulding of life and the formation of character; in other words its powers of education for good or for evil have to be reckoned with. So important have these become that the censorship question and the Sunday exhibition, are two of the most important social questions before the American—and indeed the European—public today. The Educator does not for one moment doubt that the educational powers of the picture itself, will before long, lift it out of its controversial stage, even as it has during the last few years lifted it from the lower stages and mediocre condition which it at that time occupied.

It has always been the contention of the writer that the future of the moving picture, or more correctly speaking, the future of the great powers of applied kinematography were inherent, and that its outward growth would always be upward and forward. So far this view has been more than justified, and it is safe to say that the past is but an indication of the future, that future which will increase in a ratio of which the past can give no proportion; the very principles of educationalism within the science and art of kinematography are opposed to anything that is not for good and the betterment of the people at large. More than the art of printing, yet along similar lines, the moving-picture is both by birth and destiny a power for uplifting humanity, anything to the contrary will only be the occasional abuse by the lower order of an uneducated minimum.

In the first place it is most noticeable now, that the leading daily papers in all the larger cities are publishing the programmes of the picture houses, and often this is accompanied with some brief notice of the films to be shown; if publicity is a revealing light that prevents the darkness of that which has even the appearance of evil, this increased publicity can only be beneficial to the cause of the picture. It is perhaps safe to say that there is not in the entire area of the United States a single community that has not helped to either improve or maintain the highest possible standard of the moving picture, people demand first that which gives clean recreational pleasure, and afterward that which is instructive.

Vagaries of Censorship.

The old saying that great advance means increased restraint, or that an increase in civilization may mean an increase of laws, while based upon some logical foundation does not prevent the evil of that multiplicity of counsel summed up in the other more homely saying that "too many cooks spoil the broth." It is surprising to note how many people are ready with pet schemes to control that which if left alone quired to prevent abuse. The civilized people, because of their civilization, are superior to the laws which bind the unwisdom in the right and necessary restraining influences required to prevent abuse. The civilized people, because of their civilization, are superior to the laws which bind the unlawful, they have laws within themselves superior to external violences which they can overcome.

In addition to the many and varied schemes of censorship, the following clippings will be as interesting as they may be unnecessary, from the fact that the moving picture people are always alive to their own best interests and the interests of their patrons.

> It has been suggested that licenses be issued only to those proprietors of moving-picture theaters who are willing to abide by the following rules: First, to operate the machine by a motor instead of by hand, to have an adjustable take-up or speed regulator and an automatic fire-shutter which renders more accurate the sequence of the individual images; secondly, to use the arc-light with the direct current, which is brighter and steadier than that with the "indirect" current; thirdly, to have a proper screen, free from disagreeable and harmful glare. The so-called "mirror-screen," consisting of a mirror-glass with a frosted surface, seems to be one of the most desirable. Fourthly, to use no reels which have been in use for over a month. Reels of an inferior quality or which have become scratched from much use give poor definition. Fifthly, to allow at least three minutes' intermission between the reels.

The mayor of Grand Rapids, Mich., in answering the demands of the ministers for more moving picture censorship has made the following interesting reply:

> Whenever it is announced," says the mayor, "that a sermon is to be preached on some spectacular subject, such, for instance, as 'Is the Bible Inspired?' that sermon should be censored before it is delivered.
>
> I hold that sermons on such subjects as that do more harm than all the uncensored moving picture shows. People go to moving picture shows to be entertained. What they see amuses them for the moment. Then it is forgotten. People go to church to be instructed in the word of God. When they hear a sermon on a subject that raises doubt or casts a reflection upon the Bible, they think deeply upon it. Upon the impressionable mind it works a great damage and altogether does more harm than anything else in the city.
>
> I shall go before the ministers' conference at its next meeting and ask the appointment of a committee on censorship of sermons of this class.

Leading Orchestra From the Screen.

By means of films just placed on the market by a Berlin company, the most famous musical directors will be enabled to conduct a dozen or more performances in different cities at the same time, and audiences of the future will be able to enjoy the conducting of great masters long after the musicians are dead.

This has been achieved by the use of "Master Conductor Films," and the film company will shortly give a huge concert in Berlin, when all the most famous conductors will conduct by film proxy. Felix von Weingartner, after witnessing the first private performance said—"The success was extraordinary, there is nothing mechanical about the performance and the result is ingenious. A clever conductor can be transferred to a living orchestra for generations to come."

A number of well-known musicians have been invited to play in front of the moving films, and a majority of them declare that the suggestive effect of movements shown on the film are quite as powerful as those of a living conductor. The films already prepared show Weingartner conducting the "Egmont" overture, Geheimrath von Schuch, of Dresden Royal Orchestra, conducting "Tannhäuser" and Oscar Fried in Berliot's symphony fantastique. Arthur Nikisch says the new films are an epoch-making innovation and adds:—"How valuable, for instance, it would be to the present generation if it could see exactly how Wagner conducted the ninth symphony at the famous Bayreuth festival in 1872."

Medical Men and the Pictures.

Cleveland physicians together with local ministers and city officials have recently been viewing films bearing on subjects of especial interest to the health and social welfare of the city. This is mentioned as an instance of what is done in many other cities for the purpose of illustrating the evil effects of things with which people especially come in daily contact. For a time Tuberculosis seemed to be almost the only theme which demanded such attention, while interest in this "white plague" has not diminished, other subjects of kindred importance are daily being presented with the object of increasing the knowledge of those things so beneficial to each community. The Drug Terror is now added as a topic of supreme importance. Since it has been discovered that many young men convicted of crime in various parts of the country were youths of average probity first led away by the use of drugs, the moving picture has been decided upon as the best weapon with which to fight the evil; consequently these pictures are being universally shown with certain prospects of great good. In fighting physical and social evils the moving-picture is the most popular and successful agent today.

Making Life Comfortable.

The above is a singular title with which to introduce another beneficial agency of the moving-picture, it is nevertheless true, however, that this is another of its missions. The medical head of a famous sanatorium when asked what particular use he had found for the moving-picture he replied "it makes life comfortable, both for the afflicted and those who have the care of them." The time seems to be fast approaching when not only every branch of knowledge impartation will be the work of the pictures, but also the alleviation of many of the distresses of life.

An old question used to be asked: "Is life worth living?" the answer will soon have to be "yes, with the aid of the moving picture." This is said, not with any desire to play upon words, but from the deep conviction that because its mission is "life portrayals" it is, and will become, the best agency for entering into every phase of life to teach, to uplift, and as now recorded to comfort.

Electro-Cardiogram

Translated from the technical language of the medical profession this new term means to the layman "a picture recording the heart-beats in a human body." What a wonderful revelation; what a great advance and help to the medical man! The introduction of this combination with the kinematograph in this country is due to a member of the medical staff of the University of Minnesota, Dr. Arthur D. Hirschfelder, formerly of the Johns Hopkins University. The principal of the new combined instrument, is the measuring of the currents of electricity, set up in the human body by the pulsations of the heart. It has long been known that every movement in any part of the body, however slight, even in the simple action of breathing, an electrical current is set up. These currents can now be detected, measured, their effects recorded and reproduced upon the screen. Still further, it is even yet anticipated that a wireless system is possible whereby the body of a person lying in one of the wards, may be studied by the medical faculty in their own offices. To the lay mind the newly discovered combination is a sort of x-ray of electrical current effects as they take place in the human system, and is destined to bring the moving picture into requisition in one of the most interesting and important revelations of singular benefit to the medical profession in their search for that which can serve humanity.

OZ FILM CO. STARTS IN LOS ANGELES.

The Oz Film Manufacturing Company was recently incorporated in Los Angeles with a capital stock of $100,000, all of which was subscribed and paid up within ten days. This firm has secured the properaty on Santa Monica Boulevard from Gower to Lodi streets, Hollywood, and erected a complete plant with a stage 65 by 100.

All releases of the Oz Film Co. will be multiple-reel features, the first picture being "The Patchwork Girl of Oz," in five reels, to be released about the latter part of July. Alice Hageman has been specially engaged for the title role.

L. Frank Baum, whose "Wizard of Oz" and other stories are famous the world over, is the president and general manager of the new company, with Louis F. Gottschalk, who wrote the music for Baum's "Tik Tok Man of Oz" extravaganza, as vice-president and works manager. The secretary and the treasurer, as well as all stockholders, are men of business in Los Angeles.

Henry McRae and his "101 Bison" Universal Around-the-World Company aboard the "Mongolia" in Mid-Pacific.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Looking Ahead.

ABOUT this time of the year the story writer is trying to sell Christmas stuff, the clothing dealers are making the winter cloaks and the toymaker bathes with perspiration the holiday gifts he is fashioning. Why not take a palm leaf fan, go off somewhere where it is cool and figure out the new steam heating problem or plan for your fall opening?

If you have shut down for the summer, moving over to an airdome or just merely shutting up, you'll have a good chance to work without hindrance, but if you keep open the year 'round you'll have to plan, in addition, so that changes may be made with the house still open. We know one theater in New York that was never closed from year to year, but was kept fresh and neat throughout by the constant employment of house painters and cleaners, but this is too much of a luxury for a motion picture theater, but you can plan to fix some things up. Summer is the best time. Your business is apt to be smaller than in the winter, and if it is you can work a section at a time. If your walls need to be done over, shut off a section of the side seats, hang up a screen and do a section of the wall behind the screen, then move it along to another section. The screen will keep the painter from looking at the pictures and keep the paint from splattering your patron's clothes. If you need new seats get them in now before the crop movement clogs the railways. It is easier now to get up at five than it will be later on. Get hold of some carpenters who are willing to come early, and spend the time from six until the opening time. Find out how many seats you can do in that time and remove just that number of old seats and put in the same number of new. Do as many rows the next day and the next.

If you want to put down new carpet or matting, get it now and store it. It will be handy when you want it. Plan all the work ahead so that the material is at hand and the work actually to be done in the house can be done in the quickest possible time. A little planning now may avoid delay and disappointment later on.

Keep New.

And plan some improvements. Keep things looking new and neat. Don't let things run until complete renovation is necessary. Take your floor, for example. Paint and shellac it. Then keep the shellac fresh by touching it up once a month. It will be easier to keep clean, and it will always look neat. You'll save the cost of the stuff in the cost of cleaning. Don't let white woodwork get so dirty that you have to put on a couple of coats of paint to cover up the dirt when you finally do get into action. One coat of paint twice a year is better than two coats of paint once a year. Your theater may be a mere hole in the wall, but that is no excuse for not keeping it clean and bright. Don't count the cost of the paint unless you figure against the admissions that the paint helps you to get. Few people really like filth. They appreciate cleanliness, and cleanliness is cheap if it shows you a profit. There is one little neighborhood house that loses about eighty cents a week from one family alone simply because the family consists of a man, his wife and two girls. If they go to this house they get their clothes soiled and after a new tan wrap had to be sent to the cleaner's after a week's wear, the family decided to go elsewhere. The house paid good money for its bills, paying more, perhaps, than was strictly necessary, but the attendance fell off and the manager probably doesn't know yet that if he took ten dollars off his program allowance and put it into soap and dustcloths and a woman to use them he would get more patronage. Each morning the usher sweeps out the house with a corn broom. Then he threatens the seats with a duster and the job is done for the day. Once a week the floor is scrubbed, but Monday's tobacco juice stays until Saturday morning, and the man who runs the place complains that he spends twenty dollars more than any other house in a two mile radius and gets less business. Also he gets less soap.

It Pays.

Anybody can come into a theater, hire a few people, arrange for a film service and start in business, but it takes a man with a mind for details to keep things going right and stay in business.

Almost any man can figure that if he pays an additional $20 for a feature that is likely to bring in an additional $30 he is making a $10 profit, but there are few men who have learned to figure the profit that accrues from the purchase of a cake of soap and some dustless dusters. He can see that the feature brings in the extra people. He cannot see that dust and dirt sends them out possibly never to return.

And the great trouble is that you can't suddenly reform and get the old crowd back. There used to be a New York vaudeville theater, one of the best, at that, that for a time was overrun with croton bugs. Eleven hours a day two pianists alternated at the piano and shooed the bugs off the sheet music, but they never told the manager. Every morning a lot of scrub ladies invaded the place with mops and pails and every morning the usher force dusted the seats, but none of them thought to tell about the bugs, so one day we bought the manager a drink and broke the news to him. In a week a professional exterminator had done his work thoroughly. A year later a recent acquaintance lamented the fact that she could not see a certain act she was interested in, and we had to say "honest" twice before she would believe that conditions really were improved. She had a horror of crawling things, and she had stayed away all that time. It's as easy to get a bad name as it is hard to live it down and you don't exactly like to advertise the fact that you've awakened to the fact that you did not take proper care, any more than you would want to advertise that you are now washing your face every day.

Learn to look to the little things and teach your employees to help you look. Let them be alert to catch the expressions of opinion. Let it be understood that you really want to know when things go wrong. Accept criticism with the air of one who receives a favor, and do not try to bluster down comment. Make people feel that you take a pride in your house because you really do. Of course there is a difference between the well meant advice of the sincere complainant and the yawp of the chronic kicker, but make the kicker feel that you appreciate his interest and when he runs out of kicks he'll have an idea that he personally instituted the reforms and take a sort of proprietary interest in your success. Oftentimes the man who makes the worst start is the best finisher.

Make Friends.

And make friends with people. Don't get familiar and slap men on the back and wink at the women, but know their faces and if possible their likes and dislikes. If Mrs. Smith thinks that Miss Jones, of the Gumph, is the best actress in the business, remember that and tell her tonight that Friday you have a film that shows Miss Jones at her best. Don't tell her that you specially ordered it for her, for she won't believe you, but tell her it's coming and she'll be flattered at your recollection of her preference and feel in duty bound to come down and bring her friends.

On the other hand a boisterous greeting may have the reverse effect. The demonstration is a bit too noisy to be sincere, and better a glum silence than the suggestion of insincerity.

And remember that there is more than one family where Jimmie or Susie is the arbiter for a whole family of fans. It's the youngster who looks at all the posters and decides for the rest where the best show is. Have a respect for his opinions and he'll have a respect for yours.

There is a lot more in being a manager than in merely hiring a film service.

That Anniversary.

Lately we mentioned a couple of anniversary stunts. Here's a new one. Receive as your guests those who were present at your first performance. Then take the names of all those present the current anniversary week. You'll get a good advertisement and a mighty good mailing list, as well. If you have a locality house, get some of the best known people to get up and tell about that first show and how much better the bills are now. You can get people interested and their interest will last past the anniversary day. Get, if you can, the opening bill and some new stuff, or even a reel of the old stuff to run with the new. It will be in pretty poor shape, perhaps, but that will only make the difference more marked. Do something different, something that marks the improvement you have made, the improvement the pictures have made.

An Exchange Publication.

The Kansas City and the Monarch Feature Film Companies have united in a four page paper that comes out at more or less regular intervals with the list of subjects controlled, some gossip and reading matter about the subjects they offer. Where their film reviews are taken from this paper, it would be a courtesy to credit the publication, and at the same time it would give the matter greater authority than at present where the inference is that the matter is home-written, and therefore possibly prejudiced. Of course the names of our reviewers are well known to managers, but it is well to get all that is coming from a reprint.

Series Pictures.

Here's a complaint that is possibly the forerunner of others. A manager writes that he takes service from a certain exchange 60-80 days, the films being sent out in circuit, his house being the third in line from the home office. He writes:

> I have to make from forty to sixty and at times ninety or more splices a day—and not the exception. Cause? Everything that ever gets wrong with a film—misframes, yards of torn out sprocket holes and—oh everything. I have remonstrated with Mr. ———— time after time, and for the past month or so I have been of my own accord, making to him a daily report of the condition of the films and sending to him the parts that had to be cut out. I never get a day's films but what I have to make at least 25 patches. I went so far as to take the train to ———— and get after the theater there about it. He said—"Oh, I use Edison machines and nearly all bad places will go through." I've just shown ———— ———— and right in the beginning there was at least 150 feet of it entirely gone. Now here's where the rub comes.
>
> I would quit the ———— in a pair of seconds if I could. I can't—my patrons insist on seeing the rest of the ———— ———— series! Next time an exchange man says "serial picture" to me, there's going to be "sumpin' doin'." Looks like I'm hooked on, don't it? And even now, some of my patrons are after me about another long series.
>
> If you can help me out with any advice please do so. Meantime methinks 'twould do no harm to call other exhibitors' attention to my "fix".

It looks as though the correspondent is in a pretty bad fix. He has to take a service that comes to him in a condition that would coax Brother Richardson's goat right off that speed cycle he rides, and he cannot give it up unless he gives up a series that is decidedly profitable to him. Since the exchange seems to care little or nothing about the complaints, it is probable that the service goes to the first house on the circuit in bad shape. It does not seem that sixty days' use should get the reels in such wretched condition. They must have a lot of impossibly incompetent operators down in that section of the country and a most indifferent exchange management to let the stuff come back from its travels in such a shape without protest.

Were we mixed up in a condition like that we think our next move would be a complaint to the home office. They may have no real jurisdiction over the offending exchange, but at the same time if the exchange is likely to put the business of releasing combination in a condition inelegantly known as "on the blink" they might, with a threat of transferring the supply, bring the exchange man to terms.

If that did not work we would try and get the series pictures by itself, even at a slightly increased cost, and turn to some more careful exchange for the rest of the service of some other combination. For that matter, though, few exchange men are deeply interested in sixty day service.

As a last resort we would bundle the whole service out of the house, explain in public why it happened and in three weeks the kickers would be just as crazy over something else.

If you hire a hundred dollar typewriter from a concern and send it back all mussed up, you're in trouble in a hurry. If you hire a hundred dollar film from an exchange and rip out a quart of sprocket holes, no one seems to care. It's a funny sort of business. It is not so long ago that an operator who wanted to know who a certain player was cut out about a dozen frames and mailed them on here. He didn't think anything about the jump the loss of a foot of film would make.

All of which leads to the question of what these various exhibitors' state associations are in business for if not to correct just such abuses as this.

This Suits

Edward C. Sacks, of the Academy, Conneaut, Ohio, sends in a cut of some very happy small boys, with this explanation:

> I am mailing you a photo showing the front of my house. I bought two dozen Indian and cowboy play suits and, as you see, gave them to the boys. I had them out on a float all the morning and standing around the front of the house afternoon and evening. I ran "The First Law of Nature" (Warner's Features) and did enough additional business to pay for the suits, my other extra advertising, and made two dozen small boys happy. They are wearing their suits every day, now, and you can bet they remember where they came from. This was without doubt the best advertising scheme I ever pulled. The suits can be purchased in almost any department store and from many clothiers, or for a stamped return address I will supply the address of the manufacturing concern from which I purchased my outfit.

This is the sort of thing that pays in a lot of different ways. In the first place the boys themselves are proud of the suits and additionally proud of the fact that they were a present from a theater. The parents of the children are naturally pleased and so are the friends of the parents. That side of the advertising will last long after the suits themselves have been worn out. And think of the noise that twenty-four small boys can make riding around town on a float! A three-piece band is a deep silence in comparison and the very sight of the kiddies' happy faces is, of itself, an appeal not to be denied. We think that Mr. Sacks is qualified for membership in the Order of Regular Hustlers.

We Never Said It.

Harold G. Ballou, of the Olympian Theater, Seattle, thinks we were shooting at him when we said his idea of publishing frank comment about the films in his house sheet was not new. The brick was not intended for him and we know he never claimed credit for the idea. He is using it, the same as others have, but he admits that a little of it goes a long ways. We have asked Mr. Ballou to explain the method he uses of getting out his sheet, which is some form of reproduction with a press-printed head, and will pass his idea along when he replies.

Food for Thought.

The Jefferson Theater, Fort Wayne, Ind., in a recent issue of its Weekly Bulletin, starts off an argument in this wise:

> You have now had a number of months of big features presented at the Jefferson Theater under the new management, pictures which are not surpassed even in the large theaters of the greatest cities of this country.

Did you ever stop to realize that this is true? Did you ever impress on your audience what it means? Take a town like Fort Wayne. It's not a third rate place, but it does not get the big-city show with the big-city cast; the cast that plays for a season in New York or for six months in Chicago. It gets the "Number One road company" perhaps, but not better than that. Now take a small town and a New York success. Along about the third or fourth year it gets a tenth rate company and stock scenery. There are scores of shows touring the "tanks" with a three hundred dollar company where the full salary list would not pay the original star for two performances.

On the other hand, the man in the most remote rural district gets precisely the same film success that runs on Broadway, a little more rain perhaps, but the same players, the same costumes, the same scenery that the big cities get and gets it almost at the same time. If you run a house hammer home that fact. People do not always stop to think it out for themselves, but there are thousands of small places that never saw good acting until the photoplay theater sprang up. Hammer home that fact that your isolated burg gets the same deal from the photoplay makers that the big city people get. Make them realize what they owe to the pictures.

We Win.

When the Third Street Theater, Easton, advertised for photographs of one-year-old babies, we guessed that it was for the purpose of reproduction. The last issue carries ten cute one-year olds and the line:

> Here are photographs of some of the babies who started out just when we did—a year ago. Here's hoping we progress as rapidly as they and that we may celebrate many more birthdays together!

That's a good sentiment for a good idea. Here's another. When you have your anniversary, offer a small gift to all children born the same day or in the same week as your enterprise. Send the gift and tickets to the parents and ask them to be your guests at the celebration. And next year and the next hold out the same invitation. Better still get the names from the vital statistics and look up the addresses, which is practicable in a small town, or put the names in the program in advance.

And we wish that the Third Street would draw a heavy black line around its program spaces, note how a six point rule would throw up the announcement above the advertisements, and then "make it so" in type.

About Time.

Charles Carlson, editor of the Evanston (Ind.) Dramatic Bulletin, the organ of the Evanston Theater, sends in number 27 of his paper and asks for a criticism, saying he has noticed this department. Better late than never.

The Bulletin is a well printed eight-pager, but you have to look a couple of times to pick out the program from the other advertising. It is a three-column page and the program runs on the outside columns. The top of column gives the current week's attractions and the botton of each the coming attractions. This would be a nice arrangement if there was anything in particular to call attention to the fact that it is the program, but the small ten point letter "Program" does not show up well, and so the effect is lost in a mass of other advertising matter for outside concerns.

The first care should be that the house matter shows up properly. The house organ is primarily to advertise the house and its features and this should be looked to first. After that the other advertising matter can be cared for, but a program that almost hides the program is not a program at all. In the inside pages there are six columns of house program. It would be better to rearrange these on pages three and five or five and seven, throwing the foreign advertising to the left hand pages with the reading matter to carry it. The best arrangement would be a strong all-house page on three and the programs on five and seven.

As the matter is set, the printer is dividing his space wrongly in most of the displays. In the Saturday program of the issue sent in, the Edison line for the two-reel comedy is so far down that it seems to apply to the top title of a Lubin split reel, the Lubin line applying to the lower title. It would be better to divide the space differently, having the name of the maker and the title of the production in a solid bank and divide the white space between the combinations instead of between the lines. For that matter it would be better to put the maker's name on top of the title announcing it

TWO LUBIN COMEDIES
GUARANTEED RAIN PROOF
and
A STRENUOUS RIDE

instead of running it

EDISON TWO-REEL COMEDY

GUARANTEED RAIN PROOF

A STRENUOUS RIDE

LUBIN COMEDIES

In the copy sent the second Lubin is announced as A Strenuous Life instead of Ride, which is the correct title, just as The Last Man's Club is called The Lost Man's Club. It is a good plan to induce the printer to stick to the manufacturer's titles and not correct them to suit his own ideas.

THE PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Smith On Copyright.

RUSSELL E. SMITH, of the Mutual Film Corporation, is one of those whose voice is raised for copyright. He is a courteous, and therefore welcome, adversary, and he holds to ideas so radically different from our own on this subject that he represents the ideas of the most advanced. Here is a part of a recent letter he writes.

This is for the benefit of the man of your column this week who wrote the "Singularly Sane" letter re insults to editors by copyrighting scripts. I would like to call attention to this fact that came under my own observation here (Los Angeles) the other day.

A stenographer working for a certain outfit here was discovered making an extra copy of the synopses given her to copy and carting these extras home in her stocking. It transpired that she had been so doing for some time and that she had a friend, a photoplay writer. Now supposing that all these synopses had been sold by the friend and produced by some company. How could the original owner or the company first mentioned prove prior authorship?

You ought to know, and the writer of the letter you rushed into type should know, too, that any danger of theft is not from an editor or company, but from the lesser employees, and if the latter sticky-fingered persons knew that an idea was copyrighted, it might make them keep their hands off.

I have been an editor both for magazines and film outfits, and don't believe that I would have felt insulted if I got a good story with a copyright line on it, nor would anyone else. Your "doing well" author gives me a pain in my little tummy.

Editors need no guarding against. Irresponsible employees may and in certain cases have proved they needed it. With two scripts sold, in any instance, a copyright would certainly show a prior right to the plot and if an employee did steal an idea and sell it, the original author would certainly have it on him and a little copyright line will scare off the light-fingered employee.

That reads like a nice argument, but is it? We have been an editor of photoplays and assistant editor of magazines, and every time we saw a copyright line it was regarded as a warning that the man was certainly a liar and very probably a trouble maker. Of course if the copyright line could legally be used, the former epithet would not apply, but most assuredly the copyright line, just as the "seal" of various sorts, would be the sign of a trouble maker. Most editors would prefer not to deal with the trouble makers.

But suppose that the use of the copyright line was so common as to excite no comment. What then? The line would be no more than words to this effect:

"I have sent my story to Washington where the title has been entered on a card catalogue card, the story being stamped and returned to me under that section of the law that gives the Register the right, with the concurrence of the Librarian of Congress, to return all matters not needed for the library or its depositories."

It does not say that a paternal government will step in and prosecute the thief. That, as always, is the duty of the holder of the title. It further specifies a certain rigid code of laws under which suit must be brought. It does, in one sense, establish the date of the story in that it stamps the date of entry on the first page of the script, but it does no more than this. It does not aid in proving that the story Jim Smith stole from the Gumph Film Company and sold to the Garumph Company is really the story that was offered the Gumph. It is still up to the author to prove that and the thief knows that perfectly well. No copyright line is going to scare him off any more than a police uniform will stop a pickpocket. It is part of the sport of the game to "beat the bulls." It would be better to have a bill passed requiring all manufacturing plants to search the stenographer's stockings.

Mr. Smith and others do not or will not understand our argument, which is simply that copyright is not a scarecrow to the wicked nor yet a protection to the just. Copyright does not apply to the idea as such, but rather to the form in which that idea is expressed. The Chalmers Publishing Company holds the copyright on Technique of the Photoplay. The exact wording of that book cannot be reproduced without permission, and yet a couple of recent booklets are paraphrases of parts of Technique, and the alleged authors probably would be willing to admit their source of inspiration knowing that copyright applies only to the exact phrases of the book.

It is the same with a story. We wrote a lot of stories a couple of years ago. They are being produced again by another company in slightly different form, by players who appeared in the original productions but who are now with the second company. The situations are slightly but not markedly changed, and yet it would be impossible to bring suit against the infringers, even had the stories been copyrighted.

Since copyright does not protect, what is the use of copyright? As William Lord Wright says, "If they want it, try and get it for them, and without money and without price," but what will be done with it if it can be had? And if it is of no use whatever, why want it?

Again McCardell.

And here's the last chapter in the McCardell matter. He writes:

You and I have no points to argue. I do not believe in a Mandarin class in photoplay writers any more than I do in having such a caste in any other phase of art or literature.

But I am impatient of the great number of persons inspired by no motive but cheap greed—"to make a piece of change writing for the movies," as they generally express it. No, let us encourage every earnest beginner. You speak of our beginnings. I'll bet you had read and studied and still read and study the great masters of prose and verse, and they inspired you with an endeavor to clothe your thoughts in strong and definite words.

The province of my Saturday Evening Post article was not to criticise either writers or photoplays, it was just a treatise on who were writing for the film and how film plays were written.

I cited the Laura Jean Libby era in my other letter. When she was in her hey day, earning $60,000 a year, the great mass of people were just taking up reading for recreation, the literary development of the land was at the boyhood stage. The tastes of the great mass of people in moving pictures have passed through this same stage, and now they are impatient with stupid and improbable stuff. The point I was making was that only intelligent people, with a sense of proportion, a sense of humor and a desire to hold the mirror up to nature could or should write picture plays. The output of rot at this writing is appalling, the day is at hand—this is my point—that only minds capable of writing good literature will be permitted to write picture plays. Not necessarily college professors—but men with true messages for the heart, whether these men with the message come from the college or the counter, the plough or the newspaper office. No, you and I do not differ on a darn thing, I just didn't make myself clear to you. And just watch the survival of the fittest in pictures!

It must be remembered that Mr. McCardell is hardly in a position to gauge the business as accurately as those who virtually live photoplay. He is as well a dramatist, a special writer and a humorist. The writing of photoplays is but one feature of an uniquely busy life. And most of the photoplay writers with whom he does get in touch start off more or less like this: "Dear Sir:—You are a very successful writer of photoplays, and I have enjoyed your Mr. and Mrs. Jarr articles greatly. I am a beginner, a poor struggler, will you please rewrite these three manuscripts for me as I am sure if you do this I will be able to do others myself and so lift the mortgage that has been on the farm since my grandfather got married."

Maybe you think this sounds funny. Perhaps it does, but if you got from fifteen to fifty letters from these fakers each month you'd lose faith in mankind yourself and the milk of human kindness would curdle in your breast until it looks—and smells—like Mainzer handkase, if you know what that is.

And may the day come quickly when "only minds capable of writing good literature" will be permitted to contribute. Now we know just where he stands, which is on the same place we stand. Learn to think the right ideas against the time you have to think the right sort of ideas and you'll be safely in the cyclone cellar when the big wind comes along.

What Universal Wants.

Here is the latest announcement from the Eastern Universal offices:

Mr. Jack Bryne has been appointed the Editor of the Scenario Department of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, New York City, and is in the market for the following:

One reel Comedies of all kinds.

One and two reel Western, Sea and Mountain Dramas.

One and two reel Modern, Society and Underworld Dramas.

All Scenarios must be typewritten.

A complete scenario includes a brief synopsis of the story and the scenario proper; giving scenes, locations and the action therein.

Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Put your name and address on the script.

Avoid as far as possible any suggestion of crime. Even when absolutely essential to the plot of the story, it must be handled delicately.

Prices paid for acceptable scenarios:

$15.00 for Split Reel.

$25.00 for Full Reel.

Multiple reels in proportion and a bonus for exceptionally good or well developed stories.

Hennessy Is Home.

George F. Hennessy is back in town from Los Angeles. He went out with the Mutual when they headed west last year, but he and the climate were not on good terms and he came back to the real place, and will do his Mutual work from here, but as a free lance instead of a staff writer. He says that few of the editors in Los Angeles are empowered to give more than $25 per reel for scripts without special permission from the home office, and that it is not frequently that these prices are exceeded. He says there is a fairly brisk buying market at these terms.

He landed in New York pretty much a wreck, but rest and the change of climate have set him on his feet again.

The Inquest Closes.

Closing its work for the season, the Inquest Club held a rousing meeting in its Morgue at Keene's Chop House, Monday, May 25th. Harry Benham, of the Thanhouser Company, was the star witness, and Mrs. Laurie Macklin, whose All on Account of the Milk is still remembered as one of the best of the Biograph light comedies, also took the stand.

Both made a plea for scripts that permitted the players to get an insight of the character of the personality they assumed, telling how difficult it was sometimes to get any idea of the sort of person the author had in mind through a study of the script. The coroner amplified the idea by explaining that this light should be through the introduction of bits of characteristic business, and explained that the brevity most directors required should not be carried to the point where the script ceased to be intelligent and intelligible.

Several films earlier seen at the Savoy were discussed. Some of the points brought out were of general interest. It was shown that it was necessary, in order to gain full interest, that the sympathies should be enlisted before full interest could be demanded, and that it was first necessary to establish the hero in favor before the spectator could become absorbed in his vicissitudes. Another subject brought out the fact that military men do not sign themselves "General Smith," but add their rank below their names and that "Gen. Smith" was no more proper than "Mr. Smith" would be.

In speaking of the crime story as against the heart interest story, one of the editorial assistants present made the astonishing statement that he knew his company could not make foreign sales without the element of crime in the story, and that much was made by his company for release abroad that would not be passed by the censorship here. It was argued in rebuttal that if the company were capable of making better production instead of trusting to crime the stories would be in as great demand as the Biograph European reissues, most of which were drawn not so much from the lurid as the heart interest stories of several years ago. In spite of the torrid argument to the contrary, the coroner closed the meeting with the assurance that the man who could write gripping heart interest stuff would last long past the man who knew only robbery, murder and similar heart grips.

The Inquests will be resumed in September, probably on the second Monday.

Something New.

Doubleday, Page & Co. advertise the establishment of a photoplay department in connection with their publishing enterprises, to handle the picture rights of the books of their own catalogue. It is the logical outcome of the present craze for filmed fiction, but we do not see that it will very materially operate against the success of the author of original themes. But a very small percentage of original fiction will work well into photoplay form, and no matter how popular the visualized book may become, there will always be needed the original story to keep up the average of production, and this with all proper respect for the inventive capacities of the novelist. Few novels translate well into dramatic form, and there has never been a lack of opportunity for the really good original stage play. Photoplay has established itself as one form of literature; a tiny baby yet, perhaps, but still a distinct form, and it is absurd to argue that books will ever wholly supplant or even overshadow the story written primarily for the medium in which it is to be exploited.

Look and Listen.

Maybe you've heard the story of the man who was so intent on reading the warning on the crossing danger sign that he got bumped over into the next county by the fast express, but you may not have heard of the author who was so intent on his idea that he failed to see two or three other plots in the same idea. A single bit of business, not essential to one script, may give you the idea for another story. You can take it out of the first story and make a story itself out of it.

Learn to look for plots and suggestions in your own stories, in other stories, in the life around you and everywhere else. There are hundreds of good ideas floating around, if only you have trained yourself to look for them. When you get to that point you'll not need to use the same old hackneyed themes. The trouble won't be ideas, but the picking out of the best of the ideas.

Let It Sink In

The other day a would-be playwright sent in a script for free criticism. No one asked him to, in fact he has been told not to, but in it came and it went back in spite of a nice letter that intimated that he had read all we had written on photoplay writing. We sent it back with the single suggestion that it was too improbable and back he came with the remark that he did not know that anything was too improbable in farce. And he writes he reads all we have written. Perhaps he has, but he doesn't let it sink in. Lots of times we have pointed out that the too wildly improbable is not even proper for farce.

Do not merely read this department. Let it sink in. Pretend you do not believe what is said here. Argue against it until you are convinced that it is right and WHY it is right, and then you'll not make mistakes later on. It is not what you read, but what you understand and remember that counts. It is better to know what one single paragraph is about than to read without understanding several pages.

Miss Cora Drew wrote recently, "I did not always, at the time, understand what was written, but when I didn't I kept arguing it until I did understand. I did not argue against the advice. I argued in favor of the advice and generally, in the end, I understood and appreciated." Answer is that after two years of apprenticeship she is selling on a well-founded technique that will not leave her in the lurch. More than one promising career has been spoiled because the writer has proven a flash in the pan and not a "stayer," but once master technique and learn to subordinate it to invention and you cannot lose the success that is the reward of hard work.

You and Your Friends.

Here is part of a peculiar correspondence. An author writes that for a long time he got scripts back from a certain company within five days. Then he adds:

> I became disgusted, and just to see what would happen, I took an old idea and worked it up into a script. It was the poorest script that I ever wrote. The idea was so old, that my nine-year-old nephew said that it was rotten. I mailed this script to the afore-mentioned company. It was kept for ten days, and was returned with a penciled note written on the rejection slip and signed by the editor.
>
> Next, I resurrected another old script, one of the poorest that I ever wrote, one with an entirely conventional plot, and I mailed it to the company. This, too, came back with the penciled regrets of the editor.
>
> Then, I sent them a good script, one that I felt was very good, and this one the editor failed to see.
>
> Now, it is apparent that out of the twenty or more scripts that I mailed to this company, the only two that were seen, personally, by the editor were the two very poorest ones that I submitted. How, under the circumstances, can the editor know whether I turn in a good script or not? And how judge of the work of other beginners whose scripts are handled the same as were mine? The wonder is that any beginner ever sells a script to that company.

Here's a man who seems to have more faith in the judgment of his nine-year-old relative than the script editor. He knows that some of the other ideas were good, but he fails to explain how he knows. He adds that "perhaps my own work is rotten, but I do object to any editor who says that eighty or ninety per cent. of the beginner's work is rotten when the manufacturer's system of reading scripts is so inefficient that the editor reads only the poorest of the beginners' scripts and misses the best."

A man in that frame of mind will never get ahead if he lives until 2964. How does he know that editors read only the poorest of the scripts? How does he know that the editor does not read all scripts. We have seen Frank Woods with his eyes all bloodshot from reading the mass of junk that piled into the Mutual when he first established that script bureau and we know personally that every script of the several thousand sent in the first few weeks was read by a fully competent and qualified editor, one of Mr. Woods' assistants, perhaps, but of real ability. Editors do not say that ninety per cent. of the scripts are unfit. The percentage runs 95 to 98. We know because we have had the opportunity of going through material in several studios.

An author wrote in this morning's mail that he had been given the opportunity of reading 130 scripts not one of which was worth acceptance though they had been read by two competent persons. He added that the amateurs helped the regular author by keeping the manufacturer afraid, and the amateur is the man who "knows" (without possible means of knowledge), that his scripts are better than the ones that are accepted.

The writer adds that if he sends original work the first reader turns it down. If he imitates the style of a company it passes on to the editor who turns it down.

If the beginners could only see the workings of the editorial office, if they could only examine the editorial minds, they would see that the editors are reading hundreds of utterly impossible scripts in the faint hope of finding some promising story, some author who may be developed, but it is seldom that their search is rewarded because so many of the beginners never try to improve because they know they are good as it is and that their lack of sales is due not to their inability but to editorial incompetence.

Don't let your friends judge. Don't try to judge for yourself. If you sell, you are writing practical photoplays. If you don't sell, you are not yet up to standard, so try to make them better.

Inquiries

NOTE—No inquiries can be replied to by mail. Look for your answer here. No question can be replied to that necessitates the handling of the manuscript. Always give your name and address. It will not be published. A list of addresses, to which photoplays should be sent, will be supplied on receipt of a STAMPED AND SELF ADDRESSED ENVELOPE. The request should be made to the paper direct and not to this department, nor to the Answers Man.

A. R.—The company seems still to be in existence, but dormant. Ask them to give you an immediate answer. If they do not reply notify them by registered mail that you withdraw your submission, copy the carbon and send elsewhere. And don't be in a hurry to ship stuff to everything that looks as though it might be a photoplay company. Market intelligently.

A. L. F.—Miss Roseta Brice was the leading woman in "Officer Jim."

H. C.—Mr. Reid is directing now and is frequently mentioned in connection with his work.

A. R.—You will not be a successful seller if you are not willing to let your scripts lie with the companies. It is aggravating, but it is the custom, and you must follow custom if you would sell. Most of the serial stories now current are written directly for the film. And get away from the idea that a man is a photoplay writer merely because he cannot write fiction. Many good fiction writers do plays because it is the more profitable branch. In proportion to the time spent, the Answers Man himself makes four times the money writing plays than he used to make writing stories.

C. B. G.—The Answers Man is not a commercial agency and cannot pronounce on the reliability of business concerns. We do not advise writers to enter any contest.

L. J. W.—You can use the smaller paper if you wish, but its use is not advisable. Keep the irregular size for practise work and get the full size to send out on. See reply just above.

J. C.—Where have you been lately? Keystone does not read for other comedy sections of the Mutual. Try the Mutual Film Corporation and mark the name of the brand you think your story is particularly well suited to.

I. G. D.—It is best not to have more than one interruption to a scene, and certainly not more than two. It is a very simple matter to read that it is best to stick to companies having outlets for their products and then turn to the release lists and find out which these are. We do not guarantee the reliability of any manufacturing company.

I. G.—Watch the advertisements of the Lubin Company for the information you ask for.

Technique of the Photoplay

(Second Edition)

By EPES W. SARGENT

Not a line reprinted from the first edition, but an entirely new and exhaustive treatise of the Photoplay in its every aspect, together with a dictionary of technical terms and several sample scrits.

One hundred and seventy-six pages of actual text.

Special chapters on Developing the "Punch," Condensing the Script, Writing the Synopsis, Multiple Reel Stories, Talking Pictures, Copyrights, etc.

In cloth, two dollars. Full leather, three dollars.

By mail postpaid. Add ten cents if registration is desired.

☞ Address all Orders to

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

17 Madison Avenue - New York City

Projection Department

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

Manufacturers' Notice.

It is an established rule of the Moving Picture World and of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until such articles have been demonstrated to a member of our staff. In case of apparatus pertaining to projection this means the editor of this department.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication, it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two or three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending 4 cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay.

The first seventy-four questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form. They may be obtained by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy. You may be surprised at the number of questions you can't answer without a lot of study.

Question No. 36.

Best answer will be published, and the names of others sending in replies of excellence will appear in the Roll of Honor. Permission to use the contributor's name must accompany each answer, otherwise only the name of the city will be used. Theater managers looking for high class men will do well to watch the Roll of Honor.

If you had no field rheostat and wanted to control the speed of a small d.c. motor, what would you do? Show, by sketches, the correct connection for regulating the rheostat of a shunt-wound motor, including best location in the circuit; series motor; compound-wound motor; other motors.

Roll of Honor.

Nearly all the correct replies to Question 30 are of essentially equal excellence, though each one uses a somewhat different brake method, but in each case the effect would be practically the same. On the whole, I am inclined to thing that friend Minges has a little the best of the argument, in that he explains the meaning of the term horsepower very clearly, and although this is not called for, still it will, I think, be of benefit to quite a number of readers. The Roll of Honor consists of the following: Harry T. Dobson, Toronto, Canada; Jos. H. M. Smith, Fort Worth, Texas; W. S. James, Camden, New Jersey; Chicago, Illinois; and L. S. Usher, Winnipeg, Canada.

Reply to Question No. 30.

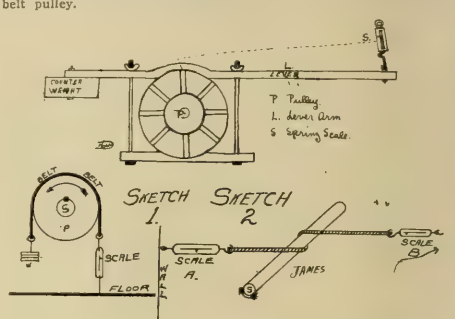
By L. B. Minges, Lestershire, New York.

The Question:

Explain, and show by sketch, how you would measure the horsepower of an engine or a motor.

The answer:

Horsepower is the unit by which work performed by engines, motors, etc., is usually measured. The standard horsepower was first adopted by Watt. His engines were often used to replace the labor of horses in pumping. The actual work of a horse can perform in labor of this kind is at the rate of 22,000 foot-pounds per minute. But Watt allowed 50 per cent. more than this and took 33,000 foot-pounds per minute as his measure of work of a horse, and this unit has since been universally adopted. The production of power involves the element of time; for example: 33,000 foot-pounds of work may be performed in one minute, one hour, or any other time, and it is still 33,000 foot-pounds. Power is the rate of work, and horse power requires the exerting of 33,000 foot pounds per minute, or 550 foot pounds in a second, or 1,980,000 foot pounds in an hour. The standard of electrical horse power is 746 watts, therefore if a motor is consuming 746 watts it is said to be a one horse power motor, since it is presumed to be exerting 1,980,000 foot pounds of work every hour, but this would not take into account the power consumed in the motor itself, which usually is a considerable amount of the total. It would be the indicated horse power of the motor, but not the power actually applied to the belt, or to the shaft if it be direct connected to a generator. To find the indicated horse power of a steam engine we must know the mean effective pressure in pounds per square inch which the steam exerts on the piston throughout the length of the stroke, the length of the stroke in feet, the area of the piston in square inches and the number of strokes per minute. If the above factors are accurately known, the indicated horse power of the engine may be found by multiplying them together and dividing that product by 33,000, but the actual horse power of the engine or motor will only be approximately 25 per cent. of the indicated power, the difference being consumed in the machine itself, hence if we are to know the actual power a motor or engine will deliver to the belt for the purpose of driving units of machinery, we must find the torque or twisting power of the engine or motor at the rim of the belt pulley, which, of course, will be the indicated horse power plus the power lost in the motor or engine itself. In other words, taking the motor for example, the indicated horse power would be the voltage times and amperes delivered at the binding posts of the motor, whereas the brake horse power would be this quantity less the internal friction of the machine. We therefore see that in figuring efficiency we cannot go by the indicated horse power, (the input of the motor) but must have the brake horse power and the indicated horse power: the actual efficiency of the motor being the brake horse power divided by the indicated horse power. The brake horse power is found by applying some design of brake to the belt pulley.



In examining the illustration (the top sketch is the one referred to. Ed.) it will be seen that the pulley is clamped between two wooden blocks by means of bolts and wing nuts, the top extending out and forming a lever of considerable length at one end, with a short end in the opposite direction to carry a counter weight just sufficient to balance the weight of the long lever before the brake is clamped to the pulley. The method of application is as follows: The end of the lever is either suspended from the spring balance or rested on the platform of a platform scale, such as grocers use to weigh packages, or, if the motor be a large one, the kind used for weighing heavy barrels. In case the platform scale is used a lag screw should be driven through the end of the lever and the point of this screw should rest upon the platform of the scale, so as to establish a definite point from which to measure. The actual pull, therefore is not at the rim of the pulley, but at the point of contact with the scale, and in calculating the horse power we take the exact distance from the center of the pulley to the point of contact with the scale, assuming the lever to rest, as it should rest, in a horizontal position. We must now take twice the length of the lever (center of pulley to point of contact) since the effect of lever would be that of placing a huge pulley on the armature shaft, the same having a radius equal to the length of the lever, and hence having a diameter equal to twice the length of the lever. We would, therefore now have the pull on the scale in pounds $\times$ 2 $\times$ length of lever $\times$ 3.1416 $\times$ the number of revolutions per minute $\div$ 33,000: expressed as a formula we would have $\frac{P \times 2 \times L \times 3.1416 \times R.P.M.}{33,000}$ in which P equals the pull on the scale in pounds and L the length of the lever. Assuming a 4 foot lever and the R.P.M. 300, and a 35 pound pull we would have $\frac{35 \times 2 \times 4 \times 3.1416 \times 300}{33,000}$ = approximately 8 horse power.

The illustrations used are by H. T. Dobson and W. S. James, Dobson's being the only lever brake drawn in black ink. Brother Minges' drawing of the lever brake was far the best, but it was done in purple ink. I have told you fellows quite some number of times that drawings should, and must be done in black drawing ink in order to reproduce well. Dobson's sketch shows the operation of the lever brake very well, though for large motors more reliable results would be had by resting the end of the lever on the platform of a platform scale such as is used by grocers for weighing barrels, etc. Brother James' sketches Nos. 1 and 2 are described by himself as follows:

The scale is an ordinary spring scale, such as ice men use. W are weights applied to create friction. The belt is just laid over the pulley. Scale S is fastened to the floor. Start the motor or engine running and add weights at W until the engine or motor slows down slightly. Now hold a speed indicator to the end of shaft S and find out the r.p.m. it is making. Suppose we find the speed to be 1,800 r.p.m. and that the diameter of the pulley is 6 inches. The circumference of the pulley is approximately 3 1/7 times its diameter, therefore the diameter of this pulley would be 17.757 inches, and since the speed is 1,800 r.p.m. the circumference or face of the pulley would, in one minute travel 1,800 × 17.757 = 31,962.6 inches, or 31,962.6 ÷ 12 = 2,622 feet, approximately. We will assume that when the motor or engine is up to power the scale shows 600 pounds. We now find out how many pounds we have at W. Assume that it is 20 pounds; then this 20 must, of course, be subtracted from the 600 shown by the scale, which leaves 580 pounds pull the motor or engine is exerting at the rim of the pulley. And as this was exerted for a period of one minute, and during that minute the surface of the pulley travels 2,622 feet, we then have 2,622 × 580 = 1,520,760 foot pounds as the actual work exerted by the machine, which, divided by 33,000, the accepted standard of horse power, gives us 46 and a fraction as the brake horse power of the motor, or engine being tested. In sketch No. 2 the same calculations are used, but the outfit is for a smaller machine. S is the shaft; scale A being a large and scale B a small one. Apply pulley B until machine slows down slightly, and then subtract the reading of B from that of A and proceed as before. A and B are connected by a rope wrapped once around the shaft. Sometimes when using the belt brake, sketch 1, the leather or rubber becomes warm and it is necessary to cool it with water while testing.

So far as brother James' sketch No. 2 is concerned I do not see any use in scale B. Why not attach that end of the rope direct instead of by means of a spring scale. The real value in this question lies in the fact that it shows you the very important difference as between horse power as indicated by the wattage input, and the actual horse power exerted in useful work. You can readily see that there is a large, juicy difference, and, while it is a state secret, still I may whisper to you that the average manufacturer does not sell his motors by brake horse power; when he says horse power, he means the wattage input, which is not really the actual, effective horse power at all.

Welcome to Our City—Hammer and All.

D. E. Rodgers, Manitou, Colorado, loads his biggest gun with the following wad, and has the nerve to not only point the thing in our direction, but to actually shoot it off.

This letter is to "bawl you out" for the fine recommendation you gave Canton, Ohio, on his Automatic Dowser, page 671, May 2nd issue. It is the writer's humble opinion that a few moment's study would have readily convinced a person of your superior discretion that the negative principle on which this device is intended to work would render it inoperative in a very large per cent. of the cases arising in practice. Now, let us see. Mr. Operator arrives to start the show. He threads the machine in the usual way, but neglects (forgets) to close the switch supplying battery current to this apparatus. He opens the dowser, which, due to pin B and spring A, remains open without any assistance from the batteries, and begins the show. In a little while the film breaks, and roller 5 certainly flies around, and, dirt, gummed oil, scraps of film and other foreign substances being willing, lever 7 makes mechanical contact with post 6. However, the circuit being open, magnet 2 has no power to "yank" bar 3, carrying pin B inward, and the dowser calmly remains open. Then Mr. Operator closes that switch and the show goes along all right for the rest of the day. But being a little tired at the end of the day's run, and having film to pack up, as well as other duties to perform, he neglects (forgets) to open that little switch. Dry batteries exhaust themselves over night, so through electrical contact of lever 7 with post 6, there being no film in the machine to hold these contacts apart, the above condition would result. Next day the show is started as usual; the film breaks, roller 5 flies around again; lever 7 perhaps touches post 6, batteries exhausted, no power to pull pin inward; result: dowser remains open, just as though it was never expected to close. Almost any foreign substance likely to get between contacts 6 and 7 will render this device inoperative. Suppose the operator wanted to close that dowser in a hurry. Picture to yourself the contented expression and happy smile playing over his more or less classic countenance as he fumbles for bar 3 to yank pin B out of the way. The principal objection to the device therefore lies in the very principle upon which it is supposed to work, i. e., the dowser held normally open, requiring an application of power before it will close, and that a number of causes not readily within the control of the operator will interfere with a proper application of this power.

With all due deference to the inventor of this device, let me suggest what, in my humble opinion, would be a real improvement: Provide a dowser held normally closed by its own weight—a light coil or flat spring might also assist the dowser in closing quickly—a small bar of soft iron suitably mounted on the dowser so as to contact with poles of small electro-magnet when dowser is fully open, this magnet being strong enough to resist the normal tendency of the dowser to close. The device operating on the film to be reversed in its action so that it would operate to break battery current held normally closed by the film. There is much more dependability to be placed in a device intended to open a battery current of low voltage, than in one intended to close such a circuit. Open circuits, or short circuits anywhere would simply operate to cause dowser to close, and prevent it remaining open of its own accord until normal conditions had been restored—abnormal conditions therefore would not interfere with safety first. The operator also need not bother to open or close any switches, since roller 5 would open the circuit when the film was out. An objection might be raised to the fact that while the device is in operation current would be required to maintain the dowser open, but as safety first is the object sought after, a small operating expense should not be objected to. Moreover, this device would take current only when in actual use, whereas the open circuit arrangement would take current all the time that it was not in use, unless someone remembered to open a switch, and where two machines are used alternately this would be a lot of bother. Gravity, "crowfoot" batteries would be ideal for operating this device, since they must be used on a closed circuit part of the time to keep them in the best working order.

Was very much interested in article, "A Fine Piece of Work," by brother Armstrong, March 14th issue. He certainly has a clear idea of the optical principles involved, but would like to say that this, and all kindred problems, are easily solved by ever lasting "proportion." In this case size of aperture is to size of picture as focal length of lens is to distance between lens and screen. Knowing any three, the fourth is easily found. Size of aperture is usually designated in inches, and size of picture in feet: focal length of lens is usually measured in inches, and distance between lens and screen would be measured in feet. This preserves the balance on both sides of the equation, making any reduction unnecessary. This is so easy, always accurate, no obnoxious rules to remember or forget, and you do not have to let A equal something and B equal something else.

With reference to that really splendid article by the Camden, New Jersey, wizard, April 18th issue, I believe that he has arrived at a correct solution of the problem of selecting focal length of condensers best suited to objective use, and think that he deserves credit for this. However, I must disagree with the idea conveyed by photographs Nos. 1, 2 and 3; also the comment on photo No. 1, page 359; "To show how far it is possible to carry the condensers from a short focal length objective. By having it at the point shown it helps eliminate travel ghost," etc. Would respectfully suggest that if he will make those photographs again, with film in the machine, the lens properly focused, and the machine running, that there will be no difference whatever in the path of the picture rays of light in front of the objectives in photos Nos. 1, 2 and 3, regardless of the focal length of the condensers used, or the distance of lamp house from the machine head, provided only that he has a reasonably clear field in all cases. Such photographs may be easily made if smoke is used to make the path of the light visible. It is plain that if any manipulation of the condenser rays of light could alter the distance of the crossing point of the picture rays of light in front of and from the objective that the size of the picture would be correspondingly distorted or changed, and so far as I know, no one has ever been able to readily distort or change the size of the picture projected from a given aperture, at a given distance from the screen by any manipulation of the condenser rays, or by any other method, other than changing the focal length of the lens used. With reference to eliminating the keystone effect of the picture from a regular size aperture, by any method other than placing the aperture parallel with the screen, or suitably grinding in the objective, I'm from Missouri, and will have to be shown that it can be "did" before I will believe it.

And now I would suggest to operators using machines whose shutters travel upward in intercepting the light, that a good location for the shutter is at a distance from the objective equal to three-fourths of its focal length, measurement being made from the mechanical center of the lens barrel (not tube). While this is rarely the optical center of the lens, it is sufficiently accurate for this purpose. Operators who have been in the habit of placing the shutter within ¼ inch of the lens (cutting off lens tube flush with barrel) will notice the improvement of this location, especially if any of the well known, patented screens are used, and if this letter gets by the waste basket I may come again with the reasons why.

So far as your criticism on the dowser is concerned, there is considerable in it. It must be conceded that when the film is out of the machine, roller 5 would, of course, fly around and make contact, which would, if the device was operated by a battery, run the battery down very fast. Also, if a battery be used, forgetting to close the switch would render the device inoperative. I do not think, however, that it would be necessary to operate this device by a battery. What's the matter with high resistance and the machine current? You may reply that it would be unsafe, but I don't think so. Anyway, I suppose brother Klink will attend to your criticism much better than I could possibly hope to, therefore it is up to him. However, I must say that part of your comment relative to the trouble in dropping the dowser by hand does not hold good at all, because this dowser would not interefere with the ordinary hand-dowser, which would still remain in place just as it is now. I also think the chance of failure to make contact is slight enough to be disregarded. Your idea of weighting the dowser so that it would remain normally closed and holding it open with the current is also a good one, but I am not craw-fishing about what I said regarding brother Klink's device. I said it was thoroughly practical and all right, and it is. Of course, brother Rodgers, I fully admit that the thing is not perfect, and, by that same token, I have never yet seen any device that is. But I am, nevertheless, willing to admit that your scheme of weighting the dowser normally shut is a better one from the safety point of view. Brother Armstrong's article was not published with the idea of its being of very large practical value, but to show the mental capacity of the men in some operating rooms. It is a fact, however, that while the everlasting proportion always holds good, still one is better off from understanding the why and wherefore of that proportion.

With relation to your comments on brother James' article, I would suggest that if you think he is wrong, we will be glad to publish the results of any experiments you may make tending to correct the alleged error or errors. In closing I wish to sincerely compliment you, brother Rodgers. While I cannot altogether agree with some of your conclusions, still at the same time you are a thinker—a man who uses his brain as well as his hands, and, moreover, your letter is printed exactly as it was written, which is a very rare thing indeed. Let's have those "reasons why."

A New Movement.

R. W. Martin, Bellevue, Pennsylvania, sends drawings of a variable pin and cam intermittent movement which he describes as follows:

In the regular star and cam intermittent movement, the cam and driving pin are rotated at a uniform rate. It is recognized, however, that the critical points of action in the path of the driving pin are at the points where the star wheel is started and stopped. The jar and consequent injury to the intermittent mechanism and also to the film, is caused by the sudden starting when the pin hits the slot of the star, and also by the sudden stop when the locking parts slap together.

It would therefore be an improvement upon the present device if the velocity of the driving pin and cam would be made much slower at the two above mentioned critical points. Again, the velocity of the pin and cam during the middle part of the film shift could be greatly increased without doing any damage; because there would be no jar or shock incident to so doing, and the increased speed of the film through the gate does not increase the friction, and only increase of work would be a slightly greater static strain upon the driving pin.

It is therefore our purpose to arrive at the advantage first mentioned by means of the latter expedient, i.e. to accelerate the velocity of the driving pin during the middle part of the shift, and thereby cause the motion at the beginning and end of the intermittent movement to become slower.

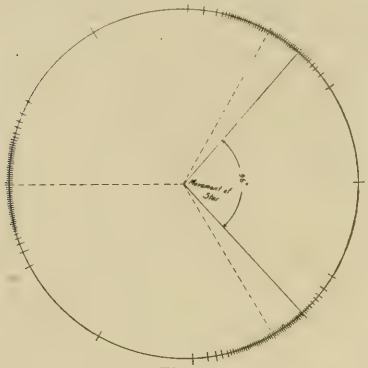

Fig. 1.

Fig. 1 shows the pin circle where the pin and cam are rotated by a variable motion so as to produce such an effect as has just been described. The means of doing so will be described later.

In Fig. 1, the movement of the star wheel is shown occupying an angular measurement of 96° which is about the practical movement of the five slot star wheel, which is here adopted for several reasons. In the first place, the four slot star would not be applicable for this system, because its movement which is about 80°, would not reach to the low velocity starting and stopping zones as shown in Fig. 1. Second, in Fig. 2 the minimum distance from the driving pin to the center of the star is taken the same as already successfully practiced with the four slot star; so that taking advantage of this fact, the resultant design makes the diameter of the pin circle about only half of that used in the four slot arrangement, and this gives the advantage of still further lowering the velocity of the driving pin and cam.

Fig. 2.

In Fig. 1 the angular movement of the pin and cam, at start and stop, is just half the speed as regularly employed; which combined with the design of the intermittent as shown in Fig. 2, further reduces it to only one-fourth of the velocity as used in the present methods now in vogue. This means that the intermittent device is four times as easy in its working as the present arrangement now in vogue. However, the fact that the intermittent sprocket of the five slot star is slightly larger than the present standard, makes the start and stop of the film at about half the present speed. The advantage of this system so far is thus seen to be very great.

At first thought it might seem that the time of the shift is slow, but by calculating from Fig. 1 it is found that the shift is made in about one-tenth of the total time, and this fraction can be easily varied to one-twelveth or one-fifteenth.

This will allow the use of a six bladed shutter, or better yet, a three bladed one run at two revolutions per shift so as to get a quicker cut-off action. The result of such a shutter as found by actual trial practically eliminates all flicker.

The method of securing this variable movement of the pin and cam is shown by the device in Fig. 3. The two shafts are out of alignment, so that a uniform motion applied to the crank with the wrist pin is converted into variable motion in the slot crank. This idea is compounded by using two sets of cranks as shown in Fig. 4. In actual practice the design must be somewhat larger than here shown, and the journals must be ball-bearing as the required speed is about 2900 r.p.m., but when properly constructed, it runs smoothly and with little noise.

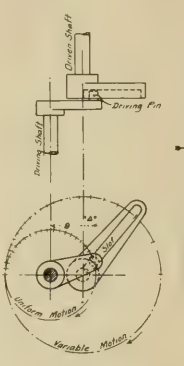

Fig. 3.

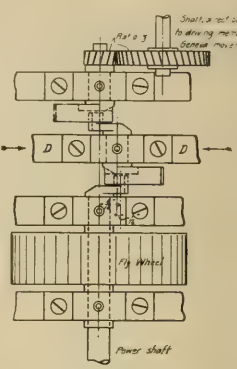

Fig. 4.

Fig. 5 is a diagram showing the method of determining the variable motion as shown in Fig. 1. The small circle represents the uniform motion of the first crank in Fig. 4. The next larger circle gives the variable motion which is transmitted to the two middle cranks which are connected to the same shaft; and the largest circle shows the final variable motion which is transmitted to the pinion and thence to the larger gear. The ratio of the gears being one to three, the pin and cam circle becomes divided into three equal segments as shown in Fig. 1. In Fig. 4 the shift can be adjusted to the exact requirements by moving D D back or forth in the direction of the arrows, which alters the amount of eccentricity in the alignment of the shafting.

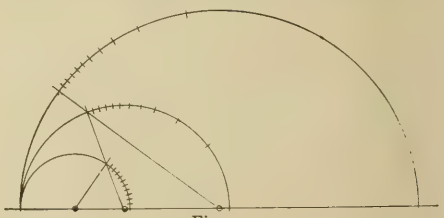

Fig. 5.

Summing up the whole matter, the advantages gained by the system are:

(1) The jar and shock to the intermittent device is only one-fourth of that of the present system now used.

(2) The jerk upon the film is only about one-half as great.

(3) The flicker is reduced to what it would be if the present machine were run at twice its normal speed.

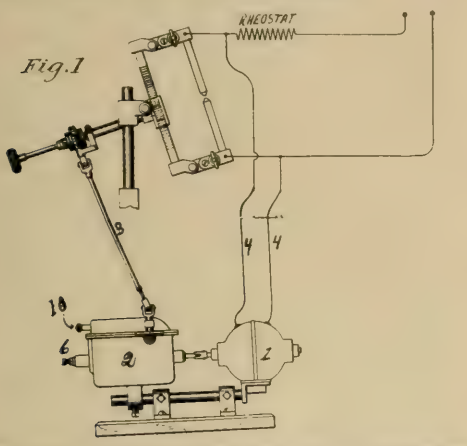
All this is accomplished by the addition of a small device which presents no great difficulties for its practical working or application.

Mr. Martin has requested that I comment on this movement, and I can assure him that I approach the matter with considerable doubt, and, while not exactly in "fear and trembling" still with a large degree of hesitation. In the first place I have been assured by projection machine manufacturers who have experimented, that films will not stand up under a movement faster than six to one—that is to say, the sprocket holes will not stand it. But of late I have pretty well come to the conclusion that this must be a mistake, because Kinemacolor sprocket holes stand up very well, and, in effect, they must be under a strain fully as great as a ten to one movement would cause. Mr. Martin's movement, as I understand it, proposes to speed up as high as ten, or even to fifteen to one. Now if this could be done, and both mechanism and the film stand up to the work then, of course, the net result would be a possible very large reduction of shutter blade width, and, hence a heavy increase in the percentage of light made available, though just what effect a reduction of shutter blade width to an extent which would give more than 50 per cent. of the light would have on flicker I am not prepared to say, though I believe it would increase it. The thing which strikes me, however, is the mechanical complication. According to Fig. 3 we would have a pin, presumably a roller pin, at the extremity of an arm driving another arm through the medium of a slot, and looking at Fig. 4 we find there are two of these in the movement. It seems to me that there could be very little question but that such a movement would be extremely noisy, though again it is possible that I may be mistaken. Brother Martin asked me to comment, and I am simply doing the best I can. If I make mistakes I am always subject to correction.

As to the five pin star, the principal difficulty with that proposition would be that it would require a larger intermittent sprocket, hence there would be greater weight to overcome in both the starting and the stopping, though this would not necessarily be a very serious matter, but it certainly would add materially to the strain put upon the geneva pin and the star. Taking everything into consideration I would not care to express an authoritative opinion on this movement until I had actually seen it made up and tried out. I long ago discovered the fact that things which look good on paper sometimes work out badly in practice, and, contrarywise, things which do not look very good on paper sometimes work out very well in metal. My present impression is that the movement will be found to be impractical, so far as its application to motion picture projectors is concerned.

Arc Controller.

The editor has just examined a device manufactured by the Speed Controller Company, New York City, which is designed to automatically control the arc of a motion picture projector. The device in question is almost childishly simple, yet there is no manner of doubt but what it will operate, and operate perfectly; in fact, I have watched it do so. After examining this device I was literally amazed that none of us thought of so simple a scheme, and worked it out into a practical device long ago.



The contrivance consists of an electric motor 1, Fig. 1, and the encased mechanism 2, Fig. 1, which is illustrated in detail in Fig. 2. This machanism connects to the lamp control by means of rod 3, Fig. 1, as shown. The thing operates as follows: It will be observed that motor leads, 4-4, Fig. 1, connect directly across the arc on the lamp side of the rheostat, or whatever the current controlling device may be. Now, just a glance will show you that the instant the arc lengthens the voltage rises and, of course, the motor speeds up, whereas conversely as the arc is shortened its resistance decreases, the voltage decreases, and the motor slows up. By means of thumb screw, 6, Fig. 1, the device can be set to maintain any desired arc voltage.

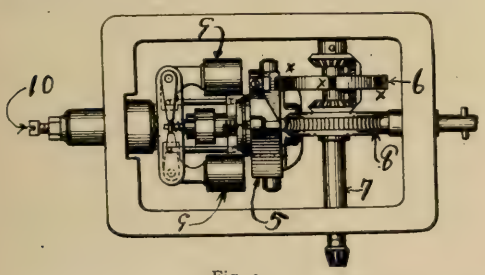


Fig. 2.

The mechanism operates as follows: Part 5, Fig. 2, is held over against wheel 6, Fig. 2, by means of a spring. On the periphery of wheel 6 are lugs X-X-X about 1/16 of an inch high, which engage with the top edge of part 5. Wheel 6 is engaged with shaft 7, Fig. 2, which carries worm gear 8, Fig. 2. The motor is set by means of thumb screw 10, Figs. 1 and 2, to run at a certain speed when the arc is at a certain voltage. But the instant the voltage rises the motor speeds up and throws out governor arms, G-G, Fig. 2, which has the effect of pulling part 5 inward, thus releasing wheel 6, which then rotates and feeds the carbons until the arc voltage is re-established, whereupon the motor speed is again decreased, governor arm 9 falls inward, releasing part 5, which re-engages with one of lugs X, and stops wheel 6, and the feeding of the arc.

All this sounds very complicated, but it really is almost foolishly simple. The manufacturers claim that this controller will regulate the arc within a great deal less than one volt, and I have no doubt but what it will, too. As I before said, the thing is simple and there is practically nothing about it to get out of order. However, while conceding that the controller is entirely practical, and that it will maintain a more even illumination than nine out of ten operators will maintain, the manufacturers of this device will in all probability have considerable trouble in its introduction, not because the device lacks merit, but for other an very cogent reasons which, however, I don't care to embarrass the company by mentioning at this time since it has nothing whatever to do with either the mechanical or electrical efficiency of the device.

Shutter Trouble.

C. E. Kubitschack, West Jefferson, Ohio, says that he is having trouble with his shutter of late. Has an Edison machine, and the shutter won't stay in proper adjustment, although he has it fastened tight on the shaft so that it does not slip. Says he starts out on a reel with the shutter properly adjusted, and when he is about half through it will be out of adjustment, and show travel ghost at the top a few minutes and then at the bottom.

I think, broth Kubitschack, your trouble is most likely due to worn gears. Hold your fly wheel stationary, and if you can move the rim of the shutter to exceed more than ¾ of an inch you have too much lost motion in your gears. This, of course, applies to the outside shutter. If it is an inside shutter a rim movement of ½ inch would be excessive. Are you sure that none of the pins which hold the various gears to the shaft have been lost out? Hold your fly wheel still and pull on the rim of the shutter. If you can revolve the shutter while the fly wheel is held stationary, then something is wrong, and it is up to you to discover where the slip is. You are rather meagre in your information, therefore, I can only say what the most probable reason for the trouble is.

Gas Users, Attention!

George Kraus, Mogollon, New Mexico, writes:

For the benefit of gas users, of whom there are a great many scattered over the country in out-of-the-way places where electricity is not available, I wish to say a few words concerning the Guil pastil. After a three months' trial, under various and severe tests, I have finally discarded the old, faithful lime pencil, for the reason that since using the Guil pastil not only are the general results better, but my gas consumption has been reduced by fully one-third. While I formally consumed twelve cakes of oxone with Guil pastil eight suffices for a one and a half hour entertainment. I now have a pastil in my lamp which has been used for twelve consecutive shows, and it is still good for ten or twelve more. With careful handling the Guil pastil should, in my opinion, average at least eighteen entertainments, each one and a half hours in length. But great care is necessary in handling the pastil, since they are very fragile, and will not stand up under rough treatment as will the lime pencil. The first two pastils I tried lasted but one show each. I had been using lime pencils for several years, and one can shove in a lime pencil at a moment's notice, turn on both gases as soon as same is in place, and be ready to begin the show. I tried this method with the pastil, with result that it heated too quickly and cracked, and by the time the last reel was through the pastil was on the floor of the lamp house in small pieces. I now first turn a small flame of hydrogen for about three minutes, which heats the pastil slowly and thoroughly; then I turn on the oxygen gas slowly, until there is a small red ring on the outside of the flame. This heats the surface of the pastil to white heat, delivering a steady, powerful, white light which the line pencil can never produce. After my light is once adjusted there is no more adjusting to be done, as with a lime, which the lime pencil can never produce. After my light is once that disagreeable brown edge of light on the outer edges of the screen. The pastil throws a brilliant, clear field like an electric arc, except, of course, it is not so powerful a light. The lime pencil goes in the burner, as you all know, upright, but the pastil is placed the other way, with the flat end toward the jet. To get the best result with the least consumption of gas, have the burner-tip at the lower edge of the pastil, and about one-eighth of an inch away from it. At this distance the gas is evenly distributed over the surface of the pastil, so that its outer edge is as white as the center. If the tip be any closer than this the light will be in the center and the edges will be darker, which makes for poor results, besides pitting the pastil in the center, due to the blast of gas which concentrates on one small spot. I get the best results from a 9/16 size pastil, using two 6½ condensers, projecting a 12-foot picture at 45 feet. I have two projectors, a Motiograph and a Power's Six A. I use a Model B gas machine.

All of which will undoubtedly be of real value to gas users. In this connection let me say that I have not, up to date, had a single bad report on the Guil pastil, whereas, on the other hand, some of the reports have been very enthusiastic.

Operators Are you perfectly satisfied with the results you get on the screen?

The new second edition of the

MOTION PICTURE HANDBOOK FOR MANAGERS AND OPERATORS

By F. H. Richardson

420 Pages Illustrated

$2.50 Each Postage Paid

will be the standard textbook on the subject for many years.

Address all orders and remittances to

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

Comments on the Films

Licensed

BUNNY'S SWELL AFFAIR (Vitagraph), May 22.—Here's another screamingly funny picture with John Bunny and Flora Finch, aided by a particularly good scenario, turning the trick. Bunny is a druggist and Miss Finch a wealthy widow who is ardently wooed by Bunny and a prosperous undertaker. When his suit is not prospering, Bunny intercepts a hat which his rival is sending to the widow and substitutes dry sponges for the pompons originally put on by the milliner. The widow fails to discover the substitution and the "swell affair" of the title results when she gets caught in the rain while wearing the new hat. Needless to say, the suitor who sent the hat doesn't win the widow's hand.

THE PRICE OF DRINKS (Biograph), May 25.—Rough farce with some amusing things, but a bit overdone. That scene in the bar room when the "barkeep" expostulates with the dummy is amusing up to the time he keeps on abusing it although its head is off—that part fails to get over. As a whole it has broad humor for the crowd.

WIDOW MUGGIN'S WEDDING (Biograph), May 25.—An old situation full of that broad, rough humor that seems always funny to the spectator who is not critical. On the same reel with the foregoing.

A LADY OF SPIRITS (Edison), May 25.—Very amusing farce comedy that is wholly fresh and is sure to take well everywhere. Our old friend Wood B. Wed is up against a thoroughly perplexing proposition now. He wants Widow Jenks—she is a good cook, has broad lands, a fine home and all that makes life comfortable, what is more she wants to marry. But she has—it will have to be whispered—spooks. To her they are intimate and companionable; but to Woody they are anything but desirable. He has a nightmare of a time and they scare him off. Let us add that they would scare anyone. It is very likeable as an amusing offering. Mark Swan scores another success with it and Producer C. Jay Williams deserves credit, although two scenes—before the justice's office and in the county clerk's office were not so convincing as all the rest of the scenes. Kathleen Humphrey is the widow. William Wadsworth is Wood as usual. Harry Gripp does well as Uncle Jerry, chief ghost. But every player in it does well. The photography is only fair.

A SENTIMENTAL BURGLAR (Vitagraph), May 25.—Society drama along quite conventional lines and with an old, old situation. It is clearly written and handled with enough skill by both players and producer to stand with most of the other offerings of the day. W. A. Tremayne is the author and Maurice Costello with Robert Gailord produced it. The photography is clear enough. There are a few scenes of Boer War adventure that are acceptable without being exciting.

HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL (Selig), May 25.—Some wonderful smoke and flame pictures taken as an oil tank burns are included and are full of interest. There is also a picture of a requiem mass sung in the shot-riddled Naval Academy in Vera Cruz for the American sailors and marines who died there. These two items are of great interest, the others are of lesser importance.

BLIND MAN'S BUFF (Essanay), May 26.—An interesting dramatic story which has for its villain a physician who so far forgets the ethics of his profession as to mix his personal and business affairs. The plot will have difficulty in forcing conviction and the failure of the principals to play up to speed in the denouement scene is open to unfavorable criticism. Originality of conception is the picture's strongest claim for distinction.

THE MYSTERY OF THE AMSTERDAM DIAMONDS (Edison), May 26.—This "seventh chronicle of Cleek" throws interesting light upon the problems which are constantly confronting the United States revenue officers whose business it is to prevent smuggling. Just how Cleek arrives at some of his conclusions is not entirely clear, but the story is fairly well worked out and the picture will give satisfaction.

THE PARTICULAR COWBOYS (Lubin), May 26.—The laughs that are won by this half-reel of Lubin comedy will result from one or two bits of genuinely funny "business" introduced. The excuse for the action can scarcely be held strong enough to justify all that is done by a bunch of wild and wooly Westerners who are dissatisfied with their ranch cook.

FOR TWO PINS (Lubin), May 26.—The Lubin comedy police force always compel laughter. Trouble which results when a commuter hurrying for his train crashes into a drunk whom he later decides has robbed him of a scarf pin is quite reasonably made the basis of a comedy plot.

THE CLOCK WENT WRONG (Selig), May 26.—In the larger cities where working men operate upon a strict schedule in traveling between their homes and places of employment, this half-reel subject will have an especially humorous "punch." Many a man has had the identical troubles which are enlarged upon in this story when every clock in the house proves unfaithful, and as a consequence the story will create lots of laughter.

SIMP SIMPSON AND THE SPIRITS (Selig), May 26.—The simplicity of a fire-eating Westerner in "falling for" a fake spiritualist is used as the basis for a lot of good comedy in this subject which is shown on the same reel with "The Clock Went Wrong." What the characters in the action do—and their performances are quite funny—one can imagine people in real life doing under similar conditions.

THE BOYS OF THE I. O. U. (Vitagraph), May 27.—A little farce weakened by an easy and not convincingly funny ending. There is just a touch of burlesque show vulgarity in it; but this will not hurt it as an offering. M. R. Lane is author and Wilfrid North, with Wally Van, produced it.

LOST—A PAIR OF SHOES (Edison), May 27.—A farce comedy by Harry Beaumont, with some good characters and a knowledge of Irish human nature in it. It is very fair as an amuser and should go well. Preston Kendall produced it. Clearly photographed.

PAT CASEY'S CASE (Essanay), May 27.—True humanity makes the humor of this amusing farce alive and convincing. It is well acted and is speedy and although the laughs are not loud, the pleasing sense of entertainment is continuous. A good release.

DAWN (Selig), May 27.—Dawn is the name of the heroine, lost as a child and taken by a white-haired hermit; she finds her father in the end. The story is one of sentiment and would have been better if the hermit hadn't been required to lie about the child in order to keep her with him. To cut that part out would take nothing from the picture at all. It is too full of studio suggestions to convince our feelings wholly, yet makes a fair offering.

HUNGER KNOWS NO LAW (Vitagraph), May 28.—This is a pretty outdoor story, showing the manner in which a bright girl befriends a poacher who is shooting game on a big estate for his starving family. The photography is pleasing and the story has a little love interest in it, Alfred D. Vosburgh and Jane Novak being the principals.

SOPHIE STARTS SOMETHING (Essanay), May 28.—A small town comedy in which Sophie leads the suffragettes on a saloon smashing crusade, having diverted the attention of the men by a false alarm of fire. There are a lot of laughable scenes in this and it keeps the audience in good humor from start to finish.

JACK'S INHERITANCE (Melies), May 28.—A half-reel subject of the French eccentric type. It pictures Jack's efforts to protect his inheritance from thieves. It is fairly funny.

JACK AND THE MOTORCYCLE (Melies), May 28.—On same reel with above. Jack and his companion have a high time with a motorcycle on the streets of Paris. Not much plot to this, but it will pass.

AND THE DANCE WENT ON (Kalem), May 29.—There is a nice human side to this story of railroad life. The boys work hard to get the train in on time and then are called away from the dance to go out on the wrecker. The girls console themselves with other fellows. Nothing very strong about this, but it makes good entertainment.

BUNNY BUYS A HAT FOR HIS BRIDE (Vitagraph), May 29.—A typical Bunny and Flora story, written by Roy L. McCardell. Bunny has a dreadful time selecting a hat for his injured wife and finally has to purchase one belonging to a passing woman. The humor of this is rather delicately amusing; it seemed a little drawn out at times.

SECOND-CHILDHOOD (Selig), May 29.—This features two old men in a small town, who play jokes as they did when boys. One pretends to be killed and creates great excitement. The production gets a staggering start, having too many separate plot threads which lead nowhere. The characterizations are the best features of this.

THE TEST OF COURAGE (Lubin), May 29.—The story of a Mexican girl with a tyrannical father who wants her to marry the ranch owner instead of her lover. Rather conventional at first, but has quite a novel scene toward the close, where the lover is about to be buried alive.

CONSCIENTIOUS CAROLINE (Edison), June 1.—A farce by Ashley Miller that is almost wholly artificial and little likely to provoke true laughter in many. There is good fun in the idea and in some of the scenes, especially in that in which the count is interviewed by the jewelers. The photography is good. Some of the acting is clever.

MISS RAFFLES (Vitagraph), June 1.—Surely there is nothing that is really new in this picture and it is full of amateurish things—things made up to fit the needs of the story whether reasonable or not. It is well played and clearly photographed. Mrs. Tom Coleman is the author and it was staged by Theodore Marston. Hardly better than fair.

DEATH'S WITNESS (Biograph), June 1.—Melodrama in which the butler (he has a finger missing) murders his master and steals from the safe. The son, who has had quarrels with his father, is accused and is rescued by his courageous sweetheart who (at one time in the action) is choked by the villain and left for dead. The loot goes over the falls with the butler's body and is lost, which is a pity, so people will probably realize that the hero and his sweetheart might need the money when they get married. It is a commercial offering of fair merit. The acting is not strong and the photography is heavy.

Licensed Specials

THE VOICE IN THE WILDERNESS (Essanay), May 22.—As a picture—that is, something that appeals to the eye—"The Voice in the Wilderness" is all that could be desired. As a two-part photoplay—something which ought to appeal to a logic loving mind as well as to the eye—the offering is far from satisfactory. Entirely too much liberty has been taken in working out a story which might have been made of particularly strong interest.

THE TREASURE SHIP (Kalem), May 25.—A worthy, two-part offering that one and all will find entertaining and satisfying. This story is of a lonely tropic isle on which oily "combers" roll lazily up all day long. Other scenes are in a fishing village where the wife and children of the castaway sailor stand and wait. It is in itself a much better tale than Enoch Arden; is fresh and also in accord with the modern fashion in stories. The characters are life-like and, for the most part, well acted. The photography is well-nigh perfect. So we can very safey commend this as an exceptionally good offering.

THE BABY SPY (Selig), May 25.—Technically well put-to-gether, this two-part drama of Civil War times lacks punch, because of its improbability. Little "Baby" Lillian Wade is a good actress. It is understandable when we consider the atmosphere in which she lives; but when she makes the baby in the picture just as skillful an actresses as herself, it isn't understandable. Then this child of three or thereabouts realizes the military import of the Confederate plans as the officers talk about them. She tells her mother who makes her copy an important order while she is entertaining the officers at dinner in another room. Then the mother rides to the Union camp with the information and saves the army in which her husband is a private. The husband is then given a long furlough at home. It would have even better technicality if more space had been used to emphasize the friendship of father and daughter before the war. Such things are always better shown strongly than indicated and left to the understanding.

CUTEY'S WIFE (Vitagraph), May 26.—To keep this two-reeler going to the point where the producers intended that it should end, a lot of the characters introduced are compelled to pass many a point where a few simple words of explanation would have straightened things out beautifully —and broken up the picture. That the nice looking young son of wealthy parents is prevented from marrying a designing stage star and thrown pell mell into the arms of a sweet young thing who has run away from a boarding school is a development which most audiences will favor and it may be that they will overlook the glaring faults of the plot.

THE BOTTLED SPIDER (Kalem), May 27.—Not up to the usual standard for Kalem two-part releases. The story, except in its possibilities, has no special strength, freshness or interest. It might have been made exciting and would then have been a good commercial offering; but it has been poorly handled and is full of artificialities. The woman's failure with the gun when she had just showed that she could free herself is the most noticeable of these. The photography is very poor for Kalem pictures.

THE TRUNK MYSTERY (Lubin), May 27.—It was certainly a mistake not to have given Eleanor Blanchard a better part in this two-part picture farce. It is just the kind of thing for her when she puts on comedy's mask, and, as it is, she is, in the tiny chance it gave to her at the close, head and shoulders higher than every one else in it. As an offering it is very dry. There is too little comedy terror, too little comedy pain, (none except Blanchard's) and too little comedy mystery in it. The story holds possibilities for scenario man and director; but they were too often slighted. The photographs and the sets were commendable. Clay M. Green wrote it and Joseph Smiley produced it.

THE SCIENCE OF CRIME (Biograph), May 28.—This is a two-reel number dealing exclusively with the seamy side of life. It shows how the son of a famous criminologist loses his memory and becomes a master thief. Later his memory returns and the picture ends happily. As a study of criminal methods this is a strong offering; it is well constructed and holds a good tension of interest throughout. George Morgan plays the part of the son in good style. This is a trifle sordid, but is well handled.

THE TERRIBLE ALTERNATIVE (Melies), May 28.—In this story, enacted by a French cast, two sisters find themselves on opposite sides of a murder conspiracy originating in Constantinople. The girl reporter must choose between her sister and her lover, the latter being marked for assassination. This production has a certain intensity of interest and holds the attention well, in spite of the fact that it develops rather slowly. It is quite artistically handled throughout and enacted by a pleasing cast.

THE TWO VANREVELS (Edison), May 29.—A very satisfying production is this two-reel photoplay, taken from the novel by Booth Tarkington. It becomes so absorbing that one forgets he is watching a picture. Mabel Trunelle makes a captivating Betty Carewe; Herbert Prior and Bigelow Cooper have important parts, and Richard Tucker made a strong role of Crailey Gray. This is at the time of the first war between this country and Mexico and is carefully staged as to costuming, etc. Some of the scenic effects are wonderfully attractive. A particularly good release.

WHEN THE LIGHTNING STRUCK (Essanay), May 29.—An unusual production, showing the manner in which an insanely jealous young man planned to blow up his rival and the girl, but is caught himself. The general motive of the piece is one of revenge, but the plot is so ingenious that it holds the interest. The suspense is good, leading up to the main situation, and the suggestion of an approaching storm was wonderfully well staged. The feature of having the lightning move the clock ahead was based on an actual occurrence.

ADVENTURES OF KATHLYN, No. 12 (Selig), June 1.—Gives the incident called, "The King's Will" and deals with buried treasure in a cave at the foot of a smoking volcano. We can truthfully say that this Kathlyn series has maintained its level as well, if not better, than most of the series pictures we have seen. Some of the others held up pretty well and The Adventures of Kathlyn belongs with them, the good ones.

THE BARRIER OF IGNORANCE (Kalem), June 1.—This two-part special was reviewed at length in a former issue—see Moving Picture World for May 23, 1914, page 1098.

Independent

THE GIRL IN THE SHACK (Reliance), May 15.—Western love story with girl and badman, who reforms for love of her. Mae Marsh and Earle Fox hold their own in it; but such old stuff affords them little scope. Yet it is skillfully directed and has "go." There are few who haven't seen this story many times, but the players and the director have added something new to it. A fair offering.

A TELEPHONE STRATEGY (Princess), May 29.—Pleasing little melodrama, lively, exciting and free from anything objectionable. The story between telephone girl and his son displeases a rich man, the town banker. Burglars are looting the safe in the bank and have got the young man tied up. He cleverly fixes the telephone so that the operator will hear what is going on. She rouses the neighborhood and, herself, saves her sweetheart from death in the safe. It is romance that make such pictures go and they are popular just now. Well photographed, it has good scenes.

BOMBSKY AND THE BOMB (Royal), May 30.—A farce with eccentric characters that is lively and broad and a bit rough. It will entertain, for it has new and quite unexpected happenings with much amusing tumbling about. The last half of it is truly exciting.

AN EXCITING COURTSHIP (Komic), May 31.—An eccentric character farce. It makes good distinctly, because its characters are played by actors with the peculiar ability to be wooden and funny at the same time. Good clowns are not so numerous as blackberries in July and it takes a good deal of ability to mimic a marionette while doing the lively playing required by pictures of this kind. There are several burlesque characters in it and three cub bears, thin and lively.

THE FATAL MALLET (Keystone), June 1.—Weber and Fields have made millions laugh with the aid of just such comedy business as is employed in this release and the picture, purporting to be nothing other than a melange of rough-house happenings, will prove acceptable on the majority of programs. This one-reeler proves that hitting people over the heads with bricks and mallets can sometimes be made amusing.

OUR MUTUAL GIRL, No. 20 (Reliance), June 1.—Norma is still in the hands of the thugs and doesn't appear in the action of this number at all. The story, now that it has got started on the right track, keeps up well—frocks and frills have given place to melodrama and we begin to wonder how it is going to turn out. A more terrible crook than "the gang" has now got busy and has the gang scared. Plain clothes men and gangsters look like the real thing. The camera work is good.

DRIFTING HEARTS (Beauty), June 2.—Unexpected ending to a very old and trite situation gives this picture a touch of freshness. It opens just as many and many a picture has opened and fails to excite expectation until we find that the wife about to elope with the musician finds—not the dead baby's shoe, but the necklace her artist husband intended for his model. It was the anniversary of her wedding day. They make up. This development fails to convince us strongly and the offering is hardly better than fair. The photography is acceptable.

THE NEWER WOMAN (Majestic), June 2.—Lively picture farce with subdued burlesque that is full of fun and will take well. Dorothy Gish will become a new woman and "rule the world," as woman should. There is, at once, quite a change in Dot and her sweetheart (Robert Harron), plainly doesn't like it. He is fired. Dot has converted the cook and the cop on that beat is also fired. Dot is given the rent money to care for. She can't fire the burglar who comes. Robert is at hand and there's a lively minute or two until he is handing him over to the cop. Robert turns the cold shoulder on Dot and tears follow with repentance. It is in the way the picture is acted and handled in general that makes it a good offering—it is one. Pretty scenes and good photographs add much.

A PRINCE OF BOHEMIA (American), June 3.—The story, though simple and not new, is not clear-cut enough to leave a distinct impression. A kind-hearted painter has adopted a child of a dead model. His sweetheart comes and, finding the child who says that the painter is her "papa," misunderstands—this is old, old stuff and it seldom gets over. It surely doesn't here. The picture is weak as an offering although the playing and photography and stage work are good.

A PAIR OF CUFFS (Reliance), June 3.—Among cuffs we have fistl-, linen and steel. All kinds are represented here, for the story opens in a laundry from which a trusted employee is sent to the bank to cash the pay roll. He is robbed by a couple of thugs and locked up in a closet tied hand and foot. One thug writes on an old cuff a note to his pal to meet him at the station. Landlady comes in and takes that cuff with other wash and sends it at once to the laundry at which—strange to say—it comes in time to make possible not only the rescue of the prisoner, but the capture of the outlaws, who are handcuffed in steel. Dramatic enough to hold attention, this picture should make a good offering; it is full of speed and convinces for the most part enough to be exciting. The photography is clear.

THEIR FIRST ANNIVERSARY (Joker), June 3.—Max attempts to hide his wife's present in the cellar, is mistaken for a burglar and has numerous misadventures. The coal is sent down the chute over him and he is finally arrested and taken to jail. A characteristic number, rising to some rather funny situations at times.

THE GIRL NEXT DOOR (Frontier), June 4.—A Western number beginning with a childhood friendship between a boy and girl. Years later they meet in the West under exciting circumstances. The plot is conventional, but the pictures are well taken and it possesses a fair degree of interest.

MEIN LIEBER KATRINA (American), June 5.—Audiences that will laugh at this comedy will be good-natured despite the heat.

BESSIE THE DETECTRESS OR THE OLD MILL AT MIDNIGHT (Joker), June 6.—This features Bess Merredyth as an actress out of a job who becomes a lady detective. The comedy is not of the best, though there is considerable novelty in some of the situations.

CLOSED GATES (Rex), June 7.—Something substantial is always to be expected from the pen of Lois Weber. In this case, we have a symbolical picture, by no means equal to her best work; for it is not dramatic in any true sense and seems to be more concerned with its own moral significance than with its charm as a story. The best in it is its scenes—it is filled with beautiful, artistic pictures and perfectly trimmed sets. It is intelligently acted, too; but somehow it neither convinces or attracts, not in the same way that "Mother's Christmas," and many another fine picture by this author and company have attracted.

THE SCRUB LADY (Thanhouser), June 7.—It is a fierce scrub lady and she goes on the warpath. The woman who owns the house has to telephone to her husband who is flirting with the stenographer. Brave husband comes home and has to give the scrub lady much money to get her to depart. A day or so later there's another fight; in the office this time. The wife is on the warpath she has found one of her necklaces on the stenographer. The woman who wouldn't fight to free her home from a bad servant will fight to free her husband's office from a bad stenographer. Let us tell the truth; it is a very vulgar picture and likely to offend the sensibilities of many, especially women.

HIS LUCKY DAY (Crystal), June 9.—When Charlie picked up a horseshoe he thought it would bring him luck, but instead he met with a series of misadventures. The scenes did not have the effect of a running story and none of them were very humorous in effect, though well devised.

THOSE COLLEGE DAYS (Nestor), June 10. The principals at the co-ed school have a hard time keeping the boys and girls out of mischief. This pictures, almost too breezily at times, some of the students' exploits. On the whole this is good, harmless fun and will get numerous laughs. It is one of Al E. Christie's productions.

A QUIET DAY AT MURPHY'S (Joker), June 10.—This photoplay, produced by Wilfred Lucas, is well photographed and has its setting on a training farm. The plot is very skimpy and not at all worthy of the environment; it seemed to us much more could have been made of the production.

WHEN SMALTZ LOVES (Sterling), June 11. Ford Sterling is the same as ever and his queer Dutchman, Smaltz, will excite laughter. Yet there are moments when his supporting company fails to hold up its end and lets some of the picture fall flat. The plot (it is merely a scheme on which Sterling plasters the fun) is typical of this kind of offering—there is apt to be a good deal of sameness in them all. It will probably be acceptable to Sterling's following.

SOPHIE OF THE FILM— Series No. 2 (Nestor), June 12. Sophie, the laundry-girl actress, is commanded to go into the lions' cage. She does so and the beasts flee in terror. Later she is tied to a rock in the ocean, but is saved at the last moment. This number is one of the best in this series of four, all of the burlesque type.

Independent Specials

GOLDEN DROSS (Reliance), May 16.—A two-part offering of little strength. It is played by a pretty engenue and has some lovely scenes; but it fails in its attempt to weave a poetic atmosphere into its story, although several of its "cut ins" are quotations from the Rubiat. Lack of probability is the great drawback in it. Its country girl heroine can cook well, but she doesn't give "inspiration" to her poetic lover, who thinks he finds it in an actress. The scenes shift to the city and are just as improbable and back again to the country where the actress gives the man back in the most improbable scenes of all. This kind of matter doesn't add to the reputation of its maker, which is high. Good photography and excellent scenes are all the picture affords as entertainment.

SILENT SANDY (Reliance), May 30.—A little two-part gem of a picture comedy on account of its simplicity and humanity. The situation—it has been often maltreated—is given life and individuality by the convincingly human way that the characters react. D. W. Griffith is the producer and as usual in work that he turns out, even the secondary characters are noticeable—they do not distract attention from the center of the action at any time; but they keep the whole production up clear across, like a bridge or any other well-made structure. The best character in it is a nameless village youth, an embarrassed bringer of news and a puzzled spectator of unusual events—he gives mighty help to the seeming sincerity of the situation's development and is valuable. A good and desirable offering. Picturesque scenes add to its charm.

THE SOUL OF HONOR (Majestic), May 31.—In two reels, an artistic and effectively pictured study of human pride. It is not well titled; for there is, when its whole meaning is considered, no true honor in it; the "honor" being merely family reputation. The situation imagined and developed by Frank Woods with his best skill and knowledge of picture craft fails of making the best impression on the spectator. It deals chiefly with three persons, father, son and son's wife, all of whom are in a low state of grace, from the average, normal-minded spectator's point of view. James Kirkwood, the producer, has presented it with that naturalness and simplicity that are only found in the work of the best directors. The son has dishonored himself by failing to carry on the orders to his general. His wife has persuaded him to rest overnight and his general loses the battle. When the father finds this out, he counsels the son to shoot himself and then treats it as though it were a commendable act. It is a picture to hold the audience strongly; but it is a more pleasant one to forget than to remember long. It is a pretty picture.

THE PERILS OF PAULINE (Eclectic), June 1.—We can not truthfully say that this Pauline series is holding up very well. It started off finely, but is poor this week. This number carries the action on without getting it, in any true sense, along any. Rough incidents, in which the players are or seem to be in great peril, are not real action; they are film users and need to be a bit better done than in this two-reel offering to be thrilling. The photography is poor.

THE METAMORPHOSIS (American), June 1.—The first reel of this two-part picture stumbles about trying to get a situation clearly stated. The reason lies in this—the writer's chief interest is so strongly centered in something quite off the earth of normal experience that the picture-maker was lost in the philosopher. He has made his heroine in love with a thug and apparently with his crime, since his crimes show courage. Such a picture-hero is unhealthy. The second reel deals with such matters as the power of one's soul to depart from his body and labor for desired ends afar. There are many incidents in the action's thread, which at length has become clear, that are most improbable. Not a strong offering and one not likely to be widely popular. Photography is fair.

THE DOCTOR'S TESTIMONY (Victor), June 5.—A two-part Reliance Lawrence picture with good melodramatic action and a sensational climax that will hardly be expected even by the closest observer of its development. The first reel drags a little; but the second is dramatic and has suspense. The sets are excellent, the acting throughout is good and the photography is clear. Matt Moore plays the jealous husband and Hector Dion has the heavy role as the doctor who knows that the jealous husband didn't kill his friend, yet is willing to testify against him merely so that he will have some chance with the wife, Florence Lawrence. His action as the picture approaches the climax is not strongly logical. But the picture covers its shortcomings at this point by speedy action that discounts thought.

THE MAN WHO LOST BUT WON (Imp), June 8.—This pictures in two reels the love affairs of a young minister, played by Alexander Gaden. He refuses to marry the girl in the beginning because she becomes an actress. Later another couple enter into the equation and numerous incidents of interest occur. Ruth Donelly gave a spirited rendition of the part of the girl. She finally tones down and becomes the minister's wife. Not a particularly strong number, but well pictured and novel enough to be entertaining.

LUCILLE LOVE, Series No. 9 (Gold Seal), June 9.—Lucille meets with any number of thrilling events in this number. She is a captive in Hugo's house, which contains a disappearing stairway, trap door arrangements and other mystifying devices. When the captain and detectives appear there is a thrilling fight in the house and later on the roof tops. This is a sure enough thriller, and will be followed by further adventures on Hugo's ranch in Mexico.

A TRAGEDY OF THE ORIENT (Broncho), June 10.—Miss Tsura Aoki and a company, made up for the most part of Japanese players, have done well in this two-reeler with a story which has a distinctively Oriental flavor. The "tragedy" results when a little geisha girl (Aoki) avenges the death of a young American who has married her by submitting to the embraces of the man who has incited the crime in order that she may thrust a dagger into his breast. The plot is consistently worked out. Some especially fine lighting effects have been secured with the aid of careful photography. A jarring note in the splendid picture is introduced when the director casts a non-Japanese woman utterly lacking in the physical characteristics which would make it possible for her to create even a fair illusion in a role which brings her into close comparison with Miss Aoki.

ACROSS THE ATLANTIC (Imp), June 11.—A three-reel number, produced by Herbert Brennon, with King Baggot in the leading role. It deals with international intrigue between this country and Japan, the chief scenes being taken in the vicinity of London. It is wonderfully entertaining all through, and racy with English atmosphere. We have a splendid view of Derby Day, with the enormous crowds and pavilions; there are views of Claude Graham White and other aviators in action. In addition to this the story is well constructed and exciting throughout. Altogether this is an especially attractive feature number.

A RELIC OF OLD JAPAN (Domino), June 11.—In two reels, the adventures of a rich Japanese youth in America. His money is his undoing; for he falls into the clutches of some designing persons and, not knowing our ways, is partly kicked and partly frightened into marrying a vampire creature with a pretty face. The opening scenes of the picture show his home life in Japan, his father and his fiancee. The closing scenes also are in Japan, after the news has come that the youth, after the outraged father had cut off his allowance, had found the woman faithless and killed her, giving himself up to the police. It will be noticed that this story is quite out of the usual. It is clear and dramatic in its progress. The acting is very fair and, with the exception of one or two scenes (that college room scene is as bad as any picture that we have seen in two years) it is natural. It makes an excellent offering. The photography is good.

FROM OUT THE DREGS (Kay-Bee), June 12.—A two-reel offering with a very old theme, the love story of a rich youth and a girl of the underworld whom he catches picking his pocket and helps to reform and finally marries. Dramatic struggle is furnished by a lawyer who wants the young man to marry his daughter and forges a will to further his design. The slum girl's father had helped to burglarize the lawyer's safe and the original will turns up in time. It is fairly well done, but is not notable for any special excellence.

A RACE WITH DEATH (Warner's Features).—A three-part offering from the studio of Milano. It is more noteworthy for beautiful scenes than for strong or dramatic story; but the acting makes much of it convincingly human. It makes it its chief business to show the downward path of a weak, self-indulgent girl who is no heroine, but very pretty. She had once been rich, but had become poor and longed for finery and jewels. She sells herself for these and at the close comes back in poverty to die in the studio of the one man who really loved her. Perfect photography and beautiful backgrounds are as a matter of course with this firm's product.

AROUND THE WORLD IN EIGHTY DAYS (Louis Pennent).—A six-reel picture of the famous Jules Verne story which everyone has read. It doesn't keep very close to copy; was made in a studio (there are three or four bits of travelogue spliced into it). We can truthfully praise the making and trimming of the stage sets, but it would be far from true if we commended the picture to exhibitors as a production or as entertainment. It is weak.

SACRIFICIAL FIRES (Balboa).—A three-part offering telling an international love story with scenes in America and in Japan. It is as a whole dignified; reaches a remarkably Japanese atmosphere in many of its sets, and is acted by the heroine with convincing naturalness. Many of the lesser figures, too, carry their parts well; but the hero is rather theatrical. In general workmanship it is not up to the Balboa standard—for example, the hero takes a short nap in his chair just to have a dream of the Japanese girl, his wife, and of the American girl with whom he is at the time in love. The photography is clear, but the tone of one print is not always lifelike. As a whole, it interests; the story holds attention and is not trite.

Independent Releases Not Previously Reviewed.

WASHINGTON AT VALLEY FORGE (Gold Seal), March 30.—A four-reel story of sustained excellence, depicting revolutionary days in America, when the first blows for freedom were struck. Grace Cunard and Francis Ford, who wrote and produced the story, appear in the cast. The characterizations of Washington, Samuel Adams, John Hancock, Lafayette and other notables must not be inquired into too closely, but in point of costuming, elaborate treatment and fidelity to historical tradition this is wonderfully interesting. The battle of Concord, the ride of Paul Revere, the cruel days at Valley Forge were all well depicted. The final episode, wherein the loyal girl gives her life to save Washington, makes fine dramatic appeal. A desirable feature offering.

THE TWINS' DOUBLE (Bison), March 10.—Grace Cunard plays three roles in this three-reel drama of crooks, opium dens and detectives. She plays the part of a young society girl addicted to the use of opium; the part of a sort of queen of crooks, and the part of the society girl's twin sister. Francis Ford as the chief of the detective squad gives a good rendition and the acting throughout is not wanting. The final scene, showing the capture of the woman crook in a fashionable restaurant, is very well staged and we see her fall into the hands of the law with a positive thrill.

HEART OF THE HILLS (Nestor), March 12.—A moonshiner's story of the made-to-order type, with Wallace Reid and Dorothy Davenport in the leads. Dave, to earn money for an operation on his lame brother, joins the gang of distillers. The girl comes as a government detective and of course falls in love with Dave. The characterizations and photography are appealing, but the story not very new. Two reels.

DISCORD AND HARMONY (Gold Seal), March 17.—There is very little story here for a three-reel production; but while it fails to convince a critical spectator, it will pass very well indeed with the majority and will decidedly interest them. It has quality and plenty of it due to the players, to the atmosphere around artistic and musical people and, perhaps most of all the beauty of its scenes. The producer deserves much credit for the picturesqueness of his groupings in their sets; it is often lovely. Pauline Bush and Murdock McQuarrie have the most interesting roles. The latter is an old musician and the former a girl, daughter of a friend, whom he adopts.

THE BASEBALL FAN (Victor), April 10.—"Sketchy" film, depending entirely for its interest on typical scenes at a baseball game. The wife goes to sleep and her husband finds her later all alone in the grand stand. Too light in plot.

THE SKELETON (Nestor), April 13.—A film story with Wallace Reid and Dorothy Davenport in the leads. There is quite a clever little surprise in this, when the baby arrives, but the observer was led too far astray concerning the doctor and his mysterious personality. The photography is very good and the scenes are pleasing.

THE VOICE OF THE VIOLA (Nestor), March 4.—This story is based almost entirely upon old situations. The action is jerky and lacks conviction. Wallace Reid and Dorothy Davenport have the leading parts. The settings of the piece are Western.

THE SENATOR'S BILL (Rex), March 15.—A dramatic story in which the lead is played by Bob Leonard. There is a good scene of a Senate in session. The senator is sponsor for a bill abolishing capital punishment. When his own daughter is killed the legislator changes his mind and with draws his bill from further consideration.

THE GAMBLER (Nestor), March 16.—Another Western showing how a gambler won away the money that was stolen from a paymaster and returned it to him in time to save his reputation. A sermon against drinking doped lemonade. In the end the gambler gets religion. Reasonably plausible under the circumstances, but somewhat confusing at the beginning owing to the number of quick "flash-backs" of about one second's duration.

HAWKEYE AND THE CHEESE MYSTERY (Nestor), March 16.—This is a burlesque on the type of detective who sees too much in inconsequential things. A girl studying to be an actress excites his suspicions and his thinking that she has committed a crime leads to a number of amusing episodes in the last of which Hawkeye winds up his efforts in jail. The cheese mentioned in the title leads him to think that a body has been hidden in a certain house.

THE WAY OF A WOMAN (Nestor), March 18.—Wallace Reid and Dorothy Davenport appear in this number, he as a young Canadian who kidnaps his sweetheart. When he is injured she learns to love him and saves him from the angry pursuers. The idea in this deserved rather stronger treatment, but it serves to entertain the observers fairly well.

WITHOUT PANTS (Crystal), March 24.—This is a comedy in which a young man hires "Tough Mike" to beat up a rival; but before this transpires, loses his trousers and in deshabille meets the girl. She marries the rival, leaving the pantless one to be jailed.

THE MOUNTAINEER (Nestor), March 25.—A mountain story of about ordinary interest. Jim, the young mountaineer, becomes angry when the artist appears and paints a portrait of his sweetheart. Later when the artist is suspected of being a revenue man, Jim has a change of heart.

A MARRIAGE FOR MONEY (Eclair), March 29.—A comedy of French peasant life, with attractive colored pictures throughout. The old farmer marries the girl, thinking she holds the winning lottery ticket. Later he is disappointed when the truth is learned, but they become reconciled. A pretty, engaging series of pictures.

SOCIETY AT SIMPSON CENTER (Eclair), March 29.—This, on same reel with above, shows a number of village characters in animated drawings. Some of them are amusing and others simply grotesque.

TOM MOORE GIVES BANQUET TO FAMOUS PLAYERS.

Tom Moore, the well-known Washington exhibitor, one night last week tendered a banquet on the stage of the Orpheum Theater in Washington to one of the Famous Players' companies which had gone to the capitol to secure the exact atmosphere of Channing Pollock's famous romance of the redemption office of the United States Treasury, now being produced by the Famous Players under the direction of Francis Powers.

Jane Grey, one of the most prominent younger stars of the American stage, plays the title role, and was among the guests at Mr. Moore's dinner. Tom Moore has always been an enthusiastic booster of Famous Players' product, and when he learned the company was in Washington, he at once looked them up, planned and prepared his banquet, and lassoed the company, all of whom are still talking about the event.

Banquet at the Orpheum Theater, Washington, D. C., given by Tom Moore to Famous Players Company.

1, Tom Moore; 2, Mrs. Tom Moore; 3, Francis Powers; 4, Mrs. F. Powers; 5, Jane Grey; 7, Jane Fearnley; 8, Hal Clarendon.

President Wilson to Open Exposition.

Country's Chief Executive Shows Genuine Interest in Combined Convention and Exposition of Motion Picture Art—Prominent Names in Program of Speakers for the Week.

PRESIDENT WILSON from the White House is to formally open the Second International Exposition of the Moving Picture Art at Grand Central Palace, New York City, Monday, June 8th. This arrangement, made a few days ago, which came from a visit to the national capital by Adolph Weiss and Grant W. Anson, secretary and treasurer, respectively, of the Exposition Committee, has resulted in the changing of the opening hour of the exposition from 10 A. M., as originally announced, to 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

A direct telegraphic connection between the exposition floor in Grand Central Palace and President Wilson's office in Washington is to be established. Promptly at 2 o'clock the President will press a button which will unfurl a number of large American flags in the Palace, signaling that the exposition has been formally opened by the nation's chief executive, as an indication of his interest in the moving picture industry and his hope for the success of the big week's affair in New York.

Although President Wilson has not been acquainted with the details of the opening and knows merely that his pressing the button will start things moving, the chief executive's interest will turn the opening into a healthy Wilson boom. The flags which are to be unfurled will disclose a picture of the President, and the Catholic Protectory Band, especially engaged for the occasion, will play the national anthem.

That the President has consented to start the ball a-rolling is particularly gratifying to the men who have been promoting the exposition and should be equally gratifying to moving picture people in general. It was only with great difficulty, indeed, that Messrs. Weiss and Anson secured an audience with the President, whose time is so completely taken up at present with issues of grave national and international importance. The following letter officially confirming the arrangements made in Washington was received by the exposition committee:

The White House, Washington, June 2, 1914.

MY DEAR MR. WEISS:

Confirming my message to you of to-day, the President will be glad to press a button at the White House at 2:00 o'clock, Monday afternoon, June 8th, to open the Second International Exposition of the Motion Picture Art and Annual Trade Convention, to be held at the Grand Central Palace, New York City. Please see that the necessary arrangements are made with the telegraph company.

Sincerely yours,
J. P. TUMULTY,
Secretary to the President.

Mr. Adolph Weiss,
Secretary, Exposition Committee,
Grand Central Palace,
New York, N. Y.

When this issue of The Moving Picture World went to press there was great promise that Vice-President Marshall, who was scheduled to spend a few hours in New York City on Monday evening, June 8th, would address those in attendance at the exposition and convention.

The exposition and convention will be attended by visitors from Canada and twenty-three states of the Union. The strong stand against censorship taken by this convention as evidenced by its special anti-censorship booth has decided hundreds upon hundreds of delegates and exhibitors to come to New York. They are all glad of the opportunity of registering their protest against censorship and of participating in a free and open convention.

Already assured are delegations from the Dominion of Canada and from the following states: California, Colorado, Connecticut, the District of Columbia, Delaware, Florida, Illinois, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, New Mexico, New Hampshire, Oklahoma, South Dakota, North Carolina, New Jersey and New York.

The work of fitting up the exhibits on the exposition floor at the Palace was begun bright and early Thursday morning, June 4th. The experienced workmen who are in the habit of installing exhibits at the Palace were confident that everything would be in first-class shape for the opening, Monday afternoon, despite the fact that the displays already give every indication of being among the most pretentious which have ever been made in the big home of trade shows.

With the beginning of the work of construction at the Palace, the various committees handling the arrangements for the exposition and convention were also busy gathering up the loose ends of things. The names of the men prominent in the moving picture industry who have been secured to address the convention were announced. Following the formal opening, Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, President Wilson officiating in Washington, an address of welcome is to be delivered by either Martin Glynn, Governor of the State of New York, or Borough President Marks, of Manhattan. Then David Belasco, wizard producer and stage director, who has recently shied his castor into the moving picture ring, and Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players Film Company, are to make short addresses. Dr. Albert Shiels, an official connected with the New York City Department of Education, has been secured to make the address on "The School and the Motion Picture Theater," and the Rev. Dr. William Carter of this city is to speak on "The Church and the Motion Picture Theater," both these addresses being scheduled for the opening session of the convention, Monday afternoon. Because of the wide interest in these subjects, it has been decided to admit the general public—that is, as many of them as are in attendance at the exposition that afternoon—to the convention hall. Invitations to more than 1,000 men and women representative of the clergy and societies interested in educational and social welfare work have been sent out.

A complete program for the convention sessions was printed in the issue of The World dated June 6th, but the names of the principal speakers at the various sessions were omitted for the reason that they were unavailable at that time. The Tuesday morning address on "Censorship" is to be made by Frederick P. Howe, of the People's Institute and the National Board of Censorship. Tuesday afternoon, J. Stuart Blackton, of the American Vitagraph Company, is to address the convention on "The Manufacturer and the Exhibitor" and William E. Saunders, of the Universal Company, on "The Exchange and the Exhibitor." At the Wednesday morning session, W. Stephen Bush, of The Moving Picture World, is to make one of the principal addresses, using the topic, "The Press and Motion Pictures." and Joe Brandt, of the Universal Company, the other, on "The Poster Question in All Its Phases." "Technical Questions Pertaining to the Operation of a Moving Picture Theater" is the topic for discussion Thursday morning, furnishing one of the most interesting and helpful subjects of the week. F. H. Richardson, The Moving Picture World's expert, is to talk on "Projection" in this connection; Nicholas Power, of the widely known Nicholas Power Company, is to discuss "Projecting Machines," and F. J. Rembusch, inventor of the "Mirror Screen," is to talk on "Screens." Thursday afternoon Jacob W. Binder is to lead the discussion on "The Best Method of Combining All Exhibitors of the Country Into One National Organization and the Financing of the Same."

This will probably prove one of the most important topics of the convention. It is proposed to sound the exhibitors and representatives of other branches of the industry as to the possibility of one great coöperative union of all the sections and interests of the motion picture industry. It is understood that there is a strong sentiment favoring such a film parliament as it exists in France and in England, where the film interests are held in high esteem in the political and the literary world. A tentative program has been developed and will be submitted for discussion.

Friday morning's address on "Advertising the Motion Picture Theater" is to be made by W. A. Johnson, of the Moving Picture News.

Committees on Grievances and Resolutions are to be appointed at the Monday afternoon session of the convention, and in this connection it is announced that stenographers will be in attendance constantly in the convention hall and around the exposition to put in typewritten form the statement of any grievance, or any resolution, which any member of the convention may wish to have considered by the convention. These grievances and resolutions, in their typewritten form, are to be turned over to the proper committees, and only such grievances and resolutions as are reported back to the convention by these committees will be taken up for open discussion and action. The adoption of this established legislative plan has been decided upon in order that the same ground will not be gone over by the convention time after time. The services of the stenographers will be free to members of the convention.

Some slight changes have been made in the program of entertainment provided for visitors to the convention. The moonlight excursion on the Hudson is to take place Wednesday evening, instead of Thursday evening, as announced in The World's issue of June 6th. The steamer Adirondack has been chartered, and entertainment aboard it will be in the form of dancing and cabaret. The night at William Morris' Jardin de Danse is scheduled for Thursday, June 11th. Harry Reichenbach, of the Jesse L.

Lasky offices, has agreed to stage manage this special entertainment event, and talent for the show will be supplied by Mr. Lasky from his numerous vaudeville acts.

Tuesday evening, June 9th, visitors to the convention are to spend at Coney Island, making the ride from the Grand Central Palace in sightseeing automobiles, leaving at 4:30 P. M. In conjunction with the clambake at the Brighton Beach Hotel, there will be dancing, and the proprietor of the Brighton Beach is going to provide a handsome trophy for the best pair of dancers in the big party.

The banquet at the Hotel Biltmore, Friday evening, June 12th, is being arranged by the various manufacturers and tradesmen, and many of the leading photoplayers are to entertain with original specialties. The Jesse L. Lasky Company will contribute generously to this program also, because of Mr. Lasky's extensive vaudeville interests. The merrymaking at the Biltmore is to start promptly at 7 P. M.

Quite a little additional booth space at the exposition has been sold during the past few days, and there is every assurance now that the show will open Monday, June 6th, with every inch of available space in the hands of some firm connected with the moving picture industry with something interesting to exhibit. Important additions to the list of booth-holders printed in last week's issue of The World are the Mutual and the Universal film corporations. The Mutual people have contracted for Booth Nos. 401-02, and are planning some "stunts" for the week which are bound to attract the attention of visitors to the convention. The Universal people are to hold forth at Booth Nos. 113-14, and the heads of the company's various departments are each contributing to an attractive exhibition program. Other additions and corrections to the list of exhibitors as recently printed in The World are as follows: The G. Gennert exhibit of motion picture photographic apparatus will be found in Booth No. 361; the Ambrosio-American and Raw Film Companies will have an interesting display in Booth No. 27; the World Film Corporation's space on the floor has been changed to Booth Nos. 325-26-27-28; the American Photoplayer and Sales Company will demonstrate their musical instruments in Booth Nos. 13-14, and the Rudolph Wurlitzer Company their product in Booth No. 28; the Optograph Manufacturing Company, of Chicago, will show their home projecting machine in Booth No. 301; a rearrangement of booth spaces has put the George Kleine Company in No. 403 and the Kalem Company in Booth Nos. 404-05; the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company's booths are Nos. 370-71-72, the Box Office Attractions Company booth is No. 347, and the Greater New York Film Rental Company's is No. 348 (these booth numbers were incorrectly given in The World last week); the Shubert Feature Film Company has Booth Nos. 317-18; the Solax Film Company has Booth No. 1; the National Cash Register Company will exhibit a combination ticket selling and cash register device which they are just placing on the market in Booth Nos. 368-69; the Enterprise Optical Company's exhibit will be found in Booth No. 353; the Efficiency Advertising Company will occupy Booth No. 11.

Many of the big film-producing companies are preparing their own program of events for convention week, with the idea of making the booths they occupy particularly attractive to visitors. The Lasky Company, for instance, announce the following: Monday Evening—Reception by David Belasco, Jesse L. Lasky, and several of the Lasky photoplay stars and distribution of 5,000 souvenir copies of the official convention song, entitled, "My Virginian," especially written for the occasion by Charles K. Harris. Tuesday Evening—Reception by Henry B. Warner and Rita Stanwood, of the Lasky Stars, and distribution of 5,000 autographed photographs of David Belasco. Wednesday Evening—Reception by members of the many Lasky vaudeville acts, including scores of beautiful women in costume, as a courtesy to Mr. Lasky. Thursday Afternoon—Showing of "The Only Son," big Lasky picture, in one of the exposition model theaters. Thursday Evening—Big reception by all of the Lasky stars then in New York City.

BUSHMAN TO PLAY HERO IN NEW YORK.

Vernon R. Day, the energetic representative of the Essanay Film Mfg. Company of Chicago, arrived in New York from the Windy City, Monday, June 1st, for the purpose of arranging details necessary to the making of the big picture. Mr. Bushman is leading man for the Essanay Company, and through pride in the success which their star player has achieved in winning the contest the Essanay people are doing everything in their power to make the "One Wonderful Night" picture the last word in photoplay artistry.

The studio scenes of the picture are to be made in Chicago, but, in order that absolute realism might mark the production, it was decided to make all the exteriors in New York City, where the scenes of the story are laid, winding in and around fashionable Fifth Avenue, the Plaza Hotel and other New York "institutions." It was for the purpose of securing permits to make these exteriors and looking after other details of arrangement for the taking of the scenes that Mr. Day came on to New York some days ago.

Mr. Bushman, who is to play the lead in the four-reeler, left Chicago Saturday, June 6th, accompanied by the following well-known Essanay players, most of whom will support him in "One Wonderful Night": Beverly Bayne, Lillian Drew, Bryant Washburn, E. H. Calvert, Harry Mainhall, Thomas Commerford, Rapley Holmes, Charles Hitchcock, John Cossar, Helen Dunbar, Frank Dayton, Robert Bolder, Ruth Hennessy, M. C. Von Betz, Leo White and Tommy Harper.

Convention week has been chosen as the time for the taking of the big picture, in order that the Essanay Company may kill two birds with one stone, securing the required New York scenes and a big and interesting representation at the Grand Central Palace Exposition on the same trip east.

IOWA EXHIBITORS MEET.

An interesting meeting of the Iowa Exhibitors' League was held at Des Moines, Iowa, on May 28 and 29. There was a fair attendance and much enthusiasm. The members present placed themselves and the Iowa Branch of the Motion Picture League of America squarely on record as opposed to all sorts of official censorship. Owing to the resignation of President C. F. Wierck an election was held to fill the vacancies. A. J. Diebold was elected president, T. A. Bryan, first vice-president, and A. Frankle, second vice-president. Delegates to the National Convention at Dayton were elected as follows: W. C. Eddy, Wilbur Ingledue, A. Frankle, A. Blank, James Martin and A. J. Diebold. Alternates, T. A. Bryan, J. L. Tower, W. McIntosh, J. L. Tierney, J. S. Shortley, C. H. Dewey. Des Moines was selected for the meeting to be held in the fall.

During the convention the exhibitors of DesMoines were organized in Local No. 3 of the Iowa Branch with Charles Namur, president; H. Blank, first vice-president; J. Hild, second vice-president; R. F. Crawford, secretary, and A. Frankle, treasurer.

President M. A. Neff, of the National League, was present and installed the officers of both state and local organizations.

MASSACHUSETTS EXHIBITORS GETTING IN LINE.

The result of the team contest for new members for the Exhibitors' Association of Massachusetts was announced at a banquet held at the Georgian, Boston, recently. The count showed fifty applications, the largest number having been secured by the team composed of Messrs. Sproule, Haase, Horstman, Campbell, Spry, Murphy, Grant, Lurie, Marson and Clark. The evening's pleasure was broken into by a report that the Boston Operators' Union had ordered a number of operators out of some of the theaters, and the exhibitors had to leave the banquet to attend to business. The list of members received contained these names: Fernander Brothers, H. E. Jones, G. A. Giles, T. A. McAvoy, E. W. Goodrich, N. H. Gordan, A. E. Lord, J. P. Butler, F. D. Rea, W. A. Graves, A. Mandelberg, L. B Zimmerman, J. B. Thomas, W. V. Hart, P. H. Dexter, J. A. Hudson, A. N. Stebbins, J. Clements, S. Bernfield, D. Cowan, C. Fraser, G. B. Newhall, C. H. Newhall, C. A. Bent, E. J. Farrell, F. J. McAloon, E. N. Cook, S. Somner, A. F. Washburn, T. Rassies, S. Kollins. F. L. Collier, M. Sandler, Lewis Levin, H. Hirsh, W. L. Bigelow, W. H. Bradley, R. W. Crooker, E. R. Daniels, H. Lynch, J. W. Hobbs, A. A. Ashley, Hugh O'Neill, J. J. Greene, S. Bisbee, M. L. Feingold and F. W. Cawley.

NEW YORK STATE CONVENTION JUNE 6.

The annual convention of the Motion Picture Association of New York State was scheduled for the Hotel Imperial, New York City, Saturday, June 6th, beginning at 10:30 o'clock. This organization is the New York State Branch of the International Motion Picture Association, whose open convention is being held this year in conjunction with the Second International Exposition of the Moving Picture Art at Grand Central Palace, New York City, beginning Monday, June 8th.

In advance of the meeting of the New York State exhibitors, it was said by those who have always taken an active part in the affairs of the organization that, while nothing of unusual consequence had been announced as slated for consideration, the meeting on June 6th might reasonably be expected to be an interesting one. There will be the regular election of officers for the ensuing year. Samuel H. Trigger, of New York City, seemed reasonably certain of re-election, but among the remaining four offices, it was said that there were two on which fights were expected. B. E. Cornell, Syracuse, N. Y., first vice-president; L. C. Smith, Schenectady, N. Y., second vice-president; William Douque, Herkimer, N. Y., secretary, and John C. Davis, Saugerties, N. Y., treasurer, have been President Trigger's official associates during the year which is just closing.

CHICAGO LETTER

BY JAS. S. McQUADE

The Demand for Educational Pictures Is Growing.

THE Woman's Civic League of the Twenty-fifth Ward, this city, gave a sample of what the members considered a model picture program for minors at the Rogers Park Casino, on Wednesday afternoon, May 27th. The exhibition was given to an audience which had been invited for the occasion, and the first special children's matinees, with similar programs, were given Saturday, May 30th, in the Bryn Mawr, the Sheridan Road, and in the house already mentioned. It has been planned to give a matinee of this character every Saturday throughout the summer in these houses, which are all located in the Twenty-fifth Ward. The members of the league are optimistic of results and are brimful of hope that their initiative will lead to similar efforts in other wards throughout the city.

The programs will be confined to educational pictures exclusively, as the members believe that sufficient entertainment for the children can be obtained from them. This I very much doubt, knowing something about boys and what they require for diversion. There must be a compromise on this point, as both boys and girls like a good, clean melodrama or comedy as well as adults. They are full of fun and mirth and must have something that will afford an outlet for their pent-up high spirits and restless activity.

The league had hoped for coöperation from the board of education, in permitting school teachers to explain the pictures and direct the children to books treating of the subjects pictured. This assistance was denied by the board on the ground that certain theaters would be so favored, while others would be discriminated against. While I believe the board was right in their stand, I am of the opinion that their decision was really best for the members of the league in the long run, for a wholly different reason.

The very sight of a teacher in a place of amusement, imparting knowledge of whatever kind, immediately transforms that place into a school, in the reasoning of a child. Let the teachers attend by all means and view the pictures, so that they may be able to refer to them during class hours some time later. It will be found that the children will eagerly vie with one another in trying to recall accurately what they saw in the pictures. Such exercises would serve to lighten the burden of school hours for children and would be productive of lasting knowledge. Moreover, in the course of time, the moving picture will assuredly be used in the class-room, and this movement of the Woman's Civic League of the Twenty-fifth Ward may be one of the honored stepping stones towards "a consummation devoutly to be wished."

Apropos of the difficulties to be encountered with a straight picture program for children, it may be mentioned that at the Wednesday exhibition, previously referred to in this article, two small boys drifted into the Rogers Park Casino. "Say, did you get in free? I did," said one of the boys. This boy, when questioned, admitted that he liked pictures, but expressed a strong preference for those of the cowboy and Indian brands. One of the films run off showed bird life, and lacked the necessary subtitles in spots. When a sea gull preened itself on the rocks, he said, "Say, that's a eagle, isn't it?" After he had watched the dining habits of caterpillars and the metamorphosis of a butterfly with close attention, his opinion in regard to films was again asked. "Do you think you'd like to come every Saturday to see pictures like this?"

"Free, do you mean?" he answered with another question. "Well, not so often, this kind," he finally concluded.

Chicago and Milwaukee Delegations Off for New York.

The Chicago and Milwaukee contingents of the International Motion Picture Association will leave Friday, June 5th, at 5:30 P. M., from the Union Station, via the Pennsylvania line, for the New York Exposition and Convention. It is expected that thirty people will go from Chicago, and fourteen from Milwaukee. Two special cars have been provided, and the party will arrive in Washington at 4:40 P. M., Saturday, where they will remain until Saturday evening or Sunday, when they will proceed to New York City.

Following is the list of the delegation from Chicago at the time of writing, but it is expected that several others will make up their minds to go before Friday: William J. Sweeney, Robert R. Levy, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Whelan, Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Choynski, Max Hyman, Harry Hyman, Sam Katz, Louis Zahler, C. D. Lancaster, Abe Balaban, George Henry, George Moore (manager of the Orpheum), Paul Sittner and Miss Sittner, Joseph Hirsch, V. R. Ronk (representing the Bartola Co.), Ralph Proctor, Ben W. Bedell (representing the Edison Co.), Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hartman and Mr. and Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Mock, of Motography.

Film Companies Lose Injunction Suits.

Hearing of the injunction suits of the Mutual Film Corporation, the H. & H. Film Service and the World's Special Feature Film Company to restrain the city from censoring their pictures began Friday morning, May 29th, in the United States Court before Federal Judge Seaman. The suits were filed several months ago, but on account of a crowded docket they could not be brought up earlier.

Judge Seaman denied the petition on Monday, June 1st, and in denying it stated that he followed the law as laid down by former court decisions in the United States District Courts, but he made it plain that this would not interfere with his judgment in the Court of Appeals.

Major Funkhouser, in charge of the Chicago Censor Board, and an array of legal talent, were present during the arguments. Major Funkhouser smiled when Attorney H. J. Toner said:

"Shall the right of censorship, which has been borrowed from Russia, be engrafted into the laws of this country? Are we to be governed by the divine law as expressed in the Ten Commandments or must our morals be censored or regulated by some pompous political accident, temporarily clothed with the brass buttons of police authority? Is the red blood of Chicago to be diluted by the ice water of Evanston?"

The case will be taken to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, of which bench Judge Seaman is a member.

Chicago Film Brevities.

C. Lang Cobb, Jr., and Mrs. Agnes Egan Cobb paid a pleasant visit at The World office last week. They were on a flying trip to the Iowa state convention in Des Moines, which was held on May 28th and 29th. Mr. Cobb was on a tour of inspection of his new offices for the Ramo Film, and Mrs. Cobb is visiting feature film buyers for Leading Players and Features Ideal. Mrs. Cobb stated that the Leading Players Film Corporation will release American pictures about the first of July.

* * *

In order to cure his wife of the moving picture habit, Joe Skrodna, of this city, cut her shoes to pieces. This was the only pair she had and she took the matter into the police court. "Why did you cut up your wife's shoes?" demanded the Judge. "Because, your honor, she's always going to nickel shows, and I could think of nothing else to keep her home," answered Joe. "Twenty-five dollars and costs!" thundered the Judge.

* * *

The names of the Bell Feature Film Corporation of Chicago and the Advance Motion Picture Company, Chicago, represented respectively by Mr. and Mrs. William H. Bell and party and George L. Cox and party, at the recent exhibitors' ball in the Coliseum, were crowded out in my report of that event, owing to lack of space. I had the pleasure of meeting the parties in the boxes reserved by the companies mentioned.

* * *

In the Circuit Court last week, Judge McGoorty refused to dissolve the injunction issued several days ago against the Clingen Curtain System, restraining that concern from producing the photoplay, "Magda, the Modern Madame X." The injunction had been granted on petition of Henry W. Savage, who declared that the production of the film would be an infringement on his rights as the owner of the rights of production of Alexander Bisson's play, "Madame X," in the United States and Canada. Attorneys for the Clingen concern sought to dissolve the injunction on the ground that the film is entirely different from the play of a similar name. Attorney Adolph Marks, representing Mr. Savage, told the court his client had paid M. Bisson $2,000 for the motion picture rights of "Madame X."

* * *

"The Christian," a Vitagraph-Leibler production, was given a private presentation in this city, at the Majestic Theater, on May 29th, before a large, invited audience of exhibitors, exchange men and the press. Much applause greeted the exhibition, and the general attitude throughout showed deep interest and appreciation. The W. H. Bell Feature Film Corporation, at 1259 Monadnock Building, Chicago, owns the Illinois state rights. The exhibition was supervised by W. H. Bell, president of the company.

* * *

D. C. McClelland, of Pekin, Ill., made a pleasant call last week. He informed me that he sold his Oakland Theater in Decatur, Ill., recently, and that he still owns the Idle Hour and the Dreamland in Pekin. Mr. McClelland uses mixed programs of Licensed and Universal makes, offering three reels for five cents. Pekin has four picture houses and all are doing good business. Dee Robinson, of Peoria, opened his beautiful new picture theater, the Apollo, on April 27th, with George Kleine's "Antony and Cleopatra." This subject showed to fine business during its run.

* * *

In July, the Burton Holmes travelogues, under the title "travelettes" will be introduced to the better class of moving picture theaters. The travelette occupies fifty minutes instead of two hours. Mr. Holmes' interesting trips will be presented on the screen and a lecturer will deliver the traveler's original lecture at every performance. Mr. Holmes has nearly forty lectures to release for this purpose. The first five include two on South America, Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires; two on the Philippines, "The New Manila" and "Hiking Through Luzon," and one on India. By an arrangement with Jones, Linick & Schaefer, the first five of this series of lectures will be presented early in July at the Studebaker Theater. Later they will be offered at other theaters not yet announced.

* * *

Dr. Brandes, the noted Danish scholar and critic, had something to say that was derogatory to moving pictures during his visit in Chicago. "What do I think of censorship? Well, censor the moving pictures, of course, because they appeal most to children. These, these things they have for children—they are stupid. They should be censored. To ride in a cab, have it fall apart, run away, have someone running after you—stupid!" Poor Dr. Brandes! Has he been asleep for five years or more?

* * *

Harry H. Burford and W. D. Burford, members of the corporation controlling the Bijou and Lyric Theaters of La Crosse, Wis., and the Aurora, Aurora, Ill., paid us a visit last week. H. H. Burford stated that his company had just purchased the Aurora Theater, which seats 500 people, and that the house had been thoroughly remodeled. It was opened Friday, May 29th. Universal programs are used. Wednesday, Thursday and Sunday will be feature days, on which days ten cents will be charged. For the remaining days of the week five cents will be charged. D. S. Greig, of La Crosse, has been appointed manager of the Aurora. H. H. Burford is president of the Wisconsin Branch of the M. P. E. L. of America. He informed me that a large number of members of the Wisconsin Branch will attend the Dayton convention of the M. P. E. L. of America, July 7th to 12th. Mr. Burford also informed me that J. M. Wesley, national state organizer, had been in Minnesota for over two weeks, organizing that state. It is understood that the convention will be held in Minneapolis, June 5th and 6th.

* * *

The police of Berlin censor moving pictures along lines similar to those followed by the Chicago moving picture censorship board, according to a letter received by Mayor Harrison from the German city recently. The writer, Dr. Hellwig, court practitioner and assistant in the legal faculty of the University of Berlin, requests the Mayor to furnish him with data relative to the Chicago censorship, as he is about to publish a book on the subject of laws governing the exhibition of moving pictures.

* * *

Harry Lauder, in talking and singing pictures, made a big hit in Chicago recently. The perfect synchronism delighted everyone who saw the pictures.

INDUSTRIAL MOVING PICTURE COMPANY'S NEW PLANT.

The Industrial Moving Picture Co., of Chicago, has recently completed its new factory for the manufacturing of commercial moving pictures.

The plant, which is claimed to be the largest of its kind in the world, is located at 223-233 W. Erie St., and occupies over 7,000 square feet of floor space. The plant is absolutely fire-proof, and the walls and partitions are of steel and cement plaster. The ceilings are protected by an automatic sprinkling system, and twenty-four Pyrene fire extinguishers are in convenient locations for emergencies. The air is sterilized and changed every ten minutes by an effective ventilating system. The proper temperature and humidity, which is so very important in a film manufacturing plant, are governed by hygrometers.

The machinery is of the very latest construction. The perforating room is equipped with Bell & Howell machinery, and the printing room has twelve modern printing machines in operation. The developing room is very large, and the floor is of cement with a wooden flooring of cypress. Corcoran developing tanks are used. The washroom is supplied with filtered and distilled water, piped in a continuous flowing system from a big battery of filters, which also serves the developing room. The drying room has a capacity of 100,000 feet of film, and the drying process is hastened by a special warm air appliance.

The plant has a miniature theater, with a thirty-five foot throw, and is equipped with a fire-proof booth, and a Simplex projecting machine.

The Industrial Moving Picture Co. was started four years ago by Carl Laemmle, R. H. Cochrane, and Waterson R. Rothacker. Six months ago Mr. Laemmle, because of the fact that his duties as president of the Universal Film Mfg. Co. required his entire attention, disposed of his stock to Mr. Rothacker, who is now the president of the Industrial Moving Picture Co.

"The World, the Flesh and the Devil"

James McEnnery Syndicate.—Six Reels.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

THIS multiple reel compels me to make an important alteration in my little register of records. Until I saw "The World, etc.," the record for rancid and stupid melodrama had been held by a production I had witnessed just about a year ago in a town in Southern Italy. The Italian concoction was a nightmare to be sure, but all its horrors pale before the lurid glow of this British rival. The killings were more numerous in the Italian product, but in the elaboration of murderous and criminal detail the palm must go to this latest atrocity. Strangulation of a white haired old lady performed in full view of the audience is one of the pleasant and cheerful incidents in "The World, etc." There are other crimes galore such as plain homicide and suicide and abduction and indeed almost every kind of felony. Nor can it be said that this pictorialized carnival of crime has any redeeming features. As a "drama" it is a distressing joke. The acting reminds one of the early days when the producer would be satisfied to take potluck on the Rialto. The photography is below par and the double exposure work exceptionally bad. The attempts to produce lightning during the storm when the old nurse was being strangled were painful. The lightning looked more like a case of pronounced static.

The devil appearing in visions was evidently from the comic section of the Inferno. He was orthodox enough, disappearing as promptly as the photography allowed whenever the cross was shown. On the whole I would say he was not only a comic devil, but likewise a poor devil. The villain certainly was a weak-willed chap otherwise such a devil could never have tempted him. The ordinary man would have given this fiend a dime or invited him to have a drink. The villain was of the most approved and ancient gallery kind, a real Blaneyized "villain" for whom the dwellers in the gallery might have waited at the stage door to administer personal chastisement. As a gloater he has, I think, few equals and no superiors. Of course there were big doings at the Old Mill at midnight, though the photography was daylight. I was sorry to see a nice young woman, who up to that time had committed no crime, shoot one of the numerous subvillains at the old mill. The escape on the wheel seemed a bit clumsy and wholly unnecessary because the lovers might just as well have used the ordinary means of egress.

Why is this performance called "The World, The Flesh and the Devil?" I cannot tell. You might open the dictionary at random and be reasonably sure of a title just as suitable. We are informed that "this is the author's first play, but is his only contribution to the school of melodrama." This is not exactly clear, but I am optimist enough to assume it means he will never do it again. If my interpretation is right, something might be forgiven to a first offence.

FILM LOST OR STOLEN.

Editor Motion Picture World.

Dear Sir:—On May 22nd a five-reel Famous Players' production, entitled "The Port of Missing Men," was lost or stolen, while in transit from the Plaza Theater of this city to our office.

Will you be knid enough to publish this item in your journal, with the request that if any one should hear of this picture being offered by other than the regular exchanges handling the Famous Players' output, kindly wire us at our expense. Thanking you in advance, we remain

Yours very truly,

FAMOUS PLAYERS' FILM SERVICE, INC.,

Chicago, Ill., May 27, 1914. James Steele.

KLEINE'S "OTHELLO" THROUGH GENERAL FILM CO.

"Othello," the Kleine multiple made at Venice, Italy, last winter by the Photo Drama Company, will be released through the General Film Company early in July. This beautiful subject follows the Shakespeare version faithfully. The costuming, settings and photography are almost without rival, even by others of the big Kleine multiples.

Bringing in the Law

Colorado Motion Picture Company's First Offering a Three-Reel Melodrama—Staged Naturally and Full of "The Good, Old Spirit."

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

WHO hasn't found pleasure and who doesn't still find it in western melodrama, when it is the real article, the good, old thrilling, romantic tale of the eastern hero (called a tenderfoot, but really the noblest cowboy of them all) and of the beautiful cowgirl, daughter of the wealthy rancher? In these stories there is usually, if not always, a very terrible bad man whose gang has a rendezvous somewhere up in the hills, from which he and his roughs come down to the town to make trouble. The struggle is often between this outlaw and the new youth, with the girl as the stake. When this sort of story is filmed in a cheap and slipshod way, it is a thing to despise and wish anywhere but on the screen before us. But when it is well done, as it is in this case, it is entertaining to all and wholly popular with the majority.

Scene from "Bringing in the Law" (Colorado M. P. Co.)

This picture, notwithstanding its name has, among all other good western melodramas, no special title to distinction. There is absolutely no political or sociological interest in it that could in any way connect it with present doings in Colorado, nor, except in a rough way, with political history of any time on the frontier. It is a story in which the heroine is captured by the villain and held for ransom. The bad man demands that the girl's father give up to him a guest whom he, the villain, hates and wants to destroy. The rancher is an American gentleman, his guest is wounded and is sheltered by all the laws of hospitality. The picture makes the youth willing to go in exchange for the girl; but he is unable to. The denouement shows how the renegade and his whole gang are outwitted by the girl and her friends, with the help of one of the vile band who turns against his leader or owner. The capture of the villain just as he is about to abduct the girl for the second time is exciting.

Scene from "Bringing in the Law" (Colorado M. P. Co.)

It is a wholly commercial offering, but a successful one. It will please and be liked in a measure by both critical and uncritical. But it is not a big story. All the credit due to the scenario writer lies in the clear fact that he knew what would be likely to please the many. His aim was low and he has used no true imagination; there is nothing original or authoritative in his work. William MacLeod Raine is the author. But there is art in the staging of the story. The producer has done pretty well and his players have carried their roles naturally, so that we let the story convince us the while we watch it developed on the screen. In photography it is fair. Will E. Ellis plays the hero's role opposite to Josephine West, the heroine. Arthur Lewis plays the rancher, father of the girl, and the villain is played by Ted Hardcastle.

"A Born Warrior"

Strong Story of Life of Napoleon to be Released as a Warner Feature, is a Master Product by Ambrosio.

Reviewed by Randall M. White.

THE new Ambrosio Napoleon feature entitled "A Born Warrior" is to be released through the Warner's Features Monday, June 22. Presented in six reels, the photoplay is a comprehensive review of the "human interests" events in the life of Napoleon, than whom there is no more eminent, if not more popular, character in the world's history. Interest in Napoleon, which has always existed, has been made even greater in this country within the past few months by the great volume of matter concerning the French conqueror's activities which has been printed in daily and Sunday newspapers throughout the country.

With the time ripe, therefore for another big Napoleon feature, success for the house of Warner seems certain for the reason that "A Born Warrior" is a splendid piece of work, photographically, technically, and considered as an example of the artistic condensation of a tremendous amount of subject matter into its most compact form.

Scene from "A Born Warrior" (Warner features).

To facilitate its handling as a commercial proposition, the big feature has been divided into two parts of three reels each. The principal title, has most strict application to the first three reels and for the other three reels "Exiled" has been chosen as a title.

The life story of Napoleon is a man's story, full of action and genuine sensation. "A Born Warrior" therefore has its strongest appeal in the realism with which the battle scenes, from the earliest brushes in France through the disastrous campaign before Moscow and down to fateful Waterloo, have been put on. It is quite evident that no money has been spared in making the production—but, what is more important, it is equally apparent that every detail of each scene has been worked out with that studious care which an artist is wont to use in creating his masterpiece.

Of the softer and gentler touches which will make "A Born Warrior" strong in its appeal to the women, there are many and these touches, deftly applied, are the things which make the presentation a "story" as well as a historical reproduction. The love story of Napoleon and Josephine is beautifully told, built up in interest by the introduction of the historically correct incidents of Eugenie's girlish infatuation for the soldier boy whom she practically made a general and the marriage of state between Marie Louise and Napoleon. The screen story of the divorce of Josephine by her consort is told with exceptional power with a great play of light and shade as represented by natural comedy and equally natural tragedy.

The closing scenes of the picture showing the "warrior born" in the hands of the allies of Europe, shorn of his power but still possessed of the love of those who had fought under his banners and the respect of his most determined opponents, are impressive and will call for favorable popular response.

Sig. Carlo handles the difficult role of Napoleon and does it well. The characterization is by no means an easy one for the reason that the period of the picture covers many years and for the more important reason that the Napoleon of popular impression was not the Napoleon of history. It is quite apparent that Sig. Carlo in "A Born Warrior," has given what he considers a faithful and historically accurate characterization without regard for the views of the public of today for whom the picture has been made. In the first half of the picture, his Napoleon is not convincing for the reason that the short, thin, studious, almost boyish figure is not suggestive of the power which the "Little Corporal" was even then wielding and was to wield later—however, in those days, Napoleon was short, thin, and studious in appearance. In the latter half of the picture, as Napoleon the virulent, aggressive conqueror, Sig. Carlo is all that could be desired—and this for the reason that he has found it possible to play the character as people would like it played, and yet without the prostitution of his art.

Sig. Antonio appears as the Emperor of Austria, father of Marie Louise whose marriage to Napoleon was arranged to heal the breach in Europe and who was largely instrumental in finally sending his son-in-law into exile at St. Helena. The Josephine of the cast is perhaps the most able of the women.

Lambs Back From Gambol

Travel as Far as St. Louis on a Trip Record Breaking in Its Results—$80,000 for Clubhouse.

THE Lambs have returned to the fold from their all-star gambol with a record which sets a pace for the season. Approximately they played to gross receipts of $115,000, with an expense of $40,000 leaving a net profit of about $80,000 to swell the fund for the enlarged clubhouse in Forty-fourth street. The stars of this famous club were carried from New York to St. Louis on a special train and then back by way of Chicago and Boston to New York. The itinerary began at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York for two performances. Then the Lambs went to the Academy at Philadelphia, the Court Square Theater, Wheeling, W. Va.; Nixon Theater, Pittsburg; Enlish's Opera House, Indianapolis; Music Hall, Cincinnati; Olympic Theater, St. Louis; The Auditorium, Chicago; Star Theater, Buffalo; Lyceum Theater, Rochester; Worcester Theater, Worcester, Mass.; Boston Theater, and back to the New York Hippodrome for the farewell performance last Sunday night.

Scene from Lambs' All-Star Gambol:
Characters from left to right: Effingham Pinto as Passion, William Elliott as Youth, William Deming as Intoxication, and Frederick Perry as Experience.

As the surest test of the fine impression made by the performance it may be mentioned that upon their return to New York the Lambs were greeted by an audience which packed the mammoth Hippodrome to the walls, and many were turned away.

The all-star gambol is regarded as the best show the Lambs have ever given in public. It started with a great minstrel first part with the Lambs of prominence ranged behind the end men, consisting of over twenty of the famous funmakers of this organization. Only the end men wore the conventional burnt cork, the others being dressed appropriately as American sailors; the scene being the forward deck of a superdreadnought of the American Navy. In this the concerted strength of the show was massed with telling effect. Then came the specialties of the bill including Burton Holmes and a glimpse of some famous Lambs in screen stunts; George V. Hobart's wonderful modern morality satire of contemporary life called "Experience;" "The Rainbow Cocktail," an illuminative achievement of variety and color; "The Book of Life" a fascinating study of the seven ages of man depicted in dances with all-star Lambs in the leading characters of these several achievements; a quartet of the highest salaried cartoonists in the world, including Winsor McCay, George MacManus, Hy. Mayer and R. F. Outcault. Between these moving features were specialties by famous stars of the Lambs, all combining the mammoth bill which has appropriately been termed "The Million Dollar Show."

A great feature of the tour was the moving pictures taken of all the salient points of the Gambol and living presentments of the stars who figured in the getting together of this great bill. Scenes of the great parades were taken wherever the light permitted and some funny incidents of the tour are outlined in the living record of motion pictures. In one place it was so warm the star end men washed up in the alley and the motion picture will show these famous comedians emerging from their coating of burnt cork, and as soap gets in its work, one can catch the familiar features of the end men. Another amusing bit is the "leading ladies" of the show coming out of the stage door in their costumes but showing their sex by smoking big black cigars and in many instances well battered old pipes. Another picture is the reproduction of "The Book of Life" and its seven ages of dancing wonders.

The pictures were taken under the direction of William Courtleigh, Edward Abeles and Burton Holmes. The Lubin Company, of Philadelphia, is developing and printing the 7,500 feet of film made on the trip, and when it is cut to 3,000 feet it will prove to be one of the most valuable collection of theatrical stars ever assembled. Sawyer, Inc., has been appointed sole distributor for the Lambs, through which firm this picture may be obtained.

EDDIE LYONS.

EDDIE LYONS, well and favorably known throughout the United States as a comedy star, is a native of Beardstown, Ill., since the early part of 1886. Lyon's first success on the stage was with the Newsboys' Quartette, in 1901. After a successful tour on the road, Eddie went back to Chicago and joined the Marlowe Stock Company. Later he joined forces with the American Stock Company and was with them until he made his debut in the moving picture world as a member of the Biograph Company.

Following his stay with the Biograph, he joined the Imp Company. In June, 1912, he became a member of the Universal's Nestor Comedy Co. under the direction of Al. Christie. At present Mr. Lyons is one of the principal fun providers in "Sophie of the Films," a series that is creating a rousing success everywhere.

Eddie Lyons

JUDGE HOLT WILL TAKE TESTIMONY IN IMP CASE.

George C. Holt, former judge of the United States District Court, has been designated as special master to take testimony in the infringement action brought against the Independent Motion Picture Company, the Imp Film Company and Carl Laemmle by the Motion Picture Patents Company. Judge Holt is authorized to obtain an accounting from the defendants for the period covered by the alleged infringement of the Edison camera re-issue patents. His work will be held in abeyance pending the appeal of the defendants from the decision of Judge Mayer under which he was appointed. It is not probable that the appeal will be heard by the United States District Court of Appeals before next November at the earliest.

HERBERT LUBIN HEADS CANADIAN CORPORATION,

TO establish a chain of exchanges throughout the Dominion of Canada and the United States is the project of the Allied Features, Inc., incorporated recently under the laws of New York. The duty problem has hitherto prevented any such international business, though geographically it was a natural outcome. The new corporation has evolved a scheme of deliveries which will obviate this difficulty.

Herbert Lubin.

The International Feature Corporation, Ltd., of Montreal and Toronto, has been absorbed by the new corporation, the president and general manager of which will be Herbert Lubin.

Negotiations are now under way for an alliance with a big feature combination whose specialty is the production of widely known plays starring famous actors and actresses. These negotiations are expected to be consummated within ten days.

For the present the new corporation will confine itself to the Dominion of Canada. In addition to the offices in Montreal and Toronto, branches will be immediately established in Winnipeg, Vancouver and in the Maritime Provinces.

The exclusive program forms the bulk of the features already contracted for for Canada. Among the brands whose entire output will be taken are Itala, Great Northern Special, Film Releases of America, Solax, Blaché, and Great Northern Preferred.

Several Wall Street bankers are interested as well as prominent film men, including Harry R. Raver, president of the All Star Feature Corporation and director-general of the Itala Film Co.; Ingvald C. Oes, representative of the Great Northern Film Co.; Herbert Blaché, president of the Exclusive Supply Corporation, Solax and Blache Features, and Joseph R. Miles, general manager of the Exclusive Supply Corporation.

Charles (Feature) Abrams has been appointed New York manager and buyer, and John B. Clymer will take care of publicity matters. Three features a week will comprise the immediate releases which will rapidly be increased. Inasmuch as Canadian exhibitors run a feature at least two days, this will insure a weekly feature program. It is Mr. Lubin's idea to diversify his program, one day giving a sensational picture, the next a classical subject, the following the picturization of some famous play with a star in the cast, and continuing the entire stretch of "movie" material.

SELIG GETS SOME EDUCATIONAL SUBJECTS.

The Selig Polyscope Company last week received some very remarkable educational films from R. F. Barton, one of their traveling representatives in Kiangan, Mountain Province, P. I. These subjects are absolutely unique and original, and will undoubtedly create a sensation with ethnologists, as well as the general public. The strange new people and their curious customs in our remote island possessions are truly something new under the sun as far as the experience of the United States is concerned.

"ROSE OF RANCHO" NEGATIVE TO SMITHSONIAN.

Perhaps the first motion picture feature to be installed at Smithsonian Institute will be the negative of the Lasky-Belasco production, "The Rose of the Rancho," which will be taken midst the old Californian missions. The purpose of giving the film to the institute is to perpetuate the fast crumbling missions of the Pacific state. "The Rose of the Rancho" will be taken with some half-dozen missions as scenic settings. The films will possess rare details of mission and mission life which future generations can look upon as the actual depiction of California's oldest remaining relics of Spanish rule.

"A THROW OF THE DICE" (Hepworth).

This two-reel subject is a story of the sufferings of the innocent parties in times of strike—the women and children dependent on the men who walk out. The blame in this picture is divided evenly between capital and labor. The workers are at fault in the beginning in being influenced to leave their employment by a man who had been discharged with entire justification. The employer, after the issue is joined, is stubborn—he has no concern for the misfortunes and troubles following the action of his employes, and the ending of the strike is seemingly a matter of indifference to him.

In "A Throw of the Dice" there is a drunken workman whose discharge brings about the strike. When his baby is taken sick there is no money for medicine. The mother appeals to the foreman, and he goes to the employer. The latter proposes that the two throw dice to determine if the strike shall end. The foreman loses. The baby dies. Out of revenge the mother steals the little daughter of the employer and conceals it. Then she goes to the father and tells him that she will throw the dice to decide if the child is to be returned. The employer loses. The mother goes to the shed where she has hidden the little one. Mother love is stronger than the desire for revenge. The employer, who has followed her, sees her take the little one back to its own home. The denouement shows the accident that befalls the drunken cause of all the trouble, the men returned to work through the voluntary action of the employer, and the motherless woman becomes the nurse of the employer's child.

Scene from "A Throw of the Dice" (Hepworth).

There are strong situations, and they are well acted. The story will have especial appeal in communities where large numbers of men are employed.

PLIMPTON GETS AWAY THIS TIME.

Horace G. Plimpton, Manager of Negative Production at the Edison Studio, sailed for Europe on May 30th, on the Olympic. He will visit the principal motion picture centers of Europe and will be absent from this country for about six weeks. This is the trip that Mr. Plimpton had planned to make on March 28th, but which he was compelled to postpone because of the disastrous fire at the Bronx Studio, which broke out a few hours before he was to sail.

COMMODORE BLACKTON'S YACHT WINS.

In a race of "Q" class sloops, held by the Atlantic Yacht Club at Gravesend Bay, New York, May 30, the Virginia, Commodore J. Stuart Blackton's sloop, won the event in jig time.

THE SMALLEYS JOIN BOSWORTH.

Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Smalley, for a long time connected with the Universal Company in the production of Rex subjects, have severed their relations with that company and have joined the Bosworth, Inc. Future subjects made by them will be released by the Paramount Company.

ROSKAM SAILS.

Edward M. Roskam, president of the Life Photo Film Company, New York, sailed Saturday, May 30, on the Olympic for an extended business tour of England and the continent. Mr. Roskam will arrange a market for the product of his company while abroad.

Manufacturers Advance Notes

"THE CHANGELING" (Lubin).

After this story Lawrence McCloskey can honestly claim to be a very near Balzac. Though most intensely melodramatic, the situation is feasible. Two children, a boy and a girl, are born to different mothers; one rich, the other poor. The mother of the boy dies and the girl child of the rich patron also dies. Believing that he is doing a beautiful act he changes the children, placing the lusty boy of the dead mother in the arms of the childless mother. The deception is never discovered until years pass and the doctor's daughter falls in love with the changeling boy, whom the doctor has discovered to inherit insanity. The father having been a maniac. The girl's father opposing the marriage, the young couple elope and the father of the girl seeing no remedy for the tainted association, takes the boy with him in an automobile and drives it in front of an express train, thus ending the awful situation. The drama is cast with a well selected company including Lilie Leslie, Anna Luther, William Turner, Kempton Greene, Earl Metcalfe and George Soule Spencer.

Scene from "The Changeling" (Lubin).

"SACRIFICIAL FIRES" (Balboa).

The Box Office Attractions Film Rental Co. is about to release a new three-part picture from the Balboa studio with a good story of both Japan and America. Its sole object is to tell an entertaining story; but it has also a showing of the unhappiness that is almost sure to follow marriages of East and West. In the opening, we find a young man, used to money, left penniless at his father's death. Old friends snub him, as by way of reminder that he must now find his true position in society. He gets a job with a cotton dealer in Japan and makes himself agreeable to his new associates. Unfortunately, for his future happiness, he falls in love with the pretty Cherryblossom, daughter of a curio merchant. We have pretty scenes of their love making in her father's store and of their marriage which is in Japanese fashion with ceremonial drinking of tea from tiny cups and the graceful exchange of courtesies common in the Flowery Isle. They are happy enough for the time; but the days go by, and news comes that the young American has been left a great fortune by an uncle. He knows at once and partly from his own bitter experience, how chilly society can be with such as it cannot take to its heart and he knows how Cherryblossom will be regarded in America. He is compelled to return home to get the inheritance and decides to leave his wife in Japan. She remains there contentedly so long as letters come from her husband. He has met an American girl and is slowly forgetting his foreign wife. Cherryblossom suspects that something, she knows not what, is wrong and decides to come to America. She gets a glimpse of her husband making love to the other girl. Saying nothing, she returns to her native land and, after writing a letter saying that Cherryblossom died that morning, and signing her father's name, commits suicide. Her family holds another solemn council and sends one of its young men to America to get vengeance for the perfidy of the young man who had given her his troth. The stroke falls upon him one night as he sits by his window. As the dagger had gone into the breast of the Japanese woman, so it goes into that of the unfaithful American and both are ghosts together.

"THE OATH OF PIERRE" (American).

The "Flying A" Company, under the direction of Sydney Ayres, has produced a very creditable two-reel drama under title above mentioned, in which the ability of a large number of leads is taxed to the utmost. Wm. Garwood and Harry Von Meter as trappers, Vivian Rich, Louise Lester and Charlotte Burton as pioneer frontier-women, and Jack Richardson and King Clark as government surveyors, make an array of talent seldom encountered and furnish this production with a series of thrills that will commend the production to such theaters as are looking for the out-of-the-ordinary subjects.

Scene from "The Oath of Pierre" (American).

The photographic merit sets a new standard. The natural settings are superb and a delightful entertainment in themselves. The subject will be released June 8th.

A POMPEIIAN PROJECTING ROOM.

"The Pompeiian Room," connected with Sawyer, Inc., offices, is now completed, and the effect is very beautiful. The Roman fountain was installed last week. This projection room, even during the hot days of the past week, has been very cool. The wisteria ceiling, which was originated and designed by Mr. Rudolph, vice-president and general manager of Sawyer, Inc., has helped the effect, and it is hard to realize, while sitting in this room watching pictures, that the thermometer outside is up in the eighties.

HERBERT BLACHÉ OPENS KANSAS CITY EXCHANGE.

Following the recent opening of feature exchanges in Indianapolis and Des Moines, Herbert Blaché has completed arrangements for the establishment of an exchange in Kansas City.

Burton Garrett, traveling representative for Mr. Blaché, has opened offices in the Gloyd Building, Kansas City, under the name of the Blaché Feature Service, and will be ready to begin booking early in June.

"ONE WOMAN'S WAY" (Kleine-Cines).

With the appearance of the Kleine-Cines two-reel subject, "One Woman's Way," to be released through the General Film Company Tuesday, June 16, American picture fans will be introduced to a new combination of "Cines" players, an organization composed of a number of the most gifted motion picture actors and actresses in Europe. In organizing this company the "Cines" directors spared no pains and balked at no outlay of money for salaries in their effort to bring together a collection of players capable of doing justice to the splendid scenarios which had been prepared. Their success is best to be judged by the subjects themselves, and taking "One Woman's Way" as a criterion, that success has been great indeed.

Scene from "One Woman's Way" (Kleine-Cines).

Virginia Freeman, an heiress, is blinded by the glamor of Lord Belford's title and becomes the wife of the fortune-hunting nobleman. How she overcomes his indifference, conquers his neglectfulness and finally wins his lasting love, is told in a story abounding in interest and possessing several situations of great dramatic power. The unique methods she employs lead up to a startling climax that strikes a new note in motion picture story-telling.

Added to the intrinsic interest of the story and the artistry of the players who portray it, are splendid photography, novel lighting effects and the most expert of staging.

"THE CHASM" (Essanay.

"The Chasm," released by the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company on Friday, June 26th, represents a true-to-life story that might happen to you or anybody else. The fact that the girl loved him was enough to assure a weak and feeble salesman. He had been rather reckless with his money, and when the doctor ordered him west, he was without funds. She worked in the same office, was private secretary and stenographer for the boss. Her employer finally consents to give her money, and she forwards it to her sweetheart in the west. She finally marries her employer to keep her sweetheart from an untimely grave, and then somebody wrote to the salesman, telling him that his sweetheart was married. He returned from the west and threatened her with incriminating letters. Then it was that she discovered she did not care for him, but was really in love with her husband, a man. The photography is excellent and the portrayal of characters efficient.

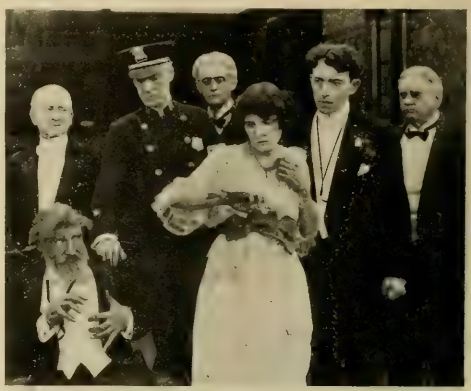
BURTON HOLMES TRAVELETTES.

The moving picture travelogues of Burton Holmes, so well known in some of our larger cities for many years, are now to be placed within reach of the moving picture theaters. The original travelogues of two hours' duration, and which were given by Mr. Holmes at admission prices of $1.00 and $1.50, will be condensed to approximately fifty minutes and prices will range from twenty-five to fifty cents. The short, popular form of these travel lectures will be known as travelettes, and will be given first in Chicago, Cleveland, Milwaukee and St. Louis, and the service will be extended elsewhere as rapidly as possible. Mr. Holmes believes the time ripe for placing before the masses the results of his twenty-two years of travel in every quarter of the globe, and realizes this can be done to greater advantage through the moving picture theaters than by any other method.

"THE FORBIDDEN ROOM" (101 Bison).

This melodrama depends upon the powerful, thoroughly human situations involved rather than on any sensational, hair-raising incidents which tests the bravery rather than the artistry of the player, for its grip. "The Forbidden Room" is a three-reel melodrama distinctly original, with powerful situations and strong climaxes.

Miss Pauline Bush and Murdock MacQuarrie are featured in the lead roles. Miss Bush enacts a dual role, that of Dr. Gibson's sister and niece. One of the most successful emotional actresses on the screen to-day, her work in this picture is wonderfully impressive, realistic and human. Mr. MacQuarrie, dean of character actors, assumes a role aptly suited to his talents.



Scene from "The Forbidden Room" (101 Bison).

One of the big situations of the piece is found in the last reel when Miss Bush, as the niece, is arrested, suspected of murdering her own father, while, as a matter of fact, she is innocent and does not even know that the murdered man is her father. But circumstantial evidence points to her and the district attorney, her fiance, is under the obligation of prosecuting her. He knows within himself that his sweetheart is innocent, and yet there is the law crying for justice, and he represents that law by the voice of the people. Was he justified in going ahead and doing his duty in such a case? These are a few of the questions that may flash through the mind as the action unfolds. But the ending is a happy one, leaving a pleasant taste in the mouth after the heartrending incidents that have preceded. The play will be released on June 20th.

ECLIPSE-URBAN FILM CO. TO OPEN N. Y. OFFICE.

The Eclipse-Urban Film Company of Paris will open an office very shortly in the World's Tower Building at 110-112 West 40th Street, New York. Feature productions will be sold on the state right basis and among the first releases will be a series of detective dramas under the title of Barnet Parker. Numerous comedies featuring the well-known comedians, Sammy, Dupin and Peter, will be released each week. Miss "Billy" Campton, an English actress, but a most popular favorite of the Parisian stage, will be seen in the leading roles of a series of plays known as the "Maud Series." Interesting travel pictures will also be released from time to time. The Eclipse productions were formerly distributed through the General Film Company under the name of Kleine-Eclipse.

Mr. A. R. Ferrand, who has represented the Eclipse Company of Paris in almost every country in Europe, will be in charge of the New York office.

EDISON TO FILM "THE MASTER NUMBER."

A film adaptation from the novel "The Master Number," by E. Phillips Oppenheim, will be produced by the Edison Company, and Mary Fuller will appear in the triple role of Princess Isobel, her daughter and cousin. Mr. Oppenheim is a well-known writer of fiction who possesses a very admirable gift of telling stories of absorbing interest and constructing ingenious plots around which are woven attractive characters. The production will be given five reels and in all probability be released through the Masterpiece service of the General Film Company.

"THE BAITED TRAP" (Imp).

According to announcement, the Universal two-reel production, "The Baited Trap," which had a run at the Republic Theater, New York, featuring King Baggot, has been filmed for release. It tells a story of a young Irish boy and girl, sweethearts, who in the "Land of the Free" are brought face to face with the subtle workings of the white-slave traffickers. When first shown the story was partly acted and partly told on the screen. Now, with the addition of a prologue and an epilogue, it is told completely through the film running two reels.

Scene from "The Baited Trap" (Imp).

While the play deals with the white slave problems in New York, with several sensational, thrilling situations developed, there is nothing offensive or unsavory in the whole two reels. It is not a muck-raking picture, though the dangers that beset the immigrant, both male and female, are strikingly pointed out. The play is not morbid; the action unwinds swiftly, with suspense up until nearly the last scene, yet the piece ends happily with no one the worse for the adventure except the plotting white-slavers themselves, who are given long terms in prison.

King Baggot gives a genuine character sketch as the young Irish lad, trusting and of simple tastes; it is a bit of work that further justifies his position as one of the most popular leading men on the screen today. Miss Arline Pretty was especially engaged for the role she assumes, that of King's sweetheart and the intended victim of the white-slavers. Frank Smith and Howard Crampton, Imp favorites, have also been in important roles. They are the moving spirits of the white-slave band.

"A HIGHWAYMAN'S HONOR" (Mecca).

A few weeks ago was noted the death of Sir Hubert Von Herkomer, C. A., R. V. O., the world's famous artist and actor, to King Edward VII and King George V. Had he lived he would in time have exercised a wonderful and most beneficial influence upon moving pictures, and his enlistment in the kinematographic ranks as actor and producer a few months before his sudden death was hailed with enthusiasm.

Sad to state, he lived but long enough to produce and act in only one big feature, "A Highwayman's Honor," which was written by Arthur Eckersley, and which when screened showed the hall-mark of artistic excellence and the master-mind. The play, an eighteenth century costume drama, was such a one as the painter and actor delighted to take part in. "A Highwayman's Honor" does not solely rely upon artistic effects and picturesque backgrounds for success. It is drama in its best sense, for it contains a story palpitating with heart interest and stirring adventure.

Messrs. Greenebaum and Kessel, president and general manager, respectively, of the Mecca Feature Film Company, Inc., on their recent trip through Europe had a private exhibition of this feature at the castle of Sir Hubert, and after outbidding other prospective buyers secured the American and Canadian rights.

C. B. PRICE NOW WITH MUTUAL.

C. B. Price, whose connection with the World Film Corporation as manager of the San Francisco and Los Angeles branches was recently announced, has resigned to take a responsible position with the Mutual Film Corporation. Mr. Price was in New York last week closing the new deal.

"THE JUNGLE" (All Star).

Upton Sinclair's story of the beef packing industry and the Chicago Stockyards, which some few years ago caused such widespread comment and investigation, has just been completed in a five-act photoplay by the All Star Feature Corporation with the author, Upton Sinclair, appearing in a prominent part, and the eminent character actor, George Nash, late star of "Panthea," "Officer 666" and "The Gamblers," in the leading role of Jurgis, the oppressed Lithuanian.

Through the All Star Film Rental Company, distributors of the All Star product in the territory of New York City and State, "The Jungle" had its first showing for the week of June 1st, at the two-thousand-seat Dekalb Theater in Brooklyn, and with each of its four daily shows has created a furore. At the same date "The Jungle" began its run at the Strand Theater in Newark, N. J., and June 8th opens at the Playhouse in Wilmington, Del., marking the change in policy for that theater for the summer months.

Present plans of the All Star Film Rental Company are that "The Jungle" will have its premier New York City performance amid the proper surroundings and auspiciously presented at one of the leading Broadway theaters. The name will be given out at a later date. For the present it will complete its run at Wilmington, then open simultaneously at Philadelphia, Washington and Baltimore.

BLACHE ACTORS CHARTER SCHOONER AT NEWPORT.

On board the large two-masted schooner Caroline, under the command of Captain S. Neptleton, of Newport, R. I., James Johnson and a company of Blaché players are cruising along the coast of New England—working upon the production of two four-reel dramas of sea life. They are accompanied by Captain Harry Champion's yacht, Lillian, and are thoroughly equipped for a long trip.

Included in Director Johnson's sea-faring company are Fay Cusic, Albert Lang, William Mong, George Davis, Jack Burns, Arthur Hill, Frederick Ernst, Murray Belmont and John Monthoy, as well as the champion long-distance underwater swimmer of the world, Orlof Skavalan, who has a record of 180 feet. Mr. Skavalan will furnish the main thrills for one of the dramas which calls for feats of daring impossible to an ordinary swimmer.

An aeroplane is also part of the equipment of the company which includes Sandoz, the Swiss aviator, who will play an important part in the action of one of the stories.

OHIO CENSORS AT WORK.

The Ohio Board of Censors has resumed full operations at its offices, No. 175 East Rich Street, Columbus, Ohio. All the film exchanges are submitting their films for censorship, and the Moving Picture World is requested to announce that it would be well for the feature film men to submit their pictures as soon as possible, as it is expected that the penal features of the law will be enforced about July 1st.

Notes of the Trade.

DURING the storm in New York on May 27th, lightning struck a part of the glass dome, just repaired from the effects of the fire a month ago, at the Edison studio. Ashley Miller was directing a scene in a multiple release, "My Friend From India," when the sudden crash sent the performers scattering in all directions. The rain poured in and demolished setting and scenery.

• • •

President Sawyer, of Sawyer, Inc., joined the Lambs' Gambol party in Rochester, May 29, to continue the remainder of the trip and assist Burton Holmes and Edward Abeles in completing the motion pictures of the Lambs' Gambol.

• • •

Carl Louis Gregory, director of Princess Films of the Thanhouser Film Corporation, the first man to take motion pictures of under-sea life at Nassau, Bahama Islands, will leave New Providence, June 9th, having completed an eight weeks' trip of taking several thousand feet of most wonderful motion pictures for the Williamson Submarine Company.

• • •

The Edison Company in producing a film of the well-known play, "My Friend From India," in three parts, will have the services of Walter E. Perkins, who took the leading part in this production when it had such a successful run in New York City, playing first at the Bijou Theater and later at the old Madison Square Theater.

• • •

A special invitation performance of "The Lightning Conductor," with Dustin Farnum, will be given at the McVickers Theater, Chicago, this week. This will be done so that the Western exhibitors and buyers who could not visit New York when the first performance was given at the Comedy Theater can see the picture.

• • •

H. M. Horkheimer, president of the "Balboa Feature Films," Long Beach, Cal., has just returned from New York after a lengthy stay in the East. Mr. Horkheimer signed contracts with William Fox, president of the Box Office Attractions Company of New York, by which that corporation handles exclusively the entire output of "Balboa Feature Films" for the United States and Canada.

* * *

During the thunder storm, New York, May 27th, the Victor studio at Contesville, N. J., was struck by lightning and somewhat battered up. Several broken windows and a singed corner of the building was the extent of the damage.

* * *

Robert Brower, of the Edison Company, is the proud possessor of a new Studebaker automobile.

* * *

Sawyer, Inc., have closed with a well-known producing company to handle one special feature of a certain class each week. A full announcement is promised for next week. This series will consist of one three-reeler every week, and one five-reeler every month. These subjects will be the output of one special director, who will oversee each of these productions handled by Sawyer, Inc., exclusively.

* * *

"The Oath of Pierre" is a Flying A two-part drama of the forests, unfolding with the thrilling incidents of the story of the gorgeous beauties of California's famous natural attractions. William Garwood plays the trapper. He is ably supported by Vivian Rich, Charlotte Burton, Jack Richardson and Harry Von Meter.

* * *

The latest acquisition to the staff of actors of the "Balboa Feature Films" at Long Beach is that of Edwin August, actor and director. Miss Neva Gerber has been engaged to play leads opposite Mr. August.

* * *

Miss Sally Crute, the well-known Edison artist, recently purchased a summer home at Sound Beach, on the Long Island Sound. It will be of interest to many to know that Miss Crute is an artist of no mean ability with pen and brush, aside from her capabilities before the camera.

* * *

Sawyer, Inc., have started their booking department and have placed the A. Baldwin Sloane and Grace Field dance picture in several houses. This is a novelty picture in which the latest dance steps are taught, and those who have seen it are unanimous in stating that it is a very simple matter to learn the steps by watching the close-up views of the feet of these accomplished dancers.

* * *

Vivian Rich and William Garwood, popular leads in the Flying A colony, have been booked for a novel vaudeville sketch at the Potter Theater, Santa Barbara, Cal., May 30. Other leads of the Flying A and Beauty staff will take prominent parts.

* * *

The Kismet Feature Film Company have finally become settled in their new suite of offices in the World's Tower Building. The projection room is particularly attractive. A Simplex machine and gold fibre screen have been installed.

* * *

"The Love Victorious" is the title of an allegorical drama upon which Wilfred Lucas, of the Powers company (Universal), is now working. It deals with the life of woman, her trials, temptations, and sinning. Her acceptance of evil and its cohorts as positive forces in her life and the final struggle of sin and the Christ-spirit for possession of her soul.

* * *

Sawyer, Inc., who are the sole distributors of the motion pictures of the Lambs' Gambol, have received nearly three thousand feet of negative of this interesting event. There has never been such an aggregation of stars gathered together in one picture.

* * *

"The Dream Ship," by Eugene Fields, is being produced by the American Film Manufacturing Company, under the direction of Harry Pollard. The sets are in the time of Louis XIV, to which the Gillespie and Graham estates in Montecillo are admirably adapted. Costumes of the same period have been provided.

* * *

How a burglar, bent on robbery, proved to be a good Samaritan is graphically told in "The Intruder," a two-reel Majestic produced by W. C. Cabanne, at the Reliance and Majestic, Hollywood, California, studios. It is an adaptation from the story of the same name in the "Smart Set." Francelia Billington and George Seigman appear in this production.

* * *

Andy Clark, of the Edison Company, who is being featured in the "Andy" series, is a baseball fan. Just at this season, when he is not being filmed, he is usually to be found in the neighborhood of the Edison studio playing baseball. This is considered by him to be the chief of all sports.

* * *

Lubin's "Drug Terror," which has been booked by Sawyer, Inc., in Canada, opened in Halifax, May 25, to big business, and several prints are now booked for the next two months in the Canadian territory.

* * *

Thomas Ricketts, of the Flying A studios, is producing a problem play replete with heart interest. This will be released in July under title of "The Barrier." Like all Ricketts' productions, this will be executed in a thorough manner and true to minutest detail.

* * *

"The Last Drink of Whiskey," a one-reel Komic produced by Eddie Dillon at the Reliance and Majestic, Hollywood, Cal., studios, presents a burlesque situation that confronts a small Western town when it goes dry. Tod Browning, May Davidson and Fay Tincher are the principals.

* * *

Under direction of Manager Julius Stern, the Imp studio, 11th Avenue and 43rd St., New York, is to be enlarged. New lighting systems, enlarged dressing-rooms, a new stage, scenery and new executive offices will be added.

* * *

Sawyer, Inc., states that the first exhibition of "Nell Gwynne," its new four-reel comedy-drama, will be given about June 2nd.

* * *

The visualization of a beautiful poem in two reels is "Jim," produced by Thos. Ricketts of the American Film Manufacturing Company studios Prompted by the whisperings of the muses a poet writes, the poem which which brings about the reunion of an estranged husband and wife.

* * *

"Her Birthday Present," a one-reel Majestic comedy drama, shows how the timely entrance of a burglar saved the husband from a very embarrassing predicament, as the result of his inclination to be a "good fellow" for one night. Donald Crisp directed this production, in which Mae Marsh and Robert Harron take prominent parts.

* * *

The three-reel comedy, "Oh That Movie," which the Primagraf Film Company is making, is now nearing completion. The story is full of new and original comedy situations. The leading role is played by Julia DeKelety. It is being staged by Irving Billig, who produced "The Flames of Justice." This feature will be released on the State rights plan. This company has offices in the Times Building, with studio in New Rochelle, New York.

* * *

Marie Walcamp, William Clifford, Sherman Bainbridge and a dozen other members of the Universal "101 Bison" company, which is now in Hawaii, are anxiously awaiting the date when they will sail for home.

* * *

Viola Dana, well known on the legitimate stage, since her appearance in "The Poor Little Rich Girl," has signed a contract to appear in pictures produced by the Edison Company. Her debut on the screen will be made in "Molly, the Drummer Boy," a Civil War picture to be released soon.

* * *

Mr. Alfred Norton, the character actor, engaged especially to play Stanley Hargreaves in "The Million Dollar Mystery," will enter the Panama-Pacific balloon race. He recently made an ascension with A. Leo Stevens and came very nearly losing his life. The scene required Mr. Norton to be rescued from the roof of a house. This is the first attempt to introduce such a difficult act in pictures, but it is one of the thrills in the Thanhouser Mutual serial and for that reason Mr. Stevens agreed to attempt the dangerous house-top landing, which was accomplished successfully.

* * *

Mr. D. Keizerstein, European representative of the Feature Photoplay Company, has just returned on the "Carmania." The principal purpose of his visit to this country is to take in the Motion Picture Exposition. He has brought with him a number of very big subjects which will soon be offered to State rights buyers through the Feature Photoplay Company.

* * *

Rollin S. Sturgeon, director of the Vitagraph's Western company at Santa Monica, Cal., has returned to the coast after a month's vacation. He will resume his duties in the Far West as special producing director.

* * *

"The Skull," a sensational two-reel melodrama with original situations, has been completed at the Imp studio under the direction of Frank Crane. Alexander Gaden, Dorothy Phillips, Ruth Donnelly and Wm. Welsh play important roles. Mr. Crane also plays one of the lead roles.

* * *

The Pasquali American Company announces that it will in a month or two open a chain of exchanges throughout the country. The company has been reorganized and has unlimited capital. It will control the entire output of Pasquali & Co., of Turin, Italy, and several other makes of equal merit. Several big productions are now in course of manufacture. In our next issue we will be in a position to give the trade in general more definite information relative to the Pasquali American Co., Inc.

* * *

The members of a family in Washington, D. C., have been so greatly impressed with Sallie Crute's performance in an Edison film, "The Powers of the Air," that they have sent her a one thousand mile book on the B. & O. and promise a grand celebration when she pays them a visit in the Capitol City.

* * *

The Universal Moving Picture Company is taking moving pictures of the crowds passing in and out of the Globe Theater, where Annette Kellermann is being shown in "Neptune's Daughter." These films will be incorporated in a big photoplay of New York life to be released shortly.

* * *

John Pelzer will be in charge of the Pathe Booth at the Exposition of the Motion Picture Exhibitors in New York, June 8th to 13th, and also at the M. P. E. L. of A. Exposition to be held in Dayton, Ohio, July 6th to 11th.

* * *

Siegmund Lubin has again proven his loyalty as a Brother Lamb by offering to develop and print the pictures of the Lambs' Gambol without charge, as a compliment to the Lambs.

* * *

"An Old Rag Doll," a one-reel drama, was among the negatives destroyed in the recent Imp factory fire. Mr. Brenon, the author and producer, has commenced to retake the picture.

* * *

The Duluth office of the H. W. Johns-Manville Company has moved to larger quarters at No. 327 W. First Street, in order to take care of its increased business. The new office is on the ground floor, with windows for the display of this company's well known and varied lines.

* * *

The Variety Feature Film Company has placed on the market a film especially produced to satisfy a long-felt want in the exhibition field. A production that is exclusively Jewish. The name of this unique feature is "Shechita," or "The Slaughter," written by Jacob Gordin and posed for by the well-known actors, Mr. S. Adler and Mme. Kaminskaia.

* * *

James McEnnery, head of the James McEnnery Syndicate, recently formed for exploitation of films in England and America, arrived in New York, May 27, with a number of foreign films, some of his own manufacture, which he will dispose of in this country.

* * *

Hereafter Hobart Henley will be associated with Herbert Brenon, director of Imp features, as assistant director. However, Mr. Henley will continue to act, assuming leads in the pictures he helps to create.

Exhibitors News

Interesting Information Concerning Moving Picture Men Gathered By Moving Picture World Correspondents Everywhere.

SAN FRANCISCO.

THE annual picnic and outing of the San Francisco Motion Picture Exhibitors' League was held on May 22 at Pastori's, one of the beauty spots of Marin county. Whether it was the justly famous cuisine of mine host Pastori, the rustic beauties of the spot in the shadow of Mount Tamalpias, or the fact that a splendidly equipped moving picture studio was located here, induced the committee to select this as the outing place was not announced, but any one of these would have been sufficient.

At 9:45 o'clock in the morning the good ship "Tiburon" set sail from the San Francisco ferry slip with as jolly a crowd of exhibitors and exchange men aboard as ever braved the deep, all such subjects as programs and playhouses having been left behind. The journey across the Bay of San Francisco was a most delightful one, passing in full view of the Golden Gate and along the Panama-Pacific International Exposition site with its vast array of beautiful buildings, many already in a completed form, to receive exhibits from all over the world.

At Sausalito a special electric train was waiting to take the party to Pastori's and the trip there was made almost without a stop, passing through the beautiful suburban cities of Ross, Escalle and others, where so many business men of San Francisco have summer homes. Almost within an hour's time from leaving the Ferry building Pastori's was reached. This beautiful spot appealed strongly to the exhibitors, reminding them strongly of some of the French out-of-door scenes displayed on their screens.

In fact, Pastori's is in every detail a dainty bit of France transplanted in the New World. Everything has a foreign atmosphere that is most delightful, from the formal gardens with a wealth of rare bloom, to the handsome buildings scattered here and there among the oaks and overhanging the stream that winds through the grounds. Clusters of dinner tables under the trees and on the wide verandas and a thirst quenching emporium in the open air were some of the novelties enjoyed by the exhibitors and served to increase their appreciation of the beauties of the climate of northern California.

Through the generosity of the various exchanges, the committee in charge of the program for the day was enabled to offer some handsome cash prizes for the field events and shortly after the arrival of the party on the grounds the races were under way. These included races for girls under twelve years, ladies' free-for-all, men over two hundred pounds, an event for league members only; egg and spoon races for men and women, races for boys under twelve years, men's free-for-all, three-legged race, sack race and married women's race. The prizes in these ranged from two to five dollars. These events brought forth some brilliant talent from among the exhibitors. J. A. Huff, of the V-Odeon, being one of the most prominent of the speed burners. Following the field events a pie-eating contest was held, in which a number of members distinguished themselves by a display of gastronomic dexterity combined with an exhibition calculated to prove the effectiveness of lemon pie as a face lotion and disguise.

The departure from San Francisco, the field events, the pie-eating contest and other events of the day were recorded by a moving picture camera operated by M. E. Cory, the finished film to be filed away after exhibition, with other moving pictures of a similar character taken on previous occasions.

One of the features of the day's outing was a visit to the studio of the Keanograph Company, located adjoining the beautiful Pastori gardens. This studio, where the production of features is now under way, was a revelation to the visiting exhibitors in point of size and the preparations that have been made for producing on a large scale. Under the direction of manager James Keane the exhibitors were shown through the plant and every detail of the art of making moving pictures was explained in a painstaking manner, from the painting and manipulation of scenery, to the handling of film, developing, printing, drying and assembling.

This studio is splendidly located for the making of high-class moving pictures, climatic conditions being ideal, with a great variety of scenery at hand, including woods, mountains, formal gardens and San Francisco Bay. The plant in its present form is one of the largest to be found in this section of the state and compares very favorably in point of size and equipment with many of those in the southern section.

The dinner at Pastori's served in the open air will not be forgotten soon by those who were fortunate enough to be present to enjoy it. There was no speech-making to suggest business or to interfere with the appetite, but there was music by a six-piece orchestra brought along by the exhibitors, and dancing for those who wished to tange between the courses. Following the dinner the dancing became general and prizes were awarded to the couples making the best showing. As many members wished to be at their theaters in time to start the evening performances, most of the exhibitors left on a special train at 4:30.

The details for this very successful outing were carried out to the complete satisfaction of all concerned by a committee composed of Ralph L. Marks, secretary of the Local, I. Oppenheimer, chairman; H. A. Canar, W. A. Cory and M. E. Cory.

The various exchanges were well represented at the outing, the Golden Gatae Film Exchange being represented by President and General Manager Sol Lesser, the Independent Film Exchange by George E. Chamberlain, the World Film Corporation by Ralph H. Clark, and the General Film Company, Warner's Features and the California Film Exchange each by one or more. B. Mulvaney, who handles feature attractions, was also there.

A few of those present whose duties did not necessitate an early return to San Francisco remained for a later train and a jolly party was formed, in which some of the moving picture folks of the neighborhood took part. Among those who extended the limits of the outing into the hours of evening were Bruce Johnson, who ably upheld the dignity of the Turner & Dahnken Circuit, with its twelve houses; Mr. and Mrs. George E. Chamberlain, Bartholomew Mulvaney, Mrs. Rose Speck, Ralph H. Clark, F. J. Costello and Mr. Mitchell, of San Rafael, and Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Church, of Berkeley.

The "Old Curiosity Shop" has been booked for the Portola Theater for the week of June 14 and preparations are being made for an unusually heavy attendance. All of the Dickens' productions that have been shown in San Francisco have drawn well, but it is believed that this popular work will surpass all former records.

A private exhibition of "Soldiers of Fortune" was recently given at the Palace Hotel for the entertainment of a number of persons interested in Cuban affairs.

Sid Grauman, of Grauman's Imperial, is planning to make a business trip to New York shortly, and it is anticipated that as a result of this his connections with the Marcus Loew interests, which now own the Sullivan-Considine vaudeville circuit, will be enlarged upon.

Arthur S. Hyman, the new manager at San Francisco for Warner's Features, Inc., has arrived from New York and has assumed his duties. The releases of this firm are well known in this territory and Mr. Hyman plans to make the service the best that can be supplied.

Mary Pickford achieved such a triumph at Grauman's Imperial Theater recently in "Tess of the Storm Country," that this film will be shown again next week. The management was led to make this announcement when it became apparent that all who wished to view the pictures during the first run had not been able to secure admission to the theater.

Louis Levy, of the division of exploitation of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, was the speaker recently at the monthly meeting of the San Francisco Auxiliary of the Woman's Board, P. P. I. E. He illustrated his talk with moving pictures of the ground-breaking exercises on California Day. Moving pictures have been taken of every phase of the Exposition work, more film having been used on this than on any other single undertaking.

Frederick Thompson, the famous creator of amusements, whose concessions at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, were recently taken from him on account of financial entanglements, has made arrangements to take these over again, having secured the necessary financial assistance to carry the projects through. The Toyland Amusement Company is being formed, and E. W. A. Waterhouse will be president of this new concern with I. H. Bragg, vice-president, and Fred W. Swanton, Walter R. Bacon and W. D. Dalton, directors. Samuel Haller, an amusement man of wide experience, will be general manager of the concessions. Thompson is a stockholder in the concern and will be allowed to carry out his original plans. Moving pictures will be utilized in some of the concessions.

The Pathe Memorial Weekly, recently released, has proved to be one of the most popular of the weeklies ever shown. The actual pictures of fighting in the streets of Vera Cruz created a profound impression on the public.

Bids are now being received for the erection of the Illinois Building on the grounds of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco. The structure will cost $100,000 and will contain one or more moving picture halls. The architect is James B. Dibelka, of Chicago, Ill.

The Star Theater at Fruitvale, Cal., has been closed for a time, but arrangements will probably be made to reopen it in the near future.

P. Hanlon, of the Bell Theater, Vallejo, Cal., returned recently from an eastern trip. Mr. Hanlon, who is a retired naval officer, is one of the best known amusement men in the upper bay district. He recently disposed of a half interest in his theater to a Mr. Tam.

The Golden State Film Company, which has a studio in Marin County, has just passed through the process of reorganization and is now being conducted by the players formerly working for the concern. The original plans for producing features are being followed out.

The California Motion Picture Corporation is rushing work on its big studio near San Rafael and is erecting fifteen cottages on the grounds for the use of the players and the producing staff.

The Star Amusement Company, of San Rafael, Cal., of which F. J. Costello is manager, has remodeled its theater at a cost of approximately $6,000 and has installed the new chairs. The house seats about 900 persons. This amusement company is preparing to establish a chain of seven houses in the North Bay section. Mr Costello also has connections with some of the new producing companies in the San Rafael district, being experienced in this end of the business as well as in exhibition work.

Mrs. Arrow, of the Star Theater, Vallejo, Cal., was a recent visitor in San Francisco. She is preparing to establish a chain of houses.

The Gem Theater is a new photoplay house at Santa Clara, Cal., having just been opened by Mr. Harris.

L. L. Cory, owner of the Theater Fresno, is making preparations to remodel this well known Fresno house, the work to commence early in June.

Turner & Dahnken, of San Francisco, who conduct the Richmond Theater at Richmond, Cal., are planning to erect a fine theater building on the property owned by this concern on Macdonald avenue.

The plans of Architect O. H. Thayer for the Novelty Theater to be erected at Martinez, Cal., have been accepted by the owners.

The National Photoplay Company has been incorporated at Los Angeles, Cal., by C. P. Larsen, J. Jacobs and A. E. Garcia with a capital stock of $50,000.

The Boardman Estate recently commissioned J. Henry Boehrer, Delger building, Oakland, Cal., to prepare plans for a one-story brick theater building at Palo Alto, Cal., and work on this structure is now commencing.

Wick W. Parsons, president, and Al. Braverman, secretary and business manager of the Kelbrae Motion Picture Company, of Fresno, Cal., announce that the office of general manager, formerly held by H. A. Kelly, is vacant and that Mr. Kelly is not connected with the concern.

CHURCH.

ST. LOUIS.

J. G. CONNER, manager of the World Feature Exchange in the Navarre building, has resigned his position and gone to Indianapolis. Mr. Conner's place has been taken temporarily by Jos. Bloom.

G. K. Dubis, proprietor of the Pathe Theater, Tenth and Franklin avenues, has stopped using the actor-behind-the-screen talking picture and has added another reel to his program. Music is furnished by a $3,200 Wurlitzer orchestra.

Harry H. Young has been appointed supervisor of the entire eastern division of the St. Louis territory for Warner's Features. Mr. Young has just returned from a trip in the Illinois portion of his territory.

The Eagle Theater, 1717 South Broadway, will remain open for the summer season this year.

Ralph Pinkham, of New York, has been appointed manager of Warner's Features Exchange to fill the vacancy caused by the death of John Noecker.

Angelich Brothers, who operate both the Sun and the Rainbow theaters on South Broadway, have closed the Sun for two months. They will continue the program at the Rainbow, and have added a stock ticker and a slide writer, and will give sport news and baseball scores by innings to the patrons of the Rainbow.

The Negro Grand Central, Grand and Lucas avenues, had the Grand-Leader Choral Club, which is made up of employees of the Grand-Leader Department Store and which comprises more than sixty members, as an added attraction during the week ending May 31. The photoplay feature of the program was "The Port of Missing Men," a Famous Players production.

J. J. Riley, manager of the Princess, a feature photoplay house of Alton, Ill., visited the New Grand Central Theater when the "Quo Vadis?" pictures were being run, and so impressed was Mr. Riley that he decided to book the film for his theater.

The Delmar Theater, 4936 Delmar avenue, is winning with an all picture and high class singing act. Last Thursday night the attendance was 2,200. The Delmar has a fine orchestra, and lady ushers. Manager C. E. Maberry is arranging for a thousand additional seats for the theater.

L. G. Edel, manager of the feature department of the General Film Exchange, 3610 Olive street, has resigned the position and accepted a place with Warner's Features in the Benoist building.

Talbott's Hippodrome, Sixth and Walnut streets, will close for the summer next week, but will reopen again in August.

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat devoted a whole page of its Sunday magazine on May 17 to photographs and histories of men and women of St. Louis who have made a mark on the moving picture stage. Those features were Rosemary Theby, Lubin; King Baggot, Imp; Naomi Childers, Ann Shaefer, and Jane Novak, Vitagraph; Kathleen Ray, Biograph; G. M. Anderson, Essanay; Edith Sterling, J. J. Franz, and Walter Rodgers, Frontier; and Edwin August.

The St. Louis Times has finished its ten weeks' balloting for the most popular moving picture player, and the ten winners are now being counted. R. T. Edwards, editor of the Motion Picture Department, says he is swamped with votes. Naomi Childers, a St. Louis girl, is leading, but J. Warren Kerrigan is crowding Miss Childers for first place. The other players in the race are Anne Shaefer, Francis X. Bushman, Rosemary Theby, Thos. Santchi, Kathlyn Williams, King Baggot, Mary Pickford and Crane Wilbur.

The Breman Theater has moved its program to the Breman airdome, the first performance was given on May 27.

Atsco, Inc. (American Theater Supply Co.) has moved its offices to the third floor of the Nulsen Building.

The Aubert airdome, Aubert and Easton avenues, opened for the summer May 31.

The Times Movie Review, the moving picture supplement of the St. Louis Times, is filming the parades of school children on the days of their annual picnics. The Fremont School, Wisconsin and Pestalozzi streets, and the Horace Mann School, Juniata and Oak Hill avenues, were taken this week.

The Mutual Film Corporation will be ready to occupy its new building, which is being erected on Thirteenth and Pine streets, about June 10. The new home of the Mutual will be one of the most complete in the city. The building is two stories high, with 6,300 feet of floor space, and contains every known improvement for the quick and careful handling of films. The building is fireproof throughout, and the film vaults, which are to be equipped with automatic self-locking doors, will have the largest capacity of any in the city.

The Lyric Theater, between Market and Pine on Sixth street, is installing the Stepco air cooling and washing system. The plant will take in air from the roof, cool and wash it, then deliver it to the auditorium of the theater at the rate of 20,000 cubic feet per minute. A gigantic exhaust fan, seven feet in diameter, will drive the stale air out of the building.

GIEBLER.

DETROIT

THERE are approximately twenty-five moving picture theaters in course of erection in the city of Detroit at the present time.

The Warfield Theater at 1028 Hastings street, Detroit, has been sold to James Reese, who was formerly an automobile agent in Ohio.

The Ideal Theater at Maek and Field avenues, Detroit, formerly owned by Mr. Ward, of the Mutual Film Company, has been sold to S. Tomlinson.

A feature of the eleventh annual summer cruise of the Detroit Board of Commerce scheduled to start June 18 for Duluth, will be motion pictures, the Hearst-Selig News Picture Company having contracted to take the pictures and afterward show them in every town of 1,000 or more inhabitants throughout the country.

The first public exhibition of the feature film "A Man, a Motor and a Maid" was recently shown at the Garden, Detroit. The film tells the story of a Detroit Ford salesman, how he goes out to a rural district to sell a farmer a car and wins a prospect, as well as the farmer's daughter. In the process of the story, the spectator gets an intimate view of the Ford plant in operation, also some of Detroit's attractions, as the story carries the principals to Belle Isle Park and other well-known places.

Alderman Eddie Barnett must install an automatic water sprinkling system in his picture theater at High and Hastings streets, Detroit, before he can secure the approval of the city building inspector, according to Inspector Dupont. As a result, Mr. Barnett says the installation will be made at once.

The Detroit Motion Picture Exhibitors' League held a meeting at its clubrooms Thursday afternoon, May 14. There was a large attendance. The principal topic of discussion was that of whether or not the association favored local censorship. It seems that the police department is going to discontinue the position of censor, formerly occupied by Lester Potter, after the first of July unless the local houses insist that Mr. Potter be continued, in which case the association would have to stand a part of the expense. W. L. Levy, manager of the Calvert, made a motion favoring an official censor in Detroit, but it was voted down and a resolution adopted prohibiting members from exhibiting films not passed by the national board of censorship. A resolution was presented by the Detroit Federation of Women's Clubs asking that a woman be appointed as censor, but no action was taken on the matter. It was also decided that members of the association notify the police department whenever they find a picture being shown that does not come up to the standard of decency. At present there are 130 picture theaters in Detroit, 70 of which are represented in the association. It was also pointed out that only two films passed by the National Board of Censorship have been refused in Detroit. "It's up to the picture men to protect their own interests," said President Peter J. Jeup.

The stockholders of the Washington Theater, Detroit, held a meeting May 28 to discuss the proposition of raising additional capital with which to pay off debts amounting to about $25,000. The house was erected last July and is one of the prettiest in the city. Its policy from the start has been rather uncertain. It is the plan of the present management to continue musical comedy stock, as at present, for three weeks at least, after which time it is very possible that motion pictures will be inaugurated for the balance of the summer. E. B. Whitbeck is general manager of the Washington, situated at Clifford street and Washington boulevard.

The Lyman H. Howe travel pictures opened a successful four weeks at the Garrick, Detroit, on May 25.

No other picture shown in Detroit in months has created as much interest and comment as the one entitled "Neptune's Daughter," which opened an engagement at the Detroit Opera House, Monday evening, May 25. When that theater closed its doors for the regular legitimate season on Saturday night, May 23, work was already started to plaster the front with lithographs, signs and photographs of "Neptune's Daughter." All day Sunday and Monday afternoon crowds stood in front of the theater looking at the advertising matter. The first show was given in the evening, May 25, before a packed house. Crowds have continued to pour into the Detroit all week, particularly in the evening. Motion pictures will be the policy of the Detroit Opera House until the re-opening of the regular legitimate season.

The Majestic Theater Company, Detroit, has been organized and capitalized for $125,000, the principal stockholders being A. Arthur Caille, Frank A. Westbrook and Harry Goldstein. This indicates that Mr. Caille is again entering the motion picture business. He has announced the erection of the Maxime Theater on the east side, also a theater at the corner of Woodward and Willis avenues, which is only a stone's throw from the Garden.

Ground was broken May 27 for a new motion picture theater at the corner of Woodward and Kenilworth avenues for John H. Kunsky. It will cost $75,000 and have a seating capacity for 1,750 persons. A large pipe organ, in connection with a full orchestra, will be a feature. Ground was also broken this week for Mr. Kunsky's new Strand Theater at Jefferson and Hillger avenues, which will seat 1,500 and cost approximately $100,000.

The Casino Feature Film Company, of Detroit, which has been distributors in Michigan and adjacent territory for the Famous Players films, will handle the combined output of the recently organized Paramount Picture Corporation.

The feature film with Mary Pickford entitled "Tess of the Storm Country," which played for two consecutive weeks at the Liberty, Detroit, was shown for a week at the Empress on Woodward avenue starting May 25, the original intention being to show it only for three days. The Empress is only a few blocks from the Liberty and the fact that this film has been on exhibition for three weeks in one locality is a strong indication of the large following which Miss Pickford has in Detroit.

Charles H. Preston, former manager of the Family in Detroit, and for the past few months assistant manager at the New Empire on Woodward avenue, left May 24 for Alleghany, Pa., where he has taken charge of a theater operated by the Harris Amusement Company.

Although it has been reported that the owners of the Family, in Detroit, are planning to abolish vaudeville and run pictures exclusively in that house, Manager J. H. McCarron says he has not been notified of such a change. It is understood that the owners could save $1,500 a week by running pictures, with the chance of doing just as much business owing to its splendid location.

Architect Richard H. Marr, Detroit, is taking figures on a two-story building to be erected on Grand River Avenue, near the Boulevard.

Architects Pollmar & Ropes, 602 Sun Building, Detroit, are drawing plans for a picture theater to seat 400 at the corner of Forest and Grandy Avenues. The name of the owner is being withheld for the present.

Architect R. E. Raseman of 1302 Penobscot Building is taking bids on a theater to cost $20,000, seating 400, to be erected on Riopelle Street for Nicoli Geovenangeld.

The Calvert Theater Co., Detroit, composed of David King and Adolph Finsterwald, will shortly let contracts for its new motion picture theater to be erected at the southeast corner of Woodward and Kenilworth avenues, to seat 1,500, and to be completed by October 15.

The Royal Theater, corner of Monroe Avenue and Farmer Street, Detroit, is being enlarged so as to increase the seating capacity by 200. Thisis being done by moving back the stage about fifty feet. The Royal, operated by the Casino Amusement Co., has been meeting with big success ever since it was built.

The New Palace Theater on Monroe Avenue, Detroit, announces that it will change its policy and run continuous vaudeville from ten in the morning to eleven at night, for the one price of ten cents. This is the same policy of the National, Columbia and Family theaters, also on Monroe Avenue. Pictures will open and close each show.

Harry Goldberg, general representative of the Casino Feature Film Co., of Detroit, will open an office for his company in Wilwaukee about the middle of June and remain there until an organization is perfected, after which he will return to Detroit and be at the company's office in the Dime Bank Building, which means that he will practically give up road work. After June 1 the outside traveling in Michigan will be done by Edward C. Thaye who, for a number of years, has been connected with the hat department of the Baumgartner Fashion Shop in Detroit.

"Feature Facts" the house organ of the Casino Feature Film Co., of which Harry Goldberg is editor, is being enlarged from four to eight pages, and will be further enlarged from time to time as conditions warrant. Editor Goldberg has materially improved the appearance of this publication by running various illustrations, and this feature will receive even more consideration in the future. Each issue contains a number of interesting articles contributed by proprietors of motion picture theaters who use Famous Players films.

J. Russell Brett has been placed in charge of the Detroit, Grand Rapids and Toledo offices of the Syndicate Film Corporation, which have recently been established. At present Mr. Brett is devoting all his energies to the Thanhouser film, "The Million Dollar Mystery." At an early date Mr. Brett plans to show this film at one of the downtown theaters for the benefit of local exhibitors. "The Million Dollar Mystery" will be the first film to be shown in this city by the Syndicate Film Corporation.

SMITH.

MISSOURI.

JOHN L. LANK, a well known exhibitor of Excelsior Springs, committed suicide at his home in that city on May 22. The cause of his deed is not unknown. The theater which Mr. Lank operated apparently was making money. The exhibitor visited Kansas City exchange men a few hours before his death and appeared to be in excellent spirits.

William Kling has received permission from the Kansas City council to construct and operate an airdome at 1309 East Eighteenth street and will open in the immediate future.

Free moving pictures in parks seem to be the latest craze in Missouri and Kansas. Moving pictures are a feature at Electric Park, which recently was opened for the summer in Kansas City. An admission of ten cents is charged to the park. The same plan is being applied to Garfield Park, at Topeka Kan., motion pictures being free to those who have paid for general admission to the park.

An ordinance passed in Kansas City eighteen months ago is to be put into effect in the near future, according to a recent announcement by Mayor Henry L. Jost. Mayor Jost announced that F. F. McClure will continue as censor. The ordinance provides for the appointment of a committee of three citizens to act as a court of appeals. Mayor Jost will appoint the committee of three at once. Its decision in all discussions regarding the merits of pictures will be final. No pictures, according to his plans, will be allowed to exhibit unless they have been passed by the National board.

Songs illustrated with moving pictures have found their way into Kansas City, being presented recently at the Globe Theater. The offering will be made a regular feature of the house. Exhibitors who have discussed the proposition have indicated their wonderment. "Why the song?" is the general query. The first song-picture shown was, "In the heart of the city that has no heart." The Kansas City Association of Photoplaywrights took on new heart after seeing the exhibition.

New airdomes open to act in Kansas City recently include those of the Iliad Amusement Company at Thirty-first street and Troost avenue and the Linwood Gardens, at Forty-second street and Prospect avenue.

The Holt Feature Film Company, of Manhattan, Kan., took moving pictures of the dedication of the G. A. R. Memorial Hall at Topeka, Kan., on May 27. The company, as a part of its contract, also exhibited the pictures three times to Topeka residents without charge. Another unusual provision of the contract caused the company to run off an extra set of the prints, which were placed in a sealed package and deposited in the new building, to be opened fifty years hence, or on May 27, 1964. At that time, according to present plans, the gray-haired old men and women now in their infancy, will open the container, and show the pictures for the benefit of their descendants, and also to bring back the scenes of the dedication of 1914. An interesting commentary in connection with this plan was made by a Topeka exhibitor, who remarked that apparently motion pictures are expected to be as popular a half century hence as at present.

The contract for J. C. Wirthman's $200,000 theater building at Thirty-first street and Troost avenue, Kansas City, will be awarded shortly. It is hoped to have the new theater ready for the public early in 1915. Mr. Wirthman probably will lease the house, though he may decide to operate it personally. It probably will be utilized exclusively for motion pictures.

MURRAY.

INDIANA.

THE Cosmopolitan Amusement Company, which is opening a new picture house on Broadway, Gary, Ind., has selected the name Cosmo for the theater. Thirteen hundred names were submitted. The originator of Cosmo gets a $10 prize.

E. H. Ryce, Odon, Ind., is going to open a new motion picture house near his Grand Hotel at Odon.

Cincinnati in Motion at the Lyric, Vevay, Ind., has been drawing large crowds.

A new summer airdome is now being erected at Warsaw, Ind., by C. P. Ferry. The building will be 125 x 50 feet and will seat 500.

M. M. McBride, Gary, Ind., real estate man, is planning for a string of twenty or more picture houses thoughout the Calumet district. His first house soon will be opened.

Educational moving pictures under the auspices of the Parent-Teacher Federation are being shown at the Columbia Theater, Muncie, Ind.

The big attraction at the Lyceum, Indianapolis, the last few days has been Jack London's "Sea Wolf."

"Sunny Hours in St. Joe Valley," the motion picture film taken in South Bend, Ind., recently has been completed and arrived in South Bend May 25. It is being exhibited at the American Theater. The Battle Creek Chamber of Commerce saw the pictures a few days ago.

The Aerodome, Huntington, Ind., will have two machines, the management believing an audience dislikes intermissions during which the change of films take place. This house will seat 900 when finished. The proprietors are Harry Oatis and Charles Crandal.

The Terre Haute Star, Terre Haute, Ind., says: "It looks as though our entire education would presently be conducted by means of the moving picture system. * * * Undoubtedly many schools would have their moving picture plant attachment had they their way. * * * What is there that cannot be taught by moving picture?"

In succeeding Harry Crull as manager of the Empress theater, Ft. Wayne, Ind., Harvey Porter becomes the youngest theater manager in the entire Loew circuit. Mr. Crull resigned to engage in other business. The theater handles first-class films with its regular show programs.

The Habit Theater, Tipton, Ind., will be reopened shortly. The place was closed for remodeling. The new house will seat a large audience.

Manager Andrew Greener, of the Huntingburg, Ind., airdome, has opened his new vaudeville and motion picture house.

The Warsaw Airdome, the new vaudeville and motion picture house, is now open. Manager Ferry says he can seat 800.

With the aid of motion pictures, school children at Clinton the other day gave a special program of entertainment at the Wonderland.

Irvington in a moving picture show is the latest sensation for Indianapolis's classic suburb. Public spirited citizens are launching the idea with a view to providing the Fresh Air Fund here with the necessary financial stimulus. The program will consist of three reels of films showing Irvingtonians and Irvington scenery and snatches of the daily routine of the dignified village. The proceeds, it is expected, will be substantial. Manager Moore, of the Irving Theater has loaned the committee the temporary use of his house.

The newsboys of Indianapolis are going to see the Indians in action. Manager Hastings, of B. F. Keith's house here, will offer films at his theater showing the Indian wars in which the United States Army figured. The films will run all week. The "newsies" have been invited to enjoy the "thrills," and they will split up into three battalions so as not to entirely overflow the house.

Educational films are being shown to school children at Muncie, under the auspices of the Parent-Teachers' Federation. The Columbia Theater has the pictures.

The Shirley News, Shirley, gave a free picture show ticket with every subscription renewal of the News last week.

The Airdome Amusement Company has opened its Connersville, Ind., airdome, with W. P. Krau as business manager. The place was very successful last season.

"Clothes," produced by the Famous Players' Film Company, is being shown at the Marion Royal Grand Theater. It is attracting quite a bit of attention.

The Columbus Republic, Columbus, predicts that in the near future provision for the moving picture will be made in the home, and that when a man plans for his home the architect will confer as to the location and size of the picture room.

General and Mrs. Jesse M. Lee, Mrs. Ida P. Conrad, Miss Helen Hathaway will occupy a box at the Keith Theater, Indianapolis, by special invitation to General Lee when the Indiana war pictures are produced at the favorite vaudeville house. General Lee will be able to see himself on the screen.

Italian marble and onyx figure in the facade scheme of the new Cosmo picture house, Gary's most up to date theater. The marble is of a delicate green color. The ticket seller will sit in a carved wood office of elaborate and beautiful design. An unusually high ceiling gives the place splendid ventilation.

The Delight Picture House Company, Indianapolis, has incorporated to operate moving picture shows, with a capital of $3,000. W. W. Connel, Jr., A. M. Connell and B. Connell are incorporators.

The Castle-Garden Airdome, Hartford City, is open. Proprietor Ralph Hayden has put in a pew floor and placed the stage and picture screen on the east side.

It is reported Charles Sewell, pianist, will manage a new airdome to be erected at Columbus, this summer. Sewell and Tom Brown have leased a lot for an open air motion picture house.

More than 1,800 persons attended the opening of the Huntington Airdome last week. Nine hundred were taken care of at one time.

The Day picture show has been leased by Ralph Rex, at Redkey. Under the new management the show will be operated every night with high class films.

Davis & Haney, Mt. Vernon, have opened their airdome, which is covered in canvas, to protect patrons during inclement weather.

Pictureland Theater, Kokomo, bought last February by local men at a receivers' sale, has been sold to Mrs. Etta Albaugh and her sister, Mayme Wood, owner of the Star Theater. The Pictureland will be operated on its old lines.

WILLIAM.

CINCINNATI

THE LUBIN, one of the largest and finest houses in Cincinnati, made a pronounced hit during the week of May 24 with the four-reel production of "The Master Mind," featuring Edmund Breese. Large audiences were the rule during the running of this feature, which, like all of those shown at the Lubin, received liberal advertising by means of car-cards, billboards and the daily papers.

Klaw & Erlanger's "A Fatal Wedding," presented during the first half of last week at the Gayety Theater, which is continuing its initial success with motion pictures, recalled to old theatergoers the success of the play when it was first produced some years ago.

Beginning on Thursday of last week the Grand presented to its rapidly increasing clientele which likes the multiple-reel offerings one of the treats of the season, in Klaw & Erlanger's production of "Strongheart." As in a good many other plays which have been transferred with profit and pleasure to both audience and management from the stage to the film, the numerous scenes in which the film is able to show the actual events transpiring outdoors, where the stage must be content with relatively pallid and colorless description, made "Strongheart" intensely interesting, and one of the best things yet produced at the Grand, judging by results alone.

The Clifton Amusement Co. has awarded to the Ohio Building & Construction Co. the contract for the construction of a large and up-to-date picture house on Ludlow avenue, near Clifton.

William Corcoran, who is the head of a concern controlling a chain of motion picture houses in Cincinnati, has acquired the property at the southeast corner of Baymiller and Laurel streets, and intends to improve it with a handsome theater. The corner is 83 by 125 feet, and would be an ideal site for a theater, a fact which, it is said, offered strong possibilities of competition for Mr. Corcoran's house at Clark and Linn streets, which will be opened shortly, and this, it is understood, was one of the reasons for the purchase. It is probable that the corner will be used during the summer for an airdome, to see whether that part of the city will support such a house.

The Park Hall Theater, in Oakley, a suburb of Cincinnati, has been sold by its owners to James B. Carragien, one of the best known photoplay theater magnates in the Middle West, the consideration being $55,000. The building is a handsome one, in the heart of the suburb, and the theater contains 800 seats, making it the largest in that section of the city. It is 212 feet long, and was constructed last year at a cost of $53,500. The building contains its own lighting and heating plant, housing, in addition to the theater, four stores and several lodge halls. A new company will be organized by Mr. Carragien to handle the property, which will probably be known as the Oakley Amusement Co., and the purchaser will move shortly from St. Louis, his home, to take personal charge of it. It is stated that it paid an income of 6 per cent. on the investment in the hands of a receiver, and Mr. Carragien expects to double this income.

The Monarch Amusement Co., which operates the Pavilion Theater on Price Hill, one of the suburbs of Cincinnati, has brought suit against Edward J. Babbitt on account of an article in the Catholic Telegraph for damages of $10,000, alleged to have been caused by an article, said to be libelous, published in that paper on April 30. The company ran the Pathe Weekly's No. 12 of this year on April 26, one of the pictures showing a Venetian folk dance performed at a New York roof garden, preceded by the statement that Pope Pius had suggested it for substitution for the Tango. Mr. Babbitt is alleged to have reported to the paper that the theater was advertising that the Pope had approved the dance, and the following publication resulted: "In spite of repeated authoritative denials that the Pope has never even indorsed any kind of dance, some of the moving picture theaters persist in exhibiting films of a dance, which they audaciously and shamelessly advertise as having the approval of His Holiness. During the past week the Pavilion Theater on Price Hill has been offending in this regard in the most flagrant manner, and we would urge the readers of the Catholic Telegraph in that suburb to take the most practical measures within their power to bring the manager to a proper respect for the supreme authority of their church." The paper later made suitable amends for its error, which was one of fact, but the management of the Pavilion has sued Babbitt, who is a lawyer, alleging that his misstatement of the facts has caused it the loss of considerable Catholic patronage, whereas it is wholly innocent of exhibiting anything objectionable to Catholics or anybody else.

The Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce uses motion pictures on every occasion for the purpose of "boosting" the city, showing a high appreciation of their value for publicity purposes. On the recent trade-boosting trip made out in Ohio and Indiana films were used, as heretofore reported; and last week at the pure food show held at Music Hall motion pictures were taken, which will be shown all over the country under the auspices of the Chamber in evidence of Cincinnati's enterprise in this direction. Further, Joseph J. Keegan and H. J. Rosencrantz, of New York, who are managing a plan to show through South America motion pictures of manufacturing and industrial concerns in this part of the country, found a ready welcome in Cincinnati, and it is probable that several thousand feet of film depicting leading industries of the Queen City in motion will be taken with the party of American manufacturers which will tour twenty cities in South America this year.

The concern which has been producing "Cincinnati in Motion" in various theaters in Cincinnati and surrounding towns is preparing to build a house near Evanston, a suburban town, and it is announced that the building will be as nearly fireproof as it is possible to make it, complying with all the requirements of the building inspector's office even for the downtown section.

By the purchase a few days ago of a West End house in Cincinnati, Isaac Frenkel, who has for some time owned and operated the Colonial, the Avenue and the Victorial, on Fifth street, in that city, and the Hippodrome, at Ninth and Baymiller, becomes the owner of his fifth photoplay theater in Cincinnati. The property referred to was formerly owned by the Queen City Amusement Company, which sold to Mr. Frenkel at a figure in the neighborhood of $200,000 for real estate and improvements. It is located on Freeman avenue. The house is one of the handsomest suburban theaters in the city, having a frontage of about 50 feet and a depth of 100 feet. It is thoroughly modern, although Mr. Frenkel announces that he will spend several thousand dollars in improvements, with the object of making the house one of the best in the city in every respect. It will be re-christened the National. Mr. Frenkel recently sold his Newport, Ky., house, the Colonial, to N. C. Service, who is now running it. The Cincinnati man's interests are now concentrated in that city, bringing them more under his immediate eye. All of his houses are handling a good business, and the latest member of the string, judging by its past popularity, will be no exception to this rule.

CASEY.

MONTREAL

MARY PICKFORD is a great favorite with the Mount Royal Theater patrons. "Tess of the Storm Country" was recently shown at this northend theater, and "S. R. O." was the order of the day.

The Imperial Theater very kindly helped the committee in charge of "Montreal Clean-up Week." At every performance slides were flashed on the screen showing how Montrealers should go about cleaning and painting up their premises. "Wolfe, or the Conquest of Quebec" is booked for the Imperial in the near future, and it should meet with great success, since it tells the story of one of the greatest battles in Canada's history.

"Sealed Orders," and "The Blue Mouse" were kept over for another week at the Princess Theater, the Montreal Shubert's house.

His Majesty's, the local K. & E. house saw one of the most distinguished gathering of men of international repute on the occasion of "With the Greeks in the Firing Line," being shown at that theater. The consuls of many European countries were the interested guests at the opening performance May 28.

The Theater Francais has assumed its summer garb. A fountain has been placed in the lobby, the attendants have been given white uniforms, and the many palms make one think of the tropics. Mr. Hooley has changed the policy of the theater for the summer months.

Edmund Breese in "The Master Mind" was the feature at the Strand for three days commencing May 25.

The Colonial is now owned and managed by T. Cross. Mr. Cross has had considerable experience in the moving picture business in the United Kingdom.

The Good Roads Congress recently held in Montreal, used moving pictures to show some of the roads in the United States and Europe.

The Board of Moving Picture Censors for the Province of Quebec has set up a new record by examining 100,000 feet of film in one day. Discussing the work of the board Sheriff Lemieux stated that there was a very marked improvement in the tone of the pictures submitted. Last year of the total number of reels examined in a day, 30 per cent. would be condemned. Now only 15 per cent. is rejected.

GALLAGHER

KENTUCKY.

THE arrival, over night, as it seemed, of summer temperatures, with the resulting increase in the pulling power of the parks, has given the Louisville exhibitors rather a lean week, compared with the splendid runs they enjoyed during the numerous cool weeks of early spring.

Manager J. J. Hebert, of the Warner Feature Film Company, Louisville, is finding business unusually good at present, and has made arrangements for an additional room at the present quarters in the Courier Journal Building. The new room will be used to handle the inspecting and shipping end of the business.

The big Selig production of "The Spoilers" by Rex Beach, made a tremendous hit with the patrons of the B. F. Keith Theater, Louisville. Prices on this picture were twenty-five cents, but the public is so thoroughly acquainted with the book that it can be counted on to stand a raise in the admission rates. The audiences crowded the house every night while the feature was shown.

The proprietors of the John C. Lewis Company, of Louisville, have announced that they will be able to get their stock of dry goods out of the building by July 1. The Fourth Avenue Amusement Company, of which M. Switow is president, would start work on the new moving picture theater at once.

English Kendall, a clerk at the Louisville National Banking Company, is in charge of the Baxter Theater, one of the East End airdomes. He has had considerable experience with airdome shows, and with his brother, Lem Kendall, operated an airdome in the western part of the city several years ago.

Alfred Selligman, one of the local stockholders in the National Theater at Fifth and Walnut streets, Louisville, which has just gone through its first season, is quoted as saying that negotiations are on between the management of the local Keith Theater on Fourth near Chestnut street, and the management of the National looking toward consolidation of the two houses. In such case, it is said that the vaudeville performances now given in the Keith Theater would be transferred to the National and the Fourth street house turned over to a moving picture exhibitor. The Keith house, formerly the Mary Anderson Theater, is one of the nicest small theaters in this part of the country and has been filled to capacity throughout practically its career as a vaudeville house.

John Reardon, proprietor of the Palace Theater at Shelby and Rupp streets, Louisville, has sold the theater to Frank S. Schoeffel, who will conduct it under the name of the Palace Amusement Company.

Amended articles of incorporation were filed by the Ideal Amusement Company in Louisville recently, increasing the capital stock from $30,000 to $100,000, divided into 1,000 shares of the par value of $100 a share. This is an increase of $25 per share. Fred J. Dolle, president of the company, and the following directors signed the amended charter: Henry Reiss, Louis F. Stuerle, Martin Reiss, Charles Gocke and Daniel Kaicher. The theater of the Ideal Company is at 2313 West Market street, at the edge of a rapidly growing residence district.

The proprietors of motion picture theaters are interested in the removal from Cincinnati to Louisville in the last few weeks of the Bennett Seating Company, of which George W. Bennett is president. The company is located at 535-537 West Market street and occupies two five-story buildings. It manufactures seats for all manner of public assembly places and came to Louisville so as to be in closer touch with the veneer mills, of which it bought most of its wood supplies. It was found, too, that it could obtain its castings with greater ease in Louisville than where it was located in Cincinnati. Robert E. Woods, of Louisville, former postmaster, is secretary and treasurer of the company, which handles some used goods as well as manufactures new ones.

Fred Sheldon, formerly with the Kinemacolor Company, Louisville, has given up his position with that company to engage in a different line of work. He will, however, continue to be interested in motion picture matters and as a sort of side line will handle the Afro-color films, manufactured by the Al Bartlett Film Manufacturing Company, of Atlanta, Ga. These pictures will deal exclusively with negro life, and the Bartlett Company will maintain a company of negro actors to supply a series of comic films. This is a recently organized enterprise.

The Paul J. Rainey African Hunt pictures were put on at the Shubert Masonic Theater, Louisville, the last week in May, drawing well, though around the corner on Fourth street at Keith's was the Griffith film, a six-reel affair, "The Battle of the Sexes." Both played to good houses.

The Commonwealth Amusement Company, Louisville, has been organized at Ludlow, Ky., with a capital of $5,000. It will reconstruct a building and install a motion picture show. The incorporators are John Hunt, Joel Ward and V. J. Howard.

The Princess Theater Company, which has been conducting a moving picture show in Lexington, has been closed out and its tangible assets will be sold. Several weeks ago C. S. Graves was appointed receiver by the Fayette Circuit Court, but since that time the building has been sold and the purchaser has taken over the lease.

One of the first floor storerooms of a new brick block being constructed in Eddyville by Roy Threlkeld, will be occupied by a moving picture theater, according to announcement from that Western Kentucky town.

C. W. Aebrendt, of Greensburg, has purchased the moving picture theater at Campbellsville from J. R. Hobson and is remodeling it extensively. He will soon install a new machine and make other improvements.

C. C. McClure, of Clearfield, has purchased the Gem Theater in this city and will operate it henceforth.

George Owens is owner of the Boone's Trail Theater, just opened in Mt. Vernon. The theater was constructed especially for Mr. Owens by Fritz Krueger and stands at Main street and Railroad avenue.

In Owensboro it is given out that a well known motion picture man will construct a $10,000 moving picture house in that city. The lot on which the building is to stand has been purchased, according to the information from Owensboro.

The Beech Creek house at the Beech Creek mines near Russellville has reopened after several weeks of darkness. When the coal miners, who are the patrons of the house, went on strike, that was the sign for the theater to close, as the strikers were without funds to patronize the theater. The strike was settled recently, and the theater and all the other industries of the settlement are in full swing.

G. D. CRAIN, JR.

PHILADELPHIA.

LETTERS have been sent out by Health officer Dr. Charles P. Henry, of Reading, Pa., to all the managers of moving picture houses of that city, soliciting their co-operation in the "Swat the Fly" campaign. The suggestion given in the letter was that the moving picture houses should give a free ticket to the children for a certain amount of flies killed.

The Cambria Theater at the northeast corner of 25th and Cambria streets has been sold by the owners, Sachmaier & Grelis, to a purchaser who is not disclosed. The theater has not yet been completed, and is on a lot 124 feet 5 inches, by 60 feet. The property is assessed at $40,000 unfinished.

The H. B. B. Moving Picture Manufacturing Company, 2233-35 Vine Street, has made a contract with the B. F. Keith's Theater to supply them with moving picture films of the local current events. The new system will allow the happenings of the day to be flashed upon the screen within 24 hours of their having occurred. The company has made plans with the Philadelphia News Service, to supply a reporter to go with the cameramen of the company when any unusual happening is to take place to aid in the taking of the picture.

Preparations are being made by the moving picture theater owners of this city for the coming annual convention of the Pennsylvania Branch No. 3 Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America to be held Tuesday and Wednesday, July 23 and 24, in Reading, Pa. The days on which the convention is to be held were selected at a meeting of the State executive committee of the league. Important subjects will be discussed at the state sessions and resolutions passed, which will be brought before the National League at its convention in Dayton, Ohio, July 8th to 13th.

The Stanley Realty Company has taken title from Jules E. Mastbaum to the new Stanley Theater, on the south side of Market Street, west of 16th Street, lot 70 feet 4 inches, by an irregular depth. Conveyance was made subject to an annual ground rent of $1,000 and a mortgage of $25,000. The assessed valuation was $200,000.

Preliminary plans are under way for the construction of a moving picture house to be built at 2907-11 North 5th Street, for Lerick & Waldo. The building is to be of brick 45 by 100 feet, and will be one story high. Work will begin on the erection of the theater in the course of a week, and it will be rushed to completion.

J. Richard Jackson, Perry Building, Philadelphia, has been awarded the contract for the erection of a one-story brick, moving picture theater which is to be situated in Germantown; it is to measure 43 by 84 feet. The owner is Benjamin Haas.

Convention Hall, owned by the City of Philadelphia, has been leased at a rental of $100 per day to Henry W. Becker, of 1811 Oxford Street, for use as a moving picture theater. Mr. Becker is the promoter of this venture for a period of five months. The rental o fthis hall will not interfere with the Municipal Concerts which are given free every Thursday evening during the year by the Philadelphia Band. The hall has a seating capacity of 12,000 and it costs $6 an hour to light.

The Superintendent of Police, Robinson, of Philadelphia, has ordered that all moving picture films displayed at the local theaters, must be stamped with the following stamp of approval, "Approved by the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors"; if not they are not to be allowed to be exhibited. The police have strict orders that this message must be enforced. In this same message the street sergeants have been ordered to prohibit the display of sensational posters to be shown on the fronts of moving picture theaters in conjunction with the pictures.

Estimates are being prepared for the erection of a one-story moving picture theater situated at 707 Girard Avenue, Philadelphia. This structure will measure 40 by 100 feet and is being built for William Eckholds Sons, it is to have a seating capacity of 500.

A large number of the foremost building contractors are preparing estimates for the construction of a large combination theater and apartment house to be situated at 17th and Atlantic streets, for the Tioga Realty Company. One hundred and twenty by one hundred and twenty feet is to be the size of this large building. When completed it will have a seating capacity for 2000.

The Belmont Airdome, Forty-Fourth Street and Parkside Avenue opened on May 23 after extensive alterations where made to the building. The management secured the names of hundreds of would-be customers within a radius of eight squares of the theater and sent each person a free ticket good for any performance. The scheme proved to be a success, and the proprietors are planning to inaugurate several new advertising features to increase the attendance.

The Pennsylvania Congress of Mothers have indorsed the Smith-Hughes moving picture censor bill which is now before the House of Representatives, at Washington, D. C. The meeting of this association was held at the home of Mrs. George K. Johnson, president of the Pennsylvania Congress of Mothers, at 1302 Spruce Street, who is the organizer of this movement.

With a record attendance the doors of the new Globe theater, Juniper and Market streets, were opened June 1, for the first time. Vaudeville and moving pictures will be shown continuously from 11.30 a. m. to 11.30 p. m., with two distinct shows to be shown daily. The ideal position of the new structure insures its success, it being in the shadow of City Hall, and in the very heart of the shopping district. Nothing has been left undone to insure the comfort of its patrons, and it is considered one of the finest of the kind in the city. The wide and broad stage will permit the showing of the more pretentious productions, and the lighting arrangement is of the best. The orchestra will be under the direction of Charles Fitch, and a large pipe organ offers further possibilities to the music lover. A system of low air has been provided for the further comfort of the patrons during the summer months.

The Porter Phonet O'Scope Company, was recently incorporated in Philadelphia, for $1,500,000. This is a Delaware concern.

Application of the law requiring that all moving picture films be approved by the State Board of Censors, which law was to have become effective on the first of June, will be suspended in the case of the concerns whose cases are pending in court. Assistant Deputy Attorney-General Morris Wolf said, "The State has agreed to withhold action until the fifteenth of June, and this is the understanding held also by George Q. Horwitz, who represents some of the concerns who have filed suits. In the meantime the picture companies will pay the fee of $2.50 for every thousand feet of film examined, with the understanding that if the law creating the Board of Censors should be declared unconstitutional they may recover their payments. While no request has been made the police of this city were notified of the agreement. Several days ago the police notified the moving picture proprietors that if they showed any films not bearing the stamp of approval they would be arrested. Whether action will be suspended on all pictures until that time has not yet been decided. The temporary offices and projecting rooms will be continued at their present location until they can be moved to a more prominent place near Twelveth and Market streets. So far there has been only one hundred films examined. This is enough to supply the city with films for about one day. Two of the manufacturers have refused to recognize the board and it is supposed that their films will be dealt with more severely than those of the other manufacturers who expressed willingness but have been slow to comply. As there are about two hundred picture theaters in Philadelphia, it will take considerable time to examine enough films to go around as the censors average about four reels a day. The Board has inspectors equipped with cards that entitle them to admission in any of the picture houses in the city, and they are busily at work inspecting all uncensored films.

In this connection the moving picture producers contend that they are not obliged to furnish a place where the films are to be examined. J. Louis Bretinger, the Chief of the Board, contends that this is the duty of the producers. They also question the right of Mr. Bretinger to charge for the examination of copies of films whose originals have been examined. They claim that one fee should cover all copies.

CONGDON.

NEW ENGLAND.

WORK has been started on Main Street, Pittsfield, Mass., where A. St. Leger is building a theater, to be devoted to moving pictures. Mr. St. Leger states that he will have a thoroughly modern house, and that he is not sparing expense to attain this end. A new theater is slated for Hartford, Conn., according to Jacob Rodesky, its promoter. The plans, which are now being made by C. J. Bailley, call for a 1200 seat house, on Grand Avenue, to be up-to-date and fireproof. Work on it will be started shortly.

The Moving Picture Operators' Union, Boston local 182, has received a report from its business agent, William Franke, to the effect that the Boston Central Labor Union has indorsed the local's desired 1915 wage scale and working agreement. He

Kathlyn Williams' Own Play

"The Leopard's Foundling"

Written, Directed and Acted by

"Kathlyn" Herself

Supported by Chas. Clary, Thos. Santschi, Baby Lillian Wade and others.

In Two Reels

Kathlyn Williams' genius is not confined to acting. She takes rank today with the leading scenario writers and motion picture producers of the world. In "The Leopard's Foundling" she has produced a play that in jungle dangers and tense dramatic climaxes rivals the most thrilling scenes in the entire "Adventures of Kathlyn" series. This play will be released June 29th—two weeks after the release of the final reel of "The Adventures of Kathlyn"—a fitting climax to that great series of plays.

Millions of motion picture fans, captivated by the sweetness and daring, the exquisite grace and beauty of Kathlyn Williams, will flock to see this play. The name of KATHLYN WILLIAMS alone insures a stupendous popularity.

BOOK EARLY

Released June 29th

through General Film Company

Two Reels

Kathlyn Williams is the idol of millions. No exhibitor, whether he has shown "The Adventures of Kathlyn" or not, can afford NOT to show "THE LEOPARD'S FOUNDLING." BOOK EARLY.

Selig Polyscope Company

CHICAGO

also reported that the new Exeter Street theater, Boston, has given notice through itse manager, that it does not want union help. Mr. Franke also stated that a Spiritualistic minister was doing the operating at the Exeter Street theater. A committee has been named to ascertain if the laws are being complied with at this house.

Mr. Matthew Kennedy has secured a lease of the new building on Greens Street, Worcester, Mass., and intends to use the rear portion of it for a moving picture house.

The Moving Picture Operators' Union, local assembly number 3030, and affiliated with the Knights of Labor, is now located at Room 4, 446 Tremont Street, Boston. The union is in opposition to the regular Boston local, and was formed recently.

J. M. Goodwin of the Acme Amusement Co., has opened his new summer theater at Belgrade Lakes, Me. The house seats about 700, and will be devoted to moving pictures. Mr. Goodwin is also part owner of theaters in Hallowell, Vinal Haven, Kennebunk and Kennebunkport, Me., and reports good business in each of his houses.

A new theater is scheduled for West Lynn, Mass., to be known as the Federal. This house will seat about 800, and will be devoted to moving pictures only. Plans have been completed for J. Dooley, the promoter of the house and work is to be started next month.

According to report, Nathan Gordon and his associates will soon have a theater in New Haven, Conn. The location is on Temple Street, and work is to be started at once on the house, which will be a large and expensive one; devoted to vaudeville and moving pictures. It is also reported that Mr. Gordon has secured property on Central Square, Cambridge, Mass., upon which a large theater is to be built.

George Tilton is about to build a three-story building at Tilton, N. H., and will use the ground floor as a moving picture house. Work is scheduled to start immediately.

Poli's new theater will open June 1 at Hartford, Conn., playing high-class vaudeville and moving pictures. The new house will seat 1150 on the main floor and 1350 in the balcony and gallery. The stage is large and the theater is strictly up-to-date and modern. This gives Mr. Poli three theaters in Hartford.

Samuel Kantor, manager of Lockwood's Hall and the Pleasant Hour Theaters, Bridgeport, Conn., has secured the property adjoining the Norwalk Club building, and will build a theater there.

A recent incorporation is the Whalom Recreation Co., of Fitchburg, Mass. The promoters of this $9000 company are William Berger, Dora Berger, A. Royal and Abner Cohan.

A new theater is to be built at Manchester, N. H., to be situated at Elm and Central Streets. The house will seat about 700, and work on it will be started next month, according to plans.

I. H. Stoddard intends to have a moving picture theater at Webster Square, Worcester, Mass., as he has acquired the Coes estate there, and will use part of it for a theater. Work is to be started soon.

The question of whether moving pictures will be allowed at Savin Rock, a large amusement resort near New Haven, Conn., is again a feature of interest thereabouts. The question applies to Sunday shows only. The advent of Attorney Martin, as prosecution for the town of Orange, Conn., means that this matter will again be thrashed out, and from present indications will be carried to the highest court in Connecticut, before the final decision is given. An old blue law is the cause of the trouble, which is pretty nearly the most serious one ever before exhibitors of this state. A little while ago this old blue law was enforced against J. De Waltoff, owner of the Orpheum theater at New Haven, who had opened his theater on Sunday. At the local court in Orange, Mr. De Waltoff was adjudged guilty of violating the Sunday law, and had to suffer a fine of $10 and costs. This was appealed, and in the Court of Common Pleas, Mr. De Waltoff obtained a verdict acquitting him of breaking the law. After this the Orpheum was open for business every Sunday, without being troubled. This brings the story down to a few weeks ago, when the police again became active and again made trouble for the Orpheum and various other houses. The matter was again brought into court, and the ruling was to the effect that these theaters could remain open on Sundays, if the houses were conducted in a manner suited to the Sabbath. For the third time the Sunday question has come to life, and the case will be fought to a finish, as Attorney Martin is expected to thresh the matter out in the highest court, in order that the exhibitors may know once and for all, just what they may do on Sunday. Heretofore Attorney O'Keefe had refused to prosecute these cases. The matter is of prime importance to Savin Rock, where the moving picture theaters always do a large Sunday business, and the final settlement of the matter is now being watched with intense interest.

The Acme Amusement Company has installed a new Power's 6A machine in its theater at Belgrade Lakes, Me., and another Power's 6A at Kennebunk. The Universal Boston offices made this sale.

H. M. Keith has closed his Columbian Hall, Maplewood, Mass., for the summer season. Mr. Keith found trade very good the past winter, and intends to re-open Columbian Hall in August.

Charles Barnes has succeeded the old owners of the Broadway, Somerville, Mass., and will continue the house as a moving picture theater.

Jacob Lurie has decided to open his new Modern Theater, Washington Street, Boston, with the Jesse Lasky feature production "The Squaw Man." The Modern is now nearly ready to open, and intends to run feature pictures of the highest possible quality, and probably will use no vaudeville. The house seats about 800, and will be one of the best of its size in New England.

E. C. Farrington, proprietor of the Princess theater, Brattleboro, Vt., finds business holding up well, and at present is holding a contest, with a pony as the first prize.

The Moving Picture Operators' Union, Boston local 182, has elected Business Agent William Franke, Vice-President Max, and John Williams as delegates to the Theatrical Stage Employes Union's district convention at Springfield, Mass., on May 31.

It is rumored that Marcus Loew is negotiating for the string of theaters in New England owned by Julius Cahn. The circuit which is stated as being involved is as follows: Academy of Music, Fall River; Empire theater, Salem; Salem theater, Salem; Opera House, Lawrence; Opera House, Salem; Jefferson theater, Portland, Me., Empire theater, Lewiston, Me., and the Cahn house at Lowell, Mass.

Dan J. Sprague will again manage the moving picture theater at Lake Nipmuc, Mass., which will open on May 30. Mr. Sprague has been in charge here for some years, and always has a profitable season.

The Broadway Theater Company, Springfield, Mass., operating the Broadway theater, of which Dan D. Scullen is the manager, has entered into a contract with John Zanft, general manager of the William Fox enterprises, whereby Fox features will play the Broadway the last three days of each week.

Walter Lenahan, formerly in charge of the Gilmore theater, Springfield, Mass., is now at the helm of the Geisha theater there. He succeeds A. W. Atkins, who resigned to enter a traveling moving picture enterprise, with Frank Sloan.

Barron and O'Brien, managers of the Pavilion theater, Portland, Me., have closed this house for the summer, and open their Summer Pavilion at Peaks Island in its stead.

A. A. Hathaway, general manager of the Trimount Amusement Company, with executive offices at 689 Massachusetts Avenue, Cambridge, Mass., has under his supervision and direction the following theaters: Gorman, South Framingham; the Grand theater, Rutland, Vt.; the Shrine, also in Rutland; the Academy, Lowell, Mass.; Orpheum, Gardner, Mass.; the Princess, South Framingham, and the Lynn, Mass., theater. Mr. Hathaway stated that this latter house had recently been acquired from the Old South Theater Company, Boston, and that it was his present intention to run a burlesque policy here with vaudeville and pictures on Sundays. The Gorman theater at South Framingham, Mass., is to change its policy from stock shows to Universal pictures and special features. On the opening week at the Gorman, under the new policy, the Gorman featured the Universal's "Traffic in Souls" and "Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery," the Universal serial feature. Frank D. Stanton is the local manager here. The Grand theater, Rutland, is managed by Roger Flint, and has 700 seats. Mutual pictures and vaudeville forms the program at this house. The Shrine theater, same city, seats 1000, but at present is closed, and is being completely renovated and improved in many ways. The Academy at Lowell, is also "dark" for the summer season, and is being renovated and re-seated in anticipation of the fall, when pictures and vaudeville will be the policy. The Orpheum theater at Gardner, Mass., is playing to rapacity business, so Mr. Hathaway says, with "Lucille Love," "The Perils of Pauline" and "Mutual Movies," aided by three acts of good vaudeville. The Orpheum seats 1200 and is managed by James R. Somes. The Princess, South Framingham, is a 460 seat house, that plays to full houses with "The Perils of Pauline" and "Mutual Movies." George Sumter is the local manager. "The Million Dollar Mystery" is to be exploited at the Orpheum, at Gardner. Mr. Hathaway reports that the Trimount Theater Company is a Massachusetts corporation, chartered five years ago, with George A. Giles the treasurer, and S. F. Giles the president. The company has been a successful one in great part due to the intelligently directed efforts of Mr. Hathaway, who is numbered among the individuals who work 18 or 20 hours a day, without any "come-back." Every picture and act of vaudeville booked for this circuit, is first seen by Mr. Hathaway, who also makes it a point to spend one night each week at his various houses. Mr. Hathaway has built up a prosperous chain of theaters for his corporation, and in his interview with the World man remarked that "We are always looking for more theaters."

Frank McCormick, formerly associated with the Washington theater, Boston, has resigned, to take on a position with the Orpheum theater, Gardner, Mass.

Rock and Hayes have given out their contract for the building of their new theater at Marlboro, Mass., which is to seat 1200, with a policy of vaudeville and pictures.

A new theater is now going up at South Manchester, Conn., to seat about 1100. Owner Holl states that he has not as yet named the house, and may have a public contest to secure one, and at the same time, to stir up interest. South Manchester is a busy city, and at present there is but one other house there.

The local authorities at Chicopee, Mass., refused an application for a license to operate an airdome petitioned for by Mr. Mayhew.

John M. Carney, associated with the Goldstein Brothers, is now at Hampton Beach, where he is managing the local Goldstein theater for the summer season.

The pretty Geisha theater, Springfield, Mass., finds that its seating capacity is too small, and the house may be enlarged, as A. A. Steiger may secure the property adjoining the Geisha for this purpose.

The Reel theater, Springfield, is trying out a most decided novelty, in that it is waiving all regular admission charges, and advertises "free admittance." After each reel has been exhibited, however, the ushers collect one cent each from those in the audience.

For the fourth time in as many weeks the Broadway theater, Springfield, has changed its policy. The rapid changes were thusly: (1) Dramatic stock. (2) Musical stock. (3) Vaudeville and pictures. (4) Straight pictures. The next outlook here is three days of pictures and three days of stock.

Max Wolff has the Alhambra theater, Lowell, under new wing once more, and moving pictures and illustrated songs will hold forth at this house.

At Bangor, Me., the Palace and Star theaters have a new manager, and "Mutual Movies" are now shown at these houses. Arthur A. Allen, formerly in charge here, has left for Old Town, Me., where he will take charge of a new airdome being built by Mr. Davis.

Charles H. Benson reports that he has purchased Beedy's theater, West Lebanon, N. H., from Mr. Beedy, and intends to wake this house up.

"How Wild Animals Live" is shown at the Majestic theater, Boston this week, a regular "legitimate" house. The reels are lectured on by John W. Ruskin.

This week was a highly exciting one for exhibitors in Greater Boston, due to trouble between the exhibitors and the local Operators' Union over the signing of the new wage scale. On Tuesday night, May 26, officials of the local ordered operators to leave their posts at several theaters, including both of the Boston Olympias, the Beacon, Boston, and the Olympia at Cambridge. A meeting of the Moving Picture Exhibitors' League of Massachusetts was quickly called, and a committee of three was selected to talk the matter over with the Operators' Union. The net result of the conference was most satisfactory to both sides, and at this writing, May 30, it has been agreed upon that a new form of contract shall be drawn up, with the following as its salient points: (1) An arbitration clause, by which, in the event of any misunderstanding between the League and the Union, there shall be a conference to decide the trouble, made up of one member of the League and one from the Union, and the two to agree on a third party. (2) The contract is to run for three years from June 1, 1914. (3) All men expelled from the Local because of their refusal to strike when ordered to do so, shall be reinstated by the local. (4) The theaters shall reinstate in their employ the men who left at the order of the Union. (5) A day to mean seven hours' work. (6) The Sunday scale to be $4, with all overtime at 75 cents an hour. (7) Such contracts as were signed early in the week, to be void, as soon as the new one goes into effect. This tells in a nut shell what was the result of three days' work, both night and day by both sides. Another new point in the contract is the one that states that in event of a strike, one week's notice must be given to the exhibitors. This is to eliminate such a thing as happened to the Olympia at Cambridge, which was forced to close for the night, when the operators left, and refund the money to a large audience. At the present time, there is every indication that the trouble will be amicably settled.

The Universal's Boston offices have issued an eight page catalogue of their educational and social department. This is a tabulated list of 126 subjects, all of which come under this heading. This department is steadily growing, and is especially designed for churches, civic societies and similar organizations.

Charlie Sheafe has repurchased the Relay House, Bass Point, Mass., from W. E. Greene. Mr. Sheafe was the original owner and builder of this house, but later sold it to Mr. Greene, only to take it back again. Mr. Sheafe expects a mighty good business this summer.

Lincoln Park, Worcester, Mass., has opened for the summer season with "Antony and Cleopatra," a George Kleine feature in eight parts, and "Samson," the Universal's big special.

Annette Kellermann, who appears in "Neptune's Daughter," a Universal special, scored heavily at the Tremont theater, Boston, this week. The Tremont is a regular $2 house, that has bowed to the pulling power of moving pictures over the summer months. The opening week was highly successful, and the house was crowded to the doors, at 25 and 50 cent admission prices.

E. C. Wheeden and C. W. Typer, of 27 Exchange Street, Providence, R. I., say that they are about to build a one-story theater to cost about $35,000, which will be devoted to motion pictures.

The Globe theater, Boston, is now under the Marcus Loew banner, and started on June first. The Globe will play vaudeville and pictures, and the price in the morning and afternoon will be 5 cents for all seats, and 10 cents for all seats after 5 p. m.

E. G. Bullard of Pleasant Street, New Bedford, Mass., is having plans drawn up that will call for a moving picture theater, to cost $40,000. Mr. Bullard reports that he will spare no expense to have his house up-to-date and beautiful.

HENRY.

(Continued on Page 1574)

$500 FOR INFORMATION

Theatre Owners, Managers, Operators, or Anyone connected with Film Rental or Machine and Supply Business may be able to furnish the information we desire and participate in the distribution of the $500. ASK TODAY in a letter or on a postal card regarding the $500 OFFERED FOR INFORMATION.

THE MOTIOGRAPH is still the TOP NOTCHER FOR QUALITY in Motion Picture Machines.

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO., 564 West Randolph St., Chicago

Western Office: 833 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.

BIG ONES!!

TRADE MARK

NOW BOOKING

TRADE MARK

"BREWSTER'S MILLIONS" with Edward Abeles

"SEALED ORDERS" Seven Reels of Merit

"The BANKER'S DAUGHTER" Bronson Howard's Biggest Work

"NEPTUNE'S DAUGHTER" With Annette Kellermann

For Three Day and Full Week Stands

CELEBRATED PLAYERS FILM COMPANY

Leaders in Filmdom's Progress Schiller Building, 64 West Randolph Street, Chicago

We looked them all over and then bought

"THE HUMAN WOLVES"

A Remarkable Dramatic Classic in five parts. A photo-play that holds the attention from first to last. Thrilling situations. Great climaxes. All star cast, including Italy's greatest child actor.

We picked this picture on which to build our reputation as feature film people.

NEW YORK STATE EXHIBITORS

Write or wire your open time. We will rent or share. Complete line of advertising, including hand-tinted photos. Address

WILTWYCK FEATURE FILM CO., Inc.

HEADQUA ERS, KINGSTON, N. Y.

ATSCO, INC., Supplies Save You Money—Why?

Because only the highest grade of supplies are selected by our own experts at the factories—Projectors, fans, screens, fireproof booths and general equipment.

Because our experts are expert. These experts, during the past week, have made installations in Pittsburgh, Niagara Falls, Buffalo, Boston, Des Moines, Seattle and other points.

Because with installation made by these experts---you are guaranteed full value of the equipment---giving you the benefit of varied experience not possessed by the usual dealer.

Summary: ATSCO supplies save you money in installation; guarantee better use of the equipment; better satisfied audiences.

ATSCO Booths. These booths---sure to meet with the favor of the underwriters---safeguard your theatre---lower in cost.

General Electric Co. have appointed ATSCO, Inc., as agents for their fans.

Buy your supplies of

ATSCO, INC.

(Complete equipment includes services of our experts)

218 WEST 42nd STREET Tel. 7170 Bryant NEW YORK CITY

Other Offices: Hartley Bldg., Pittsburgh; Nulsen Bldg., St. Louis; 3 Tremont Row, Boston. Factories, St. Louis and East Orange, N. J.

SEE NEXT PAGE FOR FREE $5.00 CREDIT COIN CONVENTION OFFER

Go Straight to the ATSCO Booth at the Exposition and get $5.00 FREE

It is said that gold coins cannot be sold at a discount. ATSCO will GIVE each exhibitor a credit coin. Fill in the coupon below and ask us.

REMEMBER: Nothing but the best will keep the ticket sellers busy. You can't have the best unless you show on a

Radium Gold Fibre Screen

Why?

Because the Radium Gold Fibre Screen (guaranteed for five years) giving the most perfect picture in the world, blends the lights.

Because light from a moving picture machine when it reaches the projection surface, isn't white --- it's golden. Other manufacturers of screens use a brilliant white surface. Result: a flickering and uncomfortable glare; empty front seats; money lost.

Summary: With the Radium Gold Fibre Screen, perfect picture —front seats filled—from one-third to one-half in current saved—money in your till.

How to obtain this $5.00 Credit Coin Free

Present this Coupon at the ATSCO Convention Booth, Grand Central Palace, New York City, June 8th to 13th, for a $5.00 Credit Coin entitling the holder to $5.00 worth of ATSCO Supplies free on his first order.

Be Sure to FILL OUT THE COUPON

ATSCO, INC.,
218 West 42nd Street, New York City.

Name .....

Address .....

City .....

Location of Theater .....

WATCH OUR AMERICAN PRODUCTIONS

FIVE A WEEK

RELEASES FOR WEEK BEGINNING JUNE 8th

Tuesday, SINGLE REEL COMEDY — BY TAXI TO FORTUNE
MIDDAY OR MIDNIGHT

Wednesday, THE LOVE STORY OF HER YOUTH
SINGLE REEL DRAMA

Thursday, HIS UNCLE'S DECEPTION
SINGLE REEL COMEDY

Thursday, TWO REEL DRAMA — QUITS

Saturday, TWO REEL COMEDY — THE MUMMY

AMERICAN COMEDIES

TUESDAY SINGLE REEL

Marian Swayne AND Joseph Levering

surrounded by one of the most perfectly balanced motion picture producing companies in America are regularly turning out comedies of the higher order to be released each week through the
GENERAL FILM COMPANY

VERY SOON

MELIES BRAND

"NEATH THE LION'S PAW"

IN THREE PARTS RELEASED JUNE 17th

A REAL THRILLER

RELEASED THROUGH GENERAL FILM CO.

MELIES G BRAND

APEX APEX APEX APEX APEX APEX APEX APEX

THE

PARAMOUNT

issue before the exhibitor today is to secure APEX thrillers ahead of his competitors.

APEX features sell on quality, without having to resort to a hot air combination to back them up. The public does that!

Why not be paramount, at the top—the APEX—of the picture business? The way is easy—

USE

APEX

FEATURES

APEX APEX APEX APEX APEX APEX APEX

FLA. GA. ALA. MISS. LA.

APEX FEATURE SERVICE
315 RHODES BUILDING
ATLANTA, GA.

TENN. N. C. S. C. VA.

AN ALPINE TRAGEDY

IN FIVE PARTS

A BEAUTIFUL TYROLEAN DRAMA, POWERFUL IN EVERY DEPARTMENT. EVERY EXHIBITOR ATTENDING THE CONVENTION IN NEW YORK NEXT WEEK SHOULD MANAGE TO GO SEE IT

ALL THE WONDERS OF THE MIGHTY ALPS COMBINED WITH A STORY OF PEASANT LIFE AND ROYALTY THAT IS RICH IN HUMANITY AND THRILLS

COMING

THE DEVIL'S EYE

HERE IS A PICTURE FULL OF NOVELTY, GINGER AND BIG EFFECTS—IN 4 PARTS

BROTHER AGAINST BROTHER

AN UNUSUALLY STRONG DRAMA OF RUSSIA, ACTED BY RUSSIANS IN RUSSIA

IN 4 PARTS

THE MIDNIGHT MARRIAGE

AS PLAYED BY WALTER HOWARD IN LONDON, AT THE LYCEUM THEATRE

IN 4 PARTS

APEX FILM CO.

NEW YORK OFFICE
145 WEST 45th STREET
P. P. CRAFT, MANAGER

EUROPEAN OFFICE
H. WINIK—35 LITTLE
NEWPORT ST., LONDON

HUGH HOFFMAN

IMPORTANT

¶ Attention is directed to the fact that the Goodwin Film & Camera Company have granted us the right and license to import, use and sell to others to be sold or used during the life of the United States Letters Patent No. 610861 (the so-called Goodwin Patent) both AGFA and GEVAERT cinematograph or motion picture film.

This action on our part has been prompted mainly by our desire to relieve our customers of any concern that may have been caused by any claims made in the past or that may be made in the future, to the effect that film purchased from us infringed upon such patent.

We shall continue as heretofore to market AGFA and GEVAERT negative and positive motion picture films, which have become famous throughout the world for their superior photographic qualities.

Samples, etc., furnished gratis upon request

RAW FILM SUPPLY CO., SOLE AMERICAN AGENTS 15 East 26th Street, New York City

DEVELOPING and PRINTING
carefully done for professionals and amateurs.
The largest factory in the world devoted exclusively to
Manufacturing Commercial Moving Pictures
Prices and factory description sent at your request
INDUSTRIAL MOVING PICTURE CO.
Watterson R. Rothacker, Gen. Mgr.
223-233 West Erie Street, Chicago

The Best Investment in the Moving Picture business today
ADVERTISE
IN
THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

CALEHUFF SUPPLY COMPANY
(INCORPORATED)
Jobbers for Powers, Edison, Motiograph and Simplex
LARGEST LEADING SUPPLY HOUSE IN AMERICA

Mercury Arc Rectifier	Wagner Converters
Flame Arc Lamps	Brass and Wood Frames
Automatic Ticket Registers	Ticket Choppers
Exit Signs	Abestos State Booths
Slide Ink	Ft. Wayne Compensarcs
Carrying Cases	Fire Extinguishers
Tickets	Fire Boxes
Condensers	Carbons
Pianos	Cement
Chairs	Trap Drum Effects

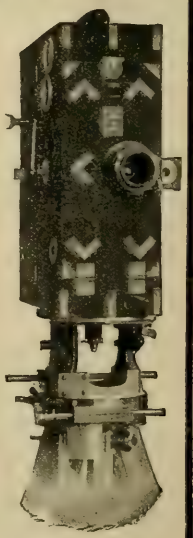
MIRROR SCREENS
PROMPT SHIPMENTS BACKED BY A SOLID GUARANTEE
A Few Slightly Used Machines
N. W. corner 13th and Race Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
THE FILM INDEX — EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Bound Volume No. 19
January to March, 1914
(THREE MONTHS)
NOW READY
$1.50 EACH—NET $1.50
Express Charges Collect

PUBLICATION OFFICE
Moving Picture World, 17 Madison Ave., N. Y. City

U. S. AGENT FOR
WILLIAMSON'S MOTION PICTURE CAMERAS



Perforators, Printing Machines and Tripods

Look for our Exhibit, Space 361 at the Exposition, Grand Central Palace

SEND FOR CATALOGUE
G. GENNERT
24-26 East 13th St., New York

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

Classified Advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted

ATTENTION.

If Stanley Port will communicate with Mrs. Ellen Stanley, 87 Washington St., Atlanta Ga., will hear something to his advantage.

SITUATIONS WANTED.

I WANT.—The management of a picture or picture and vaudeville house, in town or city of competition. Hudson or Mohawk Valley preferred. 10 years' experience. Address J. R., care of Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

CAMERAMAN.—Exceptional artistic and technical education, desires position. Experienced in educational, industrial and studio films. First class references. F. C., care of Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

ASSISTANT—In moving picture theatre. General all around man. Experienced in theater and electrical work. Nominal salary asked. Address ASSISTANT, c/o M. P. World, N. Y. City.

MANAGER—See my display ad in another part of this paper. MACK, c/o M. P. World, Chicago, Ill.

CAMERAMAN—Expert with own outfit, still photographer, darkroom worker, lantern slide maker, etc., wants position. NORTON, 110 East 11th St., N. Y.

PIANIST—Long experience all lines. Expert sight reader. A. F. of M. Strictly reliable, neat appearance. State salary and hours. Ticket over one hundred miles. R. VALENTINE, Gen. Del., Chicago, Ill.

SALES AND ADVERTISING MANAGER—A-1 record. Highest references. Address A. F. M., c/o Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

HELP WANTED.

AGENTS WANTED.—For atlas work, map work and Mexican War map. Unusual opportunities for intelligent men with ability to sell. Write for particulars. RAND, McNALLY & CO., Dept. B, Chicago, Ill.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES.

FOR RENT—TWO VACANT LOTS—In fine location for an open air moving picture show at 107-109 Third Place, Brooklyn. Inquire WM. ANKER, 151 Hamilton St., Albany, N. Y.

PACK YOUR THEATER.—Simple plan brings capacity business every time. No premiums. No goods to buy. Good for small house, large house, small town, large town, anywhere, anytime, any admission price. Especially good for moving picture theatres, also vaudeville. Can be used one to three times a week, indefinitely. Dead easy; no ability required. No experience. Patrons delighted. Results guaranteed. Be first in your town. Write quick. W. GRAVER, Mgr., Colonial Amusement Co., Jackson, Mich.

ANYONE HAVING.—"Features" of four or more reels, with rights in either Montana, Idaho or Washington correspond with me. I will handle them on commission and secure you more clear cash than you could sell outright for. JAS. H. MILLER, Sandpoint, Idaho.

WANTED, PARTNER.—On ground floor subscriptions to promote incorporating "Perfection Film Mechanism." Universally patented which eliminates rewindings, conserves photo surfaces, simplifies exchange examination. A time labor money-saving device. Address BARRIE, 154 3rd Ave., New York City.

FOR LEASE.—Five or ten years, desirable ground for picture theater. Exceptional opportunity for right parties. Best location. Land will accommodate theater holding eight hundred seats. Address F. H. MYERS, 149 Westfield Ave., Bridgeport, Conn.

THEATERS FOR SALE OR RENT.

FOR SALE OR RENT.—Seating capacity 300 to 1,200, some suitable for vaudeville, guaranteed O. K., with Chicago Ventilation Ordinance. HUME, Room 513, 608 So. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

WANTED, TO RENT.—Theater for moving pictures. Quality will be our motto and where 10-cent admission can be charged. G. O. COOK, Dunbar, Wis.

MOVING PICTURE THEATER.—In central New York, bargain if sold immediately; good reason for selling. Money maker, low rent. GEM THEATER, Camden, N. Y.

FOR SALE OR RENT.—Large theater, 1500 capacity, equipped with the latest improvements for any amusement. M. G., care Moving Picture World, New York City.

FOR SALE.—Motion picture theater in college and tourist city of 12,000. Best location in the city, seating capacity about 500; 10-cent admission; first class equipment; fine house throughout; must sell at once; $2,900, $1,900 to handle. REX THEATER, Boulder, Colo.

MOTION PICTURE THEATER.—For sale or lease. Just built; seating capacity 1,000. Fully equipped, two machines and stage. In the best and fastest growing section of Bridgeport. Corner space for airdrome. Property valued at $17,000. Reason for selling, ill health. Address J. P. DIVER, 65 Marion St., Bridgeport, Conn.

PICTURE THEATERS.—If you wish to buy or have one for sale in any section of the center West, write THE PHOTOPLAY INVESTMENT CO., Muscatine, Iowa.

PRETTY NEW THEATER.—Just opened, only one in town, owner cannot operate. $500 cash. POSTMASTER, Roswell, Ga.

FOR SALE.—Vaudeville and moving picture theater located near Philadelphia, showing weekly profit of $125 to $175. Price $5,000 cash. No time for triflers. L. T., care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

AUDITORIUM.—Glen Ellyn, Ill., 25 miles west of Chicago, population 2,600. First class projecting outfit complete. Rent 70 of theater, lights, piano, seats (450) and service, $5 per night, at present showing Tuesdays and Fridays; investigate. S. M. BOWDEN, Glen Ellyn.

FOR SALE.—Moving picture theater in West Virginia town, furnished complete, building included. This theater has cleared over $2,500 in the last year; no opposition, books open for your inspection; best reason for selling; the opportunity of a lifetime, act quick. First man will buy this. Address D. F., care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

FOR SALE.—Only picture theater in town of 5,000 population. Doing good business. Address J. C. N., care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

BRASS POSTER FRAMES.—For one, three and six-sheets. Also brass easels, brass railings. Write for complete catalog. THE NEWMAN MFG. CO., Cincinnati, O. 101 4th Ave., N. Y.

50 STYLE SIGNS for moving picture theaters. Samples mailed free. Cut prices. We pay express charges anywhere. JORDAN SHOW PRINT, 320 W. Superior St., Chicago, Ill.

ALWAYS ON HAND.—Slightly used moving picture machines and chairs, at a bargain. WESTERN FILM BROKERS, 37 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES.—For sale, for rent and exchange, in first-class condition. CHICAGO MOVING PICTURE SUPPLY CO., 37 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

FOR SALE.—Any part of my moving picture theatre; opera chairs 65c. each, Simplex machines $125; Power's 6A $100; all goods used three months, have many other bargains in other fixtures. A. GLEN, Room 200, Houser Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

FOR THEATRE EQUIPMENTS.—Such as seats, picture machines, etc., see LEARS THEATRE SUPPLY CO., 509 Chestnut St., St. Louis, Mo.

NEW AND SECOND HAND CHAIRS.—At cut prices. Equipments bought and sold. We save you money on outfits. Designs and plans free. JOS. REDINGTON, Scranton, Pa.

ARC LAMPS.—13-10 amp. Westingehuse. 1-10 amp. Excello, 1-3 amp. Daylight, D. C. Flaming Arc Lamps, 2-10 amp. Westinghouse, 3-5 amp. Stilvan, and 1-10 amp. Siemens-Schuckert, A. C. Flaming Arc Lamps, $10 each F. O. B. Milwaukee, Wis. COMMONWEALTH POWER CO.

75 THEATER CHAIRS.—Mahogany finish, used short time, 75 cents each. SCHULER BROS., 777 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y.

FOR SALE.—A Pathe Head complete and ready to use. Address MGR. LYRIC THEATER, Fort Wayne, Ind.

ENTIRE EQUIPMENT.—Of a moving picture house, compelled to vacate on account of owners wishing to build. 2 machines, Powers 6A, practically new, complete with fine lenses. 300 chairs, 1 Mirrored Screen, 2 large billboards, 3 fire extinguishers, 1 marble outside ticket office. Will be sold at a sacrifice. Apply J. A. COHEN, 387 Main St., Springfield, Mass.

CAMERAS FOR SALE.

FOR SALE.—Camera, tripod, complete. American Cinematograph. Zeiss 3.5-72 M. M. lens. 4 magazines, 200 foot capacity. All in fine condition. $250. CAMERA MAN, care of Moving Picture World, Chicago, Ill.

PROFESSIONAL MOVING PICTURE CAMERAS.—Two sizes. Tripods, Zeiss-Tessar 50 m. lenses, $150, $225. Special cameras to order. Repairing all makes. R. W. PITTMAN, 50 West St., New York City.

ERNEMAN.—Prestwich, Moy, Jenkins new and second hand. Free instruction. RAY, 326 5th Ave., New York City.

FILMS WANTED.

WANTED.—To buy single and multiple reel subjects. Must be in strictly first class condition and all with paper, positively no junk wanted. Western, Indian and sensational subjects preferred. INDEPENDENT FILM & SUPPLY CO., Plaza Theatre Bldg., San Antonio, Texas.

WANTED.—Good commercial reels, must be in A. No 1 condition. Address BOX C, Landisburg, W. Va.

FILMS FOR SALE OR RENT.

We HAVE—A large quantity of fine films for sale at average price of five dollars per reel. Will ship C. O. D. with right of examination on receipt of express agent's guarantee to pay all express charges or on receipt of cash. State quantity wanted and we will make best possible selection for your approval. NORTH AMERICAN FILM CORP., West Depot St., Knoxville, Tenn.

ATTENTION!—Traveling showman, 300 reels film for sale, and moving picture machines, at a bargain. WESTERN FILM BROKERS, 37 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

FILM SERVICE.—At low rental price of all the leading makes. INDEPENDENT FILM EXCHANGE, 37 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

MISCELLANEOUS.

FILMS AND MOVING PICTURE MACHINES.—For anything else in that line. WESTERN FILM BROKERS, 37 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

LANTERN SLIDES.—Made of your good negatives, only 35c. each. $3.50 per dozen post paid. Prompt satisfactory work guaranteed. LINEBARGER, P. O. Box 289, Phoenix, Ariz.

PIANISTS.—Send 25c. for 20 pieces of descriptive music, also how to obtain music for 2c. a copy. E. A. AHERN, Mus. Dir. Isis Theatre, Twin Falls, Ida.

1914 GRAVES—Moving Picture Theatre Directory, containing over 14,000 moving picture theaters and film exchanges, alphabetically arranged by state and town. $5.00 prepaid. NATIONAL TRADE DIRECTORY PUBLISHERS, 1000 N. Grand Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

THREE BIG FORMULAS—Film cement holds all makes perfectly. Curtain coating is fireproof. Moving picture machine oil fine grade. All for $1.00. Guaranteed or money back. EUGENE JORDA, Waco, Texas, Route No. 2.

MOVING PICTURE—Photography; practical camera instruction by an experienced cameraman. RAY, 326 5th Ave., N. Y. City.

Calendar of Licensed Releases

Current Releases

MONDAY, JUNE 8th, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—The Ethics of the Profession (Dr.).....
EDISON—The Tango in Tuckerville (Comedy).....
KALEM—Nina of the Theater—First of the Alice Joyce Series (Special—2 parts—Drama).....
PATHE—Woof! Watch Whiffles (Com.).....
—Picturesque Scandinavia (Travel).....
SELIG—Judge Dunn's Decision (Spec.—2 parts—Dr.)..
—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 29 (News)..
VITAGRAPH—Eve's Daughter (Drama) .....

TUESDAY, JUNE 9th, 1914.

CELIO—The Trap-Door Clue (Special—2 parts—Dr.)..
EDISON—The Voice of Silence (Drama).....
ESSANAY—Jane (Comedy) .....
LUBIN—The Pie Eaters (Comedy).....
—He Wore a Wig (Comedy).....
MELIES—By Taxi to Fortune (Comedy).....
—Midday or Midnight? (Comedy).....
PATHE—The Poison of Serpents (Edu.) .....
—River Travel in Indo-China (Travel).....
SELIG—Eugenics At Bar "U" Ranch (Comedy).....
VITAGRAPH—The Right of Way (Spec.—2 parts—Dr.)

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 10th, 1914.

EDISON—Andy Goes A-Pirating—Seventh of the Andy Series (Comedy) .....
ESSANAY—This Is the Life (Comedy).....
KALEM—The Quicksands (Special—2 parts—Drama)..
LUBIN—The Changeling (Special—2 parts—Drama)...
MELIES—The Love Story of Her Youth (Dr.).....
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly, No. 40, 1914 (News).....
SELIG—The Doctor's' Mistake (Drama).....
VITAGRAPH—The Widow of Red Rock (Comedy)...

THURSDAY, JUNE 11th, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—A. Jonah (Comedy).....
ESSANAY—The Snakeville Volunteer (Comedy).....
LUBIN—The Lure of the Pit (Spec.—2 parts—Dr.).....
MELIES—His Uncle's Deception (Comedy).....
—Quits (Spec.—Two parts—Drama).....
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 30 (News)..
VITAGRAPH—The Power to Forgive (Drama).....

FRIDAY, JUNE 12th, 1914.

EDISON—A Warning From the Past (Special—2 parts —Drama) .....
ESSANAY—The Song in the Dark (Spec.—2 parts—Dr.)
KALEM—The Box Car Bride (Comedy).....
LUBIN—Claim Number Three (Drama).....
SELIG—Bombarded (Comedy) .....
—Doc Yak's Zoo (Picture Cartoon).....
VITAGRAPH—The Accomplished Mrs. Thompson (Comedy) .....

SATURDAY, JUNE 13th, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—The Opal's Curse (Dr.).....
EDISON—A Terror of the Night—Ninth of the Active Life of "Dolly of the Dailies" Series (Drama).....
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy and the Mine Shark (Dr.)..
KALEM—The Squaw's Revenge (Drama).....
LUBIN—He Changed His Mind (Comedy).....
—A Bargain Automobile (Comedy).....
MELIES—The Mummy (Spec.—2 parts—Comedy).....
SELIG—When the Night Call Came (Drama).....
VITAGRAPH—Our Fairy Play (Spec.—2 parts—Dr.)..

Advance Releases

MONDAY, JUNE 15th, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—The Prize Employer (Comedy).....
—Brown's Bachelor Supper (Comedy).....
EDISON—The Adventure of the Missing Legacy (Sixth of "Octavius Amateur Detective" Series) (Comedy)
KALEM—Mrs. Peyton's Pearls (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
PATHE—Whiffles, The Spotter (Comedy).....
—Cournailles Brittany, France (Travel).....
SELIG—The Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 13 (The Court of Death) (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 31 (News)...
VITAGRAPH—The Crime of Cain (Drama).....

TUESDAY, JUNE 16th, 1914.

CINES—One Woman's Way (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
EDISON—The Gap (Sixth of "The Man Who Disappeared" Series) (Drama).....
ESSANAY—The Little "He and She" (Comedy-Drama)
KALEM—The Missing Jewels (Drama).....
LUBIN—The Shell Comb Industry (Industrial).....
—Good Cider (Comedy).....
MELIES—On the Beach (Comedy).....
PATHE—Simple Experiments In Electricity (Educational) .....
—Through the Bosphorus (Turkey) (Travel)...
SELIG—How Lone Wolf Died (Drama).....
VITAGRAPH—A Wayward Daughter (Special—Two parts—Comedy-Drama) .....

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 17th, 1914.

EDISON—A Modern Samson (Comedy).....
—On the Steps (Comedy).....
ESSANAY—The Fable of the Brash Drummer and the Nectarine (Comedy) .....
KALEM—Home Run Baker's Double (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
LUBIN—The Struggle Everlasting (Special—Two parts —Drama) .....
MELIES—At the Mercy of the Waves (Drama).....
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly, No. 41, 1914 (News).....
SELIG—Castles in the Air (Drama).....
VITAGRAPH—The Ladies' War (Comedy).....

THURSDAY, JUNE 18th, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—Her Neighbors Next Door (Drama).....
ESSANAY—The Wooing of Sophie (Western—Comedy)
LUBIN—The House of Darkness (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
MELIES—Hidden Death (Two parts—Drama).....
—His Dream Fulfilled (Comedy).....
—Everybody's Doing It (Comedy).....
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 32 (News)...
VITAGRAPH—Only a Sister (Drama).....

FRIDAY, JUNE 19th, 1914.

EDISON—The Hand of Horror (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
ESSANAY—Finger Prints (Special—Two parts—Drama)
KALEM—The Wages of Sinn (Comedy) .....
—Military Tattoo at Aldershot, England (Top.)
LUBIN—The Parent Strain (Drama).....
SELIG—Peter's Relations (Comedy).....
—Chickens (Comedy) .....
VITAGRAPH—The Persistent Mr. Prince (Comedy)...

SATURDAY, JUNE 20th, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—By the Old Dead Tree (Drama).....
EDISON—In the Days of Slavery (Drama).....
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy—Outlaw (Drama).....
KALEM—Brought to Justice (Drama).....
LUBIN—Getting Solid With Pa (Comedy).....
—Long May It Wave (Comedy).....
MELIES—Pills and Pills (Two parts—Comedy).....
SELIG—The Girl At His Side (Drama).....
VITAGRAPH—Father's Flirtation (Special—Two parts —Comedy) .....

WEEK'S SUPPLY IN ONE SHIPMENT IN ADVANCE. SONG SLIDES ADD VARIETY TO YOUR SHOW. WRITE FOR SPECIAL SUMMER PRICES
AMERICAN SLIDE & POSTER CO. First National Bank Building, Chicago
BEST SONG SLIDE SERVICE IN AMERICA

Klaw & Erlanger

PRESENTING

Well-Known Plays in MOTION PICTURES

PRODUCED IN

BIOGRAPH

STUDIOS

ANNOUNCE

Strongheart

IN THREE PARTS

A remarkable motion picture portrayal of one of America's greatest dramatic successes

Following the talked about previous releases

THE FATAL WEDDING

IN THREE PARTS

CLASSMATES

IN FOUR PARTS

BILLIONAIRE

IN THREE PARTS

BOOKED THROUGH GENERAL FILM COMPANY EXCLUSIVELY

Special photographs and two styles of one and three sheet posters and three styles of eight sheet posters available

Calendar of Independent Releases

Universal Film Mfg. Co.

SUNDAY, JUNE 7th, 1914.

CRYSTAL—No Release This Day.
ECLAIR—A Marriage for Money (Comedy)
—Society at Simpson Center (Comedy)
REX—Closed Gates (Drama)

MONDAY, JUNE 8th, 1914.

IMP—The Man Who Lost, But Won (2 parts—Drama)
POWERS—The Undertow (Drama)
VICTOR—Uncle Sam In Mexico (Top. and Edu.)

TUESDAY, JUNE 9th, 1914.

CRYSTAL—His Lucky Day (Comedy)
GOLD SEAL—Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery—Series No. 9 (2 parts—Drama)
UNIVERSAL IKE—Universal, Jr. Is Kept From Being An Actor (Comedy)

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 10th, 1914.

ECLAIR—Wife (2 parts—Drama)
JOKER—Mike Searches For His Long Lost Brother (Comedy)
NESTOR—A Wife On a Wager (Drama)
UNIVERSAL—Animated Weekly, No. 118 (News)

THURSDAY, JUNE 11th, 1914.

IMP—Across the Atlantic (3 parts—Drama)
REX—The Awakening (Drama)
STERLING—When Smaltz Loves (Comedy)

FRIDAY, JUNE 12th, 1914.

NESTOR—Sophie of the Films (Comedy—Series No. 2)
POWERS—The Masked Rider (Drama)
VICTOR—Enmeshed by Fate (2 parts—Drama)

SATURDAY, JUNE 13th, 1914.

101 BISON—The Isle of Abandoned Hope (2 parts—Dr.)
JOKER—The Cure (Comedy)

SUNDAY, JUNE 14th, 1914.

ECLAIR—Aunty's Money Bag (Comedy-Drama)
FRONTIER—His Dress Rehearsal (Drama)
REX—The Pursuit of Hate (Drama)

MONDAY, JUNE 15th, 1914.

IMP—The Baited Trap (Two parts—Drama)
STERLING—Kids (Comedy)
VICTOR—The Sandhill Lovers (Western Comedy)

TUESDAY, JUNE 16th, 1914.

CRYSTAL—Boxes and Boxers (Comedy)
—Foolish Lovers (Comedy)
GOLD SEAL—Lucille Love, The Girl of Mystery (Series No. 10) (Dr.)
UNIVERSAL IKE—Universal Ike Jr. Bearly Won Her (Comedy)

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 17th, 1914.

ECLAIR—The Mask of Affliction (Two parts—Western Drama)
JOKER—The Fatal Letter (Comedy)
NESTOR—'Cross the Mexican Line (Western Drama).
UNIVERSAL—Animated Weekly, No. 119 (News)

THURSDAY, JUNE 18th, 1914.

IMP—The Fatal Step (Drama)
REX—The Law Unto Himself (Two parts—Drama)
STERLING—A Jealous Husband (Comedy)

FRIDAY, JUNE 19th, 1914.

NESTOR—Sophie of the Films (Series No. 3) (Comedy)
POWERS—The Brand of Cain (Drama)
VICTOR—A Singular Cynic (Two parts—Com.)

SATURDAY, JUNE 20th, 1914.

101 BISON—The Forbidden Room (Three parts—Drama)
JOKER—A Quiet Day at Murphy's (Comedy)

Mutual Film Corporation

SUNDAY, JUNE 7th, 1914.

KOMIC—The Last Drink of Whiskey (Comedy)
MAJESTIC—The Intruder (2 parts—Drama)
THANHOUSER—The Scrub Lady (Comedy)

MONDAY, JUNE 8th, 1914.

AMERICAN—The Oath of Pierre (Two parts—Drama)
KEYSTONE—(Title Not Announced)
RELIANCE—Our Mutual Girl, No. 21

TUESDAY, JUNE 9th, 1914.

BEAUTY—Nancy's Husband (Drama)
MAJESTIC—Her Birthday Present (Drama)
THANHOUSER—Rivalry (Two parts—Drama)

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 10th, 1914.

AMERICAN—Sparrow of the Circus (Drama)
BRONCHO—A Tragedy of the Orient (Two parts—Dr.)
RELIANCE—The Cowboy's Chicken Dinner (Drama)

THURSDAY, JUNE 11th, 1914.

DOMINO—A Relic of Odd Japan (Two parts—Drama).
KEYSTONE—(Title Not Yet Announced)
MUTUAL—Mutual Weekly, No. 76 (News)

FRIDAY, JUNE 12th, 1914.

KAY-BEE—From Out the Dregs (Two parts—Drama)
PRINCESS—The Toy Shop (Drama)
RELIANCE—Dan Morgan's Way (Drama)

SATURDAY, JUNE 13th, 1914.

KEYSTONE—(Title Not Yet Announced)
RELIANCE—The Horse Wrangler (Two parts—Drama)
ROYAL—Handle With Care (Comedy)

SUNDAY, JUNE 14th, 1914.

KOMIC—Hubby to the Rescue (Comedy)
MAJESTIC—The Rebellion of Kitty Bell (Two parts—Drama)
THANHOUSER—The Girl Across the Hall (Drama)

MONDAY, JUNE 15th, 1914.

AMERICAN—Jim (Two parts—Drama)
KEYSTONE—(Title Not Yet Announced)
RELIANCE—Our Mutual Girl No. 22

TUESDAY, JUNE 16th, 1914.

BEAUTY—The Dream Ship (Drama)
MAJESTIC—Their First Acquaintance (Drama)
THANHOUSER—Remorse (Two parts—Drama)

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 17th, 1914.

AMERICAN—The Unmasking (Drama)
BRONCHO—The Hour of Reckoning (Two parts—Drama)
RELIANCE—The Peace Brand (Drama)

THURSDAY, JUNE 18th, 1914.

DOMINO—In the Southern Hills (Two parts—Drama)
KEYSTONE—(Title Not Yet Announced)
MUTUAL WEEKLY—Number 77 (News)

FRIDAY, JUNE 19th, 1914.

KAY-BEE—The Voice at the 'Phone (Part 1) (Two parts—Drama)
PRINCESS—The Little Senorita (Drama)
THANHOUSER—The Man Without Fear (Drama)

SATURDAY, JUNE 20th, 1914.

KEYSTONE—(Title Not Yet Announced)
RELIANCE—The Stolen Code (Two parts—Drama)
ROYAL—Such a Business (Comedy)
—The Busy Man (Comedy)

WHEN IN NEW YORK

VISIT THE Simplex FACTORY

Delegates and visitors to the New York Exposition at the Grand Central Palace and members of the trade who visit New York at any time, should avail themselves of our cordial invitation to call and see how Simplex projectors are built.

It is a revelation to see the many operations necessary on each little piece before it is ready to be assembled as a part of the whole machine. The wonderful care and precision exercised in each operation is a surprise to master mechanics as well as to the laymen.

Our system of inspection is also of interest and shows how impossible it is for an imperfect machine to leave our hands.

Simplex methods insure Simplex quality. A year's guarantee signed by our General Manager goes with each machine.

VISIT THE SIMPLEX FACTORY

If you cannot come to us, our new Catalog A will be sent to you upon request.

MADE AND GUARANTEED BY

THE PRECISION MACHINE CO. INC.

317 East 34th St. New York

(Continued from page 1560)

WASHINGTON, D. C.

HARRY CRANDALL has obtained a lease to the Casino Theater at Seventh and F Streets, Northwest, for the summer months. This house has been running vaudeville and moving pictures at popular prices. It is Mr. Crandall's intention of running a series of exclusive features, and will include "Samson," "The Sea Wolf," and similar features. He will run four shows daily, with admission at ten, twenty and thirty cents.

Ever since the inception of moving pictures, considerable pains have been expended looking to the comfort of the ladies, for it was the fair sex who were the patrons of the moving picture houses. At the present time, even at midday you can find a fair proportion of men in every audience and the exhibitors are beginning to take cognizance of the fact. Playing to the comfort of the men, the American Theater on Pennsylvania Avenue, Northwest, is about to install a smoking room for gentlemen, something never before heard of in the moving picture field of Washington. The room is to be fitted out in dark oak and is to be made most comfortable.

But this is not the only innovation, for the Palace Theater, on Ninth Street, Northwest, is to be run especially for men and smoking is to be allowed right on the floor. Ladies will be admitted only when accompanied by male escorts but their patronage, even under these conditions, will not be solicited. The theater is located in the heart of the business district and is accessible to men who wish to forget the trouble of business for an hour or so while viewing the pictures. To take care of the smoke problem, the ventilating system has been enlarged so that no trouble is expected in this respect.

Moore's Orpheum, on Ninth Street, closes this week and during the next two or three months it will be subjected to a complete overhauling. An entrance is to be cut through from Ninth Street which will lead to the present lobby of the D Street side. The interior is to be redecorated, a new lighting and a new ventilating system are to be installed and other changes are to be made which will give to the house a seating capacity of 2270. The house when completed, it is said, will be much like the Strand Theater in New York City, the architects of which have been in consultation with Mr. Moore. Upon reopening, singers are to be employed a stringed orchestra will furnish music while the pictures are being shown, while brass will be utilized for overtures. During the latter period a heavy plush curtain will be dropped over the screen and a fountain in the center of a hedge, behind which the musicians will be stationed, will be brought into play. Many other new stunts are promised which have not been made public.

It is rumored about the street that a new airdome will shortly come into being on Ninth Street, in the vicinity of Grant Place, which will have a seating capacity of more than one thousand. The airdome is to be enclosed by ornamental brick walls, will have a concrete flooring and will have everything that represents the latest word in equipment.

The present agitation concerning Sunday baseball in the National Capital, it is feared, may have an ill effect upon the moving picture industry. The granting of an injunction recently which precluded the stopping of a game by the police, which has since been made permanent, has caused a terrible upheaval in the missionary circles and an effort will be made to have blue laws enacted by Congress.

The assistance that is being given by the exhibitors to the school children of Washington in the campaign of the latter to secure playgrounds for the summer vacation period, is doing much to increase the popularity of the individual houses and of the moving picture form of amusement. Quite a number of exhibitors have been donating their theaters for one or more matinee exhibitions while the various exchanges are co-operating in furnishing suitable photoplays for the occasion. The youngsters sell the tickets and the proceeds are devotted to ground rentals and for playground equipment.

The Washington Star has arranged to print the programs of a large number of moving picture theaters in its amusement columns. On Saturdays will be printed the program for that day, and for Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, while on Wednesday will be shown the programs for the balance of the week. The Washington dailies have been devoting more or less space to the moving picture industry and sometimes a full page is so utilized, with the result that while the father and the boys are reading the pink sporting sheet, mother and the girls are perusing the moving picture news, and then all join in visiting a nearby theater.

The Cosmos theater will operate the Casino Country Store during such time as the Casino theater may remain under lease to Harry Crandall. The Cosmo theater is again proving to be a most popular house during the afternoons when the Washington baseball club is playing out of the city, for it is equipped with an electric scoreboard which appeals to the ball fans.

It is seldom that one sees a closed house and an airdome, adjoining each other, both filled to their respective capacities, but on Decoration Day night the Apollo Theater and Apollo Park, on H Street, Northeast, presented such a spectacle. Every seat in both places was occupied during the greater part of the evening, and there were many people standing waiting for the end of the show. "Tess of the Storm Country," with Mary Pickford starring, was one of the features. At the Apollo Park singers are being employed to good advantage.

Tom Moore, of the Orpheum, Garden, and other local theaters, played host to the members of the Famous Players while they were participating in the production of the "Little Gray Lady" in this city last week. The series of entertainments consisted of automobile rides around the city, theater parties, visits to the baseball park where a game between the Washington and Detroit teams was witnessed and to Glen Echo, an amusement park on the outskirts of the city, and a dinner which was preceded by an informal dance on the stage of the Orpheum theater. The guest list at the dinner-dance included Miss Jane Grey, Mrs. William Marshall, Mrs. Walker, Miss Kathleen Aamola, Miss Anna Fearnley, Mrs. Barbour, and Messrs. Francis Powers, director; Hal Clarendon, James Cooley, Edgar Davenport, Robert Cummings, William Marshall, Frank Andrews, Nat. Daverisch, and others.

Secretary of War Lindley M. Garrison is entitled to be considered as an amateur moving picture artist for he took one of the leading roles in what will be another near-war drama. As the Secretary was hurrying to the White House to attend a meeting of President Wilson's cabinet recently, seven-year-old "Matty" Roberts, a New York boy, dressed in the uniform of a soldier of the United States, and carrying a small gun, stepped up in a most soldierly fashion and, saluting, presented what perhaps might have been an important dispatch direct from our fighting troops in Mexico. Mr. Garrison gravely read the missive, saluted the tiny messenger, and both went on their respective ways.

The Electric Feature Film Exchange has opened a suite of very attractive offices in the Bank of Commerce and Savings Building in this city, and R. Ivins, who was connected with the New York office of the same concern. Mr. Worthington himself was formerly manager of the special feature branch of the General Film Company. Mr. Worthington has extended an invitation to all exhibitors in this territory to visit the offices and the exhibition room where the feature films will be thrown on the screen.

To A. Brylawski of 1912 Calvert Street, a prominent Washington exhibitor, has been delegated the duty of procuring a suitable moving picture entertainment in connection with the Fourth of July celebration in this city. He has been named to head the historical moving pictures committee by District Commissioner Oliver P. Newman.

LINZ.

PITTSBURGH.

A PLAN for segregation of the sexes is being considered by some of the proprietors of the larger moving picture houses in the down-town district of the city. The plan will become a temporary reality in the course of a week and if it proves a success it is likely that it will be taken up by all the moving picture houses down-town. A request was made to five managers to give a week's test to the idea, by Civilian Aide Archibald Mackrell, of the Department of Public Safety. The object of the plan is to seat the men in one section of the house and the women in another. The couples coming to the show would have a reserved section also. The most attractive feature of the segregation plan is the privilege granted the women of keeping their hats on in the women's section. This will not obstruct the men's view and will not put the women to the trouble of removing their hats. The conditions existing in the moving picture houses o Pittsburgh, it is thought by most managers, do not really demand such a measure, although most of them have indorsed the new plan providing that it is practicable.

Work on the construction of a new moving picture theater in New Castle, Pa., on Main Street, and been completed as far as the masonry work, and the operations on the building will be rushed to completion so as to have the new theater ready by the early part of June. G. Harris, proprietor of the new theater, is already making preparations for the opening week, and will give the patrons of the theater a special show throughout that week.

Permission has been granted J. Weinberger, of East Pittsburgh, to erect a tent to be used as an airdome during the summer months. The tent will be erected some where in East Pittsburgh. Mr. Weinberger will run feature films exclusively.

The leashold on the Lyric Theater, at 175 Pike Street, Cannonsburg, Pa., which still had a number of years to run has been sold. The moving picture theater was formerly owned by Francis A. Mackert. The entire theater and equipment has been taken over by J. D. Simpson at a cost of $4,800, and will be remodeled and improved in every way possible.

Another new moving picture theater is being erected in New Castle, Pa. The new theater will be located on Washington Street next to the Young Men's Christian Association. The building is nearing completion and to mark the opening occasion several feature films are being selected to be shown.

One of the chief features of the moving picture theater now being erected in Wampum, Pa., by Lewis Harris, will be the electric light equipment. The lighting of the theater will be worked out in a most attractive array, and the outside of the theater will be handsomely decorated with electric lights of many different colors. Work has been delayed on the erection of the building owing to the unsettled weather conditions that have been existing, but with the opening of the fair weather work has again resumed and will be rushed to completion.

MANLEY.

NORTHWESTERN NEW YORK.

THE New Lyric theater, Buffalo, devoted to moving pictures and vaudeville, has closed for the summer.

Isidore Moses will be assistant to A. R. Sherry, who will manage the new Hippodrome theater, Buffalo. This house will open early in July under the general direction of Michael Shea, who has heavy theatrical interests in Buffalo, Toronto and Cleveland. Vaudeville and moving pictures will be featured at the Hippodrome.

A pretty fountain, from which issues perfumed water, has been placed in the lobby of the Strand Theater, Buffalo. There is a sign inviting patrons to dip their handkerchiefs into the water.

Children of the Orphans' Home, Elmira, recently attended the Colonial moving picture theater of that city.

One of the features of the recent performances of the Lambs at the Star Theater, Buffalo, was moving pictures of John Drew, Francis Wilson, Raymond Hitchcock and others as they sang their club songs. Dr. F. C. Cornell, manager of the Star, John Oishei, manager of the Teck Theater, and Henry Marcus, manager of the New Lyric, Buffalo, were among those who welcomed the Lambs.

Five hundred school teachers and many pupils were among those who have attended the moving picture production of "Spartacus" at the Majestic theater, Buffalo. This is a George Kleine attraction. A Wurlitzer pipe organ and a complete orchestra supply the music.

The Buffalo Councilmen have approved the plans of the New Olympic theater of that city. The plans were held up for a time because exit courts were not provided on either side of the house. Some of the councilmen claimed the theater was safer than before and that there was a sufficient number of exits.

BILLY BISON.

WISCONSIN.

A CIRCUIT of moving pictures for the American Association of Museums was proposed before the meeting of that organization at Milwaukee. The idea was promulgated in the annual report to the body and emphasized the educational value of the films and their peculiar affiliation with the subjects in which the directors of the museums are trying to interest the American people. At an evening session a demonstration of the use of the motion picture machine in the museum was given by Secretary Paul M. Rea, of Charleston, S. C.

Among the new moving picture houses in Milwaukee, for which the plans are well under way, are the one to be erected by G. H. Williams at Wells and Twenty-first streets, to cost $17,000, and one by J. J. Schwartz at Ninth and Lincoln avenues, to seat 850 persons.

Edwin F. Weigle, staff photographer of the Chicago Tribune, was at the Orpheum Theater in Milwaukee to explain the moving pictures which he took in Vera Cruz.

A. M. Cox, who has been manager of the Grand Opera House at Oshkosh for the last year, has accepted a position with the Laemmle Film Service at Madison.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

IOWA

THE operation of moving picture theaters in Iowa on Sunday where it involves labor, other than required by charity or necessity, is illegal according to a decision of the Iowa State Supreme Court. This opinion was handed down in the case against R. L. Warne and Claude Schneider, of Oelwein. Their arrest and trial before a justice of the peace resulted from an agitation in the fall of 1913 against Sunday shows. The men were found guilty and fined $5 and costs. They appealed to the district court where the decision was upheld. The supreme court also upheld the verdict.

"Creation," the moving pictures of the International Bible Students' Association, are being shown at Greene's Opera House in Cedar Rapids.

The Opera House picture show at Lansing has added an amateur night.

The secretary of state has granted a charter to the Cresco Opera House Company, which incorporated with a capital stock of $25,000. The incorporators are E. H. Allen, S. A. Converse, O. J. McHugh, F. A. Ruber, A. J. Thomson, W. H. Tillson, E. P. Farnsworth Company, C. C. Burgess and C. W. Reed.

Thomas Duffy and F. J. Etzel, of Vail, will operate a moving picture show at Lakewood Park, Lake View, this summer. Mr. Etzel will act as manager.

Hugh Fleming has purchased the interest of his partner, W. M. Shields, in the moving picture theater at Afton and now has a monopoly on the amusement business in Afton.

E. H. Chamblliss, who purchased the Casino Theater at Charles City from L. H. Hooker, will operate the house in connection with his theaters at Webster City and Iowa Falls.

Max Kies, who purchased the Orpheum Moving Picture Theater on Main street, between Third and NOW Ready—Get It Quick!

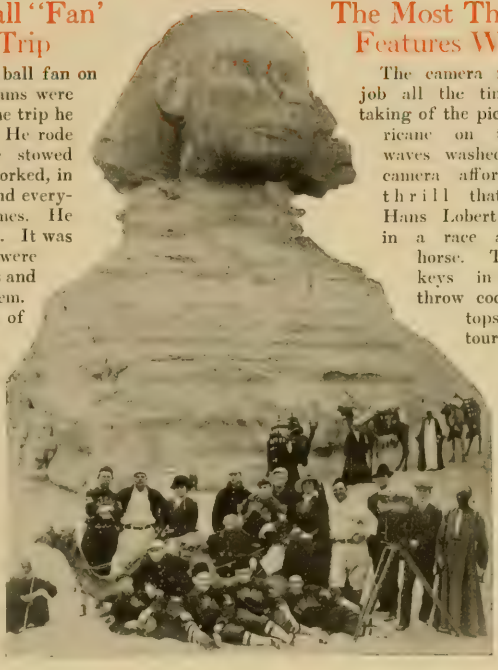
Giants-White Sox Tour of the World

The Greatest Ball "Fan" Made the Trip

When the "greatest ball fan on earth" saw that the teams were really going to make the trip he turned into a "Bug." He rode the brake beams, he stowed away, he begged, he worked, in fact he did anything and everything to get to the games. He got there and he rooted. It was not just what they were used to in foreign lands and he sure surprised them. The study of the faces of the bleacherites when the bug was present is a scream. He gets everyone into a pickle and the situations give a touch of comedy that will keep your patrons splitting their sides with laughter. In addition the players get into some funny mixups. One of them nearly marries a million dollar widow only to find that she is a married woman!



The Most Thrilling Features Were Caught

The camera man was on the job all the time. During the taking of the pictures of the Hurricane on the Pacific the waves washed right over the camera affording a realistic thrill that is wonderful. Hans Lobert runs the bases in a race against a cattle horse. The human monkeys in North Guinea throw cocoanuts from the tops of trees at the tourists. The ride that Germany Shaeffer took down the side of a mountain at Hong Kong is the most wonderfully exciting ride you could imagine, giving at the same time a most beautiful scenic view of the harbor and town.

The Most Interesting Travel Picture Ever Made

The film is full of true-to-life scenes not only of the native life in the places visited but of all the most wonderfully grand scenery on the way. You see actual living conditions in Japan, Hong Kong, Manila, India, Australia, Egypt, Naples, Rome, France, etc. One of the most beautiful waterfalls in the world; the great Lybian desert and the Mosque of Mohamed Ali; the tomb of Napoleon; the Khedive of Egypt watching his first game of baseball; the King of England at the game in London; the Pope, who granted a personal interview to the tourists; and the great carnival of Nice, in which the players took a prominent part, are all shown. It is truly a wonderful picture.

Six Reels of Laugh—Interest—Thrill—Wonder

ECLECTIC FEATURE FILM EXCHANGES FOR YOUR USE

ATLANTA Rhodes Bldg.	BOSTON 3 Tremont Row	CHICAGO 5 So. Wabash Ave.	DALLAS Andrews Bldg.	LOS ANGELES 114 E. 7th St.	MINNEAPOLIS 4th & Hennepin Sts.
NEW YORK 115 E. 23rd St.	PITTSBURGH 715 Liberty Ave.	SAN FRANCISCO 67 Turk St.	ST. LOUIS 3210 Locust St.	SYRACUSE 214 E. Fayette St.	CINCINNATI 217 E. 5th St.

CLEVELAND 622 Prospect Av., S. E.	PORTLAND 392 Burnside Ave.	PHILADELPHIA 1235 Vine St.	WASHINGTON 7th and E Sts., N.W.	NEW ORLEANS 910 Gravier St.

DENVER: Nassau Bldg. KANSAS CITY: 928 Main St.

THE ECLECTIC FILM COMPANY
110 West 40th Street New York City

Why Don't YOU Make Money With

The Perils of Pauline

JUST IN TIME

Improved Standards

The time has passed when "anything as long as it is a motion picture" can draw crowds who will make money for the Exhibitor. The pictures that are successful today are those that carry a punch in every foot of film—pictures like The Perils of Pauline. This immense production has been sweeping the country and making a name for the houses showing it. The exhibitors report record-breaking box-office receipts and in many instances they have requested a return date so they could show it to those who were unable to get into the theatre on the first showing. This great record is the result of the improved standards set by the Eclectic Film Co. in the making of thrilling, realistic pictures that are clean and wholesome and at the same time intensely gripping.

Eclectic Satisfaction

If we had the space we would like to print every letter we have received from the exhibitors telling about their experience and their entire satisfaction with The Perils of Pauline. It is more than satisfaction. It is enthusiasm. We knew when we started to produce The Perils of Pauline that it would be a great big success, but we had no idea that it would run as strong as it is. We can safely say that we have broken every booking record with this serial and the end is not in sight. Every episode brings to us the tale of immense crowds that in some instances could not be accommodated. Every episode emphasizes more and more strongly the fact that any exhibitor who is not showing this feature is losing money that is going to his competitor.

Pauline Pulls People—She's A Gold Mine

THE ECLECTIC FILM COMPANY

110 West 40th Street

New York City

The Kind of Dramatic Soul-Stirring Photo Play
You Have Always Wanted to Offer Your Patrons

The STAIN

A Dramatization of the Great Novel by Forrest Halsey and Robert H. Davis

Pathé Frères Surpassed Themselves Making This For Us

Rarely if ever have we been given the opportunity to offer to the exhibitors a photo play of the strength of The Stain. The cast is the strongest possible to gather together. The story of the Bank clerk who steals money from the bank to enable him to study for a lawyer, deserts his wife and small daughter and finally, under an assumed name, becomes a noted judge, only to have his castle come tumbling about his ears at the time when he thinks he is most successful, is replete with dramatic incidents of heart-gripping interest that will keep an audience on edge from start to finish. It is a clean, wholesome story that will prove a big puller in any theatre.

A Powerful Human Interest Drama Superbly Acted

ECLECTIC FEATURE FILM EXCHANGES FOR YOUR USE

ATLANTA Rhodes Bldg.	BOSTON 3 Tremont Row	CHICAGO 5 So. Wabash Ave.	DALLAS Andrews Bldg.	LOS ANGELES 114 E. 7th St.	MINNEAPOLIS 4th & Hennepin Sts
NEW YORK 115 E. 23rd St.	PITTSBURGH 715 Liberty Ave.	SAN FRANCISCO 67 Turk St.	ST. LOUIS 3210 Locust St.	SYRACUSE 214 E. Fayette St.	CINCINNATI 217 E. 5th St.
CLEVELAND 622 Prospect Av., S.E.	PORTLAND 392 Burnside Ave.	PHILADELPHIA 1235 Vine St.	WASHINGTON 7th and E Sts., N.W.	NEW ORLEANS 910 Gravier St.

DENVER: Nassau Bldg. KANSAS CITY: 928 Main St.

THE ECLECTIC FILM COMPANY
110 West 40th Street New York City

Some Eclectic Features of Exceptional Merit

Foreign Features chosen especially for their adaptability for the American Market.

Faithful Unto Death

(4 parts)

There are many war pictures on the market but none of them come up to the standard set by "Faithful Unto Death." It is a war drama that introduces the human touch in such a way to emphasize the horrors that attend the awful struggle between two nations. At the same time it does not harrow the feelings of the people who see it.

The Tempting of Justice

(5 parts, hand colored)

When a Judge takes his oath of office he swears to administer justice regardless of whom or where it strikes. If your only son were accused of a crime you knew impossible for him to commit and yet all the circumstantial evidence pointed to him, would you have a struggle to be true to your oath of office and carry the trial to a bitter end?

Leaves of Memory

(4 parts)

An aviator who has met with an accident causing the loss of his mind is taken to the house of his twin brother to be cared for. The secretary of the brother causes the death of his employer in such a way it is blamed on the insane brother who is incarcerated in an asylum. Having married his former employer's wife the secretary enjoys life till the brother regains his memory.

Eclectic Features are REAL Features

ECLECTIC FEATURE FILM EXCHANGES FOR YOUR USE

ATLANTA Rhodes Bldg.	BOSTON 3 Tremont Row	CHICAGO 5 So. Wabash Ave.	DALLAS Andrews Bldg.	LOS ANGELES 114 E. 7th St.	MINNEAPOLIS 4th & Hennepin Sts.
NEW YORK 115 E. 23rd St.	PITTSBURGH 715 Liberty Ave.	SAN FRANCISCO 67 Turk St.	ST. LOUIS 3210 Locust St.	SYRACUSE 214 E. Fayette St.	CINCINNATI 217 E. 5th St.
CLEVELAND 622 Prospect Av., S.E.	PORTLAND 392 Burnside Ave.	PHILADELPHIA 1235 Vine St.	WASHINGTON 7th & E Sts., N. W.	NEW ORLEANS 910 Gravier St.
DENVER: Nassau Bldg.			KANSAS CITY: 928 Main St.

THE ECLECTIC FILM COMPANY
110 West 40th Street — New York City

"The Cream of American and European Studios"

MEET US AT
"407"

—our headquarters for the week of June 8th to 13th, at the Grand Central Palace, New York.

You owe it to yourself, your patrons and your future to investigate our wonderful rental proposition. No better time than the present will ever again be yours, so make the most of it.

SOME JUNE RELEASES

MARION LEONARD
IN Mother Love
An original Six-part Drama

SIGNOR CARLO
IN
A Born Warrior
A spectacular Six-part Feature

JOSEPHINE WEST
IN Bringing in the Law
A "Punchy" Three-part Production

VALENTINE GRANT
IN
Tricking the Government
A Sid Olcott Feature in Three Parts

WARNER'S FEATURES, Inc.
130 West 46th Street New York

Fourth, in Dubuque from Frank Loftus and Frank Hoffman, has installed a new ventilating system.

Construction of the new moving picture theater to be erected at Exline by C. C. McDonald, of Cincinnati, has begun.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

ILLINOIS.

CHICAGO investors are said to be interested in and may purchase the right to manufacture a seat-indicating device upon which F. A. Bristol and P. J. Scharrington, of Des Plaines, hold the patent. The device is designed especially for moving picture theaters and it is claimed will do away with ushers. By an automatic electric signal system miniature lights in the ticket office indicate to the ticket seller just how many vacant seats there are in the house and their location.

John J. Berscheit, of Aurora, owner of the Century Theater and part owner of the Princess Theater in South Bend, has had plans made for a new theater to be known as the New Century, which will be erected at 209 Lincoln Highway West in Mishawaka, Ind. It will cost $35,000 and will seat 1,200.

H. N. Bell and Benjamin Zilm, who operate a moving picture show at La Rose, have been giving shows at Low Point, and probably will include that town in a circuit.

Thomas Prosser has taken out a new license for the Star Theater at St. David.

A new front has been installed at the Savoy Theater in Delavan, and the house has been generally improved.

The People's Theater at Cuba has been closed because of lack of business, the holder of a chattel mortgage having foreclosed on the fixtures. It was operated by McLaughlin & Bond.

Compromise has been offered by the striking union moving picture operators in Springfield in an effort to end the labor troubles. The union men want the managers to take back at least one operator now idle on account of the strike for each house, and the union will take into its organization the operators who have been working during the strike. Under these conditions the Amuse, the first to announce a change, the Capitol and Casino signed an agreement.

John Lager has purchased the Palace Theater at Staunton from T. F. Miller.

Opponents of Sunday moving picture theaters in Lincoln declare the proposition in a proposed ordinance to raise the license fee to $100 a year is the joker which ultimately would lead the way to a wide open Sunday. Some of the papers are against the Sunday shows, which now are prohibited under the municipal code.

Prior to going over to its summer season of masterpiece pictures the Oak Park Theater at Oak Park included in its last week of vaudevile two sample pictures, "Classmates" and "Tess of the Storm Country" for advertising purposes.

Ed Fellis, for some time prominent in photoplay affairs at Hillsboro, is reported to be contemplating the erection of a new opera house and roof garden in that city.

George Pheland, of Danville, has leased the building at Third and Market streets in Alton, formerly occupied by the Biograph, and will open a new moving picture theater. Extensive alteration will be made. A rumor is current in Alton that the Temple may be given over to moving pictures after the lease of W. M. Savage expires this summer.

Manager Worth, of the Maywood Theater at Maywood, donated the use of his house to the Illinois State Pure Food Commission and as a result 12,000 school children learned why they should swat the fly and why their parents should demand cleanliness at the corner grocery. The plan to show the films in the township high school building miscarried and the photoplay manager came to the rescue of the state officials.

J. E. Gaither, who has been manager of the Palace Theater at Staunton since its acquisition by F. Miller, of Litchfield, has resigned and returned to his home at Litchfield.

A place for the children of Waukegan to play is made possible, particularly by the Elite Theater 226 North Genesee street, which gave a benefit performance for the Waukegan Woman's Club, which was raising the fund for the pleasure devices.

The Gaiety Theater, the vaudeville house in Galesburg, will give no shows this summer. Frank Thielan, of Chicago, one of the heads of the circuit which controls the house recently, was in Galesburg and plans are being made for the construction of a new theater or at the least extensive remodeling of the present building.

The Star Theater at Evanston has installed a new ventilation plant.

Motion picture shows in Farmington are now on their summer schedule. The Lyric is operating only Wednesdays and Saturdays and the Dreamland on Thursdays and Saturdays.

The Universalist Church of Elgin profited financially by the exhibition of "Les Miserables" at the Grand Theater in that city.

The Pontiac Riverview Chautauqua Assembly at Pontiac has awarded the contract for furnishing moving pictures at the annual meeting this summer to F. M. Bond, of Pontiac.

Moving pictures are again featured at Al Fresco Park on the Illinois River just above Peoria.

The Gem Theater at Clinton, which is now under new management, has added an amateur night.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

IN THE SOUTHWEST.

WILLIAM and Joseph Nowell, of Wilson, Okla., have disposed of their moving picture theater in that city to a stock company, but the former will remain in charge of the operating department.

G. C. Macham has been granted a permit by the city council of Plano, Tex., to operate an airdome on South Main street. This makes two picture shows for Plano.

The Colonial Theater at Greenville, Tex., has been re-opened after being closed for two months for remodeling. The house is truly colonial in design, and is one of the most tastily decorated and comfortably arranged moving picture theaters in the Southwest.

Free moving picture shows were a feature of Trades Day at Clarendon, Tex.

A. L. Neal has opened the Beach airdome at Galveston, Tex., giving first-run pictures.

L. B. McKinney, of Shawnee, Okla., will open a moving picture theater in Tecumseh, Okla.

Moving pictures of the meeting of the last general council of the Fraternal Aid Association at Lawrence, Kan., had local interest for residents of Topeka, Kan., and proved a good attraction at the Majestic Theater in Topeka, where they were shown under the auspices of the local lodge. The Haskell Indian school and the state university are included in the films.

Garfield Park, Charles Matthews, manager, Topeka, Kan., will use moving pictures as an attraction this summer.

One hundred persons, representing all factions interested in the Sunday moving picture show proposition in Pittsburgh, Kan., debated the matter until long after midnight, then adopted what was called a "middle course." The "middle course" consisted of allowing the photoplay houses to operate seven days a week, but the tone of some of the shows must be improved. Rev. C. D. Eldridge, president of the Ministerial Association, refused to concede that there was any middle ground. President J. S. Rogers, of the Chamber of Commerce, was delegated to appoint a committee representing his own organization, the Ministerial Association, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Retail Merchants' Association, Manual Training, Normal and Business College. It will be the duty of this committee to see that clean shows are given. In this they will be aided by a drastic ordinance to be passed by the city council.

Pictures of Kansas wheat fields and the big Larabee flour mills, Hutchinson, Kan., will be sugar-coated with romance. Manager Hal Wood, of the Industrial Motion Picture Company of Hutchinson, has been busy near Pratt, Kan., taking some of the scenes in a story showing the progress of Jack West, college student, from the time he enters the harvest field until after he has worked his way through the mills and won the president's daughter. The film will not be ready before next winter.

Frank Deal has opened an airdome at Wynnewood, Okla.

The Lone Star Airdome, J. L. Young, manager, has been opened at Smithville, Tex.

It will be the Star instead of the Lyceum Theater in Hot Springs, Ark., Mrs. Kate Hummell and Mrs. Lillian Linsky, the new owners having decided to re-christen the photoplay house.

The Pastime Moving Picture Theater at Marlowe, Okla., has been removed to the Payne Building.

A complete reel of the largest salt works in the world at Hutchinson, Kan., was made by the Bailey Photo Company. The cameramen also filmed many other Hutchinson industries.

W. F. Brophy has sold the Yale Theater at Lawton, Okla., to R. W. Herman.

Larger rural school buildings which can be used for moving picture shows and other social center work are advocated by Charles B. Farwell, a farmer near Leonia, Kan.

Mrs. T. W. Brewer, wife of a physician at Ringling, Okla., has opened a moving picture show at Ringling.

A resolution urging producers to prepare films especially for use in churches and Sunday schools was adopted by the Texas State Sunday School Association. It is believed by the Sunday school workers that the field of Bible and mission subjects is profitable and has hardly been touched.

According to reports from Topeka, Kan., E. F. Maxwell, owner and manager of the Empress Moving Picture Theater, has been negotiating for its sale. Maxwell is also owner of the Novelty Theater.

A study of the conditions of people who patronize the moving picture theaters in Fort Smith, Ark., has been made by the Herald, of that city. The editor finds that the photoplay houses are "a great moral force," that they are patronized by laboring men and business and professional men and their families and that the greatest good is that young men "who formerly spent their leisure hours . . . in frolicsome conduct, some viciously so and others conservatively, but both deplorable," now have a common salutation: "Let's go to the movies."

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

IN THE NORTHWEST.

AFTER discussion places of amusement in Portland, Ore., were exempted from Sunday closing, but stores and shops were ordered by the city council to not open on the Sabbath.

John Bauer is erecting an opera house and dance hall at Moccasin, Mont.

The Nibbo Travelogues are drawing well at the Utah Theater in Salt Lake City.

Norg Sorrenson will open a moving picture theater at Hayti, S. D.

Roy Noggles, of Ogden, Utah, has been making plans to film the stores of that city. A scenario in the form of a hobo's dream will sustain interest.

G. N. Bontecou will lease the new moving picture theater to be erected at Howard, S. D., by August Schultz, it is reported.

The Opera House at Belfield, N. D., has been leased by William Dahlheimer, who will operate a moving picture show there.

L. Thompson will open a moving picture theater at Michigan, N. D.

An electric lighting company of Telluride, Col., did some advertising in co-operation with the Segerberg Theater, of that city, by giving away electric household appliances to some of the patrons of the theater.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

MICHIGAN.

THE Star at Sault Ste. Marie omitted its vaudeville for a week to give a special photoplay program.

For the convenience of its patrons the Garden Theater at Battle Creek advertises the hours at which the shows "start anew."

The Chamber of Commerce at Jackson is considering a proposition to have the city advertised by means of moving pictures.

A. W. Hooper, of Toledo, will be manager of the Lyric Theater at Lapeer, which has been purchased by S. W. Smith and Frank Cutting. Motion pictures, specialties and good musical programs are announced.

Herman Tietz is now giving picture shows four nights a week, Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday at Armada. He changes twice a week.

The pictures "Sunny Hours in St. Joe Valley," made for the Chamber of Commerce at South Bend, Ind., were shown to the members of the Chamber of Commerce at Battle Creek.

The Laurium Amusement Company, of Laurium, reported that it had practically closed a deal for the property occupied by the People's Theater on Hecla street, giving opportunity to carry out its plan of remodeling and enlarging the building so as to increase the capacity and make it a thoroughly modern moving picture house.

George Bishop has purchased a moving picture equipment and is giving shows at Falmouth.

Mary Pickford in "A Good Little Devil" did good business at the Columbia Theater in Grand Rapids, and marked the advent of that house into the photoplay field. The vaudeville season has ended.

Manager Wood, of the Star and Pastime theaters, of Tawas City, has an arrangement whereby a local merchant gives tickets for his houses with each dollar's worth of goods purchased.

Members of the Grand Army of the Republic and its auxiliary, the Woman's Relief Corps, were the guests of Manager Davis, of the Arcade Theater at Charlotte when he showed "The Battle of Shiloh."

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

IN THE MIDDLE WEST

NOTWITHSTANDING the opposition on account of doctrinal differences to the moving pictures of "Creation," the pictures are drawing large crowds in all cities where they are shown. A nursery feature, adopted by the promoters, has proved popular. Women who are interested in the work of the International Bible Students' Association are caring for the children while their mothers view the films.

It is reported that a new moving picture theater will be opened in Lowellville, Ohio, but that on account of a lack of an available building it will be necessary to erect a new theater.

The Sunday closing proposition will be put up to the voters of Findlay, Ohio, at the general election in November. An ordinance had been passed, compelling the closing on Sunday, but a referendum petition was filed and until the matter is definitely settled the houses will operate seven days a week.

Plans are being drawn for a new moving picture theater to be erected in Columbus, Ohio, by Joseph Hinterschied. It will seat 300 persons and will be of brick and stone construction.

The Coggon Opera House Company, of Coggon, Iowa, will go through with its plans to build a new $7,000 theater, having purchased the site.

A new airdome has been opened at Columbia City, Ind., by George Brookins, manager of the Lyric Theater.

An order to fumigate moving picture houses at least once a week has been issued in South Omaha, Neb.

A. Peterson will operate a moving picture show under canvas at Arcadia, Mich., this summer.

Ernest Purvis and S. S. Ruble, of Logan, Ohio, expect to have their new moving picture theater on North Market street in that city open about September 1. A modern fireproof building, which also will house ten suites of offices, will be constructed.

Exhibitors in Columbus, Ohio, who have been afflicted by boys and "practical jokers," have gone at the source of the itching and sneezing powder trouble. They sent a committee to the city council with specimens of the "bombs" which have proved so annoying to patrons. The result was that an ordinance prohibiting the sale of such preparations was unanimously indorsed by the city legislators.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

"One Keystone Comedy," said a successful exhibitor, "is enough to liven up the deadest programme you could possibly put together."

The only way to get Keystone Comedies is to take on Mutual Service.

Every reel not necessarily a masterpiece,—that would be impossible.

But far and away the highest average of any programme ever put together.

Thirteen popular brands including "Flying A," "Thanhouser," "Broncho," "Kay Bee," and Griffith's "Majestic," "Reliance" and,—

Beginning June 22nd, the thrilling Thanhouser drama "The Million Dollar Mystery"—by Harold MacGrath and Lloyd Lonergan—released two reels a week. $10,000.00 will be offered the public for a correct solution of this baffling mystery.

Last, but far from least "Our Mutual Girl," the greatest week by week money getter ever put out.

At your service also the Press Bureau and Advertising Department, that is as glad to help every manager that has individual problems as though it were employed by him alone.

For advertising help and suggestions address

Advertising Department
29 Union Square, N. Y.

BRANCHES IN 49 CITEIS MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION NEW YORK

American	Majestic	Royal	Kay Bee	and
Reliance	Komic	Keystone	Domino	Mutual
Thanhouser	Princess	Broncho	Beauty	Weekly

LICENSED FILM STORIES

SELIG.

HOW LONE WOLF DIED (June 16).—Lone Wolf is a red-handed renegade, who wantonly maims and destroys through the sheer joy of savagery. How he dies in the desert miserably vindicates the natural course of his wicked life. Lone Wolf creeps on the scene stripped to the buff, armed only with a knife. He raids the settler's cabin, secures arms and ammunition, and then scurries away on the only horse of the place, unhappily missed by the fire of the settler's wife. He returns her fire and kills the woman, leaving the baby motherless.

The succeeding scene shows the visit of the missionary to the solitary tepee where Laughing Star and her mother are encamped. The good man has impressed the Indian girl with something of the light of the gospels, but that night he is shadowed and mutilated by Lone Wolf out of sheer deviltry. The Indian girl discovers him in the morning and learns from his dying lips the name of his assailant. Laughing Star immediately draws her knife and makes oath that she will kill the Indian, placing the blade upon her forehead and beginning an oath. The dying man raises his hand to the Bible and stops her, pointing to the injunction, "Thou shalt not kill." The good man dies and the girl begins a relentless pursuit of the murderer across the dreary wastes of the dry desert.

Lone Wolf is thrown from his horse and she finds him stunned and unconscious. She is about to plunge a knife in his heart when she remembers the injunction of the missionary and desists. She, however, takes away his arms, and herself goes to a safe distance and watches him return to consciousness. She raises her canteen and takes a drink. He, tortured by thirst, is powerless to secure the coveted water. He creeps to the water-hole and sees the poison sign of the Indian on the rock by it. He crawls painfully away, and finds another water-hole that she has stopped up with sand. Then in desperation he drags himself back to the poison spring. Daring danger, he drinks and dies in agony. Laughing Star presses her Bible to her bosom and passes on her way. The parable of the Good Samaritan had not impressed her, till she had obeyed the injunction of the dying missionary.

CASTLES IN THE AIR (June 17).—Alice Roland, a poor girl, is snubbed by her companions at high school, and her only admirer is a crippled youth, Roy Gordon. While touched to the quick by the coolness of her associates, her social aspirations are not destroyed, and, reading a romance concerning "Castles in Spain," she conceives the idea of creating some similar situation for her own delectation, and lets her friends share the secret. Her castle in England is shown in a series of "dissolves" as Alice tells the story of her new wealth. The scheme works, and she attends a fashionable lawn party in a borrowed gown. But suspicions are aroused, her plan is discovered, and the girls call upon her mother. Of course, the poor woman knows nothing of Alice's "castle" in the air, tells the truth, and over-ambitious Alice is again ostracized.

Shortly after this, poor Roy, who has been wrought up over her story of fictitious wealth, receives a letter from an attorney telling him that he is the sole beneficiary to a $50,000 estate. He goes abroad to visit a German specialist to be cured, if possible, of his physical inferiority. Two years pass, and Alice, through natural aptitude, has been able to support her mother in comfort. One day she is surprised to receive a letter from Roy, stating that although the surgeon had failed him, he is coming back to ask of her an all-important question. The old love flames in her breast, her heart is moved with pity, and she accepts him. Then he straightens up. His lameness has been really cured, and the ambitious girl comes into her own, so her castle in Spain becomes indeed reality.

PETER'S RELATIONS (June 19).—Peter's mother-in-law, Mrs. Fixit, makes an uninvited appearance at his country house, and immediately begins to rearrange things so rapidly that when he returns from the city in the evening he does not know the place. His wife, thoroughly under the dominion of her mother, apologizes for her invasion, but does not appear to change things. The couple are put off in a small side-room to spend the night and the cook is called in to help rearrange the apartments for some comfort. Everything is upside down and everything goes wrong. Peter sits upon and crushes his wife's best hat; the window curtain blows in and wakes them up every few minutes, and Mother-in-Law Fixit hears so much noise she thinks the house is haunted. The only one who sleeps is the cook, for she is so tired she can do that standing. The result of it all is that nobody gets any sleep and they wake up in the morning busily facing a new world of comic troubles.

CHICKEN! (June 19).—Sam's wife, suspicious by nature, gets all "het up," so to speak, when she hears hubby declare over the telephone to his compatriot, Bill: "That new stenographer you have is some chicken!" Several days later Sam receives a note from his friends to the effect that his wife has gone away and that the coast is clear for a good time, as Chief Barr has brought up a swell chicken for dinner. His wife picks up this note, rounds up the wives of the rest of the "gang," and they surprise their husbands in the act of dining, not with their stenographers, but upon some fine, fat chickens. Explanations clear the scene of prospective domestic battle smoke.

THE GIRL AT HIS SIDE (June 20).—Roswell Ford, head of the Monarch Construction Company, is loved by his private secretary, Agnes Lee, but he is in love with Natica Blaine, an heiress. He proposes to her one evening and is accepted. As he is leaving the house, the cord of her valuable necklace of pearls becomes broken, and he takes it to have it repaired. A few days later, Ford is seriously hurt while inspecting a building. During his convalescence Natica visits him, and also at his office, where Agnes has been taking his place, and tells her she wishes to do everything that she can to help Ford. That same day valuable securities are taken from Ford's office, which creates a shortage and embarrasses the company in paying pressing obligations. Agnes is obliged to visit Ford in the hospital and reveal to him the situation. He implores her to secure a loan at the bank. She makes her best efforts, but the loan is refused. Ford appeals to his friends for help and they refuse him. Then he appeals to the wealthy father of his fiancee, and is curtly received.

At this great crisis, the jeweler delivers Natica's necklace. Agnes estimates its worth to be sufficient to save him and urges him to ask Natica to raise money on it. He, however, will not hear of this and tells Agnes to return the necklace to Natica. Again exhaustion overcomes Ford and he falls back to his old condition at the hospital. Natica has learned from her father of Ford's trouble, and when Agnes, who has decided to return the necklace at Ford's request, Natica thinking that she has come merely to appeal to her for aid, sends down word that she has gone out for the day. In this extremity, Agnes recalls Natica's statement that she will do anything to aid Ford. Accordingly, she goes to a loan broker, hypothecates the jewels and satisfies immediate obligations with the money. The next morning Norman Blaine learns that the securities and cash taken by Ford's office have been recovered and that the Monarch Company is thoroughly solvent. He advises with Natica and they unwittingly benefit by Agnes' act. Natica commends Agnes for what she has done. Ford, on recovering, believes that Natica was the one who helped him. A man from the loan office then takes the necklace to Ford's office, demanding an explanation, arriving there while Natica is still with him. Agnes endeavors to prevent his telling Ford the truth, but is unsuccessful. Ford takes the cash which has been returned to his office, and redeems the necklace, returning it to Natica. Ford then sends for Agnes, and Natica tells him of her attitude during his trouble. He is then left alone with Agnes and realizes that she has saved him in his extremity, and at last reciprocates the great love she has always given him.

EDISON.

THE ADVENTURE OF THE MISSING LEGACY (Sixth of the Octavius Amateur Detective series—June 15).—When Pat Dolan, gardener on the Pennington's Long Island estate, came into a legacy of $4,000, he felt as if the sky had dropped on his head. With the sack of gold pieces which he carried home from the bank, Pat brought a couple of bottles of fine old Irish whiskey. His first impulse was to celebrate, and celebrate he did, in a befitting and proper manner. It happened that Octavius was spending his vacation at the Pennington's place. When Pat Dolan's two beautiful daughters rushed madly up to the house, and with tears and lamentations complained that their father's recently acquired wealth had been stolen. Octavius instantly proffered his services for regaining the missing money.

Arrived at the scene of the crime, Octavius discovered that Pat Dolan had only the vaguest of notions as to what had happened to his money. He dimly remembered counting it, but as to what occurred after that he had not the remotest idea. With the aid of a magnifying glass, Octavius conducted a careful search of Pat's house and the land about it. He discovered a multiplicity of clues, but all of them seemed to lack a certain amount of pertinence in furthering the eventual solution of the mystery. For instance, the alarming hand-prints he found on the kitchen wall were proved to have been made by Pat while fixing the stove; and of the three footprints Octavius discovered on the lawn, one was found to have been made by Pat, one by Nancy, and the third by Octavius himself.

After a few more illuminating discoveries of this order, Pat grew tired of following Octavius about, and returned to his sadly depleted whiskey bottles. When Octavius saw him about half an hour later, Pat was wandering about, singing happily. Considering him a suspicious person, Octavius followed him. Pat got all tangled up with the clothesline, and Octavius, in endeavoring to extricate him, discovered that the end of the clothesline led down the well. He pulled it up and discovered the bag of money exactly where the intoxicated Pat had hidden it. Octavius would have stood about all day telling Pat's beautiful daughters how he solved the mystery, if Mrs. Pennington had not pulled him away by his ear.

THE GAP (Sixth of "The Man Who Disappeared"—June 16).—While Perriton, alias "John Pottle" was recovering from the injuries he had received in his life and death struggle with Brownson, the detective, Earle, the superintendent of the construction company, called to inquire after his injuries. While talking to Jennie, the girl Perriton had saved from the gang of criminals, Earle admitted that he could stand Carter, the president of the company, no longer. He went on to tell her that if he could find a partner with money, he would undertake the important contract on the Warrington Courthouse, himself. After Earle had left, Jennie discussed the situation with Henry Horn, her husband, and Perriton. Horn decided that he would be willing to advance the money for the courthouse proposition, so Jennie started out for the offices of the construction company to find Earle. In the company offices, she learned that President Carter had discharged Earle that morning. From a letter on Carter's desk, she gained absolute proof that the construction company was planning to get the courthouse contract by bribery. Incidentally, she learned that Earle was leaving for the West on the 12:45 train.

After a rather unpleasant encounter with Carter, Jennie hurried back to Perriton and her husband. They decided that their only course was to stop Earle. Stopping Earle seemed, on the face of it, an utter impossibility, since they could not possibly reach the station by 12:45. But John Perriton was nothing, if not resourceful. He realized that the train would have to go over a near-by drawbridge. If the draw-bridge were open, the train would, of course, be held up. So jumping into a taxicab, they rushed off to the drawbridge. It was closed. The train was almost due. The drawbridge tender suavely informed Perriton that the bridge could on no account be opened unless a boat wished to pass through. With his heart in his mouth, Perriton rushed to a tug which was moored close by, and offered the captain twenty-five dollars to take him to the other side of the bridge. The captain naturally thought John was crazy, but accepted his offer just the same. Putting out into the stream, he whistled for the crew. The bridge slowly opened, and the 12:45 train which had just reached it, was stopped. Jennie found Earle and explained everything to him. Then the four partners hurried back to the city to begin their battle with Carter.

A MODERN SAMSON (June 17).—Algernon Leiter was very fond of Sadie, the daughter of Mr. Strong. Mr. Strong was a large man in every way—particularly around the waist. Sadie, though built on less Titanic lines than her father, was unusually strong. She had a playful little habit of dragging the piano about the room when she got excited that Algernon found irresistible. Algernon, himself was perfectly aware of the fact that he was not in the same class with Sadie and her father physically. But that did not prevent him from his determination to marry Sadie. At last, after a long and strenuous courtship, she accepted him.

Unfortunately, on that very day, Mr. Strong slipped on a banana peel which had been carelessly left on the pavement in front of his house, and fell heavily. On account of his curious construction, he was unable to rise, and when Algernon gallantly rushed to the rescue, his efforts resembled the frantic exertions of an ant attempting to lift an elephant. When Sadie finally came out and helped her father indoors, Mr. Strong was so indignant that he could hardly speak. He told Algernon firmly and finally that no one, so utterly lacking in physique should ever marry into the Strong family.

Algernon instantly made up his mind that if he must become a Samson to win his beloved, a Samson he would become. So he threw himself heart and soul into a multiplicity of physical exercises. He took long cross country runs, and nearly killed himself lifting heavy weights. On one of his runs, he spied Mr. Strong's car hopelessly stuck in the muddy road. Some wood choppers were working in a nearby lot. Algernon was smitten with a sudden brilliant idea. He engaged the services of the wood choppers, and led them quietly to the rear of the car. He commanded them to shove when he coughed. Then Algernon stalked proudly to the front of the car, tied his belt to it, grasped the belt firmly and coughed. As though by magic, the car jumped out of the mud hole. Sadie sprang down from the seat, clasped Algernon in her arms and called him her hero, and Mr. Strong, filled with admiration, willingly consented to their marriage.

ON THE STEPS (June 17).—Mr. and Mrs. Ketchum resembled the husbands and wives in all modern fiction in one important respect. Each had a terrible secret. Mrs. Ketchum thought Mr. Ketchum was a model husband, but it was not true. Every few weeks, an irresistible craving would attack him, and turn the metal of his sturdy will into quivering quicksilver. It was useless for him to attempt to combat it. Whenever its relentless fingers fell upon him, he was lost. So, he would steal softly out of the house, sometimes remaining away until early in the morning. In her home, Mrs. Ketchum was a model of domesticity. But, she, as we have hinted, also had an alien

MR. EXHIBITOR, DEMAND

WAR WITH HUERTA

An Exclusive and Original Moving Picture

TAKEN IN MEXICO ON THE FIRING LINE

by Special Arrangements with HUERTA, "The Man of the Hour"

READ WHY YOU SHOULD EXHIBIT THIS PICTURE in review on Page 1417, June 6th Issue of This Paper.

ORIGINAL 4-COLOR LITHOGRAPHS. Sizes: Ones, Threes, Nines
Also, PHOTOS, CUTS, SLIDES

STATE the STATES you want. Wire quick

MULLIN & TISHER

RELEASED THROUGH
MAGNET FILM RELEASING CO.

110 West 40th Street,
NEW YORK CITY
BRYANT 7183
CABLE ADDRESS: FISCOFIL

A STATE RIGHT EXCLUSIVE

PRODUCED BY

DIAZ! HUERTA!

BELMAR — PROGRESSIVE MOTION PICTURE MAKERS — HISTORICAL FILM FEATURES — STUDIO POST ESTATE SOUTH BEACH. — SHOWING THE WORLD OVER — POST OFFICE ROSEBANK NEW YORK.

VILLA! MADERO!

ARE THE AUTHORS OF CONDITIONS WHICH GIVE RISE TO

UNCLE SAM IN MEXICO

IN FIVE REELS

In presenting this five-reel production, "Uncle Sam in Mexico" we break away from the purely scenic and love staged drama. This is a Naval and Military drama based upon Mexican life and conflict as affecting the American on Mexican soil. Picturing at the same time the drastic influence which Uncle Sam has forced in handling the Marines at Vera Cruz. The manner of the fall of the first Hero at Vera Cruz has centered the interest of the world upon this history and epoch-making steps of Uncle Sam. We have employed the best literary and dramatic minds to crystalize it into the language of pictures—The Universal Tongue.

1 style 1 sheet type. 2 styles 1 sheet litho. 2 styles 3 sheet litho. 1 style 9 sheet litho. Heralds, Photographs and Cuts.

Released through

MAGNET FILM RELEASING CO., 110 W. 40th St., New York

Room 401 'Phone, Bryant 7183

interest that ever and anon tore her away. She too would steal softly from the house at night, not returning until hours had elapsed.

One night, it happened that both husband and wife left the house, each fondly believing that the other was safe at home. In the guilty excitement of their flight, both forgot their latch keys. Mr. Ketchum returned shortly after twelve o'clock, and tiptoed quietly up to the front door. When he suddenly realized that he had forgotten his key, drops of perspiration clung to his clammy forehead. What could he do? If he rang the doorbell, his wife would certainly hear it. He was lost! After a stealthy prowl about the house, in which he satisfied himself that none of the windows was unlocked, Mr. Ketcham decided to make the best of it. So he composed himself on one side of the steps and fell asleep. Shortly afterward, Mrs. Ketchum returned, and realized in turn that she had no key. Since the same conditions confronted her that had faced her husband, she arrived at the same conclusion—namely, that there was nothing to do but wait. So she went to sleep on the other side of the steps.

In the morning, Mr. and Mrs. Ketchum were awakened by the milkman. That phlegmatic person walked up on the porch, opened the front door and put his milk inside. As the perception of the fact that the door had been unlocked all the time dawned upon them, husband and wife suddenly saw each other. Once again, there was only one thing to do. Ketchum confessed that every once in a while he simply had to go and play penny ante with the boys; and Mrs. Ketchum tearfully admitted that she was a regular campaign orator for the suffragette party.

THE HAND OF HORROR (Special—two Parts—June 19).—Old Stephen Clark had two children, John and Margaret. Margaret, like the little princess of a fairy story, was as good as she was pretty. John was different. His over-indulgent father had always allowed him to do just about as he pleased. As a result, John had become a member of one of the worst gangs in the city. On one occasion, when John, to win the praises of his fellows, had planned a robbery of a valuable consignment of laces, Margaret learned of his intentions, and followed him to the building in which the goods were stored. Through John's carelessness with a cigarette, a fire was started. Margaret was hemmed in by flames. In a cowardly effort to save his own life at any cost, John left his sister to her fate and fled. On the street, he met Frank Henley, his father's assistant. Learning of Margaret's danger from the trembling John, Frank plunged into the burning building and rescued her. A week later, Margaret promised Frank that she would marry him.

Some time afterward, Frank was engaged to make some repairs on the great clock which towered above the city, four hundred sheer feet from the pavement. He was paid an ample bonus before starting in to work, and John learning of the fact, determined to rob his sister's fiance. Frank got out on the hour hand of the clock at a little before three. A few minutes later, John stole up to the room behind the clock fence. A search of Frank's coat convinced him that the victim must have left the money at home. To keep Frank safely out of the way, John softly shut and locked the little door leading out to the fact of the clock.

At quarter of four, Frank had finished his work, and turned to leave. His horror when he discovered that the door was locked may be imagined. With the hour hand in its present position, he could just comfortably get enough of a grip on the door sill to clamber up. In half an hour at the most he would be unable to reach the door at all, and must inevitably fall to the street. Meanwhile, John had found Frank's money, and also a watch. As he noticed the position of the hands on the watch, he suddenly remembered where Frank was. John stopped the money and looked at the hour hand with fascinated eyes. After a time, he became suddenly and horribly mad. When Margaret went up to see her sweetheart, and found the door locked, she was alarmed. When she wrenched it open and looked down, she nearly fainted. John had gained a temporary respite at ten minutes past four by climbing on the minute hand. Ten minutes later, he was banging to the doorsill by his finger tips. Another minute would launch him into space. Just as he was about to let go, Margaret seized his hand, and with a superhuman effort pulled him up to safety.

IN THE DAYS OF SLAVERY (June 20).—Colonel Fairfax's one vice was his love of gambling. He could no more resist the temptations of poker than he could fly. The fascinating chances that lie in the turn of a card held an irresistible power over him, and once started in his favorite game, all else seemed of such small importance that he was quite willing to risk any or all of his worldly possessions. So it was that when the Colonel chanced to travel up the river with Jaspr Carter, a game was started that lasted the entire trip. The Colonel was pretty badly hit and when he finally left the game, he was still in Jasper's debt to the extent of several thousand dollars. A few days later, Jaspr called and politely intimated that he would like to be paid. The Colonel, on his last legs financially, was forced to temporize.

Jasper coolly suggested to the Colonel that he give him his daughter, Virginia, instead of the money. Under any other circumstances, Colonel Fairfax would have struck the man who dared even to suggest such a thing, but as it was, he was in a very tight hole and Jasper knew it. So the Colonel went so far to explain the whole situation to Virginia. Divided between her obvious duty to her father and a lively hatred and contempt for Carter, Virginia sought the comfort and advice of Miranda, her old mammy and servant. While Miranda stroked her hair, Virginia fell asleep and dreamed that Carter had stripped her father of all his possessions and had sent him penniless and hopeless away from his former estates, accompanied only by his daughter. Jasper and Miranda, now his property, were on the boat which was to bear the Colonel and his daughter into exile. In a frenzy of despair, Virginia took her mother's jewels from her neck, and begged the Colonel to buy Miranda from Carter with them. Carter refused, but offered to play the Colonel at cards, staking the jewels against Miranda. The Colonel accepted—and lost. But Carter was cheated of his winnings, for Miranda jumped overboard and was swept away. Virginia awoke with a scream and found that the shadow of Jasper Carter had passed like the evil dream for John Owen, the man she loved, had come to her father's assistance and life was once again a happy and a pleasant thing.

VITAGRAPH.

THE CRIME OF CAIN (June 15).—The two sons of Judge Stone, William and Wylie, are both in love with Nancy Sevier. Wylie is of a jealous temperament and believes he sees in Nancy's acceptance of his brother's attentions a proof of her preference for him. William monopolizes Nancy until Wylie is almost beside himself with rage and jealousy. He makes the serious mistake of telling his troubles to others. Nancy's little brother and sister, Katie and Bob, are accidental witnesses of Wylie's jealousy and, as a childish prank, pin to his coat tails a placard on which it scribbled, "I am jealous." This is pointed out to Wylie by a group of townspeople, and stung by the boisterous laughter, he angrily thrusts himself upon his brother, thinking he had perpetrated the joke. The two men are separated by the crowd. William is later found murdered with Wylie's gun beside his body. He is arrested. Meantime, the wife of the real murderer, an Italian vagrant, learns that an innocent man is to be convicted for the crime. She runs to the courthouse, arriving just as Judge Stone is about to pronounce sentence upon his own son. She betrays her guilty husband and frees

"Hallberg"

TALK No. 31

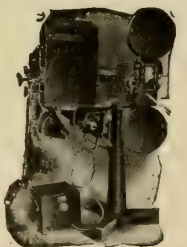
About the Convention at Grand Central Palace.

If you visit the MOVING PICTURE CONVENTION at GRAND CNETRAL PALACE, don't fail to stop at the booth of the UNITED ELECTRIC LIGHT & POWER COMPANY of NEW YORK CITY, where you will find a working exhibit of the celebrated "HALLBERG" A. C. to D. C. ECONOMIZER, which produces the most perfect light for moving pictures. The exhibit will also include the "HALLBERG" A. C. ECONOMIZERS and MOVING PICTURE MACHINERY.

I have also a complete working exhibit, with samples, of everything required for your theatre in my show room at No. 36 East 23rd Street, where I shall be pleased to have you call. If you cannot call, write at once and LET ME QUOTE YOU PRICES.

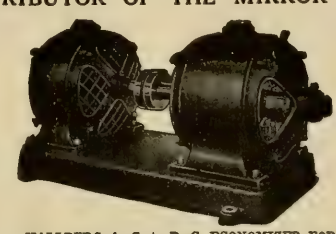
I take old machines in trade as part payment for new ones, and I also make liberal allowance on your old rheostats, A. C. Economizers, A. C. to D. C. Converters and Rectifiers in trade for the celebrated "HALLBERG" A. C. to D. C. Economizers, which give the BEST LIGHT with the LEAST CURRENT.

—DISTRIBUTOR OF THE MIRROR SCREEN—



SIMPLEX

Distributor Simplex Machines



HALLBERG A. C. to D. C. ECONOMIZER FOR ONE OR TWO LAMPS.

Distributor Power's 6-A Machines

POWER'S 6A

Factory Selling Headquarters for POWER'S, SIMPLEX, MOTIOGRAPH and EDISON MACHINES. "HALLBERG" STANDARD A. C. ECONOMIZERS, "HALLBERG" D. C. ECONOMIZERS, MERCURY ARC RECTIFIERS, MOVING PICTURE MACHINES and FLAME ARC CARBONS. I EQUIP THEATRES COMPLETELY

Free Circular on all makes of M. P. Machines, but Hallberg's Big Catalogue, 100 pages, costs you 25c. by mail

J. H. HALLBERG "THE HOUSE OF QUALITY" 36 East 23rd Street, New York

COMING

"Lena Rivers"

In

4 PARTS

G

WHITMAN FEATURES PRESENT

A 3 REEL MASTERPIECE

WITH A POWERFUL STORY

THAT WILL HOLD AND GRIP ANY AUDIENCE IN THE WORLD

PERFECT PHOTOGRAPHY PERFECT ACTING AND A PERFECT FEATURE

"HIS FLESH AND BLOOD"

FOR STATE RIGHTS

A FULL LINE OF 1's - 3's - 6's
CUTS - PHOTOS - HERALDS - SLIDES

COMING

"Jane Eyre"

In

4 PARTS

COMING

"The Toll of Love"

IN 4 PARTS

COMING

"The Political Boss"

IN 3 PARTS

Mr. State-Right Buyer

Whitman's Studio will make us one feature a month to sell you at prices that will surprise and please you

WIRE — PHONE — CALL

Get on our Mailing List NOW

G

GARRISON FILM CO., Incorporated

G. B. Garrison, Pres.
Jack Gorman, Gen. Mgr.

1402 Broadway

Room 740 Tel. 909 Greeley

NEW YORK CITY

Wylie. The judge is almost overcome with joy at finding his son restored to him. One look into Nancy's eyes convinces Wylie how true is her love for him and how groundless has been his jealousy.

A WAYWARD DAUGHTER (Special—Two parts—June 16).—Whenever Mrs. Weston, a widow, enters the little country store where Luke Hardy is postmaster and storekeeper, he tries in vain to muster up courage enough to propose. She has one daughter, Betty, pretty and good-hearted, but spoiled and wayward. Jack Foster, a boy sweetheart, who works in a store in New York, visits them and puts all sorts of ideas into her head. Mrs. Weston objects to the girl going to a masquerade, and exacts a promise from her to return at midnight. Instead, she lands home at two-thirty in the morning. Mrs. Weston is very angry and the relations between mother and daughter become strained. Jack writes Betty he has a job for her in the store, and despite her mother's pleading she goes to the city.

Betty is introduced by Jack to Lincoln Parker, junior partner in the store. She secures a position as stenographer and is highly elated, although experiencing twinges of homesickness. One night Jack invites her to supper with him and Parker. Parker makes Jack pretend illness and takes her to a restaurant alone. He tries to kiss her and she indignantly repulses him. The next day she is discharged and, too proud to go home, seeks vainly for work. Luke goes to New York to look for her, finds she has written Jack for help, forces the whole story from him and finds Betty, who is only too glad to be taken home to mother. Luke then asks Mrs. Weston to become his wife and she softly says, "yes." Betty turns with a smile, and leaves the old-time lovers to their new-found happiness.

THE LADIES' WAR (June 17).—One faction of the Ladies' Culture Club favors the election of Mrs. Blenkinsop and the other that of Mrs. Minxton, rival candidates for the presidency. The rivalry is greatly increased when Mrs. Minxton's cook leaves and she lures away Mrs. Blenkinsop's "jewel of a cook," by the promise of better wages, etc. Mrs. Blenkinsop goes to the agency and hires Belinda, a colored girl, who formerly worked for Mrs. Minxton. In order to console his wife for the loss of her valuable cook, Mr. Blenkinsop goes to Fluff, the fashionable modiste, and buys the latest Parisian novelty gown. His wife is highly delighted. Fluff was away at the time Mr. Blenkinsop bought the dress, and is horrified to learn of the sale, as Mrs. Minxton also had given him an order for that gown. He decides to duplicate it. Belinda sees Mrs. Minxton with a dress exactly like the one her present mistress has and rushes over to her with the news. Mrs. Blenkinsop is in an awful state. She asks Belinda to wear the gown to the big meeting that night, the members being requested to bring their servants to hear a series of talks on domestic science. The colored girl arrives during Mrs. Minxton's address and seats herself in the front row with a grand flourish. All eyes turn to her and see the exact duplicate of the dress worn by the lady on the platform. Mrs. Minxton also sees it, falters and then collapses completely. She is carried out, and Mrs. Blenkinsop elected amid great cheering, thus ending the ladies' war.

ONLY A SISTER (June 18).—Although his father and sister, Molly, try to induce Bob Falk to give up his desire for liquor and be a man, it is of no use. He is peremptorily discharged by the foreman of the factory where he works. Bob's father is the editor of the local paper and publishes an article attacking Bill Rank, a gambler, and his followers, who swear vengeance against the editor. Mollie has saved up five hundred dollars for a course at college. Bob comes home one evening intoxicated and is sternly ordered out of the house by his father. Rank and his gang plan to strike at the editor by ruining his son. They find him drinking hard, inveigle him into a card game and after fleecing him of every cent, induce him to draw a worthless check for $500 on the San Antonio Bank. In the morning, he is informed Rank has already started with the check for San Antonio. Knowing his forgery will soon be discovered, he rushes home and tries to make away with himself, but is prevented by Molly. She listens to his story and determines to sacrifice her own ambitions. Taking her savings, she jumps on a horse and rides like mad to reach the bank before its opening. After a terrific ride, she gets there in time to prevent Rank's plan and returns home in triumph. She then gets her brother's job back for him and feels amply rewarded when Bob convinces her he will "make good."

THE PERSISTENT MR. PRINCE (June 19).—Mr. A. Royal Prince falls in love with the photograph of Miss Prunella Peach, a beautiful young society girl, and determines to win her. He sends her his photograph and a letter, saying he is going to marry her on May 1. When she receives his picture, she at once falls in love with it, but when she reads his note, becomes very angry and resolves not to be won in any such high handed manner.

Prince resorts to all sorts of means to win her favor, even going so far as to feign attempted suicide. Miss Peach is finally driven to the country to escape the persistent Mr. Prince. He follows. Only three days remain until May 1 and Mr. Prince becomes desperate. He discovers that Miss Peach intends taking a short trip in an aeroplane, and succeeds in bribing the aviator to allow him to take his place at the wheel. Disguised in long coat, cap and goggles, he helps Miss Peach into the machine and soars into the air. When they are about a thousand feet up, she begins to get nervous. He takes advantage of her fear, and hands her his card, on which is written, "I am going to keep you up here until you promise to marry me. Tomorrow will be May 1!" Between anger, fright at their position and the treason of her own heart which inclines her to accept the audacious prince, she is at her wits' end. One glance at his determined face and she is won. She gives him her promise to become his wife and they glide gently back to earth on the wings of love.

FATHER'S FLIRTATION (Special—Two parts—June 20).—From college, Betty writes her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bunny, asking them to come and visit her. Upon their arrival, Mrs. Bunny inspects Betty's room and declares it is not furnished according to her own ideas. Bunny takes a stroll about town. He meets Mrs. Sweet, a very charming widow who owns a boarding-house in the neighborhood, and makes an engagement to call on her that afternoon. Mrs. Bunny has a "few words" with Betty's landlady and seeks other quarters. By accident, she and Betty apply for a room at Mrs. Sweet's, where Bunny is paying his call. He narrowly escapes discovery. Mrs. Sweet comes to terms with Mrs. Bunny and the former leads Mrs. Bunny and her daughter upstairs to a room, which happens to be the one in which Bunny has taken refuge. He dives under the bed. His wife and Betty settle down and poor Bunny wonders how it will all end.

Becoming worried over her husband's absence, Mrs. Bunny sends Betty out to find him, and then spies a pair of feet sticking out under the bed. She rushes out for help. Bunny sneaks into the next room, puts on a dress and a veil belonging to one of the boarders and sallies forth. Unfortunately, the boarder sees him, and chases him through the house and into the maid's room. There he bribes the maid to set his pursuer off the track, jumps out the window to the street. His attire attracts a big crowd, and after a chase he is arrested. At the station house he is confronted by the owner of the dress, explains matters, pays for the dress and the silence of all concerned is purchased. At the boarding-house, Bunny trembles with fear of exposure when introduced to Mrs. Sweet. He purchases her silence and again all is smoothed over. "No more flirting for me!" says Bunny.

"NEWMAN"
Brass Frames and Rails

"A theatre without a 'front' is like a suit of clothes without buttons," says W. H. Rudolph, of the Majestic Theatre, Dayton, O.—"both are an absolute necessity. Your 'fronts' are far superior to any I have ever seen, and in my lobby and every hotel in Dayton the Newman Brass Easels prominently carry the Majestic announcements."

When buying, be sure the name "Newman" appears on all frames.

Write for new 1914 Catalog.

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.

NEW YORK 101 Fourth Ave. | CINCINNATI 717 Sycamore St. | CHICAGO 108 W. Lake St.

Established 1882

THE cheapest yet most profitable investment in the Moving Picture Business today —Advertising in

The Moving Picture World

Rates on request

GEORGE KLEINE.

ONE WOMAN'S WAY (Cines—Two parts—Special—June 16).—Blinded by the glamor of his title, Virginia Freeman, an heiress, falls deeply in love with Lord Belford, and after a short engagement, their marriage takes place. Once she is Lady Belford, however, the young woman finds herself face to face with the fact that her husband has been in love, not with her, but with her money. An error in the delivery of a bracelet which Lord Belford has bought for "the other woman," and which is sent to his home by mistake, awakens her to the true state of affairs, and she becomes convinced that his lordship is unfaithful as well as neglectful. After a visit to her rival and a direct appeal to the better nature of the adventuress, she refuses her husband's overtures of divorce and sets herself to win his lasting love. When she proves her willingness to give even her life for his happiness, he is awakened and his regeneration follows. In the final scene we see husband and wife starting life anew.

ESSANAY.

THE LITTLE HE AND SHE (June 16).—Celia had been married only a few months. Her husband received a small salary, and Celia could not understand why it was she did not have the pretty things her friends had. One day, while on a shopping tour with her chum, Rose, she is persuaded to buy two beautiful statuettes. The price was a little more than she could afford, but she thought she could pay her chum for them, thereby not creating the suspicions of her husband. Her conscience gets the better of her, however, and she confesses all to him. They quarrel. That night the statuettes came to life and made the two realize that they must give in to each other. Celia promises her husband to be less extravagant hereafter, and all ends happily.

THE FABLE OF THE BRASH DRUMMER AND THE NECTARINE (June 17).—Gabby Gus made the town regularly every month. He was a swell guy and thought he could cop most any Jane that he took a liking to. Clara Louise Willoughby, a farmer's daughter, with a pretty face and figure, took the salesman's eye. He looked the old grent up in Dunn and Bradstreet and discovered that the old boy was worth some coin. Then he set his traps for the daughter. Dad, however, sent her away to boarding school and when she returned she was the swellest peach in the orchard. They all fell for her. Gus hastened to her home, where he discovered she was some lemon when it came to the country stuff, that she was a real highfalutin society butterfly now, and her aspirations were higher than a polr hick drummer. She made him feel awfully small.

Cosmofotofilm Co

"Where the real features come from"

WE HAVE RECENTLY DISPOSED OF THE FOLLOWING SUBJECTS.
FOR OPEN TERRITORY COMMUNICATE WITH PURCHASERS.

"THE HOUSE OF TEMPERLEY"..... London Film Co., Ltd.....5 reels
BY SIR A. CONAN DOYLE TO W. W. HODKINSON, 110 WEST 40TH ST., NEW YORK.

"THE LEGION OF HONOR"..... Film D'Art .....3 reels
"AT THE CONVENT GATE"..... Clarendon .....3 reels
TO MASKO FILM COMPANY, 145 WEST 45TH ST., NEW YORK.

"LT. ROSE AND THE SEALED ORDERS".. Clarendon .....3 reels
TO ITALIAN AMERICAN FILM CO., 1482 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

"DETECTIVE FINN OF SCOTLAND YARD" Regent .....3 reels
"THE GREAT PYTHON ROBBERY"..... Regent .....4 reels
"KING CHARLES" ..... Clarendon .....4 reels
TO I. S. P. CO., 220 WEST 42D ST., NEW YORK.

"THE WRECKERS" ..... Minerva .....3 reels
"THE CHLOROFORM CLUE"..... Minerva .....3 reels
"WHEN LONDON BURNED"..... Clarendon .....3 reels
"THE PRINCE OF DARKNESS"..... Aquila .....5 reels
TO TRANS-OCEANIC FILMS, INC., 145 WEST 45TH ST., NEW YORK.

"THE PIRATE'S REVENGE"..... Skandinavian ..... 3 reels
"TRACKED ACROSS THE ATLANTIC"..... Aquila .....4 reels
TO ARROW FEATURE FILM CO., 145 WEST 45TH ST., NEW YORK.

"A MODERN MEPHISTO"..... Aquila .....6 reels
"VAMPIRES OF THE NIGHT"..... Aquila .....5 reels
TO GREENE'S FEATURE PHOTOPLAYS, INC., 110 WEST 40TH ST., NEW YORK.

"THE HUMAN WOLVES"..... Aquila .....3 reels
"KING OF THE BEGGARS"..... Aquila .....4 reels
TO FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO., 220 WEST 42D ST., NEW YORK.

"THE BLACK SHIP"..... Skandinavian .....3 reels
TO DRAGON FEATURES, 110 WEST 40TH ST., NEW YORK.

COMING

THE W. W. JACOBS STORIES
"SHE STOOPS TO CONQUER"
"TRILBY"
and other great features of Tho London Film Co., Ltd.

FOR SALE NOW

"A VULTURE OF GOLD" . . .	Aquila . .	4 Reels
"THE PRICE OF BLOOD" . . .	Aquila . .	4 Reels
"FACE TO FACE"	Clarendon . .	2 Reels
"HEIR TO A MILLION" . . .	Latium	3 Reels
"THE KING REPENTS" . . .	Film D'Art . .	3 Reels
"MARRIED FOR MONEY" . .	Film D'Art . .	2 Reels

NEW SUBJECTS RECEIVED WEEKLY
IF YOU ARE IN THE MARKET FOR REAL FEATURES COMMUNICATE WITH

Cosmofotofilm Co

Sole American Distributors for The London Film Co., Ltd., M. P. Sales Agency, Ltd., London.
World's Tower Building Phone Bryant 8126 110 West 40th Street, New York

THE WOOING OF SOPHIE (June 18).—Slippery Slim, Mustang Pete and Toad Totter, the Justice of the Peace, are madly in love with the fair but cumbersome Sophie Clutts. Slippery Slim has a terrible time trying to slip away from his rivals, but finally secures a license and is about to marry her when the other two interfere. The story is a comical one from start to finish. It has the necessary laughter-producing qualities that will please any audience.

BRONCHO BILLY—OUTLAW (June 20).—Carnos, a greaser, is sent to jail. He is a very refractory prisoner and swears to get even with the sheriff when he is liberated. On the day of the greaser's release, the sheriff had captured Broncho Billy, an outlaw, and was bringing him to justice, when he is suddenly pushed from his horse by the outlaw, and is left to wend his way across the plains afoot. Broncho Billy escapes on the sheriff's horse and unknowingly stops at the sheriff's home for food. Looking through a window he sees the greaser about to take the life of the sheriff's wife. Rushing in, he overpowers the greaser. The posse arrive and take the greaser away. The sheriff thanks Broncho Billy from the bottom of his heart and secures his pardon from the Governor.

FINGER-PRINTS (Special—Two parts—June 19).—Meredith Blake, a crook, reads in the morning newspaper that Professor Riem, a German scientist, is to arrive in the city on the 10:30 train that evening and is coming to purchase a valuable scarab from Robert Hamilton. He immediately plans to get possession of the scarab before the arrival of the professor. Blake and his three accomplices, Hortense, "Squint," and the "Kid" make their headquarters in an underground room, which has only one entrance, a massive steel door. "Squint" is the only one who is capable of opening this door from the inside.

Blake decides upon a plan. He procures a telegram blank and writes a message to Hamilton, stating that he will arrive at 8:30 instead of 10:30 that evening, and signs it Prof. Riem. The "Kid" then disguises himself as a messenger boy and delivers the telegram. After this the "Kid" disguises as an electric meter reader, and in this manner gains entrance to Hamilton's basement, where he locates the switch, which connects the house wiring with the outside line. This switch happens to be within easy reaching distance of a ventilation hole in the side of the wall, so that one might easily reach in and turn off the power from the outside.

That evening at 8:15 Blake goes to Hamilton's home disguised as Prof. Riem. Hamilton, never doubting his identity, admits him to the living-room, and proceeds to show him the valuable scarab. Blake writes out a fake check for $60,000, the price of the trinket. Hortense has been stationed at the ventilation hole outside with orders to turn the lights off for a few seconds at 8:30 sharp. The "Kid" was to call Hamilton's number on the telephone also at 8:30, so that Blake would know exactly when the lights were going out. The lights are extinguished for just a few moments, and when they are again turned on, the scarab has disappeared. Blake pretends that he is angry, and demands that they all be searched, including Hamilton's daughter, Judith, who has just entered the room. He then rushes out of the room in a fit of fury, declaring that Hamilton intended taking his check, then stealing the scarab. Hamilton is perplexed, but when the butler tells him that the caller wore a wig and false mustache, it is clear to him. He has been robbed. Just at this moment, Richard Neal, Judith's sweetheart, comes to call. He is told of the extinguishing of the lights, and the mysterious disappearance of the scarab. He immediately leads them to the basement, where he finds a finger-print on the handle of the switch. He removes the handle, and after carefully protecting the finger-print, places it in his pocket.

The next day, Hortense, Blake's stylish looking accomplice, approaches a stranger on the street and inquires where she can find the Hamilton residence. This stranger was no other than Richard Neal, who was more than glad to show her to his sweetheart's home. She explained that she was an old schoolmate of Judith's, and would like to see her again. Judith does not recollect any such person, but out of politeness, asks her into the living-room, where she meets Mr. Hamilton. Hortense sits in the large leather chair, which Blake occupied the night before, and when Hamilton dropped his eye-glasses, it offered her a splendid opportunity to reach under the chair and get the scarab, which lay on a small ledge. While picking up the glasses with one hand, she clutched the scarab with the other and slyly placed it in her purse. Instead of handing the eye-glasses back to Hamilton, Neal held out his hand and she placed them in his hand. He had a purpose in doing this, and after carefully placing the eye-glasses in his pocket, bids them good-bye.

Hortense very shortly makes a graceful departure, but Judith is suspicious and follows her. They arrive at the great steel door of the dungeon and after Hortense enters, Judith forces her way after her. She is handled very roughly, and is thrown into a room where the "Kid" is left to guard her. She pleads with him to release her, and he thinking that she will never come out alive, opens a trap door, which will admit her to a sewer, and tells her this is her only chance of escape. She enters the sewer and wanders for hours in the dark passage. When the "Kid" tells Blake what he has done, he is knocked down and thrown out bodily.

In the meantime, Neal has discovered that the finger-prints on the eye-glasses and those on the switch handle are identical, and rushes back to the Hamilton home, where he is told of Judith's disappearance. He and Hamilton immediately start in search of her, and while walking down the street, are attracted by a large crowd assembled around a manhole. As they approach, they are horrified to see Judith emerge from the dark hole in the street, ragged and dirty. Some laborers had lowered a ladder, for the purpose of doing some work. Judith happened to be near and made use of it. The "Kid" happened to be in the crowd, so planning to get square, he leads Judith, her father and Neal to Blake's headquarters. The "Kid" knocked, giving the signal for "Squint" to open the door, and when it was opened, all four rushed in. A terrible struggle then takes place, in which Neal, Hamilton and Judith are overpowered, and after being bound, are thrown into a dark room. The "Kid" again receives a beating and is thrown out. He rushes and tells the police, who arrive very shortly, and blow open the steel door. Another fight then takes place, but this time Blake and his band are taken prisoners, and the scarab returned to Mr. Hamilton.

A GREAT Story
A GREAT Author
A GREAT Production
GREAT Actors
GREAT Photography
GREAT Action
GREAT Scenery
GREAT Advertising and Publicity

All these GREAT Features in

"URIEL ACOSTA"
FIVE REELS

MR. B. ADLER
The Well-Known Dramatist
Plays Title Role

VISITING BUYERS: Come in to see us and you will be convinced that "Uriel Acosta" is the production for you.

You will find it to your advantage to get in touch with us immediately.

"ESCAPED FROM SIBERIA"
FIVE REELS

Another great Masterpiece is open for some territory. The story appeals to everybody, and there is a punch in every foot.

Lots of good advertising and publicity.

Great Players Feature Film Corp.
909 Longacre Bldg.
B'way & 42nd St., NEW YORK

KALEM.

MRS. PEYTON'S PEARLS (Special—Two parts—June 15).—Tony Peyton is found unconscious with his mother's pearl necklace clutched in his hand. The victim absolutely declines to shed light on the mystery. The following story explains the reason for Tony's silence.

Barton, regarded as a man of mystery, keeps all knowledge of men and of the world from his daughter, Eleanor. Fate, however, causes Eleanor and Tony to meet. The two fall in love. Later, Tony secures the girl's promise to elope with him. He arranges to meet her at the railroad terminal in the city that night.

Because his mother refuses to repay a sum of money which she had borrowed from him, Tony appropriates her pearl necklace in jest. Mrs. Peyton's maid sees Tony take the necklace and later imparts the information to a mysterious man waiting outside. Tony leaves for the city and becomes slightly intoxicated on the way.

Eleanor meets her sweetheart that night. Believing he is taking her to a minister, she accompanies Tony to his apartment. Discovering the truth, she shrinks from him in horror. At the same instant, a burglar enters Tony's bedroom via the fire escape.

The intoxicated boy offers Eleanor his mother's pearls, but the girl repulses him. A cry of horror causes both to turn. Standing in the bedroom doorway is Barton. Seizing a vase, the father knocks Tony down.

Father and daughter gaze upon each other in horror. Eleanor finally convinces him of the truth of her story. The knowledge that her father is a thief fills the girl with grief.

The following afternoon, Barton, aided by Eleanor, returns all the jewels he had stolen to the original owners. A maid enters with a message. It is from Tony. The boy acknowledges his baseness, but begs forgiveness. With a glad cry, Eleanor presses the note to her lips.

HOME RUN BAKER'S DOUBLE (Special—Two parts—June 17).—Connie Mack's Athletics is Marguerite Johnson's conception of all that a ball team should be, and Home Run Baker is her favorite hero. When the great ball player knocks out a home run during the course of the game which she attends, Marguerite is ready to worship him. As fate would have it, Home Run Baker saves Marguerite from injury that day and the two become friends.

Wallace, a swindler, learns of the friendship and plans to take advantage of it. With the aid of Chick Day, who closely resembles Home Run Baker, the man sends Marguerite a note requesting a loan. The girl meets Home Run Baker's double the following day, and is about to give him the money, when the real Home Run Baker, who has gotten wind of the scheme, arrives and puts the crooks to flight.

The new Federation League tries to persuade Baker to jump the Athletics. His mother's illness keeps Baker from joining his team the following Spring. The rumor spreads that the famous ball player has decided to leave the American League. To check this talk, Baker departs for the Spring training quarters.

Marguerite's father is interested in the Federation League. Wallace again plans to take advantage of Day's resemblance to Home Run Baker. The crook calls upon Johnson and offers to secure Baker's signature to a contract.

Marguerite sees the crooks closeted with her father. Suspecting something wrong, the girl summons Baker. The athlete jumps into Marguerite's auto and is driven to the house. The impostor is just demanding advance money, when Home Run Baker enters. Filled with rage the ballplayer trounces the crooks and saves Marguerite's father from being defrauded.

THE WAGES OF SINN (June 19).—In common with some other otherwise perfectly good wives,

5 PARTS

THE GREYHOUND, with leaps and bounds, has sprung into popular demand. Exhibitors from all parts of the country are demanding bookings on this wonderful production.

Pronounced by Critics to be a Dramatic Masterpiece

Louis Reeves Harrison, the greatest motion picture playwright in the world, has adapted Paul Armstrong and Wilson Mizner's dramatic and sensational deep sea drama to a wonderful feature film production.

Directed by Lawrence McGill, "The Director Who Knows."

Acted by an all star cast including:

Elita Proctor Otis, Anna Laughlin, Catherine Carter, David Hall, Harry Spingler, William H. Tooker, George De Carlton, Lillian Langdon and other famous legitimate and motion picture actors.

Beautiful one, three, eight and twenty-four sheet lithographs and other attractive advertising matter.

State right buyers, get busy

WIRE, WRITE OR CALL

LIFE PHOTO FILM CORPORATION

102-104, W. 101ST. ST. N.Y. CITY.

Mrs. Sinn has the habit of demanding hubby's entire salary. Consequently, poor Sinn has nothing to show for his week's toil, except his carfare and ten cents for tobacco.

But the worm will turn. Sinn enters the kitchen one night and steals the money which his wife has placed in the cupboard for safekeeping. The culprit then raises the kitchen window, to make it appear as though a burglar had entered the house.

The scheme works. Mrs. Sinn tearfully reports the robbery to hubby. Lacking money for food, she sends him away with a very light breakfast. Sinn, however, makes a bee-line for a restaurant and surrounds a hearty meal. Mrs. Sinn, in the meantime, sells some old clothes and also hastens to the restaurant. The sight of her husband inside gives her a clue as to the real thief.

Disguised as a highwayman, Mrs. Sinn holds up her husband and takes all his money from him. Sinn reports the robbery to the constable. The latter comes to the scene of the holdup with his trusty bloodhound. The animal strikes the scent and leads the two men to the Sinn household.

Terrified, Mrs. Sinn confesses. When the dove of peace returns to the home, it has been agreed that hereafter the pay envlope is to be divided fifty-fifty.

MILITARY TATTOO AT ALDERSHOT, ENGLAND (June 10).—In the Military Tattoo, held at Aldershot, England, is to be found one of the most impressive military spectacles in the world. Thousands of guardsmen, handsomely accoutered, take part in this event.

The Mexican difficulty has brought our soldiers to the fore. Those people who have been fortunate enough to see our boys at drill will find it interesting to compare them with the "Tommy Atkinses" shown in this feature.

BROUGHT TO JUSTICE (June 20).—Upon discovering that Tom loves his daughter, Helen, Hoffman, a rancher, discharges the cowboy. Later, the sheriff of the county resigns. Tom is offered the position.

A band of horse thieves ride off with horses belonging to Hoffman. Similar raids have almost ruined the rancher. Tom vows to bring the criminals to justice. He later wins the gratitude of Wahtunka, an Indian maid, when he rescues her from the unwelcome attentions of Halon, a desperado.

Determined to possess the girl, Halon buys Wahtunka from her father. Tall Elk, Wahtunka's lover, is filled with rage. While the white man is conversing with the tribe, the Indian waylays a member of Halon's band and drags him from his horse. Realizing that the animal will instinctively make its way to the rendezvous of the band, Tall Elk mounts the horse and rides away.

The Indian arrives at the den of Halon's band. Shortly afterward, the leader and Wahtunka enter the cabin. Tall Elk captures him by a clever ruse.

At that moment, Tom, who has trailed Halon because of a suspicion that the man is implicated in the stealing of Hoffman's horses, enters the cabin. Believing Tall Elk a member of the band, Tom is about to shoot him when Wahtunka explains the situation. The three thereupon plan to capture the rest of the band.

When the members of the gang enter the rendezvous shortly afterward, they find themselves trapped. Tom discovers the stolen horses close by. The thieves are handcuffed and taken to jail. Hoffman, overjoyed at the capture of the criminals, allows the new sheriff to marry Helen.

BIOGRAPH.

THE ETHICS OF THE PROFESSION (June 8).—While the physician is asking financial aid of his friend, the broker, on whose advice he had invested his all, he learns that his wife has fled with the broker's son. The broker refuses aid. News arrives that the eloping couple has met with a fatal accident. As the only physician at hand, shall he save the life of the broker's son?

A JONAH (June 11).—Dennis was unfortunate in his love affair. He was left penniless by robbers. He was the victim of an explosion. He could not strike it rich as his pal did in the prospect hole, but—he retained his single blessedness and comparative peace of mind as his pal and successful rival did not.

THE OPAL'S CURSE (June 13).—It looked very much as if the jewelry clerk were guilty of stealing the opals received by his sweetheart's father. In reality he was trying to track them down. The superstition of the crook's lady accomplice proved the thieves' undoing.

PATHE.

PATHE'S WEEKLY NO. 38, 1914 (May 27).—Vera Cruz, Mexico—American troops at Vera Cruz water-works are fired upon by Mexicans and Gen. Funston rushes reinforcements to the scene.

New York City, N. Y.—The hospital ship Solace reaches New York from Vera Cruz with sixty-one marines and sailors wounded in the street fighting there.

Texas City, Tex.—Maj.-Gen. J. Franklin Bell takes command of the United States troops on the border. A salute of thirteen guns greets him.

Niagara Falls, Canada.—The A. B. C. peace mediators meet with delegates from Huerta and the United States to settle the crisis in Mexico if possible.

New York City, N. Y.—New York's "finest," 7,700 strong, march up Fifth Avenue for their annual review by the Mayor.

New York City, N. Y.—The Hamburg-American Liner Vaterland, the largest steamer afloat, reaches New York at the end of her maiden voyage.

Bath, Maine.—The cup contender Defiance, second of the trio to race for the honor of defending the America's Cup is launched here.

Washington, D. C.—To the memory of John Barry, first commodore of American Navy, a statue is unveiled here in presence of President Wilson.

Monaco, Mexico.—Fast-flying motorboats from many countries skim over the sea in the annual power-boat regatta here.

New York City, N. Y.—Our "Teddy" comes home from Brazil and its fevers, changed in face and figure by his fight against disease.

Tulsa, Okla.—Flames sweep the Pierce Oil Company's plant here, consuming thousands of gallons of oil.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 39 (June 3).—Vera Cruz, Mexico.—Vera Cruz prospers under the firm, but kindly rule of the American troops. Scenes and incidents of our occupation of the city.

New York City, N. Y.—A solemn high mass of requiem is celebrated at the Brooklyn Navy Yard for sailors and soldiers who perished in the service of the United States.

Hurlingham, England.—The British polo team practicing on the famous field here prior to sailing for America and the cup games.

New York City, N. Y.—Twenty thousand persons see Buskin win the Metropolitan Handicap at the opening of the racing season at Belmont Park.

Genoa, Italy.—A half million dollar fire sweeps the docks here for a time, endangering the business section of the city.

London, England.—Militant suffragettes, some of them with American flags, march through the streets to Westminster to demand their "rights" of Parliament again.

New York City, N. Y.—In all New York there is not a perfect baby, but here are some that were found to be nearly perfect at the contest of the Women's Home Companion.

Washington, D. C.—"General" Jacob S. Coxey ends his long march to Washington at the head of his "army" of unemployed—nine in all.

Cambridge, England.—King George makes a visit to Cambridge University and is given an ovation by the students.

Ithaca, N. Y.—Cornell Varsity oarsmen row to victory on Lake Cayuga, defeating Yale and Princeton, their ancient foes.

The Flooding and Opening - of the - Panama Canal

IN FOUR PARTS

This great production tells the story of the last few months of construction work and the opening events of the new waterway, covering the most interesting and spectacular period of the Canal.

The only feature portraying the transition period—different from all other Canal pictures—full of action and containing many beautiful scenes.

At Last a Canal Picture

FILLED WITH PUNCHES

State Rights Now Selling

Hagy's Features

239 West Fifty-second St.
New York City

LUBIN.

THE SHELL COMB INDUSTRY (June 16).—An interesting picture showing the evolution of the ornamental comb from the live turtle to its place in milady's wealth of hair. Scores of live turtles are shown trying to right themselves after being turned on their backs. Slicing the shell is a rapid process. The shells are then turned into the factory where they are fashioned by machinery. Exquisite patterns are worked out with drills, whip saws and polishing lathes. The article when finished is truly a thing of beauty. For centuries the shell comb has not only been a useful article of dress, but recognized as a priceless piece of jewelry.

GOOD CIDER (June 16).—Uncle Zeke sends a barrel of cider to his folks in town. Some village rubes drop in and hint for cider. They all suggest different things to put in it to improve the flavor—mustard, cloves, raisins, etc. That night the different members of the family sneak down to the cellar and each drop something into the barrel. One of the rubes sneaks in through the cellar door and adds his donation. The next night they assemble again and the cider is awful. They blame each other. Next day they give the cider to the junk man for carting it away. The junk man takes the cider to the fair ground and sets up a refreshment stand. The barrel is backed against a partition. A tramp bores through the partition and inserts a faucet in the other end of the barrel and undersells the junk man. They both cut prices. Finally the tramp gives it away. The squire gets a jug full. Another rube pours a bottle of whiskey into the jug. The squire takes the cider to the

TO ALL THOSE IN ATTENDANCE AT THE 2ND INTERNATIONAL CONVENTION AND EXPOSITION OF MOTION PICTURE ART

FOR YOUR BENEFIT
DURING THE WEEK OF YOUR CONVENTION
WILLIAM MORRIS WILL PRESENT

ALSO A
HARRY LAUDER
TRAVELOGUE
SHOWING THE GREAT COMEDIANS TOUR FROM DENVER TO SAN FRANSISCO
STATE RIGHTS NOW SELLING

The HARRY LAUDER

SINGING-TALKING-MOVING PICTURES

AT THE

NEW YORK THEATRE

45TH ST. & BROADWAY - CONT. 1 TO 11 P.M.

THIS IS THE INVENTION PERFECTED BY DR. KITSEE OF PHILADELPHIA AND SUFFICIENTLY GOOD TO BE GETTING $1000 PER WEEK IN VAUDEVILLE

ADDRESS ALL COMMUNICATIONS OF INQUIRY TO WILLIAM MORRIS Pres.
HARRY LAUDER FILMS CO.
NEW YORK THEATRE BLDG.

people who had given it away. They drink it greedily and declare it is "durned good cider."

THE STRUGGLE EVERLASTING (Special—Two parts—June 17).—Henry Dawson, newly graduated from law school, returns to the home of his father to enter business with his parent. He is in love with Louise, his father's ward. Slowly it dawns on Henry that his father's immense business in mining stocks is built upon deceit and dishonesty. Father and son quarrel. Henry's finer qualities cause him to leave home rather than participate in dishonesty. In doing this he realizes that it will mean parting from his mother, and also Louise. He merely tells his mother he has quarreled with his father and conceals from her the fact that the father's wealth has been acquired by crooked methods.

Later Henry is assistant to Atwell, district attorney. Louise, at the command of the elder Dawson, has married Runnels, the father's first assistant. Runnels mistreats Louise and she leads an unhappy life. District Attorney Atwell discovers the crookedness in Dawson's latest gigantic deal. He starts the machinery of the federal court to indict Dawson. Henry realizes that he will be forced to assist in running his father down, but he is firm to his honest ideals and pledges Atwell his best efforts. Dawson and Runnels realize they are lost unless they obtain the evidence in Atwell's possession. Runnels, desperate, enters Atwell's office by night to secure the evidence. He is discovered by Atwell. A struggle follows and Runnels shoots Atwell. Runnels flees, believing Atwell dead.

Meanwhile Henry has heard of Louise's unhappiness and has gone to the home of the girl to learn the truth. Runnels, fleeing from arrest, enters his home to find Henry and Louise together. A fierce combat starts between the two men. Deputy marshals, who have been despatched by the wounded district attorney, enter Runnell's home and Runnels is killed trying to escape. Attorney Atwell is unable to appear in person to prosecute Dawson when the day of the trial arrives and the lot falls to Henry. When the broken-hearted mother and the widowed Louise hear of this, they visit Henry to attempt to dissuade him. He remains firm. Terror at the approaching trial and his inevitable disgrace has left Dawson in a serious condition. Henry's mother and Louise, from an ante-room, see the son, as prosecutor, uncover the past of the father before the crowd of spectators in the courtroom. They hear him present testimony that cannot be successfully assailed by the lawyers for the defense. In the midst of the merciless grilling, Dawson falls from the witness chair, a victim of heart failure, and he dies in the arms of his wife.

THE HOUSE OF DARKNESS (Special—Two parts—June 18).—The last guardian of the wealth of the aristocratic Gresham family dies, leaving no one except his granddaughter, Ruth, and Wilks, a faithful family servant, to remain in the isolated old mansion. The immense wealth of the family lies concealed in a secret treasure room, reached by a hidden stairway. Gresham's will appoints John and Henry Collins, brothers of a law firm, to be the guardians, and trustees of Ruth, who is to inherit the fortune when she becomes of age. When the brothers have secured a glimpse of the treasure, its fascination overpowers them. They secretly plot to obtain possession of it. In their avarice, they neglect their business, which goes to ruin. Both move to the mansion so that they may be near the wealth.

Ruth, neglected and mistreated, is cared for only by the kindly old butler, who has always looked upon the brothers with suspicion. Finally the brothers begin to suspect each other of appropriating the treasure. Mutual distrust soon breeds enmity. There is a quarrel and Henry leaves the mansion. He leaves behind a note on the mansion gate reading: "Beware! I shall return." This is found by John, who henceforth lives in constant terror lest the brother appear and kill him.

Years later finds John a crabbed, miserly wretch; he refuses to allow either Ruth or Wilks near the treasure chamber. Ruth has blossomed into young womanhood, but through the stern decree of her irascible guardian seldom ventures beyond the confines of the estate. Finally John is stricken with heart trouble. Philip D'Arcy, a young physician, is called. Much against John's will, Philip decides to stay in the mansion until his patient has passed the danger mark. Gradually Philip begins to love Ruth. At the same time he is trying to solve the mystery surrounding the hidden wealth. Henry, the other brother, now a ragged wanderer, puts in an appearance. During the absence of Ruth and Philip, Henry gains entrance into the mansion after a struggle with the butler, in which Wilks is knocked unconscious. A moment later John, in bed, sees Henry bending over him. Henry secures the keys to the treasure room and creeps down the stairway. John follows. A fierce fight between the gold-crazed brothers takes place. John presses a concealed button and precipitates Henry into a dungeon. Then John discovers the mansion has been set afire by a lantern which Henry had hurled at him. Philip, Ruth and the villagers have now discovered the fire. Philip enters the mansion to try to rescue John. Ruth follows. Meanwhile John, groping in the smoke-filled treasure room, has fallen into the dungeon and lies dead, with Henry at the bottom of it. Philip is unable to find John and fights his way back through the flames to find that both Ruth and himself are trapped. After a struggle he carries Ruth to safety just as the walls of the mansion collapse. Wilks, the butler, has been resuscitated by villagers. Ruth, now convinced of Philip's bravery and love, consents to be his wife.

READ, THINK, ACT!

THE DRAMATIC SENSATION OF THE JEWISH STAGE

די שחיטה

פון יעקב גאדין

אין 4 אקטען

"THE SLAUGHTER"

By Jacob Gordin

In 4 Parts

COPYRIGHTED

FEATURING

Mr. S. ADLER

MME. H. KAMINSKAIA

Territory For Sale Now

One, Three, Six-Sheet Posters and Photos

Bookings Taken On

Variety Feature Film Co.

CH. PENSER, Mgr.

1482 Broadway, New York

Bet. 42nd and 43rd Streets

Phone Bryant 5769

A BARGAIN AUTOMOBILE (June 13).—Bill Baxter, a burglar, is released after a term in Joytown jail. On his way he encounters Jerry Hefer who is trying to start what he believes to be a real automobile. Bill lends a hand and presently Jake Bentley, another crook, turns up. The auto refuses to more and the two robbers offer Jerry five dollars for it, with the idea of "stealing the twon." They start to loot the bank, but Nancy Nugent, an old maid, interferes. She is promptly knocked down, the bank clerks fall over Nancy as they rush out. The police arrive and want to take it on the run. The Chief insists that they use the auto, but it takes so long to start that they have to give up the chase. Feeling themselves safe Bill and Jake lie down to take a sleep. Nancy comes up and, tearing her skirt into strips, bind the crooks and hailing a passing machine runs them back into the town. She then secures the Chief's cap and badge and goes back to find Jerry, who is busy wrecking his car with an axe.

HE CHANGED HIS MIND (June 13).—Martha, a maiden lady, is shocked to see a policeman kissing his best girl and complains to the chief of police. The chief is persuaded to accompany her on a tour of investigation and is angered to find that most of his force spend their time talking to pretty servant girls instead of arresting thieves and murderers. He posts an order to the effect that any policeman caught flirting on beat will be fined three months' pay and sent to jail. This does not please the police and is no more welcome to their sweethearts. They lay a trap for the chief. He is not averse to a little flirtation himself and when a pretty girl meets him in the park and persuades him to have a stroll she does not have to argue very hard nor long. The waiting police bustle after Miss Martha and as she appears on the scene all the girls are found surrounding the chief. The girls and policemen take themselves away, well pleased with the success of their plan; but the chief is not happy when Martha tries to flirt with him. He makes a break for liberty and the cops and girls go along with him. They finally take refuge behind a high fence and from the top dump rubbish down on Miss Martha. The chief is convinced that Miss Martha is a nuisance.

THE PARENT STRAIN (June 19).—Joe and Tom Barry are in love with Ruth Hartley. The girl favors Joe and the boys' mother, realizing that the marriage will be a failure, inasmuch as that her son, Joe, has inherited his father's trait and fever for the gambling table, makes Ruth's father cognizant of the fact and suggests that he break off the engagement between the two. The father confronts Joe with the news and Joe makes a denial. The girl champions her sweetheart and tears the letter up in front of the boy's mother, and refuses to listen any further on the subject. Her confidence is shattered, however, when, on the day that they are to be married, Joe is discovered gambling at the western saloon, and in a fit of anger, the girl marries Tom. When the realization asserts itself, Joe is too late to regain the confidence of the girl. He appeals to the minister of the settlement, who induces him to become a minister and try to make amends preaching the gospel.

Ten years elapse and Joe has become the most respected citizen in the community. Unfortunately for Tom, the gambling fever gets the better of him and he loses the money which his young wife has strived hard to save from his salary as foreman of the mine. One day a letter arrives from the land office to the effect that unless the installment due on their home is paid by a certain date, the property will be taken away from them. Simultaneously with the arrival of the letter, Tom loses his wages at roulette, and coming to the house takes the savings from Ruth and loses that also. The wife appeals to her old sweetheart, Joe, who recovers the money at the point of his gun. The wife is unable to endure the strain any longer and decides to leave her husband forever. Joe intercepts the separation and sends them home after making Tom swear never to touch a card again.

GETTING SOLID WITH PA (June 20).—Fred Lusk wants to marry Nell Nelson, but he is not able to get solid with her father. A friend gives Fred a cigar, which he in turn gives to father. The cigar turns out to be loaded and explodes in the old man's mouth. It looks as if it were all off, but one day Fred finds Nell's father leaning over a bridge rail and tips a thug to throw the old man into the water. He then makes a brave rescue in three feet of waves. Father lets them get married then and there. Just as the ceremony concludes the thugs come back sore because the bill was a counterfeit. But it is too late then: Fred has the girl and father decides to be nice about it.

"From Brain to Screen"

FILMS are DISTINCTIVE. No rehash of worn-out plays, inane magazine stories or discarded novels, but ORIGINAL Creations of the World's Greatest Living Author of Fairy Tales, L. FRANK BAUM, who has infused OZ FILMS with the rich, red blood of his imaginative genius.

Clean and wholesome, teeming with Romance, Comedy and Adventure, OZ FILMS are transferred direct FROM BRAIN TO SCREEN, with all their wealth of Illusions, Marvels, Transformations, Legend, Love and Laughter. EFFECTS NEVER BEFORE SEEN ON THE SCREEN — never before attempted by any producer.

¶ MULTIPLE REEL FEATURES, released whenever our Master Producers consider them as nearly perfect as modern film craft can make them. ¶ A full musical score composed by Louis F. Gottschalk to fit the action, is furnished free with each picture.

Watch for further announcements

FILMS are produced under the personal supervision of Mr. L. FRANK BAUM.

The Oz Film Manufacturing Co.

Santa Monica Boulevard from Gower to Lodi Sts.
Los Angeles, California

INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES

CORRECTIONS FOR THE WEEK.

The first Monday Sterling entitled "Kids" starts on Monday, June 15, and will take the place of the Monday Powers, which will be dropped from the Universal program.

The Rex entitled "The Sherlock Boob" originally scheduled to be released on June 14 will be released on Sunday, June 21. The Rex for June 14 will be "The Pursuit of Hats."

UNIVERSAL

VICTOR.

THE SHEEP HERDER (Two Parts—May 25).—Madeline Albright left the city to take up her life on the plains as the wife of Jeff Albright, cattleman. The time came when the loneliness of the vast plains palled upon Madeline; she could not resist longing to return to the life and amusements and action. Incidentally she took her baby boy with her. Years passed—her son, Jack grew up and went west. He finally went to work as a cowboy on his father's cattle ranch, each unknown to the other. Here he met and fell in love with Anita Carew, the foreman's daughter.

One day Jack received a letter from his mother to the effect that she was sick and must undergo a major operation. A good position as a sheep-herder offered itself and, throwing aside his pride, he took it. He became hated and shunned by all but Anita. She still believed in him. But Jack rebelled at the taunts of the cattlemen and soundly thrashed one of them. With this Jeff Albright, his father, decided to drive him from the range.

In the meantime Jack's mother arrived at his cabin. She was there when Jeff and his men rode up and delivered the ultimatum. She heard a familiar voice and stepped out. Jeff recognized the woman he had yearned for so many years and cattle feuds were forgotten. And there was the boy—his own son—whom he had come to "clean out." And from there on—well, another story commences there, but it is left to the imagination of the spectator.

THE GOLDEN LADDER (June 10).—Jack has always been the more thoughtful of his mother. He remained on the farm with her while his older brother went to the city. When the brother returned with a wife who had great notions of just how things should be—who could see nothing good in the mother, it hurt Jack. And because the older son owned the farm, Jack went West to make his own fortune, and take his mother from it all.

In the West he experienced hard times. And though he met a girl who he learned to love, he did not forget his mother. Time came when Jack struck it rich. The father of his sweetheart was killed. Jack took the girl in and made a partner of her. When their pile was made they married and started East, to the little farm and the boy's mother.

But the mother, during that time, had been ill-treated and finally forced out of the home by the older brother's wife. When Jack got off the train at the little country station he found the mother waiting to take the train out—to the poor house. Of course, he put his arms around her and with the joyous consent of his wife, he told her she should be one of them in their new home.

THE DOCTOR'S TESTIMONY (Two Parts—June 5).—John Lund and George Dean are business partners. John is married to Flo and has two children. Dean is fond of his friend's children, and visits the house to see them. John misinterprets his attentions—his jealousy is aroused. But there is a Dr. Carter, both Lund's and Dean's physician, who loves Flo, and tries to force his attentions upon her. She repulses him.

Of an afternoon Dean calls at his partner's home and this time brings flowers to Flo. Lund openly accuses Dean, and tells him to refrain from bringing flowers to his wife. Dean returns home, the excitement having brought on an old ailment, heart disease. Dr. Carter is called by Dean. After the doctor's departure, Lund calls to demand an explanation. Dean excuses his valet before he receives him.

There is a quarrel between the two men—there is a struggle, at the end of which Dean drops back dead from heart failure. Lund departs hurriedly, thinks he is guilty. Dr. Carter returns and finding Lund's cane in the room, plans to compromise him. Lund confesses to his wife that he has killed his friend.

Dr. Carter writes to the wife telling her that if she will call at his office he will show her a way out of difficulty. Flo goes, but Carter, instead of helping Flo, first informs the police that Lund left evidence of his guilt, and where he can be found. When Flo calls he tries to make love to her. She repulses him, and there is a struggle in which one of the electric lights is broken. Carter, investigating, touches the switch, and is electrocuted, owing to a short circuited wire.

In the meantime Lund is arrested. However, the coroner's report is that Dean died of heart trouble and not strangulation, as supposed. Lund reaches home a moment after Flo has dashed home after Carter's tragic death. Retiring to the sitting-room, they open the window and as the moon pours in its mellow light, they catch its glow and renew promises of love and devotion.

THE SAND HILL LOVERS (June 15).—Dave and Phillip Hull, twins, are totally different in character. Dave is steady, slow to hate and true in love. Phillip, the gay and popular gambler, is perhaps more lovable on the surface, but shifty and flare-tempered underneath. Dave loves little Meg, daughter of Hardy, a cattle rustler. Dave does not know that the father is a cattle rustler, however.

Phillip shoots a gambler in a quarrel and makes his escape to his brother's ranch. Here, he meets Meg and immediately begins courting her. She yields to him and he promises to marry her. Meanwhile the gambler dies and the sheriff and posse search for Phillip. Dave has learned of his brother's refusal to marry Meg. Determined that right shall be done, Dave goes for the minister. The father too has learned of the case, but thinks Dave the man. He decides to kill him and starts for the ranch.

Dave returns to his home, only to find the posse on his brother's trail. He offers to exchange clothes with Phillip and submit to arrest in his brother's place, providing the guilty man will marry the girl. Phillip agrees. Dave, dressed as his brother, slips from the window to draw pursuit. Meg's father approaches and shoots to kill through the open window at Phillip, whom he supposes is Dave. Dave is brought back and the tangle is straightened out with the sad wedding of Meg and the true-hearted Dave.

A SINGULAR CYNIC (Two parts—June 19).—Frederick Stratton believes that no woman can make up her mind because she hasn't a mind worth making. He tells this to Flo Welton, the sister of his best friend, who is a spoiled New York beauty, coquetting with a Russian nobleman and a rich New Yorker. Both shower attentions on her, but Flo refuses to decide between them.

Brant Welton, brother and guardian of Flo, disgusted with Flo's flirtations, decides to seek Fred's advice. Fred advises Brant to force Flo to make up her mind. To accomplish this, he suggests to Brant that the Russian be allowed to abduct Flo and take her to Bonnet, of a friend to find out if forceful methods will bring about decision. Then the other suitor is to be told where Flo is imprisoned and allowed the opportunity to rescue her at a certain hour after due time has been given the Russian. Thus he believes the rescue act will soften Flo into accepting the New Yorker if she has not already accepted the Russian.

The plan is put into operation. It is working smoothly, much to Fred's amusement, until one day his pet collie dog, carrying a notebook belonging to Flo, drops it on the beach. Taking it up he idly opens it and reads. Suddenly he galvanized into action. He hurries away, gains entrance to the house where Flo is a captive. He confronts Flo with the notebook containing poetry of love which she has written about him. At first Flo denies, but finally acknowledges she loves him. They leave the house via a ladder and are hardly gone when the second suitor enters, finds Flo gone, but meets her abductor, the Russian, each believing the other has taken Flo away. They fight till thoroughly battered. Then concerned for Flo's safety, they hurry away only to learn of her engagement to Fred.

IMP.

A MEXICAN WARRIOR (May 25).—King has a meek wife, also a strong-minded mother-in-law who thinks it her duty to see that he walks in the straight and narrow path. King also has three rather swift friends.

One night after he successfully eluded his mother-in-law and joined his friends in a nearby thirst emporium, King thinks out a scheme whereby he can rejoin them later, and make a night of it. His friends are to tell his wife and her mother that he has enlisted in the army to fight the Mexicans. This they do, stopping first, however, at a costumer's and gathering a nondescript uniform for his use in the battles to come.

King arrives at his home, finds his wife in tears and blames his actions on his mother-in-law. The three friends in the meantime have come across an old horse. This they take to King, and amid tears, whoops and yells, King sets out for the seat of war. On turning the corner he meets his friends in an auto. Giving the fiery steed a parting kick, he joins them, and they start out to diminish the town liquor supply. The horse watches the auto out of sight, then trots back to King's house. The wife, seeing it return without its rider, thinks he must have already fallen a victim of a Mexican bullet. She announces her intentions of following her husband as a Red Cross nurse. That night in "wee sma' hours," King's friends bring him to his front door in a complete state of non compos mentas and, propping him up, ring the bell and beat it. Mother comes to the door and marches King down to the station and forces him to enlist.

HIS LAST CHANCE (Two parts—June 1).—Bob Reid, reporter, neglects his work to play in with a fast crowd. His friend, Tom, who is secretary to Carl Ritz, young millionaire, is the leader of the crowd, and at the opening of the story we find him using his employer's money to pay his card debts. Bob is warned to attend more closely to business, and his sweetheart, Nora, also employed in the office, joins in the demand.

Following the afternoon when Bob has been told that he has one more chance to make good, we find the friends at Ritz's house playing cards. Tom, the secretary, loses heavily and, bribing the butler—the elusive, smiling fellow—to hold his tongue, he appropriates more of his master's money. Later that night, a telegram is brought, stating that Ritz is coming home. It is the next afternoon that Bob and Tom hatch up the plan to kidnap the millionaire.

The kidnapping is done and the millionaire is left prisoner in an old deserted house. But before Bob can get his story into print, a mysterious message is delivered to the police telling them to look in the deserted house, and find a dead man. No name is given. It is through Nora that the detective detailed on the case listens to Bob's version; he believes Bob. They wire the millionaire's twin brother, and then after his arrival, lay a trap to get the guilty person. The finish is sensational in its development and a huge surprise to all concerned.

The real murderer was the butler, who watches the young fellow's movements, and went to the deserted house, hoping to get a ransom for letting Ritz go. But Ritz turned upon him—there was a struggle. All this is shown in the epilogue entitled "What Really Happened?"

THE FATAL STEP (June 18).—Ruby, the village telephone operator, and Evans are friendly, though accidentally she is brought to realize his cowardice by her rescue from a terrible death by Raymond. Her future actions toward Raymond prove to Evans that he has lost her affections. This fans his animosity to revengeful hatred. A hunting accident to Raymond a few days later gives Evans his chance for revenge. He is sent to repair a damaged telephone wire which Raymond had accidentally caused. His threats are overheard by Ruth owing to the fact that he (Ervin) has left his tests connected. While Evans drags Raymond to edge of the train tracks and drops him over, Ruby hurries to the rescue with a doctor. Evans, meantime, meets his just deserts by a fatal mis-step in again climbing the pole to disconnect the tests, and Raymond tries to rescue him—though just in time from a passing train. Raymond collapses in Ruby's arms as the doctor crosses Evans' arms as a sign of his just death.

STERLING

SNITZ JOINS THE FORCE (June 4).—Snitz is asleep, dreaming of extreme wealth. He awakens to observe the sergeant of police making love to a pretty girl. He is immediately smitten and watches his opportunity to make the girl's acquaintance. In due course of time he declares his love for her, but she expresses her preference for brass buttons and a blue uniform.

After consideration, Snitz decides to become a policeman. He is appointed to his rival's precinct—a place that has been over-run with gangsters. The sergeant discovers Snitz making love to his girl and in order to get rid of him, he sends Snitz out, single-handed, to capture the gangsters.

But instead of pursuing, Snitz is pursued by the gangsters. There are hair-raising chases through streets and over roofs. At the top of a chimney Snitz and a gangster have a struggle—they fall down the chimney into the police station. Snitz, realizing where he is, turns his man over to the captain as though he had captured him. The captain immediately strips the sergeant of his badge and places it on Snitz to the anger and jealousy of the sergeant.

NESTOR

'CROSS THE MEXICAN LINE (June 17).—Lieut. Wallace leaves his fiancee, Dorothy West, to cross the boarder with his troops into Mexico. Later he is wounded, captured and taken to the hacienda of the Mexican officer, Senor Paranze, where his wounds are dressed by Senora Paranze. The latter falls in love with the American when he defends her from her brutal husband. She is about to aid him to escape when she discovers that he has a sweetheart. Learning who the girl is, Senora Paranze bids Wallace go to a certain spot and there await further instructions as to his escape. She then writes a note to Dorothy telling her to meet her wounded lover there.

Dorothy receives the note and with her father makes a night ride to the spot. On arriving, the three Americans are captured by Mexican bandits. The Senora had arranged it. She awaits to enjoy the sight of her triumph. But it is more than she can stand; she attempts to secure their freedom. Unable to do this she returns to her husband. In the meantime Dorothy secures a knife and cuts the bonds of her lover and by an adroit action the pair holds up the chief and the band. They escape to be pursued across the border, where a skirmish takes place. A squad of American cavalry rescue the lieutenant and his party and drive off the Mexicans.

SOPHIE OF THE FILMS (No. 3—June 19).—It has now been thoroughly demonstrated that the poor Sophie would do better at shelling peas than acting for the camera. However, the general manager of the Uneeda Feature Film Company insists

BOSWORTH INC.

PRODUCTIONS

of

JACK LONDON'S BOOKS

are undoubtedly the most sensational, thrilling, gripping, red blood stories ever filmed.

They are in a class by themselves and in keeping with America's most popular author, Jack London.

Released through PARAMOUNT PICTURES CORPORATION after Sept. 1st.

The variety and originality of these interesting features will make one of the strong supporting pillars of

PARAMOUNT PICTURES

to be the most pre-eminent picture program ever presented.

It is not good policy to let your opposition secure these much talked of popular motion pictures ahead of you.

BOSWORTH, Inc.

640 North Olive Street Los Angeles, Cala.

110 West 40th Street, New York City

"36 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

1914

SEPTEMBER 1914

S	M	T	W	T	F	S
..	..	1	2	3	4	5
6	7	8	9	10	11	12
13	14	15	16	17	18	19
20	21	22	23	24	25	26
27	28	29	30	..	..	..

代司本月

"Climb Yet a

That line was written by Lao Tzu,
"No matter how high you climb," he reach, climb yet

That is the principle that will actuate the motives and purposes

Seasons, 1914

FAMOUS PLAYER

DANIEL FROHMAN, CHARLES FROHMAN

"36 FAMOUS FEA

including even a greater array of celebrated stars and famous plays and novels

The distinguished dramatic successes owned and controlled by Charles tures, interpreted by the greatest stars of the contemporary stage, and presented

Since the early part of 1912 we have been striving constantly to perfect an of feature films. Today we are fairly satisfied that we have such an organiza-

We thank the trade for its confidence in our past endeavors; we intend to

Beginning September 1st, we will distribute

"36 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

FAMOUS PLAYERS

EXECUTIVE OFFICES
213-229 W. 26th STREET
NEW YORK

1915

"36 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

楊吉每匯

Story Higher!"

the ancient Chinese philosopher. said, "no matter what heights you a story higher!"

of the FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO. during the next year.

---1915, the

S FILM CO., in association with and HENRY W. SAVAGE, Inc., will present

TURES A YEAR!"

than we have heretofore released!

Frohman and Henry W. Savage, Inc., will be produced in feature motion pic- with every advantage that can be created or secured.

organization thoroughly equipped for the production of a distinctive program tion. We expect the results of the next year to justify this view.

work very hard indeed to deserve its continued support.

through Paramount Pictures Corporation.

FILM COMPANY

ADOLPH ZUKOR, President

DANIEL FROHMAN, Managing Director EDWIN S. PORTER, Technical Director

"36 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

JESSE L. LASKY

announces

The Forthcoming Visualization of the Master Works of the World's Greatest Producers, Authors and Dramatists

INCLUDING

Past and Future Productions of

DAVID BELASCO

The Foremost Successes of

LIEBLER & CO.

Premier Productions of

COHAN & HARRIS

ETC., ETC.

JESSE L. LASKY FEAT

LONG ACRE THEATRE

JESSE L. LASKY
PRESIDENT

CECIL
DIRE CT

PROCLAMATION

Pledging Our Policy Of Producing Prodigious Plays with Prominent Players. Pointing to our Past Performances as our Permanent and Perennial Program. Persevering in our Purpose to Please the Public and Pursue the Path to Perfectness. ∴ ∴

AT A LATER DATE

Paramount Pictures Corp.

WILL DISTRIBUTE OUR PERFECT PHOTO-PLAYS.

URE PLAY COMPANY

N.Y.C. W. 48TH STREET

SAMUEL GOLDFISH
TREAS. & GEN'L MANAGER

DE MILLE
ENERAL

PARAMOUNT

ADOLF ZUKOR

Wm L. SHERRY

FRANK A. GARBUTT

W. W. HODKINSON

CHARLES FROHMAN

GIGANTIC

PARAMOUNT PICTURES

The men with brains, money and experience in the Motion Picture and Theatrical World who have formed a satisfactory alliance (from the manufacturer's, exchange's and exhibitor's standpoint) for the purpose of releasing a real quality program of feature pictures throughout the entire United States.

First release of this program September 1st
Full particulars announced later

DANIEL FROHMAN

EDWIN S. PORTER

RAYMOND PAWLEY

F. A. PAWLEY

PICTURES

JAMES STEELE

HOBART BOSWORTH

SAMUEL GOLDFISH

JESSE L. LASKY

COMBINATION

PARAMOUNT PICTURES

A Program that first of all considers the exhibitors.
A Program that will be nationally advertised from Maine to California.
A Program with two big real quality features each week.
A Program that will cost twice as much to produce as the average one.
A Program that will revolutionize the motion picture industry.
A Program that you must have it you would conduct a real picture theater.

Paramount Pictures Corporation

Temporary Offices: 110 West 40th Street

Telephones: Bryant, 8463 - 8464

DAVID BELASCO

HIRAM ABRAMS

WM E. SMITH

J. B. CLARK

CECIL DE MILLE

BOSWORTH INC.

will contribute to the program of the

Paramount Pictures Corporation

a series of spectacular, impressive feature film subjects.

We will select for these subjects powerful stories with unusual possibilities for screen visualization.

We will consistently try to uphold the highest standard possible to attain.

The brightest era of the motion picture art is at hand. We will make every effort to assist its development.

BOSWORTH, Inc.

640 North Olive Street Los Angeles, Cala.

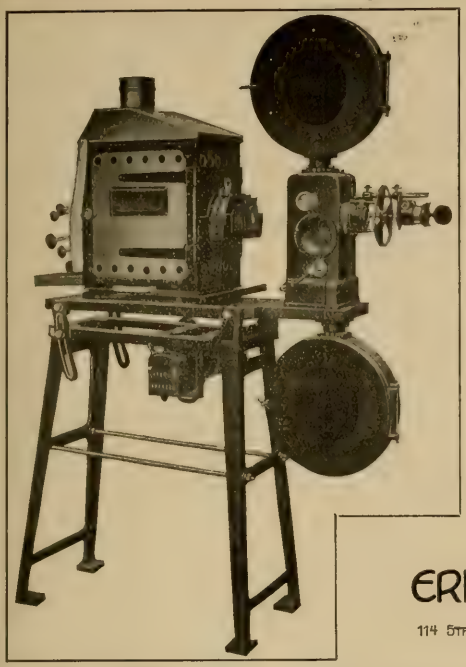
110 West 40th Street, New York City



Increase your bank account by pleasing your audience. You can do so by using THE KING of all Projecting Machines,

The Ernemann All-Steel Projector "IMPERATOR"

The only machine that shows an ABSOLUTE GUARANTEED FLICKERLESS PICTURE. Don't be behind time. Write for descriptive literature.

ERNEMANN-PHOTO-KINO-WORKS
114 5TH AVENUE NEW-YORK 114 5TH AVENUE

Film Quality

Quality in the film—quality from a technical photographic standpoint is as important to the Exhibitor as is interest in the story that the film tells.

There's one film that's recognized the world over as the standard of quality—that is always used by those whose effort it is to give the Exhibitors the very best goods and the very best service—Eastman film.

And it is identifiable. Look for "Eastman" on the perforated margin.

EASTMAN KODAK COMPANY,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

THE CENTAUR FILM COMPANY

The Oldest Independent Film Manufacturer

Has the largest commercial plant in America, the most up-to-date equipment, and an organization second to none.

Printing and developing in any quantity. Quality guaranteed. Prices interesting.

CENTAUR FILM CO.
Bayonne, N. J.

that she be given another chance. The company is taking a scene from a burning house. All goes well until the time comes for Sophie to jump out of the second story window. At the last moment her nerve fails her. The camera is taking the scene. The director is yelling: "Jump! hang you, jump!" But the scenery comes down instead of Sophie.

Next, unfortunate Sophie is to be cut in two at the old sawmill—howbeit, the saw is made of paper. At the last minute, while the villain is gloating over his victory, Sophie grabs the saw and stops it. She was afraid—another scene ruined. In the insanity of desperation, the director takes Sophie to a pier and makes her jump off. At last he believes himself rid of her. But he is wrong. Eddie, the leading man, rescues her. The unhappy girl has sacrificed much for greatness, but her cup of mishap is not yet full. The general manager rushes up, waving a telegram. War has been declared in Mexico. Sophie is given another span of life as an actress. She and the company are dispatched to the border to take war pictures.

JOKER

THE FATAL LETTER (June 17).—Schultz is an excessive smoker. One day he feels his heart churning like a pump. The doctor says: "Out out smoking or turn up your heels." Schultz chooses to quit smoking. He does quit—for one day. He is so satisfied with his display of self-denial that he sets in and smokes five boxes of Havanas without stopping.

When the doctor arrives he prescribes that Schultz go into the mountains out of reach of tobacco. Mrs. Schultz is a good wife, but Schultz is carrying on a flirtation with one Trixie. Before leaving for the mountains he writes a letter to Trixie. He neglects to mail it, however, and leaves it in an old coat at home. The terrible thought of Mrs. Schultz finding this letter dawns upon him during his journey to the mountains. Schultz turns up the road in his hurry to get home. He arrives just in time. In future Schultz is a wiser and a better man.

CRYSTAL.

FOOLISH LOVERS (June 16).—Marguerite and Algernon are sweethearts. Marguerite's uncle visits her unexpectedly and Algernon observes him kissing her. He writes her a letter saying she will never see him again. She shows it to her uncle, and they decide to go to his house. Algernon has attempted to have his gun repaired, but the gun-maker returns it, saying it is not worth fixing. Marguerite and her uncle enter as Algernon is looking at the gun. She begs him not to kill himself. He pretends that her pleadings are all that prevent him from doing so. He goes out to buy a bottle of wine. While he is gone, Marguerite finds the gun-maker's letter and waxes angry. She and her uncle leave.

Algernon comes back and finds that they have gone. He follows. He arrives at her house, but she snubs him. Marguerite's maid plans a scheme that will bring the two lovers together. She phones Algernon that Marguerite is seriously sick and that he should come over at once. He calls, but Marguerite again snubs him. The maid then tells her that he has been run over by an automobile. Marguerite has him brought into the house where the foolish lovers become reconciled.

BOXES AND BOXERS (June 16).—Vivian has two admirers, Charlie and Dave. On her birthday they decide to bring her flowers. Dave's chum takes the flowers out of the box and substitutes a set of boxing gloves. Charlie takes the box to Vivian, and leaves it on the table. Dave's box of flowers is like Charlie's. When Vivian comes in, she opens them, and finds the boxing gloves. The men accuse each other. Joe, a third admirer of Vivian's, suggests that they have it out by putting on the gloves. This is agreed upon. Dave and Charlie battle with each other, nearly wrecking the house. They fight themselves out of a window and on to the street, where they mix up with two minions of the law and are finally arrested. When they get out of jail they again seek Vivian, but find that Joe has captured her. They decide that they are better boxers than lovers.

GOLD SEAL

LUCILLE LOVE, THE GIRL OF MYSTERY (No. 7—Two parts—May 26).—After numerous stirring adventures by land and sea in her effort to regain the papers which will save her father from dishonor, Lucille Love and Hugo Loubeque, her father's enemy, find themselves adrift in an open boat off the coast of China. The papers, possession of which both are fighting for, are now in the hands of Captain Wetheral of the ship from which Lucille and Loubeque were cast adrift.

The enmity between Lucille and the spy dies down when they find themselves in the same boat at the mercy of the waves and winds. They are a man and a woman fighting against death. When Lucille awakens from her first sleep of trouble and exhaustion, she learns from Loubeque that the water barrel has sprung a leak and is empty. In the days that follow Loubeque proves to be a man, indeed. As a result of thirst and exposure Lucille becomes delirious, and it is only by use of main strength that Loubeque keeps her in the boat.

After many days, however, the outcasts land on the coast of China. Lucille is ill and the spy turns her over to an old Chinese woman. Howbeit, as soon as one danger is averted another springs up. The Chinese woman no sooner sees the costly necklace which Lucille wears than she decides to steal it.

B. Franklin: He's Squizzled at Tele-Photo-Phone

MARVELOUS DEVICE PROVES ENTIRELY TOO MUCH FOR THE OLD GENTLEMAN.

Veracious Ben III. is pilot

LEAVES, CONVINCED THAT HIS KITE AND KEY CERTAINLY "STARTED" SOMETHING.

By Beniamin Franklin III

Last night I went down to the offices of the Chariot Film Corporation, 110 W. 40th Street, New York City, and ran across the shade of my illustrious ancestor, Benjamin Franklin I., rubbering at the seeing telephone machine. I bowed profoundly, and wished him good evening.

"Why, hello, Ben," he said, sticking out his hand with the lace cuff on it. "You 'rapped' me the first thing, didn't you? I didn't suppose anybody would be on."

"Oh, I was on the very minute I saw you come down through the skylight," I replied. "This is a hot one, grand pop, and no show like this would be complete without you."

"Well, judging from results, I did turn a rather clever trick the day I got my kite out and unlocked the lightning with my key," he said, sort of swelling up. "Many a man has got his kite out since that day who couldn't find his key, and who couldn't unlock anything with it if he had it," he added, looking wise.

"This is some picture, grand pop," I said.

"Where's Tom Edison, Nick Tesla, Marconi, Alex Bell and that bunch," he asked.

"Marked absent," I replied. "We've got so many new electrical wizzes now that we don't need them. Come on, let's watch the show."

"Sure," said my illustrious forbear, sitting down beside me in the projecting room.

"What's that skiddidus there," he asked, as the screen showed the photographic apparatus of the tele-photo-phone."

"That," I replied, with an air of superior knowledge, "is the machine that attaches to the telephone, and through which you can see the person you are speaking to."

"And what in the name of George Washington and the revolutionary Fathers is a tele-photo-phone?" he snorted.

"Why, grand pop, is it possible that you don't know what a tele-photo-phone is? Why a tele-photo-phone is—but wait, look, look at the picture, there it is."

And there was then unfolded to him the working of the tele-photo-phone, how it was possible to see through it, and he actually did see thrown on the screen, the picture of a convict trying to get into the inventor's home, the wife telephoning her husband, and then the whole scene enacted in two rooms, miles apart, all seen through the tele-photo-phone.

"Boy," he demanded, "Art joshing me?"

"Nary a josh," I declared. "This show is strictly on the level." He staggered a bit and grasped me on the arm.

"Bow," he said, feebly. "Break these things to me gently. The old man's mind isn't as strong as it used to be, I fear."

My illustrious ancestor just gazed and gazed, pressed his hand to his forehead and sat back in his chair, he was so astonished.

He then saw the throwing on of the current for the working of the tele-photo-phone, and the different workings, all portrayed in the picture.

"Hold on Ben," he shouted as the mysteries were unraveled before his eyes, "Hold on. You've got me hanging on the ropes, I'll go down for the count in a minute."

Then I explained to him all the wonderful advances of electricity, such as flatirons run by electricity, biscuits and pies being cooked by electricity, coffee brewed by the same means, a sewing-machine run the same way, clocks regulated by it, electric grates burned by electricity a fan run by the same power, milk churned by electricity, and a moving picture machine operated by electricity.

Then we saw the photo-gelea box thrown on the screen, the box that holds the photographic apparatus. "What sort of an ornithorincthus is this?" he asked, sorely puzzled.

I told him, and he wabbled perceptibly.

Then we saw the tele-photo-phone save the blind wife of Dr. Hall, saw the despicable villain hurled from the telegraph pole by a streak of lightning, where he was trying to cut the wires for the demonstration that would revolutionize the telephone; saw the shrunk of a convict who tried to injure the blind wife get killed by an electrical bolt from the sky; and last, the marvelous invention operating successfully.

"Well, jumping-gee-whillikens," he exclaimed. "Now wouldn't that run a clothespin through your medulla oblongata?"

When I tried to explain to him the workings of the moving picture machine and how the pictures were made and projected he just threw up his hands.

"Can't wait to see it," he said. "Can't stand it any more, all too wonderful. I'll call again. I must blow now. Goodbye."

And the shade of the illustrious ancestor disappeared through the skylight, humming

"This is the life
This is the life for me."

STATE RIGHTS FOR SALE.

Written and conceived by Alex Yokel, General Manager

CHARIOT FILM CORPORATION

110 West 40th Street NEW YORK CITY

Lucille learns of the plot, and when the thieving woman and a confederate come to rob her she is prepared. In self-protection she shoots the Chinese woman and uses the confederate to cover her retreat.

In the meantime Hugo Loubeque has gathered a force of men and attacked Captain Wetheral's ship, which rides in the harbor. Loubeque takes the precious documents from the captain and has him thrown into prison. Loubeque then opens negotiations with a Chinese merchant, which results in his signing an agreement to smuggle ammunition to the port.

Lucille learns from the imprisoned sea captain that Loubeque has again come into the possession of the papers. The captain, however, had retained Loubeque's diary, and this he gives to the girl. While shadowing Loubeque Lucille learns of his intended smuggling operations, and when the occasion offers she steals Loubeque's signed contract with the Chinese merchant, with the intention of using it as a lever to force the stolen documents from him.

The girl, however, is now in a new predicament. Loubeque has regained possession of his ship and intends sailing immediately for the United States, where the papers will be used to dishonor her father. She hides on the wharf and watches Loubeque board the ship. It will sail within a few minutes, and whatever she does must be done quickly.

REX.

SHADOWED LIVES (May 28).—Robert is a prosperous bank cashier, straight-forward and of simple tastes. His wife is of that type of ultra-modern woman who will not listen to the call of motherhood, but satisfies her neurotic nature with drugs. The opium habit is an expensive one and with this and her other vanities she forces more money from her husband than he can afford.

Her husband's twin brother, Jim, is the moral antithesis of Robert. He is a slave of the drug habit in spite of the heroic attempt of his wife to save him. Threatening suicide if he is refused Jim forces Robert to furnish him with money to satisfy his craving.

With this double drain on his resources Robert's accounts are short. He is arrested, convicted and sent to prison for ten years. Without the moral restraint furnished by her husband, Robert's wife sinks to the lowest level and dies unknown in a dive.

When Jim hears that Robert is in prison as a result principally of his own misdeeds he decides to put his worthless life to one sublime last use. He goes to the prison, forces Robert to change clothes with him. Robert goes into the world to make a fresh start.

SWEDE LARSON (Three parts—June 4).—Swede Larson, who has earned the title of the best working and best hated boss of the timber jacks by virtue of his strength and willingness to use it, takes over the camp saloon. Kid Lacy, gambler, arrives in town with Hazel, his wife. The rough Swede, for the first time, experiences a strange feeling upon coming in contact with the soft ways of the woman. Lacy himself is a New Yorker, who has run away with a successful musical comedy star.

Lacy has tired of the little woman. And she, in her turn, realizing her mistake, decides to leave him. She does so, and is defended by the Swede, who protects her against the insults of a crowd of lumber jacks in a big fight. She shows her thanks and appreciation. The Swede is astonished and bewildered to find the first person who has trusted and depended upon his strength. He takes her into his saloon and offers her his shelter.

Hazel awakens next morning before the Swede and leaves. Larson, awakening, finds that all he has left to remind him of the woman is a little handkerchief. Now come lean days for the Swede, who has ruled so brutally and made so many enemies. The loggers boycott his place. Lacy visits him, showing him a newspaper account of Hazel, wherein her past is bared and a dismal present as a broken-down singer at a cheap roof garden in the city, is revealed. There is a terrific fight following this; the gambler is killed by a crippled water-boy. Larson escapes, determined to find the woman of his dreams. Arriving in the city, he locates the foul resort just as Hazel is singing. When argument fails to move her, he carries her off in true caveman style, eluding his pursuers. As they halt in their flight, the woman realizes the love of the Swede and gives herself over to his keeping. Then back to the hills and the forests and happiness which neither had known before.

THE PURSUIT OF HATE (June 14).—Diana Grave's husband has left her, preferring any life to that of living with a woman who is not congenial to him. Howbeit, her husband gone is a different matter than her husband present. She commissioned a detective to find him. Out on a lonely stretch of fertile land a solitary ranch-woman was whiling away the days of her life. One day a stranger arrived with a boy, a small girlish looking fellow. He attracted and was attracted by the ranch-woman. They were of the same true metal. The man was Diana's husband.

Diana learned of his whereabouts and went after him. She explained to the ranch-woman. The ranch-woman answered, "If you hate him, be glad he left you, and if you love him, you will sacrifice yourself for his happiness and leave him alone." Diana left him alone. One night while the ranch-woman was watching his camp she saw the stranger's shadow against the tent. He was fondling a girl's abundant hair. This boy then who traveled with him was in reality a girl or a woman.

EXCELSIOR
FEATURE FILM CO., INC.

Announce
The Release of Their First Production

"The Toll of Mammon"

A Forcible Masterpiece in Four Parts

Written and Directed by HARRY HANDWORTH (Late Pathe Head Director)
Featuring OCTAVIA HANDWORTH (Late Pathe Star)

Supported by GORDON DE MAINE, TOM TEMPEST, WILLIAM A. WILLIAMS (Late Pathe Leading Man) and Many Other Screen Favorites

A Thrilling Story based upon Realistic Life. Dealing with a vital question of the present, revealing a moral which appeals to every individual and vividly portrayed. Excellent photography and full of action.

Elaborate Advertising Matter consisting of 2 ones, 2 threes and 9 sheet Pictorial Lithos—12 styles, 11 x 14—4 styles, 22 x 28—artistically colored Photos.

Picturesque Heralds, Slides and Cuts.

State Right Buyers!

Now is the time to secure the Excelsior Brand of Features for your territory.

Releases Every Three Weeks

Write! Wire! Phone!

EXECUTIVE OFFICE
110 WEST 40TH STREET - NEW YORK
SUITE 1002 - PHONE. BRYANT 8059
ARTHUR ROSENBACH Sales. mgr.

STUDIO
LAKE PLACID
N.Y.

The ranch-woman's philosophy then came home to her in all its bitterness. "If you love him, you will sacrifice yourself for his happiness and leave him alone." She decides to make the sacrifice. When she arrived home, however, a letter was awaiting her from Diana. It read in part: "I guess you are right. He has a daughter that I can't bear and he won't live without her, so we had better separate. I am going home."

DAN MORGAN'S WAY (June 12).—Dan Morgan, the young postmaster in the small Californian town, had loved Lou Dayton long and patiently. Lou drove the mail and supply coach for her father. Dan saw her every day, but always, in answer to his pleadings, Lou put him off, and meanwhile she tortured him by flirting with Jim Baird.

Jim was a rough young miner, Dick Ramsey's pal. Dick's faithful Indian, Broken Bow, had no use for Jim. One day they quarreled with pistols over a drink of whiskey, and Dick, who chanced to get in the way, was shot. Broken Bow ran to tell the sheriff, and Dan Morgan got wind of the killing. He persuaded Lou to take his horse to Jim, so that he might make his escape. The girl rode breathlessly toward the minner's camp. Nearly there, she met Jim, running for his life. She pulled up, vaulted to earth, and panting, thrust the bridlerein into his hand.

"Sweetheart! Angel!" she heard him gasp. And then his arm was around her, swinging her up behind him on the horse.

"Fly with me, Lou. We'll clear out of this hell of a mass together! I tell you, I wouldn't give you up for anybody living!"

Dan Morgan's face rose before the girl—the look in his eyes when he had sent her to this other man. That moment, for all he could tell, he might have been looking upon her for the last time. She struggled herself free, and slipping to the ground, fled to the nearest miner's cottage.

FRONTIER.

HIS DRESS REHEARSAL (June 14).—Joe, an actor, is informed by his manager that his part for next season's play is to be that of a Western sheriff. Joe decides to take his vacation in Arizona, in order to get atmosphere. He is given a letter to Hank Goodell, who, besides being the sheriff of Plumas County, is the proprietor of the Alkali Inn. Joe arrives in the land of rattlesnakes and cactus. He finds Dolly, the sheriff's daughter, to be attractive and soon falls in love with her.

The sheriff receives a message from two cutthroats, who inform him that their ten years' sentence is up and that they are going to get him. Several days later they come to the inn. Hank is away. The cut-throats steal his daughter, leaving a note to the effect that if Hank does not come alone and unarmed to the hanging rock that afternoon that he will never see the girl again. Joe finds the note and hits on a scheme to save Dolly and her father. He gets his make-up, and fixes himself up to resemble the sheriff. He goes to the hanging rock. The two bad men allow Dolly to go. She hurries back to the inn, and soon the sheriff and his men are riding fast to the scene. The cutthroats are about to shoot Joe down when Hank and his men arrive. They decide in a few days later Joe wires his manager that he is starting for New York, and that he is bringing a new leading lady with him.

THE GUN MEN OF PLUMAS (June 28).—When Rodgers, the sheriff of Plumas County, resigns his official position on account of an infirmity, both Joe and Arthur announce that they are out to be elected in his place. It so happens that both are also rivals for Dolly. She tells them that she will wait and see who is elected sheriff before she makes any choice. As election day approaches, Joe fears that his defeat is certain. He is greatly surprised to receive a note from a friend in another part of the county, who tells him that in return for a favor once done him that he has decided to do him one. It is that three picked gunmen have been sent, and Joe is informed that they are willing to do as he says—no questions asked.

Election day comes without the gunmen having lagged their game. A shipment is expected for the bank. Arthur is deputized to accompany the stage to insure its safety. On its return trip the stage is attacked and a running battle ensues. Dolly learns of Arthur's peril, and for once she finds her city cousin of use. Mounting his motorcycle behind him, they race past the stage and the following gunmen and notify Rodgers, who gathers his posse and starts to meet him. The stage overturns and the gunmen are about to get their victim when the posse arrives and captures them. Bringing them back to town, Rodgers gets an idea and the gunmen are told that if they know what is healthy for themselves they will vote for Arthur, which they are only too glad to do. Arthur, of course, is elected, while Joe finds repose in the rough Plumas jail with the gunmen.

ECLAIR.

THE MASK OF AFFLICTION (Two Parts—June 17).—John Harrison, manager of the San Esteban Mines, covets the fortune of his ward, Claudia, who is in love with Peter Marshall, the mine engineer. Harrison faces financial ruin, having lost his fortune in the stock market and, with the hopes of marrying his ward himself, he forbids her to see Marshall. However, the young lovers find a retreat in a hermit's cave, a trysting place where they spend day after day.

Matters go from bad to worse with the manager and he determines to marry his ward if there is a possible chance. He hits upon a diobolical scheme to rid himself of Marshall one day when word is brought that there is fire-damp in one of the galleries. He sends Marshall to investigate. Marshall obeys. On descending, he finds that one explosion has already occurred. Taking his coat he places it over a mortally injured miner and is about to leave the gallery when another occurs. Marshall is to investigate. Marshall obeys. On descending, he finds that one explosion has already occurred. Taking his coat he places it over a mortally injured miner and is about to leave the gallery when another explosion occurs. Marshall is rendered unconscious. The deadly gases and rising water drive the panic stricken miners out.

The burned body of a man is brought to the surface. Harrison, finding Marshall's wallet in the dead man's coat, identifies him as the engineer. Claudia, hearing the news is heartbroken. However, Marshall has had a miraculous escape. The hermit's cave communicated with the mine by deserted galleries. The old man, hearing the explosion, climbed through and dragged Marshall to his retreat, his face scarred and burned. Realizing his plight, Marshall believes that he must forget Claudia and hide from the world.

In the meantime, Claudia still clings to the loving memory of Marshall, though she is menaced by Harrison, who wishes her to marry him. Months later Claudia visits the hermit's cave. The sight overcomes her and she faints. Marshall, observing, goes to her and places some forgetmenots by her side and then creeps away. Time passes. Under the hermit's care his face begins to heal. Harrison during this period has become desperate and has decided to poison Claudia. The act of pouring poison into the girl's glass is observed by Marshall, who has come to leave flowers by his sweetheart's window. He rushes back to the cave and with the hermit confronts Harrison. Harrison is arrested and led away. Marshall tears away his mask. Claudia recognizes him, though his face is scarred, and still loving. She goes to his arms.

THE BLUNDERER'S MARK (June 21).—George Lewis, a fine looking but unlettered and ignorant cowboy, gets a bonus for his year's work and is told by the boss to invest it in cattle, which he does. Mrs. Howard, the ranch owner's wife, complains of her lonesomeness. The husband induces their niece, Ethel, to pay them a visit. She immediately becomes the pet and much admired idol of cowboys. Lewis in particular is "hard hit." The blundering and honest cowboy asks her to take a ride and after a hearty laugh over his illiterate letter, she declines. During the spring round-up Lewis comes upon a settler who has been wounded by Sioux Indians. On a wild ride to the ranch he warns the settlers. Placing Mrs. Howard and Ethel in a buckboard he makes a dash for safety. The Indians attack the wagon and Lewis dropping behind, makes a stand against the band. He is mortally wounded, but manages to hold the marauders off until the women are safe. The settlers have notified the troops and after driving the Indians off, they make the dying man comfortable. Before he dies he scrawls a letter to Ethel leaving her the cattle which he has bought and with tear filled eyes the girl realizes that the blunderer was a man good and true.

AUNTY'S MONEY BAG (June 14).—Clara, an extravagant young woman, sets her father crazy with her bills. She rejects her tango teacher and falls in love with a poor artist. They plan to elope, and as they are sneaking off, Aunty Matilda, the rich sister of her father, catches them. She leads Clara back to the house by the ear and chases the romantic artist. Aunt disinherits the young woman and thereby wins back her love and money. The canvass is finished and placed in the parlor. The aunt is summoned, but meanwhile the tango teacher defaces the picture and makes her homely. When aunty sees it she flies in a rage, and is about to cast Clara and the artist out when the maid, who has seen all, leads the culprit in and tells her story. Jasper erases the ugly features and presents to aunty a charming picture of her herself. All smiles, she gives Clara and the young painter her blessing and they both live happily ever afterwards.

POWERS

THE MASKED RIDER (June 12).—Ray's father is of the match-making variety, and plans to marry his only son to the daughter of an old friend. Ray, the son, does not fancy parental interference and when Edna, the girl, comes on a visit he shows cool indifference. In lieu of other excitement his interest centers on a mysterious masked dancer who is occasioning much comment among club habitues. Ray wagers his friends that he can discover the dancer's identity.

His father learns of the wager and follows Ray to the theater where he is unsuccessful in his efforts to see the dancer. Ray's father takes Edna into his confidence. The result is that Edna writes

Brass Frames
AND Theatre Fixtures of Quality

No. 30 Combination

LOOK for our solid body frame construction when buying frames. They are of the highest grade in material and workmanship.

Frames made with 2½, 3 and 4 inch wide brass compo backing, glass fronts, solid brass castings for easel fittings and legs. Write for catalogue and our prices.

The Theatre Specialty Mfg. Co.
1232 East 3rd St., Cleveland, Ohio

Floral Decorations For Theater—Stage —and Parades.
Best selections from the markets of Europe and America
BOTANICAL DECORATING CO.
504 So. 5th Ave. CHICAGO | Prices the lowest ever offered for reliable goods

LOCAL PICTURES
Your negative developed, printed and titled complete
5c per foot
delivered within 12 hours
We Set the Pace, Let Those That Can, Follow
Feature Work Our Specialty
Titles 6c per foot
GUNBY BROS., Inc.
145 West 45th St. N. Y. City

Welcome to Our City!

Exhibitors, State Right Buyers and Exchange Men, All Welcome!

Daily Exhibitions at Our Offices during Exposition Week

"THE HUMAN WOLVES"

A dramatic classic in 5 parts
The pulsing triumph of the photoplay art

"KING OF THE BEGGARS"

In 4 parts
Showing the ragged edges of society

They are red-hot money getters for the pushing showman. Advertising matter galore, one, three and nine sheets, heralds, colored photos 11x14 and 22x28.

Don't get left! Get in touch at once for particulars. You'll be pleased, so will we.

Some valuable territory still open for

"THE DELAWARE WHIPPING POST"

In 3 parts

Feature Photoplay Co.

220 West 42nd St. Candler Bldg. New York City

PHONE BRYANT 8486

a letter, to which she signs the name of the masked dancer, and makes an appointment with Ray in the park for the next morning. Masked, Edna plays the role of the dancer at the tryst. Railing in his efforts to unmask his companion, Ray nevertheless falls in love with her. He proposes marriage.

Again Edna and Ray's father plot, with the result that the next morning's mail brings a letter signed by the masked dancer in which she offers to settle for $10,000. Ray's admiration turns to contempt when the letter is shown him by his father. The letter insists that he either marry the dancer or pay. At the propitious moment Edna, garbed as the masked dancer, enters the house. She unmasks when Ray's father starts to write a check in settlement of his son's folly. Ray realizes that he has been the victim of a joke.

Remembering the charm of the masked woman whom he has met in tryst, he overcomes his chagrin and pursues Edna, to whom he professes his love.

UNIVERSAL

ANIMATED WEEKLY NO. 117 (June 3).—In Troubled Mexico—Scenes made by our war correspondents in Duranzo depicting fiesta day in honor of General Carranza. Sub-Title: America's national game popular in Mexico.

Impressive Memorial Services—The Army and Navy Union decorates graves of Civil and Spanish-American War heroes at the U. S. National Cemetery—Brooklyn, N. Y. Sub-Title: The Tennessee firing the nation's salute. Veterans march up Riverside Drive, New York City.

Dayton Flood Heroes Rewarded—Culver Military Academy students presented with medals and memorial gate by Louisville people—Culver, Ind.

General Coxey's Triumph—On his second march to Washington he succeeds in speaking from Capitol steps.

Buskin Wins Metropolitan Handicap—Successful opening of Belmont Park, most beautiful race course in the world—Long Island.

Thousands Cheer Vice-President—Vice-President Marshall attends 139th celebration of the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence—Charlotte, N. C.

Gustav Hamel—Most daring of skymen not heard of since leaving on aeroplane trip across English Channel. (Hamel with straw hat.) Sub-Title: Meeting King of Uganda.

Suffragette Track Meet—Games by University of Nebraska girls prove sensational success—Lincoln, Nebr.

The Defiance—One of the trio of cup defenders is given first tryout on Long Island Sound—Greenwich, Conn.

Creator of Sherlock Holmes—Sir Arthur Conan Doyle visits America for the first time in twenty years, and meets William J. Burns the famous American detective—New York City.

Cartoons by Hy Mayer—World Famous Cartoonist of Puck.

MUTUAL FILM CORP.

AMERICAN.

JIM (Two parts—June 15).—At the palatial home of a merchant the latter's wife entertains her husband's friends. The guests have all departed save one, the husband's most intimate and trusted friend. That this man should abuse the confidence of his friend and attempt to force his attentions upon the wife was a thing the merchant deemed little call to fortify against. His unexpected return found the faithless friend in a compromising attitude toward the wife. Quietly but firmly the merchant demands satisfaction and the two men enter the beautiful conservatory, the pleading wife staying back in the drawing room where with bated breath she awaits the result.

The sharp bark of a weapon breaks the silence and when with slow and measured thread the husband returns she pleads for mercy. His only reply is "Live to cleanse yourself from the shame, and God pity you." With these words he departs into the night and henceforth her life is one continued gloom. The whole tragedy is revealed to a struggling poet through the whispering of the muses. The vision is faithfully recorded by the poet and is the basis of success in his chosen calling. The poet carefully follows the threads of his poem and locates the principles and through his efforts the penitent and sorrowful wife is led to her husband and a happy reunion results to crown the author's masterful efforts.

THE UNMASKING (June 17).—Harold Clark, a very young man at an extremely impressionable age and untutored in the ways of the seamy side of life, is in love with Clare Morrow, a beautiful young girl in his social circle. Her parents approve of their daughter's alliance with Harold. John Dayton, a friend of Harold's, of strong character and of more worldly experience, looks after the welfare on his impetuous friend. They live at the some club and Dayton worries over an encounter which Harold has with a scheming adventuress.

Harold, completely entranced by the wiles of the women, neglects his sweetheart and runs after the woman of the world, blinding himself to her actual character. John Dayton remonstrates with his young friend and receives only rebuffs for his pains. Harold, completely infatuated, throws himself in the gayety of the woman's house and heaps

DO THIS NOW!

If you do not receive a copy of "The Universal Weekly" every week, send me the name and address of your theatre and I'll see that you get it, NO MATTER WHAT PROGRAM YOU ARE USING. You can't know what's going on in the film business unless you read "The Universal Weekly." Here's a corking good chance to boost your business. Do it now!

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

205 West Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.
252 A Hennepin Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.
1122 Farnam Street, Omaha, Neb.
Hubbell Building, Des Moines, Iowa.

Agents for All Makes of Machines and Accessories

"The Biggest and Best Film Renter in the World"

PRINTING AND DEVELOPING FILM TITLES
Give us a trial. All work guaranteed. Prompt service. Prices right.
If you want any event that you want photographed we can furnish expert camera men.
STANDARD MOTION PICTURE CO.
Telephone, Central 2853, 5 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago

FOR the best music obtainable for motion pictures find out about the new
SEEBURG-MOTION-PICTURE-PLAYER
Manufactured by
J. P. SEEBURG PIANO CO.,
Republic Bldg., 209 S. State St., CHICAGO

PIPE ORGANS FOR THEATRES
Prompt delivery.
Write for illustrated Catalogue or telephone Harrison 1476.
T. D. HUME & CO.
Suite 513-522, 408 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

Northern Feature Film Exchange
Suite 405, Schiller Building, Chicago
Phone Central 6228

THE OIL THAT STOOD THE TEST
Latchaw's Motion Picture Machine Oil
Gallons .....$4.00 Quarts $1.25
Pints ..... .75 Half Pints.... .50
Postpaid upon receipt of price.
E. R. LATCHAW & CO., Marietta, Ohio

"FOTOPLAYER"
the instrument that supplies
MUSIC FOR THE PICTURES
The American Photo Player Sales Co.
Berkeley, California.

We Buy and Sell Second Hand Films and Moving Picture Machines
WESTERN FILM BROKERS
37 So. Wabash Ave. :: :: Chicago, Ill.

WHEN YOUR PICTURE MACHINE NEEDS REPAIRING
WHY DON'T YOU SEND IT TO US?
We have the best equipped machine shop in the country and can repair any make of machine. Write us and get acquainted.
WE BUY SECOND-HAND MACHINES.
GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO.
76 N. State St. (bet. Lake and Randolph) Chicago, Ill.

BE UP TO DATE
Install
CORCORAN TANKS
Get No. 6 Price List
A. J. CORCORAN, Inc., 11½ JOHN STREET NEW YORK CITY

BEST OF CAMERA MEN
Furnished for all Occasions
CHICAGO FEATURE FILM CO.
4108-22 Lincoln Ave., Chicago, Ill.

REBUILT MACHINES AS GOOD AS NEW
All machines entirely rebuilt and only genuine parts used.

Powers No. 6	$140.00
Motiograph, 1913	150.00
Powers No. 5	75.00
Edison Exhibition	75.00
1912 Dissolving Motiograph	165.00

Many others. Write for complete list. All the machines are complete with the electrical attachments. A-1 condition guaranteed.
We carry complete line of new machines and supplies. Will take back your old machine in part payment of new one.
Time or Cash. Send for Catalog today.
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY COMPANY
160A NO. FIFTH AVENUE CHICAGO

The Greatest Melodramatic Photoplay of the Year

STELLAR PHOTOPLAY COMPANY

Longacre Bldg.

42nd Street and Broadway

New York

PRESENT

Edwin Forsberg

and notable cast in

FORGIVEN

— OR —

THE JACK O'DIAMONDS

SIX PARTS

SOME TERRITORY LEFT WRITE FOR YOURS

EXHIBITORS: The Greatest Money Getter!

We cordially invite you to our exhibition rooms—You will be surprised to see the

RENFAX MUSICAL MOTION PICTURES

Seventy-five releases are ready for you Come, see, and hear any or all of them

¶ Our pictures sing all the latest Broadway song hits produced as vaudeville acts on the screen. ¶ Our terms are surprisingly reasonable. ¶ We supply the smallest and largest picture houses. ¶ Hundreds of exhibitors are using Renfax pictures every week.

RENFAX FILM CO., Inc., 110 WEST FORTIETH STREET Phone, 7048 Bryant, NEW YORK CITY expensive presents upon her. He fails to see the true character of the woman.

Dayton, fully incensed over the asininity of his friend and the treatment which Clare is receiving, decides to take a hand and unmask the woman before his friend. Pursuant to his plan, he attends an affair at the woman's house and accuses her of her wickedness. Harold, rash with his infatuation, almost throws himself into a tragedy by shooting his friend. Still bent on the unmasking of Adele, Dayton makes advances to the woman and when he displays a roll of currency she falls into the trap and makes love to Dayton. This, of course, awakens Harold, who looks on from his foolhardiness and he denounces the woman and leaves. John Dayton, with the guiding hand of a sincere friend, leads Harold back to Clare and watches the two hearts reunite with the extreme pleasure of the well-doer.

THANHOUSER.

THE SCRUB LADY (June 7).—Josiah Stevens, an elderly lawyer, has a peaceful time in his office, but in his home the laundress, styled at her express command "the scrub lady," rules supreme. Finally matters come to a climax and Stevens is summoned to his home to discharge the "scrub lady," which he does after some difficulty. His wife intrusts him with the task of securing a new laundress and also gives him a brooch to be repaired.

Stevens absent-mindedly gives the brooch to his pretty stenographer and when his wife calls at the office to see if the new "scrub lady" has been secured, the stenographer mistakes her for the new laundress, and invites her to wait for Stevens. She shows Mrs. Stevens the brooch, saying that it is a present from Stevens. His wife recognizes the trinket and when Stevens returns trouble is waiting for him. However, a quick-witted friend helps him in his need, and Mrs. Stevens finally believes that her husband is innocent.

RIVALRY (Two parts—June 9).—Ruth Travis, the belle of the village, is courted by Will Mayo, the owner of a saw mill, and Al Stevens, the village storekeeper. Rivalry is keen between the two men, but the girl finally becomes engaged to Mayo. Stevens is highly incensed at her action, and his feelings are shared by his half-witted brother, Ralph, who, incapable of reasoning, is able to realize that Ruth and Will have offended the brother he adores.

Some years before Ralph had been a sturdy intelligent boy, but had been nearly killed by an automobile, and when he recovered, his mind was a blank. The unfortunate broods over his brother's disappointment and his feeble mind in its unreasoning anger turns toward the girl. He bides his time and waits.

Ruth chances to visit the saw mill at a time when it is deserted, and the half-wit, seeing her there, seizes his opportunity. Overpowering the girl he binds her and places her on the saw mill, the sharp steel teeth whirling only a few feet away. Only the opportune arrival of Mayo saves the girl from death, and in the fight which ensues the half-wit is knocked unconscious. But good comes of the deed, for the blow restores reason to Ralph, and makes him once more a useful member of the community.

RELIANCE

SILENT SANDY (Two Parts—May 30).—Mary Jones, slavey, lonely and unloved, advertises in a matrimonial paper for a good man to marry her. Charlie Brown, village sport, answers the ad. He signs it with the name of "Silent Sandy," his batchelor friend, telling Mary to come at once and he will make her happy. Mary comes. Sandy, willing to meet her, she looks him up. The tender hearted batchelor, realizing from the grins of Charlie and his pal that this is a put up job of theirs, marries Mary out of pity.

Mary discovers "the joke," and that Silent Sandy did not marry her for love. As she is very much in love with her husband, this nearly breaks her heart. Meanwhile, Charlie has become fascinated by Mary's beauty. He declares his feelings, begging her to elope with him. Mary, furiously unhappy, repulses him—and Sandy comes in just in time to finish up Charlie. Then it dawns upon Sandy how much he really cares for his wife—and at last Mary Jones knows what it is to be blissfully happy.

THE COWBOY'S CHICKEN DINNER (June 10).—Juniper Jones, a cowboy camp cook out of a job, gets a place as chef of a ranch, and all goes smoothly until the boss demands a chicken for the next day's breakfast. There isn't a chicken in camp, and Jones is up against it. He rushes to town, but cannot buy, beg, borrow or steal a chicken anywhere.

On the railway station platform he happens to see a crated fowl addressed to Mlle. Gabo, a celebrated vaudeville actress. The bird is her trained white leghorn, valued at $10,000, but to Jones it is only a chicken, and a life saver for him. He leaves two dollars as a fair price, and seizing the chicken, hikes back to the ranch. The boss enjoys his breakfast so much that he gives Jones a holiday.

In town the cowboy cook meets the chicken trainer, out looking for the thief. At the sight of her gun, Jones does not stay to explain, but beats it clear over the Mexican border.

OUR MUTUAL GIRL (No. 22—June 15).—"Raffles," the gentleman burglar—in private life, Mr. Van Courtland Dunbar—went down to the gangsters' headquarters to impress them with his authority. He had a virtual hypnotic power over criminals of the "Kid Joseph" type, and he succeeded in disarming the gangsters and delivering Ada Taylor. He took the girl to Mrs. Knickerbocker's, and leaving her with the butler, returned to his apartments.

Meanwhile, many notable friends of Mrs. Knickerbocker called to offer their sympathy. Miss Theodora Bean, the writer, was the first to arrive. She had scarcely gone when Mme. Yorska of the Theater Sarah Bernhardt came, and then Miss Florence Reed, the star of "The Yellow Ticket." As soon as Mrs. Knickerbocker was alone in the drawing room, Ada Taylor presented herself. She excitedly poured out her story of the last few days, and how she had been rescued. Mrs. Knickerbocker lost no time in phoning Dunbar, but her spirits sank when he answered that he had no news for her.

A moment after he had hung up the receiver, Dunbar's eye fell on a headline in the newspaper—

"Sir Arthur Conan Doyle Arrives Tomorrow. "Creator of Sherlock Holmes, greatest of all detective story writers on visit to New York. Aboard the Olympic."

Mrs. Knickerbocker received a message almost immediately.

"Leave everything to me," said the masterful voice of Dunbar over the wire. "I will find your niece within a week."

Though he explained nothing, Mrs. Knickerbocker was confident. She would spend this interminable time of waiting in making festive preparations for her niece. The next morning she motored down to Miss Kennedy, modiste, and selected several dainty little summer frocks. Then to Thorley's Fifth Avenue Florists, where she ordered dozens of the most ravishing flowers to be delivered on an hour's notice any day that Margaret might return. She was so happy and so certain now that she would see the lost child almost any hour, that she even drove down to the office of Dudley Field Malone, Collector of the Port of New York, to tell him the good news.

That same morning, Dunbar went down the bay on a revenue cutter to meet the Olympic. He succeeded in gaining access to A. Conan Doyle, and, as a result of their interview, he telegraphed Mrs. Knickerbocker:

"I have news that will surely bring your niece back within the week."

MAJESTIC

THE SONG OF THE SHORE (May 26).—Emiel Krumpf wins the Isenlohr scholarship, and that same evening in the flush of his happiness, he asks Katrine Wolner to marry him. She consents, on condition that he "will not play the fiddle at home." The lover, confident that he can teach her to love his music, laughingly consents. They are married, and Emiel studies hard at the music college.

Hilda, Emiel's little sister, comes to live with them and the young violinist finds that he must work to support all three of them. He is obliged to give less time to his music, and his scholarship is taken from him. The world is left empty as Katrine cannot bear the sound of the violin. Only Hilda comforts him, and together they often steal away to the seashore where Emiel plays to his sister.

Isenlohr, the giver of the scholarship, is the greatest composer of the day. The people clamor for more than he is able to give, and under the popular pressure, his inspiration fails him. In despair, he seeks the ocean shore, as Beethoven did before him. There he catches the echo of Emiel's violin, and believing it to be his own creation, he hurries home and incorporates it in a symphony which once more makes him the idol of music-loving Germany.

"Cooler Inside"

When the hot days come, a sign like that will draw the crowd to your house.

Westinghouse Electric Fans

will enable you to make good, because they give the biggest breeze with the least expense for current. They need no attention except lubrication once a season.

Send for Folder 4268 showing styles

Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co.
DEPT. BR
East Pittsburgh, Pa.

(Sales Offices in 45 American Cities.)

Indirect Lights, Poster Frames and Exit Lights

Moving Picture Theatres
No. 62—12" Diam.....$4.00
No. 51—15" Diam..... 6.00
No. 52—20" Diam..... 8.00

Solid Brass. White Enam. Reflector. Wired, Ready to Attach. Other Styles.
CIRCULAR
General Specialty Co.
409-11 Morgan Street, St. Louis, Mo.

Booking Now for
Illinois and Wisconsin
"The Folks From Way Down East"
in 5 Reels
General Feature Film Co.
5 So. Wabash Ave. Chicago, Ill

Moving Picture Theatre Mailing Lists For Sale
20,192, covering United States and Canada, price $40.00, or $3.50 per thousand for such states as you want.
670 Film Exchanges, U. S.....$3.50
90 Manufacturers and Studios, U. S..... 1.00
34 Moving Picture Machine Mfrs. and Dealers..... 1.00
231 Film Exchanges, Foreign Countries..... 3.00
800 Moving Picture Theatres, Foreign Countries..... 3.00
Ask us for full particulars.
TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO.
166 West Adams Street, Chicago
Established 1880

You May Be a Good Manager But is Your House Getting the Money?
At Liberty—A Real Manager
Having just disposed of my fourth house, I am at liberty for the first time in eight years. I will put your house in the money-making class, as I have others. Salary or percentage. All the old tricks of the trade discarded. New ideas and personality get the business. No house of less than 400 capacity considered.
Address MACK, care of Chicago office of this paper, for ten days after date of this issue.

WITH THE ARMY AND NAVY
in MEXICO

The best authentic movies taken in Vera Cruz and on the way to Mexico City. Now shown in Chicago. Copies with STATE RIGHTS FOR SALE. 2,000 feet of the most interesting happenings ever produced.

Act Quick European Rights Open

INTERNATIONAL FILM NEWS 428 Plymouth Court Chicago, Illinois

SEEBURG "MOTION PICTURE PLAYER"

"THE WONDER OF THEM ALL"

See and hear this wonderful instrument at the I. M. P. A. convention in New York, June 8th to 13th, at the Grand Central Palace. Booths 201-202, or write

J. P. Seeburg Piano Company, Manufacturers

Republic Building 209 South State Street Chicago, Ill.

Not long after this, Katrine quarrels with Hilda. Emiel tries to soothe the child by playing to her, and Katrine in a fit of passion seized the instrument and breaks it. Emiel escapes to the seashore, where he paces back and forth, besides himself with grief.

Meanwhile, Katrine repents and Hilda starts out with her small savings to buy her brother another violin. On the shore she comes upon a coatless, hatless stranger wandering up and down against the wind. She debates with herself awhile, then decides to give her money to the poor man who has no overcoat. But Isenlohr, the great composer, smiles at the child, and rousing from his dream, questions her. She tells him the whole story of Emiel, and Isenlohr asks her to lead him to his cottage.

When Isenlohr stands before Emiel he holds out to him his violin. The young musician seizes it and begins to play. The composer is struck dumb, for he hears the motif of "The Song of the Shore." Then he realizes where he (Isenlohr) has received his inspiration, and that he must yield fame, opportunity, all to the young man before him.

THE BIRTHDAY PRESENT (June 9).—Mrs. Ellis has successfully broken her husband to domestic harness, when, on her birthday night, he insists upon accepting the invitation of an old chum of his to a stag party. Dorothy Ellis tries to comfort herself with thoughts of the beautiful necklace her husband has given her for her birthday, and Ellis goes off to meet his friends.

They do the cafes and end up in a gambling house, wagers and loses his last cent. Delirious with the thirst for gain, he goes home and stealthily emptying the safe of his wife's jewels, including the birthday necklace he has given her, returns to the gambling place. The sight of the necklace, however, sobers him, and he decides to go back with it to his wife.

Meanwhile a burglar has broken into the house. He finds safe empty, but before he can escape, Ellis arrives. Dorothy is roused. She sees her husband forcing the burglar, at the end of a gun, to return her jewels to the safe. And she tells herself that she has married the bravest man in the world.

MUTUAL WEEKLY.

MUTUAL WEEKLY, NO. 74 (May 28).—The Nice Races.—Annual International Regatta is run in Mediterranean waters.

The New York Police Parade.—Thousands of Gotham's "Finest" pass in review before public officials on Fifth Avenue.

The Cattle Show in Brussels.—King opens Belgium Fair.

Leviathan Arrives.—Hamburg-American latest addition reaches New York on maiden voyage.

Royalty at Home.—Grand Duke and Duchess of Baden are guests of Bavarian sovereigns at Munich.

Shriners in Atlanta.—High Degree Masons from all over United States gather for annual conclave in southern city.

Scottish Express Is Wrecked.—Crack British train leaves track at Burntisland.

The Funeral of Mistral.—The famous Provencal poet is buried in the land in which he spent his life.

Titanic Hero Honored.—A monument is erected to the memory of Jack Phillips, wireless operator, at Godalming, England.

Military Review in Paris.—Mutual Weekly catches animated views of latest French maneuvers.

The Toll of War.—Wounded soldiers are brought to New York after Battle of Vera Cruz.

Danish King Attends Festival.—A celebration in Copenhagen receives royal favor.

Barry Monument Unveiled.—Statue of famous United States Navy commodore is presented at Washington, D. C.

Launching of the Defiance.—New England's candidate for cup defender makes maiden plunge at Bath, Me.

A Suffragette Fire Department.—Ladies of Wilmington Park, Cal., fight fire during absence of all men in the town.

A New Long Distance Aeroplane.—French Aerobus "Albessard" is given initial trial at Senlis.

KOMIC.

THE LAST DRINK OF WHISKEY (June 7).—Only one drink of whiskey is left in Red Gulch—and the pack train won't arrive for thirty days. The one drink—which isn't to be had for love or money—reposes in a bottle on a table in the middle of the barroom, guarded by twelve armed men. Desperate Rudolph makes up his mind that the whiskey shall be his. He rises in the morning, kisses his wife and his son, Little Willie, and starts out for his career of crime. Creeping into the barroom, he forces the guard to lineup. Then, with a single bullet, he shoots down the whole twelve like a row of ninepins.

Rudolph stands in the road, getting ready to drink the whiskey, when he is seen by the sheriff. The officer of the law gallops past and snatches the bottle. At a signal from Rudolph, his desperate gang surround him. They give chase, wrenching the bottle from the sheriff who, by a clever trick, escapes alive. The sheriff rides hot-footed to the headquarters of the vigilantes, and all give pursuit. With Desperate Rudolph and his gang in one wagon, and the vigilantes in another, the race leads over a high bluff. Rudolph's vehicle gets on fire, and reaching the top first, he and his men pile out and push the wagon over on their adversaries. The sheriff, however, is not to be so lightly vanquished. The vigilantes scale the bluff and a brisk fight ensues, in which Rudolph and his gang shoot down every member of the opposition.

Victorious at last, Rudolph prepares to enjoy his whiskey. But private monopoly of the treasure causes mutiny in the gang, and he is forced to shoot all his followers before he can have his drink unmolested. After long tribulation, he stands with the liquor almost to his lips. While his father has been cavorting about the country, little Willie has spent the day in the orchard, thoughtfully making the most of a windfall of green apples. His mother finds him, doubled up, and seizing him, starts out in frantic search of aid. They reach Rudolph just as he is putting the bottle to his lips. There is nothing to do but pour the whiskey down little Willie. But this is too much for Rudolph. He falls in an apoplectic fit, and gives up the ghost.

DOMINO.

A RELIC OF OLD JAPAN (Two parts—June 11).—Baron Yoshoto, an old Samuri of Japan, is loath to have his son, Koto, go to the states to finish his education, but is finally persuaded. Koto bids his sweetheart goodbye and vows to his father that he will not be influenced by American customs, but will return a Samuri.

A year later at a college club, Koto meets Jim Wendell, a crook and schemer. Wendell introduces Koto to a chorus girl, Annette Walsh, who ensnares him into a marriage. When Baron Yoshoto hears of Koto's marriage he disinherits him, and Annette, who has only married Koto for his money, deserts him and goes with Jim Wendell. Koto trails them and struggles with Annette. He then goes to the police and gives himself up, writing a note of farewell to his father and sweetheart in old Japan.

IN THE SOUTHERN HILLS (Two Parts—June 18).—The Rev. Edward Seymour opens a mission in the village of Bald Mountain among the Kentucky hills. He takes Jim Hopkins home one evening when he finds him intoxicated. Here he meets Nan Hopkins, with whom he falls in love and later they become engaged, much to the disappointment of Bill Willis, a ne'er do well, who is also a suitor of Nan's. Through the minister's influence and Nan's, Jim Hopkins is induced to take the pledge to renounce drink and accept religion.

Willis is furious at this revel because Hopkins favors the attentions of the minister to Nan and also refuses to drink with Willis. A fight follows in which Hopkins is killed. Willis hides and later the minister, coming home from a sick call, is found by Nan over her father's body. Willis says that he saw the minister strike Hopkins. He goes to the villagers and incites them to lynch the minister. Nan rides to the sheriff's office and they get back to the mob just in time to stop them from lynching the minister. Willis tries to get away, but one of the mountaineers shoot him. Dying, he confesses the murder of Jim Hopkins.

PRINCESS.

HIS ENEMY (June 5).—John Baird, an old counterfeiter, is released from prison and resolves to lead a better life. Jameson, a detective, desires information concerning the movements of Baird's former associates, and when Baird refuses to aid him, he systematically hounds the old man, forcing him to be discharged from position after position.

Baird finally secures employment in a quarry many miles away from the nearest city and for a time is happy. The young superintendent falls in love with Muriel, Baird's daughter, and the future seems very bright. But again the sinister shadow of Baird's enemy falls across his path, and the detective appears with orders from the general offices of the company to discharge the ex-convict, the daughter casts her lot with her father and refuses to marry the superintendent.

The day that Baird and his daughter are to start once more on their wanderings presents an opportunity to the old man to rid himself forever from his enemy, for the detective falls from a steep cliff into the quarry just as a blast is about to be set off. Baird, however, goes to his rescue and saves his life, but at the cost of his own. He passes away, happy in the knowledge that his daughter has found a husband and protector in the young superintendent, while "his enemy" remorsefully goes away.

BRONCHO.

A TRAGEDY OF THE ORIENT (Two parts—June 10).—In order to keep his son from marrying Kissmoia, the supposed daughter of General Hirata, Osako Matsumoto compels the general to tell Kissmoia that she is of lowly birth and is only his daughter by adoption. Kissmoia is so broken-hearted that she joins the Ceizha girls. Kato, Osako's son, plans with the marriage broker to release Kissmoia from the Ceizha house as his (Kato's) mistress. Kato is about to remove Kissmoia by force from the Ceizha House, when Tom Arnold, the newly appointed agent of the Japanese-American Steamship Company, rescues her. He later marries her, having an American minister perform the ceremony. Kato and the marriage broker attempt to take the girl away from Arnold, but they are informed that now the girl is an American citizen and as such shall have the protection of the American consul. This so enrages Kato that he vows vengeance. Later when a notice is posted in front of the newspaper office to the effect that California has passed the Japanese alien law, Kato incites the populace to attack the first American they see, which happens to be Arnold. Kissmoia knows that it is Kato who has caused her husband's death. She sends him a note, telling him that she had made a mistake when she married the American and now that he is dead she will go to him. As he is about to embrace her she stabs him.

THE HOUR OF RECKONING (Two Parts—June 17).—While John Burr, an inventor, is away on a business trip, his wife, Vivian, elopes with Herbert Rawson, his friend, secures a divorce and afterward marries him. Burr, crazed with grief, goes from bad to worse. Finally as a last resort, he joins the army.

Ten years later, Herbert Rawson, with his wife, arrives at Fort McRae on business for the government, where Burr is stationed and is going under the name of Corporal Redding. Burr swears vengeance on Rawson and makes up his mind to kill him. While the Colonel, Rawson and Vivian are on a visit to the surveyor's camp, they are attacked by the Indians. The colonel tells Rawson and his wife to go with Corporal Redding, alias John Burr, go back to the post before they are surrounded. Discovering that they will be cut off before reaching the fort, they decide to take refuge in an abandoned log cabin. Here Burr reveals his identity, telling Rawson that he is going to kill him. Vivian pleads with him to spare her husband. While Burr is fighting to protect Vivian, Rawson slips out of the cabin, hoping to escape, but is killed by the Indians. Seeing that they are outnumbered and will undoubtedly fall into the hands of the Indians, Vivian makes Burr kill her and then himself.

KAY-BEE.

TENNESSEE (Two parts—June 5).—Ward Hamilton, an internal-revenue detective, representing himself to be a local coal prospector, arrives in Big Creek to investigate the report that an illicit still is being operated in the neighborhood. He meets Tennessee, daughter of "Pop" Hastings, a moonshiner. She falls in love with Hamilton, who uses her love as a means of finding out the operations of the moonshiners. Tennessee's sweetheart, Clay Wilson, is suspicious of Hamilton. Through his brother, a telegraph operator, he discovers that his suspicions are correct. When Tennessee learns of Hamilton's treachery, she goes to him and while she is upbraiding him her father and Clay Wilson come up them. Wilson shoots at Hamilton, but the bullet strikes Tennessee. The moonshiners force Hamilton to tell the deputies who have come to raid the still that the moonshiners have moved and that he intends staying in the mountains until he can relocate it. Later, Hamilton leaves the mountain and resigns his commission as revenue officer.

OUT OF THE DREGS (June 12).—Nell Durand, trained by her father to pick pockets, is caught in the act of robbing Tom Berry. Instead of having the girl arrested, Tom gives her his card, telling her that if ever she makes up her mind to reform, he will see that she gets a position. Nell pleads with Kit Durand to start a new life—and Berry gets the girl work in a factory.

Amos Berry, who is a wealthy stock broker, makes a will, leaving everything to his son. He gives it to James Croll, a lawyer, for safe keeping. Shortly after, Durand and his gang, back at old tricks, rob Croll's office. They consider themselves badly stung, as they find nothing but legal papers. Amos Berry dies suddenly—and Croll sees his opportunity to marry his daughter to young Berry. He produces a forged will, which leaves his father's estate to Tom, provided he marries a girl acceptable to James Croll, executor.

Tom realizes that the only girl he wishes to marry is Nell Durand. He takes her to the lawyer, who will not listen to the young couple. In her distress, Nell makes a confidant of her father. He examines the stolen paper, discovers the genuine will, and arming himself with this and a revolver, goes to Croll's office. Holding up the lawyer at the point of his gun, he forces him to telephone his consent to Tom's and Nell's marriage.

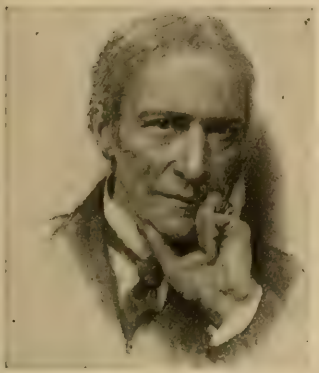
Good Power's No. 5 Machine, complete, $70.00
Edison, Exhibition Model, all complete, $90.00
200 reels of film, new lot, $4.00 to $5.00

ECONOMY FILM CO.,
105 FOURTH AVE. PITTSBURGH, PA.

MECCA

DAVID GREENEBAUM, Pres.

WM. KESSEL, General Manager



SIR HUBERT VON HERKOMER, R. A., C. V. O.

READY NOW FOR UNITED STATES and CANADA

A HIGHWAYMAN'S HONOR

IN 5 PARTS

THE ONLY FEATURE PRODUCTION
WITH THE LATE

SIR HUBERT VON HERKOMER

ARTIST AND ACTOR TO KINGS

AN EIGHTEENTH CENTURY COSTUME DRAMA SHOWN BEFORE THE ROYALTY OF EUROPE.

PICTURESQUE—ARTISTIC —DARING—SENSATIONAL

GOOD LOBBY DISPLAY

ONE, THREE and SIX SHEET LITHOS,
PHOTOS and HERALDS

STATE RIGHT BUYERS SEND FOR TERMS AND BOOKLET

MECCA
FEATURE FILM CO., Inc.

LEAVITT BUILDING
126 West 46th Street
NEW YORK, N. Y.

MECCA

FEATURE FILM STORIES

TRANS-OCEANIC FILMS INC.

THE LIFE OF SHAKESPEARE (Six Parts).—The romantic attachment which the humbly born William Shakespeare had for the beautiful and gentle Charlotte Clopton, of Clopton Hall, is authenticated by the letters of many people of the period, and as it is one of the most potent factors in the development of the genius of Shakespeare, it is very appropriate that the film should open with the first meeting of the future playwright and the beautiful young girl. This acquaintance always remained a romantic one, on the part of young Shakespeare, but Charlotte felt the attraction more seriously.

Meanwhile, Sir Hugh Clopton, Charlotte's father, who is an ardent Catholic, shelters in his house a man named Parry, who is a traitor to the Queen; he does this at the command of Pope Gregory XIII, not knowing the character of the man he is harboring. Shakespeare, pursuing the apparently gay and thoughtless tener of his career—but in reality training the great qualities of mind which were afterwards to make him famous—displeases a lawyer in whose employ he has been, and while he is trying to explain this to his mother, a tragic scene takes place, in the assassination of the traitor Parry. Too late, Sir Hugh Clopton learns of Parry's treachery, through Shakespeare's lawyer employer, who informs Sir Thomas Lucy of the plot, and also accuses Sir Hugh of being in it.

Sir Hugh's celebration of his daughter's birthday is rudely interrupted by the arrival of soldiers, who are come to arrest him for complicity in the treasonous design. The Queen pardons Sir Hugh, but his lovely daughter falls ill of a mysterious malady, which is wrongly diagnosed as The Plague, but which is a fatal one, nevertheless despite the great danger of infection, Shakespeare bids her a passionate farewell before she dies. Some months later Shakespeare—now beginning to be the great man of his village—champions pretty, shy Anne Hathaway at the Twelfth Night Revels. Their acquaintance ripens, and their courtship is played out in the beautiful environs of Stratford and about the Anne Hathaway cottage.

In sharp contrast to the idylic Anne Hathaway of the courtship, the wedded wife of Shakespeare is undoubtedly the shrew, whose sharp tongue drives her husband to the distriction of the "Lucy Arms." This condition of things, added to the fact that Shakespeare has incurred the displeasure of Sir Thomas Lucy by his poaching exploits, drives the young man to leave home. He decides to try his fortunes in London, so takes leave of Anne and his child and starts away. In London, Shakespeare views the great crowds of richly dressed people with astonishment, but he soon wins friends. The theater, of course, draws him, and outside the historic old Globe Theater he looks upon the scene of his future triumphs.

The genius of the young dramatist is soon discovered by the great Lord Southampton, who becomes his generous patron and introduces him to the court of Queen Elizabeth, where he meets Raleigh, Drake, the Earl of Essex, and all the famous political and social figures of the time. The command performance of "Romeo and Juliet" in the Blackfriars Theater which is attended by the Queen and all the Court, marks the beginning of that triumph which was, through the following year, to be the great crescendo of English literature.

The final stages of the film show Shakespeare in the glow of middle age. He is dreaming of his past successes, scenes from his great plays visioning themselves before him. The film closes with the fading in and fading out of the bust of Shakespeare, which is in the Parish Church of Stratford-on-Avon.

FAMOUS PLAYERS.

THE RING AND THE MAN (Four parts).—Bruce McRae, the distinguished dramatic actor, makes his first appearance on the screen in the popular story of love and politics, "The Ring and the Man," by Cyrus Townsend Brady. The commanding personality and splendid poise of Bruce McRae fit him peculiarly for the role of Gormly, the man whose bravery and self-possession in the face of crucial circumstances enable him to successfully oppose the corrupt forces of the gigantic political ring that is trying to ruin him. Gormly's real name is Fordyce, but the shadow of a crime which hangs over his past has caused him to change it to Gormly, by which name he is known to his business associates and the public, who respect him as a great merchant-prince and reform candidate for mayor. Back of Gormly's ambition is a good and beautiful woman, Eleanor Haldane, whose father is president of the Gotham Traction Co., a powerful corporation which has always controlled the city's administration. The Gotham Company and Gormly become involved in business complications, and Gormly, seeing the evilness of city politics, partly through a desire to destroy the power of the Gotham Company, and partly to realize Miss Haldane's faith in him, decides to enter the mayoralty race, and is seen far in the lead of the Gotham Company's candidate. Another woman in Gormly's life—a woman of the past—now tries to regain her power over Gormly, and failing, takes the great secret of his former life to the chief of police, who is a tool of the Gotham Company. The chief calls on Gormly and threatens to expose him unless he withdraws from the race. Gormly courageously refuses. Haldane is informed of his development by the chief of police, and knowing of Gormly's love for his daughter, urges her to offer herself as wife to Gormly if he will cease his fight against the Gotham Company. Loving her father, and wishing to test Gormly, Elizabeth does this, and is both pleased and grieved when Gormly sacrifices even his love for his principles, and refuses to be bribed even with the gratification of his greatest wish. How the shadow of the crime of his past is settled with him, how he defeats the vicious ring forces and finally wins his election and his bride, is dramatically visualized in this gripping production.

FEATURES IDEAL.

WHOM THE GODS DESTROY (Three parts).—Theresa is left an orphan and harassed by her father's creditors. She sells her small property and even her mother's jewels, but still it is not sufficient. Brown, the avaricious superintendent, reports further debts and takes for himself the family plate, while Henry Roncory wishes to gain her love. Victimized by all, the poor girl sends for her cousin and lover, Albert, who, having no money, can only console her. Together they plead with their avaricious uncle, a ship-owner, who is setting off for Australia in his private boat, but he refuses to give them an answer. Meanwhile Roncory and Brown conspire, the one to win the girl, the other to seize the fortune.

Far away a storm has wrecked the ship-owner's vessel, and he is drifting in mid-ocean with a sailor, Martin. Overcome by privation and sickness, the old man intrusts to Martin a paper giving directions as to the whereabouts of his buried fortune, and dies. Martin is rescued and comes home to deliver his trust to Theresa, but is met by Brown, and lets out his secret. Brown hastily steals the document and hurls Martin down a cliff. Roncory, however, has witnessed the crime and compels Brown to share the spoils on pain of denunciation. Tony, a half-witted boy living on Theresa's estate, and who is ill-treated by Brown, overhears the plot and goes to help Martin. The body has disappeared, but one-half of the will is found on the shore in an iron case. Tony meets Albert and together they go to take the will to Theresa. The cousins are mystified since the explanatory directions are missing.

Brown's wife unconsciously solves the problem by offering Theresa her box of savings to aid her in her financial difficulties, not knowing that her husband had hidden the other precious half of the will in there. Overjoyed at this discovery, the cousins hurry to the "..... the box hidden in the north corner of the garden..... near the well...."

There a dreadful sight meets their eyes. Money and papers are littered over the disturbed ground, and terrible groans are heard from the depths of the well. The two rivals, Roncory and Brown, such is the hatred prompted by avarice, have plunged down to death together, fighting for Theresa's inheritance.

LEADING PLAYERS FILM CO.

THE GAP OF DEATH (Three parts).—A cry for help rings through the stillness of a summer's night and young Lieutenant Paul Dawson, about to enter the home of his father, turns around and a startling scene meets his eyes. Down the road come dashing two horses, dragging with them a carriage in which a young lady is sitting and holding tightly to her seat. Regaining his composure, the young man dashes in front of the runaways and within a few moments he has control of the horses. The girl is no other than the famous dancer, Florence Mayfield. It is love at first sight.

Paul's steady attentions to the dancer attract the notice of his superior officer, Colonel Somers, who, after a severe reprimand, sentences Paul to eight days' confinement and demands his word of honor that during this time he will not try to communicate with or see Florence. Hesitatingly he gives the Colonel his promise. Five days elapse and Florence, who has not heard from Paul, grows uneasy. Fearing that something has befallen her lover, Florence, whose engagement terminating that night necessitates her leaving town, determines to see him at all hazards. Calling her maid, she asks for her clothes and stepping on over her dancing costume, goes to seek Paul. Paul's father and Colonel Somers are sitting at their nightly game of chess in Dawson's home when a dispute arises as to a certain point in the game. The Colonel suggests that they call on Paul to ask his opinion. On entering Paul's room they are dumbfounded to find Florence Mayfield there. Paul's father draws a sword and is about to strike him, but Paul's mother intervenes. The father breaks Paul's sword and tells his son to leave his home at once and forever.

Years roll by. Paul and Florence are married and Paul has taken up a stage career. He has already won worldwide fame by his thrilling performance known as "The Gap of Death." This performance consists of leaping a gap on a motorcycle. From his native town comes an offer of a good engagement. At first he hesitates, but finally decides to accept and goes there.

A fellow artist, having seen Paul's pretty wife, pays unwelcome attentions to her and Paul gives him a severe beating. That night Paul meets with a terrible accident. The villain had unscrewed and loosened the planks of the scaffold on which Paul makes his daring descent. The scaffold gives way, but Paul is not the only victim. Next day the police authorities find a mangled body (unrecognizable) which was, of course, the villain who had tampered with the scaffolding and who had not time to escape.

Police inquiry leads to the discovery that Paul is the son of one of the most prominent families of the town. His mother is notified and she rushes to his sick bed imploring forgiveness which is readily given. After a six weeks' illness, Paul recovers and returns to his ancestral home which his father now deceased has willed him, realizing that Paul had committed no greater wrong than loving the sweet girl who is now his wife.

CANADIAN BIOSCOPE CO., LTD.

IN THE ENEMY'S POWER (Three parts).—The daughter of Manuel Garcia, the leading citizen of a little Mexican settlement, while engaged in picking roots and berries, is attacked by a peon, a rejected suitor. Jack Nelson, a young American, arrives on the scene. A struggle takes place, with Nelson as the victor. A friendship springs up between the Mexican maiden and the American youth, but the maiden's father objects to the friendship on account of the man being a foreigner, and also because the hand of his daughter has been promised to Venustiano Suarez. But the young Mexican maiden prefers the American. Her father finally consents to the union.

Suddenly the betrothal feast is interrupted by the arrival of a company of soldiers belonging to the Revolutionary Army of Mexicans, under the command of Captain Diaz, who informs them that the advanced guard of the Federal Army is on the march, and that he has been ordered to hold them in check at this point. The Madero forces are seen upon the march, and finally arrive at the point of attack in full force. Nelson, being a foreigner, refrains from combat until the girl whom he loves and her father become endangered. He then rushes in and casts his luck with the girl's father, fighting on the side of the Revolutionists. A sudden change of plans due to the enemy's strength, forces Captain Diaz to withdraw, leaving Nelson and his sweetheart marooned in the old tower, firing through the loopholes. The Captain, learning that Nelson is familiar with the surrounding country, offers him his freedom if he will act as a spy against the Revolutionists; he refuses and is given until morning to decide. If the decision is not favorable, he is to be shot at sunrise. Nelson manages to escape by climbing down the ivy vines on the outside of the mill. The Captain, angered at Nelson's escape, is about to shoot the girl's father as an accomplice, when she intervenes and declares that it was she who aided him to escape. The commander of the Federal forces gives her two hours in which to find her lover. Half distracted, she runs through the woods, calling for Nelson. She finds him, but her love makes her a coward and she dare not tell him the truth. When the village clock strikes the hour, she runs to the village and finds her father standing against the wall ready to be shot. Nelson has followed her, and the commander orders the squad to fire just as Nelson rushes to release his sweetheart's father, in consequence both of them are killed. Then the battle takes place, the Revolutionists have returned, driving the Federal forces from the scene, leaving behind them ruins and desolation. Sitting in the midst of which is a beautiful Mexican maiden crooning in idiotic simplicity over the dead body of her father and lover.

SAVED FROM HIMSELF (Three parts).—The widow Cooper and her two sons lived in moderate circumstances in one of the large Eastern cities. Her eldest son became cashier in the First National Bank. Some time after he had attained this position, he fell in with a class socially below him. In order to maintain the attitude and class of leader in this social set, his earnings were soon squandered. At this period there comes the woman.

Cooper, to maintain this woman in style, steals from the bank. One morning on entering the bank, he is accused by the president of that institution of theft. He denies the charge, but he has left behind him finger prints on one of the ledgers. The president of the bank calls in the police, and Cooper is arrested. He is tried, found guilty, and sentenced to serve five years' penal servitude. After the trial he is confined in prison with his pal. They succeed in overpowering the guard and climbing the wall. The guard on the wall opens fire and kills Cooper's pal. At the critical moment, a freight train dashes past the prison wall. Cooper realizes his plight, and makes a plunge to reach the roof of the swiftly moving car. He succeeds and rides off, with the baffled guard on the wall emptying his ride at him. Cooper leaves the freight train at

WE EXTEND TO YOU A MOST CORDIAL INVITATION TO VISIT THE EXHIBIT OF THE

AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLING AND CASH REGISTER

at the New Grand Central Palace, New York City Week Beginning June 8th

Look for Section 356

YOU WILL FIND IT BOTH INTERESTING AND PROFITABLE TO SEE THIS WONDERFUL AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLING MACHINE WHICH IS RAPIDLY BECOMING PART OF THE STANDARD EQUIPMENT OF MOVING PICTURE THEATRES THROUGHOUT THE UNITED STATES

THE AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLING AND CASH REGISTER COMPANY

New York Office - - 520 LONGACRE BUILDING, 42nd AND BROADWAY

Security Devices for Showmen

Security Ticket Chopper.

Security Ticket Chopper The successful show of today must have system, and that is what our devices create. The Security Ticket Chopper is a protection that is conceded by every up-to-date Manager.

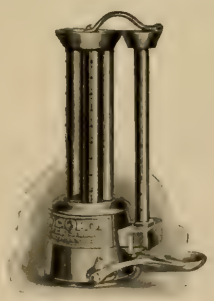
Ours are the original and the ones that are the standard the world over.

Security Ticket Box Where tickets are not to be chopped, the Security Ticket Box is the only right way. Tickets are dropped in by patrons, and cannot be tampered with. Cabinet and glass are the same as chopper. It is equipped with trap door instead of cutters.

OHKAY Check Seller Our check seller delivers a metal ticket or check direct from your Cashier to patron, and same is registered. At the door one of our special check takers can be used, so that none of your employees need touch the admission checks. One filling will hold 1000 checks of one price, and if desired when two prices are in vogue, a separate tube holding 250 checks with register will be attached, delivering a smaller check. This system saves the cost and annoyance of the paper tickets.

Turnstile Another device we are making is this Turnstile, which registers every person who enters. This is used extensively by carnival companies, Exhibitions, Rinks, Dance Halls, etc.

We also can arrange the Turnstile to be used at the entrance of "Movie" shows, so that one person can handle the money, make change and let patrons in and register every admission. This will cut down the expense of one man where two are now used.



OHKAY Check Seller.

Turnstile.

Our Choppers and Ticket Boxes can be had from any up-to-date Film Exchanges and Supply Houses. Don't let them sell you imitations, though. Get only the best.

AMUSEMENT SALES CO.

Write for Prices Woodward and Warren Avenues, DETROIT, MICH.

a little way-station, and succeeds in stealing from the switchman's shanty a suit of overalls.

A short time after this the younger brother receives an offer from the Premier Mining Company of British Columbia, to act as their cashier. He, his mother and his sweetheart decide to leave for the Northwest. Young Cooper arrives and takes up his position. In the meantime the older brother, now a fugitive from justice, arrives in the same town with his mother and brother. He, having sunk so low, is only too glad to fall in with two notorious crooks. The moneys of the Premier Mining Company have been delayed in transportation, therefore, Will Cooper, cashier for the mine, is forced to travel overland to get the money to pay the mine hands. The brother and his crook companions decide to hold up the cashier. However, the cashier fears that attempt will be made, he empties the money box, fills it with stones, and secrets the money in his stuffed moose-head. The robbers hold him up in a lonely spot of the road and take the money-box, leaving behind as worthless the moose-head.

Realizing that they had been tricked, they formulate a plan of entering the mine office. Will and Dora accidentally overhear this plan. They then make up their minds that they must save Cooper from himself. The robbers enter the mine office, leaving Cooper outside on guard. Will overpowers his brother, and locks the desperadoes in the office, while Dora rides for the mounted police. Will then takes his brother home to his mother, and pays double the amount of his brother's defalcation. Meanwhile the two companions of Cooper are arrested and sentenced. Cooper promises to go straight; he migrates farther west, and engages in the real estate business. Six months later, we find him honest, hard-working and making good; while the widow and her younger son and his sweetheart, take up again the thread of their lives.

MARINER'S COMPASS (Three parts).—Silas Sterling, a member of the coast guard at Niles, Maine, when a young man, picks up a ship's emergency raft that drifts ashore from a wrecked vessel. Upon the raft is found a six-months'-old girl baby. Silas carries the baby to his home, and, no one having been found to claim her and rather than see her enter the foundlings' home, he prevails upon his mother to adopt her.

A few years later, Silas has a friend, Captain Dayrell, who sails away on the "Nancy Lee." The time for him to return is at hand when, in place of his trim little schooner entering the harbor, there arrives for the captain of the coast guard a telegram, stating that Captain Dayrell has been lost with all on board. Silas accompanies Jonathan, captain of the coast guard, and they depart to break the news to Mrs. Dayrell. The shock kills her. She leaves behind a fourteen-year-old son. The grief of the son affects Silas, and he gives him a home beneath his own roof.

Ten more years have overed, and we find Hetty, the girl picked up from the ship's raft, growing into young womanhood; and Richard, Captain Dayrell's boy, a young man, and mate on board the "Mary Jane." One day Richard sails away. Silas notes at the parting the sad light that came in Hetty's eyes. Richard returns from his voyage, and asks Hetty to marry him. Hetty refuses, producing before him visions of herself being saved from the sea, and a vision of him clinging to his dead mother and of Silas gently taking him away, while saying, "Your home shall be my home."

She tells Richard that they both owe it to Silas, saying that if he should ask her to marry him she must do so as a duty. Later as Silas arrives on the scene she tells him that she loves Richard only as a brother and that she will marry him. Dejected, Richard leaves, and Hetty and Silas are married. A year later, Richard's ship strikes a rock as he is nearing port in a bad sea. Rockets are fired from the ship, and the coast guard answers the summons. Through the glasses Silas sees that it is Richard's ship. The crew try to launch the boats, but it is impossible. However, as the vessel is dashed toward the rocks, they succeed in forcing a line into the rigging and landing some of the crew. As Richard takes his place on the line the vessel strikes again. His hold is broken and he falls into the sea.

Later, Silas is searching the sea with the glasses, and makes out Richard clinging to a bell buoy at the mouth of the harbor. He reaches Richard in time to save him. Upon reaching the shore, Hetty forgets herself and lavishes all her attention upon Richard.

In the meantime Silas had endorsed a note for a friend. The note is not paid, and Silas is forced to sell the mill left him by his father to meet the debt. Thus he brings his wife and baby to poverty. Silas meditates, and being too old to make a fresh start, decides to die, and leaves Hetty to Richard. Captain Fox is leaving port on a voyage to the Arctic Sea. Silas ships with him. The party reach the ice fields, and one day the ship becomes jammed in the ice flow. The food gives out, and Captain Fox calls for men who will dare cross the ice in the hope of bringing relief. Silas goes, but on the sixth day he falls between an ice crevice and loses all his provisions. Days later the ship sends out a searching party, and they find Silas dead. Later the ship frees herself from the ice field and Captain Fox sets sail for home. He tells Hetty of Silas and his end.

A year later a pretty little wedding takes place in the quaint little fishing village church. Hetty and Richard are led to the altar.

PASQUALI-AMERICAN CO.

A MEXICAN MINE FRAUD; or THE GAME THAT FAILED (Five Parts).—Mr. Starry, a banker, has been successfully selling stock in a company to work a gold mine in Mexico. The editor of the "Daily Truth" has received information which warrants him to expose the scheme of Mr. Starry, who has become enormously wealthy by the sale of this fraudulent stock. George Ferguson, a war correspondent on the "Daily Truth," while returning from the Balkan service, forms the acquaintance of the banker's daughter, Margaret, and falls in love with her. On his arrival his editor informs him of this stock jobbing scheme and tells him that he must proceed with all haste to Mexico and make a thorough investigation. Banker Starry has been informed of the "Daily Truth's" activeness, and his prospective son-in-law, James Park, makes a very attractive proposition to Ferguson to induce him to give up his trip, which results in a duel. Park is slightly wounded and then and there decides to precede Ferguson to Mexico to prevent him at all hazards from sending anything but a good report of the mine proposition. He visits all the dives and makes the acquaintance of many bandits and lion tamers who will serve his purpose. On the arrival of Ferguson, Park arranges to have him directed to the lion tamer's camp where Ferguson is taken prisoner and placed in a cage divided in two parts, one part is occupied by ten lions. Park has provided a table, pen, ink and paper and has lighted a candle, informs his prisoner that he must make up his mind before the candle burns out to write up a glowing account of the mines to be sent to the "Daily Truth," or he will pull the chain that will lift the door allowing the lions in to devour him. Ferguson's guides have located him by this time and have determined that the only way to save him is to set fire to the building. This they do and amid the roar of the lions and the licking of the flames he makes a miraculous escape and arrives back in London to the office of the "Daily Truth," which denounces the fraudulent gold mine proposition in glowing headlines.

Banker Starry and his beautiful daughter, Margaret, make a sudden departure for Switzerland. James Park lost his life amid the lions and fire. Ferguson resigns from the staff of the "Daily Truth" and leaves for Switzerland, where he finds the banker and his daughter, who has refunded every cent to the stockholders of the gold mine scheme through the "Daily Truth." The banker's daughter is now Mrs. Ferguson.

SAWYER'S FEATURES.

SAVED BY THE BOYS IN BLUE (Three Parts).—The scenes are laid in and around a cattle ranch in the Southwest. The foreman of the ranch, Bill Sterling, is in love with Nan, the daughter of the keepers of the ranch-house. Buck Campbell, a dissolute cowboy, is also in love with Nan, but has been rejected by her in favor of Bill. On one of Bill's hunting trips he has an encounter with Long Feather, a young Indian Chief. Bill and Long Feather shoot at a turkey at the same time and each claims the turkey as the result of his shot. In the resultant fight Bill whips Long Feather and takes the turkey home with him.

Long Feather gathers together his tribe of Indians and they proceed toward the ranch intent on mischief. Buck Campbell, Bill's rival, meets the Indians and shows them how they can be revenged upon Bill. That night he leads them to the ranch and the building Nan, taking her with them to their camp. Bill gathers the cowboys and they start on the trail of the Indians. This is exactly as Buck had planned, and Bill is captured by Buck and the Indians. Some of the cowboys escape and return to the ranch, reporting to the old folks that Bill is dead. The old folks start for a nearby fort hoping to enlist the services of the soldiers to help rescue their daughter. A running battle between the troop of cavalry and the Indians, the soldiers are victorious and arrive at the camp just in time to rescue Bill from being burned at the stake. At the last moment Buck's heart is touched by Nan's plea for help and he had attempted to help her escape. He is shot at by the Indians and falls down the bank to his death just as the soldiers appear on the scene. Nan and Bill are reunited, and the Indians driven away.

THE BELLS (Four Parts).—The story opens on Christmas Eve, 1818, in Mathias' Tavern. Mathias, the proprietor, is in desparate straits for need of money, and as he is sitting at his fireplace there enters, with tinkling of sleigh bells, a lone traveler, the Polish Jew, seeking food and temporary rest. In paying Mathias, the Jew discloses a money belt loaded with gold. The Jew leaves in his sleigh, and Mathias, by taking a short cut, overtakes the Jew and murders him in a dense forest, takes the gold and throws the body into a lime kiln.

Part two of the film shows Mathias, fifteen years later, again on Christmas Eve. He is now a wealthy man and Burgomaster of the village. Surrounded by family and friends, he is celebrating the betrothal of his daughter to the young captain of police. The talk leads to the mysterious disappearance of the Polish Jew fifteen years before, and the guilty conscience of Mathias makes him think he hears the sound of the accusing bells. A dramatic part of the story is Mathias' dream, in which he sees a court convened to try him for the murder of the Jew. A mesmerist is called in, and Mathias confesses the crime and the court sentences him to death—all in the dream. The sudden awakening—the final haunting fear of "The Bells" and the tragic death of Mathias make a feature film remarkable in thrilling intensity and for the beautiful scenic background.

THE CONVICT HERO (Three Parts).—The story opens in a room in the old Spaniard's Inn at Hempstead Heath, England. Sir Richard Devine has a meeting with Crofton, a man-about-town, who has also been known under the name of Rex. Crofton attempts to blackmail Sir Richard, and a quarrel ensues, during which Sir Richard is killed by Rex. Previous to this, Sir Richard's son Dick, a hail-fellow-well-met chap, had a quarrel with his father on account of Dick's debts, and the elder man cast off his son. Rex, knowing this, has prepared evidence so that Dick is accused of murdering his father. He is unjustly sent to prison. Several years previous to this, Parson North, before entering the ministry, had forged some notes, which were held by Sir Richard. Dick is sent to the convict settlement in an Dieman's Land, Australia, and some wonderful scenes are shown of the convicts working on the rock pile. The chain gang is shown at work, and one of the prisoners who has tried to escape is overtaken by the guard and brought back. Parson North is chaplain, and is the friend of all the convicts. Lieutenant Black, in charge of the prison, discovers the chaplain giving tobacco to the convicts, and threatens to report him. Dick Devine, now known as Rufus Dawes, is seen as a convict, working beside Rex, the man who killed Dick's father.

Shortly after this, orders are given to have the convict settlement moved to Port Arthur, and the prisoners are taken in small boats on board the "Osprey," a large sailing ship. The convicts plan to overpower the guards and capture the ship. Chaplain North proves his courage by saving one of the officers from being murdered by two of the convicts. That night the convicts overpower the crew of the "Osprey" and secure command of her. Their knowledge of sailing is limited, however, and the boat is dashed on the rocks. A stirring situation develops, during which the wrecked convicts are washed up on the beach. Major Vickers, the commanding officer of the convict settlement, had sent his wife and daughter, Sylvia, on the "Osprey," and their lives are saved only by the courageous work of some of the convicts, headed by Rufus Dawes. Dawes has made a little camp for Sylvia, and is building a boat in which he hopes to take her away from the island on which they are marooned. On the other side of the island are seen the three remaining convicts, among whom is Rex. These three are reduced to the last extremity and are drawing lots to see who shall be killed for food for the others.

The convicts are recaptured and taken back to the settlement. In the meantime, Dawes has finished his boat and is about ready to launch same and take Sylvia back to civilization, when a searching party arrives and rescues them. Previous to this, one of the three convicts had killed Sylvia's mother, and the shock had deprived Sylvia of her memory. Lieutenant Black, with the rescuing party, accuses Dawes of the murder. In desperation, Dawes finally escapes from the prison at Port Arthur, and on his way to the shore meets Sylvia, now Mrs. Black. She fails to recognize Dawes, and he escapes. The sudden sight of Dawes partly restores Sylvia's memory, and she demands to see the man who rescued her. Dawes is again captured and brought back to Port Arthur, and upon seeing him, Sylvia's memory comes back to her. In the meantime, Lady Devine has arrived from England and demands to see her son, who is known as Rufus Dawes. Rex, weakened by his dreadful experiences, finally confesses to the murders of Sir Richard and Mrs. Vickers. Rufus Dawes is therefore released from prison and returns to England under his own name and title, Sir Richard Devine.

ECLECTIC.

THE PERILS OF PAULINE (Fifth episode—May 18).—Harry has been trying to get Pauline to consent to marry him at once, but on one excuse or another, she has always put him off. Believing that a little jealousy would help, Harry starts a flirtation with Miss Sampson, one of Pauline's girl friends. This arouses Pauline's jealousy and makes her so cross that she goes to a large reception alone, although both she and Harry had been invited. Here she meets Signor Baskinelli, a noted pianist. Signor Baskinelli is much attracted by Pauline's charms, and in his violent Italian way makes love to her. She, however, repulses him. Owen and Hicks see the by-play and propose to Signor Baskinelli that he run off with Pauline. They make arrangements with some tough characters, and then Signor Baskinelli invites the party for a trip through Chinatown. On this trip, they so manipulate things that Pauline is detained in a Joss House. As she comes out, the tough characters attempt to seize her, but Harry hears her scream and rushes back and puts them to rout. Pauline flees while Harry is fighting, and is seized by some Chinamen. She is tied up and placed in detention. Harry misses her and in his search of the Joss House, discovers her place of detention. He demands her release, but it is only after a great struggle with the Chinese inmates that he has any success whatever.

We'll See You at Booth 351

at the

Exposition at Grand Central Palace, June 8th to 13th

LOOK US UP IN THE MAIN AISLE

See Our Display of

Everything for the Motion Picture Theatre

(EXCEPT FILMS AND POSTERS)

PICTURE THEATRE EQUIPMENT CO.

The Largest Motion Picture Supply House in America

21 East 14th St. VISIT OUR SALESROOMS NEW YORK

A MESSAGE!

To the Trade:

Big, Attractive Ambrosio Features Coming.

Do not fail to register at our Exposition Booth (No. 27), Grand Central Palace, and you will be advised, ahead of others, of new subjects.

Remember, "the early bird catches the worm."

Ambrosio films superbly finished in every respect and are unsurpassed.

Assuring you of our heartiest co-operation, we beg to remain,

Sincerely yours,

Ambrosio American Co.
15 East 26th Street, New York

J. Charles Grochat
Director of Sales

Do not forget!! "THE MAGIC NOTE" A drama of intense interest filled with stirring scenes

AMBROSIO GUARANTEES QUALITY

THE PERILS OF PAULINE (Sixth episode—June 1).—The last attempt to secure Pauline's fortune having failed the two villains are desperate. Harry is exerting all his influence to have Pauline marry him at once and they see their opportunities slipping fast. When looking around they see that there is going to be a balloon ascension and they decide to get Pauline to the grounds, trusting to be able to do something there to cause an accident. Pauline, much to the chagrin of the conspirators, asks Harry to go along. When they arrive the balloon is about to go up. Harry unconsciously helps them by asking Pauline to see what sitting in a balloon basket feels like. Just as she enters the basket a wild horse runs away and in dashing through the crowd knocks over the men who are holding the ropes. Pauline is carried up along in the balloon. She is carried some distance and then the anchor catches in some rocks. There is only one way down. She is forced to slide down the rope. Harry has been following the course of the balloon in his car and arrives in time to see Pauline land on a ledge about half way down a cliff. The sides of the cliff are so steep that there is no way either up or down. He gets a rope and proceeds to slide down to her. Just then the conspirators arrive on the scene and cut the rope. Both Harry and Pauline are caught in the trap. A good idea comes to Harry and he climbs up the rope to the balloon and pulls the cutting rope. The balloon falls and they have a rope to the ground. Hicks and Owen, however, are on the job and as they land they are attacked. Harry is knocked senseless and Pauline is carried away and locked up in an old house. She at last is in the power of the two people interested in her disappearance and Harry has been left unconscious far behind.

PERILS OF PAULINE (Seventh episode—June 15).—Having left Harry on the road for dead, and having Pauline in his power, Hicks takes her to an old house and locks her up. As he leaves the room he lights a cigarette and carelessly throws the match away. It lights in some straw and sets the house on fire. Hicks starts to put the fire out, but gets an idea and walks out, leaving Pauline to her fate. Harry has revived and tries to follow the trail left by Hicks. He meets an old farmer who has seen an automobile pass that looks suspicious. Harry borrows one of the farmer's horses and follows. In the meantime Owen has notified the police that Pauline is missing. One of the newspapers hears and sends a reporter to get the story. He meets Harry and joins him in the search. They are attracted to the burning building and hear Pauline's cries for help. Breaking down the door, they rescue her just in the nick of time. The reporter has a big story and does it full justice in the papers the next day. The publicity is very annoying to Pauline and Harry, so she decides to go away for a time. She sends a telegram to her uncle in Montana that she is coming to visit him. Harry telephones the message to the telegraph company and is overheard by Owen, who at once arranges with Hicks to go to Montana. Pauline's uncle arranges some real Western life for her in the shape of a fake holdup by some of his cowboys. Hicks also arranges with some bad men to hold up Pauline on her way from the station. The Hicks holdup is successful, as the uncle in it is his accomplice's arranged joke. By the time he realizes his mistake the party, with Pauline, is far away and Harry is not at hand this time to go to her assistance.

FAITHFUL UNTO DEATH (Four parts—June 3).—The scene opens in a railway station in France. Henri Marteau, the station master, Marie, his wife, and his little daughter are living happily. War is declared with Prussia and Marteau is one of the conscripts called out. A message is received from the War Department appointing Marie as station mistress during his absence. When leaving, Marie gives him a small photo of herself and little daughter. In a battle Marteau is mortally wounded. When dying, he gives the photo to the Prussian officer, who gave him his wound, with the request that he forward them to his wife with news of his death. Before he has time to give the officer the address, he dies. Later the station house is attacked and the officer in charge of the attacking force is wounded and left in charge of Marie. One day he gives Marie the photos of the dead soldier's wife and daughter with the request that she forward them. She discovers she has been nursing the man who killed her husband. The station house is used as a divisional point by the Prussian invaders, from which they send orders and information to their troops. Marie, faithful to her own country, taps the wires and learns all the plans of the attacking forces. Owing to the message she carries to the French commander, one division of the Prussian army is cut to pieces. Suspecting that the wires have been tapped, the Prussians watch and discover Marie in the act of taking word of the plans to the French. Marie is tried by court-martial and sentenced to death. The little girl goes to the Crown Prince to plead for her mother's life. She finally persuades him to release her mother, but before the messenger arrives the firing squad have done their work. Completely prostrated by the loss of both her parents, the little girl collapses on the grave of her mother.

THE TEMPTING OF JUSTICE (Five parts—June 8).—Andre Delvaux, the son of a judge, has been wasting his time and money in riotous living. He is brought to his senses by the receipt of a letter from one of his creditors demanding an immediate settlement on pain of exposure. To secure the necessary $20,000 is impossible. A way opens when he is given the opportunity to meet the daughter of a rich banker. He goes to meet her with the intention of marrying her to recoup his losses. However, when he does meet her he really falls in love with her and she with him. He resolves to do what is right and throws over Clarice, an adventuress with whom he has been living and on whom he has spent most of his money. Fearing to lose her way of living she writes to the father of Andre and tells him that his son owes a large sum of money and that his intention of marrying the daughter of the banker is to square himself with the money lender. Andre's father writes to the banker and calls the engagement off. He then takes the matter up with his son and sends him away. Andre goes to Africa swearing that he will make a man of himself and return to prove to Irene that he is faithful. When he is gone, Clarice, the adventuress, gets her brother, who resembles Andre, to impersonate him. Santell writes to Irene in Andre's name and gets from her a key to the house, which he proceeds to rob. Irene observes Santell as he is leaving, but in her excitement takes him for Andre. A letter dropped by Santell in his flight gives the police the clue to the robber. Thinking it is Andre the father is greatly tempted to give up the case. He, however, is true to his oath of office and orders the arrest of his son. Just as the trial is about to proceed and the father thinks he will have to sentence his son to prison a letter is received from Andre in Africa telling of his successful struggle to make a name for himself. The impersonator is shown up in his true light, and the father receives the congratulations of the court on his firm stand.

DRAGON FEATURES.

THE ONE MILLION DOLLAR PEARL MYSTERY; or THE STOLEN NECKLACE (Three parts).—Julius Scarth, the private secretary of Marriott, a wealthy jeweler, is in league with a gang of thieves. One of the gang, the Woman in Black, visits Marriott at his office, ostensibly to purchase a necklace. Not one which he has is satisfactory, and he cables to Paris to have a matchless string of pearls sent over.

Jack Dacre, in love with Nellie Marriott, is contemptuously refused by her father, and he returns to Paris. Meanwhile the necklace arrives in London, and is stolen by Scarth, who substitutes one package for another. Scarth makes love to Nellie and is angrily dismissed by his employer. He then goes off to Antwerp to sell the jewels.

On opening the parcel which should contain the necklace, Marriott is horrified to discover merely some lumps of sugar wrapped in a newspaper. Nellie insists on cabling to Jack Dacre, telling him of their loss. He receives the message and vows to track down the thieves. He confides in his friends, Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell, who tell him that Scarth has offered them the necklace for sale. He returns to London and meets Scarth at Charing Cross. He disguises himself as a workman and tracks him to his house. He is, however, set upon by the gang who follow him through the streets, until he contrives to escape by a great crane which swings him high up in the air.

Dacre again meets Scarth at Lipton's Cafe, where he is shown three pearls out of the necklace. Dacre then disguises himself as a French jeweler, and being introduced to the gang, they show him the entire necklace. Dacre then arranges to have the gang arrested at the Tube Station. Scarth, however, confides the necklace to the care of the Woman in Black, who gets away. There is a terrific struggle on the station platform, and Scarth overcomes Dacre and escapes by boarding an outgoing train. At the next station, he gets into a motor-car and is pursued by Dacre and the chief of detectives in Marriott's car. While both cars are traveling at high speed, Dacre leaps from his car into Scarth's. Scarth jumps out, but is overtaken by Dacre. After a fierce struggle, Scarth is seized, handcuffed and taken back to prison.

The Woman in Black, realizing that her only chance for safety lies in getting rid of the pearls, throws the necklace away. It is found by a laborer, who offers to sell it for a drink, and when he is refused, takes it to the police station in the hope of getting a small reward. Dacre is compensated by gaining Marriott's consent to marry Nellie.

THE BLACKSHIP (Three parts).—Marcel Gordon, a young man ambitious to become a marine officer, successfully passes his examinations and receives his first commission. His friend, Gaston Prevost, who has long been suspected of defrauding his employers, gets into financial difficulties and asks Marcel's aid. Marcel, in trying to assist his friend, is accused of being Gaston's accomplice and arrested, but is finally discharged from custody for lack of evidence against him. His father, however, refuses to allow him to remain at home until he has proven his innocence.

Marcel obtains a position as helmsman on a hospital ship where he later meets Inez, the captain's daughter. Arriving on board, Marcel learns that there are a number of lunatics on the ship, and, entering the iron cage in which they are confined, to help one of the madmen out of some difficulties, he is accidentally locked therein. The captain, not knowing that Marcel is on board, decides to sail without him. The crew become discontented on account of the poor food. The captain is suddenly taken ill and is forced to turn over the command of the ship to his daughter, Inez. The crew mutiny and desert.

Inez hears Marcel's cries for help and goes to his assistance and releases him from his prison, but neglects to lock the cage, and the lunatics escape. Marcel is on the wheel when the lunatics attack him and he is forced below. He secures the distress signal rockets from the captain and climbs the mast to fire them, when the lunatics, seeing him at the top, chop it down and it falls into the water with him. A passing steamer, seeing the distress signal, comes to the rescue, and Marcel is picked up. The crew of the rescue ship arrive on board just in time to save the captain and his daughter, Inez, from the lunatics. In the meantime Marcel's father is fully convinced of his son's innocence, and when he returns home, accompanied by Inez, he is fully forgiven.

FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO.

THE KING OF BEGGARS.—Vigo Grexville, a foreign spy, king of the city's beggars, breaks into General DuRoy's house to secure possession of important government papers. DuRoy's daughter, Mona, interrupts the criminal, who, however, carries her off before she can give the alarm. As Mona has seen his face, Grexville decides to keep her a lifelong prisoner in his castle. From the papers the criminal learns that Mona is heiress to her father's vast fortune and he determines upon a bold coup. He forces Mona to write a letter to the general, telling him that for reasons of her own she stole the government papers. On receipt of the letter DuRoy is heartbroken, but Mona's fiance, Dr. Garth, refuses to believe his sweetheart's guilt, and declares he will unravel the mystery.

A night or two later Grexville visits the general's home and shoots him, leaving behind a revolver to give the tragedy the appearance of suicide. He then tells Mona that unless she agrees to marry him and share her father's fortune with him she will never see the outside world again. Mona is obdurate and by means of a swallow which has built its nest outside her prison window, she sends a message earnestly entreating the finder to communicate with Dr. Garth. Some days later Garth receives the letter, but it has been so badly mutilated that all he can learn is that Mona is a prisoner in the hands of a man who calls himself "King of Beggars." In order to solve the mystery Garth disguises himself and mixes with the beggars of the city. For a month his search is without avail, but at last he meets the king, whom he follows to his home. In a struggle with Grexville, Garth is overpowered and flung through a secret trapdoor into a sewer beneath the castle. He makes his way out by using an explosive cartridge he carries, and succeeds in rescuing Mona from her prison, which has caught fire. They then hasten to inform the police and a strong force is sent to arrest Grexville, who is attending a state ball. Grexville fights his way from the ballroom and escapes in a waiting motorcar, with the police in hot pursuit. Grexville's chauffeur is killed, and the crook badly wounded meets his doom when the motorcar plunges over a steep cliff. Later Mona finds happiness as the bride of her faithful lover.

GARRISON FILM COMPANY.

HIS FLESH AND BLOOD (Three Parts).—Ralph Bradford, a wealthy lawyer, while horseback riding in the country, loses his way and stops to make inquiries at a cottage. He meets Dora Kane, who resides in the cottage with her folks, and asks her to direct him. He becomes acquainted with Dora and calls secretly upon her. Unexpectedly one day he meets her father and mother, who wish to know what interest he has in their daughter. He confesses his love for her. Her father refuses to allow his daughter to associate with him. Ralph induces Dora to elope. After much pleading she consents, and Ralph takes her to the city and marries her. Not wishing to let his friends know of his marriage to Dora, who is a poor girl, he takes her to a boarding house, and they live there happily under an assumed name for two years. A baby is born.

One evening, Ralph returning home, discovers a male boarder in Dora's room, admiring his baby. Ralph, being of a jealous disposition, accuses his wife of being too familiar with the boarder, snatches his baby from her arms and leaves her alone, penniless and heart-broken. Dora keenly feels the wrong that Ralph has done her and goes to his home to plead and beg his forgiveness. Ralph refuses to hear her pleadings and drives her from his home. Before going Dora vows that she will take a revenge that he will remember to his dying day.

Dora struggles along for a short time and makes the acquaintance of Bill Duke and his wife. Bill is a saloon keeper in the underworld. She tells Bill her story, and that she is pining away for her baby. Bill, being interested in the girl, plans to kidnap her baby from Ralph. With some of his companions of the underworld, Bill arrives at the home of Ralph. At the point of a pistol he seizes the baby from his arms and gives it to Dora. A struggle takes place and Ralph pulls the mask from Bill's face. Bill and his companions escape with the baby to Bill's home. Ralph keenly feels the loss and vows that he will spend a fortune to to show the technical experts our line of Motion Picture Apparatus at the Grand Central Palace, June 8th to 13th, at Booth No. 354.

WE WANT

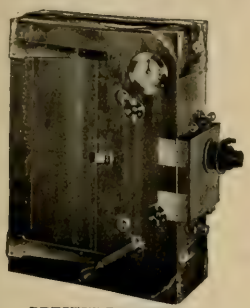
MOY CAMERA

PARTICULARLY



PRESTWICH MODEL 5

a new automatic light regulator for printing.

Nothing like it shown before.

HEADQUARTERS

FOR PATHÉ Professional

Moy & Prestwich

Cameras
Printers,
Etc.

PATHÉ PROFESSIONAL

See the new Precision Tripod

Motion Picture Apparatus Co.
810 Broadway, New York City
R. HASTINGS, Agent Phone, Stuyvesant 822

WHEN IN NEW YORK

your visit can be made very profitable if you will call at our warerooms and look into the many novelties THAT WILL INCREASE YOUR BOX OFFICE RECEIPTS, for after all is said and done, that's what you'll be here for. The address below is the only place where you can see them.

Our Big Lobby Pictures of the Stars Draw Crowds of Admiring Fans

Semi-Photo Post Cards, $3.00 per thousand; formerly sold for $4.00. Over 400 different players.

Hand Colored Post Cards
For the better class of Souvenirs, 60 of the most popular players, all factions, $10.00 per thousand

Photo Post Cards
For hand coloring. NOTE: The Public buy cards from stationers and color them. It's a new fad—60 Popular Players $5.00 per thousand

PHOTOGRAPHS, SIZE 8 x 10, of all the prominent players, Association and Independent, 400 different names, 20 cents each.
LARGE PICTURE, semi-photo, glazed finish, size 11 x 14, $1 per doz.; 43 prominent players.
LARGE PICTURES, HAND COLORED, size 11 x 14, Prominent Association players, $2.00 for set of 12.
Photographs for lobby display of the two and three reel features of all of the Mutual multiple reels—set of 6, $1.00. Always ready 10 days ahead of release.
Special 22 x 28 Association and Mutual Hand Colored Pictures of 23 Favorites
75 Cents Each. Framed $2.50 Each

KRAUS MFG. CO. 14 East 17th St., New York
Send for Catalogue of over 400 players and samples free. Write us, giving details of your dull nights, and we will send you a remedy.

We Have Moved into larger quarters and are now completely equipped to handle all kinds of work for the trade.

Camera Men Furnished for all Occasions

Prices to the trade:
POSITIVE PRINTS, 5c A FOOT
NEGATIVE DEVELOPED, 1c A FOOT
SPECIAL PRICES ON QUANTITIES OF 3000 FT. OR MORE EXPERT TITLE WORK, 7c A FOOT

Work Finished in 24 Hours. Satisfaction Guaranteed

The Commercial Filmers

1101 W. Randolph St. Chicago, Ill.

NOTE—Theater Managers—communicate with us at once regarding our proposition to take local motion pictures of your town.

EYE COMFORT Lighting System

So necessary to the success of every Motion Picture Theatre that we engineer 60 Theatres a month. This is a free service to Motion Picture Theatre Managers.

Distance Screen to Rear of Auditorium.....
Ceiling Height.....
Width of House.....
Height Under Balcony.....
Distance Rear Auditorium to Front of Balcony.....
Name .....

NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.
CHICAGO—229 W. Jackson Blvd. NEW YORK—6 E. 39th St.

find his son. He uses every effort to trace Bill, but all in vain. Sometime later Dora is stricken with sickness, and at the point of death she makes Bill vow that he will take her baby Jack and raise him as his own son and that he will never inform Ralph of his identity.

Years pass. Ralph has become the prosecuting attorney, but has never forgotten the loss of his son, and to ease his pangs of remorse he becomes the guardian of Freda Fowler. His son, Jack, who has become a young man, is passing a theater while Ralph and Freda are coming from it. An acquaintance of Jack's that he met in Bill Duke's saloon passes him, and as Ralph and Freda are passing the acquaintance of Jack's snatches Freda's pocketbook. Jack grabs him and secures the pocketbook. His intentions are to return it to Ralph. Ralph, believing that Jack is a thief, calls an officer, and has him arrested. The next day, not knowing his own son, he sends him to a reformatory. After Jack's return from prison, with the brand of a convict on him and all channels of an honest life closed to him, he becomes the leader of the "Smiling" Jack Duke's Gang, named after himself. Ralph sends one of his best detectives to trace down and find out the whereabout of "Smiling" Jack Duke. A few nights later, Jack, walking along the street, discovers some of his gang in the act of robbing a clergyman. Jack stops them and sends them on their way. The clergyman, feeling deeply grateful, walks along with Jack until he comes to his home, and invites him in. Jack accepts the invitation and enters the clergyman's home, where he meets Freda Fowler, the adopted daughter of his father. The clergyman tells Freda of Jack's kindness in rescuing him from highwaymen. That night Jack escorts Freda home, where he meets his own father, neither knowing how or recognize the other. Freda introduces Jack to his father under an assumed name, and Ralph, not knowing that Jack is a gang leader, thanks him profusely for saving the clergyman from the gang. Ralph, liking Jack's appearance, leaves him and Freda alone. Later, the detective who Ralph has placed on the trail of "Smiling" Jack Duke, has made the acquaintance of Ferret Smith, who is a pickpocket. Through a money transaction, he makes a deal with Ferret Smith to be his stool-pigeon, and to get him all the information about the workings of "Smiling" Jack Duke's gang. The gang, discovering the detective in Bill Duke's saloon, and while Jack has been paying attention to Freda, they plan to kidnap Ralph to teach him a lesson for putting a detective on their trail. Jack blocks this scheme when he learns of it and again earns the gratitude of Ralph and Freda.

Freda gives a reception and invites Jack. While the reception is in the height of his gaiety the detective brings Ferret Smith, the stool-pigeon, to the home of Ralph to give him valuable information of the "Jack Duke Gang." Ralph, after getting this information, is escorting the detective and Ferret Smith to the door, when they unexpectedly come face to face with Jack Duke and Freda. Ferret Smith, knowing the fate of a stool-pigeon once he is found out, dashes from the house. Jack immediately leaves the reception, goes to Bill Duke's saloon, and tells the gang Ferret Smith's double cross. A few of the gang, unbeknowing to Jack, enter Ferret's room some hours later. The next morning he is found murdered.

In the meantime Ferret Smith has told the detective that "Smiling" Jack Duke was the man he met at the reception. The detective informs Ralph of this, who is surprised and hurt. Nevertheless, seeing his duty before him he places "Smiling" Jack Duke under arrest. Freda pleads in vain with Ralph to spare him. Next day in court Ralph has Jack convicted and sentenced to five years of hard labor in prison. Bill Duke arrives at the scene to try to save Jack, and not knowing that he is too late, breaks the oath he has made to Jack's mother and tells Ralph that "Smiling" Jack Duke is his own flesh and blood. The shock proves fatal to Ralph and he succumbs. Freda pledges her faith to Jack, knowing that he is innocent, and, as the prison doors are closing on him for five long years, she vows that she will wait for him.

APEX.

DETECTIVE HAYES AND THE DUCHESS'S DIAMONDS (Four Parts).—Count Sobiersky, aided by his wife and Casson, his servant, have stolen the diamonds of the duchess. The duke engages the services of Detective Hayes to run the thieves to earth. Hayes employs two assistants to help him in this extremely complicated case. Casson is seen by Henri, one of the assistants, to be trying to sell a diamond ring in a low restaurant. Hayes is at once informed, and disguised as a pedlar, visits the restaurant, and buys the ring, which is found to be one of the duchess's. He follows Casson home and so discovers his accomplices, the Count and Countess Sobiersky. They find they are being followed, and determined to fly to Paris. Hayes, who has managed to get into their house, jumps into a basket trunk to hide, but is seen doing so by the countess, who has the trunk tied on to the back of the motorcar, on which she is driving to the next town to catch the Paris express. On the way she cuts the cord tying the trunk to the car, and it is hurled to the ground. Now ensues a most thrilling scene, in which Hayes, having escaped from the trunk, pursues the countess, and also tries to catch the Paris express.

He hires a locomotive, and there is an exciting race between the motor and the locomotive. As the train is leaving the platform Hayes dashes on to the station and hurls himself into a carriage of the express in which the count and countess already are.

In Paris, disguised in numerous clever ways, he follows the count and countess wherever they go, and sends for his assistants to join him. Count Sobiersky decides to sell the diamonds as soon as possible, and all would have been well, but for the vanity of the countess. She cannot resist the temptation of wearing the diamonds once before they are sold, and she goes alone to the opera with them on. Hayes has never lost sight of her, and he lies in wait and seizes Casson, who has driven her to the opera in her motor, and takes him to the police station.

Hayes then returns in the motor to the opera house, dressed in Casson's chauffeur clothes, and after the end of the opera, he drives the countess, who little guesses who he is, to the police station, instead of the hotel. Here he makes her give him all the diamonds she is wearing. By an extremely clever hoax Hayes manages to get the count to come to the police station, bringing the rest of the diamonds with him. So Hayes attains his end, he has captured the three thieves and also has possession of all of the duchess's diamonds. He at once returns to town, and the next evening he returns the diamonds to the duchess, at the Embassy.

GENERAL FILM CO.

THE BOER WAR (Kalem—Five parts).—The Lamberts give a charity ball for the benefit of the Widows' and Orphans' Fund. Captain Doane is among the guests. The young officer is in love with Jane, the general's daughter. During the affair, he secures her consent to be his wife. Jane's parents both favor Doane's suit. General Lambert places the box containing the receipts of the ball on his library tale. A moment later he is called away. At the same time, Jack, his son, loses heavily at cards to a professional sharp. The man holds several I. O. U.'s for which he demands payment. Desperate, Jack promises to let him have the money at once. The boy hastens home. Entering the library, he sees the cash box. Abstracting the money, Jack gives it to the gambler, who waits outside. General Lambert receives a telegram, stating that war has been declared between Great Britain and the Boers. He spreads the news. The general relates an incident of the first Boer campaign, telling how one of his comrades had been treacherously slain by the Boers. Turning to Jack, the father bids him avenge the man's death in the coming fray. Jack, however, confronts the knowledge that he is a thief. Entering the library he desperately searches for a way out. He decides upon the course he must follow. Writing a confession of his guilt, the boy places the note where it can be found and then picks up a revolver. Doane enters the room and views the proceedings in amazed silence. He grasps Jack's hand, just as the boy is about to shoot himself. Jack breaks down. The note tells Doane the whole miserable story. He promises Jack to find a way to clear him. General Lambert and the board of trustees enter the room after Jack leaves. They are about to look for the money, when Doane announces that he has stolen it. Shocked, the general calls in the guests and tells them the story. Jane is broken-hearted at her lover's supposed dishonesty. Disgraced, Captain Doane returns home where he receives a note, demanding his resignation. He complies with the order. The next day, he sees his beloved regiment leave for the front. Another officer marches past, in command of the company that was his.

His health undermined by the strain, Doane is stricken with brain fever. When he recovers, a few weeks later, the man enlists under an assumed name and is sent to the Transvaal. By rare good fortune, Doane meets Jack. The young officer recognizes in the private, the man who had saved him from disgrace. Jack succeeds in securing Doane as his orderly. The two armies meet in a terrific battle. The Boers, under General Jaubert, successfully hold the British in check. Lieutenant Lambert is sent to one of the British commanders with dispatches. He is accompanied by Doane. On their way they discover a Boer force creeping upon the British flank. Their warning saves the English troops from destruction. From the top of a hill, the Boers under Jaubert are inflicting terrible punishment upon the British by means of heavy siege guns. A charge gradually drives the Boers back. The British succeed in dislodging their foe from shelter by means of the hail of death from rapid fire guns. With a superb rush, the English gain the top of the hill and capture the battery that has inflicted the most damage. Jack and Doane are foremost in the fray. The battery is blown skyward.

Jack and Doane's unusual valor win them the commendation of the general in command. Doane wearily returns to his tent. His mind goes back to the night of the ball. His hand wanders to the pocket over his heart and brings to view the picture of Jane. Sadly he gazes upon the face of the girl whose love he had surrendered. With a sigh, the man replaces the picture in its resting-place. In another tent, a totally different scene is transpiring. Torn by his conscience, Jack is penning a confession which exonerates Doane, whom he has grown to idolize. Leaving his tent, he hands the letter to Doane, requesting him to keep it in event of his death. He informs his saviour that should death overtake him on the field, he wishes to die with the knowledge that he had made reparation. Doane watches the boy depart. He slowly tears the letter to pieces. That day another attack is made upon the Boers. The hills are covered with the heavy smoke of artillery and thousands of rifles. The Lancers sweep the enemy before them in a heroic charge. Jack, leading a bayonet charge against a Boer battery, is struck by a bullet and falls. Fighting like fury, Doane rescues the boy and carries him off the field. Immediately afterward, Doane wires the Lamberts, telling them of Jack's injury. Upon receipt of the message, Jane immediately announces her determination to go to her brother's side. Her father's influence enables her to go to the front as a Red Cross nurse. She reaches Jack's force and is assigned to his hospital tent. As she enters the tent, she sees Doane bending over her brother. Doane is electrified at the sight of his sweetheart. Remembering the offense with which he was charged, the girl draws back in contempt. Jack sees the movement and realizes what caused it. With tears streaming down his face, and despite Doane's efforts to stop him, the boy confesses his story. Thunderstruck, Jane stares at Doane. The man turns away in distress. The next moment, Jane's hand is on his arm. She pleads with him for forgiveness.

Surrounded, and facing defeat, the Boers fight with the desperation born of despair. Again and again their fire sweeps the charging British, mowing them down like grass. From the overlooking hills the batteries of the English hurl their deadly missiles in the midst of the shelters which cover the Boers. Doane, assigned to one of the batteries, imbues his comrades with heroic spirit. Time and again the Boers strive to capture the battery, their rifle fire brings the men down one by one. Doane finally remains the sole survivor, but the battery still belches forth the shots placed in it by the men who had manned them. A Boer shell lands next to Doane's gun and explodes. When the smoke lifts, the hero strives in vain to arise. Blood gushes from his eyes.

Jane is by her brother's bedside when Doane is brought in on a stretcher. She anxiously hovers over the doctor as he examines the man. The surgeon finally declares that while Doane will recover, he will be blind for life. The girl nurses her sweetheart and brings him back to health. Jack tells his story to the commanding officer. He reveals Doane's nobility and the sacrifice he had made. When Doane recovers the story of his heroism has been spread broadcast. The War Office reinstates him to his former rank and in addition Doane receives a medal of valor. Jane is by her hero's side when the emblem is placed upon his breast.

JUDITH OF BETHULIA (Biograph—Four Parts).—According to the apocryphal story, the Children of Israel had fortified the hill passages by which any invading army from Assyria would be obliged to enter into Judea. The principal of these fortified places was Bethulia. It is related that Nebuchodonosor sent Holofernes, chief captain of his army, with one hundred and twenty thousand men to visit vengeance on all the earth. When he came to Judea, he met an unexpected defense by the Jews of Bethulia. He stormed the walls but was unable to capture the city. He then sat down to starve it into submission, having taken possession of all the springs and wells from which the city had its supply of water. The result was that the inhabitants began dying of thirst and famine and begged the elders to surrender to the enemy.

At this juncture, Judith, a devout widow of great beauty and vision from the Lord and was moved to offer herself as a deliverer of her people. After performing the sacred rites according to the custom of the times, clothing herself in sack cloth and putting ashes upon her head, she dressed herself in her finest raiment, with many jewels and ornaments, and went forth, accompanied by her maid, to the camp of the Assyrians, where her beauty and address obtained for her an immediate interview with Holofernes.

This stern captain, who ruled his army with merciless brutality was enraptured with the Jewish beauty, and lent willing ear to her promise that she would deliver all Judea into his hands. He gave her a tent and many attendants, and strove by his attentions to gain her personal favor. With artful cunning, she played on his weakness until he invited her to an elaborate entertainment in his quarters. Here she succeeded in inducing him to dismiss all his servants, and when he was overcome with wine, she took down his sword and cut off his head. She escaped back to Bethulia with her maid and the head of the dead general, arriving inside the walls just as the inhabitants were giving up all hope and were crying aloud for the city to be surrendered. The men of Bethulia were inspired by her seemingly miraculous act to great enthusiasm and courage, and they fell upon the Assyrians who were in a panic from the loss of their leader. The result was a complete defeat of the invading army. Great rejoicing followed in Bethulia, and Judith was raised to the highest esteem of the people.

A GRAND COMBINATION

Audiences all over the country will keep cool during the hot weather if you show them this Arctic film.

Capt. F. E. Kleinschmidt's

ARCTIC HUNT

In Six Reels

STATE RIGHTS SELLING. Have you secured your territory? If not, you may loose a good thing.

National Geographic Society
WASHINGTON, D.C.
GILBERT H GROSVENOR, DIRECTOR AND EDITOR

January 24, 1914

Captain F. E. Kleinschmidt,
Washington, D. C.

My dear Captain Kleinschmidt:

On behalf of the members of the National Geographic Society, I thank you most cordially for the admirable address which you gave the organization Friday afternoon and evening. The members were delighted with your magnificent pictures and with the information which you imparted so entertainingly, and the comments on every hand have been most flattering to you.

Very sincerely yours,

Gilbert H Grosvenor

Director and Editor

These Pictures create keen interest wherever shown. They are amusing, interesting, instructive to old and young, learned and unlearned. They are rare and unusual. Screen demonstration promptly given to interested parties.

Full line of Lithograph Paper, Heralds, Large Photos for lobby display, Electros and Publicity Matter and set of Stereopticon Slides, if desired, for high class show with lecture. Can divide into two sets of three reels for smaller theatres.

Correspondence solicited for some fine territory at temptingly low prices

WRITE OR WIRE AT ONCE

ARCTIC FILM CO.

SUITE 1209 220 WEST 42nd STREET
CANDLER BUILDING NEW YORK CITY

PHONE BRYANT 3559

INDEX

TO CONTENTS.

ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS.....1522
"ATLANTIS" (Great Northern).....1520
AT THE SIGN OF THE FLAMING ARCS.....1526
BELASCO ON MOTION PICTURES.....1513
"BORN WARRIOR, A" (Warner Features)...1584
"BRINGING IN THE LAW" (Colorado M. P. Co.).....1548
"BROTHER AGAINST BROTHER" (Apex)....1522
CABIRIA SHOWN ON BROADWAY.....1517
CALENDAR OF LICENSED RELEASES.....1570
CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES..1572
CHICAGO LETTER 1546
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Licensed).....1540
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Independent)...1541
DOINGS AT LOS ANGELES.....1525
DRAMATIZING THE SONG.....1523
"ESCAPE, THE" (Reliance).....1515
FACTS AND COMMENTS.....1511
FEATURE FILM STORIES.....1602
GARBUTT, FRANK A.....1527
"GREYHOUND, THE" (Life-Photo).....1518
INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES.....1590
INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES.....1612
INQUIRIES 1535
LAMBS BACK FROM GAMBOL.....1549
LESLIE, LILIE 1522
"LEOPARD'S FOUNDLING, THE" (Selig)....1516
LICENSED FILM STORIES.....1578
LICENSED RELEASE DATES.....1614
MANUFACTURERS' ADVANCE NOTES.....1551
MUSIC FOR THE PICTURE.....1528
MOVING PICTURE EDUCATOR, THE.....1530
OBSERVATIONS BY MAN ABOUT TOWN....1529
OPENING OF THE PANAMA CANAL (Hagy's).1519
"OUTCAST'S RETURN, THE" (Gt. Northern).1521
PATHESCOPE, THE 1524
PATHE PUTTING OUT NEWS DAILY.....1524
"PERILS OF PAULINE," 6th Episode (Pathe).1517
PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT, THE 1534
PICTURA, A SOCIAL AGENT.....1512
PRESIDENT WILSON TO OPEN EXPOSITION.1544
PROJECTION DEPARTMENT 1536
SID OLCOTT GOING ABROAD.....1519
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Licensed).....1578
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Independent).....1596
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Features).....1602
USED PROJECTOR ON OCEAN LINER.....1526
"WORLD, THE FLESH AND THE DEVIL, THE" (McEnnery Syndicate).....1547

TO ADVERTISERS.

CARBON IMPORTERS.
KIEWERT, CHARLES L.....1620
REISINGER, HUGO 1615

ELECTRICAL & MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT.
AMUSEMENT SOLES CO.....1603
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO.....1596
BELL & HOWELL 1617
CALEHUFF SUPPLY CO.....1568
DETROIT MOTOR CAR CO.....1619
FOOS GAS ENGINE CO.....1618
FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC CO.....1619
HALLBERG, J. H.....1580
HOKE, GEORGE M., SUPPLY CO.....1596
KIMBLE ELECTRIC CO.....1611
KLEINE OPTICAL CO.....1498
LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE.....1618
MESTRUM, HENRY 1610
MOTION PICTURE APPARATUS CO.....1607
PICTURE THEATER EQUIPMENT CO.....1605
SMITH, L. C. & CO.....1617
SPRAGUE ELECTRIC WORKS.....1618
STERLINGER, CHARLES A. & CO.....1619
WESTINGHOUSE ELECTRIC CO.....1598

MISCELLANEOUS FEATURE FILMS.
ALL STAR FEATURE CORPORATION.....1504
AMBROSIO AMERICAN CO.....1605
APEX FILM CO.....1566-67
ARCTIC FILM CO.....1609
BLINKHORN, ALBERT 1501
BOSWORTH, INC.....Insert
CELEBRATED PLAYERS' FILM CO.....1561
CHARIOT FILM CORPORATION.....1592
CHICAGO F. F. CO.....1596
COSMOFOTOFILM CO.....1583
ECLECTIC FILM CO.....Insert
EXCELSIOR FEATURE FILM CO.....1593
FAMOUS PLAYERS' FILM CO.....1486-87
FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO.....1595
GARRISON FILM CO.....1581
GENERAL FEATURE FILM CO.....1596
GREAT PLAYERS' FILM CO.....1584
GREENE'S FEATURE PHOTOPLAYS, INC.....1495
HAGY'S FEATURES 1586
HEPWORTH-AMERICAN CO. 1500
LAMBS' ALL STAR GAMBOL 1491
LASKY, JESSE L. FEATURE PLAY CO.....Insert
LAUDER, HARRY, FEATURE CO.....1587
LIFE PHOTO FILM CORPORATION.....1585
MAGNET F. F. CO.....1579
NORBIG FEATURES 1616
OZ MANUFACTURING CO.....1589
POPULAR PLAYS & PLAYERS', INC.....1492
RENFAX CO. 1597
SAWYER, A. H., INC.....1488-9-90
SIDFILMS 1494
STELLAR FEATURE FILM CO.....1597
WARNER'S FEATURES, INC.....1575
WORLD FILM CORPORATION.....1502-3

FILM BROKERS.
WESTERN FILM BROKERS.....1596

FILM EXCHANGES.
APEX FEATURE SERVICE.....1566
BRADENBURGH, GEORGE W.....1618
COMMERCIAL FILMERS 1607
ECONOMY FILM CO.....1600
FULTON, E. E.....1619
GREATER NEW YORK FILM RENTAL CO....1614
LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE.....1596
MECCA FEATURE FILM CO.....1601
NORTHERN FEATURE FILM EXCHANGE.....1596
PARAMOUNT FILM CO.....1566
VARIETY FEATURE FILM CO.....1588
WILTWYCK F. F. CO.....1561

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING CO.....1613
GAUMONT CO. 1506
MAJESTIC MOTION PICTURE CO.....1622
MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION.....1577
NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CORP.....1496-97
THANHOUSER FILM CORPORATION.....1478
UNIVERSAL FILM MFG. CO.....1480-1-2-3

LENS MANUFACTURERS.
GUNDLACH-MANHATTAN OPTICAL CO.....1616

LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS.
BIOGRAPH COMPANY.....1571
EDISON, THOMAS A.....1507
ESSANAY FILM MANUFACTURING CO.....1479
KALEM CO. 1505-1510
KLEINE, GEORGE 1499
LUBIN FILM MANUFACTURING CO.....1493
MELIES, GASTON, FILM CO.....1612-13
PATHE FRERES 1484-85
SELIG POLYSCOPE CO.....1564-65
VITAGRAPH CO. OF AMERICA.....1508-9

MISCELLANEOUS.
AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLING & CASH REGISTER CO. 1603
BING, JOHN 1617
BOTANICAL DECORATING CO.....1594
BURROWS ADDING MACHINE CO.....1616
CENTAUR FILM CO.....1591
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS 1569
CORCORAN, A. J.....1596
EASTMAN KODAK CO.....1591
GUNBY BROTHERS 1594
GENERAL SPECIALTY CO.....1598
INDIANAPOLIS CALCIUM LIGHT CO.....1611
INDUSTRIAL MOVING PICTURE CO.....1568
INTERNATIONAL FILM NEWS.....1590
KRAUS MANUFACTURING CO.....1607
LATCHAW, E. R.....1596
MACK 1598
NATIONAL MOVING PICTURE CO.....1621
NATIONAL TICKET CO.....1612
NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.....1607
POWERS BUILDING 1621
RAW FILM SUPPLY CO.....1568
STANDARD MOTION PICTURE CO.....1596
THEATER BROKAGE EXCHANGE.....1621
THEATER RECORD LEDGER CO.....1621
TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO.....1598

MOTION PICTURE CAMERA MANUFACTURERS.
BURK & JAMES.....1611
ERNEMAN KINETO WORKS.....1591
GENNERT, G. 1568
SCHNEIDER, EBERHARD 1621

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
AMERICAN PHOTOPLAYER & SALES CO.....1596
DEAGAN, J. C.....1621
HUME, T. D.....1596
SEEBURG, J. P. PIANO CO.....1599
SINN, CLARENCE 1621

OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN SEATING CO.....1621
ANDREWS, A. H. CO.....1621
HARDESTY MANUFACTURING CO.....1621
STEEL FURNITURE CO.....1621
WISCONSIN SEATING CO.....1621

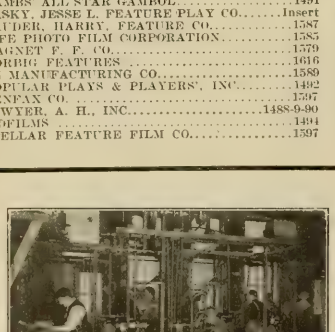
POSTERS AND FRAMES.
AMERICAN SLIDE & POSTER CO.....1570
NEWMAN MANUFACTURING CO.....1582
THEATER SPECIALTY MFG CO.....1594

PROJECTION MACHINE MANUFACTURERS.
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO.....1617-1561
PHANTOSCOPE MANUFACTURING CO.....1620
POWERS, NICHOLAS 1624
PRECISION MACHINE CO.....1573

PROJECTION SCREEN MANUFACTURERS.
ATSCO, INC. 1562-63
DAY & NIGHT SCREEN CO.....1618
GENTER, J. H. CO.....1617

SONG AND ADVERTISING SLIDES.
ERKER BROTHERS 1618
PICTORIAL NEWS SLIDE SERVICE.....1616
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.....1618
VITASLIDE CO. 1611

THEATRICAL ARCHITECTS.
DECORATORS' SUPPLY CO.....1619



Manufacturing Projection Supply House

That's Why We Have

REASONABLE PRICES

Quick Repairs of M. P. Machines and Cameras of All Makes

Edison, Powers, Simplex, Motiograph and Edengraph Machines and All Parts

HENRY MESTRUM, Successor to C. B. KLEINE

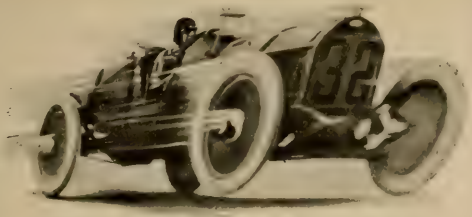
Established since 1865

385 6th Avenue, New York, Between W. 23rd and 24th Streets



INTERNATIONAL 500-MILE AUTO RACE

SOLD

STATE RIGHTS TO MANY STATES, BUT HAVE SOME GOOD TERRITORY STILL OPEN.

If you don't want your state, write for first run in your city.

INDIANAPOLIS-CALCIUM LIGHT CO.
114-116 SO. CAPITOL AVENUE, INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

VITASLIDE

Exhibitors can add materially to their income by displaying advertising "Vitaslides." They interest your audience as much as the "movies." Build up an exclusive advertising service of your own—we'll tell you how.

VITASLIDE COMPANY
GEO. BRECK, Manager,
70 Turk Street San Francisco, Cal.

Rochester Anti-Static Motion Picture FILM

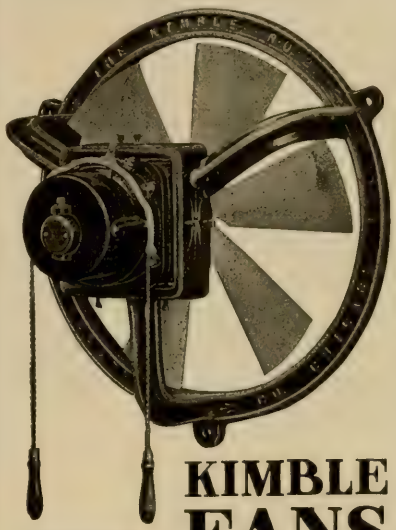
Produces Pictures of Wonderful Beauty and Brilliancy

This film has a creamy surface that eliminates all harsh contrasts. No "chalky" whites or "sooty" blacks, if you use anti-static film for taking and printing your motion pictures. Write for Catalog A and our quotations on this film and a complete line of Motion Picture Cameras, Projectors, Lenses and Accessories. Special inducements for producing companies and other large users.

BURKE & JAMES, Inc.
Wholesale Territorial Agents
244-258 E. Ontario St., Chicago

Kimble Ventilation is Good Advertising for You

Good ventilation of a "movie" is good advertising, just as surely as showing good films is good advertising. People talk about it.



(Alternating Current)

KIMBLE FANS

Give the Best Ventilation at Least Cost

Kimble Fans are variable speed. You can run them at any speed.

Kimble Fans are reversible. You can use the one fan to draw in fresh air or to force out foul air.

Kimble Fans reduce current consumption in direct proportion to every speed reduction.

Kimble Fans are the only alternating-current fans that are variable speed and reversible. They are the only ones that reduce current consumption with speed reduction.

Ventilate the Kimble way. It's best at least cost—and it's good advertising. Write today for the Red Catalog. They run silently.

KIMBLE ELECTRIC CO.
The Alternating Current Fan Specialists
633 Northwestern Ave., Chicago

KIMBLE MOTORS

INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES

AMERICAN.

June 5—Sparrow of the Circus (Drama).....
June 5—Mein Lieber Katrina (Comedy).....
June 8—The Oath of Pierre (2 parts—Dr.)....
June 10—Sparrow of the Circus (Drama).....
June 15—Jim (2 parts—Drama).....
June 17—The Unmasking (Drama) .....
June 22—The Painted Lady's Child (Two parts—Drama) .....
June 24—Blue Knot, King of Polo (Drama)..

BEAUTY.

May 26—Jane, the Justice (Drama).....
June 2—Drifting Hearts (Drama).....
June 9—Nancy's Husband (Drama) .....
June 16—The Dream Ship (Drama).....

101 BISON.

June 6—On the Verge of War (3 parts—Dr.)..
June 13—The Isle of Abandoned Hope (2 parts—Drama) .....
June 20—The Forbidden Room (Three parts—Drama) .....

BRONCHO.

June 3—Shorty's Trip to Mexico (2 parts—Comedy) .....
June 10—A Tragedy of the Orient (Two parts—Drama) .....
June 17—The Hour of Reckoning (Two parts—Drama) .....

CRYSTAL.

June 2—Easy Money (Comedy).....
—A Midnight Supper (Comedy).....
June 7—(No Release This Day).....
June 9—His Lucky Day (Comedy).....
June 16—Boxes and Boxers (Comedy).....
—Foolish Lovers (Comedy).....

DOMINO.

May 28—The Ambassador's Envoy (Two parts—Drama) .....
June 4—The Latent Spark (2 parts—Drama)..
June 11—A Relic of Old Japan (Two parts—Dr.)
June 18—In the Southern Hills (Two parts—Drama) .....

ECLAIR.

June 7—A Marriage for Money (Comedy).....
—Society at Simpson Center (Comedy)..
June 10—Wife (2 parts—Drama).....
June 14—Aunty's Money Bag (Comedy-Drama)..
June 17—The Mask of Affliction (Two parts—Western—Drama) .....
June 21—The Blunderer's Mark (Western—Dr.)

FRONTIER.

May 23—The Sheriff's Story (Drama).....
May 28—The Joys of a Chaperon (Comedy)....
May 30—Brother for Brother (Drama).....
June 4—The Girl Next Door (Drama).....
June 14—His Dress Rehearsal (Drama) .....
June 21—The Gun Men of Plumas (Dr.).....

GOLD SEAL.

May 26—Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery Series No. 7) (2 parts—Drama).....
June 2—Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery (Series No. 8—2 parts—Drama).....
June 9—Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery—Series No. 9 (Drama).....
June 16—Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery (Series No. 10—Drama).....

IMP.

June 8—The Man Who Lost, But Won (2 parts—Comedy-Drama) .....
June 11—Across the Atlantic (3 parts—Drama)
June 15—The Baited Trap (Two parts—Dr.)..
June 18—The Fatal Step (Drama).....

JOKER.

June 3—Their First Anniversary (Comedy)....
June 6—Bess the Detectress (Comedy).....
June 10—Mike Searches For His Long Lost Brother (Comedy) .....
June 13—The Cure (Comedy).....
June 17—The Fatal Letter (Comedy).....
June 20—A Quiet Day at Murphy's (Comedy)..

KAY-BEE.

May 22—A Social Ghost (2 parts—Drama).....
May 29—The Embezzler (Two parts—Drama).
June 5—Tennessee (2 parts—Drama).....
June 12—From Out the Dregs (Two parts—Dr.)
June 19—The Voice at the Phone (Part 1—Two parts—Drama) .....

KOMIC.

May 24—Nell's Eugenic Wedding (Comedy)....
May 31—An Exciting Courtship (Comedy)....
June 7—The Last Drink of Whiskey (Com.)..
June 14—Hubby to the Rescue (Comedy).....
June 21—The Deceiver (Comedy).....

KEYSTONE.

May 21—When Ruben Fooled the Bandits (Comedy) .....
May 23—Our Large Birds (Educational).....
—Acres of Alfalfa (Educational).....
May 25—Fatal Flirtation (Comedy).....
May 28—The Alarm (2 parts—Comedy).....
May 30—(No Release This Day).....
June 1—The Fatal Mallet (Comedy).....

LUX.

May 1—Only an Iceman (Comedy).....
May 8—Jim's Mother-in-law (Comedy).....
—In Good Company (Comedy).....
May 15—The Girl in the Auto (Comedy).....
May 22—Just Neighbors (Comedy).....
May 29—Sweethearts (Comedy).....
—Venice (Scenic).....
June 5—In Love with a Suffragette (Comedy).
June 12—A Family Feud (Comedy).....
—View of the Alps (Scenic).....
June 19—The Newlyweds (Comedy).....
June 26—A Day's Outing (Comedy).....
—The Telephone Operator (Comedy)....

MAJESTIC.

June 2—The Newer Woman (Drama).....
June 7—The Intruder (2 parts—Drama).....
June 9—Her Birthday Present (Drama).....
June 14—The Rebellion of Kitty Bell (Two parts—Drama) .....
June 16—Their First Acquaintance (Dr.).....
June 21—The Severed Thong (Two parts—Dr.)

NESTOR.

June 3—Children of Fate (Drama).....
June 5—Sophie of the Films (Comedy—Series No. 1) .....
June 10—A Wife On a Wager (Drama).....
June 12—Sophie of the Films (Comedy Series No. 2) .....
June 17—'Cross the Mexican Line (West.—Dr.)
June 19—Sophie of the Films (Series No. 3—Comedy) .....

POWERS.

June 1—All the Dog's Fault (Comedy).....
—The Arsenal of Lloyd at Trieste (Scenic)
June 5—Heart Strings (Drama).....
June 8—The Undertow (Drama).....
June 12—The Masked Rider (Drama).....
June 19—The Brand of Cain (Drama).....

PRINCESS.

May 29—A Telephone Strategy (Comedy).....
June 5—His Enemy (Drama).....
June 12—The Toy Shop (Drama).....
June 19—The Little Senorita (Drama).....

RELIANCE.

June 6—Rose Bush of Memories (2 parts—Drama) .....
June 8—Our Mutual Girl, No. 21.....
June 10—The Cowboy's Chicken Dinner (Dr.)..
June 12—Dan Morgan's Way (Drama).....
June 13—The Horse Wrangler (Two parts—Drama) .....
June 15—Our Mutual Girl, No. 22.....
June 17—The Peach Brand (Dr.).....
June 20—The Stolen Code (Two parts—Drama).

REX.

June 4—Swede Larson (3 parts—Drama).....
June 7—Closed Gates (Drama).....
June 11—The Awakening (Drama).....
June 14—The Pursuit of Hate (Drama).....
June 18—The Law Unto Himself (Two parts—Drama) .....
June 21—The Boob Detective (Comedy).....

ROYAL.

May 30—Bombsky and the Bombs (Comedy)..
June 6—Tango Troubles (Comedy).....
June 13—Handle with Care (Comedy).....
June 19—Such a Business (Comedy).....
—The Busy Man (Comedy).....

STERLING.

June 4—Snitz Joins the Force (Comedy).....
June 11—When Smaltz Loves (Comedy).....
June 15—Kids (Comedy).....
June 18—A Jealous Husband (Comedy).....

THANHOUSER.

May 31—When the Wheels of Justice Clogged (Drama) .....
June 2—From the Shadows (2 parts—Drama)..
June 7—The Scrumb Lady (Comedy).....
June 9—Rivalry (Two parts—Drama).....
June 14—The Girl Across the Hall (Drama)...
June 16—Remorse (Two parts—Dr.).....
June 19—The Man Without Fear (Dr.).....
June 21—The Outlaw's Nemesis (Com.-Dr.).....

UNIVERSAL IKE.

June 2—Universal Ike, Jr., in a Battle Royal (Comedy) .....
June 9—Universal Ike Is Kept From Being An Actor (Comedy) .....
June 16—Universal Ike, Jr., Bearly Won Her (Comedy) .....

VICTOR.

June 8—Uncle Sam In Mexico (Top. and Edu.)
June 12—Enmeshed By Fate (2 parts—Drama)..
June 15—The Sandhill Lovers (Western—Dr.)..
June 19—A Singular Cynic (Two parts—Com.)

FEATURES.

HEPWORTH AMERICAN FILM CORPORATION.

May 7—The Mistress of the Air (Deer Brand) (3 parts) .....
May 11—The Murdoch Trial (Turner Films, Ltd.) (4 parts) .....
—The Heart of Midlothian (Hepworth's) (5 parts) .....
May 18—The Capture of a Live Elephant and Hunting Wild Game in the South Pacific Islands (Blinkhorn's Natural History Travels) (5 parts).....

UNIVERSAL SPECIAL FEATURES.

Jan.—Absinthe (4 parts—Drama).....
Feb. —Merchant of Venice (4 parts—Drama)....
March —Won in the Clouds—(3 parts—Drama).
March —Washington at Valley Forge (4 parts—Drama) .....
April —The Spy (4 parts—Drama).....
April—Samson (6 parts—Drama).....

CRITERION FEATURES.

Feb. 11—The Trap (3 parts—Drama).....
Feb. 28—The Desert's Sting (3 parts—Drama).

KENNEDY FEATURES, INC.

Jan. 21—The Bride of Lammermoor (3 parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 4—Mary Magdalene (3 parts—Drama)...
Feb. 18—Jess (4 parts—Drama).....
March 4—Elsie Venner (3 parts—Drama).....
March 18—Charlotte Corday (4 parts—Drama).

ROLL TICKETS

PRICES

Five Thousand - -	$1.25
Ten Thousand - -	$2.50
Twenty Thousand - -	$4.50
Twenty-five Thousand -	$5.50
Fifty Thousand - -	$6.50
One Hundred Thousand -	$8.00

Your own special Ticket, any printing, any colors, accurately numbered; every roll guaranteed. Coupon Tickets for Prize Drawings, 5,000, $2.50. Stock Tickets, 6c per 1,000. Prompt shipments. Cash with the order. Get the samples. Send diagram for Reserved Seat Coupon Tickets, serial or dated.

NATIONAL TICKET CO.
SHAMOKIN, PA.

"JIM"

IN TWO PARTS

A Poetic Gem visualized—Featuring Ed Coxen and Winifred Greenwood—Under direction of Thos. Ricketts.

One, Three and Six Sheet Lithos, Photos, Slides and Heralds.

Release Monday, June 15th, 1914

"THE DREAM SHIP"

The most Superb Novelty Production of the Season—Featuring Margarita Fischer and Harry Pollard—Get an Early Booking.

Release Tuesday, June 16th, 1914

"THE UNMASKING"

Society Drama of the highest order—Wm. Garwood and Vivian Rich—under direction of Sydney Ayres.

Release Wednesday, June 17th, 1914

AMERICAN FILM MFG. CO.

CHICAGO

LICENSED RELEASE DATES

RELEASE DAYS.

Monday—Biograph, Edison, Kalem, Pathe, Selig, Vitagraph.

Tuesday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Geo. Kleine, Pathe, Lubin, Melies, Selig, Vitagraph.

Wednesday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Melies, Selig, Pathe, Vitagraph.

Thursday—Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Melies, Selig, Vitagraph.

Friday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Selig, Lubin, Vitagraph.

Saturday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

BIOGRAPH.

May 28—The Science of Crime (2 parts—Dr.)
May 30—A Daring Getaway (Drama).....
June 1—Death's Witness (Drama).....
June 4—The Idiot (Drama).....
June 6—Captain Kidd, the Bold (Comedy).....
June 6—In the Nick of Time (Comedy).....
June 8—The Ethics of the Profession (Drama)
June 11—A Jonah (Drama).....
June 13—The Opal's Curse (Drama).....

EDISON.

June 1—Conscientious Caroline (Comedy).....
June 2—With His Hands (Fifth story of "The Man Who Disappeared"—Drama)...
June 3—By Parcel Post (Comedy).....
June 5—When the Men Left Town (Special—2 parts—Comedy) .....
June 6—The Counterfeiters (Drama).....
June 8—The Tango in Tuckerville (Comedy)...
June 9—The Voice of Silence (Drama).....
June 10—Andy Goes a-Pirating—Seventh of the Andy Series (Comedy) .....
June 12—A Warning From the Past (Special—2 parts—Drama).....
June 13—A Terror of the Night—Ninth of the Active Life of Dolly of the Dailies series (Drama) .....
June 15—The Adventure of the Missing Legacy (Sixth of Octavius Amateur Detective series—Comedy) .....
June 16—The Gap (Sixth of "The Man Who Disappeared" series—Drama) .....
June 17—A Modern Samson (Comedy).....
—On the Steps (Comedy).....
June 19—The Hand of Horror (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 20—In the Days of Slavery (Drama).....

ESSANAY.

May 29—When the Lightning Struck (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
May 30—Broncho Billy's Cunning (Drama)....
June 2—An Angel Unaware (Drama).....
June 3—Beans (Comedy).....
June 4—Sophie Pulls a Good One (Comedy)..
June 5—The Elder Brother (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
June 6—Broncho Billy's Duty (Drama).....
June 9 Jane (Comedy) .....
June 10—This Is the Life (Comedy).....
June 11—The Snakeville Volunteer (Comedy)...
June 12—The Song in the Dark (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
June 16—The Little "He and She" (Com.-Dr.)
June 17—The Fable of the Brash Drummer and the Nectarine (Comedy).....
June 18—The Wooing of Sophie (Western Com.)
June 19—Finger Prints (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 20—Broncho Billy—Outlaw (Drama).....

KALEM.

May 27—The Bottled Spider (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
May 29—And the Dance Went On (Comedy)..
May 30—The Coming of Lone Wolf (Drama)..
June 1—The Barrier of Ignorance (Special—2 parts—Drama).....
June 3—The Call of the Tribe (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
June 5—Reaping for the Whirlwind (Com.)..
—A Trip to Mt. Lowe (Travel).....
June 6—The Hour of Danger (Drama).....
June 8—Nina o the Theater—First of the Alice Joyce Series (Spec.—2 parts—Dr.).
June 10—The Quicksands (Spec.—2 parts—Dr.)
June 12—The Box Car Bride (Comedy).....
June 13—The Squaw's Revenge (Drama).....
June 15—Mrs. Peyton's Pearls (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 16—The Missing Jewels (Drama).....
June 17—Home Run Baker's Double (Special—Two parts Drama) .....
June 19—The Wages of Sinn (Comedy).....
—Military Tattoo at Aldershot, England (Topical) .....
June 20—Brought to Justice (Drama).....

GEORGE KLEINE.

May 5—The Broken Chain (Cines—Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
May 12—The Toreador's Romance (Cines—Special—2 parts—Drama).....?
May 19—Mystery of the Fast Mail (Special—Eclipse—2 parts—Drama) .....
May 26—The Cigarette Maker of Seville (Cines Spec.—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 2—Trapped By Wireless (Eclipse—Two parts—Special—Drama) .....
June 9—The Trap-Door Clue (Cello—Special—2 parts—Drama).....
June 16—One Woman's Way (Cines—Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
June 23—His Symphony (Cello — Special — Two parts—Drama) .....

LUBIN.

May 28—The Crowning Glory (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
May 29—The Test of Courage (Drama).....
May 30—A Tango Tragedy (Comedy).....
—Circus Time in Toyland (Comedy)..
June 2—Summer Love (Comedy).....
—A Brewery-Town Romance (Comedy)..
June 3—Kiss Me Good Night (Special—2 parts Comedy) .....
June 4—A Girl of the Cafs (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
June 5—Blotted Out (Drama).....
June 6—Fire! Fire! (Comedy).....
—The Female Cop (Comedy).....
June 9—The Pie Eaters (Comedy).....
June 9—He Wore a Wig (Comedy).....
June 10—The Changeling (Spec.—2 parts—Dr.).
June 11—The Lure of the Pit (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
June 12—Claim Number Three (Drama).....
June 13—He Changed His Mind (Comedy).....
June 13—A Bargain Automobile (Comedy).....
June 16—The Shell Comb Industry (Ind.).....
—Good Cider (Comedy).....
June 17—The Struggle Everlasting (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 18—The House of Darkness (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 19—The Parent Strain (Drama).....
June 20—Getting Solid With Pa (Comedy).....
—Long May It Wave (Comedy).....

MELIES.

May 30—Terrible Alternative (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
June 2—Peter Loves Work (Comedy).....
June 2—An Unfortunate Idea (Comedy).....
June 3—Maud's Glove (Drama) .....
June 4—A Good Excuse (Comedy).....
June 4—Their First Quarrel (Comedy).....
June 4—Pauline's Necklace (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
June 6—Who's Who (Spec.—2 parts—Dr.).....

PATHE.

May 20—Pathe's Weekly, No. 37 (News).....
May 21—Antony and Cleopatra (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
May 23—The Conquest of Claire (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
May 25—Rastus' Riotous Ride (Comedy).....
May 26—Making Steel Rails (Industrial).....
—The City of Agra (India—Travel)....
May 27—Pathe's Weekly, No. 38 (News).....
May 30—The War of the Lilliputians (Special—Two parts—Comedy-Drama) .....
June 1—The Joking Bricklayers (Comedy)....
—Monaco (Architecture).....
—When Dreams Come True (Drama)..
June 2—Dogs of War (Drama).....
June 3—Pathe's Weekly No. 39 (News).....
June 6—The Lost Heir (Special—2 parts—Dr.)
June 8—Woof! Watch Whiffles (Comedy)...
—Picturesque Scandinavia (Travel)....
June 9—The Poison of Serpents (Educa.)....
—River Travel in Indo-China (Travel)..
June 10—Pathe's Weekly, No. 40—1914 (News)
June 15—Whiffles, the Spotter (Comedy).....
—Brittany, France (Travel).....
June 16—Simple Experiments in Electricity (Educational) .....
—Through the Bosphorus, Turkey (Travel)
June 17—Pathe's Weekly, No. 41—1914 (News)

SELIG.

May 26—The Clock Went Wrong (Comedy)..
—Simp Simpson and the Spirits (Com.)
May 27—Dawn (Drama) .....
May 28—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial—No. 26 (News) .....
May 29—Second Childhood (Comedy).....
May 30—The Girl Behind the Barrier.....
June 1—The Adventures of Kathlyn—No. 12—The King's Will (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 1—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 27 (News) .....
June 2—The Sheep Runners (Drama).....
June 3—The Rummage Sale (Drama).....
June 4—The Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. No. 28 (News).....
June 5—Willie's Haircut (Comedy).....
—His First Ride (Comedy).....
June 6—Rose o' My Heart (Drama).....
June 8—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 29..
June 8—Judge Dunn's Decision (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
June 9—Eugenics At Bar "U" Ranch (Com.).
June 10—The Doctor's Mistake (Drama).....
June 11—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 30..
June 12—Bombarded (Comedy) .....
June 12—Doe Yak's Zoo (Picture Cartoon).....
June 13—When the Night Call Came (Drama)..
June 15—The Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 13—The Court of Death (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 15—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 31 (News) .....
June 16—How Lone Wolf Died (Drama).....
June 17—Castles in the Air (Drama).....
June 18—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 32 (News) .....
June 19—Peter's Relations (Comedy).....
—Chicken (Comedy) .....
June 20—The Girl at His Side (Drama).....

VITAGRAPH.

May 23—Etta of the Footlights (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
May 25—A Sentimental Burglar (Drama).....
May 26—Cutey's Wife (Special—Two parts—Comedy) .....
May 27—The Boys of the I. O. U. (Com.-Dr.).
May 28—Hunger Knows No Law (Drama)....
May 29—Mr. Bunnyhug Buys a Hat For His Bride (Comedy) .....
May 30—The Mystery of the Hidden House (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 1—Miss Raffles (Comedy-Drama).....
June 2—The Last Will (Special—2 parts—Dr.)
June 3—Wanted, a House (Comedy).....
June 4—A False Move (Comedy).....
June 5—The Maid from Sweden (Comedy)....
June 6—Too Many Husbands (Special—2 parts Comedy) .....
June 8—Eve's Daughter (Drama).....
June 9—The Right of Way (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
June 10—The Widow of Red Rock (Comedy)....
June 11—The Power to Forgive (Drama).....
June 12—The Accomplished Mrs. Thompson (Comedy) .....
June 13—Our Fairy Play (Spec.—2 parts—Com.)
June 15—The Crime of Cain (Drama).....
June 16—A Wayward Daughter (Special—Two parts—Comedy-Drama) .....
June 17—The Ladies' War (Comedy).....
June 18—Only a Sister (Drama) .....
June 19—The Persistent Mr. Prince (Comedy).
June 20—Father's Flirtation (Special—Two parts Comedy) .....

Greater New York Film Rental Company
All Specials Supplied. Main Office: 126-132 West 46th Street, Depot: 116-118 East 14th Street, New York
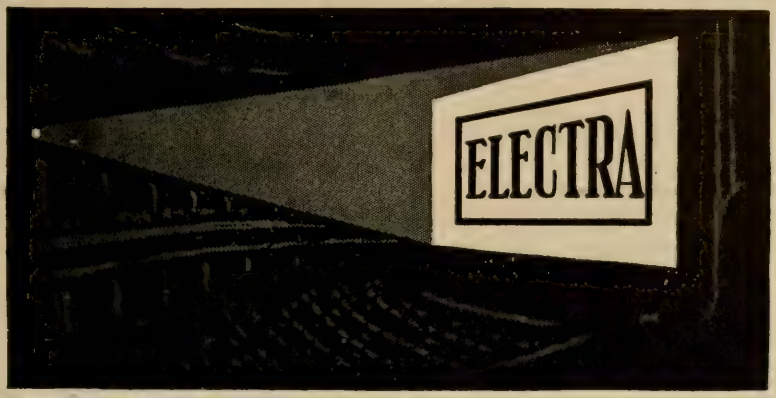
Licensed Film Supplied to Licensed Exhibitors :-: :-: :-: Write or Call for Particulars

ELECTRA ELECTRA ELECTRA



WELCOME
TO THE
SECOND INTERNATIONAL CONVENTION OF THE MOTION PICTURE ART

May the Benefits Derived From This Convention Add to the Prosperity and Progress of the Whole Moving Picture Industry

HUGO REISINGER
11 BROADWAY NEW YORK CITY

ELECTRA

ELECTRA ELECTRA ELECTRA

SLIDES OF THE GREAT STEAMSHIP DISASTER

THE SINKING OF THE EMPRESS OF IRELAND

NINE (9) SENSATIONAL SLIDES READY FOR DELIVERY

The Pictorial News Slide Service have ready for delivery nine (9) stereopticon fireproof film slides of the most striking scenes in the great steamship disaster.

These slides are made of a new photo process on fireproof films, mounted on mats, and ready to throw on the screen. Mailed first class letter postage. $1.00 for the complete set of nine (9).

The Pictorial News Slide Service furnishes thirty-six (36) slides a week to the moving picture theatres; six (6) mailed every day for $2.50 a week.

Write in for further information.

PICTORIAL NEWS SLIDE SERVICE

422 So. Dearborn Street -:- CHICAGO, ILL.

Customers' Statement Bulletin

shows you how to get Customers' Statements out on time and at less cost.

It is the experience that if you get your statements all out on time, you get them paid more promptly. Prompt statements mean fewer bad debts, better collections; therefore better standing at your bank.

This bulletin also shows you how successful business men are saving one-third in time in making customers' statements the Burroughs way; whether they get out thousands of statements, or only a hundred. There is no "new system" about it. You won't have to change your present office methods—they will simply be shortened.

A copy of this bulletin will be sent you free on request.

We would be glad to have our representative call and explain how a Burroughs Statement Machine could be profitably applied to your business, if you will mention it when writing for the bulletin.

Burroughs Adding Machine Co.

122 Burroughs Block, Detroit, Michigan.

ONE GLANCE AT THE PICTURE after putting a

Gundlach Projection Lens

on the machine shows you it makes a sharper and more brilliant picture. We only ask you to give a Gundlach Projection Lens a trial and see for yourself how much it improves the picture. All Film Exchanges take orders for them. Specify Gundlach Lenses when buying any kind of a new machine. You must have Gundlach Lenses to get the best result.

IT'S ALL IN THE LENS

Gundlach-Manhattan Optical Co.

808 Clinton Ave., So., Rochester, N. Y.

MAKING MOVIES AT NIGHT

RADIUM FLARES, THE NEW LIGHT

A very brilliant light with very little smoke. Railroad wrecks, night parades, banquet scenes, public meetings or any old thing, made at night as easily as day. Light can be carried in the hip pocket and is always ready.

PRICES:

½	minute	flares	-	-	$36.00	per	dozen	2	minute flares - -	$120.00 per dozen
1	"	"	-	-	60.00	"	"	2½	" " - -	150.00 " "
1½	"	"	-	-	90.00	"	"

Copy this for future reference

50% Discount in Lots of One Dozen or More

NORBIG FILM MFG. COMPANY, 1745 Alessandro St., Los Angeles, Calif.

Price complete, packed in a strong wooden cabinet $22.75 with 500 foot reel box, or $25.00 with 1,000 foot box.

Profitable Territories Now Being Granted

to live men able to see a big opportunity and financially able to lay in a small stock of these inexpensive, serviceable, easily operated and rapid selling machines. For such firms we have a liberal proposition to make, granting exclusive sales agencies which mean big profits for you. Every family is a possible purchaser of

Bing's Home Entertainer

THIS fascinating, absolutely safe motion picture machine, practical in every respect, is manufactured at our factories in Germany, is sold on import, and to dealers only. While useful for lectures and sales demonstrations it is primarily designed for home use. Simple and self-contained; takes standard sized films; equipped with fire-proof film boxes of 500 and 1,000 feet capacity.

Bing's Home Entertainer gives very large white pictures at a short distance; has strong, silent mechanism and large lamp house. Each machine has a baby arc lamp of 800 candle power, taking about 6 amperes. The rheostat supplied is suitable for 110, 150 or 220 volts.

Don't delay—write us for territories open NOW

BING BROTHERS, Manufacturers. JOHN BING, Sole Representative, 381 Fourth Avenue, New York

THE L.C.SMITH REWINDING SET
EMBRACES THE FIRST NOTEWORTHY IMPROVEMENTS TO REWINDING MECHANISM SINCE REWINDING BECAME NECESSARY. PRICE $5.00
GET ONE FROM YOUR EXCHANGE OR ADDRESS US FOR LEAFLET
L.C.SMITH CO.
SCHENECTADY, N.Y.
PAT. PENDING
PAT. PENDING

THE INDUCTOR-COMPENSATOR

An Alternating Current Transformer for Motion Picture Arc Lamps
Every claim made for superior merit, high efficiency and current saving qualities has been proven by over five years' constant service.
Nearly 3,000 INDUCTOR COMPENSATORS now in use.

PRICE:

110 Volts, 60 Cycles.....$50.00
220 Volts, 60 Cycles..... 50.00

Prices for special transformers to control other voltage and cycles quoted on application. Order from your exchange or from

BELL & HOWELL COMPANY, Designers and Manufacturers
917 West Illinois Street :: :: :: Chicago, Illinois

NO! NO! NO!

We have no plans for going out of business, and the business is not being offered for sale.

Disregard these and other malicious stories circulated by Competitors with the Expectation of increasing their sales.

CAN YOU RISK to buy of such people ? ? ? Or will you place orders where honest representations are made.

The MOTIOGRAPH is Honestly made and Honestly sold.

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO. 564 W. Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

—IT ISN'T WHAT YOU PAY FOR A SCREEN— —BUT WHAT YOU GET FOR WHAT YOU PAY—

A MIRROROIDE Buyer gets more value and better results for his money than he could obtain by the use of any other screen in this great world.

MIRROROIDE is sold at a price within the reach of any exhibitor—

33⅓ Cents a Square Foot, $3.00 a Square Yard

Think it over. A quality screen made of canvas—A coating of metalized glass. A screen that is sold under a five-year guarantee. It can't crack, peel or turn black. It's water-proof.

Now get our large free samples—Let us show you the evidence with your own eyes.

SEEING IS BELIEVING

Test our samples against any screen or curtain that you may desire, then soak these samples in a solution of water, borax, aqua ammonia. Do you think any other screen on earth will stand this test?

Now Read This. Then Write To Us At Once

J. H. GENTER CO., Inc. Newburgh, N. Y.

Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania,
Philadelphia, Pa.
Philadelphia M. P. Supply Co.,
1233 Vine St., Philadelphia, Pa.
(From Our Philadelphia Agency)

Gentlemen:—

Having installed Mirroroide Screens in both of the houses in this city, which have been under my management, I am in a position to tell you what grand results have been accomplished in their use by me.

The improvement in the picture is so pronounced, that it is at once the subject of favorable comment by the audience. In the first house in which I used the first screen after its installation my business began growing at once and increased 33⅓%. This I attribute almost entirely to the beautiful picture secured by the use of Mirroroide.

I am using one at the Family Theater at present, with alternating current, and the results are wonderful. I can get a picture equal to any without the use of any appliance to change the current.

Your screen is without a doubt a business producer for the exhibitor, and I would not be without one.

Respectfully yours,
S. MERSE.

Come and See Us at Booth 31, CONVENTION WEEK

Mirroroide is made in two different matt finishes. A—Medium. B—Heavy. Three (3) Tints. Silver White, Silver Flesh, and Pale Gold. We also manufacture Mirroroide Metalized Glass Bronzes in over 20 different colors, ready to use. WATERPROOF LACQUERS OF ANY COLOR TO TINT YOUR OWN LAMPS OR TO LACQUER YOUR BRASS WORK.

"THE PEERLESS"— ALWAYS AT THE TOP —"THE PIONEER"

WHEN—LESS THAN ONE SHORT YEAR AGO—IT ENTERED THE AMERICAN FIELD—THE DAY AND NIGHT SCREEN

IMMEDIATELY TOOK ITS PLACE AT THE HEAD OF THE PROCESSION—AND THERE IT HAS STEADILY REMAINED

The REAL SCREEN DE LUXE—The ONLY SCREEN of QUALITY

TEST OUR SAMPLES IN THE PRESENCE OF YOUR PATRONS—LET THEM DECIDE

DAY AND NIGHT SCREENS, INC., 291 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

BRANCH OFFICES AND DISTRIBUTING CENTERS AT

PHILADELPHIA, NEW ORLEANS, ATLANTA, EL PASO, MEMPHIS, KANSAS CITY, DES MOINES, SAN FRANCISCO, LOS ANGELES, SEATTLE, PARIS, BERLIN, LONDON

OUR OFFICE WEEK OF JUNE 8th BOOTH No. 209 AT THE EXPOSITION, NEW YORK

NO COMPLAINTS OF FOUL AIR WHERE

SPRAGUE ELECTRIC OZONATORS

Are In Use

COMBINATION OZONATOR and ELECTRIC FAN

Send for Bulletin No. 49000

SPRAGUE ELECTRIC WORKS
OF GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY
Main Office, 527-531 W. 34th Street
New York, N. Y.
Branch Offices in Principal Cities.

G. W. BRADENBURGH, 802 Vine St PHILADELPHIA., PA.

FEATURE FILMS FOR SALE

NAME	Length	Make	Adv.	Price
EXPIATION	2000	Eclair	1-3-6	$30
WHEN PARIS LOVES	3000	Pathe	1-3-6	50
DRIVEN FROM HOME	2300	Atlas	1-3-6	45
OLIVER TWIST	4000	Hepworth	1-3-6	75
SILVER BLAZE	2000	Eclair	1-3-6	30
PLOT AND COUNTERPLOT	3000	Cines	1-3-6	45
MIDNIGHT EXPRESS	3000	Atlas	1-3-6	60
BLAZING THE TRAIL	2000	Bison	1-3	25
THE DEATH KNELL	3000	Itala	1-3-6	125
THE SHADOW OF EVIL	2000	Itala	1-3-6	75
BRANDED FOR LIFE	2000	Itala	1-3-6	75
THE DREAD OF DOOM	3000	Itala	1-3-6	125
A BROKER'S SACRIFICE	3000	Roma	1-3-6	100
A DARE DEVIL RESCUE (Rodman Law)	3000	Blaché	1-3-6	125
SPANISH BLOOD	4000	Special	1-3-6	125
FIGHT FOR THE GREAT BLACK DIAMOND	3000	Messter	1-3-6	200
THE IRON MAN	2000	Urban	1-3-6	100
WANTED BY THE POLICE	3000	Mittenthal styles	1-3-6	175
TRAILING THE COUNTERFEITERS	2900	B. & C.	1-3-6	150
GREATER LOVE	2000	Itala	1-3-6	60
GORKI, DEMON DETECTIVE	3000	Dania	1-3-6	60

One thousand reels. First-class condition, with posters, at ten dollars per reel. Commercials, without posters, three and five dollars per reel. Write for list.

PUT in your own lighting plant and pay for it with your Central Station bills. A Foos generating set will produce current for less than 3 cents per kilowatt, and is more reliable than service from a Central Station.

Ask for Bulletin 98.

FOOS GAS ENGINE CO.
Springfield, Ohio.

The EXHIBITOR SAYS

Complete Equipment
for The MOTION PICTURE THEATRE
Send for Complete Catalogue
608 OLIVE ST ERKER'S ST. LOUIS, MO

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and anyone can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact, they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

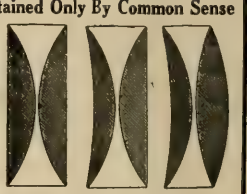
For the sum of $3.50 we will send, by parcel post, prepaid and insured, the following:

24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address:

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.
1733 West 9th St. Brooklyn, N. Y.

Perfect Daylight Projection Is Obtained Only By Common Sense

If you want to obtain perfect projection and at the same time have your theatre bright as day, you must obtain these results through your lens, condenser, carbons and curtain. We manufacture the BRIGHTASDAY CURTAIN EMULSION, which is universally endorsed by the best exhibitors in the country. Send us $1.50 and we will send you one set of Brightasday Curtain Emulsion, enough to paint your curtain several times, besides black border as well.



We also are exclusive importers of the famous Jena pure white meniscus bi-convex and plano condensers. The meniscus bi-convex condensor combination will improve your light 50 per cent. Sold as follows:

PRICES.	Two Plano Fig. 1	One Meniscus One Plano Fig. 2	One Meniscus One Bi-Convex Fig. 3
Jena Imported Plano Condensers	$1.50 Ea.	Half Doz., $7.50
Jena Imported Meniscus Condensers	2.00 Ea.	Half Doz., 9.00
Jena Imported Bi-Convex Condensers	2.00 Ea.	Half Doz., 9.00
Jena Imported Meniscus Bi-Convex Combination	$4.00 per Pr.
Jena Imported Meniscus Bi-Convex Combination	Half Doz., $20.00

For information concerning improved and perfect projection address

Projection Department, Laemmle Film Service, 252 Hennepin Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.

OUR CATALOGUE OF Brush Electric Lighting Sets
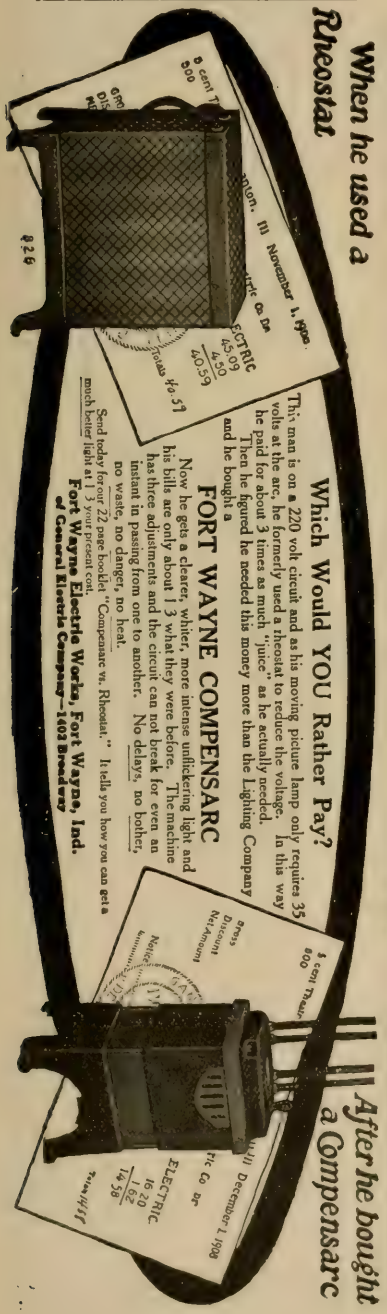
contains more useful information about electric lighting in general than any other book ever issued. Write for it today.
THE CHAS. E. STRELINGER CO.,
Box MP-8, Detroit, Mich., U. S. A.

When he used a Rheostat



Which Would YOU Rather Pay?

This man is on a 220 volt circuit and as his moving picture lamp only requires 35 volts at the arc, he formerly used a rheostat to reduce the voltage. In this way he paid for about 3 times as much "juice" as he actually needed. Then he figured he needed this money more than the Lighting Company and he bought a

FORT WAYNE COMPENSARC

Now he gets a clearer, whiter, more intense unflickering light and his bills are only about 1/3 what they were before. The machine has three adjustments and the circuit can not break for even an instant in passing from one to another. No delays, no bother, no waste, no danger, no heat.

Send today for our 22 page booklet "Compensarc vs. Rheostat." It tells you how you can get a much better light at 1/3 your present cost.

Fort Wayne Electric Works, Fort Wayne, Ind. of General Electric Company—1402 Broadway

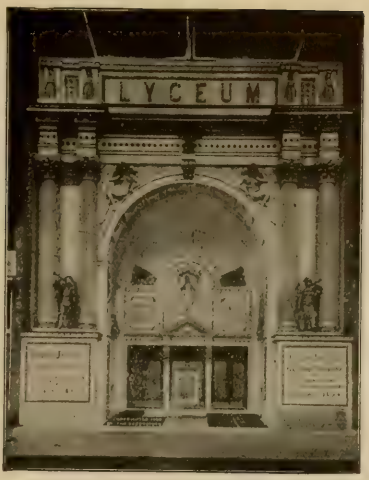
After he bought a Compensarc



Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere
Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs.

THE DECORATORS SUPPLY CO.
Archer Ave. and Lee St. CHICAGO, ILL.

Good Light Means Big Crowds

The Sandow Moving Picture Electric Light Plant gives perfect light any time you want it, at 1-10 the cost of public service. Light enough to ship as baggage. Carry your own electric lights. Catalog 201 tells you how and how much. Want it?

Detroit Motor Car Supply Company, Detroit, Michigan

MACHINES—STEREOPTICONS—COMPENSARCS—LENSES—SCREENS—SPOTLIGHTS—MOTORS—FANS—GAS OUTFITS—SCENERY—TICKET MACHINES—LOBBY DISPLAY.

LET US HAND YOU SOMETHING A HINT FROM YOU WILL BRING OUR A-Z LIST

IT CONTAINS SOMETHING YOU WANT—EVERYTHING THAT ANYBODY WANTS—IN THE LINE OF PROJECTION GOODS AND EXHIBITORS' SUPPLIES.

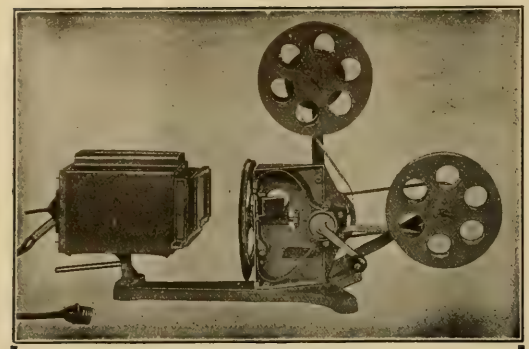
When you buy "FULTON" Goods, you get [illegible] PLUS "FULTON" SERVICE.

"FULTON" SERVICE means [illegible] matters [illegible] and [illegible]. It means [illegible] and [illegible] process.

"FULTON" SERVICE is [illegible] SUCCESS for the [illegible] of FULTON.

Write us, you [illegible] your business, even [illegible] SERVICE WAY.

E. E. FULTON CO., 152 W. Lake St., Chicago



THE PHANTOSCOPE

Have you noticed that our advertisement appears here week after week?

Do you think we are doing it because we have more money than brains?

Isn't it a more logical conclusion to suppose that we are selling Phantoscopes and that each sale makes a friend?

This friend boasts of the satisfaction he gets out of the machine, and this sells others.

In this way the Phantoscope has made its splendid reputation, and is adding to its friends weekly.

Will you be one this week? Sure it is, you will not be disappointed, for the Phantoscope is a motion picture projecting machine which accepts conditions just as they are in your office or your home, and projects a brilliant picture for your own and your friends' entertainment or instruction. It is remarkable for its lightness, low cost, and safety.

Catalogue for the asking.

Phantoscope Mfg. Co.
Bond Building, Washington, D. C.

THE BRIGHT
WHITE
LIGHT

(CALCIUM EFFECT)
so Desirable for
Moving Picture Projections
is ONLY produced with

BIO CARBONS

They Are
"The Carbons You Want"

Charles L. Kiewert Co.

NEW YORK 165 Greenwich St. | MILWAUKEE 114 Huron St. | SAN FRANCISCO 143 Second St.

THEATRE RECORD LEDGER
NEW 1914-1915 EDITION NOW READY

I have just received from the publishers my New 1914-1915 Theatre Ledger which is a big improvement over all past editions. The New Theatre Record Ledger contains space for receipts and disbursements for 52 complete weeks. Guaranteed to be what you are looking for or your money refunded. Order from your nearest Film Exchange or Moving Picture Supply Dealer, otherwise send us $2.70, ($2.50 for the Ledger and 20c for Postage) and we will forward one direct by Parcels Post.

THE THEATRE RECORD PUBLISHING CO.
252 Hennepin Avenue
Minneapolis

FOR RENT in Powers Building
37 So. Wabash Avenue
Completely equipped office for FILM EXCHANGE
Handsome furniture—Typewriter—Mimeograph files — Phone and everything required ready for use
Concrete inspection room. Large vault. Best opportunity in Chicago
Room 701-A Phone Central, 1197

ORCHESTRA MUSIC
FOR MOVING PICTURES
The Orpheum Collection of dramatic and descriptive music for Piano and seven orchestra parts. Piano can be used alone. In two series:
No. 1 and No. 2
Piano, 58 cts. each. Both series, $1.15. Violin, 40 cts. each; both 75 cts. Cello-&-Bass same price as violin. Flute 35 cts. each Both series, 65 cts. Clarinet, Cornet and Trombone same price as Flute. Drums, 30 cts. each. Both series, 55 cts.
Send for free sample page and further discounts. 3d series ready for piano only; 58 cts.
CLARENCE E. SINN
1581 SEDGWICK ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

WE BUY, SELL and RENT
moving picture machines, films and chairs.
THEATRE BROKERAGE EXCHANGE
440 S. Dearborn Chicago, Ill

FILM MAKING OUTFITS
for Professional Film Work, for the Manufacturer, Traveler, Explorer, Scientist and Private. The well-known fool-proof Junior Camera, 200 feet capacity; Tripods, Tilts, Printers, Developing Outfits, Projectors, Lenses, Polishers, Measurers, Menders, Winders. Special Film Work. Quick, reliable repair.
Establ. 20 years. Largest Inst. in U. S.
EBERHARD SCHNEIDER
219 Second Ave. New York

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES
ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. NO. 31
The A. H. Andrews Co.
115-117 So. Wabash Ave.
Chicago, Ill.
Branches in all Leading Cities
New York Office
1472 Broadway, Long Acre Bldg.
Seattle Office
508-10-12 First Ave., So.
San Francisco Office, 782 Mission St.

Largest Stock and Quick Deliveries on Motion Picture Seating

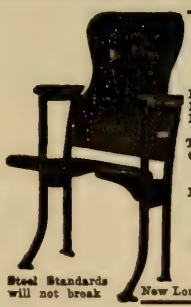
Pleasing Designs. Reasonable Prices
Write for Illustrated Books
V-2 Veneer Seating. V-3, Upholstered Seating.
Send floor sketch for Free Seating Plan
American Seating Company
"Public Seating Exclusively"
14 E. Jackson Blvd., Chicago 18 E. 32nd St., New York
BOSTON PHILADELPHIA PITTSBURGH

The "Standardized" Theatre Chairs
Do you want a life-saving chair?
Do you want a space-saving chair?
Do you want a sanitary chair?
Do you want a scientifically built, double standard chair?
We operate the largest exclusive theatre chair factory in the world, AND SELL DIRECT TO YOU. WRITE US
THE HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio

GO INTO THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS

MAKE MONEY FAST! BE YOUR OWN BOSS!
$30 TO $50 PER NIGHT CLEAR
No Experience Needed
We furnish you with machine, film, curtain and complete outfit ready to go to work with ON OUR EASY PAYMENT PLAN.
Write Now for Our Large FREE Catalogue.
NATIONAL MOVING PICTURE CO.
Dept. M. P., Ellsworth Building, Chicago

DEAGAN MUSICAL ELECTRIC BELLS
Played from Piano Keyboard
WRITE FOR CATALOG "F"
J. C. DEAGAN
DEAGAN BUILDING
1776 Berteau Ave.
Chicago, Ill.



Steel Standards will not break

STEEL OR IRON STANDARDS
AGENCIES:
H. S. Anley, 1476 B'way, Long Acre Bldg. New York City.
Telephone 5619 Bryant.
California Seating Co., 720 South Hill Street, Los Angeles, Cal.
H. A. Johnson Seating Co., 1214½ 3d Ave., Seattle, Wash.
The Wisconsin Seating Company
New London, Wisconsin, U.S.A.

Non-Breakable and Sanitary STEEL and CAST IRON
HIGH Quality
LOW Price
Opera Chairs
Immediate shipment on many styles; Second Hand Chairs; out-of-door seating. Send measurements for FREE SEATING PLAN. Mention this paper.

STEEL FURNITURE CO.
Grand Rapids, Mich.; New York, 150 Fifth Ave.; Pittsburgh, 318 Bissell Blk.; Boston, 90 Pearl St.

The Majestic Motion Picture Co.

Will Release Sunday, June 14

The Rebellion of Kitty Belle

In Two Parts

A free adaptation of one of the most popular short stories of the famous author, GEORGE PATTULLO, published in the Saturday Evening Post and delightfully interpreted by two Majestic favorites.

LILLIAN GISH AND ROBERT HARRON

Also for release Tuesday, June 16th, the one-reel exciting melodrama, THEIR FIRST ACQUAINTANCE, in which are featured Robert Harron and

DORTHY GISH

LILLIAN GISH

Who appears exclusively in Majestic releases and "Griffith" specials, and who has been pronounced the most popular actress before the American public.

TWO FAMOUS SISTERS SEEN ONLY IN MAJESTICS

DOROTHY GISH

The youngest comedienne of distinction in America, whose charming personality is to be found only in Majestic releases and "Griffith" specials.

The Majestic Guide for Exhibitors

(In which we endeavor to tell the truth about all Majestic releases)

THE INTRUDER, two reels, for release Sunday, June 7th, a fairly good and rather unusual offering, being a free adaptation from a copyrighted short story in "Smart Set."

HER BIRTHDAY PRESENT, one reel, for release Tuesday, June 9th; acceptable but not exceptional, introducing, however, Mae Marsh and Robert Harron.

THE REBELLION OF KITTY BELLE, two reels, for release Sunday, June 14th. A picture that you can feature and that makes good—presenting favorite players in a pleasing story by a famous author.

THEIR FIRST ACQUAINTANCE, one reel, for release Tuesday, June 16th. A thrilling, interesting and well presented melodrama with DOROTHY GISH and ROBERT HARRON.

D. W. GRIFFITH SUPERVISES THE PRO DUCTION OF ALL MAJESTIC RELEASES

Majestic Motion Picture Co.

Studio:
4500 Sunset Blvd., Los Angeles, Cal.

Business Offices:
29 Union Sq., West, New York

ALWAYS A WINNER!
THE HEARST-SELIG
NEWS PICTORIAL
RELEASED
MONDAYS AND THURSDAYS

CHEER UP!
GROW YOUNG
GET THE LAUGHS!
SELIG'S
FUNNY FRIDAYS HAVE DELIGHTFUL
COMEDY CHARM

"The Adventures of Kathlyn." No. 13. "The Court of Death."

"THE ADVENTURES OF KATHLYN"

No. 13—"THE COURT OF DEATH"

The greatest continued story ever told, with vast variety of hairbreadth escapes in savage lands, ends satisfactorily with the heroine enthroned in the heart of the hero, instead of occupying hateful eminence in the mythical land of Allaha.

IN TWO REELS—RELEASED JUNE 15th

June 16th—"HOW LONE WOLF DIED"

How a red-handed renegade, who destroys for the mere love of savagery, meets his own end in the desert—is a remarkably picturesque tale of Indian vengeance.

June 17th—"CASTLES IN THE AIR"

A poor girl who dreams herself into wealth is rudely awakened into humiliation. Happily, fortune comes her way and blesses her after all.

June 19th—"PETER'S RELATIONS"

Mother-in-law makes an uninvited appearance at Peter's country house, and proceeds to regulate things, investing the place with a host of comic troubles.

On the same reel with

"CHICKEN!"

An amusing episode, due to a mis-used bit of slang.

June 20th—"THE GIRL AT HIS SIDE"

A young man is accused of compassing the loss of a valuable string of pearls belonging to his fiancee. He works out of it in a way that wins the respect of the community and the hand of the girl—his secretary.

THE HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL

still in front with the war news—always on hand with events of great interest taking place all over the wide world.

N. B.—SELIG'S posters have combined charm of attractive drawing and beautiful color. Get the line! One-sheets on all releases; threes and sixes on multiple reels.

THE SELIG POLYSCOPE COMPANY
CHICAGO

NPCo

Nicholas Power Co.
OF NEW YORK

OFFICE OF
THE PRESIDENT

June 1, 1914

Mr. M. P. Exhibitor,
America and Elsewhere.

Dear Friend:

I sincerely hope to have the pleasure of greeting you at our exhibit during the week of the Second International Exposition of the Motion Picture Art, to be held at Grand Central Palace, New York City, June eighth to thirteenth inclusive.

Very truly yours,

Nicholas Power

NP-R.

Vol. 20, No. 12 June 20, 1914 Price 10 Cents

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

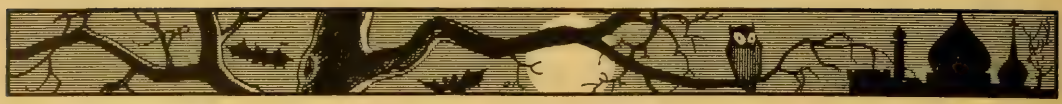
EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Scene from "Molly the Drummer Boy" (Edison)

Post Office Box 226
Madison Square Station

NEW YORK

17 Madison Avenue
Telephone Madison Square 3510



The Most Stupendous Motion Picture Production Ever Presented Starts Everywhere

NEXT MONDAY
JUNE 22nd

Next Monday, June 22nd, will mark the release of the first 2-reel episode of the Million Dollar Mystery, the largest and most costly serial motion picture production ever brought out. The entire play will take 46 reels nine miles of film involving love, romance and adventure. 2-reel episodes will be released once each week. And $10,000.00 in cash will be paid for the best solution of the mystery.

THE MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY

Story by Harold MacGrath—Scenario by Lloyd Lonergan

Thanhouser's Million Dollar Motion Picture Production

In this wonderful serial production you will find many startling scenes enacted at great cost. The fall of a balloon in mid-ocean - motion pictures of the ocean bottom's mysterious life and vegetation—a death-dealing railroad wreck—these are a few of the "thrillers."

Don't forget that this startling story by Harold MacGrath will appear in the Chicago Tribune, Boston Globe, Cincinnati Enquirer, New York Globe, Buffalo Courier, and 200 other leading newspapers starting June 28th. Watch the newspapers—and watch the crowds at the theatres showing the Million Dollar Mystery. Don't wait! Book now! The Million Dollar Mystery is an independent release and may be obtained regardless of the regular program being used.

SYNDICATE FILM CORPORATION

71 W. 23rd St., New York 166 W. Washington Street, Chicago

or Syndicate Film Corporation representative at any Mutual Exchange in the United States and Canada.

THANHOUSER FILM CORPORATION

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y.

Head European Office: Thanhouser Films, Ltd., London, W. C., England

Thanhouser Releases will continue to be Features of the Mutual Program.

The Thanhouser Three-A-Week

Tuesday, June 16, "Remorse" (2 reels) A powerful drama very capably enacted by J. S. Murray, Mrs. McCoy, Morris Foster, Ethel Jewett, Edward N. Hoyt, Boyd Marshall, Jack Sullivan, Joe Baker and Harry Blakemore.

Friday, June 19, "The Man Without Fear," a drama of business life with Arthur Bauer, Mignon Anderson, Irving Cummings, George Harris, Eugene Redding, N. S. Woods, Joe Flamont and Lydia Mead.

Saturday, June 21st, "The Outlaw's Nemesis," a startling western drama, featuring J. S. Murray, Mayre Hall, George Harris and Boyd Marshall.

Essanay

Superlative and Aristocratic Features

Essanay's DRAMATIC-MASTERPIECE

In Two Acts

Trinkets of Tragedy

Featuring Francis X. Bushman

RELEASED TUESDAY, JUNE 30th

"THE DARING YOUNG PERSON"

ADAPTED FROM THE MUNSEY MAGAZINES

An unique comedy-drama concerning a young girl who determined to discover a REAL man.

RELEASED WEDNESDAY, JULY 1st

THE FABLE OF "THE GOOD FAIRY"

BY GEORGE ADE

A rip-roaring comedy of the unusual type that is decidedly humorous.

RELEASED THURSDAY, JULY 2nd

"SOPHIE GETS STUNG"

The third and last chapter concerning "The Wooing of Sophie."

RELEASED FRIDAY, JULY 3rd

"TRINKETS OF TRAGEDY"

(IN TWO ACTS)

A thrilling detective drama filled with suspense and mystery.

RELEASED SATURDAY, JULY 4th

"BRONCHO BILLY'S PUNISHMENT"

A dramatic moral lesson featuring G. M. ANDERSON, the world's most popular photo-player.

Ruth Stonehouse

E. H. Calvert

DON'T PLAY WITH

(By Carl Laemmle, President,

Your theatre cost you real money. You can't afford to make a plaything of it. You can't afford to use it as a testing place for unknown films. You can't afford to take chances, and you don't need to. There's a program on the market that fills your every need. It's the most scientifically varied and balanced program in the world. It contains everything your patrons demand, and it anticipates their wants! Use the brains God gave you and book the Universal program before your competitor ties it up!

VICTOR

"THE SILENT WITNESS" (Two Reels).
Released, Monday, June 22nd.

A boy and a girl love each other, a villain seeking to come between them, and a camera; these are the principal actors in this thoroughly human and thrilling drama of the West, with J. W. Kerrigan in the leading role.

JOKER

"WILLIE WALRUS, DETECTIVE" (One Reel).
Released, Wednesday, June 24th.

Willie is town Constable and has his own special formulas, special traps and special weapons for "detectin" criminals. Willie hands you a laugh every time he makes a move.

"LOVE AND ELECTRICITY" (One Reel).
Released, Saturday, June 27th.

A thousand feet of roaring farce in which sparks of merriment fly until electricity conquers the obdurate parent,—result, wedding bells.

POWERS

"THE MYSTERY OF WICKHAM HALL" (Three Reels).
Released, Friday, June 26th.

A strange story of heredity and the resurrecting of family skeletons in which family history repeats itself. A beautiful story, well interpreted, with plenty of punch to every scene.

IMP

"PAPA'S DARLING" (One Reel).
Released, Monday, June 22nd.

Ethel Grandin and William Shay in a merry little comedy that will please the young and delight the old.

"THE SKULL" (Two Reels).
Released, Thursday, June 25th.

It starts off with a jump. That's one thing you are going to like about this melodrama. It develops vigorously into a series of clever situations that give a surprise—a thrill—in every scene. Alexander Gaden and Dorothy Phillips in the lead. Frank Crane, director.

ECLAIR

"DEAD MEN'S TALES" (Three Reels).
Released, Wednesday, June 24th.

It is a vigorous story of the West, wherein a miner commits one of the most dastardly crimes that could be written into history —the murdering and robbing of a man who had saved his life and even divided his own fortune with him. But in the end the miner pays, and how his guilt is made clear, makes one of the unique and altogether thrilling incidents of the play.

"PRINCE WILLY" AND "NUTTY AND HIS FATHER" (One Reel).
Released, Sunday, June 28th.

A little fellow 2½ years old plays the leading part in "NUTTY AND HIS FATHER." Both these comedies are filled with amusing incidents and will cause no end of merriment.

101 BISON

"THE OLD COBBLER" (Two Reels).
Released, Saturday, June 27th.

You will not only be absorbed in the working out of the tense story, but you will have pointed out an answer to a question, "what is success," in a way that is both new and startling. It is a play that is different—one that has a meaning to it.

GOLD SEAL

"LUCILLE LOVE, THE GIRL OF MYSTERY" (Series No. 11, Two Reels).
Released, Tuesday, June 23rd.

This is not only the best of the LUCILLE series but it is one of the best pictures that the Universal has turned out in a long while, and that is saying a good deal. If you ever doubted that LUCILLE LOVE would make a hit look this over and congratulate yourself that you are a Universal exhibitor.

1600 Broadway

UNIVERSAL FILM MAN

CARL LAEMMLE,

LARGEST FILM MANUFACTURING

YOUR INVESTMENT!

Universal Film Mfg. Co.)

The Universal has had a wonderful growth, and its pictures have shown a striking improvement during the past twelve months. The Universal has set the pace for the whole world, and intends to keep right on setting it. It has the greatest list of stars in the business, the brainiest set of producers, the most enterprising organization, and by far the greatest equipment for making perfect picture plays. What's the use of being satisfied with anything less than the very best on earth?

STERLING

"THE FLIRT" (One Reel).
Released, Monday, June 22nd.

You will smile first, then snicker and before you know it you will be laughing out loud at the hilariously funny situations.

"THE CRASH" (One Reel).
Released, Thursday, June 25th.

A great big bunch of fun and excitement rolled up into one reel. Without doubt one of the most spectacular comedy productions ever attempted. A real auto tumbling down a mountainside. A motorcycle crashing at the bottom of the cliff and several wonderful explosions are some of the punches in this exceptional comedy.

REX

"THE WOMAN IN BLACK" (One Reel).
Released, Thursday, June 25th.

You never know what is going to happen next. The final climax that has been reserved for you will simply take you off the chair. It's thrilling—absorbing from start to finish.

"LOST BY A HAIR" (One Reel).
Released, Sunday, June 28th.

When the tenor lost his wig, there was confusion, chagrin and embarrassment for him. It's a funny little comedy, interpreting the story of how a tenor became a summer resort favorite, but lost his prestige when he lost his wig.

FRONTIER

"ON THE VERGE" (One Reel).
Released, Sunday, June 28th.

In which a music hall singer brings about a reunion between man and wife. A story with a strong moral and a vivid punch.

NESTOR

"THE DEN OF THIEVES" (One Reel).
Released, Wednesday, June 24th.

A story that will appeal to every mother and every girl. One of those heart throbbing dramas that the women-folks like to see.

"SOPHIE OF THE FILMS" (Series No. 4. One Reel).
Released, Friday, June 26th.

In which Sophie is sent to the Mexican border. General Wienerwurst, a Mexican Commander, thinks the theatrical troop an American invasion. You never laughed so much in your life, as you will when you see how Sophie got mixed up with the Mexicans.

UNIVERSAL IKE

"UNIVERSAL IKE, JR., IN A CASE ON THE DOCTOR" (One Reel).
Released, Tuesday, June 23rd.

Here's a comedy that will cause you to send a hurry call for a doctor for that stitch in your side. It's so funny it almost laughs itself off the screen.

CRYSTAL

"IN WRONG" (One Reel).
Released, Tuesday, June 23rd.

Charlie advertises for a wife. Madeline becomes an applicant. What happened to Charlie will throw you into convulsions of laughter.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, No. 120

Released, Wednesday, June 24th.

There's something of special interest for you in this number. Get a synopsis from the Universal Weekly and then boost the event that was taken in your town.

UFACTURING COMPANY

New York, N. Y.

President

CONCERN IN THE UNIVERSE

WOOF!
IT'S A BEAR!

A SUCCESS

Fresh news, live news, the fame of Pathé's each day in

THE PAT

In the United States alone thirty-seven cameramen with a getting the best of pictures for this remarkable and epoch- India's Coral Strand" are others devoting their energies to newspaper are limited only by the boundaries of the world equalled facilities of Pathé's Weekly, its value and drawing

REMEMBER—IT GOES TO

FROM MANUFACTURER
NO RED TAPE!
AND THE COST? AS

WRITE AT ONCE FOR FULL DETAILS

THE PATHÉ

1 Congress St.,

FROM THE VERY START!

real news, the kind of news that has made
Weekly world-wide — that's what you get

HÉ DAILY NEWS!

keen scent for interesting events are on the job all the time making innovation. "From Greenland's Icy Mountains to the same end. The activities of this great motion picture itself. Backed up by the wonderful organization and unpowers are unqualifiedly assured.

YOU EACH DAY BY MAIL!

TO EXHIBITOR DIRECT!

NO DELAY!

TONISHINGLY LOW!

AS TO THIS SERVICE, ADDRESSING

DAILY NEWS

Jersey City, N. J.

Gaumont

ATTENTION!

SHIPPING DATE
JUNE 13th

Gaumont

KRONSTADT

ADAPTED BY MAX PEMBERTON
From his novel.

Every Kind of Publicity Matter to Push Trade

Gaumont Co

110 W. 40th St., New York City

EXCEPTIONAL POSTERS

"Let's go to the House that shows MUTUAL Movies. We are Sure of a good show There."

This is a phrase that has brought millions of dimes into Moving Picture Theatres.

It is being said by hundreds of people in your own neighborhood today.

Is Yours the house that will get their money?

The Sign of the Wing-ed Clock appears on the following well known brands:

American	Princess	Domino
Reliance	Royal	Beauty
Thanhouser	Keystone	and
Majestic	Broncho	Mutual
Komic	Kay Bee	Weekly

NOTE—The Mexican War Film, made under special contract with General Villa, has been proven an undertaking of such gigantic proportions that it cannot be adequately handled as a part of a general film feature business. We have, therefore, sold the complete rights in these pictures to the

MEXICAN WAR FILM CORPORATION
Room 1205, 71 West 23rd Street
NEW YORK

to whom all communications regarding State Rights should be addressed.

MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION

Branches in 49 Cities NEW YORK

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

Coming: Mary Pickford in "The Eagle's Mate."

DANIEL FROHMAN Presents

The Popular Photoplay Star

CARLYLE BLACKWELL

In The Famous Nautical Comedy-Drama

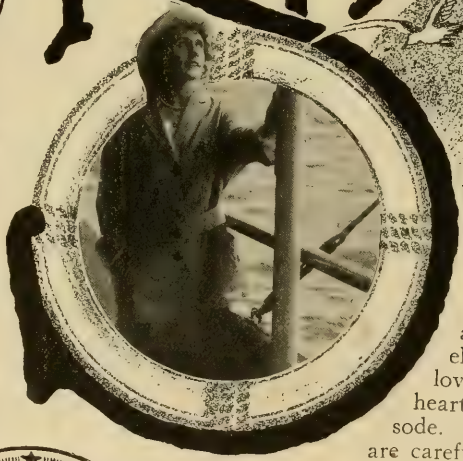
"THE SPITFIRE"

A Melodramatic Farce of Laughs and Thrills.

— By Edward Peple —

The Story of the Theft of a Heart, a Yacht and a Case of Jewels.

In Motion Pictures



"The Spitfire," written by Edward Peple, author of "The Prince Chap" and the current theatrical success, "A Pair of Sixes," entertained thousands for many years. Its humorous situations, together with its absorbing dramatic element, makes the subject certain to please both lovers of light drama and those who prefer the big heart-throb of tense, overpowering incident and episode. In the film production the laughs and thrills are carefully balanced. IN FOUR REELS---RELEASED JUNE 20th.

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

FAMOUS PLAYERS

EXECUTIVE OFFICES

213-229 W. 26th STREET

NEW YORK

Coming:
Jane Grey
in "The Little Gray Lady."

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

ORMOND TAKES COMMAND OF "THE SPITFIRE" ON FORGED ORDERS

MORSON GETS A HAND OUT.

SMOOTH SAILING

VALDA BELIEVES MORSON'S STORY UNTRUE.

"YOU WILL STAY HERE UNTIL YOU CONFESS!"

FILM COMPANY

ADOLPH ZUKOR, President

DANIEL FROHMAN, Managing Director EDWIN S. PORTER, Technical Director

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

WORLD'S LARGEST

SAWYER INC.

FILM MART

1600 BROADWAY-NEW YORK

THE MILLION DOLLAR FEATURE

JOHN PHILIP SOUSA AND BAND OF 60

Representing in Brains and Talent the Cream of the Earth.

De Wolf Hopper	David Belasco	Wilton Lackaye	Bruce McRae
Digby Bell	Augustus Thomas	William Farnum	Julian Eltinge
Raymond Hitchcock	Geo. H. Broadhurst	William Elliott	Henry Woodruff
Frank McIntyre	Burton Holmes	Frederick Perry	Walter Hale
Andrew Mack	J. Hartley Manners	Malcolm Williams	Thos. W. Ross
Maclyn Arbuckle	Geo. V. Hobart	Edward Abeles	William J. Kelley
Irvin S. Cobb	George Ade	Brandon Tynan	Frank Reicher
Nat M. Wills	Clay M. Greene	George Nash	Effingham Pinto
Clayton White	Glen McDonough	Edwin Stevens	Morgan Coman
Charles E. Evans	E. W. Presbrey	Joseph Kilgour	Will J. Deming
Frank Lalor	Winchell Smith	George Barnum	William Roselle
John E. Hazzard	John L. Golden	Charles Dow Clark	George Probert
Thos. A. Wise	R. H. Burnside	Frank Croxton	Will Archie
Charles J. Ross	Henry Blossom, Jr.	Neal McCay	Wm. Courtleigh, Jr.
Jos. W. Herbert	Bayard Veiller	Richie Ling	Willard Curtiss
William Sampson	Rupert Hughes	Scott Welsh	E. Ray Goetz
Winsor McKay	Paul Dickey	Glenn Hall	George S. Christie
R. F. Outcault	Max Bendix	Frank Belcher	Stanley Murphy
Hy. Mayer	Silvio Hein	Arthur Aldridge	Robert O'Connor
Ed. Kemble	Irving Berlin	Billee Taylor	Arthur Hurleu
Frank Doane	Harry Williams	John Park	Richard Taber
Hap Ward	John Slavin	John McCloskey	William Conklin
Charles Hopper	Stephen Maley	Denman Maley	Hassard Short

Representing in Salaries a Figure so Collossal as to be Prohibitive.

A FEATURE COMPOSED OF MORE HIGH SALARIED STARS AND CELEBRITIES THAN WERE EVER BEFORE ASSEMBLED IN ANY ONE PICTURE

ALL LAMBS' STAR GAMBOL

IN 3 PARTS

Showing The Lambs at rehearsal, on parade, headed by Sousa's Band, all the humorous and important events while en route, and the Actual Scenes from their Gambol

DEVELOPED AND PRINTED BY LUBIN

TAKEN UNDER PERSONAL DIRECTION OF EDWARD ABELES and BURTON HOLMES

STATE-RIGHT BUYERS You'll have to wire quick. Territory is going fast and is being allotted as applications are received.

EXHIBITORS Wire us immediately, and if your state is not sold we will book you direct.

WORLD'S LARGEST
SAWYER INC.
FILM MART
1600 BROADWAY-NEW YORK

WILLIAM ELLIOTT
PRESENTS

DUSTIN FARNUM

IN "The Lightning Conductor"

The First Big Feature to Carry a Laugh Through Six Great Reels.

Picturized by Walter Hale.

State Right Buyers

There is still choice territory left for responsible people only.

Exhibitors

Write or wire us at once, and if your state has not been sold. we will book you direct.

One of the Greatest Emotional Dramas Ever Written

"NELL GWYNNE"—Four Parts

Presenting Nellie Stuart, Australia's leading Emotional Actress, who was paid the highest cash bonus ever before given to any one person to pose for one picture.

"THE CONVICT HERO"—Three Parts

A thrilling photoplay of the life and adventures of Rufus Dawes, full of gripping, heart-pulsing scenes. Presenting the Whipping Post and the Fighting Parson. The capture of the ship by the mutinous convicts. The drawing of lots by the starving castaways to see who shall be sacrificed for food.

Sir Henry Irving's Greatest Drama
THE BELLS
FOUR PARTS
As Played by This Eminent Actor for Years

The Queen of the Smugglers
FOUR PARTS
A Gripping and Compelling Story Founded on Facts

THE
Bushranger's Bride
THREE PARTS
An Exciting and Sensational Drama of Australia

A Full Line of the Kind of Posters That Get Results

State Right Buyers write or wire for your territory. Responsible people can get right prices and protection.

Exhibitors write or wire, and if your state is not sold we will book you direct.

WORLD'S LARGEST
SAWYER INC.
FILM MART
1600 BROADWAY-NEW YORK

NOW READY!!!

The feature bang-up to the very minute.
A smashing three reel story with Uncle Sam's Boys right in the limelight.

"Saved by the Boys in Blue"

Full of action from the flag fall to the finish! Excitement for everybody Thrills! by the score! Punch after punch! The pièce de resistance for any programme.

NOW READY!!!

"White Doves Sacrifice"

A beautiful drama of western life rich in love, pathos and action. See the grizzly bear pursue the heroine up a tree only to be laid low by the unerring aim of the "White Chief," in itself a hair-raising incident that will capture the most blase audience.

TO BE FOLLOWED SOON BY

"The Mystery of the Handsom Cab" Three Parts
"Never Too Late To Mend" Three Parts

BRING YOUR TROUBLES TO SAWYER

If your picture don't move—SEE SAWYER
If you have an idea—SEE SAWYER
If you need money—SEE SAWYER
If you want quick action—SEE SAWYER

Sawyer Buys! Sawyer Sells! Sawyer Produces! Sawyer Markets!
Sawyer Pompeiian Projection Room the Best in the City

WORLD'S LARGEST
SAWYER INC.
FILM MART
1600 BROADWAY-NEW YORK

You can always find the real thing in the real place. The first real, genuine pictures of the taking of Vera Cruz by Uncle Sam's Sailors and Marines, direct from the front to Sawyer, Inc.

THE BATTLE OF VERA CRUZ

In Two Parts, Now Ready

Taken on the spot during the fiercest fighting, amid a hail of bullets, and showing "our boys" taking the city of Vera Cruz by assault.

SEE
The actual scenes of fighting.
The dead and wounded as they dropped in battle.
Our boys working their machine guns with deadly effect.
Them squirming up the street flat on their faces driving the enemy before them.
Them watching with drawn guns to pick off the deadly "snipers."
SEE
The actual scenes in front of the Terminal Hotel.
The wigwagging from the roof of this same hotel when these brave fellows were dropped, one after the other.
The Naval Academy riddled by forty shots from the Prairie.
The landing of the troops going into action.
The refugees getting protection under the Stars and Stripes.

THE ONLY MOVING PICTURE EVER TAKEN OF AN ACTUAL BATTLE

$10,000 Sawyer, Inc., stands ready to donate $10,000 to any charity if there is a single faked scene in any foot of the picture.

Every inch of this film was taken under the most distressing and hair-raising circumstances. Amid a perfect hail of leaden messengers, Mr. Edwin F. Weigle exposed himself probably more than any other man to what seemed sure death to take this picture. While our sailors and marines could lie on their faces, protected by the friendly gutters and curbstones, Mr. Weigle was forced to expose himself, and he and his faithful camera became a rare mark for the "snipers" who created such havoc during the attack. Three times was Mr. Weigle's camera laid low by the shattering bullets of the Mexicans, and that Mr. Weigle lives to tell the tale is in itself a most remarkable incident.

STATE RIGHT BUYERS If you wait for this picture you are lost. Wire quick — Applications from responsible people will be awarded as received.

EXHIBITORS Write or wire in quick. If your state not sold, will book you direct

POPULAR PLAYS AND PLAYERS (INC.) PRESENT
JACOB P. ADLER
THE EMINENT ROMANTIC ACTOR
IN
MICHAEL STROGOFF
FIVE GREAT PARTS
210 BIG SCENES
MASSES
RUSSIAN AND TARTAR SOLDIERS
HUNDREDS OF HORSES
VIVID BATTLE PICTURE
THE RIVER OF FLAMES
TARTAR ENCAMPMENT
IN PREPARATION
Henry Miller's and Margaret Anglin's recent success
"THE GREAT DIVIDE"
ONE OF THE GREAT SCENES IN THIS MAMMOTH PRODUCTION—PLENTY OF STRIKING PAPER
POPULAR PLAYS AND PLAYERS INC.
HARRY J. COHEN GENERAL MANAGER
MECCA BUILDING
NEW YORK CITY
PHONE-BRYANT 4016
1600 BROADWAY
UNANIMOUS VERDICT AT SHOWING—"GREAT!"
BATTLE BETWEEN THE RUSSIANS AND TARTARS

THE DYNAMIC FILM

The terrific story of the beef packing industry and stockyards, with the personal appearance of the author,

Upton Sinclair

A subject replete with startling situations, vividly depicting the awful scenes which prompted the author's writing of the story which startled the world

THE JUNGLE

in

5 Tremendous Soul-Stirring Acts 5

Featuring the eminent character actor,

George Nash

Former star of "The Gamblers" and "Officer 666,"

And a superior cast of All Star Broadway Favorites, including

Gail Kane

COMING

LEW DOCKSTADTER

In a Big 5-Act Play of Civil War Days,

"DAN"

By Hal Reid

with

Gail Kane and Lois Meredith

THEN

Ethel Barrymore

In a new play by Augustus Thomas.

BOOK OF OUR DISTRIBUTORS

ALL-STAR-FEATURE-CORPORATION

HARRY R. RAVER, PRESIDENT

EXECUTIVE OFFICES
220 W. 42nd ST., NEW YORK

AUGUSTUS THOMAS, DIRECTOR GENERAL OF PRODUCTIONS

EXCLUSIVE AGENTS IN PRINCIPAL CITIES OF THE WORLD

KAY-BEE

KAY-BEE FEATURES

One two-part photoplay a week Friday Release Day

THOS. H. INCE, Director General

DOMINO WINNERS

One two-part photoplay a week Thursday Release Day

THOS. H. INCE, Director General

BRONCHO HEADLINERS

One two-part photoplay a week Wednesday Release Day

THOS. H. INCE, Director General

KEYSTONE COMEDIES

Three Comedies a week
Monday, Wednesday and Saturday Release Days

MACK SENNETT, Director General

KEYSTONE

BRONCHO

8 by 10 Photos of Players mentioned below can be had by sending to the Publicity Dept.

15 cents for one—50 cents for sets of four—$1.00 for sets of eight

MACK SENNETT	THOS. H. INCE
MABEL NORMAND	GRETCHEN LEDERER	MILDRED HARRIS
CHARLES CHAPLIN	MARGARET THOMPSON	SHORTY HAMILTON
ROSCOE ARBUCKLE	TSURU AOKI	CHARLES RAY
HARRY G. KEENAN	ROY LAIDLAW	WALTER BELASCO
BARNEY SHERRY	CLARA WILLIAMS	FRANK BORZAGE
RICHARD STANTON	JAY HUNT	THOS. CHATTERTON
		LEONA HUTTON
		WILLIAM EHFE

A set of 8 by 10 Photos of Keystone Mabel, in four different poses, 50 cents

New York Motion Picture Corp.

LONGACRE BUILDING 42nd ST. & B'WAY NEW YORK

DOMINO

THOS. H. INCE'S WONDERFUL PRODUCTION

The Wrath of the Gods

OR

THE DESTRUCTION OF SAKURA-JIMA

SIX PARTS

SCORED THE BIGGEST HIT EVER RECORDED AT

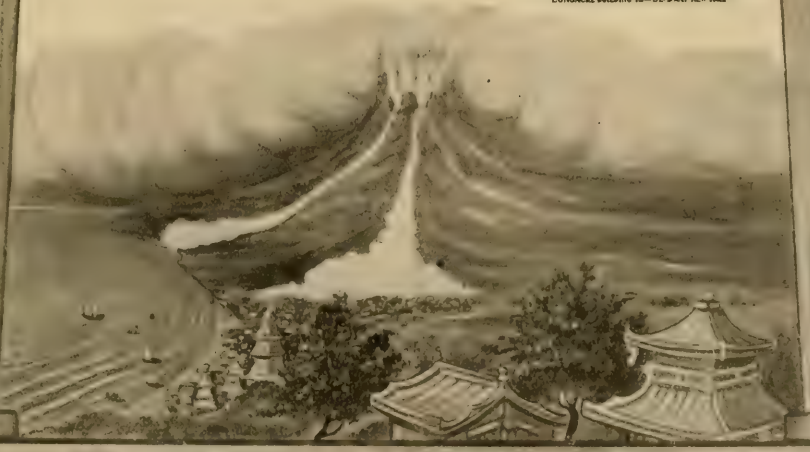
THE STRAND THEATRE, New York

BOX OFFICE RECORDS BROKEN
UNPRECEDENTED APPLAUSE

CONSENSUS OF OPINION, THE GREATEST AND MOST SPECTACULAR PHOTOPLAY EVER PRODUCED

BOOK NOW—MUTUAL AND CONTINENTAL EXCHANGES

New York Motion Picture Corp.
LONGACRE BUILDING 42nd ST. & B'WAY NEW YORK



In Three Parts

Released June 17th

RELEASED THROUGH GENERAL FILM COMPANY

'NEATH THE LION'S PAW

FIVE A WEEK

Released Week Beginning June 15th

Tuesday.	ON THE BEACH Single Reel Comedy
Wednesday.	AT THE MERCY OF THE WAVES Single Reel Drama
Thursday.	HIS DREAM FULFILLED EVERYBODY'S DOING IT Split Reel Comedy
Thursday.	THE UNKNOWN HAND Two Reel Drama
Saturday.	PILLS AND PILLS Two Reel Comedy

WATCH FOR AMERICAN COMEDIES

MELIES G BRAND

JESSE L. LASKY

ANNOUNCES

WINCHELL SMITH'S GRIPPING HEART STORY

THE ONLY SON

IN FIVE PARTS 200 SCENES SELECT CAST

WITH THE ORIGINAL STAR

THOS. W. ROSS

IN THE ROLE HE CREATED

RELEASED JUNE 15

IN PREPARATION

MAX FIGMAN and LOLITA ROBERTSON

IN THE COMEDY CLASSIC

"THE MAN ON THE BOX"

A Distributor in Every State

JESSE L. LASKY FEATURE PLAY COMPANY

LONG ACRE THEATRE W. 48TH STREET

JESSE L. LASKY, PRESIDENT — N. Y. C. — SAMUEL GOLDFISH, TREAS. & GEN'L MANAGER

CECIL B DEMILLE, DIRECTOR GENERAL

The first OZ FILM (now making) will be
THE PATCHWORK GIRL OF OZ
Produced under the personal supervision of the author, L. FRANK BAUM.
With Marvelous Scenic Effects and Illusions and a Wonderful Cast.
5 REELS—A DISTINCT INNOVATION
Original Musical Score by Louis F. Gottschalk
The Oz Film Manufacturing Co.
Santa Monica Boulevard from Gower to Lodi Streets
Los Angeles, California

ANNOUNCEMENT

The Eclipse Film Company, of Paris, and the Charles Urban Trading Company, Ltd., of London, beg to announce to the moving picture trade the opening of an office in New York City, where the rights for their productions for the United States and Canada will be handled exclusively. As two of the oldest manufacturers in Europe, to mention the quality of their productions is unnecessary.

INAUGURAL RELEASES

THE BIRD OF PREY

A DRAMA IN TWO PARTS

As the result of a robbery, Joe Harvey and his sweetheart are lured aboard a tug and made prisoners. The pursuit and fire by the police is stopped by the villain who ties the girl to the stern of the boat. The hero brings about the capture in a thrilling manner by entangling rope in the propeller.

SPLIT REEL COMEDIES

SAMMY AND THE SLIT SKIRT

As a member of the watch committee, Sammy surveys the styles and receives a rough reception when he endeavors to ascertain the length of numerous slits in ultra-fashionable gowns.

PETER'S EVIL SPIRIT

Peter's contemptuous treatment of a tramp causes the latter to exert his magical power and the antics to which Peter is subjected are laughable.

ATTRACTIVE PUBLICITY MATTER WITH ALL RELEASES

ECLIPSE-URBAN FILM COMPANY

A. R. FERRAND, Representative

110-112 West 40th Street New York City

State Rights for Sale on

MEXICAN WAR Pictures

Made Under

Special Contract with Gen. Villa

WE have purchased from the Mutual Film Corporation the rights for the entire United States on the amazing series of war pictures photographed under fire in Mexico, and now have these for sale on a states right basis.

This wonderful feature consists of seven thrilling reels, including not only hundreds of scenes taken during the battles of Torreon, Chihuahua and other famous Mexican fights, but extra scenes showing the tragic early life of Gen. Villa.

This material has never been shown except at the LYRIC THEATRE in NEW YORK, where it drew enthusiastically crowded houses.

Prints are ready for immediate delivery.
There will be enormous profits made in State Rights.
We are now ready to consider propositions.

MEXICAN WAR FILM CORPORATION

Room 1205 71 West 23rd Street New York

LEADING PLAYERS FILM CORPORATION
Present
"The Gap of Death"
A Wonderful Picture Showing the Course that Fate Mapped out for a Soldier devoted to a Dancer. The thrilling leap of The Gap of Death on a Motorcycle. The scheming enemy who meets his Own Death when the scaffold gives way.
POWERFUL ACTING REALISTIC SCENES
PAPER THAT WILL BRING THE CROWDS IN Wonderful Lithographs.
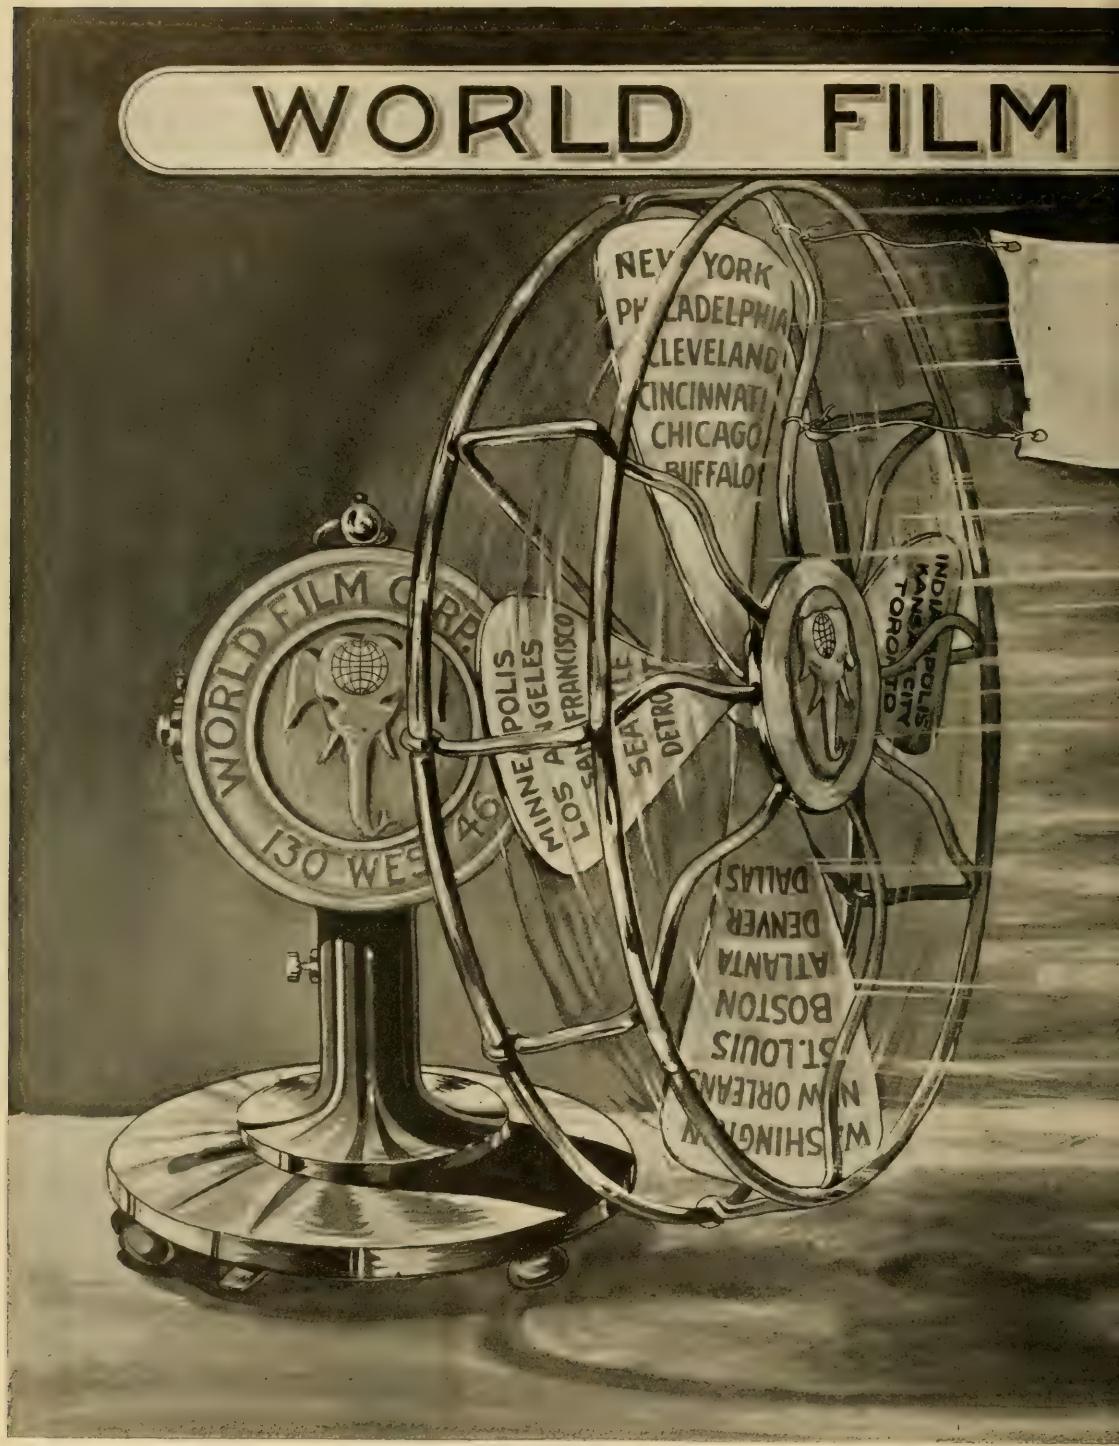
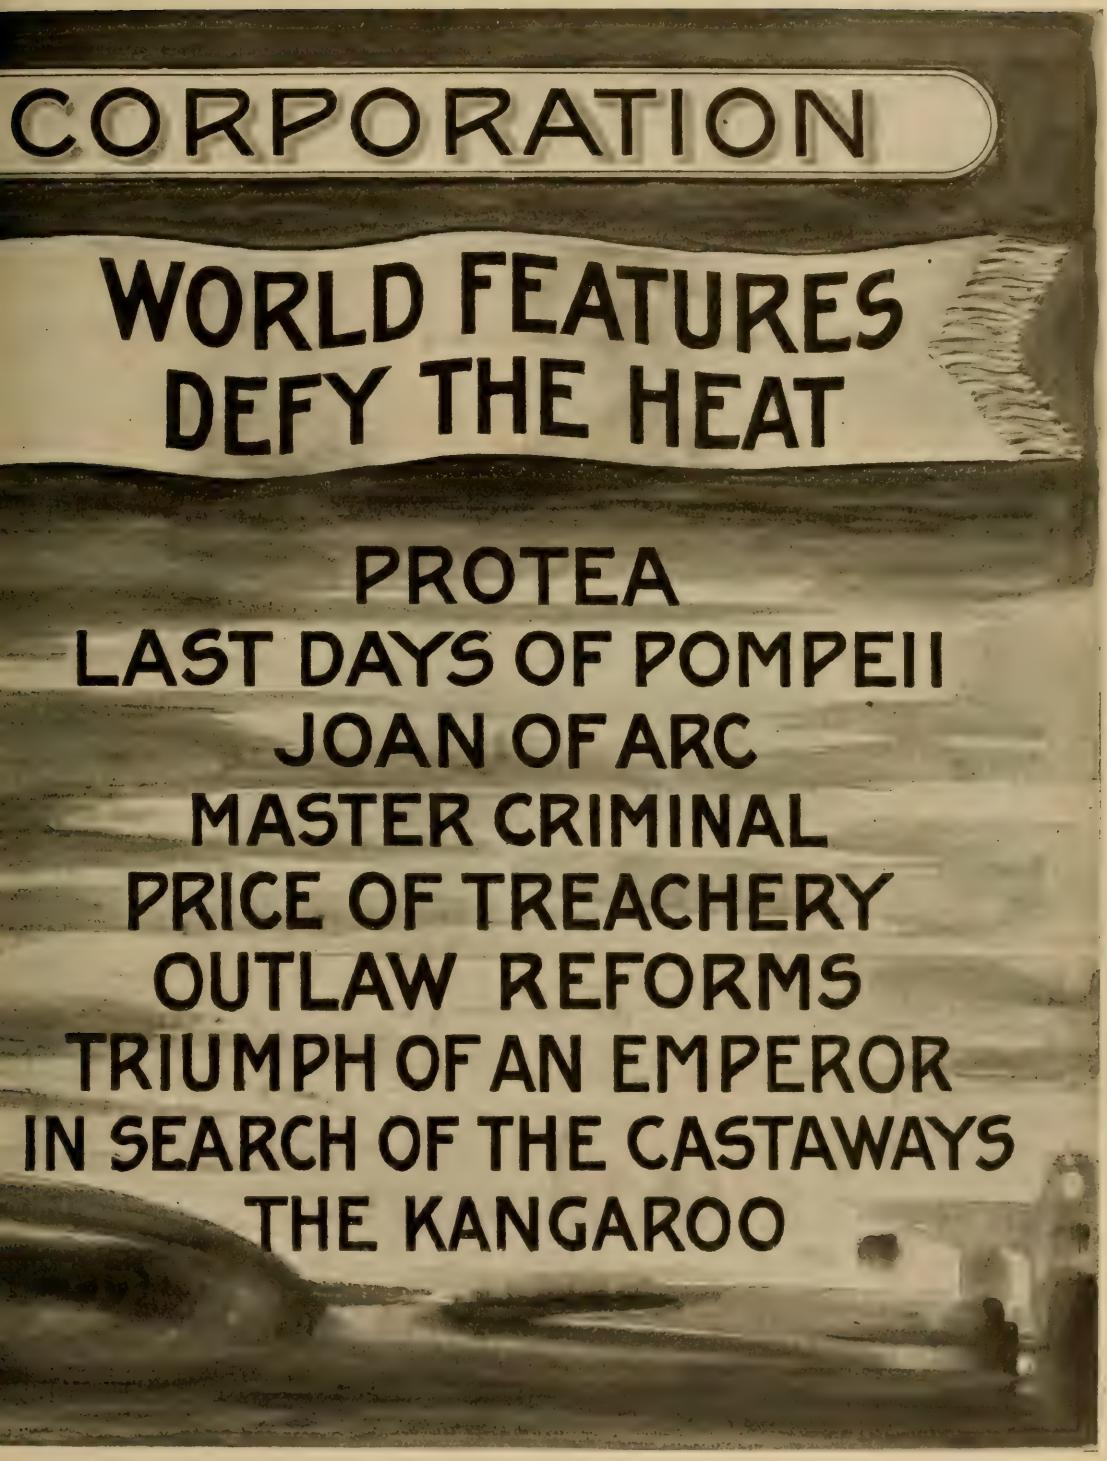
"Horrors of War"
Adapted From The Apprentice
A Famous Historical Novel by Gustave Geoffrey.
Featuring Beautiful Renee Sylvaire of the Renaissance Theatre
A Pathetic Portrayal of The Frightful Fruits of War. Strong Scenes and Heart-Rending Climaxes.
A Story Woven Around The Siege of Paris in 1870.
FOR STATE RIGHTS ADDRESS 126-w 46th St. NEW YORK



WORLD FILM
NEW YORK
PHILADELPHIA
CLEVELAND
CINCINNATI
CHICAGO
BUFFALO
WORLD FILM CORP.
130 WEST 46
MINNEAPOLIS
LOS ANGELES
SAN FRANCISCO
SEATTLE
DETROIT
INDIANAPOLIS
KANSAS CITY
TORONTO
DALLAS
DENVER
ATLANTA
BOSTON
ST. LOUIS
NEW ORLEANS
WASHINGTON



CORPORATION
WORLD FEATURES
DEFY THE HEAT
PROTEA
LAST DAYS OF POMPEII
JOAN OF ARC
MASTER CRIMINAL
PRICE OF TREACHERY
OUTLAW REFORMS
TRIUMPH OF AN EMPEROR
IN SEARCH OF THE CASTAWAYS
THE KANGAROO

The Ultimate Achievement in Heart-Throb Photo Drama

Mutual Movies Make Time Fly

D. W. Griffith's

MASTERPIECE

Mutual Movies Make Time Fly

Home Sweet Home

NOW BEING RELEASED

Company of 25 Stars

H. B. Walthall
Blanche Sweet
Robt. Harron
Mae Marsh
Donald Crisp
Miriam Cooper
Mary Alden
Fay Tincher
Courtenay Foote
Jack Pickford
Teddy Sampson
F. A. Turner
W. E. Lawrence

6 REELS

Company of 25 Stars

Lillian Gish
Dorothy Gish
Ralph Lewis
Irene Hunt
Owen Moore
Edward Dillon
John Dillon
Earl Foxe
Mrs. Crowell
Spottiswoode Aitken
George Seigmann
W. H. Long

Mr. Griffith suggests that the running time for the picture should be:—16 M. for the first reel, 14 M. to 15 M. for the second reel and from 13 M. to 14 M. for each of the other reels. The last reel, however, should be run slowly from the beginning of the allegorical part to the end.

Like the music of a Great Opera, "Home, Sweet Home" centers about one theme—The spirit of home and the influence of this Home-Spirit over the lives of men and women.

It aims to do more than make money alone—it aims to uplift and ennoble the entire photodramatic art.

"Home Sweet Home" is the dramatic essence of all that is pure and truly worth while in modern life.

Continental Feature Film Corp.

ALL MUTUAL EXCHANGES 29 Union Square, New York

The Livest Rental List in America

The below list represents the best that Europe offers. Each is carefully selected with an eye to its box office possibilities. Stories unusual in theme, dramatically told, photographed and staged by Europe's greatest technical experts, we believe them to have no rivals in Picturedom!

They are Exclusive—and can be booked on a rental basis that will appeal to you!

"THE CLUB OF THE BLACK MASK"	THREE REELS	(Celio)
"A MAZE OF MYSTERY"	FOUR REELS	(Cines)
"THE BLACK CIRCLE"	THREE REELS	(Celio)
"THE BLACK THREAD"	THREE REELS	(Cines)
"THE LAND OF PROMISE"	THREE REELS	(Celio)
"LIFE'S BITTER DREGS"	FOUR REELS	(Celio)
"THE BANKER'S WIFE"	THREE REELS	(Cines)
"AN AFRICAN DIAMOND CONSPIRACY"	FOUR REELS	(Cines)

YOU CAN ALSO BOOK

THOSE MAGNIFICENT GEORGE KLEINE ATTRACTIONS WHOSE RECORDS ARE THE REGISTER OF THE GREATEST SUCCESSES IN THE HISTORY OF MOTION PHOTOGRAPHY.

"QUO VADIS?"	EIGHT PARTS	(Cines)
"THE LAST DAYS OF POMPEII"	SIX PARTS	(Photo Drama Co.)
"ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA"	EIGHT PARTS	(Cines)
"BETWEEN SAVAGE AND TIGER"	SIX PARTS	(Cines)
"FOR NAPOLEON AND FRANCE"	SIX PARTS	(Cines)

ANY OR ALL OF THE ABOVE ATTRACTIONS MAY BE BOOKED THROUGH THE FOLLOWING BRANCH OFFICES. GET IN TOUCH WITH THEM!

ATLANTA, GA.
43 Moore Bldg.,
10 Auburn Ave.

BOSTON, MASS.
521 Colonial Bldg.

BUFFALO, N. Y.
c/o Majestic Theatre

DALLAS, TEXAS
238 Saner Bldg.,
1312½ Commerce St.

DENVER, COLO.
405 Railroad Bldg.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.
210 Temple Court Bldg.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
407 Monadnock Bldg.

PITTSBURGH, PA.
509 Lyceum Theatre Bldg.

SEATTLE, WASH.
213 Orpheum Theatre Bldg.
3rd Ave. & Madison St.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.
4821 Vermont Ave.

TORONTO, ONT., CAN.
Telephone Bldg., 76 Adelaide St.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
226 W. 42nd Street

KLEINE-CINES

"A MIDNIGHT GUEST"

(In Two Parts)
(Copyright, 1914, by George Kleine)

For Release Tuesday, June 23rd, 1914

A tale of Paris high life—Of fashionable drawing rooms and Apache Dens—A thrilling, powerful story of mother-love.

RELEASED THROUGH THE GENERAL FILM COMPANY.
1, 3 and 6 sheets with this subject.

GEORGE KLEINE

166 N. State St., Chicago, Ill. 226 West 42nd St., New York, N. Y.

Kalem Masterpiece Films

THE BOER WAR

An Authentic Five-Part Story of the Struggle between Britain and Boer

Said W. Stephen Bush, the World's reviewer, "It seems difficult to believe that this is not war but only the image of war. * * * As a military spectacle, surely this feature has never been equalled."

Two 1-Sheets, two 3-Sheets, two 8-Sheets and one 24-Sheet for this Feature.

WOLFE, or THE CONQUEST OF QUEBEC

Kalem's Superb Five-Part Historical Drama. Produced in Authentic Locations in Canada

Every scene of this spectacular drama was photographed in Canada. The battles at Montmorenci Falls and on the Plains of Abraham, two of the wonderful incidents.

Two 1-Sheets, two 3-Sheets, two 8-Sheets and one 24-Sheet for this Production.

A Celebrated Case

A Four-Part Adaptation of the famous old drama. Alice Joyce, Guy Coombs, Marguerite Courtot and Alice Hollister in strong roles. 1, 3 and 6-Sheet Posters.

Francis Marion, "The Swamp Fox"

A Three-Part Story of the War of '76, showing Marion's activities against the British. 1, 3 and 6-Sheet Posters.

The Death Sign at High Noon

Marin Sais, Jane Wolfe, W. H. West and Paul Hurst in a Three-Part Drama showing one of the most exciting Indian fights ever filmed. 1, 3 and 6-Sheet Posters.

The Other Half of the Note

Featuring Irene Boyle in a Three-Part Story of a Secret Service man's efforts to capture a band of smugglers. 1, 3 and 6-Sheet Posters.

Released through General Film Masterpiece Service

EDISON

SIXTH "MAN WHO DISAPPEARED" STORY

THE GAP

FEATURING MARC MacDERMOTT

Perriton discovers that Carter, the man who has tried to have him discharged, is going to get a big contract by bribery. If Perriton can get Earle, whom Carter has discharged, they can fight Carter and perhaps get the contract. But Earle starts West on the 12.45 before Perriton can catch him. How can he stop him?

RELEASED, TUESDAY, JUNE 16th.

COMING TWO REEL FEATURES

THE HAND OF HORROR
Drama. Friday, June 19th.

THE MAN IN THE STREET
An adaptation from the novel by Mary Imlay Taylor. Drama. Friday, June 26th.

COMING SINGLE REELS

The Adventure of the Missing Legacy
Sixth story of "Octavius—Amateur Detective."
Comedy. Monday, June 15th.

A Modern Samson On the Steps
Comedies. Wednesday, June 17th.

In the Days of Slavery
Drama. Saturday, June 20th.

The Basket Habit
Comedy. Monday, June 22nd.

A Foolish Agreement
Drama. Tuesday, June 23rd.

The Mysterious Package on the Ice
Comedy-Scenic. Wednesday, June 24th.

Dolly Plays Detective
Tenth "Dolly of the Dailies" story.
Drama. Saturday, June 27th.

The Revengeful Servant Girl
Seventh "Wood B. Wedd" story.
Comedy. Monday, June 29th.

The Mystery of the Fadeless Tints
Eighth "Cleek" story.
Drama. Tuesday, June 30th.

One sheets. One and three sheets. One, three and six sheet posters by the Morgan Lithograph Co.

TRADE MARK
Thomas A Edison

Thomas A. Edison, Inc.
267 Lakeside Ave., Orange, N. J.
Makers of the Edison Kinetoscope Model "D."

LUBIN

"THE STRUGGLE EVERLASTING"
2 Reel. Wednesday, June 17th

A Comedy Every Tuesday and Saturday

A TWO-REEL FEATURE Every Wednesday and Thursday

A Drama Every Friday

"THE HOUSE OF DARKNESS"
2 Reel. Thursday, June 18th

Four Masterpieces Coming Soon

"THE WOLF"
5 Reels By EUGENE WALTER

"THE HOUSE NEXT DOOR"
5 Reels By J. HARTLEY MANNERS

In Preparation

"THE EAGLE'S NEST"
5 Reels, with EDWIN ARDEN in the cast
Broadway's most popular and successful actor

"THE FORTUNE HUNTER"
By WINCHELL SMITH

Five Releases Each Week

"THE SHELL COMB INDUSTRY"
"GOOD CIDER"—Comedy — Split Reel
Tuesday, June 16th

"THE STRUGGLE EVERLASTING" — 2 Reel Drama
Wednesday, June 17th

"THE HOUSE OF DARKNESS" — 2 Reel Drama
Thursday, June 18th

"THE PARENT STRAIN" — Drama
Friday, June 19th

"GETTING SOLID WITH PA"
"LONG MAY IT WAVE" — Comedy Split Reel
Saturday, June 20th

LUBIN'S BEAUTIFUL POSTERS
By Our Own Staff of Artists—One and Three Sheets with Single and Split Reels. One, Three and Six Sheets with all Multiple Reels.

Lubin Manufacturing Company
Philadelphia, Pa.
Chicago Office - - 154 West Lake Street

VITAGRAPH

"The Crime of Cain"

Drama. Monday, June 15th

In anger, a young man strikes his brother and afterwards is accused of fratricide. Through a conscience stricken woman, he is proven innocent and the guilty man arrested. DOROTHY KELLY and JAMES MORRISON, assisted by a splendid cast.

"A Wayward Daughter"

Drama in Two Parts. Tuesday, June 16th

She ignores the advice and solicitude of her mother. Subsequent experiences bring about her repentance. She is glad to have the protection she had disregarded. NORMA TALMADGE in the title role and VAN DYKE BROOKE.

"The Ladies' War"

Comedy. Wednesday, June 17th

It waxes hot. Through the tactics of a colored maid, under the direction of her superior, the battle is won and the victor receives the shouts of the victorious. CISSY FITZ-GERALD in the lead.

"Only a Sister"

Drama. Thursday, June 18th

She takes a daring ride, rescues her brother from his enemies and makes a man of him. MARGARET GIBSON in the title role.

"The Persistent Mr. Prince"

Comedy. Friday, June 19th

He won't take No for an answer. He goes up in the air with the girl he loves and keeps her there until she says Yes. He's a sticker and a winner. WALLIE VAN and LILLIAN WALKER.

"Father's Flirtation"

VITA-LAUGH Comedy in Two Parts. Saturday, June 20th

Bunny eludes his wife and flirts with another woman. He takes refuge under a bed and barely escapes his wife and daughter. He has an exciting time with many funny episodes. JOHN BUNNY and FLORA FINCH.

SIX A WEEK

"MARIA'S SACRIFICE"
Drama .....MONDAY, JUNE 22nd

"THE PASSING OF DIANA"
Drama in Two Parts.....TUESDAY, JUNE 23rd

"THE BEAR FACTS"
Comedy .....WEDNESDAY, JUNE 24th

"HAPPY-GO-LUCKY"
Comedy-Drama .....THURSDAY, JUNE 25th

"THE OLD MAID'S BABY"
Comedy ....FRIDAY, JUNE 26th

"HIS WIFE AND HIS WORK"
Drama in Two Parts..... SATURDAY, JUNE 27th

VITAGRAPH ONE, THREE AND SIX SHEET POSTERS

BROADWAY STAR FEATURES, SURPASSING ALL PREVIOUS VITAGRAPH ACHIEVEMENTS. DON'T FORGET "MR. BARNES OF NEW YORK" AND "LOVE, LUCK AND GASOLINE." COMING—"CAPTAIN ALVAREZ," RELEASED THROUGH THE GENERAL FILM COMPANY, BY ARRANGEMENT WITH THE BROADWAY STAR FEATURES COMPANY.

THE VITAGRAPH CO. OF AMERICA
East 15th St. and Locust Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Five Releases Each Week

THE FLAW IN THE ALIBI

A Two-Part Detective Story Featuring Helen Holmes

Charged with having robbed his firm, young Randall is thrown into prison. But the office clock reveals the real culprit in a way which will astound beholders.

Released Monday, June 29th. 1, 3 and 6-Sheets which compel attention.

THE WIRE CHIEF'S REWARD

His daring capture of the highwaymen who have robbed the bank messenger, is one of the exciting scenes. Released Tuesday, June 30th. Striking 1 and 3-Sheets.

FLEEING FROM THE FLEES

How they cause a pair of rivals to break up a society dance will bring laugh after laugh. A Marshal Nielan comedy. (On the same reel.)

TROOPING THE COLORS

Some superb views of the impressive maneuvers performed by the Life Guards before the King and Queen of England. Released Friday, July 3rd.

THE FATAL PORTRAIT

A Two-Part Drama featuring Irene Boyle. Filled with jealous rage, the artist slashes the portrait of his sweetheart—and stabs her rival who is concealed behind the portrait.

Released Wednesday, July 1st. Attractive 1, 3 and 6-Sheets.

THE POLITICAL BOSS

The plot to defraud the city, and Tom's rescue of the boss' victim from a blazing building, two of the absorbing incidents.

Released Saturday, July 4th.

The Third Feature of the Alice Joyce Series is "THE WEAKLING," a two-part story of the mountains. Released through General Film's REGULAR SERVICE, Monday, July 6th. See July Kalem Kalendar for details.

KALEM COMPANY, 235-9 West 23rd St., NEW YORK

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
THE FILM INDEX
EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

J. P. Chalmers, Founder.
Published Weekly by the
CHALMERS PUBLISHING COMPANY
17 MADISON AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY.
(Telephone, 3510 Madison Square.)

J. P. Chalmers, Sr.....President
E. J. Chalmers .....Secretary and Treasurer
John Wylie .....Vice-President and General Manager
The office of the company is the address of the officers.
WESTERN OFFICE—Suite 917-919 Schiller Building, 64 West Randolph St., Chicago, Ill. Telephone, Central 5099.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.
United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and Philippine Islands ..... 3.00 per year
Canada ..... 3.50 per year
Foreign Countries (Postpaid)..... 4.00 per year

ADVERTISING RATES.
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING—no display—three cents per word; minimum charge, 50c.
DISPLAY ADVERTISING RATES made known on application.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.
All changes of address should give both old and new addresses in full and clearly written.

NOTE.—Address all correspondence, remittances and subscriptions to MOVING PICTURE WORLD, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square Station, New York, and not to individuals.
(The index for this issue will be found on page 1750)

Entered at the General Post Office, New York City, as Second Class Matter.

Saturday, June 20, 1914.

Facts and Comments

A SUBSCRIBER writes to us from a point in California saying how he has increased his patronage fifty per cent. by increasing his program to forty-five reels a week. As our friend adds that he looks chiefly for variety, he may be doing a fine thing for his own theater. As a general rule, however, increases in the numbers on the program are not to be encouraged, as the public may easily be spoiled. They will respond to a mere increase in quantity, it is true, but these responses never last long, because people get tired even of quantity. The program which is based upon quality is by far the surer winner of the two.

* * *

WE SHOULD LIKE to point out to managers of high-class theaters that one of the greatest motion picture theaters, The Strand in this city, has ever since its opening night emphasized the educational film. There have been weeks when forty per cent. of the program at The Strand has been made up of educational pictures. To be sure, these pictures were entertainingly educational; there was splendor and color works of art changed with masterpieces of nature. There is no doubt whatever that these pictures were received with the utmost favor by the audiences. Last week's program had films of Niagara Falls, scenes from Switzerland, about four hundred feet of the wonders of insect life and splendid photographic portrayals of the illuminated fountains of Versailles. We are content to state the facts and let those interested draw their own conclusions.

* * *

THE MEASURING of the films in fixing prices or in announcing programs has no longer universal vogue. We know of exhibitors who never state the number of feet of their features or single reels, but merely announce the title. The implication is that it is quality which counts, and not quantity. It is a good innovation in many respects; it teaches the audience to judge of films not by their length but by their character. Most of the films are still sold like cloth, so much a foot, but here, too, the tendency is to base a price not upon length but upon quality. Three reels may be, and often are worth a good deal more than four and five reels. We are also learning to discard the use of the word "reel," when the better word "part" will serve as well and really serve the purpose better. All this is the result of the new reign of quality.

* * *

WE CALL ATTENTION to the splendid work done by the People's Institute in promoting proper motion picture entertainments in the public schools of this city. Two shows are given once a week, one in the afternoon and one at night, and the plan has proved self-sustaining from the first. The pupils attending the show have the privilege of entering a competition contest. They may write a composition of two thousands words or less on the subject of the evening. For this work they are allowed a week's time. Their efforts will be judged by capable and well-known educators, and prizes will be awarded to the two best compositions. Looking at some of the programs given at these entertainments, it strikes us that there is an abundance of material especially suitable for children. It only takes some one to make the proper selections. There is enough film on hand to keep the entertainment going for an indefinite period of time.

* * *

BIG REVIEWS of feature films in the daily papers have become common. The conversion of the daily press to the motion picture was predicted in these columns years ago. While it was a consumation devoutly to be wished, the daily press is not intended to do for the moving picture industry what the motion picture journals proper are able to accomplish and are actually accomplishing every day. The peculiar needs of the motion picture industry, multiplying every day, and diversified as well, demand a journalism of their own.

* * *

THERE were features about the late convention at the Grand Central Palace which deserve unreserved commendation. The freedom of discussion under due parliamentary restraint, the open-handed treatment of the press, whose representatives had full access to all proceedings, furnish an example which might well be imitated everywhere. The future alone will show whether anything permanently constructive will come of this convention. Be that as it may, there has been a profitable interchange of ideas, and the topics for discussion were all practical; in fact, such as enter into the daily needs of the exhibitor, who wants to give the best entertainment possible. That, we should think, ought to be the first and last aim of any convention of exhibitors who intend to learn and profit by meeting one another and exchanging ideas and experiences.

"Her Infinite Variety"

By Louis Reeves Harrison

AGE cannot wither, nor custom stale what is presented on the screen, IF it is the "very spice of life." To make the entertainment entertaining, we must offer a program of differing forms and moods, leading us at one time into warm sympathy and interest in humanity, at another to enjoy ourselves at humanity's expense. This requires a different length as well as mood, comedy finding its most natural expression in what is brief and to the point, intense drama, as a section of life to be developed, requiring greater time for preparation, emotional stress, and working up to a high crux through a period of suspense.

One of the best judges of screen portrayals, and a man of long experience in purchasing for the foreign market, whom I will call Mr. Thomson, recently remarked that the word "feature," as applied to large photodramas, was losing its significance. Success was most pronounced in the territory with which he is thoroughly familiar when exhibitions were made of thousand-foot reels as a rule with the big play as the exception. The amplification of one-reel plays, those whose subject matter could be best treated in limited scopes into multiple reel "features," has resulted not only in over-production, but in a deadening monotony of presentation and a falling off in attendance at the exhibitions.

Mr. Thomson confines his remarks to plain facts, and there is no questioning his statement as to existing conditions. The remedy is quite another matter. "Features," or full-sized photodramas, came into existence at a time when the public was growing weary of poor quality in the one-reel photoplays, and in neither case, that of five reels or one reel, was the length wholly responsible for diminished patronage. People like much the same thing in "Pictura" as in Drama and in Literature. Many there are who prefer a short story to a novel, a sketch to a drama, one reel to five, and, in the latter case, there is an advantage to be counted in favor of short stories because one can drop in at any time to watch their visualization.

A feature enthusiast, also one of the best judges of screen portrayals, Mr. Hector Streyckmans, also of long experience in purchasing and marketing photodramas, is of the opinion that the story should be told in its natural limitations, as the question of size is a minor consideration to that of superior quality. He cordially agrees with Mr. Thomson in the main, but lays stress upon the supreme purpose of the screen portrayal, that of giving satisfaction to the audience through interesting plots, fine characterization, impressive themes, and charm of treatment, the latter including interpretation. Mr. Stryckman's affirms that the length of the production has far less to do with its value than qualities of imagination and beauty that make it effective as a form of entertainment.

These two opinions are not in opposition, but in harmony. Mr. Streyckmans believes in telling the story within its natural limitations, and this would reduce to one reel a large number of so-called "features" which are, in reality, attenuated one-reelers stretched to abnormal proportions by well-known devices. He would thus eliminate the "one-swallow-makes-a-summer" drama, altogether, or bring it down to its proper proportions through the improving selective powers of those who purchase or hire. This exactly meets Mr. Thomson's idea that "features" should occupy a distinct place, and not constitute an unvarying and entire program. Both insist upon superior quality in their business transactions, but it has possibly occurred to neither that we are using a faulty name for big screen plays.

Neither a full-sized, three-act stage production nor a novel is called a "feature" because of its proportions, and visualization on the screen. "Pictura" is but another form of telling stories or presenting ideas in storied form. Our meagre motion-picture vocabulary contains no discriminating words for this use, hence, "feature" has drifted away from its original vague significance into a general meaning that clouds the whole subject. The employment of strong five-reel photodramas as drawing cards or as special attractions, served to introduce this larger form, but when it lacks a proportion of matter suited to that form, it will go far towards defeating the object for which it was produced. There has been, and still is, a sore need of producers with less Wallingford tendency and more sense of proportion.

Between the extreme limits of split reels and twelve-reel productions there is rally no end to the variety of proportion in which artistic and scientific elements may commingle. It is a foregone conclusion in some cases that the story cannot be properly told in one or two reels, and the more profound the subject the greater space demanded for its entertaining treatment. Thus the contents determine, more or less, their own structure and treatment, but the larger works make more of a demand upon the author's imaginative powers, and his greater difficulty is to bring his big subject clearly and forcibly within the small scope of a screen presentation. Even when the proportion is obviously related to the context, it is no easy matter to hold interest tense during the enormous number of scenes to be pictured. When the author tries to shape his treatment to trade requirements, he runs into a serious danger, that of failing to hold interest.

There is no need of applying the "three unities" to construction of scenarios—rules fail in their rigid application, but the exhibitors will suffer from half-filled or empty houses if some method is not offered and some basis of judgment formed as to what is required in big-screen production. Plays must appeal to the imagination, to the sympathies, to the intelligence of people, not from Bernard Shaw's point of view, not from the point of view of Brieux, Ibsen, Maeterlinck or other dramatists of originality and character, but from all sincere points of view, especially those which strip the mask from human hypocrisy, convention, and pretense. Plain people half-recognize that we are carefully preserving a lot of old shams and past errors and would delight, not only in their exposure, but in whatever suggests their replacement with something better, something that is, at least, akin to the truth.

I suppose this young art must have its periods, its stages of growth, like any other infant, and this is the imitative stage. One would imagine from its present tendency that it was created for no other purpose than that of reviving a lot of old stage plays that served their time and purpose, or not, some years ago. The public has long been sick to the verge of nausea of these same old plays, with their unalterable traditions of tragic catastrophes and happy endings. The young art must stifle in this old musty atmosphere, where another art has been sleeping, before it enjoys a sweep of fresh invigorating air from the minds of virile originality, but more is the pity.

In this new and beautiful expression of the human mind, we do not want what has ministered to the needs of a lot of theatrical fossils and theatrical hacks, with their old stock themes and their old stock characters. We want sincerity of purpose, and not a lot of makeshifts to bleed moving picture audiences, but stories that are eminently human, that have something of significance to humanity back of them. Mademoiselle Pictura is most charming when shown "in her infinite variety."

The New Exhibitor

By W. Stephen Bush

WHEN YOU SEE the posse of cowboys starting after the horse-thief or cattle-rustler you know in your heart that the chase will be successful. No villain ever escaped in a well-regulated Western melodrama. Why then all this extended detail of the chase through the chaparral and the cactus and the bad lands and the alkali desert? Simply and purely for the purpose of footage. Say the development of the plot takes about 1200 feet; add 800 feet of chase and serve. Such is, or rather was, the old-fashioned motion picture. It is a survival of the single-reel age. Nor is it the only relic of that rapidly expiring era.

The register is long, but let us be satisfied with just a few of the items. The self-exploitation of one or two actors of the single-reel period is filling the judicious with grief. These persons have a blanket mortgage on the press agents of their concerns. The press agents must keep their eyes rolling in a fine frenzy, and by day and by night expatiate either upon the overwhelming personal pulchritude or upon the marvelous heroic qualities of their "idols." This abuse of the noble screen is, we are happy to say, going rapidly out of vogue. There are good reasons for this. The public are getting tired of all these frantic efforts to make supermen and demi-gods out of individuals whom nature very obviously intended to be quite ordinary mortals.

Time was when the exhibitor had to submit to all things of this sort and had to justify himself in the eyes of his audience as best he could. In the new scheme of things there is no room for these ancient abuses. The exhibitor is making himself heard, and it is decidedly for the interest of the industry that he should be heard from. The writer has lately heard of a powerful aggregation of big exhibitors which may come into being before the autumn is upon us. This aggregation will, it is said, be a strictly co-operative one, and their motto will be: "Let us improve the Quality of our Shows." The object will be to secure an unfailing supply of first-class bookings. A high test will be applied to every feature, and nothing but the best will pass muster. I do not know how far this plan of co-operation has progressed; it is still in embryo, but it is not difficult to perceive the immense advantages which would accrue to the industry at large from such intelligent and progressive methods. No favorites are to be played, and the open sesame is to be the open market. A hundred theaters or more are to be homes and ever certain shelters of quality. That such a project will stimulate the right kind of competition among producers is certain. The stagnant waters of mediocrity have bred an unwholesome atmosphere which must be dispelled. A union of quality hunters who have or operate large motion picture theaters is the surest way to put an end to these incubated releases, which come with the regularity and the monotony of eggs. The new exhibitor, we are happy to say, is a factor that must be reckoned with hereafter.

There are exhibitors in this town as well as in other places who give all their waking hours to plans for the improvement of their shows. It is not hard to identify them, because as a rule their theaters are the best known and the most popular places of amusement and likewise the most profitable. I had the pleasure of spending a little time with one of these thoughtful and ambitious men. I knew him to be an ardent believer in pictures of an educational nature, and I asked him why he used so many of these pictures and how they were received by his audience. I remarked to him that most exhibitors appeared in chills whenever educational pictures were mentioned.

"Why," he said, laughingly, "I am not anxious to educate the people who come to my theater. I am anxious to entertain them. Now, nothing is more essential to an entertainment than a little rest for the audience. I do not want to jump from comedy into tragedy, because such a rapid change is both annoying and confusing. Still less do I want to suspend my entertainment absolutely. Therefore I give them a short scenic or scientific film. Come, let me prove it to you. I'll take you upstairs and let you watch the audience."

While we were speaking a great dramatic feature was nearing its close, and I could see how the spectacle on the screen almost drew the people toward the screen, and many of them unconsciously moved forward in their seats. The dramatic film ended and a wave of emotion swept over the audience, finding expression in a thousand smothered sighs. To try and throw this audience from its mood of pity and terror into the broad and rough humor of a comedy would have been a psychological crime.

The exhibitor of five, and even three and perhaps one year ago, might have given little thought to such a situation. The new exhibitor anxious to do his very best for his audience, lets a pretty and brilliant scenic film bridge over the yawning chasm between the tears of sympathy and the tears of laughter.

The exhibition of moving pictures is a science. The greatest measure of sucess will go to the new exhibitor who never tires of his profession and who looks upon it as something more than just a means of earning his daily bread. The best of exhibitors are born and not made. Inspiration and originality are gifts, and cannot be acquired by study. Study, however, will help every exhibitor in improving his show. The proper study of the new exhibitor is the plasticity of his materials and the psychology of his audience. Here we have the alpha and omega of the greatest of all professions in the world of modern amusements.

NEW THEATER FOR MILWAUKEE, WIS.

The Photoplay Company, with office at 403 Grand Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis., which manages the Peerless Theater, 96 Center Street, that city, has taken a long lease on the moving picture theater being erected at Grand Avenue and Fifth Street, Milwaukee, by the Miller Brewery Company. The Photoplay Company is composed of V. J. Schoenecker, Jr., A. E. Maas, O. L. Gallerup and R. C. Graf. Phillip Gross, Jr., will be the manager of the new theater.

The Strand is the name to be given to the new edifice, which will have a seating capacity of 2,000, all to be on the parquet floor. The auditorium proper is reached through an approach 90 feet long and 30 feet wide. It is estimated that the structure will cost, when completed, about $80,000. The house is expected to be open about September 1, 1914.

HERE TO STAY.

Eunice, La., June 2, 1914.

Editor Moving Picture World, New York.

Dear Sir:—Enclosed find P. O. money order amounting to three ($3.00) dollars to renew my subscription to the Moving Picture World. Others come and others go, but the Moving Picture World is here to stay. Yours truly,

A. SENAC.

THIS WORTHY MAGAZINE.

Pauls Valley, Okla., June 2, 1914.

Editor Moving Picture World.

Dear Sir:—Find enclosed check for $3.00. I trust I will get as much benefit out of this worthy magazine in the next year as I have in the past.

Very truly yours,

J. R. HARRISON, Prop. Regal Theater.

Convention and Exposition of the International Association.

Proceedings Opened on Monday, June 6, at the Grand Central Palace, New York City—Addresses by Men Prominent in the Industry Add to the General Interest—Exhibitors Unanimously Against Federal Censorship and Favor Associating With the National Board—Recommend Elimination of Big Features from Regular Programs—Exposition Has Many Interesting Features.

THE convention of the International Motion Picture Association and Second International Exposition of the Moving Picture Art opened in the Grand Central Palace, New York City, on the afternoon of Monday, June 6. The beginning was auspicious. President Wilson from Washington signaled at the minute of 2 o'clock, and immediately afterward Mme. Alma Gluck sang in wonderful voice "The Star Spangled Banner." There were a number of strong speeches made on the convention floor during the first three days, but the delegates did not take up for action any of the pending important questions until Wednesday. On that day, in the morning, it was unanimously decided that the moving picture exhibitors as represented by this association were opposed to the Smith-Hughes bill, now before Congress, that they would have none of the Federal censorship contemplated, and further that not only were they satisfied with the work of the National Board of Censorship, but they recommended that exhibitors cooperate with the board as associate members. In the afternoon, after an illuminating discussion, it was declared to be the sense of the convention that the three groups of manufacturers making daily releases be requested to confine their energies and resources to the single and double reel subjects as opposed to the longer films. The outlook on Wednesday night is that much good for exhibitors will be accomplished through the work of the delegates.

The exposition, considered as a demonstration of the importance of the moving picture industry, may be said to be an unqualified success. People in the trade have responded to the call made upon them, and film manufacturing companies, accessory men, and others are represented in as great numbers as they have been at any similar show in the past.

MONDAY—Opening Session.

By George Blaisdell.

THE annual convention of the International Motion picture Association was opened at 2 o'clock on Monday, June 8, in the Grand Central Palace, New York City. At that hour a large flag was drawn from in front of a portrait of President Wilson. This action, which was signaled by the pressing of a button by the chief executive from his office in the White House, also marked the formal opening of the New York Exposition of the Motion Picture Art. As the face of Mr. Wilson was revealed, the band of the New York Catholic Protectory struck into "The Star Spangled Banner." A platform had been erected at the center of the west side of the hall, and about this was grouped many hundreds of exhibitors and visitors. Samuel Trigger, president of the New York State Association, introduced the Rev. W. Miller Reid, vicar of Inningham, Lincolnshire, England, who brought a message to New America from the old country, from Old England. "Old England is proud of New America," said Mr. Reid; "she is not ashamed of her children. We know how much America has done with and for moving pictures. We wish you, in the name of the Lord, good luck."

While awaiting the appearance of Mme. Alma Gluck, of the Metropolitan Opera House, who had been announced to sing "The Star Spangled Banner," Mr. Trigger introduced Marcus M. Marks, president of the Borough of Manhattan, representing Mayor Mitchell. "On behalf of the city administration, I welcome the moving picture exhibitors of the United States and Canada," said Mr. Marks. "We offer here more than the welcome of our harbor, of our public buildings, of our streets; more than the welcome of our theaters, of our many picture shows, of our hotels. We offer the welcome of the heart of the world, which is here in Manhattan. We have here centered the heart-strings of England, of Ireland, of Russia, of Germany, of France, of Italy, of every civilized country in the world.

"The motion picture has become one of the greatest factors in the educational development of our people. Every business enterprise to be successful must give the people what they want, and that limits, in a way, your activities. You put the pleasant exterior forward; but you can and must put in every picture a wholesome moral lesson. I hope you will so far develop the character of your moving pictures that they will become not only the greatest factor for the education, but also for the moral uplift of the whole community."

There was deep silence as Mme. Gluck sung "The Star Spangled Banner." During the first verse the sweet singer was unaccompanied. It was a singular, an unaccountable thrill she imparted to the old patriotic air. When she had finished a flash-light photograph was taken, with Mme. Gluck in the center of the stage, and grouped about her the national and state officers and the members of the women's committee. As a way through the dense throng was made for the retiring songbird, who, by the way, was that evening sailing for Europe, a hearty ovation was given her.

It was at this point that Mr. Trigger stated that, owing to the intense heat, the proceedings would be adjourned to the convention hall on the floor above. It was a most welcome announcement. About everybody was at the melting point. Assembled upstairs, International President Charles H. Phillips took the gavel.

"One year ago," said Mr. Phillips, "under this roof, the International Motion Picture Association was created. We have been fortunate in gaining a large number of members, and as a proof of that it is only necessary to allude to the large number gathered here this afternoon. It is not my intention to make a speech, as we have a number of gentlemen here whom you will be glad to hear from on subjects that are of interest to exhibitors."

No Reason to Fear Pictures in Schools.

Dr. Albert Shiels, of the Department of Education of New York City, was the next speaker. In his opening remarks he alluded to the organization of the National Board of Censorship under the guidance of the late Charles Sprague Smith. Dr. Shiels said that as a representative of the Department of Education he was a member of the board in its earliest days. "Since those days," said Dr. Shiels, "the motion picture has extended so that it is a very much bigger thing than any city. My work requires me to be a practical man. I want to treat this subject as a business proposition and not as an ideal proposition. I suppose there is not a teacher on his first view of motion pictures but has thought at once of their possible educational value in the process of instruction. So his immediate idea naturally is to put motion pictures into the school, where the educator may have exclusive control of the films and the methods of exhibiting them. There are many illustrations of this attempt to bring the motion picture into the school. The University of Wisconsin has a curculating library of motion pictures for schools. Missouri, Minnesota, Annapolis and Sheffield at Yale have introduced them. There are many high schools throughout the country that use them. In New York eleven elementary schools are now equipped, and the number will be increased. The introduction of smaller projecting machines and non-inflammable films will facilitate this development. But this is all a very trifling contribution. Roll up the entire total, and it is insignificant when compared with the daily output of 15,000 theaters throughout the country. So you see there is little ground for fear on the part of some exhibitors that the pictures in schools will groove into legitimate business. I think those who fear what the schools are going to do are very timid. They are simply going to create a larger clientele for exhibitors.

"The school people do not dream for a moment that they are going to handle any part of the motion picture business. It is the school people's business to know about the youngsters. Sometimes it is possible we may be oversuspicious, even if unjustly so. And we must remember that there is an educational, a psychological side as well. As exhibitors, you cannot reasonably be expected to discover reasons why a constant diet of motion pictures, even if morally unobjectionable, are not good for the intellectual stomachs of children. It would, however, be a wise thing for you to get the educators' point of view and to understand it.

"I am, however, concerned this afternoon not with an analysis of the motion picture and its values, but with a more immediate and practical question—that of closer coöperation between the schools and the theater under existing conditions. Up to a short time ago it was customary to abuse the motion picture theaters. If a boy did anything wrong it was ascribed to the pictures. Newspapers helped this belief. About the time the regular theatrical producers went into the business the newspapers took a different stand. Old beliefs cannot be got rid of quickly. For some time to come, however admirable the people in the motion picture business are, that business will have to suffer from the undeserved reputation that was studiously placed upon it for three or four years, and it is necessary that something be done to overcome that belief."

Mr. Shiels discussed the question of locations of theaters and of building specifications. He advised that builders make their aisles a little wider and that in all matters where possible there be a liberal interpretation of the law so as to avoid any possible future argument. He also suggested the advisability of taking the school authorities into consultation when building, in case the proposed structure be near a school. He told of one exhibitor in New York who lost the better part of $6,500 because he insisted on altering a building for picture purposes against the wishes of the principal of a school, and how he failed to secure a license. "This is not a matter of sentiment," said Mr. Shiels, "but of business. You need the coöperation of schools for business reasons. Of course, you may not agree with me and feel quite independent of schools and school people; yet it does seem to me—and I know something about schools and motion pictures—that it would be wise for you to keep the school people in mind.

"Some of the pictures that are turned out would seem to indicate that the manufacturers believe that the American public must be one vast aggregation of lunatics. It is not that the pictures are immoral, but that they are silly and pointless. I often wonder how some of them find a market. The point I wish to make is that both manufacturers and exhibitors might give the public a better type of picture, and that the exhibitors might try to have the better pictures shown, at least as an experiment. I believe organizations of this kind can do a great deal of good in this sort of work. The experiment has been tried of having motion pictures in schools for special occasions. I don't mean for nothing. This is a business proposition."

Speaking of vaudeville, Dr. Shiels deplored the use of the necessarily cheaper kind of talent as a part of the program in smaller houses. In permitting anything savoring of the suggestive, he said, the exhibitor was antagonizing the school and the church. "In this country nothing has had permanent success," continued the doctor amid the applause of the exhibitors, "that has not had the backing of the best of the community."

Favors Co-operation Between School and Theater.

"Go to the school people of your neighborhood. Tell them what you are trying to do. Invite them to see your show and make suggestions. Arrange at a minimum price an occasional educational exhibit without loss and possibly without profit. Let the school people feel that you are thoroughly in agreement with them—that you believe that a motion picture show ought to be clean, healthful and decent. Let them understand that you propose to have just such a theater. There is in the schools a much greater disposition to coöperate than you have any idea. If your organization will take up this question I think it will be good for your business."

The next speaker was the Rev. Dr. William Carter, general secretary of the International Peace Forum. Mr. Carter caught the exhibitors right at the beginning. He lost no time in getting down to brass tacks. He is a forceful speaker, and an eloquent one. He knew his subject, which was "The Church and the Photoplay." Dr. Carter said in part:

We are here today to celebrate the twentieth birthday of a wonderfully sturdy oak that in these twenty years has most marvellously developed from a very tiny and insignificant acorn. In 1894, when Thomas A. Edison first gave his kinetescope to the world, no one supposed it was going to reach such a marvellous growth and gain such world wide power. For ten years it remained merely a scientific toy of the laboratory, or of the curiosity hunters, but in 1904 there was opened the first "Nickelodeon," or modern moving picture theater, in an abandoned storeroom, that has since developed in these brief ten years to 17,000 moving picture theaters with a daily attendance of over 7,000,000 people!

Tracing the troubles of the industry in its earlier days, Dr. Carter said the general opinion seemed to be that the picture had in it little of good; that, at best, it was a low form of pleasure and at worst a possible menace to the morals of society and a travesty on histrionic and pictorial art. He continued:

How much this has changed in these last few years, however, is most significantly shown by the fact that all the great artists and authors are now not only ready to write but also act for moving pictures, and count it a great honor to be starred as the author or the actor in the moving picture drama. And not only so, but some of the greatest theatrical producers in the world, like Daniel Frohman, David Belasco and many others are now giving almost as much time to the production of moving picture dramas as to those of the so-called legitimate stage, though up to a few years ago they fought so bitterly against the innovation or tried to "laugh it out of the court."

Preachers Recognize Picture's Moral Worth.

With this change of sentiment that has come on the part of those nearest to it and best qualified to judge of the merits of the case has come a change on the part of the church itself and those connected with it. Preachers and Sunday School teachers, Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. secretaries, and moral workers everywhere are beginning to realize the moral worth of moving pictures and the vast possibilities there are for the inculcation of religious truth through them. Many churches are now equipped with moving picture machines. Many Y. M. and Y. W. C. A.'s give moving picture exhibitions regularly in their buildings, while social settlements and moral uplift institutions count the moving picture plant as part of their necessary equipment.

All of this, however, let me say in fairness to those who before condemned the idea, as well as in fairness to you exhibitors, is because you have realized the necessity of a higher type of moving picture subject than was at first shown. The moving picture of today is far higher in moral as well as artistic worth than it was ten years or even five years ago. You have seen the need for this higher ideal and you have insisted upon it from the producer and the film exchange; therefore, the change has come, and the wider clientele has been won from these very classes who stood aloof.

The business, let us remember, is still in its infancy. Much has been done, but there is much yet to be done. If you would win a larger number from the ranks of the educated classes, from the moral and ethical conservators of the people, you must ever have in mind their necessities and seek to satisfy their demands.

That all the bad, both artistic and moral, has not yet been eliminated is shown by the fact that last year the National Board of Censors, of which I have been a member, had to condemn no less than 77,273 feet of films as unfit to be shown, though it had cost $115,909 to produce and had a market value of $463,638, while some that did get past our board was condemned by the censors of other boards in other cities, who thought we must have either gone to sleep while the pictures were being run or been cross-eyed when we looked at them.

Now it is "up to you" exhibitors to tell the producers and film exchange people just what you want. If you want a better class of pictures you will get them if you ask for them. The producers do not dictate to you,—or if they do they have no right to; you are the ones to dictate to the producers! You are closer to the people than they are and you know what the people want.

Remember, too, that you have now to compete directly with the churches and moral institutions themselves, who are rapidly installing moving picture apparatus. If you do not give them what they want then they will get it themselves.

Church Clientele a Vast One.

It's a large clientele, remember, and you cannot ignore it. There are no less than 173 denominations of all sects in the United States, with 221,024 ministers, 174,731 churches, and 36,669,271 members, while the Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. have combined 2,873 organizations and a total membership of 921,457, with thousands upon thousands of social settlements, welfare associations and moral reform movements all growing out of or allied with the church. This is a tremendous field, and one that must be cultivated in the future work of the present moving picture exhibitors or it will go into other hands.

That yours is not all the fault is shown by some of the comments I have recently heard. Many said there that they would use moving pictures much more if they could only get the right kind of films. One minister from Toledo, Ohio, told me recently that he would put a moving picture machine in his church tomorrow if he could only get the right kind of films, while Miss Jane Addams told me in Chicago just ten days ago that they ran moving pictures in Hull House for a year with splendid success and at a financial profit, but they were compelled to stop and the moving picture machine which they own is today unused because they can't get the right kind of films; Now, members of the International moving Picture Association and Exhibitors League, this is not your fault, but the fault of the producers. Again I say, however, it is "up to you" to see that the producers make the right kind of films both for you and these other organizations and for you to use this kind more and more that the church people and these moral and social uplift workers may see that you at least want to furnish what they need and help along moral and ethical instruction as well as furnish amusement for the people.

It certainly can be done if you and the producers will only put your hands together. What could be more dramatic than Elijah on Mt. Carmel with the four hundred and fifty of the prophets of Baal waiting for God's answer by fire to show the true from the false? What could be more thrilling than Jezabel being thrown from a window to the dogs below for her wicked and licentious folly? What could be funnier than Balaam's ass turning to tell his master to "go slow" when Balaam wanted the ass to go fast, or Eutychus falling asleep when Paul preached too long a sermon and falling out of a third-story window, thereby breaking up the sermon and the congregation at the same time!

There is every element of the dramatic, the tragic and the comic in these Bible stories and moral reform subjects if you will only insist that the producers produce them for you. There is to be found such a play of the imagination as Jules Verne never dreamed of in his wildest flights, such love tales as were never written in any of the world's best sellers, such "moving accidents by flood and field" as was never depicted in the wildest stories of "the wild and wooly West."

A Plea for the Clean and the Strong.

Give the children and the "grown ups" such tales of thrilling heroism as is shown in the life of David Livingston, the great missionary hero, and instill into them the truest, highest, noblest courage instead of the doubtful courage of the desperado—emotion, tragedy and comedy if you will, but give them the right kind. Give them not all religion, but some religion, for every human heart craves that and must have it. Give them not all instruction, but some instruction for that's what the rising generation needs and that you must in some way provide. Give them not all morals even,—in themselves alone,—for none of us like to be preached to all the time; but give them even in the fun that must be there something clean and strong that will send everyone away with a "good taste in the mouth," with a gladness in the heart that they are living, with a desire in the soul to do something that will make life worth living for others, and with a fixed purpose in their minds and brains that they are going to make something bigger and better of themselves, and you'll prove your right to be the purveyors not only of the people's amusements but of their larger lives, that will tell for the uplift of humanity and the betterment of the world.

Daniel Frohman, managing director of the Famous Players, was given a hearty greeting by the exhibitors. Mr. Frohman announced that he had been a theatrical producer all his life, and that as a result of his experience his first effort was to please an audience. Consequently, he was not going to impose on the good nature or the patience of the gathering, as it was getting late and there had been much speaking.

"The signal for the opening of this convention," said Mr. Frohman, "was given by one of the first and foremost actors in the history of American drama—President Wilson. The second significant event that occurred was when one of our most distinguished, one of our greatest songbirds, stopped in here on her way to Europe to show us what melody and music there were in 'The Star Spangled Banner.' In listening to this song and following the opening exercises of this exposition it brought to my mind the fact that this is a national event; it showed us the force and the quality of the men who established and created this wonderful motion picture industry. For that reason I felt a kind of thrill, realizing that 'The Star Spangled Banner' and President Wilson indorsed the efforts of the men who made this exposition what it is.

"Only two years ago I had the unique distinction of being the first theatrical manager to enter into the production of films. Since that time some of the greatest have entered the field. The future of the motion picture industry will be fully safeguarded. Those who are entering into the work are doing their best to make pictures worthy. We are going to try to continue, and we are going to continue to deserve the good-will of the picture-going public."

Mr. Frohman then formally pinned on the officers of the convention the badges indicative of their rank. These were: Chas. H. Phillips, president; A. B. Tugwell, vice-president; Harold W. Rosenthal, secretary; William J. Sweeney, treasurer; Samuel Trigger, Thomas Furniss, Fred J. Harrington, F. J. Silliman and Robert Whitman, executive board.

"I want to announce," said President Phillips, in response to an inquiry, "that we are going to follow out the rules adopted by the convention last year, which are the best that have ever been adopted by any motion picture organization in this country."

President Phillips then named the following on the grievance committee: Messrs. H. A. Victor, chairman; Linton, New York; Trinz, Wisconson; Miller, Minnesota; Katz, Illinois; Slim, Ohio, and Denton, New Jersey. On the resolutions committee were named: Messrs. Samuel Bullock, Ohio, chairman; Levy, Illinois; Germain, New York; Green, Minnesota; Stearn, New Jersey; Fisher, Wisconsin, and Schachter, Pennsylvania.

The convention was then declared adjourned for the day.

TUESDAY—Morning Session.

THE feature of the session on Tuesday was the speech in the morning of Frederick P. Howe, chairman of the National Board of Censorship. Orrin G. Cocks, advisory secretary of the National Board, also talked to the exhibitors. The afternoon session was devoted to a consideration of the report of the grievance committee, and in spite of a badly delayed start and unusual dilatoriness in getting down to business, due mostly to unacquaintance on the part of some with parliamentary customs, there were interesting moments. Although the hour for beginning business in the morning had been heralded as 10 o'clock it was an hour later before there were a sufficient number of delegates on hand to get going. In the afternoon it was forty-five minutes behind the scheduled time when President Phillips called the members to order. Mr. Howe spoke without notes, and was closely followed. So, too, Mr. Cocks spoke extemporaneously. Both are experienced on their feet.

"You are here to-day as business men," said Mr. Howe, "in response to the interest you have in your trade. The motion picture industry is a great schoolmaster, a great teacher. Next to the press and the public schools, it is the greatest educational agency of the age. I believe the motion picture show not only is, but will continue to be one of the greatest agencies in changing the civilization of America. It is because of that fact that I am interested in its freedom, in its possibilities for the same kind of wonderful growth it has had in the past ten years. It reaches seven, eight, ten millions of people every day—8 or 10 per cent. of our people. Next to the press it reaches more people than any other agency; next to the press and our schools it molds more. Some of the concrete things it is doing are these: We are beginning to have a nation-wide knowledge of certain things. It is universalizing our knowledge about our own country. It is making Americans think together. Even more than does the press, its simultaneous production all over the country is a great molding factor.

"In these days for the first time in the history of the world millions of people have leisure. The motion picture has come in and filled the vacuum. It is a great contribution to education. And education as we get it in schools, stops, you know, for most people at ten or twelve years of age. The motion picture show is changing the viewpoint of men, making them more educated and self-respecting, because they now know what is happening in Asia and in Africa. Freedom is being universalized; all the wonders of the world are being portrayed on the screen.

"Just think of the hundreds of thousands of people who have laughed at Falstaff," said Mr. Howe, in speaking of the efforts for three centuries to restrict joy. "People who laugh are good. They can't be bad while they are laughing, and joy is one of the greatest moral forces in the world. Falstaff—drunken, boisterous Falstaff—the good he has done in the world cannot be measured."

Mr. Howe referred to the influence the pictures have had upon the patronage of saloons. "The picture is bringing the family together," he continued. "I have mentioned these commonplace things because I believe they are overlooked by a large number of our people—by that number of people who are anxious to repress the picture, that group in Washington which is trying to make the picture express what a small group of people think it ought to express. My interest in the national board, in the whole question, is the interest in seeing this great agency protected, given just as much freedom as is consistent with one or two limitations which I will discuss later. There are two types of people in this industry with whom we have to contend—there are those who would censor it very severely and limit it, and there are a few people, strange to say, still, who would suppress the motion picture entirely, just as they would suppress other forms of wholesome joy they don't want—they want to suppress anything they don't like.

"There is a group which would make the show a very circumscribed thing; there is another which insists that the picture should not be censored, that there is no necessity for censorship of any kind. Personally, I have a great deal of sympathy with the man who has that point of view; I have much more sympathy with the man who thinks there should be no censorship than I have with the man who would restrict."

The Twentieth Man the Troublemaker.

Mr. Howe spoke of the efforts to find a middle ground, for the sake of the possibly 20 per cent. of patrons of picture theaters who are children. "Society has a right to protect children, even if it has not a right to protect grown-ups," he said. "Summed up, the problem resolves itself down to the twentieth man who does things that injure the other nineteen and the whole trade. In every trade there is a twentieth man, a man who will not conform to the standards the others establish. He wants to make money quickly.

"The National Board is organized on this assumption — that there ought to be some way to protect the community and the trade against the twentieth man, the man who puts on plays we all agree are censurable, and who if permitted to continue will give the business universally a bad name; and not only injure his business but everybody's business. That is happening. It is the twentieth man who is responsible. The motion picture business as a whole is wonderfully wholesome, on moral grounds possibly more so than the theater."

Mr. Howe described how the board works, how 135 persons are divided into groups of five or ten. "Within the last fifteen months the business has grown by leaps and bounds," he said, and added: "We believe censoring should be done by a cross-section of the community, and that a composite view of what America thinks is right will be considered reasonable. The National Board welcomes action on the part of exhibitors to coöperate with us, not only to maintain our standards, but to see that our decisions are enforced. Furthermore, we extend an invitation to write to the board and criticise its standard if you don't approve of it. If a picture comes to you that you don't like write a letter to us and tell why. We ask any help or criticism you can see fit to give us. The board is supported by contributions from the manufacturers, but none of those who pass upon pictures receives salary. The members of the committee are critical of any attempt on the part of the secretaries to influence the judgment of the board."

Mr. Howe paid his respects to the bill now pending in Congress for the establishment of a Federal censorship board of five. While it had been urged on behalf of this bill that it would do away with local censorship, the president of the National Board insisted that the decrees of the Federal Board would in no way be binding upon local communities any more than are the decisions of the present organization. To his mind, such a censorship was fraught with great danger. "There is political danger," he continued, "but that isn't so serious to me as the danger from interference with the freedom of this art. For,

(Continued on Page 1691)

"The Wrath of the Gods."

A Six-Part Japanese Drama Acted by Japanese for the New York Motion Picture Company.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

PRODUCTIONS which combine a powerful fascinating story with superb spectacular effects are still among the rare jewels in filmdom. Not the least sparkling of these gems is this feature of the New York Motion Picture Company, directed by Thomas H. Ince.

I cannot help admiring the boldness of the direction, which was not afraid to film the very elements themselves, not the elements at peace, but the elements in their fury. In "The Wrath of the Gods," the camera follows the path of destruction at close range, and we see portrayed with equal and astonishing skill and facility the majesty of the angry sea, the sublime wrath of fire and the fearful quaking of the very earth itself.

In the elaboration of these impressive and at times overwhelming spectacular phases of the play there is a finish of detail which must please the most critical. The coming of the typhoon is described on the screen not at all in titles, but all in pictures—a difficult feat, which required uncommon skill in direction, and which speaks of years of hard work and observation and experience on the part of the director. The typhoon approaches just as men who have traveled in Eastern waters have told it in a thousand books, but no book can grip us as these pictures do showing with such remarkable fidelity the gradual gathering force of the storm and the final bursting of the sky. The same realism characterizes the screen depiction of the floods of fire and lava descending in never-ending torrents from the angry craters of the Sakura-Jima. I never saw an audience more plainly moved than the thousands that sat in the Strand watching this kaleidoscope of elemental rage. The scene where the earth yawned and engulfed men and women and houses in one huge grave was overpowering.

Scene from "The Wrath of the Gods" (N. Y. M. P. Co.).

I must award no less praise to all the out-door work and scenery in this feature. The spell of the rocks and the surf is on the screen. He who selected these seascapes had the eye and taste of a seascape painter.

Having thus roughly tried to sketch the marvelous frame in which the story is set, let me say a word about the story itself. It has a strange appeal doubly effective by the fact that all but one of the principal parts are taken by Japanese artists. The first place belongs to the handsome, talented and conscientious woman who played the part of Toya San. Toya San is the daughter of Lord Yamaki, who is the sole survivor of an old Samuarai family which, according to an old Japanese legend, was accursed of the Gods. An old prophet delivers this tradition to the young men of that country, warning them to keep away from Yamaki and his daughter. He tells his people that if Toya San ever marries the Gods will open the fiery mouth of the volcano and destroy every living thing within many miles. Consequently, Toya San is shunned by all and lives in solitude with her father, inhabiting a wretched hut near the coast and living precariously upon the food afforded by the sea. Yamaki himself believes in the truth of the cruel tradition and vainly seeks to obtain forgiveness from the Gods, who had been incensed by a sacrilege of his father. When Toya San hears of the strange decree of the Gods she refuses to accept it, saying that no just God would seek to punish the innocent. One day an American vessel is wrecked on the coast near their hovel. Only one of the crew, a sailor named Wilson, is lucky enough to be saved. He is washed ashore half dead, and is found by Yamaki. The latter brings him to his hut and with the ministrations of Toya San, nurses him back to life and strength. The sailor proposes marriage to the Japanese maiden. She tells him of the dire prophecy and when he assures her that his God is more powerful than the idols of the heathen she listens with eagerness and asks her father's consent. The consent is given, but only after long hesitation and after the simple preachings of the sailor have converted Yamaki to the faith of the cross. The sailor then marries Toya San. The people are furious to hear of this marriage; they destroy the hut of Yamaki and murder him beside the rude Christian altar he had erected. And now the visitations of the wrath of the Gods come upon the country and her people. Toya San and her Christian husband alone escape from the universal destruction, and despite the evil prophecy the seed of the ancient Samurai survives beyond Yamaki's daughter.

Scene from "The Wrath of the Gods" (N. Y. M. P. Co.).

The parts of the old prophet Takeo and of the Jinrishka driver and of Yamaki were rendered with an earnestness and power which are rarely witnessed in the average screen performer. The photography is worthy of the great subject, being excellent throughout.

Leaves of Memory.

A Four-Part Eclectic Subject Enacted by Prominent French Players—A Story of Disordered Minds.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

THE tragic note predominates in this feature. An inventor is on the point of perfecting a flying machine when he applies to his brother for a small loan to finish the work. The brother, though rich, refuses the request. The refusal preys upon the inventor's mind and he becomes insane. The wife of the rich brother is in love with another man, but protests her fidelity to her husband. She passes a note to her lover telling him that she will remain true to her marriage vows. This declaration, so unusual for a Frenchwoman in motion pictures, breeds a terrible temptation in the heart of the lover. He sees the crazy brother with the model of a flying machine playing in the garden. He hastens down into the garden, when he sees the rich brother and the latter's wife approach. He takes his stand beside the crazy brother concealed in the bushes, and from his hiding place shoots down and kills the husband of the woman he wants to marry. He then quickly places the smoking pistol in the hands of the lunatic who is arrested as the murderer and placed in an asylum. The paramour marries the widow of the murdered man. In the course of time the lunatic is cured and the whole terrible scene in the garden comes back to him. He remembers that the real murderer was the man who afterward married his sister-in-law. He escapes from the asylum and reveals the truth to his sister-in-law. She is slow to believe, though she has noticed that her second husband has seemed haunted by an unseen terror. When the husband finally sees the former lunatic and hears the accusation from his lips terror stops his heart and he falls lifeless on the ground.

The settings in this feature are superb and the acting is of a high quality. The principal parts in the play were taken by well-known actors and actresses of the Parisian stage. I must say a special word of praise for the photography, which was a delight to the eye.

I hope the scenes showing the antics of the insane on the grounds of the asylum will come out. There is not and there cannot be any humor in showing the delusions of the insane. I had hoped that this bid for the laughter of the idiots in the audience had been abandoned by all sensible directors.

"The Fable of the Brash Drummer and the Nectarine" (Essanay.)

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

THE first of George Ade's Fables in Slang series, under the title given above, will be released by Essanay June 17. This series will be confined to one-reel subjects. The second will come out on July 15, and, thereafter, one will appear every week, on Wednesday.

If judged by the first, the series promises to be exceedingly popular. For me "The Fable of the Drummer and the Nectarine" created gleeful chuckles all the way through. There was not a dull moment during the run of the film, and a thankful spirit prevailed for the absence of anything even remotely suggesting slap-stick business. Strong character drawing is a worthy feature of Mr. Ade's first film story, and the Essanay players sustain the parts admirably.

The production is commendable for the strong atmosphere that is created and retained throughout. The small country town is just as real as if one were visiting in it, somewhere in Indiana. The corner grocery store, with the good-natured owner and the rustic loafers who traffic in the gossip of the village, is realistic to a dot. The arrival of the drummer is always a big feature for the gossiping loungers, and his display of liberality, in handing out cheap cigars or stuffing them into the months of the recipients, is in close keeping with his brash manners and superior city air. Wallace Beery plays the part with a fine sense of its requirements. He holds himself from outdoing the character, a something that he can place to his credit.

Scene from "The Brash Drummer and the Nectarine."

Miss Beverly Bayne is at her best in the part of Clara Louise Willoughby, the modest village belle—or "nectarine," as Mr. Ade jocosely brands her. The havoc wrought on the heart and hair of this shrinking beauty by the drummer, at his first meeting, will force a smile on the stoniest face. Miss Bayne's simulation of the girl's rustic manners and awkwardness stands out in strong contrast with her representation of the same girl after she has received a year's tuition in a finishing school for young ladies. Mr. Ade's definition of a "finishing school," as seen in one of his sub-titles, is "a place at which young ladies learn to give the quick finish to all persons who won't do."

The "quick finish" which the nectarine deals out to the drummer, as shown by Miss Bayne, is uproariously funny. As she resents his embraces by a vigorous display of athletic strength and then pours forth on his shrinking head the seven vials of a heated vocabulary, double exposure steps in to assist in the demolition of the unfortunate. We see him actually shrink up before her wrath and finally fade into thin air. The use of double exposure in this case affords one of the most laughable scenes I have viewed in many a day.

It is scarcely necessary to remind viewers of this film to pay special heed to the sub-titles. Their quaint humor and slangy diction will make them pass muster as George Ade's own coinage. Nearly every one of them provokes a laugh. Take, for instance, this one: "Deliver them, and just send the bill to father." The nectarine has been out buying new hats, after several months' residence at the finishing school. The sub-title shows the ease with which she disposes of trifling things. When the "old man" gets the bill it amounts to over two hundred dollars!

Scene from "The Brash Drummer and the Nectarine."

Here's another, describing the return of the nectarine to her village home after completing the course at the finishing school: "When she landed back in the rube village, the natives took one look and got the blind staggers."

Contrast this with the description of her birthplace: "Her birthplace was one spicy little burg. They took in the sidewalks at 9 o'clock each evening."

As the gabby salesman passes out of the life of the nectarine, Mr. Ade gives us the moral of the whole matter, thusly: "Anybody can win unless there happens to be a second entry."

Scene from "The Brash Drummer and the Nectarine."

"One of Our Girls."

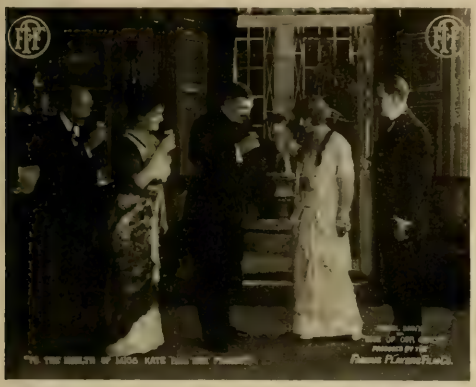
The Famous Players' Four-Part Adaptation of Bronson Howard's Noted Play Is a Fine Picture.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

CAST:

Kate Shipley	Hazel Dawn
Comte Florian de Crebillon	Hal Clarendon
Captain John Gregory	William Roselle
Julie Fonblanque	Fania Marinoff
Mme. Fonblanque	Mme. Dalberg
M. Fonblanque	Charles Krauss
M. Henri de St. Hillaire	David Powell
Dr. Girodet	George Backus
Mr. Shipley	Clarence Handyside
Sylvia de Crebillon	Rolinda Bainbridge

SUCH was the fine cast selected by the Famous Players for the screen portrayal of Bronson Howard's successful play of "One of Our Girls." Every link of this chain is a strong one. The adaptation is from the pen of Miss Eva Unsell, of Mr. Schulo g's scenario staff. Miss Unsell aimed to catch the spirit of the play—the depiction of the young New Yorkess who is unafraid to do those things her impulsive nature prompts her to do, who is bewitchingly unconventional with those she loves, treating with superb hauteur those she abhors, and unhesitating to put in temporary suspense her own reputation to shield the imperilled character of an indiscreet married friend. The screened result is splendidly revelatory of these characteristics as well as many lovable others. Thomas N. Heffron directs the picture. No more need be said than that he displays fine regard for minor details. His work is polished.



Scene from "One of Our Girls" (Famous Players).

Miss Dawn will be welcomed by picturegoers. From her opening scene, in which she is shown awaking with a smile on her face, then wending her pajamaed way to the adjoining bathroom, and later indulging in her morning dumbbell and other athletic exercise, down to the fadeout, she holds tightly the sympathy and the interest. Sharing the honors with her is William Roselle, who plays Captain Gregory, the English sweetheart of the American girl. Mr. Roselle gives a delightful performance. His interpretation of the genteel and reserved Englishman will be sure to please the great British public even more than it does the American. Slow he may be in lovemaking—although he makes rapid progress under his girlish New York tutor—but he is prompt to fight when aspersions are cast upon the reputation of his fiancee. Matters do have for her an ugly look, but he asks no questions.

Hal Clarendon has the role of the villainous Count, the man who puts away his legal wife that he may marry Julie, daughter of the wealthy Fonblanques. Mr. Clarendon's work is of the best, strong and finished. Miss Marinoft's portrayal of Julie, the French cousin and close friend of the heroine, will appeal to the sympathies. Married against her wishes, in a few months her heart turns from the scoundrel to whom she has been formally bound and to the man who was really her choice. Her efforts to induce Shipley to take her with him as he leaves France to avoid scandal and his struggles inward and outward as he tries to prove to her that she must remain with her husband furnish much of the pathos of the story.

Charles Krauss and Mme. Dahlberg finely interpret the Foublanques, the fashionable couple whose ambitions force their daughter into such an unhappy marriage. Mr. Backus is strong as the distinguished looking family doctor whose detective work uncovers the skeletons in the closet of the Count—the physician who does not consider that ministering to the health of his patients fulfills all the obligations he owes them. Miss Bainbridge, in her portrayal of the unfortunate wife, holds the sympathy from the time she first appears in the hut where she is held as a drug-fed prisoner to her dramatic ending as she jumps into the "kissing well" which plays so prominent a part in the story.

"One of Our Girls" depends for its quality not upon sensational incidents. It is straight drama, with cumulating action. There is a strain of pathos, but it is offset by bits of delightful comedy—such, for instance, as the snub administered by Kate to the flirtatious count, both in the railway compartment when she first sees him and later when she calmly ignores the formal introduction. There will be laughter in any house when, in response to the indignant remonstrance of Mme. Fonblanque at the spooning indulged in by the lovers, Kate calmly kisses and rekisses the captain. Or when, at the dinner party, Kate hauls out of his seat the dignified captain and puts him through the paces of the "new American tango." Or again, when the captain, as the acquaintance progresses, takes the hand of Kate to kiss it; she withdraws her hand and raises her face to the captain's. The captain meets the issue, but with less bravery than he displays when he faces the count in deadly combat. This duel, by the way, is lightened by the excessive courtesy shown by the many saluting, silk-hatted participants.

Scene from "One of Our Girls" (Famous Players).

Of dramatic situations, of suspense, there are many—the strongest of all being that of the tragedy at the well and the multiplying incidents that follow upon it. "One of Our Girls" is a fine picture.

Famous Players Company Between Scenes of "The Spitfire." In the Group Are Fred Thompson, Director; Carlyle Blackwell and Violet Mersereau.

"The Stain."

A Six-Part Eclectic Subject Dealing with Love, Law and Politics in Modern America.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

THIS feature represents a most ambitious effort to film a story of contemporaneous American life. It is American-made. On the whole, it is an acceptable offering. There are many very powerful and affecting scenes; there is much masterly acting; great skill has been shown in the selection of the types; there are flashes of the best art in directing. The method of spicing the drama with trivial comic incidents is taking a leaf from the book of life itself, in which the comic and the serious chapters are always mixed. These deft touches of humor are not only amusing in themselves, but they serve to relieve the tragic intensity and the overflowing pathos of many a scene which would otherwise prove too severe a strain on the ever-sympathetic heart.

Scene from "The Stain" (Eclectic).

The story is uncommonly strong and sustains the interest of the spectator from first to last. A man of parts and with high ambitions chafes at the pettiness of his employment, and at the limits it imposes on his desire to rise. He is a clerical drudge at a bank. He is tempted to steal a large sum of money. He makes himself believe that with the money he can realize his social and political aspirations. He reveals his plan to his wife. The wife implores him for his own sake and for the sake of their little child to give up his criminal plan. He ignores the pleadings of the wife and runs away with the money. In a distant city he is admitted to the bar and then rises to great heights in political life, partly through his own talents and partly through his subservience to the dominant political boss. This political boss is one of the striking figures in the play, a veritable type of our politics, rich, uncouth, unscrupulous, masterful and somewhat cynical. The part was taken by Mr. Samuel Ryan, and it may be set down as a most creditable performance. The part of the fugitive from justice, who, under a new name, becomes one of the prominent figures in his new home, was deserving of praise, as taken by Mr. Edward Jose. In his character as a judge and a candidate for governor he gave true and powerful renderings.

Scene from "The Stain" (Eclectic).

To continue the story. The judge is opposed in political life by a public-spirited young attorney named Norris, splendidly impersonated by Thurlow Bergen. The wife of the fugitive has been reported dead in the newspapers, and the judge, thinking himself free, marries the daughter of the boss. The daughter of the fugitive has been raised by sisters in charge of an orphanage and has become separated from her mother. She becomes the secretary of the reforming lawyer. It is shown in the films that she inherits the thieving instincts of her father. She resists these instincts bravely, but seeing a shining jewel in a store where she had gone to buy a present for her employer she is overpowered by temptation and steals it. She is arrested and released on bail. At the trial her mother appears, the daughter having, by a fortunate accident, found her mother again. The mother is called to testify that her husband and the girl's father had stolen a large sum of money and that the girl inherited her disposition to steal from her father. The climax comes when the mother recognizes in the man on the bench her runaway husband and denounces him in open court. The man is stricken with heart failure and dies. The happy ending may be guessed.

The parts of mother and daughter were taken respectively by Eleanor Woodruff and Virginia Person and unstinted praise must be given to the two of them. Each was most acceptable in her own part. Miss Person showed flashes of a high order of acting in the scene when she sought to resist the temptation to steal her employer's money.

It is a pity that with so much high quality running all through the films there are some crudities and incongruities which could easily have been avoided. It was never explained how the wife of the fugitive came to be in the distant city to which the latter had fled. Plain probability was offended in the scene where the police sergeant is shown telephoning to the boss and assuring him of his zeal on behalf of his schemes right in the presence of a crowd, including a reporter. Hereditary influence is no defense to the crime of larceny. Besides no habitual crime is sought to be shown—the father committed only one act of larceny. There are other slighter imperfections which might also have been avoided.

"Across the Atlantic."

Three-Reel Imp, Featuring King Baggot in a Dramatic Travelogue, with Contemporary News Interest.

THE Imp Company released on June 11 a three-part picture in which King Baggot plays the lead. The subject was photographed last summer while Mr. Baggot was abroad, and was directed by Herbert Brenon. The producer also appears in the cast, having the role of Oyama, a scheming Eastern secret agent. The picture has unusual current interest by reason of the appearance in it of Gustav Hamel, the noted aviator, whose recent disappearance following a fight at sea has been the occasion of so much international attention. Mr. Hamel was to have taken part in the across-the-Atlantic flight, and it was in preparation for the coming contest that he set out on the journey that cost him his life. Another famous flyer appearing in the story is Claude Grahame-White, one of the earliest of the birdmen and who is practically as well known in America as he is in his own England.

Mr. Baggot has the part of Wilbur Norton, an inventor, who receives word from England that his plans for a new style of aeroplane have been accepted by Grahame-White. When Oyama, who is anxious to get possession of the plans, finds that he cannot buy them, he stabs a friend of Norton, who has temporary possession of them. Norton, who has been indulging too freely, awakes in the morning and concludes that in drunken frenzy he has killed his friend. He flees to England, leaving behind a wife and little daughter. He sells newspapers on the streets of London, and later gets work with the owner of a punch and judy show. His employment takes him to the Derby at Epsom Downs, his wife, who has followed him to England, is there also.

At the race track exciting incidents follow in rapid succession. Oyama is discovered by Norton, who, when the foreigner tries to escape by aeroplane, follows on horseback. The machine is forced to land, and the fleeing Oriental is killed by a fall from a roof. Norton, back at the track at work as a punch and judy director, sees his wife in the crowd. There is a happy meeting.

There are excellent views of the great English classic and of the thousands attending it. The mimic show furnishes a novelty which to many will be reminiscent of younger days. The pictures of the British metropolis, of old London Bridge among others, are of great interest. "Across the Atlantic" might be described as a dramatic travelogue, containing as well matter of contemporary news value. The acting of Mr. Baggot is of his best.

"Michael Strogoff."

Popular Plays and Players Enter the Trade with an Adequate Five-Part Production Featuring Jacob Adler.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

THIS old and popular story of Jules Verne gave the producers excellent opportunities for introducing and emphasizing spectacular features. They have used their opportunities unstintingly. Some of the scenes were deservedly applauded, notably the setting ablaze of the river and the startingly realistic fire. The production was staged lavishly. The director evidently loves the picturesque and he knows how to make it live on the screen.

"Michael Strogoff" has been filmed before in the single-reel period of motion picture history and it was done well. The latitude which the multiple reel gives to the producer, enabling him to "paint out" the more thrilling episodes, makes this latest film version of the story much superior to the old production. The story of Michael Strogoff, the adventurous messenger of the Scene from "Michael Strogoff."

Czar, who gets his message to the Grand Duke in spite of fate, is too well known to need detailed telling here. Suffice it to say that all the stirring adventures of the messenger were skillfully depicted on the screen, that every sensational and thrilling incident is ably recorded.

A great effort was made to adhere faithfully to facts in the matter of uniforms and all the settings both in-door and out-door. The Tartars and their Emir were particularly fine. In their picturesque garb they were shown swarming about the Russian frontier, destroying the telegraphic connections and harassing the enemy on their light, fast horses. The attack on the Russian guards by the Tartars was realistic and spectacular. Great care had been taken to create and sustain a truly Russian atmosphere, as witness the interior of the Russian inn and the hospitable samovar. Another scene that deserves special mention was the tented camp of the Tartars and the throne of their Emir. The contrasts were particularly happy, and the shifting of scenes from the gorgeous palace and ballroom of the governor to the lowly and secret haunts and surroundings of Ivan and Sanagree formed one of the merits of the feature.

Scene from "Michael Strogoff."

The part of Ivan was well rendered and all the female roles were splendidly taken care of. The man who played the part of the Grand Duke was at a loss what to do with himself most of the time.

The main part was in the hands of the well-known Jewish actor, Jacob P. Adler, who is said to have been very successful on the so-called Yiddish stage. Mr. Adler has a commanding and magnetic stage presence; he is evidently conscientious in his work, and no doubt possesses more than ordinary histrionic powers. I have every hope that he will eventually learn acting before the camera; in this impersonation of Michael Strogoff he is plainly hampered by a lack of camera experience. He talks too much and too vehemently. The camera records only the motions of the mouth and not the sounds. Emphatic elocution before the camera is worse than wasted. It fails to convey the idea which is to be conveyed. The mouth is a very important means of expressing emotion before the camera, but the mere rapid and constant moving of the lips and jaws have only a calisthenic value to the actor and fail to reach the audience.

"The Kangaroo."

World Film Corporation Releases a Strong Underworld Production in Five Parts, from Judge Dickson's Novel.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

THIS multiple reel is a film adaptation of a story of the same name by Judge Harris Dickson. It deals with the "Terrors Old New Orleans" and despite its name has nothing whatever to do with Australia. From the films it appears that an association of cut-throats and highwaymen was in the habit of meeting in a notorious resort named "The Kangaroo." Here they either gambled or planned the commission of crimes against property and against the person. The ringleader of the gang was a cruel-looking old man named "Shack" and his associate villains were Hullum and Tite. They lusted after the family jewels of an old French family, and, after some hair-raising adventures, got the jewels. It was thought dangerous or, at least impolitic, to report the matter to the police. The family decided to consult a private detective. He advised that the young heir of the house disguise himself, pretend to be a horsethief and join the gang of The Kangaroos. The advice of the detective was followed and the young heir of the house of Valence joined the band of ruffians. In this way he, of course, learned all their secrets. The spectator follows him into dens and dives and wonders at the lawless and unmolested lives of the Kangaroos. At last, however, the people became aroused and determined to eradicate all gamblers and gambling houses. There is a realistic raid upon the gambling hell and a bonfire is made of the gambling paraphernalia. The leaders of the criminals escape into a swamp and offer a desperate resistance to the officers of the law, but they are caught in the end. The identity of the young heir of Valence is discovered and "Shack" singles him out for some horrible scheme of special vengeance, when a half-witted boy whom members of the gang had made an orphan happens upon the scene in the nick of time and administers condign punishment to "Shack." There is a love story interwoven with the tale of outrage and murder. After all the "villians" get their just deserts, there is a happy wedding.

Scene from "The Kangaroo" (World Film Corp.).

Much might be said in praise of some of the out-door settings, which were well chosen and helped to create the old New Orleans and Old South atmosphere. Considerable pains seem to have been taken in the staging of the interiors. The costumes were correct and no expense seems to have been spared in this respect. The acting was good on the whole. The adaptation itself has been prepared with care and there were many tense and some picturesque scenes.

CHICAGO LETTER

BY JAS. S. McQUADE

Stanley H. Twist is Back Again After Visiting the Antipodes.

ACCORDING to Mr. Twist, Australia is pregnant with business possibilities in the moving picture line. With a population of 4,000,000 people and an area equal to that of the United States, this country has a contingent of moving picture fans of over one-fourth of the population. Mr. Twist States that Australians demand the very finest pictures to be secured anywhere, having been educated up to this standard by the keen competition between the large and progressive importers and renters, such as West, Spencer, Tates, etc.

"Taking it all in all, I have never seen pictures put on better anywhere than in Sidney and Melbourne," says Mr. Twist. "They take the utmost care with their projection, music, effects and advertising, and the larger shows are run on the same principle and basis as our legitimate theaters are in the States. All new features have their new showing at Spencer's Lyceum Theater, or William's Crystal Palace, or West's Glaciarium. This gives the films an added commercial value, owing to the prestige thus bestowed, and the suburban exhibitors clamor for all such subjects.

"The Lyceum is situated in Pitt Street, the main street of Sidney. This house seats about 1,200 people, and the regular top price is 18 pence, or 36 cents of our money. The lowest price is 6 pence, about 12 cents. One performance is given every evening, with two matinees during the week, and the best people in Sidney attend regularly. The box plant is at Palling's book agency, so that people can select their seats as they do for any of the big legitimate houses.

"The Glaciarium is one of the largest places of its kind that I have ever seen. It is like a great big barn in appearance, but it seats between 4,000 and 5,000 people. It is continually packed. In winter they turn the building into a huge ice skating rink, manufacturing their own ice for the purpose. In this theater there is a throw of 150 feet.

"The attendance at this place is tremendous, and the projection, notwithstanding the long throw, is perfect. The crowds that flock to this place and the others make one wonder where all the money comes from.

"The Crystal Palace is the best theater in Sidney in point of construction and appointments, which is not saying much for any of them. They are all big barns. There isn't a real theater in all of Australia, for that matter, either legitimate or picture, but they get by and do the business, nevertheless. The Crystal Palace is the pride and product of J. D. Williams, the clever American who made a couple of big fortunes there out of pictures and lost out through a combination of peculiar circumstances. The Crystal Palace runs a continuous show from 11 A. M. to 11 P. M., and is packed all the time. The bills are changed twice a week, and an excellent three-hour program is given for 6 pence (12 cents) and a shilling (25 cents). The house seats about 2,000 people.

"I had the surprise of my life when I saw the suburban shows. Some of the directors took me out one night to see these shows, and we visited about twenty. They were all packed to the doors, and crowds were waiting outside to get in. Some of these suburban houses seat as high as 3,000 people. They are really only barns, or open-air shelters, but excellent first run pictures with three-hour programs are given at 6 pence and 1 shilling. I understand that there are only one or two shows in the country offered at 3 pence, 6 cents of our money."

Mr. Twist left for New York, Monday, June 8, where he will make his headquarters. He is optimistic over the future outlook of his affairs and, like Colonel Sellers, "thinks there are millions in it."

Baron Von Teuber's Latest Escapade.

Baron F. B. von Teuber, special representative of the Selig Polyscope Company in South America, has been in hot water of late, judging from a letter recently received from him at Lima, Peru.

The Baron's letter reads in part as follows: "The past week has been one of political unrest. At the last session of Congress, on May 15th, there came near being another revolution. As you probably know, we have three presidents of Peru. Colonel Benavides, a military dictator, was elected provisional president, unconstitutionally, it is said. Public opinion was strongly with Roberto Leguia, and some of the senators who were not in favor of the revolution of Benavides were prevented from going to Congress, so they adjourned to Leguia's house. It is stated that they constituted a quorum and elected Leguia president, while the other half of the senators were nominating Benavides president at the Congressional session at the same time.

"The former president, Billinghurst, who escaped to Chile, also claims to be president, as his resignation has never been sanctioned by Congress.

"Benavides, who is holding the palace, ordered Leguia's house surrounded. Leguia and his followers were reported to be well armed, and some exciting incidents were expected. However, Leguia made his way to the Italian Legation, which is next door.

"Wishing to take a picture of the president, I went for Leguia first, as he is supposed to be the president by law. I called upon an English paper where I have many friends, and we discussed the means of how to get to Leguia. I made an attempt, but was caught by the police and put in jail. The few hours I spent in jail I wrecked the furniture in order to get out. It was a mighty good thing that I effected my release so soon, as they contemplated sending me with other political prisoners the day following, which was Sunday, to the state penitentiary, and then it would have required the intervention of the American Minister, which might have taken weeks or a month."

Essanay Players Off to New York.

Headed by Francis X. Bushman. the winner of the Ladies' World Hero Contest, which has caused world-wide interest, the Essanay dramatic company, consisting of Beverly Bayne, Lillian Drew, Bryant Washburn, E. H. Calvert, Harry Mainhall, Thos. Commerford, Rapley Holmes, Chas. Hitchcock, John Cossar, Helen Dunbar, Frank Dayton, Robert Bolder, Ruth Hennessy, M. C. Von Betz, Leo White and Tommy Harper, left Chicago, Saturday, June 6th, for New York, to appear in the big exterior scenes of "One Wonderful Night."

The photoplay will be of four-reel length, and the purpose of production in New York is to get the exact scenes as depicted in Louis Tracy's book. Mr. Bushman will play the part of John Delancy Curtis, a typical American who has a strenuous night of adventure.

Opening of the Shakespeare Theater.

On Saturday, June 6th, the beautiful Shakespeare photoplay theater, at 43rd Street and Ellis Avenue, this city, was opened by Alfred Hamburger, whose great success with his many other photoplay theaters promises a fine future for this magnificent house.

The Shakespeare represents an investment of about $125,000, and it has been equipped with the best modern appointments. The house is located in the center of an elite neighborhood, and is the first moving picture playhouse to invade this exclusive territory. The programs will consist of high class feature films, representing the product of the Celebrated Players Film Company, the Famous Players Film Company, etc., and will be changed every day.

The opening program included Klaw & Erlanger's "Strongheart," in three reels, and "Love, Luck and Gasoline," Vitagraph's fine comedy.

Chicago Film Brevities.

The following telegram from W. H. Clune, Los Angeles, was received last week my Wm. N. Selig: "'The Spoilers,' one of the greatest pictures in the world. Playing to packed houses in Auditorium, Clune Theater Beautiful, which seats 3,000. Decoration Day the house was packed from noon till 11 P. M., and line waiting outside one block east and one block west from lobby. Entrance of lobby packed. All records broken in this city by 'The Spoilers.' All here extend thanks to you."

* * *

Frank Schaefer, of the Schaefer Theater Company, has informed this office that "The Port of Missing Men," a five-reel Famous Players film, was stolen while the boys were delivering the films one night. A liberal reward is offered for the return of the film to his office at 5 S. Wabash Avenue.

* * *

R. C. Schroeder, manager of the Colonial Theaters (two in number) and of the Elks' Airdome, Galesburg, Ill., visited The World office last week. The two Colonial Theaters seat 350 and 250 people, while the Elks" Airdome seats 400. Admission is five and ten cents for Universal and feature programs.

* * *

H. J. Rosenberg, formerly booking agent for the Celebrated Players Film Company, this city, will henceforth act in that capacity for the World's Film Corporation, traveling from their Chicago office.

* * *

"The Christian," the big Vitagraph-Liebler production opened at the Olympic Theater, June 8, to a large audience. The presentations will be given all summer, under the management of the Consolidated Motion Picture Corporation of this city, which has leased the subject from the W. H. Bell Feature Film Corporation.

* * *

A Wiener, owner of the Lawn Theater, 3418 West 36th Street, this city, was a visitor last week. The Lawn seats 299 people, and admission is ten cents. Mr. Wiener bought this house two weeks ago and started out with Licensed programs, but is now running Universal programs to see how they take.

* * *

The Lux Theater, Michigan Avenue and 35th Street, has been added to his list of theaters by Alfred Hamburger. It is being reconstructed and will soon be reopened under Mr. Hamburger's management.

* * *

P. W., Alexander and Horace Tschumy, of Los Angeles, Cal., visited The World office last week. For about eight years Mr. Alexander was an associate partner of Carl W. Tschumy. They operated theaters in Weiser, Caldwell, Nampa and Emmett, Idaho; also in Fremont, Tiffin and Galion, Ohio. The first theater they owned was the Jewel, in Fremont, Ohio. Carl W. Tschumy died in Buffalo, May 16th, and was succeeded by his brother, Horace Tschumy. Mr. Alexander and Mr. Horace Tschumy stopped over in Chicago on their way to Los Angeles, after attending the funeral of Carl W. Tschumy, which took place in Fremont, Ohio, May 24th. The only theater now owned by them is the Owl, in Los Angeles, Cal. This house seats 700 people. Admission is five cents for programs of the Golden Gate and Universal features.

* * *

Jack Hardin arrived in the city, Monday, June 8, to assume the duties of general manager of the Chicago office of the Eclectic Film Company. Jack has got a host of friends who have kept the wires busy since his arrival, welcoming him back to his old stamping ground.

KELCEY AND SHANNON SIGN FOR PICTURES.

The latest deflection from the legitimate stage, and the latest recruits to the film industry are Herbert Kelcey and Elsie Shannon, who have signed contracts with the Photo Drama Motion Picture Company, to pose in a picture play bearing the title of "After the Ball." As its name indicates, it is a picture story suggested by Charles K. Harris's successful song, which was put in scenario form by Mr. Pierce Kingsley, who will also stage the picture.

Mr. Kelcey began his stage career in London, came to America, and made his first appearance at Wallack's Theater in "Taken from Life." Among his great successes might be mentioned "The Private Secretary," "Diplomacy," "Harbor Lights," and the "The Charity Ball." He was the original Allen Kendrick in the "Heart of Maryland." He began his co-starring career with Miss Shannon in "A Coat of Many Colors," which was followed by "The Moth and the Flame." In all, Herbert Kelcey has been identified with fifty of the biggest dramatic successes known to the American stage.

Miss Shannon's career began as a child with John Stetson, as Eva in "Uncle Tom's Cabin." She was in the original cast of many of the best productions on the American stage, such as "Shenandoah," "The Charity Ball," "Lady Bountiful" and "A Woman of No Importance." Both as a comedienne and a portrayer of emotional roles she is rated among the highest.

ECLECTIC OPENS SIX MORE BRANCHES.

In keeping with its intention to have a branch in all the principal cities throughout the country, the Eclectic Film Company announces that during the past week it has opened six additional branches of the Eclectic Feature Film Exchange as follows: New Orleans, La., 910 Gravier St. (manager, J. A. Nicholl); Washington, D. C., 7th and E Streets, N. W. (manager, C. L. Worthington); Kansas City, Mo., 928 Main Street (manager, C. S. Edwards); Denver, Colo., 16th and Larimer Streets (manager, J. B. Parker); Omaha, Neb., 1312 Farnam Street (manager, E. R. Pearson); Seattle, Wash., 810 Third Ave. (manager, C. M. Simmons).

This brings the total up to twenty-one branch offices which the Eclectic Film Company has opened to date. This does not mark the end of its expansion, as it is at present contemplating opening other offices in the states, as well as in the Dominion of Canada.

Miss Lottie Briscoe.

LOTTIE BRISCOE, one of the leading women of the Lubin Studio, has the advantage of playing opposite to Arthur Johnson. Having been an actress since she was four years old, and in her short life—for she is still very young—she has crowded in a vast amount of very valuable experience. After playing in many successes, Miss Briscoe was fortunate enough to secure an engagement with the late Richard Mansfield. She regards her engagement with that great actor as the most pleasant one of her career. Miss Briscoe played in most of Mansfield's productions, and was the original Essie in George Bernard's play, "The Devil's Disciple." In those days there were no children's societies to protest against child-actresses, but the Gerry Society being formed when Miss Briscoe was playing "Puck" in "A Midsummer Night's Dream," she was prevented from appearing. To soothe her, Mr. Gerry presented her with a ten-dollar gold-piece which Miss Briscoe flung back at him with the remark that she would rather "play 'Puck' than have all his money." Her next engagement was as "Dick" in "The Two Little Vagabonds," and after starring in this part, she joined a stock company, with which she played until a moving picture producer offered her an engagement. The engagement lasted until the summer of 1911, when Miss Briscoe paid a visit to England. On her return to America she was engaged by Mr. Lubin to play with Arthur Johnson, which engagement has been more than successful. Miss Briscoe prefers picture acting to stage work. She thinks her hours—9:30 to 5:30—easier than stock company times, and the work is quite congenial. One of the worries of picture acting she finds, is the selection of suitable clothes. In a recent film she wore no less than fourteen different costumes, each one of which had to be carefully thought out. Her wardrobe is, necessarily, a very extensive one. Twice every week Miss Briscoe goes to see the releases of Lubin and other prominent companies. She is thus able to check any faults or mannerisms that may creep into her work.

Miss Lottie Briscoe.

She finds the demand for Johnson-Briscoe films very gratifying, as her stay in England convinced her that English audiences are not easily pleased. Going, by chance, to a theater near Charing Cross, London, Miss Briscoe was delighted to see herself on the screen, for it brought home to her the fact which she regards as the most compensating part of picture work—when you do please, you please millions.

EDGAR O. BROOKS SEEKING PASTURES NEW.

Edgar Oswald Brooks, who was associated with the Gaumont Company in the capacities of, respectively, publicity manager and later sales manager, has for the past four or five months been actively engaged in directing the fortunes of the Allen Feature Film Corporation in Providence, R. I. Mr. Brooks is now in New York seeking "fresh fields and pastures new." His forceful methods, his fund of good humor, his capacity for working 25 hours a day when necessary, and his executive ability will undoubtedly find an enlarged opportunity in the very near future, as there is plenty of room for men of his caliber in the film industry.

GEORGE NICHOLLS JOINS STERLING CO.

George Nicholls, for the last nine months a successful director for the Keystone Company, has just joined the Universal Sterling Company. He will take out a third company of players and without doubt give a fine account of himself in many reels of good film.

Moving Picture Educator

A SERMON ON MOVING PICTURES

THE Rev. John Armistead Welbourne, the Church of England and Protestant Episcopal rector of St. Timothy's Church, Tokyo, Japan, in his report to the Protestant Episcopal Board of Missions, has the following paragraphs on the value of a good picture, properly presented, which have been published in the June issue of the "Spirit of Missions," which is the authorized and authoritative missionary organ of the church in this country. Their publication there means that such shows have the unqualified and official approval of the Protestant Episcopal Church as a church. The Mr. Walke referred to is the Dean of St. Paul's College, Tokyo.

"Recently we had 'Quo Vadis' given in moving pictures at the Tokyo Imperial Theater for several nights. All of us were much impressed with it as a missionary agency. People at home would doubtless look at it as a wonderful film of a famous book, but a missionary thinks at once of its probable effect on the Japanese. The explanations in Japanese were most sympathetically given, and the whole thing was not so much a "show" as a reverent dramatic illustration of what Christianity truly is. I recognized in the crowded theater members of noble families, rich merchants, people of the court, none of whom under any consideration could be brought to go to church.

"In contrast to the profligacy of heathen Rome, they saw vividly portrayed St. Peter preaching in the catacombs, or some similar place, and such a benevolent old man he was. As it was explained, that old man could not be telling a lie when he told of the Crucifixion and Resurrection of Jesus, the Christ. There was the conversion of the young nobleman, his baptism and open espousal of the Christian cause. We saw the love of the Christians, their forgiveness of their enemies and their patience under persecution, their brave meeting of a cruel death with prayers and hymns, their certain faith in a life after death.

"The effect of all this upon the audience who both saw and heard it would be difficult to estimate. Even the unthinking and careless would be impressed when they saw the Christians given to the lions or burned at the stake. While men may not be led to faith by such a representation— though, indeed, they might be—it would help to remove much prejudice and be a tremendous advertisement for Christianity. We had just had our autumn evangelistic meetings, and after much effort got a few people into the church to hear special preachers, while here men paid good prices to see what was really a wonderful pictorial sermon. Mr. Walke said it did more good than he could by preaching for twenty years, and I am not sure but he is right."

"TRYING" EDUCATIONAL EXHIBITIONS.

FROM Chicago comes the account of a "trying" of educational moving pictures; from the reading it would appear that the worthy ladies who are responsible for this move are acting as though they were experimenting with something that was dangerous, and they feared unpleasant results. In line with this evident fear is the choice of the program, for there is not the slightest doubt that "failure" will be written over the results, because, from the standpoint of the proper use of educational pictures, "failure" must be written over the very beginning of this effort.

These Saturday afternoon children's matinees, or "model juvenile picture shows" have both started wrong, and are without intelligent leadership in the selection of suitable pictures. It would seem that if the local educational authorities have not been antagonized, they have certainy not been enlisted in sympathetic support, for the report says "coöperation was denied." Microscopic natural history subjects are surely not good ones with which to begin such a series if the children are expected to be interested, especially as in this first instance only very young ones with their mothers composed the audience; some boys who managed to get in rejoiced more that it was "free" than that it was pleasing, one being heard to say that he would not care even then to come often "with that kind of picture." The dining habits of caterpillars, and the metamorphosis of the butterfly are very interesting to those who know something about them and can understand the sub-titles, but to show these pictures to young children is like a high school course in the kindergarten class; no wonder the boys could not appreciate them, and that admission free is too great a price to pay for that, which because they do not understand, they cannot be interested in. Educational pictures are not for "trying"—they are are for using, which means that they are to be used by intelligent people in a discriminating way, so that they at once please and instruct, accomplishing the purpose for which they are intended.

A program made up of the following subjects might be used, we venture to say, with good results, and we feel sure would, in themselves, prove that they needed no "trying" for that success which they would undoubtedly command:

"Uncle Tom's Cabin," "Wild Birds in Their Haunts," "How Plants Grow." This would be a splendid beginning and would blaze the way for others of a more scholastic nature, if necessary. For a thorough children's entertaining program, there could be no better selection than "Two Old Pals," "Little Red Riding Hood," " Jack and the Bean Stalk" and "April Fool." For the coming season, associated with the Fourth of July, the program should be: "Fairy Banquet," "Old Glory," "Tramp Elephant" and "For the Queen." There may be added to these "The Star Spangled Banner," "The Declaration of Independence," besides several pictures centered around both Washington and Lincoln, information about any of which the "Educator" will be pleased to give if necessary. For an entertainment of a little more senior character, the following is a good one: "Ancient Temples of Egypt," "The Battle," "Home" and "A Pueblo Legend."

For a still higher grade of exhibition where those present are more of the stamp of the high school pupil the following is a good suggestive list: "The Glories of Ancient Rome," "On the Trail of Germs," "The House-Fly," "Sponge Fisheries," "Life in Our Ponds," "Water Beetle and Its Young," "The Frog," "The Story of the Typewriter," "Fan and Lace Making in Japan," "Bees and Honey." It would hardly seem necessary to mention more subjects at this time; this list is given, however, so that others who think of "trying" educational pictures will not fall into the errors of the good and well meaning Women's Civic League of Chicago. The list is almost legion and any exhibitor not acquainted with it will here find some useful hints, both for general use as well as for the fourth of July program, for, let it be understood, the exhibitor of the times is the man who makes national events tell in his neighborhood, and uses the occasion to use such pictures as best advertise themselves; educational pictures are made to be used.

VITAGRAPH HAS TWO MORE UPLIFT FILMS.

The Vitagraph Company has just completed two or three more films that might be classed as philanthropic in their uplift and the power they will exercise in pointing out to the masses what they can do to help themselves and the willingness of others to help them do it. "The Reward of Thrift," which was produced under the auspices of the American Bankers' Association, will be released in the near future. It points out the virtue and reward of putting aside for a rainy day and keeping the wolf from the door in the hour of necessity.

"The Gang" is another one of these uplift pictures, exploiting the reformatory systems practiced by the children's courts; boys who have been denied proper home influences and the proper environments. It shows their training on farms and in disciplinary schools and how they are taught good citizenship, and how they are elevated to a higher sphere. "The Gang" will be released on June 29th.

ROOSEVELT FILMS REPORTED SPOILED.

From all reports, the films and photographs which were taken by Col. Theodore Roosevelt and Anthony Fiala on their South American expedition are failures by reason of their having been in the water too longs when the canoes upset during a certain leg of the journey. Only one of the films that were under water may be any good, and that is quite indistinct. Roosevelt stood a big chance of making a small-sized fortune out of his movie exhibition of the tour, but water and a too damp climate have knocked it awry.

"THE PLACE OF THE CINEMATOGRAPH IN EDUCATION.

The London Bioscope has added an "Educational Supplement" to its other departments of practical kinematography. The first article is written by Sir James Yoxall, Member Parliament; editor of The Schoolmaster, and secretary of the National Union of Teachers, a man described as "one who is an authority on the theory and practice of education." Sir James says: "If the idea is that films can be used in schools frequently as methods of teaching, they must be adapted to the things which have to be taught. The duration of a child's school life is brief, and a great number of subjects occupy the time-table. Practically, there are no odd half-hours, still less hours, in the school week which could be given up to the pleasant, but indirect method of education which most of the films supposed to be suitable for schools that I have seen, so very well afford." It is perhaps no argument that at the present time the school plan will not admit of a course of moving pictures, but is it not a fact that when the pictures are introduced in the schools they will take their place among the many studies, and by their use become time savers on account of the rapidity with which they do their work. It looks a little as though Sir James may be one of those, who, while admitting the value of the pictures, desire their perfect adaptation in every particular before using them; if we are to wait for that time—which will surely come—we shall have to wait a long time. Would it not be better to enter upon the immediate use of the pictures as far as they go, and get the immediate benefit of them. This course has been followed by such a leading school as the University of Wisconsin which has already used probably every educational picture which has been released, with untold benefit to the students.

Sir James further argues that many of the educational films "can be seen by the children at the picture palaces in the evening, and children do manage to get to the picture palaces in very large numbers once a week or even more often." Of course, we do not know how it is in London, but in this country if the children are to depend upon the picture houses for their views of educational pictures their opportunities will be few and far between; added to which are the difficulties that children cannot go freely to the picture theater, nor are they too flush with the necessary dime or nickel. Only when the schools use the educational pictures for the free benefit will the children see the pictures intended for them, and that time is NOW.

The policy of "watchful waiting" may be very good and necessary under many circumstances, but it is out of place in this instance; there is no reason why the schools may not enter upon the immediate use of the more than six thousand educational films now ready for them. It is to the credit of many institutions that they are not postponing the opportunities presented to them, but are making present use of them with great gain. It is for such reasons as those advanced by this English authority that many manufacturers have began to limit their output of educational pictures; the complaint that they are not used enough is well founded. It would almost appear that in publishing Sir James Yoxall's opinions the Bioscope has not benefited the cause of the new department of Educational Cinematography which they have recently established. The more the present pictures are used the more need will be revealed for others. Greater growth will be enforced, and the time shortened to that day when their school use will be universal. Whoever delays the best use of the moving picture in the schools to-day is not the best friend of the children.

SOME NEW EDUCATIONAL FILMS..

Subjects released by the Pathé Company and not previously noticed on this page are as follows:

"The Wonders of Marine Life" (three reels), a fascinating production gathering into one complete story the science of Oceanography. "The Praying-Mantis"; "Herring Fishing in the North Sea"; "Strange South American Animals"; "A Trip in Southern India"; "Mountains and Torrents of the Caucasus"; "Visit to a Potash Mine"; "Winter Scenes in the Chamonix Valley"; "Fjords and Mountains of Norway." The Eclair have among their latest releases, "Interlaken, Switzerland"; "The Opossum, Flying Bat and Agouti"; "A Wonderful Story of Carniverous Plants"; a well-arranged picture dealing with "The Common Viper"; "Durazze," the obscure capital of Albania; "Venice, in a Gondola"; "Lake Como"; "The Gnat" (Culex); "The Water Hen," etc.; many of these will be reviewed from time to time on this page. The list is now given for the very purpose of encouraging the present interest and use of these pictures upon their release, a full appreciation of which is the best assurance to the manufacturers that it is worth their while to continue the output.

"The Violin of M'Sieur."

A Two-Reel Vitagraph Production, written by William A. Lathrop and Directed by James Young.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

CAST.

Pere Gerome.....Etienne Giradot
Yvonne.....Clara Kimball Young
Jean.....James Young
Little Yvonne.....Helen Connelly
Napoleon, the dog.....Shep

THE simple story of an old man, whose gentle sweetness of nature and knowledge of music protected him amid the active destruction of war between France and Germany and amid the humiliations of extreme poverty. He even escapes death for striking a Prussian officer for attempted familiarity with his pretty daughter, Yvonne. When the Prussians capture the town where Pere Gerome dreams away his peaceful days playing on a valuable Cremona, "M'sieur," that is Pere Gerome, goes to the door of his cottage with lovely Yvonne. French soldiers are falling in death and agony all about these two innocents, but they escape until the officers spy the French beauty. One of them chucks her under the chin and this enrages poor old M'sieur to a point that he breaks his precious instrument over the officer's head. For this he is led away to be executed or languish in a German prison.

Scene from "The Violin of M'Sieur" (Vitagraph).

Yvonne has a lover, Jean, to whom she is engaged, with her father's approval, but Jean is much more human than heroic. He is husky enough to join the army, but he spends most of his time running away. He runs away with a priceless possession in the person of Yvonne and occupies his time so well in the pursuits of peace—how much time I do not know, as there were no sub-titles in the version shown me—that he acquires wife, home and baby, Yvonne the wife. That part of the story goes to the extreme of simplicity and is, very fortunately, not dwelt on to any extent, as it is destitute of other interest than that infused by the personalities of Clara Kimball Young and James Young, both deserving of opportunity the story does not afford. They do next to nothing in a charming manner.

"M'sieur" is released from duress by the Prussians, partially through a common fondness for music, the language of all nations, and he goes wandering. He suffers at times, and, at others, he kindles the flame of human kindness, but he endures privation with the philosophy of long and varied experience. He wanders aimlessly until that destiny or unseen power that directs the complex workings of human existence leads his steps to a cottage where a little girl listens to his musical appeal. The little girl's papa and mama have their attention attracted by the little one and they become strangely affected in listening to the old violinist's quavering notes. The ending is that of reunion and presents one of many attractive scenes well calculated to please those of inborn picture sense.

DAVID KIRKLAND WITH STERLING.

Director David Kirkland has returned to the fold of which Carl Laemmle is shepherd, and will be associated with Ford Sterling in making pictures in which Mr. Sterling is featured.

"Molly the Drummer Boy."

A One-Reel Edison War Picture, Written by Harriet T. Comstock, and Directed by George A. Lessey.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

CAST.

Bill Mason.....John Sturgeon
"Molly," his daughter.....Viola Dana
Mrs. Lane.....Mrs. William Bechtel
Jack.....Yale Boss
George Washington.....Charles Ogle
Surgeon Bell, American.....Augustus Phillips
His Mother.....Ida Ward
Captain Morley, British.....Edwin Clark

MOLLY is the daughter of an irregular father who joins the Continental Army during the Revolution, and left her in the care of a neighbor. Molly is spirited, and is fired by the example of her father to do her share towards saving the country. She accordingly summons Jack from nowhere in particular and borrows a suit of his clothes. It is always delightful to see an actress dressed up as a boy—there is a lot of the boy in most girls, only they are nice, clean, lovable boys, not at all like the rude things nature turns out to fight battles. A girl makes the dearest kind of boy, but the more kindly nature has endowed her, the less like a boy she looks to us plain folks out in the audience.

Viola Dana as "Molly."

Scene from "Molly, the Drummer Boy" (Edison).

Miss Viola Dana makes a delicious boy—she looks palatable, but how the officers are deceived into believing her to be the real thing will probably remain one of those profound mysteries which have baffled men of recondite erudition in all ages. She learns to drum by the womanly way—by intuition—she doesn't need any practice—and she is accepted at once as a member of that desperate band of soldiers from whom our Daughters of the Revolution and Colonial Dames are so proudly descended. She has hardly started before George Washington, the general—not the austere statesman and profound thinker described in history—assigns the drummer boy to a duty of great peril and high importance.

Washington, pre-eminent among his contemporaries for great dignity, quite as much as for more splendid qualities, is represented by Ogle as naturally inclined to be a hail-fellow-well-met. The general who compelled the surrender of Cornwallis was as dignified in the field as while establishing the machinery of government, yet he becomes enthusiastic over an unwounded drummer boy, "wishes to see him immediately" and extends "the thanks of Continental Congress." When the war is over, comment is superfluous. Miss Dana does well enough to deserve a better role and the treatment of the story is all that could be given it. Actress and director did their best with material of very small value. Such plays are below the Edison standard of other years, and far below the best work of this year.

The Lion's Bride.

A Three-Part Eclectic Production, Being the First to Feature Grand Opera in a Menagerie.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

THIS German-made film, released under the auspicious name of the Eclectic Company, does not fulfil the expectations evoked by the title. The German Bioscope is responsible for the production. It belongs to a school kinematography which has made no advance since 1908. I need not say more.

Emmy Destinn, the famous singer, appears in the film. Miss Destinn, in appearance, is a somewhat abbreviated German edition of Marie Dressler minus the American's comic gyrations, vibrations and undulations. The singer is on the film but a half minute at a time, altogether about four or five minutes. She does nothing of importance.

One of the guests bets her $50,000 that she will not dare enter the lion's cage and sing to the animals. In view of the fact that Miss Destinn had then just left the lion's cage and had shaken hands with the most amiable and harmless collection of lions in captivity this bet of the guest sounds alarming. Did he mean to insinuate that even these good-natured, sleepy-looking beasts would be roused to a frenzied rage if Miss Destinn were to try her vocal powers on them? Miss Destinn accepts the bet, walks into the cage, sings about five seconds and comes out unscathed.

Scene from "The Lion's Bride" (Eclectic).

Miss Destinn is not The Lion's Bride. The Lion's Bride is a short, stout lady more remarkable for her weight and girth than for her beauty or power of acting. From the lion's point of view, she was an ideal Lion's Bride. In all the other plays with Lions' Brides the brides have usually been selected by artists who thought more of the audience than of the lions. In the selection of this bride the tastes and appetites of the lions were consulted.

I hope the reader will not infer that anything happens to the lady. I can give him the unqualified assurance that she escapes without a scratch. She has a sister who represents the other member of the Jack Spratt family and she does a sort of eel-dance with the lions at a safe distance and candidly yawning. She faints, nevertheless, and seems overcome by terror. The thin lady is in love with a bashful youth and just before the final curtain it turns out that the stout sister also loved the somewhat rapid-looking youth. Greatly to the timid swain's distress, the stout lady tells him she loves him to distraction. Getting no response, the stout lady then dresses as a bride and, as described above, feeds herself to the lions.

In the very midst of the play, Miss Destinn comes to this country and we catch a glimpse of her and Caruso embarking. We also are favored with the sight of an ocean steamer presumably carrying the two singers to their destination.

"The Jungle."

A Five-Reel Production of Upton Sinclair's Virile Novel Visualized by the All-Star Feature Corporation, Under the Direction of Augustus Thomas, George Henry Irving and John H. Pratt.

Reviewed by H. W. De Long.

A SOMEWHAT daring and powerful story is exploited before the general public, particularly at the psychological moment, when the author is so active in the socialistic field (see daily newspapers). Nothing has been spared by the producing company in the way of cost in this picturization to make it equal to the novel itself, or to the dramatic version which was so universally popular at the time of its production.

Owing to the fact that "The Jungle" enjoys a world-wide recognition and has been read by the majority of humanity, a description of the plot seems to be almost superfluous. The novel enjoys the unprecedented distinction of having been translated and printed in seventeen different languages, in each of which it had a record sale.

To overcome the decided opposition of those interested in the packing business, so vividly described in the book, many difficulties and obstacles were encountered. The producers were compelled to purchase machinery, install it in their own studios and lease stock yards, etc., to get the true atmosphere. The All-Star Feature Corporation secured an exceptionally strong cast to depict the story, composed of prominent Broadway players. George Nash, star of "The Gamblers," "Officer 666" and "Panthea" has the powerful role of Jurgis, the head of an immigrant family, a part which seems to have been created for him. Miss Gail Kane, of "Seven Keys to Baldpate" reputation, essays the part of Ona, his sweetheart in Lithuria, and later his wife in America. Incidentally, Mr. Nash and Miss Kane will co-star the coming season in the New York production of "The Miracle Man." Among the supporting company of "The Jungle" appear such well-known people as Robert Cumming, Clarence Handyside, R. Payton Gibbs, Maxine Hodges, Alice Marc, Julia Hurley, May McCabe, Ernest Evers and Nickelas Sinnerella.

George Nash and Gail Kane in "The Jungle."

All the salient points of the story have been distinctly and cleverly portrayed. The vivid distinction shown between the employer and the employed and the wide and bridgeless chasm that yawns between the selfish and arrogant rich and the dependent poor contains much that is of heart interest.

The careless and unsanitary methods utilized in the manufacture of canned meats which are sold to the public, is clearly demonstrated and, if true, are diabolical and criminal. The plot is very simple to demonstrate so much, and could be easily followed and understood without sub-titles. The vicissitudes encountered by the struggling immigrant family for a mere existence, beset by persecution and disparagements at all angles, is but an illustration of numberless others in the same condition. Many gripping scenes obtain, especially where Jurgis, after a desperate struggle, flings the foreman into the cattle run of the stock yard. The mob scenes during the strike against a reduction of 20 per cent. in wages, ordered by the packing house magnate, on account of the extravagance of his family, are cleverly directed and extremely realistic.

Scene from "The Jungle" (All Star).

Mr. Sinclair, the author, appears in the cast in the last reel and is easily recognized. The finale of the story is gratifying. Taken as a whole, the picture contains much that is wholesome. The photography is excellent, and the acting and direction are above criticism.

"The Jungle" has drawn and pleased capacity houses at the De Kalb Theater, Brooklyn, the past week and can be seen in a Broadway theater in New York City this week when Upton Sinclair, the author, will appear in person at each performance.

BIG SET FOR THE LUCILLE SERIES.

Persons unfamiliar with moving picture production little realize the enormous expense incurred in the staging of a film story, especially that variety which is known as costume stories. The accompanying picture shows a setting in the "Lucille Love, Girl of Mystery" series. The Chinese village,

Big Set for "Lucille Love" Series (Universal).

erected at a cost of $5,000, was used in two scenes only. In the foreground at the left is General Manager Isadore Bernstein, of the West Coast studios of the Universal Company, while on the right are Francis Ford, director and leading man, and Grace Cunard, leading woman, of the Lucille pictures. More than 200 extra people are used every day in the production of the Lucille series.

Doings at Los Angeles.

THE Oz Film Manufacturing Company, headed by L. Frank Baum, an author of worldwide famous fairy stories, has started work on its big studio in Hollywood, on the city limits of Colegrove. The plant is to be one of the best on this coast, and no pains or money are being spared in an effort to make it the best. They have designed a composite studio, after visits to all the other plants around the country. They expect to begin actual production by June 12.

* * *

The Los Angeles Movie League is creating much interest among local baseball fans, and the Sunday games are always well attended. At the session recently the Mutual players scored on the Universal studio team by 9 to 5, while the Keystone aggregation defeated the Universal ranchers by a score of 6 to 3. There are ten more games to be played, and at the present time the Mutual men hold the high percentage of 800, seconded by the Keystone's 750, and the Universal holds, with both teams, 600. It is too early in the season to foretell which will be the winner of the coveted prize cup. F. A. Kelsey is manager of the Mutual team, and is confident of carrying off the award.

* * *

J. Barney Sherry, popular leading man with the N. Y. M. P. Company at Santa Monica, has again invested in a motor car, having purchased an elegant 7-passenger Packard. The car is the latest thing in benzine buggies, and Barney has a regular chauffeur. They all fall for the smooth-oiled roads around here.

* * *

Hal Clements, directing for the U. S. Film Company at San Diego, has finished the first three-reeler, "The Flag of Destiny." The film is full of many thrilling scenes, hundreds of people, horses, and topped by scenic wonders and a strong story. Leon Kent has joined this company as a director and has started on a three-reel feature. Natalie de Longtempts has also come to this company as leading woman. Larry Peyton, formerly of Kalem, played the lead in Clements' picture.

* * *

"The Will O' the Wisp," featuring Henry King and Miss Jackie Saunders, will extensively show the beauties of southern California, for it was taken at the time of the big floods here this spring, and a number of the players risked their lives in getting some fine action. Many of the scenes were laid in several of the beautiful parks here. The plant of the Balboa Company is being almost doubled. The laboratory forces are now working three shifts, and the dark room never gets "dark." Efficiency seems to be the motto of Messrs. Horkheimer for their "Balboa Features."

* * *

Miss Violet MacMillan, who will be leading woman of the Oz Company, is going to purchase a pretty bungalow near the new studio. She is now negotiating with the reality men, and expects to be settled in time to go to work when the place begins operations. Property near this location has advanced materially since the company acquired the block of studio ground.

* * *

During a chat with the inimitable Jack W. Kerrigan, the star told that he had never spent any money for publicity, but that in the last month he had sent out close to 800 pictures of himself on the requests of many admirers. While there, a stack of mail arrived, and the information was given that from 30 to 90 letters a day were received. His dressing-room is a veritable curio shop, for Jack has everything from moccasins to water color paintings, all sent by admirers. And with it all, he is not one bit "up stage."

* * *

F. A. Kelsey is directing now at the Winged Clock studio, having started on "A Girl from the Country," in which Francelia Billington and Elmer Clifton play the leads. The little company visited Santa Monica for the purpose of getting a quiet police station. Up town there are always so many people around that the film maker has a hard time to get good scenes. When the police at this beach town captured two big blackmailers, the people on the strand thought the happening was the scene of movies, and not much of a crowd gathered. The place is always being invaded by film men and the natives no longer wonder at the murders and outrages committed for the screen.

* * *

Down at San Diego the U. S. Film Company has built a large mission on its land and the 100 x 150 building is being finished in regular monastery style. A large corral has been finished for the many horses and burros.

Everyone in local filmland seemed to be present on the occasion of the exhibitors' ball, held in Shrine Auditorium. A large number of players were there and everyone enjoyed the dance until a late hour.

* * *

"St. Elmo," that interesting novel, has been filmed by the Balboa Company and will be released soon through the Box Office Attractions. William Jossey prepared the script, as well as acted the part of the young man in the title role. The film is a good one and will undoubtedly make quite a hit with the exhibitors. The entire forces of the company were used in this feature. Across the street from the studio a church was under construction, and was used in the film for the part where St. Elmo builds a church for the girl.

* * *

At the American Studio in Santa Barbara, Harry Pollard is making "The Dream Ship," which is a sort of fairy tale story, and Fred Gamble, of Beauty films, spent two days here selecting the trimmings and costumes for the film. Now comes from Long Beach, in strong contrast, "The Cruise of the Hell Ship," being made by the Balboa.

* * *

Word arrived by wire that Rollin S. Sturgeon, master director and for so long a time manager of the Santa Monica Vitagraph, had closed with that company and was on the train for the beach city to resume operations with that concern. He arrived May 31, and will immediately start work on features. Sturgeon went east a few weeks ago, presumably to look for another location, but he came back. He will be the managing director, while Ulysses Davis will direct also. Sturgeon will do only features of two reels and more. If his work in the past can be taken as an example of work to come, the Vitagraph will certainly release some films that are worth while.

* * *

Richard Willis also took a trip, having been up at Santa Barbara for the week-end looking after news from the American. He reports a fine trip and a busy studio in the mountain city.

* * *

(Camera) Wizard A. Vallet, happy Billie Leonard, his right hand man, Karl Formes, Jr., well known character man, and scenario editor Daisy E. Smith, all for some time connected with Santa Monica Vitagraph, have joined the U. S. Company at San Diego, and are busy as bees. Manager A. R. Pelton, of this plant, is a busy man, and the place is taking on the aspect of a real and what's more, lively film manufacturing plant. Mrs. Waller has charge of the wardrobe department, which is a feature of the studio.

* * *

Miss Anne Schaefer, leading woman of the Vitagraph, and Jane Novak, also with that company, were attending a performance of "The Dawn of a Tomorrow" when some of the leading players recognized the film favorites and "shook hands" with themselves on the stage. Notes were exchanged later and the film people were surprised to find that the legitimate people knew them from seeing their faces on the screen. These two film folks are getting to be regular society ladies, having been present at all the women's club dances. Miss Novak is now trying her hand at writing a photoplay. The script seems to be promising, so says the scenario editor, Miss Doris Schroeder.

* * *

H. M. Horkheimer, one of the makers of Balboa films tells that the London agents of the new films have fitted up an elegant office in that city where a projection room has been built for the use of exhibitors who wish to see the films run. The English representatives of the company are Bishop, Pessers & Co., Ltd.

* * *

Tom Ricketts of the American has started on "Jim" a story of real life, which is said to be a great one. The soul of the man is transported over a vista of time, revealing facts, which eventually lead him to do good deeds. Harry Pollard and Margarita Fischer have begun work on "The Other Train," a film full of heart interest and with a moral lesson. Harry was here last week seeing old friends and selecting costumes for the new film play.

* * *

Much excitement and amusement was caused at the Broncho studio when a woman with an unbalanced mind wandered into camp and started to create a little panic. She was locked up in the city bastile and later taken to the police station at Santa Monica.

* * *

Edwin August of the Balboa Features has been given full command of his company and has as his leading woman Miss Neva Garber, one of the noted stars of filmland. The company is busy on a big special story.

Frank Montgomery offers a bona fide cash prize of $75 and a second one of $25 to the person sending in a song with music. The tunes and words must convey visions of Indian maids and braves. The song accepted will be published and the name of the winner will appear on the cover. Songs should be sent to the Kalem Indian director at his home, 5447 Russell Avenue, East Hollywood.

* * *

A Broadway jewelry store has turned over one of its largest show windows for the display of California, and famous film stars. The window is well decorated and the shoppers crowd out to the curb to see the display. This firm evidently thinks photoplay stars are good for a little publicity.

* * *

The first issue of "The Script," the official paper of the P. A. L., has made its appearance. It is a neat little booklet and has some good sayings by several members who are authors. It is to be issued monthly. Only members receive copies. If any photoplay authors read this page, they will profit in postage by not sending scripts to the Oz Film Co. All films will be made from the twenty-eight books written by the fairy tale author, L. F. Baum.

* * *

Henry Walthall, of Mutual fame, and pretty Miss Victoria Forde, of the Nestor Universal Fun Company, will lead the grand march at the ball to be given in Rutherford hall on the second of June. Many photoplay people will be there as the event is mainly for them.

* * *

If anyone sees a weekly with the Empire Day celebration held at Ocean Park, Cal., notice the South Africa straw house representing the British holdings in that country. The float was built on an automobile by myself and a friend. We captured a prize with it, a silver cup.

CLARKE IRVINE.

British Notes.

(Special Correspondence to The World.)

THE advent of woman to responsible positions in the moving picture industry has not been long delayed. For several months now London has had a small contingent of female film reviewers, but it was left to Mrs. Renton, the manageress of the Standard Feature Film Co., of Shaftesbury Avenue, to be the first woman to assume absolute control of a modern renting establishment. Mrs. Renton appears from her methods to be quite as up-to-date and enthusiastic as most of her male competitors and this enthusiasm cannot be set down to inexperience for she reviewed films four years ago and has since been engaged for another firm in the renting business. Mrs. Renton has no praise for the English film. To quote her own words "they are not much good, chiefly on account of the uncertain climate."

* * *

The satirical cartoon, mostly of a topical character has forced its way into picture programmes with remarkable prominence during the past month. Until the introduction of "The Hungry Mosquito," by the Vitagraph Co. last year, this type of film was unknown to the English audience. However, a few weeks ago the Barker Co. commenced to liberate a series of "Kine-Kartoons" from the pen of Frederick Gundolphi. Singularly two of the most noteworthy skits are at the expense of American personalities, being entitled "How I Killed My First Jaguar by Colonel Teddy" and "Broncho Billy Loops the Loop." Only the other day Mr. Cherry Kearton, the famous nature photographer, announced his intention of producing a running supply of animated cartoons. He has named his humorous budget "Kine-Quips."

* * *

Edwin Thanhouser is at present in England and there is every probability of his remaining in Europe for at least a year. He expresses his intention of starting to make films again on his own account when he returns to the States. Mr. James McEnnery, of the syndicate that bears his name, left for New York recently. In America he is handling the British film "The World, the Flesh and the Devil," a production considerably criticised on this side.

* * *

An endeavor is being made to organize single show proprietors in England into a co-operative body. Among the benefits set forth to members is to establish small exhibitors on a similar footing, as regards programmes, to the large circuits. Obviously this is to be accomplished through the Cooperative Association making contracts with manufacturers and then conducting its own hiring department among its members.

J. B. SUTILIFFE.

EDWIN FORSBERG.

"FORGIVEN, or the Jack o' Diamonds," the famous play, which ran two seasons on Broadway in the early nineties, and played from coast to coast by Frederic Bryton, and later by Edwin Forsberg, the well-known Broadway artist, has just been played by Mr. Forsberg's own stock company at the Bijou Theater, "Home of the Arvine Players," at Orange, N. J.

Edwin Forsberg.

Great pressure was brought to bear upon Mr. Forsberg to appear in the role of "Jack o' Diamonds" for the last time the week beginning May 25th.

Mr. Forsberg, supported by a notable cast, appeared in the photoplay which has recently been produced by the Stellar Photoplay Company, and for this reason Mr. Forsberg agreed by an arrangement made with the Stellar Photoplay company to appear in "Forgiven" on the speaking stage for one week before the screen release of this great melodrama.

Mr. Forsberg and William Robert Daly, the director of this photoplay, and the members of the Stellar Stock Company traveled through Florida and other states in order to get the proper locations for the scenes for this photoplay.

Within a very short time, "Forgiven" will appear at one of the prominent Broadway theaters. Mr. Forsberg is well known as an actor of great ability. He has been with many of Henry W. Savage's productions.

THE IMPORTANCE OF PURE WATER.

FEW of the devotees of the motion pictures have any idea what serious consequences would follow if a city water famine happened to prevent the large film manufacturing plants from turning out their products according to schedule time. An evidence of this was seen last week when the break in Philadelphia's city supply main caused many manufacturing establishments in the northern part of the city to shut down.

For the development of the films only chemically pure water can be used. When Siegmund Lubin built his Philadelphia plant he had two large artesian wells drilled at 20th and Indiana Avenue so as to provide for just such an emergency. Despite his usual foresight the great expense was needless, for when the chemists tested the water it was found that it contained too much iron and that these wells could never be used to supply water for the development of films.

Mr. Lubin provided, however, for this condition in another way. When the Betzwood plant was constructed, seven artesian wells were drilled far and safe from the Schuylkill Valley watershed and from these wells it is possible to draw 810 gallons of the purest spring water, so cold that its temperature is constantly below 40 degrees Fahrenheit and this great supply can be hourly pumped into the vats in the Betzwood developing rooms.

When the break in the city's plant at Torresdale occurred it was found necessary to shut down the Indiana Avenue plant for the unfiltered water would have ruined every film that was being developed. The entire factory force was switched to Betzwood. Eight automobiles left the Philadelphia plant on the hour for the 23-mile run to Betzwood, and a constant service was maintained, so that as fast as the films were printed in Philadelphia they were rushed to Betzwood to be developed and the Lubin Company manufactured without interruption that week two million feet of film on schedule the Betzwood plant.

Had these films not been delivered when they were scheduled for release it would have meant as great a loss as the failure of a newspaper to publish its Sunday edition. The Lubin Company would have lost $50,000 during the time the city water supply was curtailed had it not been possible to use the Betzwood plant.

OBSERVATIONS

BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN

IT TAKES assemblages such as the International Motion Picture Exposition to bring out the fact that the non-residents are better informed regarding the Metropolis and the current events within its borders than are the residents of the city. During the past week the delegates to the convention representing the out-of-town districts appeared to be better equipped with knowledge regarding the past, present and future of the motion picture industry than many New Yorkers looked upon as fountains of enlightenment. The result was that frequently during public and private discourses visitors took occasion to correct statements made by some of the hosts, and the latter could not restrain expressions of surprise that their "country cousins" were so well posted. It was also noticeable that many of the best informed visitors did not come from the large cities, but from the smaller towns from presumably isolated points.

* * *

In response to queries as to how they became so well posted, some of these delegates stated that it was merely a matter of concentration and retention. Said one of them: "You people of New York have many more opportunities to become informed on matters pertaining to the picture business than our people of the small, distant towns; but you do not take advantage of them. Events in great cities crowd upon each other so rapidly and the people are so much wrapped up in some particular line of action that you forget, or overlook, generalities. Our people have our eyes and ears constantly trained upon the large cities to catch every move and development in the business, so that we may glean something that may aid us in holding and building up our business at home. We are constantly watching every movement your manufacturers make, so that we may be posted and able to talk with the exchange and state's rights people and their traveling representatives concerning future film productions. We watch everything bearing upon the movements of the exchanges, so that we may know and take advantage of anything tending towards better service with, if possible, no corresponding increase of expense. We watch all the movements of your exhibitors so that we may know what to do at home for the protection of our rights. We inquire, listen and read at all times, and I'll venture to say that the number of subscribers to the publications devoted to the motion picture industry are greater in the aggregate from the small cities and towns than they are from the large cities."

* * *

Another delegate said that the exhibitors in the large cities may not feel obliged to retain all they learn about the business because they are in direct touch with the sources of information and are so large in number in the respective localities that, depending one upon the other, that they may cover the entire field upon brief consultation. Being few in number, we of the smaller places must tax ourselves individually with the task of knowing what is going on. "There was a time," said he, "when our minds were concentrated wholly upon the details of our individual operations. We cared little or nothing about what was going on outside our individual zones. But our minds on this score changed when we found that many things that were happening in the large cities would eventually have a bearing upon our small operations to a considerable degree. Take the censorship question, for instance. That did not bother us, because we felt our protection was in the hands of the National Board of Censorship. But when they commenced to organize other boards throughout the country and the newspapers published the views of the agitators, some of our reformers who owed us money, or had some other grievance against us, started in to tell our townfolk that the entire country was aroused over the evils for which the motion pictures were responsible. Then we woke and turned to the points we considered the best sources of information for our protection against the pests. Now, let me tell you this: We exhibitors of the country were rendered greater service in protection against the censor agitators by your late Mayor Gaynor than from any other source since the agitation has been on. His declaration that censorship is unconstitutional halted our enemies, although it is still an open question before the United States Supreme Court. I do not wish to reflect upon the patriotism of the people in the large cities, but I will say events have demonstrated that it is more keen and more rapidly responsive in the people of the small towns and country districts. When the flag is hoisted and an attack on the constitution of the United States is heralded they are on the job in a minute."

The delegate was asked if he could explain (speaking for the people outside the larger cities) why the educational motion picture films are not more popular. "Speaking from my own standpoint," the delegate said, "the educational pictures are very popular, but not to an extent that any exhibitor can make more than occasional use of them. I cannot make them go on an average of once a week. I cannot, in justice to myself, give a program consisting entirely of educational subjects. In a mixed program they are all right. My patrons frequently say to me: 'That was a very good subject. It is great for the children, especially; but, personally, I like the plays.'"

* * *

"Listen," continued the delegate, "you people of the cities do not grasp the full meaning of the cry on the part of the censorship agitators for educational films. It is not a sincere one. They know that if the lines could be gradually drawn tighter and tighter to a practical elimination of the story pictures the thousands of exhibitors would be driven out of business. To get at the objective point of the agitators you must go back to the early days of the motion picture business. The hue and cry against the picture had its incentive originally from a monetary standpoint. Before the picture houses became so widespread motion pictures were a source of considerable revenue to churches, Y. M. C. A. branches, Chatauquas and kindred organizations. Many Y. M. C. A. branches used them as a leading weekly attraction and they were booked on Chatauqua circuits for weeks at a time. I have one place in mind where the pictures were the chief source of revenue for many summers, but the advent of the picture houses killed the business. Every time the Chatauqua advertised a program the picture houses put against it attractions that at least held the natives. Naturally, this did not serve to create a feeling of friendliness towards them on the part of the camp meeting people."

* * *

"As matters now stand, motion pictures are seldom used by the various organizations I speak of. Not because the pictures are immoral, or nonsensical (as many of the reformers claim), but because the promoters cannot compete with the regular exhibitors and hold the business that once came to them. The cry that comedy pictures are almost as harmful to the children as the immoral subjects because they kill the natural sense of humor and present human events in a distorted and impossible form is hardly more sincere than the other efforts put forth by the agitators. I was engaged for several years in supplying picture shows for camp meetings and I know the patrons were just as anxious for comedies as they were for any other subject. I frequently received letters from the managers with the request: 'Send some funny films along next time. Our people enjoy them immensely.' During all the time I was in the business no question of immorality or censorship was raised, although I am quite sure that many of the films imported at that time (imported films were predominant in those days) were more suggestive than the standard productions of to-day. The nearest approach to censorship was an occasional request that love stories be eliminated from the program. In such instances the request was for travel views, comedy and story pictures involving love themes as limited as possible. And yet I can positively recall but one source of such requests. It was the Mt. Gretna, Pa., camp meeting. The managers stated that their people were chiefly of an elderly class that had no interest in stories of love."

* * *

"Educational pictures are important factors in the motion picture business," said the delegate, "but the demand for them is spasmodic, especially where the patrons are of the working class. Exceptions are expedition films, and their popularity has a limit with the general run of picture house patrons."

* * *

"I have asked why the people who are so persistent in their claims for the educational picture are not more liberal in patronizing them and have been told that it is because they are exhibited in 'nickelodeons.' Why not have the churches and other religious bodies take them up for their own benefit? My town is a small one, but I would be pleased to see some organization have an educational night occasionally. I know it would help my business along, and, at the same time, show just how popular the class of entertainment boosted by the reformers is with the amusement public."

McRAE'S "101 BISON" CO. RETURNS TO AMERICA.

Henry McRae and his company of Universal players sailed from Honolulu for San Francisco on board the steamship Matsonia, June 3rd, being due to arrive in the California city June 9th, and returning to the West Coast Studios at Hollywood, on June 10th. The company, including William Clifford, Sherman Bainbridge, Marie Walcamp and Lulu Warrenton among the principals, immediately upon its return to Hollywood, will commence a series of big animal features.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

House Organs.

NEARLY every week some exhibitor writes in and asks for assistance in framing up a house organ. Generally they ask for samples. We have no samples. From time to time we have mentioned some particularly good sheet. It should be a simple matter for those who contemplate getting out this form of advertising to write direct to these managers and ask for samples, enclosing a stamped and self-addressed envelope. This entails a little more trouble than writing in and asking that samples be sent, but it should be worth the slight additional trouble and postage. Meantime we purpose telling how to go about it, and future inquirers will be referred to this issue, that this department may be kept free from repetition of the same comment.

Please note this.

Eventually you are going to have a house organ yourself. Not one house in ten trying the scheme has abandoned the idea. It has paid them. It will pay you. Against the time you do start your own, preserve this copy with especial care, or if you keep the file, mark down the date.

Printers.

The first thing to do is to decide on your printer. It might be argued that it would be better first to decide the details and then ask for prices, but unless you are able to tell beforehand precisely what you want, it is better to pick out a good printer and with his assistance decide on precisely what the issue is to be. The reason for this is that each printer has chances to get a particular paper at a more favorable rate than others, and by suiting his convenience where it does not lie contrary to your own good judgement, you can make more favorable terms. Decide on about what you want, tell your printer what that is and then listen to his suggestions. He may be able to suggest a slight change that will considerably shave the cost.

The small shop printer may not always be the cheapest, but, on the other hand, the very large office may not be willing to bother with what to them is a small job. You are more or less at the mercy of your exchange for your program and may want to hold back copy to the last moment. In such a case you'll need a rush job. A reasonably large office with several presses will be more likely to have a press they can give you than one where there are but two or three presses rushed to capacity. More than this, the larger the office the more type they have and the better the selection they can give you. A small shop buys a few fonts and has to use these. The large office may have a casting machine and rent matrices and cast type limited only to the capacity of the machines. The advantage of this is that Smith, in setting a dry goods advertisement, does not rob your standing matter of several letters on which he has run short and which must, in turn, be stolen from some other idle job before you can be run. The printer should be chosen with care, and it must be remembered that the man who gives you the job for a dollar a thousand less is not always the man who will save you money in the long run.

Stock.

Go down to the printer with your mind reasonably well made up as to size and style. Know whether you want book or news paper. If you have no cuts or are willing to use coarse screen cuts, a fairly good news stock will do you. If you want to use finer cuts and turn out a better looking job, get a better paper. If you want merely a card, know about the size of the card you want, the color and weight. Know whether you want colored or black ink and whether or not you want two color work on the front page. Have a clear idea in your mind just what you want and how you want it, and you'll save a lot of time. There is even the question of the quality of ink to decide. You'll want a quick drying ink of good quality, for there is nothing worse than a job badly printed in ink so poor that the black is either spotted or gray and that smears over hands and gloves.

Cards.

The cheapest form of weekly program is a pocket card. This should be of a size that will permit it to be tucked into the vest pocket or into a lady's purse. Such a card should run between two by three inches and 2½ by 5. Four inches long would be better. This gives barely space for the announcement of the coming week's program on one side. The other should be given to house matter, but where the question of cost must be carefully figured, it might be possible to sell the lower quarter for an advertisement of some tradesman, perhaps the soda announcement of the nearest druggist or confectioner, or the specials of some nearby grocer. If you can get two or three advertisements you can probably afford a folder card, double the size and folded once. This will cost slightly more than double the composition and printing cost of the single card if the job is delivered folded. It would be advisable to have the job done with a "scoring rule," which marks the paper at the fold. Then the card may be given out flat and folded by the patron or your ticket seller and usher can do the job in spare moments.

With such a card the best layout would be to keep the front of the card for the title and address of the house and the hours of performance, with a line about the big feature of the week. The week's program should be on the third; not the second page, as this page strikes the eye first as the page is turned. The top of the second page can be held for coming attractions, with the lower half given to an advertisement and the back page can be divided between the advertisers in proportion to their payments.

It is not advisable to use more than four pages with a card, though it is possible to use a two-fold six page card.

It should be remembered that a small card with white stock does not look as well printed in black as in a deep blue or brown, but colored stock, particularly reds, pinks and other variants of red look better printed in black than in color. A light green, blue or brown card looks well printed in ink of the same color, but darker in tint. Perhaps the cheapest job that looks well is a fairly good manila stock printed in black or deep blue. Black is the better color in this case.

A smooth stock takes the ink better than a pebbled or grained surface of any sort.

Door Knobs.

The door knob special is the next progress up the line. This is practicable in a variety of forms. The simplest is the plain manila card with a hole punched at the top through which a cord is run by which it is fastened to the door knob. The cards should come from the printer punched, the strings being tied by the house staff, but if the printer cannot print and punch at one operation, the cheaper way will be to have a circle or the figure naught or a letter O printed on the card where the punch should come and do the punching in the theater, using what is known to hardware dealers as a spring punch. It is good economy to change the punch frequently to get a quick, easy cut. The actual punch may be renewed for fifteen to twenty-five cents.

Since the door knob is intended to be hung up and not carried about, the size is not so important, though it is well to remember that the best proportioned sheet is two-thirds as wide as it is deep. Freaky styles may be all right, but they are good only once or twice. The single card should carry the program on one side and the house and other advertising on the other, but there is nothing objectionable in printing advertisements in the four margins of the program side, provided that the program is cut off from the advertising by a solid six-point border. In the interests of a clean make-up it will pay you to buy the six-point brass rule yourself, have it cut to proper size and then brazed or soldered into a continuous frame. This will do away with the broken corners where the rule does not exactly meet.

Building up on the single sheet special, other sheets of white or colored paper or the heralds to be had from the companies specializing in this work may be tied to the same string, but the full program should always be given on the card, because these loose sheets may be torn off.

The doorknob may be made as elaborate as desired, but even a single sheet is a capital money bringer.

Programs Proper.

The simplest program is a single sheet of paper, having the program on one side and general matter on the other. The favorite size is six inches wide and nine inches long. This cuts nicely without waste. Anything larger than this in a single sheet classes as a handbill. If four pages are used instead of two, then the same make-up as the four-page card should be followed, the program in any case falling on the right hand pages.

Some programs are made up with one day to each page, set into the advertising. Here the best make-up seems to be to have the program fall in the center of a three-column page, the advertisements surrounding it on all four sides. There is nothing objectionable in this if the program is framed in a six-point rule, but something of this sort should be done to make the program clear and distinct. Rule work to separate the advertisements should not be larger than two-point and may be one-point.

Some programs are made up with the house program on the outside columns of a two-column page and the advertisements in the center, but a neater effect is gained through having the program on the inside columns (nearest the inside margin), letting two programs fall side beside with the margin to separate them.

A still better arrangement is to let the program fall on the right hand pages and the advertising and general reading on the left hand pages. If you have a four-page program you will have only the front and one inside right hand page. Give all of the program on the third page, advertise house specials or general matters on the back, or the house specials in the center of the fourth page with advertisements above and below. The eight-pager makes up nicely with two days to the page.

You'll never get so enthusiastic about the foreign advertising that you cut down the house matter for the "paying" advertising. If you make your house program show a direct cash profit of fifty dollars a week, you are making $50 out of the venture. Now stop and figure out whether twenty dollars' worth of that space would not do you more than twenty dollars' worth of good if devoted to house matters. If it will, and generally it will, then you are not making $50, but are losing part of that through the good you do not get. Remember that primarily you issue your program as an advertising scheme for the house and not for the benefit of the grocer and the butcher. Get and keep the best for yourself and let the others have the rest.

Newspapers.

Sometimes it happens that you can get into an office where they can run off your edition more cheaply as a small newspaper, using straight newspaper composition for the reading matter and perhaps linotyping even a portion of the advertising. This is not as handy a form in some ways, but it will give you more space for about the same price. It is better to have one additional fold made and get it more the size of the Sunday magazines than the full newspaper sheet. The newspaper is apt to be unwieldy unless it is folded down to quarter full size and only a decided economy of printing should indicate this move. It will not pay to cast the plates for a small run on a cylinder press.

Railroad Folders.

The so-called railroad-folder style works very nicely and gives a larger number of pages at the same cost. It should never be larger than eight pages and is better as a six-page folder. The railroad folder can be twice as long as it is wide. Take the six by nine size, for instance. This can be folded to get a sheet four by nine inches. The right hand page folds over on the center and the left hand over on this. Numbering the pages on one side as 1-2-3 and on the other as 4-5-6, page six is your front cover and five the back, page four is the first disclosed on opening, but disappears as this is turned, giving pages one, two and three at a single glance. The program for the week should appear on pages one, two and three, with advertisements top and bottom, if desired, while the specials are advertised on four, page six is given the cover announcements and page five should go to some house argument.

For the railroad folder, the paper should be a heavier stock than the usual book program.

For a smaller issue the straight six by nine page may be taken and folded to get pages three by six inches, which is a handy pocket size.

Other Issues.

The Kraus Manufacturing Company can supply postcards with portraits of the players and the postcard side left blank for the house announcement. This insures the preservation of the card. The cards should not be assorted, but each issue should all be of the same player.

If a sufficient quantity is ordered at one time, it is possible to procure at reasonable prices card stock cut to special design, such as a star, a crescent or diamond. This is a distinctive form, but it is seldom that the issue is worth even the slight extra cost of cutting and the value of the waste stock. It is seldom, for that matter, that the standard sizes may be improved upon.

Large cards may be printed or lettered with the program for the week and placed in store windows. The trouble with this scheme is that there is apt to be too much on the card and it will reach only the fan who is willing to take the trouble to stop and read carefully.

Covers.

As a general thing money is wasted on two color printing for the covers. Make your program so interesting that people will want it for the reading matter and not merely take it because the cover is attractive. The Hennegan Company prints colored covers by the million that they sell as cheaply as the local printer can do two color work for; there is a company in Pittsburgh printing entire programs that might sell the covers alone to those who want to use them and who are too far from Pittsburgh to have the programs printed there and many of the large lithographing companies will supply covers cheaply. It hardly pays to do the home work. Where the covers must be printed at home, it is a good plan to keep to one general style. Let one color be used regularly and let this form be printed in large lots, two or three months' supply at a time. The other color can be printed and changed for each week's run. As a rule if a color cover is used it is almost as cheap to make it a twelve-page paper and print two covers at a time as an eight-page form and cut. This is particularly the case where the matter can be stereotyped and very little new typesetting is needed. The back page as well as the front can be done in color and where other use cannot be made of one color because of the change in the matter, print a frame in one color and the advertisement in the other. Where the four-page cover is used, it does not pay to print the other side of the cover unless space is needed. Much can be done by planning ahead and having one run a long one. Once the press is made ready for a form it is not much more expensive to print ten thousand than two, not, of course, counting the cost of the stock, but merely the press work. It is getting the form on the press and making it ready that counts, so that a color form may run long enough to supply stock for two or three months and so make the extra cost of printing very small.

Type.

One important point, and one that should not be lost sight of, is the proportioning of the size of the type to the size of the sheet and the size of the column to the size of the type. If you will take this issue and turn to the two pages following the editorial page, you will see two articles that run in type about seven lines to the inch instead of the eleven lines that this matter runs. And you will notice that it is easier to read these lines in larger type than this smaller face. Now if you will turn to the Stories of the Films, you will find that while these are set in the same size type as this department, it is slightly more easy to read because the width of the column is but two-thirds of this. Now look around in the advertising. You will possibly find a few paragraphs in type little larger than this that run clear across the page. The eye gets tired sticking to the one line before you get clear across the page. If you had to read an entire page set in this type with the lines running clear across the page, you would be tired long before you completed the job, but there are some cross page lines in large type that are as easy to read as the stories of the film, because relatively the lines are as short.

If you have a six-inch page, do not run six-point lines clear across the page. Break the matter up into two columns. On the other hand, larger than twelve-point will read easily in a six-inch column. The standard newspaper column is thirteen or thirteen and a half ems wide. The former is two and one-sixth inches and the latter two and a quarter inches wide. Matter that can run in whichever measure is used, can be set on linotype machines used in straight newspaper composition without changing the machine and so the job can be slipped in in odd moments where the machines might otherwise be idle, but if you call for some special measure, you must pay, in one way or another, for the time set in changing the machine over; a point that it is well to remember if you are where you can get machine composition, but in any event do not run all your matter in a twelve-point thirteen em column or in a six-point six-inch column if you want your stuff to look well and be read easily. And remember that type is small both ways. The smaller letter gives not only more lines to the inch, but more words to the line. This works out two ways. You can get more in a given space with a smaller letter, but it costs you more. Typesetting is based on the number of ems. The standard em for general measurement is the twelve-point and it is this which is meant when the thirteen em line is mentioned. But there are twenty-six six-point ems in thirteen twelve-point ems and two six-point lines in one twelve-point line. You do not save money by having stuff set in the smaller sizes except on the cost of the paper. It is seldom that in program work it pays to use smaller than an eight-point letter for the body type: the type in which the straight reading matter is set. It is seldom that it pays to use larger than a ten-point. It is better to stick to the eight-point. With this general hint you can go to the printer and talk things over with him intelligently.

Lost Friend Note

We should be sorry to learn that Mr. Bleich has gone out of business, but if he doesn't shoot something along pretty soon we'll be forced to the conclusion that he has.

Almost Very Good

J. M. Blanchard, of the People's Theater, Sunbury, Pa., sends in a novel advertisement that would be very good if the compositor had done his share. It is a three column space nine inches deep. Across the top is the name of the theater, below is a three column box almost an inch deep announcing the program for the day. At the bottom is a similar box for the Saturday program. In the rest of the space (about seven inches) are five boxes. To get the idea make a square and divide it into nine boxes, three across and three down. Now retain only the center and the corner boxes, five in all, and you have the idea, but in what would be the blank space in the middle of the top boxes is a cut of Miss Mary Fuller. The layout is odd and attractive. The drawback is that it looks like three different advertisements, and only one is hooked up with the name of the house. A rude border around the whole would have held it together better and have given at one glance the general effect. Of course in a town the size of Sunbury they know what it means, but even in a small town, the better the advertisement the better the pull.

The extra space carries a layout of pictures of the Lasky players on another page, but there is nothing in that reader to connect the cuts with the house. It is a good advertisement for Mr. Lasky's attractions, but not for the People's Theater, a line over the top to the effect that the People's would show "Brewster's Millions" on Wednesday, would have helped.

On the other hand, the fact that Miss Rosetta Brice, of the Lubin forces, is a Sunbury girl is played up in the advertisement for the Saturday attraction in capital style.

Amen!

This is from the Motion Picture Department of the Rocky Mountain News (Denver). The line "an evening's entertainment for the price of an evening's entertainment" might be made a slogan. S. Barrett McCormick, who runs the department, has recently persuaded one house to charge ten cents for features. He'll get his house de luxe in the long run, and the tardy manager will thank him for his suggestion. It is absurd that a city of the importance of Denver should be so widely known as a five cent town. Mr. McCormick writes:

> Kaleidoscopic has been the success of the photoplay, and as in the wake of every success, the mushroom growth of imitation and shoddiness has eagerly trailed its footsteps.
>
> But surely, as it is inevitable the process of elimination is taking place, the narrow exhibitor is giving place to the broad-minded manager, the shoddy producer surrenders to the director that spares neither pains or wealth to attain the higher ideals of the silent art.
>
> Even now arises a need in Denver for a photoplay theater de luxe, in which an evening's entertainment will be presented at the price of an evening's entertainment, where the liveried starter may call the carriages and cars of the elite, and the photoplay may attain its deserved niche in the realm of dramatics.
>
> No, surely it would not require another theater. Denver now has far the superior of any American city—any one worthy the honor of being the theater de luxe.

Used Cards.

J. H. Hammel, of the Moss and Brill theaters, New York, uses the popularity of the players as a business bringer. Most of the regular house announcements are printed on Kraus post cards and the collecting habit is formed by this line on the printed side:

> Take this souvenir card home and start a collection of photoplay stars. Five hundred subjects in a complete set. Different photographs will be distributed at this theater twice weekly.

People might take the regular form of circular or other printed announcement, but they ask for the postcards. By using a single card at a time instead of assorted players, there is no particular encouragement to try to obtain more than one, where two would be no more valuable than one, and so each card in made to work to its fullest capacity. The post cards are a convenient size for the pocket or handbag, are of good stock, and they go into the home to be examined by the family and stay there and when they are brought out to entertain a guest, the advertisement of the house still lives. And you can get a lot of advertising on half of one side of a post card if you make a proper selection of type.

Three Want Help.

George J. Seedman, The Comedy Theater, Jamaica, N. Y. wants some sample programs as a help to starting one of his own, if some of you will be so good. F. L. Stannard, Gem theater, Wenatchee, Wash., and George G. Faurot, Broadway theater, Seattle, Washington, also ask help from the established ones. This appeal for programs is getting rather heavy, and we would suggest that inquirers who contemplate asking aid read the back numbers and send requests to the different managers for sample copies, enclosing ample return postage. Our contributors have been exceedingly kind in sending samples, but they should at least be kept whole in the matter of postage.

THE PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Not Enough.

HERE'S a letter from a man who is trying to get ahead, and he writes that in the last three years he has tried to sell twenty-five scripts. He has sold none. That's the trouble. He has tried to sell twenty-five scripts, all the way from splits to two reelers. Huh!

In the last twenty days, not the last twenty working days, but the last twenty days of the calendar, we have written twelve fulls and eight splits, two of the latter already being in negative at the end of the twentieth day. In two-thirds of a month we have done four-fifths as much work as this correspondent has done in the last three years—and he writes in a way that suggests that he has been doing something worthy of praise. He has not.

He has written about eight a year, it would seem, and has run all the way into two reels. He writes that he has been much cheered by this department and that it is the department that has kept him at work. And yet he does not seem to have seen the repeated statements that if you do not sell a single one of your first fifty scripts you should write fifty more and another fifty and another, knowing that if you have it in you at all, all of this hard work will come back to you when you are along on your third hundred.

This morning we asked an assistant to take a razor blade and cut certain pages out of the back files of this paper. She made a botch of the job, though we repeatedly showed her how. We did it with a single light stroke. She did it with prayer and fasting. Even so simple a thing as cutting pages out of a paper requires practise, and it was practise that enabled us to do it in one-tenth of the time she took and with seven times the neatness. When she has cut out as many pages as we have in the last twenty years, she will be able to do it just as well.

If so simple a matter as cutting paper with a keen blade requires practise, how can it be argued that the serious matter of thinking out and writing down a photoplay is a thing to be done without repeated effort. You may have the most virile imagination in the world. You may be a master of literary style. But no matter who you are or how clever you may be, you must do more than twenty-five scripts if you want a lasting success as a photoplay writer, and you can't come around here and get patted on the head with any such record as that, any more than you can take your stuff to an editor and expect to sell. You may sell your five hundred and first script on the strength of something you learned while writing your first, but it is foolish to expect to sell your first script or your fiftieth. This correspondent is just commencing to get some comment and suggestion from the editors. If he'll write twenty-five more scripts and not take five years to do it in, he'll probably get more help and some checks, but he should not yet be trying to sell scripts. He should be trying to write them and feel that he is not yet ready to sell.

Not Story Alone.

It is not sufficient that you offer a story for sale. You must offer an interesting story to the editor. Of course any story you write must interest you, because you have written it, but make it interest other people, as well, if you want to wear down the steps that lead to the bank.

The other day one of our pupils brought in a story. It was not much of a story, but it took only ten minutes to change it around so that it was not only a story but an interesting one.

It is easy to put in the punch if you will train yourself to it, but facility comes only with practice. Anyone can write that "John wants to marry Mary but she wants to marry Ted, because he has more money, but she finds that Ted is only flirting with her, so she marries John." But the thing to do is to put some stuff in that story that will build the interes up and make everyone so anxious to have her marry John, because they have been made interested in John, that they are glad when John finally gets her.

Getting a story is only part of the job. Getting a story is like ordering the material for a house. You have the material, but the material is not much by itself. It takes carpenters and masons and plumbers and steam-fitters and decorators to use the material. Anyone with money can buy the materials for a house, but not all can plan the house and then build it. John Smith may plan all his houses with four square sides and a flat roof, where Jim Jones designs the most delightful homes, all gable roofs and bay windows and tiny balconies and all that sort of thing. Put a couple of bay windows on your story and peak the roof.

All of that is merely another way of saying "put in the punch" and a big one, at that. It's a simple matter to write that John and Sam both love Sally, and that John gets her. You don't have to lose more than two nights' sleep thinking that up. But the trouble is that while it is a story, it is a very old and somewwhat uninteresting story. Fix it up.

In the first place John is going to win the girl. Now in order to have the story interesting and with a satisfactory ending, we must plan to make John so interesting that when he wins we'll be glad that he does and not sorry that Sam was not the lucky man. Invent some effective bit of business to show what a fine chap John is. Get something else that shows that Sam is not a person worthy of our interest and affection. Now, instead of being passive spectators in the fight over the girl we have become partisans for John. We want to see him win because we like him.

If you are living in New York and in Chicago you see the Chicago baseball team beat the St. Louis organization, you may enjoy the good ball playing, but you won't be so intensely interested as you would be were you on the home grounds watching the New Yorks trounce the Chicago players. You're strong for the home team because your interest is greater in the local players than the outlanders.

It's precisely the same way in a story. If you are made interested in one character you "root" for that character. If the interest is constantly shifting, if at one moment John looks like the winner and you are just as much pleased a moment later when Sam gets the inside track, there is no great interest, but if you get sore when it seems that Sam is going to get the girl because you dislike Sam and are favoring John, then we get the suspense, the fear that "our side" will not win.

Don't rest content with a story. Insist on writing an interesting story. That is the kind of story that sells, and it is to be presumed that you want to sell stories if only to see them on the screen.

Another Merwin Message.

Bannister Merwin is not in the business merely to sell scripts. He is like all decent minded men in that he wants to help his business, to give to mothers the aid he himself once received and so raise the general tone. There is a peculiar sanity in these extracts from a recent letter:

> What we need most of all at the moment in this business is trained writers, who will turn to the photoplay with a serious intention of mastering it. Do not think that I am preaching for "high-brow" stuff. I am not. But I am very much in earnest when I say that the average photoplaywright has only a fifth-class conception of the right way to put the story together. They have not the ingenuity to invent convincing bits of business that will lift their characters out of the type class and make them individuals. Most of the stuff one sees on the screen shows one a few types going through the same old motions, and the public is simply aching to see human beings.
>
> I know, of course, just as well as you do, that in many respects the producer still stands in the way. Nevertheless the picture business will ultimately go scat if we do not develop people to write photoplays in the true sense. I am working hard to develop the real thing over here. Is not anybody doing it there? The future depends on it, I am sure.

As usual Mr. Merwin gets his finger on the sore spot and presses hard. This business needs trained writers; not merely writers, but trained writers. Masters of technique. Men who in a single bit of business can exploit a man's whole character.

Hang around the studios and you'll hear talk of "types." This man is let out because he is not a type. This man is taken on because he is a "type." Do you know what it means? It means that the average story is so weak and watery that the characters have no personality and so men and women of strongly marked personalities are chosen that they, with their personal characteristics may give to the story the personality that the author has failed to suggest. The actor has a strongly marked personality. He lends this to the colorless tale. We are interested not in the story, but in the actor.

This does not mean, mind you, that stories should be a series of character sketches, but that the story should tell not only the incidents, but should show the character of the men and women who enact the story. Of course there are productions where the failure of the director to grasp the authors' meanings have resulted in the colorless story, but we have seen too many scripts before production to believe that the director is wholly to blame. There are too many persons writing in a hit-or-miss fashion. The plot is the main requisite, but the really competent writer will be able to tell his story in such a fashion that we come into intimate touch with the players.

There are a few here who are working toward the same end that is Mr. Merwin's goal. The number is still too few.

Locations

When you write to locations, or, in other words, to outside scenes, be willing to leave something to the director. The other day we wrote in a railroad station, knowing that the director we were writing for had his choice of three stations. We knew that one of these was approached by a long flight of steps and that the comedy would be helped if a couple of the characters fell down these steps, but we did not insist that this particular station be used because the train schedule of one of the other stations might be more available. Don't get too exact with your outside stuff. Leave the director a little leeway. Don't, for instance, write that John falls over a tree trunk. It might take some time to find a tree trunk, but "stumbles—falls" can be worked anywhere. Be general.

Have Taste

To-day we wrote a pupil to correct his lesson and added: "You have a good idea here, but the development is coarse. It is not pleasant. You can do more with it. Here are the names of three companies that might buy the story in its present state, but learn to do better than merely good enough. Learn to get the best development of an idea, not merely the first. This is a loud farce that might be sold. It would not look pretty on the screen. It will do you no great credit even in the studio that might buy it. You can work it over into something better; so much better that you'll not only sell it, but open a possible market for more scripts."

Now that's pretty good advice. Don't have the immediate sale in view. The immediate sale might mean from ten to thirty dollars. See if you cannot not only make a sale, but create a demand for more stuff of a good grade. A check in the bank may be worth two in the manufacturers' check book, but if you are reasonably certain of coaxing not only the two but other checks by working a little harder, look ahead and make the effort to accumulate a lot. You can do it if every script you send out represents your best possible development of an idea and not merely your first.

Sidestepping

Suppose that you were told to write a story about a collar button. It's ten chances to one that the first idea that comes into your head is the story of the man dressing for breakfast and the train. The collar button rolls under bed or the bureau and the room is a wreck before he finds it. The collar button under the bureau is one of the ancient and honorables of the humorist. It has been told in so many guises that you instinctively think of that first. So will everyone else. That's the trouble. You'll be one of the thousands. And yet you can make a mighty good detective story out of no more than a collar button. You can make eight or ten detective stories out of a collar button, for that matter. Just as a matter of mental training, see how many you can write.

Here's one idea. Jim and Myra are walking along the road. Myra finds in the dirt a collar button. Laughingly she scratches her initial on it and gives it to Jim. He puts it in his pocket. He proposes and is accepted. They go home and ask her father for his approval of the engagement. He refuses, not politely, but with emphasis. There are hot words and Jim flings away with the hot headed vow that he will have Myra if he has to kill the old man. On his way home he loses the collar button and it is found by a burglar. That night the thief visits Myra's home. The father has fallen asleep in the library. He wakes up and surprises the burglar in the dining room packing up the family silver. There is a struggle, the father gets the burglar by the throat. There is a shot, the old man is killed. In his hand is clutched the collar button. It is Myra who finds it and to the grief over the loss of her parent is added the terrible belief that Jim killed the old man to clear the way to his marriage with Myra. She cannot bring herself to denounce the man she loves, even though he is her father's slayer. She hides the terrible secret. The detective who is employed by the authorities finds out her secret. He sees his chance to make a marriage with the heiress and announces the union as the price of her secrecy, Myra retaining the collar button. Jim is at a loss to understand her horror of him and thinks that the tragedy has unseated her reason. One day she drops the collar button by accident. Jim picks it up. He wonders that she still has it and a leader cuts in, "Why, I thought you gave this to me and I lost it." She explains. He remembers the man who jostled him. He hunts for the man and eventually finds him and surprises him into a confession, the detective is packed off and—well you can guess the rest.

Now see what sort of a story you can write about a burnt match, but keep off the most likely development and get something new.

Two Reasons

There are two reasons why a script is returned. One is that it is not a good script. The other is that for some reason the editor does not want it. We had one come back the other day because it meant some slight trouble in obtaining the proper costumes. That did not hurt the value of the story in any way. When you get a script back sit down with it, try and figure out if it really is bad or if it was sent back for some other reason. More than once a story has been sent back because it was too good, strange as that statement may seem. But don't be too quick to decide that it is turned down because it is too bad. Even if it is too good, see if you can't make it a little bit better. We've never seen the absolutely perfect script yet, and we do not believe that you are writing that sort. Don't get that idea yourself. It's fatal.

Take Notice.

Take notice that the pendulum is swinging back and that presently there will be the same ample market for underworld stuff that there is for the first script of the school pupil. Be warned in time and get up out of the slums before you waste too much paper. Attracted by the success of Traffic in Souls, there was an overproduction of this sort of thing. Warned by the revulsion of public feeling, there is a distinct movement away from this theme. Lay out your work on the home and mother stuff, for the pendulum swings as far one way as the other, and that is where it is headed now. If you can write the true heart interest story rather than "sob stuff," so much the better for you and the editor. And mind you, the heart interest story can be just as dramatic. Don't get mushy.

Standard Scripts.

Russell E. Smith argues for a standard form of script. He suggests that at present there are too many variants. William Lord Wright took up the matter of his suggestion recently, and like us all agreed that the standard form would be desirable. But who shall call the standard? Some argue in favor of the Roman numerals and others argue for Arabic. Some want the scene numbers to the left of the sheet and others in the middle. Some want first the cast and then the synopsis and others ask for the synopsis first. The other day John William Kellette argued that "Back to scene" after an insert or cut-in leader was not as good as to letter the various parts of the same scene number. Even the question of "insert" or "on screen," of "leader" or "sub-title" is argued. Looking at it from a distance, it would seem that this does not matter so much as the adequate presentation of a good idea, no matter what the form. So that the idea be good, the form is a very bad second.

Paper.

A correspondent wants to know why he "has" to write his scripts on 8½ by 11 paper. He doesn't have to, bless his protesting heart. He is advised to use that size because it is the handiest size for the editor to handle and for the director to handle, because it travels better than other fancy sizes and because all regular writers use that size through force of habit and example. He can use the thirteen-inch length if he wants to, or anything else, but practically all regular writers use the standard size and to depart from that size is to suggest a lack of familiarity with custom that suggests, in its turn, a lack of experience that argues a lack of merit.

And talking of paper. We use a certain stock. If we buy it by the 500-sheet box it costs $1.25. Buying a large ream and having it cut to size brings the price to 90 cents for the same quantity, but without the box. It is a saving in price where much is used, just as envelopes in 500 lots are much cheaper than by the package of 25.

It Worked.

Some time ago we printed a letter from a man who had found his way into the photoplay game through study. If you do not recall the item, it was briefly that this man went to the theater and watched the pictures. Then he went home and wrote those pictures scene for scene, after which he studied the pictures scene by scene, until he found out what it was that made the picture good or bad. Then he threw away the script and did not write that picture again and try to sell it. At the time we said we thought it a good plan.

Comes a letter from an editor who is none too easily pleased. He writes "We bought a script from ———. If he's your pupil you can be proud. He sure has the dope. Made only two or three slight changes in his script and did not have to rewrite a single page. Hope he sends some more."

He is not our pupil, though we have helped him now and then with criticism and letters, principally letters, because he wrote as one who deserved to be helped because he did not want to be carried. He worked it out for himself and he won through on his own effort. It has taken him about two years, all told, of good hard work, and he is not done working yet, but he has arrived and he arrived on his own feet, not riding on the back of someone else. Why not try the same scheme?

Why Not You?

In Roy McCardell's recent letter he wrote that he had been doing photoplays for fourteen years and realizing that he is just learning how. And he is not writing for effect. He means precisely that. He is as much the student of photoplay today as he was a dozen years ago and much more the student than he was fourteen years ago when he was writing the mutoscope pictures for the Biograph.

If one of the foremost humorous writers in America is willing to admit that he does not yet know it all, what makes you think that the reason your stories do not sell is because the editors are blind in one eye? Just the very moment that you think you know it all you have reached the point where you know less than you ever did in your life and you are standing right at the top of the chute that leads to oblivion and you're slipping badly beside.

Inquiries

NOTE—No inquiries can be replied to by mail. Look for your answer here. No question can be replied to that necessitates the handling of the manuscript. Always give your name and address. It will not be published. A list of addresses, to which photoplays should be sent, will be supplied on receipt of a STAMPED AND SELF ADDRESSED ENVELOPE. The request should be made to the paper direct and not to this department, nor to the Answers Man.

RUBENA—Welcome back. We fail to see that dancing lessons are any excuse for neglecting your old friend. Too bad it's the farm and not New York this summer, but there are other years. They are. But please don't ask those "are they married" questions.

H. M. S.—If you would read the department carefully you would not have to ask these questions. We have said time and again that the punch is far more important than the exact use of a technical term. You have to follow a play in "detail and sequence," but the sequence of time does not mean the sequence used in the play. If you monkey with adaptations you'll be sorry, so don't. Sargent does not get a rake-off. Now be nice.

RICHARD ROE—Miss Dolly Larkin was Anna in "A Father's Heart." Did not see the Imp. Sorry. Strictly speaking you are right in suggesting Pathe's Passion Play as the first multiple reel.

O. M.—There is no Brooklyn Inquest. All sit on the New York Inquest. The latter is shut down for the summer, but will resume in September, so watch for the announcement.

J. L. S.—Your various matters will be taken up in detail in later issues, but be glad that a company was sufficiently interested to hold your script for additional consideration. Keep off that split offer.

H. C. W.—It seems to be merely a matter of overwork and a pressure of business that prevents business courtesy. By now you should have had action from the company as the matter was taken up with them.

M. L. D.—Your third title has not been used before. The others were used in 1913. Nothing to prevent their use again, as the first was twice used last year, by Imp and Biograph. Send a return envelope for the address you ask for. There probably will be an Inquest in Jacksonville next year. You might plan to come over once or twice.

A. P. A.—Sorry, but you are not eligible on account of distance.

ARGUMENT—No information is available on the film you ask about. Sorry.

E. S. C.—We do not "chat" the players. You are thinking of another publication.

E. H.—It is better not to use clips. The company will probably put one on. That sounds like a joke but it is not. It is not possible to write a play that is not something like other plays. The point to consider is whether it is too much like another.

I. W. L.—The Gardner Company has no periodical issues. When they complete a subject they advertise it. Then they get busy with the next. They are still busy at Tappan. The explanation of the trick cartoon pictures is too involved to be given here. In about three weeks send in a stamped and addressed envelope to the Answers Man and ask for that list of books. Too busy at the moment. Mr. Griffith was the first to develop the cut back. No one man can well claim to have been the inventor. In speaking of him as the inventor of the cut back it is merely meant to convey that he was the first to employ it as a device for delaying the climax or heightening the suspense through contrast.

Technique of the Photoplay

(Second Edition)

By EPES W. SARGENT

Not a line reprinted from the first edition, but an entirely new and exhaustive treatise of the Photoplay in its every aspect, together with a dictionary of technical terms and several sample scrits.

One hundred and seventy-six pages of actual text.

Special chapters on Developing the "Punch," Condensing the Script, Writing the Synopsis, Multiple Reel Stories, Talking Pictures, Copyrights, etc.

In cloth, two dollars. Full leather, three dollars.

By mail postpaid. Add ten cents if registration is desired.

☞ Address all Orders to

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

17 Madison Avenue - New York City

Projection Department

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

Operators' Union Directory, I. A. T. S. E.

NOTICE:—Each union is entitled to have its roster of officers, meeting nights, etc., listed here once per year, free of cost. Preserve this list as it will not be republished. The mail address of the secretary should be included, and the address of the regular meeting place, if any.

Local Union No. 325, Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

President, Frank Walsh; vice-president, William Bohn; financial secretary, Charles Dippie; secretary-treasurer, William Platt, 264 N. Main Street; business agent, Cummie Platt; sergeant-at-arms, Louis Thomas.

Manufacturers' Notice.

It is an established rule of the Moving Picture World and of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until such articles have been demonstrated to a member of our staff. In case of apparatus pertaining to projection this means the editor of this department.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending 4 cents, stamps, (less than actual cost) will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay.

The first seventy-four questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form. They may be obtained by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy. You may be surprised at the number of questions you can't answer without a lot of study.

Question No. 37.

Best answer will be published, and the names of others sending in replies of excellence will appear in the Roll of Honor. Permission to use the contributor's name must accompany each answer, otherwise only the name of the city will be used. Theater managers looking for high class men will do well to watch the Roll of Honor.

Can you use a motor wound for single-phase current on two or three-phase, or a two-phase motor on single-phase or three-phase? If your answer is yes, show, by sketch, how you would connect. What is "single-phase," "two-phase," and "three-phase" current, and what, in your opinion, are the advantages or disadvantages of the various phases? Suppose you had the choice of single and poly-phase current for that new theater, the same to be used for incandescent lighting, fan motors and to pull a motor-generator set. What would you advise the manager to install, and why would you give that advice?

Roll of Honor

The Roll is very short on Question No. 31, since one or more of the items therein contained proved a sticker for most of the boys. Among those entitled to be enrolled are: Harry T. Dobson, Toronto, Canada; Jos. H. M. Smith, Fort Worth Texas; and L. B. Minges, Lestershire, New York.

I want to tell you boys again to hustle your answers in. Every week there are answers which come too late to receive any consideration and I do not like to discourage correspondents who are entitled to be on the Roll of Honor merely by reason of the fact that their answers are too late. If you have the list of questions there is no reason why your answers cannot be prepared ahead; in fact you can keep two or three weeks ahead on the questions just as well as not.

I have selected the reply of W. S. James, Camden, New Jersey, as best, taking everything into consideration.

Answer to Question No. 31.

By W. S. James, Camden, New Jersey.

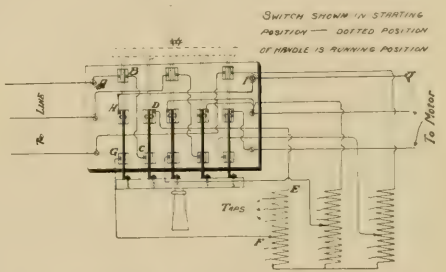
The Question:

If your employer were to purchase a second-hand motor-generator set, or a motor and generator, how would you determine "which was which" in connecting the generator and motor, there being no electrician to be had in your small town? How would you connect an a.c. motor to the line? What is meant by a "starting compensator"? Give sketch and explanatory directions for connecting a three-phase compensator and motor. Explain why a starting box is necessary with motors, and if it is necessary with all motors? If motor and generator were separate, how would you figure the size of the pulleys? How would you know if the motor was heavy enough to carry the generator without overloading the motor?

The Answer:

In determining the "which is which" of a motor generator set I think the simplest way is to look at the plates attached to the machines. They will be found to read something like this: On the motor: Cycles 60, R. P. M. 1800, H. P. 10, Volts 110, Amps. 67.9; while on the generator they may be like this: R. P. M. 1800, K. W. 7, Volts 70, Type K. If there be no plates on the set the motor could be identified as the machine with no windings on the rotating part.

An a.c. motor of the poly-phase type may be connected directly to the line, but the sudden rush of current is so expensive, both in juice consumed and increased cost of installation, that it is very objectionable except in the smaller types. In the larger types the voltage applied to the primary (usually the stator) may be reduced by resistance inserted in the primary circuit, or by an auto transformer, or, again, a fixed resistance may be inserted in the secondary, and cut out when the motor attains normal speed. This style of machine is shown in sketch No. 2. In the squirrel cage type a.c. motor, in which the secondary windings are a number of copper or brass bars lying in slots cut in the periphery of the core, or rotor, it is difficult to use resistance in series, therefore such a motor is started by cutting down the voltage applied to the primary by means of an auto transformer, usually called a starting compensator, or sometimes an auto-starter.



In the appended sketch, when the double throw switch is in the starting position, the current from each phase flows through part of one of the auto transformer coils. The amount may be varied by the taps, shown in the drawing, to suit the conditions under which the motor has to start. To enable the uninitiated to trace the circuit of a phase I have lettered the different points A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, I, J. A is where the current leaves the line and J is where it enters the motor. After the motor has attained full speed the switch is thrown over to running position, which applies the full line voltage to the motor. A starting compensator is generally used with a motor generator set as the motor does not need a great starting torque. The reason starting compensators cannot be used where heavy starting torque is needed, is that the torque of an induction motor decreases in direct proportion as the square of the applied voltage decreases. The operation of starting a motor with a starting compensator generally requires 15 seconds, at least, for motors of moderate size; say up to 20 hp. Always be sure that the compensator is in starting position before throwing in the main line switch. For the benefit of some one who may come in contact with a type of a.c. motor starter which is attached to the rotor I will say a few words on it, even though it is not really a compensator. Where it is necessary to have a strong starting torque a resistance of correct capacity is installed in, or on the rotor spider, which carries the current while starting, and is so arranged that the resistance may be cut out when the motor attains full speed, when it leaves the rotor windings short circuited.

This is shown in sketch No. 2. Handle A is shown in starting position, and when the motor attains full speed it is pushed in towards the end of the shaft as far as it will go. Always have it all the way out when starting. In explaining why a starting box is needed on motors I would say it is not necessary for small motors say, up to 1 h.p., or on motors of the series type. In the shunt and compound wound types the armature is connected across the line, that is in the event of not using a starting box, and as the armature windings have less resistance than the field coils, and only the armature coils directly in contact with the brushes are in circuit, it will be readily seen that there will be a sudden rush of current through these armature coils which is liable to burn them out. The reason for this is that electricity takes the path of the least resistance. Question No. 33 will take care of the correct way to connect, so I will not give it here. In figuring the size of pulleys there are always three things, at least, which it is necessary to know. I think the best way to explain this is to assume a condition, but before doing so I will give the four rules for figuring pulleys.

Rule 1: The diameter of the driving pulley equals the product of the diameter and the number of revolutions of the driven pulley divided by the number of revolutions of the driving pulley.

Rule 2: The diameter of the driven pulley equals the product of the diameter and number of revolutions of the driving pulley divided by the number of revolutions of the driven pulley.

Rule 3: The number of revolutions of the driven pulley equals the product of the diameter and the number of revolutions of the driver divided by the diameter of the driven pulley.

Rule 4: The number of revolutions of the driving pulley equals the product of the diameter and the number of revolutions of the driven pulley divided by the diameter of the driving pulley.

To express the four rules in the form of a mathematical problem let A equal the diameter of the driver; a equal the diameter of the driven; B equal the speed of the driver; b equal the speed of the driven.

$$\text{then, Rule 1 becomes } A = \frac{ab}{B}$$

$$\text{Rule 2 becomes } a = \frac{BA}{b}$$

$$\text{Rule 3 becomes } b = \frac{BA}{a}$$

$$\text{Rule 4 becomes } B = \frac{ab}{A}$$

Now to take an example and apply: The motor has a speed of 1,800 r.p.m. with a 6-inch pulley. What size pulley must I have on the motor to drive my generator at a speed of 3,000 r.p.m.? You will readily see that I need Rule 2, and substituting the figures for the letters I have the example $\frac{6 \times 1800}{3000} = 3.6$ or 3.6 inches as the diameter of pulley needed to drive the generator at 3,000 r.p.m.

To determine if the motor were strong enough to carry the generator I would find the b.h.p. of the motor as described in Answer 30. Then I would find the h.p. of the generator by multiplying the voltage by the amperage and dividing the result by 746, which would give the h.p. The reason for using 746 is that 746 watts equal one h.p. Then I would see if the h.p. of the motor was 1.8181 times that of the generator. If it was, the motor would be strong enough. If it was not then the motor would be too small.

Brother James is, I think, wrong in one respect. He says that he would multiply the output voltage and amperage and divide by 746 in order to get the power of the generator. I would call his attention to the fact that this would not allow for any loss in the generator, therefore his result would only be approximately correct. I think if he would multiply the volts by the amperes and divide that product by 746, and then consider this as being 85 or 90 per cent. of the actual power required to drive the generator he would be mighty close to correct. I do not believe the generator was ever made that would have more than 90 per cent. efficiency.

Abnormal Flicker.

Mississippi, after saying that he studied every spare moment he could get, but has mighty few of them, since he has to see that the posters are out, and the machines all right at the "other shows," because the boss does not like the idea of hiring anybody but kids to run the machines at the other theaters, and that for looking after everything he received the bountiful sum of $12.00 a week, continues:

> My Power's Six has an objectionable flicker, and it seems to me the flicker blades are too narrow. The main blade measures 4¾ inches and the small ones 3⅝ inches. Am projecting a 12 foot 6 inch picture on a mirroroide screen at 73 feet, using 6½ and 7½ condensers. I maintain a clear field with 40 amperes through a Fort Wayne compensarc from a 110 volt supply line.

You have approximately a 5½ inch e.f. lens, and I believe, Mississippi, you could use a shutter having a narrower main blade. I would suggest that you cut a pasteboard shutter, patterning it after your present one. Take out the one now in use and put the pasteboard one in its place, then trim off ⅛ of an inch from each side of the main blade and keep on doing that until you develop travel ghost, then when the last cutting develops travel ghost, using your psateboard shutter for a pattern cut down the main blade of your regular shutter, but leave the width of the last cutting in addition to the width of the pasteboard pattern. Let me caution you, however, not to do all the cutting on one side of the blade, but to cut evenly from both sides. I would suggest that you are in pretty poor business helping the boss out in his child labor proposition. If he only pays you $12.00, what does he pay the children? If one of those "kids" should have a fire, and any one be injured or killed, you would be morally responsible.

Reversed Coils.

G. Gunnarson, Brooklyn, New York, writes:

> With regard to the letter concerning reversed field coils, May 2nd issue, I suggest the following: A compound wound generator having one reversed shunt field coil will not, as a rule, pick up its voltage with an open line circuit, unless the dynamo has four or more field coils. The more coils the less the proportionate effect of a single reversed coil. In a multipole machine the effect of one reversed series coil is not noticed until the load is thrown on the generator, whereupon the voltage will not maintain itself, and the brushes will spark badly on account of the weakened field. A dynamo will not generate with all field coils reversed, since it is necessary that a certain relation exist between the field and the armature and the direction of rotation of the armature. A short run with either the armature or field reversed, or the direction of rotation reversed, will render the dynamo unable to generate after the condition is corrected, because this condition tends to destroy the residual magnetism, so that it would be necessary to re-charge the field. A generator having all shunt field coils connected the right way and all series coils reversed—connected so as to oppose the shunt field—will build up voltage with the line switch open, but the voltage will instantly drop to zero when the load is put on. One reversed or short circuited armature coil will cause a local current to flow with result that either the dynamo or motor will require an unusual amount of power to run it, even when working without a load. With a motor there is a jerky motion at usual speed when this condition prevails, and in the case of a dynamo the voltage will fluctuate. Don't take all this as fact, but merely for what it is worth.

I am not stopping to dope out all the generator stuff that is fired at me by correspondents. I figure there is much more value in publishing these things and letting the department fans criticise them in editing and correcting everything so that there is nothing for the reader to do but read it. If there is a dispute I will always undertake the contract of settling it, and giving the right answer, except in matters of optics in which no one is real positive what the right answer is.

Opinion Requested.

Pennsylvania sends a bunch of "artistically rotten" patches and says:

> Enclosed find ten samples of patches, demonstrating to what extremes of laziness some operators will descend. What is your opinion of a man who will run his show all day with ten out-of-frames in one reel, and several more in his other reels, making no attempt to take them out, and shipping out his show in the same condition? These samples submitted are all out of the same reel, and not a very old one at that. If your opinion resembles mine in the least you would not care to put it into print. And what of the manager who will stand for such horrible work show after show, day after day, week after week, and month after month? While running my first show I drop a bit of paper into the take-up reel every time a bad patch or out-of-frame goes through, and when I run it again there is not a misframe in the whole reel, and that is the condition my reels are in when I send them away. Patches made by many operators are not only out-of-frame but the holes do not match, and the patches themselves are usually large, stiff lumps. Is it possible that there are still operators who don't know how to make a proper patch, and managers who don't know what a misframe is and that it is avoidable? If such there be for heaven's sake let them get better informed since the avenues of knowledge are now, thanks to the MOVING PICTURE WORLD, open. Possibly the guilty ones are the men who do not bother to read the MOVING PICTURE WORLD, or spend money on the Handbook. Please print your opinion of these matters. It may catch the eyes of a few of these lazy incompetents and do some good. A little charity prevents me from naming the house which precedes me in using the film, but I will do so if the trouble continues.

My dear sir, I have expressed my opinion on this proposition many times. Every one of the patches sent in is almost three holes wide, and stuck together so loosely that I could pull them apart without the least effort. However, this kind of work is not always chargeable altogether to the operator, since in many theaters the manager hires an incompetent boy who is little more than a child to do the rewinding and make the patches. Of course, the kid does not know how to do it properly, and, moreover, being but a child, he does not care. It is not to be expected that he would, since you cannot place old heads on young shoulders. Negatively the operator is somewhat to blame in cases of this kind, since he could at least raise Merry Hallelujah over the misframes and the poor patches, and at least compel the boy to be reasonably careful. Also I cannot find it in my heart to altogether blame some of the "operators" for running misframes. Many managers, particularly in small towns, want the man to work all the afternoon and evening, seven days a week for about $15.00, and sometimes for even less. Nor is all this all, for some of these "managers" also expect the operator to come in the forenoon and clean up the theater, and it is not to be expected that the poor boob is going to voluntarily take on any additional work, or in fact do any work he can avoid. The manager is the man who is primarily to blame. He either does not or cannot pay the operator a reasonable salary for his work, nor will he take the trouble to put the films in condition himself. You see, Pennsylvania, there are a good many angles to this proposition. I have in the past often roasted the operator, when away down in depths of my conscience I knew he was not altogether to blame, but I was interested in remedying abuses and took the means which seemed best calculated to get the best results. I think, however, the time is now here when we ought to place most of the blame where it properly belongs, viz: on the film exchange and on the theater manager himself, though, of course, the old argument still holds good that a man should not take a position unless he is prepared to deliver the goods, meaning by this that he ought to know what the job is before he accepts it, and if the work necessary to put on the show right is more than he thinks the salary is worth he should reject the position. But I know that this is really asking too much of human nature. It is a complicated question, and one which only continuous hammering and time will settle.

Didn't Notice It.

Elmer W. Stites, Shelbyville, Indiana, writes:

In answering question No. 22 W. S. James says that cutting in resistance will reduce the speed of the motor, whereas Harry T. Dobson says it will increase the speed. Which is right? If I remember rightly this was dealt with in the first question of the series, the answer being that the armature would increase its speed. (That is right. Ed.). If reducing the efficiency of the field will cause the armature to speed up, why have any field? Why not disconnect the field entirely, and then the armature would run its fool head off? This does not look right to me. The questions are a good thing but of what value are the answers when two are given and one contradicts the other? I think you ought at least to give your opinion as to which is right. On page 357, April 18th issue, in W. S. James' article, twelfth line from the bottom, the word "change" should be "image". I think brother James should have made his formula and example clearer (at the beginning of page 358). In the second column, page 358, he says: "Now instead of having the condenser in focus at B we have the arc." This would not be the case if the condensers were between the arc and the lens. As to the keystone effect mentioned farther on, it is caused by the condensers being out of line with the aperture, being either too high or too low or too far to one side. I believe the latter is correct though Mr. James says they were above or below. In April 11th issue, page 210, Mr. James says a 5½ lens may even be working at 4 inches e.f. I think he is mistaken, for a 5½ e.f. lens, when it was measured for its focal length was 5¼ inches from the focusing screen to the center of the lens when focused on an object at least several hundred feet away, and therefore it could not be even as close as 5½ inches to the film, since the screen is not several hundred feet away, and therefore the lens must be slightly farther from the film than when it was measured for its e.f., or, as Mr. James would say, the lens would be working at a different conjugate-focus than when it was measured for its e.f. I hope to see the questions on gasoline engines soon.

I did not notice the discrepancy of which brother Stites complains with regard to the motor. As I understand the matter the armature speeds up when the strength of the field is reduced, and the field rheostat is for the purpose of controlling the strength of the field the same as in a generator, though in one case it governs the voltage of the output, and in the other the speed of the armature. As to the lens matter, I will let you and James fight that out. Brother James' article was a pioneer article, and, as such, I believe all of you are expecting too much. James does not claim to be infallible, and I personally think he did a wonderful work, although I believe on several points he was in error, but this error was natural since he was blazing a trail far ahead of anyone else, and he had to be his own guide as well as chop his own trees down. However, you forget that whereas the lens was measured with parallel rays it works on a converging ray light source.

E. F. or B. F.

Chicago, Illinois, writes as follows:

Would it not be better to use the back focus of the lens in figuring rather than the equivalent focus? In using the e.f. it is necessary to find the central place between the two lenses, which frequently is considerable trouble, whereas with the b.f. the measurement can be made instantly. Therefore, why use the equivalent focus?

Principally by reason of the fact that all the rules we have for lenses are based on the equivalent focus, and in order to substitute the back focus it would, therefore, be necessary to change all these rules, and that, Chicago, would be some job, though, of course, it could be done. However, the trouble you speak of does not really amount to much, because when an operator gets a new lens he can mark the equivalent focus point on the barrel in a minute or two, and it remains fixed forever after. To locate the point of equivalent focus just measure from the front of the barrel to the face of the front lens and make a lead pencil mark on the outside of the barrel corresponding to the face of the lens, then do the same with the back lens, and a central point between the two marks will be the point of equivalent focus for that particular combination. A permanent file mark can then be made on the barrel—and there you are. The back focus would, of course, serve just as well if the rules were made for the back focus instead of the equivalent focus, since the back focus is merely the equivalent focus minus one-half the distance between the two combinations.

He Is Learning.

Prescott, Arkansas, received the Handbook and thinks it great. He says:

Thought I was a pretty good operator until I received the book, but quickly discovered I knew almost nothing, as compared with what I can and should know. The picture projected by my Power's Six A has a jump. Do either you or the Power Company sell a booklet explaining the Power Six intermittent movement? I guess you think I don't know much, but I am desirous of improving.

I will have the Power Company send you detailed illustrations of the Power's Six intermittent. You will find the intermittent fully explained in the Power's Six instructions of the Handbook, though I did not include an illustration of the movement itself, not believing it to be necessary. I cannot advise you as to the jump, without knowing just what kind of a jump it is. First be sure that the face of your intermittent sprocket is perfectly clean. A little gum or dirt on the face of the sprocket will make the film jump. If the jump occurrs regularly four times to each turn of the crank then it is due to (a) dirt on face of the intermittent sprocket; (b) intermittent sprocket not true; (c) intermittent sprocket shaft sprung. If the jump is irregular as to time it may be due to worn sprocket; worn intermittent sprocket teeth; worn intermittent shaft bushing; worn intermittent, or to the improper adjustment of the cross with relation to the cam. See instruction No. 39, page 281 of the Handbook. As to your present lack of knowledge, it is not surprising, being located as you are in a small town, but so long as you realize your lack, and are willing to study, there is hope that you will eventually become a really proficient operator.

An Old Timer.

George Le Saint Chas. Trajou, Vallejo, California, writes:

Brother McNair has just handed me a copy of your article for the department, the same dealing with our "Inquest Meeting." I think you are in error as to my not being posted on the increasing difficulties met by the producing companies, though it is a fact that I am not as well up to date in that respect as I could be. However, I was directly connected with the producing end from the time of the Lumiere Exhibition in Boston up to the time I came to California six years ago, and can verify the statement by E. E. Blake, who is now a representative of the Eastman Company and whose photograph, together with a partial auto-biography, appeared in the Moving Picture World, issue of April 25th. I think, however, I was active in the business prior to Mr. Blake's time. I well remember the time when 200 feet subjects were not only considered wonderful, but almost impossible. I have held, at one time or another, positions of almost every kind relating to the moving picture industry, from making the film stock to projecting the finished picture on the screen. I was also a student of photography in Paris, and immediately upon the inception of the motion picture I started a study of cinema photography, and on this subject today I think I am pretty well advanced.

Brother Trajou informs me that projection in Vallejo is superior to that of any city in California. He says he keeps right after the boys, and insists upon perfect work on the screens of the theaters in his city, though he also gives the men due credit for their ability to deliver the goods. For his benefit I will say that it would be extremely difficult for any one not in constant touch with the producing end to understand the rapidly increasing difficulties the producer is faced with, but it is hardly the thing to take that matter up in detail in the Projection Department.

An A. C. Problem.

A. C. Stewart, Waitsburg, Wasbington, writes:

I have studied an a.c. phenomenon for years, but have never been able to solve the puzzle to my own satisfaction. When the amperage is increased the a.c. arc has a tendency to sputter, dance and jump around, much the same as a candle would when placed in draughts coming from various directions. This will sometimes pass away in from five to ten minutes, and the arc will settle down; also, at other times, the trouble will continue indefinitely, making it necessary to keep the carbons almost frozen. This trouble has continued regardless of the make of transformer. I have used both straight and auto; also with rheostats. It seems to be worse after cutting off the wires and cleaning the connections. I never use more than 40 amperes. The book on electricity by Swoope, and the one on motors by Burns, are both excellent. They are not only comprehensive, but are written in such simple language that a man with no previous knowledge of electricity would have no trouble in absorbing the information therein contained. Do you think the blowing out effect on the arc could be caused by an induced current in the lamp house—a sort of magnetic blow-out?

No, I do not. But I have known of cases where an a.c. arc was seriously affected by considerable surplus of lamp leads coiled inside the lamp house near the arc. It has been quite some time since I have handled a.c., and I would prefer to turn this question over to the department fans, since my memory on the effect named is a little hazy, though I used alternating current for almost two years. I wonder what kinds of carbons brother Stewart has used?

A New Condenser Proposition.

W. C. Taylor, Toronto, Canada, writes:

I see in the World of April 25th, page 595, that the Minneapolis Laemmle Film Service offers for sale three different sets of condensing lenses, viz: the plano-convex, good; the meniscus-convex, better; and the meniscus bi-convex, best. I am naturally dependent for solid advice on those of wider experience. I do not mind spending some dollars to get the best article, since I want to make a reputation for myself and to deserve that reputation. I would therefore like your advice as to purchasing the meniscus bi-convex in preference to the plano-convex lens.

The Minneapolis Film Service manager has forwarded to this department three sets of condensing lenses. I am just having these lenses tested, and the first report is that the plano-bi-convex combination has added very materially to the results in the Post Office Theater, which has, for a long time, had the reputation of putting on practically perfect projection. I do not want to pass finally on this matter until these lenses have been tested in at least three theaters, but I believe they are going to make good. I would suggest, however, that a rear lens of a costly combination of this kind ought only to be used in conjunction with the lens holder made by John D. Elbert, of San Francisco, or a similar lens holder, since one cannot afford to be breaking two dollar lenses every day, or every week, or at all for that matter. I have written the Laemmle Film Service suggesting that they make arrangements either with John D. Elbert, or some other manufacturer to supply a holder for the rear lens of the combination. I hope, and I believe that I will soon be able to give these lenses the hearty endorsement of this department.

Gas Illuminant.

A. C. Miller, College Station, Texas, says:

Please inform me, by mail, as to machines which do not require electricity as a source of light, and kindly refer me to firms who handle this machine.

The only practical source of light, other than electricity, is gas, and you can secure practical gas making outfits, which can be used with any projector, from the Enterprise Optical Company, West Randolph Street, Chicago, Ill., and the Thomas A. Edison Company, Orange, N. J. Write both parties for particulars. Letters to the department editor answered by mail only where a minimum fee of $1.00 is enclosed, though a carbon copy of the department reply is sent on receipt of 4 cents.

Year and a Half as Helper.

Chicago, Illinois, sends 25 cents for the questions and says:

Am running a combination of Motiograph No. 1A with a dissolving attachment and a Power's Five, with a lamp which is approved by the city, though I never knew the name of it. I have a little trouble once in a while, and will send for the Handbook soon. I worked as helper a year and a half, and am not at all sorry I did. You may tell the helper that it requires that length of time to learn to turn the crank. This is just a letter introducing myself to our department. I will write more at length later.

Chicago is absolutely right when he says that a year and a half spent as helper is time well expended. I spent pretty nearly five years learning my trade as locomotive engineer, and thought nothing of it; some men fire for as much as eight or nine years. Yet, strange as it may seem, thousands of men think they ought to learn moving picture operating, which combines a knowledge of optics, electrics, and mechanics, in from two to three weeks. Well, it cannot be did; not by several long, large acrobatic jumps.

New Brunswick Comes Across.

On page 1679, March 28th issue, we published a short letter from St. John, New Brunswick, in which the statement was made that the projection equipment consisted of two Simplex machines, current for which was supplied by Westinghouse motor generator set, the motor being a 50 h.p. induction, taking 2200 volt supply. The generator is a 35 k.w. three wire, the neutral being connected to two equalizing coils which are connected to four collector rings on the shaft of the generator. I said I would like to have a full explanation of that generator connection, illustrated by sketch, and the brother has kindly accommodated us as follows:

Regarding your request for diagram of connection I attach the same hereto, and trust the sketch is plain enough to be readily understood. The drawing could have been neater, but this is my first attempt, therefore you must not expect too much. The shaft of the generator is extended about one foot beyond the bearing at the commutator end, and on this extension are placed four collector rings, as shown at Fig. 2. Of course, the rings are insulated from each other and from the shaft. The brush holders for the collector rings are mounted on the frame of the machine. Four equi-distant taps are made in the armature coils, and each pair of taps, diametrically opposite each other, are taken through a groove in the shaft and connected to collector rings A and B, Fig. 2. The other pair are connected to collector rings C and D, Fig. 2. The current is collected from rings A and B, and D and C, and passes through the equalizing coils, which are just ordinary choke coils, immersed in oil, and thence back to the armature coils. The middle points of the coils, shown in Fig. 3, are tapped to the neutral wire of the system, as shown. Perhaps it is well to state here that the wires connecting the collector rings and equalizing coils must be of low resistance and short, as the unbalanced current flows along these wires, and if it encounters much resistance other than designed by the manufacturer, it will lower the voltage a little on the heavily loaded side. As will be seen by the drawing this is an interpole generator; the interpoles are to insure perfect commutation at very high speed and overloads, as you know high speed, and heavy overloads will cause sparking at the brushes. This is caused by the armature currents disturbing the main field to such an extent that the coils being commutated under the brushes are not in a magnetic field of proper direction and strength. In most generators this can be remedied by altering the position of the brushes, but with the interpole (the interpoles are placed between the main poles) this is not practical. The brushes on such generators are set at their neutral point when the machine is tested at the factory, and are clamped permanently in that position, which must not be altered. The winding of the interpoles is in series with the armature (Fig. 1) so that the strength of the interpole, or corrective field is in proportion to the load. As will be seen by the drawing this outfit necessitates the use of two ammeters, one for each outside leg. These ammeters are of the shunt type in which an indirect reading of the number of amperes is made by the drop in voltage. The reason for this installation was due to the fact that the rate for lighting was very high, and we could not get any reduction from the light company, but as we could get a power rate cheaper we figured we could save money, and we have done so. The losses may be about 40 per cent. for both machines varying, of course, with the load. In the afternoon we use no outside lights or the loss would be considerably higher than it is. The machine is a 50 h.p., 2,200 volt induction motor, pulling a 35 k.w. generator direct connected, the voltage of the generator being 250 volts and 125. I should have said that the balance coils will take care of 25 per cent. over balance, but I have run it with 50 per cent. over balance, and everything worked fine. As you will readily see the system is never balanced. At first we had a great deal of trouble, as when burning one arc the voltage would run up and when burning the other (one at a time) the voltage would go down below what it was on the other side. I investigated, and found that the windings of the generator were not balanced. The series of the generator was on one side of the armature, and the interpoles on the other instead of being split up as per Fig. 1 of the diagram. This caused the machine to run as a compound with one arc, and a shunt with the other, with the above result. I have now made the change, however, and everything runs perfectly.

This is a little bit complicated and I imagine it will be a poser for many of the boys. However, I have given it space, because I am sure we have quite a number of men who can follow the thing through, and dope it out. But I do not envy you your job of woking with 2200 volts. If you ever get a good jolt of that I fear, brother, there will be another angel in Paradise—or wherever moving picture men are supposed to go.

Some High Class Comedy.

Through the courtesy of Mr. H. S. Wyncoop, chief engineer of the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity of the City of New York, we are provided with a few answers made by applicants for operator's license. These answers were made in the course of the regular examination. Qustions relating to resistance brought forth the following highly edifying replies:

"The rheostat is used to put heat in the arc."

"The rheostat is used to heat the cashier's booth."

"The rheostat reduces the amperes from 50 to 25."

"The rheostat is used to protect the house line so that the current will not come in in jumps."

"A step-up rheostat has an effect on the voltage, but a step-down rheostat has none."

"A rheostat is made of crooked wire; if the crook was not in the wire the rheostat would not work."

"A rheostat takes up the heat that would otherwise melt the fuses."

"There is more resistance in the rheostat than in a 16 c.p. incandescent lamp."

"An open circuit in the rheostat would blow the operating room fuses."

"Would connect two rheostats in multiple on 220 volts in order to get 110 volts at the arc."

"Two rheostats in series give more volts and less amperage than one rheostat."

"On No. 6 B. & S. wire, 25 amperes go to the arc and 25 to the rheostat, making 50 amperes at the wall switch."

"On 110 volts, 50 volts go to the arc, and the other 50 stop at the wall switch."

With relation to the economizer the following were some of the real bright replies:

"The economizer is used to raise the voltage from 110 to 220."

"It makes no difference in the secondary circuit of the economizer whether the primary be connected to 110 or 220 volts."

"The coils of the economizer are made of rubber-covered German silver wire."

"The economizer can be used on d. c."

"Induction is put into the economizer in the factory. It is put in between the iron plates."

Questions on wiring brought forth some of the following bon mots:

"It would not be proper to connect to a No. 2 wire."

"I would not dare use a No. 0 wire."

"If he connected to a No. 10 wire he would not have enough amperes and 'things would blow'."

"Must have wires as large as the capacity of the meter."

"On Edison three-wire system the voltage depends on the size of the wires."

"I could not test for a ground because I am on the twenty-third floor."

"If the switch is too strong the fuses might blow the latter."

"Direct current flows in one direction; a. c. changes several times a day. It changes on you suddenly."

"Direct current has amperes and a. c. has circles. Must have 60 circles for an arc lamp."

"For one night show would connect to a 10 ampere panel board switch."

One attempted to gauge wire over the insulation.

"Alternating current is heavier and has more alternations than d. c."

"Would change the polarity of the lamp by changing the carbons."

"In case of fire would notify the Fire Department by mail." (Whoops my dear! There should be steps there.—Ed.)

"If the fuses in the operating room blew the trouble would be in the dynamo."

One said he had 220 volts because his fuses were marked thus.

One said plug fuses were defective because he could not get a light by testing across the caps.

"If you get a light across the carbons with your test lamp it proves the lamps are not grounded."

"If a 220-volt test lamp did not light up bright on a 110-volt circuit there must be a loose connection."

"Could not use a test lamp because while the light was marked 110 volt, the socket was marked 250 volt."

One said he had to warm up the carbons before he could test for grounds.

All of which will no doubt help some. And yet many of these books write the editor of the department roasting the tar out of the examiners and claiming they have been unfairly treated; that the examiners are grafters, and all that sort of bunk. Some of you may think that it would be impossible that such utterly ridiculous answers could be made, but I assure you I, for myself, have heard some answers fully as absurd while visiting the examining room.

Concerning Carbons.

Joseph H. M. Smith, Fort Worth, Texas, contributes the following data concerning carbons, and while it is very likely not a thing which can be directly applied by the operator, still, I believe, it will at least add something to the present knowledge on a subject to which altogether too little attention has been paid, as I have already, upon several occasions, pointed out in this department. Brother Smith writes:

> Some time ago I promised that when I had finished the experiments I was at that time conducting I would make report on the matter to the projection department. The experiments, as you may remember, had to do with carbons. I could give you, in detail, the whole process of carbon making, but hardly think it would be of sufficient interest to warrant consuming so much valuable space. In the very beginning, however, let me advise brother operators that unless they very thoroughly understand chemicals and their action they had better not monkey with them unless there is a sufficient bank roll in hand to offset a doctor's bill.
>
> All carbons now in use contain more or less impurities. A pure carbon which will be capable of giving off a very steady, white, brilliant light may be obtained by placing ordinary carbons in cautic potash or soda (Na OH), melted and raised to a white heat. The carbons should be allowed to remain in the potash for fifteen minutes, or more, after which they must be washed in hot water, and placed in a porcelain or refractory earthen tube through which a current of chlorine (C L) is passed while the whole is maintained at a red heat for several hours. This process will change many of the impurities into volatile chlorides, in which form they will be driven off. Carbons undergoing the above treatment will not only produce a very white light, but more intense, and one which will have less ultra violet rays, as well as produce something like 25 per cent. more illumination for a given current than that produced by ordinary carbons. There is, or was, an artificial carbon on the market several years ago, the same being patented by Mr. M. Carre, which was made of powdered coke, calcined lamp black and syrup, the latter formed of about twelve parts gum, and thirty parts of cane sugar. This carbon gave a very rich light, but they are not on the American market at the present time. Here are four important facts: We know that the arc light from very pure carbons is very rich in red and violet, as compared with the light of the north sky. The red which the arc contains can be toned down and brought into accord with daylight. First, by diluting a solution of copper sulphate ($Cu\ SO_4\ 5\ H_2O$ —commonly called blue stone) which is capable of toning the red down to a yellow green and placing the proper tint of blue, thus giving the same effect as daylight. Second, by using potash ($K_2\ CO_3$) and soda you can pull a much longer arc without the hissing sound so peculiar to a.c., and thus combine the silicates which are usually present, causing them to fuse into clear vitreous and often colorless globules just outside of the arc proper, which increases the illuminating power in a ratio of 1.23 to 1; third, that fine magnesia and strontium increase the light in proportion of 1.40 to 1, and incidentally color it variously; fourth, that iron and antimony enhance the illuminating effect to 1.60 and even to 1.70; fifth, that boracic acid ($H_3\ BO_3$) forms a covering which excludes the material from the oxygen and the air, thus increasing the durability of carbons materially, though without augmenting the light power. I have tried many experiments with carbons containing borate, phosphate and silicate of tinre, pure precipitated silex, borate of magnesia, magnesia, aluminum and silicate of aluminum so as to give a 5 per cent. oxide after backing off the carbons. Although the light is about double that obtained from ordinary carbons, in some cases the flame, a vapor resulting from the use of carbons prepared in this manner, is, aside from the very dangerous character of the fumes, a great obstacle to their practical introduction at this time, but the manufacturers could give us a carbon which is very much superior to anything we have—a carbon which would give greater illumination and last longer. But so long as they can continue to sell us the inferior article they are not going to do much to improve them, you can bet a few sheckles on that.

I do not feel at all competent to make intelligent comment on this matter. I am not a chemist. I am, however, referring brother Smith's letter to one of the carbon manufacturers and asking them to look into the matter with a possible view of experimenting along the lines suggested. There is unquestionably room for large improvement in projection carbons. I have thought that for a long time, and I still think it just as strongly as ever.

To Operator Motorcycle Owners.

While this is a little out of line of the projection department work, still I feel I can do the hundreds of operator motorcycle owners a very distinct favor, and I am going to. As you know I have joined the motorcycle bug crowd. As you also know, a motorcycle rides much better with a tandem passenger, but the average tandem is a pretty bumpy proposition for the aforesaid passenger especially if he or she happens to be a light weight. I have been experimenting with tandems, and I have found pretty nearly all of them to fall in two classifications, viz: (a) Bad. (b) Worse. But at last I have found one which certainly is all its name declares it to be, and that is a dream. I refer to the "Dream Tandem" made by the Stoll Mfg. Company, 33rd and Walnut Streets, Denver, Colorado. It is easy to attach and detach, and it rides like a cradle. I most heartily recommend this particular attachment to all my motorcycle operator friends. It is a little expensive, but it is well worth the money.

A Motor Rewinder.

Sidney Fletcher, manager Fletcher Amusement Company, Memphis, Texas, sends sketch of his motor rewinder. It is very simple. The motor is belted to a pulley on the empty reel and a tension shoe operates on the pulley attached to the spindle of the loaded reel. Friend Fletcher establishes a fulcrum a few inches from the pulley and lays a level across it, with one end bearing on the friction pulley, and the other held down to the bench by a tension spring. The device is quite simple and effective.

New Lens Table.

The Precision Machine Company, New York City, per J. E. Robin, sales manager, writes:

> We are mailing you a copy of a lens table which this company just compiled. One copy of same has been mailed to each of our dealers and to every operators' union. We are of the opinion that its use will lessen probabilities of errors in calculating lenses. The table may be relied upon for accuracy for aperture plates which are .9625 of an inch in width and having a height equal to 75 per cent. of the width.

In the past I have been obliged to discourage the use of tables of this kind due to the fact that aperture plates varied in width, and varied considerably, too. Now, however, the leading manufacturers have adopted a standard aperture width, as per above measurement, and, assuming the table to be free from error, there is no reason why it should not give just as good, or even better, results than figuring the lenses would give. The Precision Machine Company is to be complimented on the compilation of such an extensive table. Altogether there are 2,622 picture sizes given, covering motion picture lenses from 2 inches e.f. to 9 nches e.f., and stereopticon lenses from 8 inches to 16 inches e.f. Also there is some valuable data on the bottom of the sheet which in itself is something like 3½ feet long by about 2 feet wide. But the picture of the rear lens combination to the left at the bottom, is wrong, the position of the two lenses forming the factor being reversed.

Inadequate Data.

Thomas Murphy, Wilmington, Ohio, writes:

> I am putting a Power's Six A lamp on a Simplex machine, and cannot get my light focused right on the film. There is a blue spot in the center. If I move carbons or lamp back I will have brown corners. It seems as though my lamp was too close to the head now, and I cannot get the light centered right on the film unless it is very close. Please advise.

You say you are putting a Six A lamp on a Simplex machine. What am I supposed to make out of that statement? Do you mean a Six A lamp house and lamp, or are you putting a Six A lamp in a Simplex lamp house? What kind of a combination have you anyway? Also what focal length condensers are you using? If you have a copy of the Handbook, or have read this department consistently, you should be able to measure them, if you do not already know their focal length. Very likely you have condensers of too short focal length, but then again it is possible that you have put a Six A lamp in a Simplex lamp house, and that you cannot properly adjust the lamp with relation to the condensers; that is to say, the lamp won't go up close enough to the lens. I cannot offer you intelligent advice, unless you send me complete data. There is no harm done if you send too much data, but if you do not send enough I can do very little for you.

A New Show for Fort Worth.

Joseph H. M. Smith, Fort Worth, Texas, writes:

> A large new theater, 1500 seating capacity, is being erected in Fort Worth, the same to have all modern improvements. The operating room will be large, and roomy with at least a 10 foot ceiling in which there will be a 24 inch vent. Just outside of the operating room will be a toilet, and a wash-room in which to clean up after the day's run. In this there will be a closet in which to hang one's good clothes, towel service, etc. Have you anything down in Manhattan like that? It will be a real job for some operator. This kind of manager encourages good work, and it will be just three reels too and no more.

No comment necessary except to say that we need more managers of this type.

The Questions Endorsed.

The editor of this department recently addressed a letter to the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity of New York City, which department has charge of the licensing of operators. In this letter attention was called to the questions now being run in the projection department. The engineers were requested to look the matter over, and express their opinions as to the value of that kind of work. I am now in receipt of the following from H. S. Wyncoop, electrical engineer, in charge of Division of Electrical Inspection:

> Our engineers have read your communication of May 5th attentively, and gladly endorse the thought, since anything which will broaden the technical knowledge of moving picture machine operators, and therefore increase their efficiency should receive the hearty support of this department.

Operators Are you perfectly satisfied with the results you get on the screen?

The new second edition of the

MOTION PICTURE HANDBOOK FOR MANAGERS

420 Pages Illustrated AND OPERATORS $2.50 Each Postage Paid

By F. H. Richardson

will be the standard textbook on the subject for many years.

Address all orders and remittances to

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

Comments on the Films

Licensed

WITH HIS HANDS (Edison), June 2.—Marc McDermott, lead in "The Man Who Disappeared" series, is called upon to do many thrilling things in this fifth picture. Most of the scenes show structural steel workers picking their way over scaffolding at the top of an uncompleted skyscraper. A struggle in which McDermott is thrown from the top of the building is admirably done and will compel interest on any program.

AN ANGEL UNAWARES (Essanay), June 2.—Miss Ruth Stonehouse does particularly effective work in this well told story of a woman's great sacrifice. Miss Guerda Holmes and Richard C. Travers are acceptable in the other principal roles.

SUMMER LOVE (Lubin), June 2.—A mildly interesting comedy which is commendable because of its quiet and natural action. There is nothing new in the plot. The photography could have been improved upon.

A BREWERYTOWN ROMANCE (Lubin), June 2.—There is nothing to praise and much in the way of detail to condemn in this alleged comedy on the same reel with "Summer Love." One of the funny (?) things offered is a chase in which the principal comedian shows great fear of losing his trousers—incidentally, he shows considerable shirt-tail.

THE SHEEP RUNNERS (Selig), June 2.—Typically western scenes in which a herd made up of thousands of sheep is the center of interest will compel attention. The ill feeling which has existed for years between cattlemen and sheepmen provides the keynote for the dramatic plot.

PETER LOVES WORK (Melies), June 2.—Pictures of beds "making themselves," shoestrings and neckties "tieing themselves," etc., are always interesting as represented in animated photography. An acceptable comedy plot has been devised for the purpose of giving continuity to the several wonder provoking demonstrations of "stop work."

AN UNFORTUNATE IDEA—June 2.—Tiny Tim's tactless use of remarks his father and mother have made about some of their friends as copy to show the several friends his ability as a penman creates genuinely amusing situations. On same reel with "Peter Loves Work."

PATHE WEEKLY, NO. 39 (Pathe), June 3.—News items of more than ordinary interest are illustrated in the Pathe Weekly for the current week. Pictures of the prize winning babies at the recent show in New York City are especially well chosen.

BY PARCEL POST (Edison), June 3.—Pleasing little comedy of sentiment in which Andy pays off the mortgage and saves his widowed mother's house. Slight and not very new, it wisely chooses those things only that lend themselves to pleasing reflections and to an escape from worry. Harry G. Bates wrote the script which Charles France produced. The acting and staging are pleasing.

BEANS (Essanay), June 3.—She thinks he loves her for her baked beans and not for herself and then her officious aunt comes. It is too much. She leaves home and gets a job in a city restaurant where, later, her father and her lover, trying to trace her, have the good fortune to taste some beans. Since none other could cook such it must be she. They find her in the kitchen. All this is pictured on the screen with much else that is human and it is done in a lively, amusing manner that makes a desirable offering in every way.

THE RUMMAGE SALE (Selig), June 3.—Maibelle Heikes Justice usually, not always, puts into her scripts a touch of something human and distinctly new. She is one of the kind that seems to have seen with open eyes or listened with open ears and, because she is endowed with lively fancy, seems to be giving away open secrets. This offering from her pen has something about it that makes it as interesting in part as gossip. The best writers always seem to overhear more than make-up. It is a pleasing picture, delicately handling an incident that could have been easily made unconvincing. Edward LeSaint produced it. Lillian Hayward and William Hutchinson have the leads. A pleasing offering.

WANTED—A HOUSE (Vitagraph) June 3.—Farce comedy with rough, broad humor with old things like the wrong connection in the cellar that makes water come out of the gas jets in the parlor and gas come from the bathtub. This is still funny and made laughter; but it is the best thing in it. The writer is Charles Brown and Lee Beggs produced it.

THE IDIOT (Biograph), June 4.—This story suffers from a sequence of unpleasant situations—the doctor's refusal to treat a child, the child's death, the bereaved father's desire for revenge, the case of idiocy, the death from poisoned whiskey, the operation, etc. This is splendidly photographed and well acted, but the motive is such that it leaves a bad impression with the observer.

A GOOD EXCUSE (Melies), June 4.—A half-reel in which husband and wife feign illness to get out of entertaining their cousins at dinner. The relatives come anyway and the situations are delicately pleasing. An artistic handling of a slight plot.

THEIR FIRST QUARREL (Melies), June 4.—A pleasing skit, on same reel with above. The quarreling parents tear their child in two, but the child turns out to be a dummy. Slight, but amusing.

SOPHIE PULLS A GOOD ONE (Essanay), June 4.—Sophie buys out a local dentist in Snakeville, pulls teeth for all the cowboys and leaves hurriedly on the stage with their money. A Western comedy of about average interest.

A FALSE MOVE (Vitagraph), June 4.—A little comedy number in which the husband enters the home of the old maids to take them some presents in a laundry bag. He upsets the milk and is mistaken for a burglar; later it develops that he has the wrong bag after all. A slight plot, well pictured and gently amusing.

THE MAID FROM SWEDEN (Vitagraph), June 5.—There is very little that is new or truly funny (unless the fat cook's dance above while the plaster falls in the room below is funny) in this farce. It will please those who have seen very few or no pictures; but here on Broadway it made hardly any laughter while we watched it. There is clever acting in it and none will deny that the ending joke gets over, is really funny. Jane Lennox is the author and is was produced by Lee Beggs.

WILLIE'S HAIRCUT (Selig), June 5.—There is good, new fun in this picture of the wiles of kids and there's sympathy for Willie, who loses his raven curls and is much better off without them. The script seems to be slight in texture, with one excellently brought out, amusing situation, but the producer and his players have added much that will waken laughter and understanding. A very fair offering.

HIS FIRST RIDE (Selig), June 5.—He had too plainly ridden many times to get the skillful tumbles that he puts over. It's a vaudeville sketch done out on the street and amusing in its own way.

REAPING THE WHIRLWIND (Kalem), June 5.—The "Whirlwind" is a country paper whose editor (John Brennan) in trouble, meets an old theatrical friend (Ruth Roland), who proves a great help to him as a subscription getter, etc. This precious pair reap the whirlwind when they try to get away to Broadway with the "spon" and land in the "coop." Ruth finds a way even out of prison; but John leaves his coat with the "dough" hanging in his cell. There is still fun in it and it is done in a way that gets over, so it can be commended as a good offering.

A TRIP TO MT. LOWE (Kalem), June 5.—On the same reel, this scenic is interesting, although the photography is rather obscure at times. It has been pictured by Kalem before and adds very little to the value of the offering.

BLOTTED OUT (Lubin), June 5.—A fairly good commercial offering giving a story of Mexico with one or two new incidents on the old plot in which the heroine rescues her lover, condemned to die for the military crime of his superior. The old, old theatrical gestures of love-making, of parting, of receiving or giving a message, of meeting a superior officer are apt to be anything but life-like and they are dreary to all who see many pictures. This offering suffers a little from some of these. The photography is clear and commendable. The author is W. M. Ritchey and the director is Tom Forman.

THE HOUR OF DANGER (Kalem), June 6.—A picture of sentiment that makes a fair offering without coming up to the standard of the Kalem better pictures. The story will hold attention, but never really convinces and doesn't effect us deeply. The photography is good; the acting only fair.

THE COUNTERFEITERS (Edison), June 6.—A yarn of the real kind doesn't need to be convincing; but may run all the way from a regular whopper to a fairly improbable account, such, for example, as this picture tells. The difference between a yarn and a dreary, unconvincing lie about life is that the latter passes itself off for truth. Edward Townsend wrote this yarn that gives good entertainment and Preston Kendall put it in. It is well acted and clearly photographed.

CAPTAIN KID, THE BOLD (Biograph), June 6.—A very amusing little burlesque skit that is sure to please audiences and make them laugh. It is brisk, cleverly acted and staged to make the most of it.

IN THE NICK OF TIME (Biograph), June 6.—A lively burlesque that though not strictly new is fresh enough to make laughter and goes well with the offering that shares the reel with it. Together they are commendable as a sure program brightener.

BRONCHO BILLY'S DUTY (Essanay), June 6.—A picture drama in which Mr. Anderson crosses a broad chasm from his usual depiction of Western desperadoes to the role of a minister. The offering while interesting is not wholly convincing.

ROSE O' MY HEART (Selig), June 6.—A conventional plot involving the lives of two families. The head of one serving a sentence in prison for a crime committed by a member of the other family, an office associate. It is but a replica of several other pictures along the same line. Considerable heart interest permeates through the several years it takes to develop the plot to a happy ending. It is well produced.

FIRE! FIRE! (Lubin), June 6.—This comedy split reel is on that with "The Female Cop." The plot, what there is of it, concerns a rube fire department. A stuttering man of all-work attempts to tell the chief to fire another man for kicking him, which causes a general ruction, and the calling out of the department. A rough and tumble picture.

THE FEMALE COP (Lubin), June 6.—On the same reel with "Fire! Fire!" and about of the same nature. She does all absurd thing imaginable. Not bad for a comedy of its kind.

TANGO AT TUCKERVILLE (Edison), June 8.—There is no real story in this picture written and produced by Charles Seay; it doesn't get anywhere. But a large cast of competent players do clever and amusing characterizations and keep it fairly entertaining.

HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL (Selig), June 8.—Timely and clearly photographed this topical is as interesting as it is valuable.

THE ETHICS OF THE PROFESSION (Biograph), June 8.—A doctor, feels it his duty, as a physician, to care for the man who, in eloping with his wife, has run his automobile over a cliff and been injured. The car is seen to take a sheer fall of some fifty feet and yet the wife escapes harm—such things really happen in life. We can't praise the story highly; it is commercial and not as a whole convincing and it is weakly acted at most times. The photography is clear.

EVE'S DAUGHTER (Vitagraph), June 8.—The plot is one of those typical theater schemes and, with numerous variations, has been used times without number. This is not a featherweight against it as fresh entertainment. But its scheme is artificial and has its being not from a desire in its author to tell a story, but to make a picture by imitating something else that is much better than it. Yet it gives a flashing glimpse of a pretty girl (Lillian Walker) posing for a statue in not too scant attire. It is not strongly acted, although Earle Williams, as the model's rich husband who knows nothing of her former occupation, does skillful, artistic work. Rella Young, the author, deserves little credit. Wilfred North, the director, has staged it commendably. It is clearly photographed.

WHOOF, WATCH WHIFFLES! (Pathe), June 8.—A thoroughly legitimate and engaging incident from child life is made the comedy basis in this half-reel release. Riotous laughter is not the object of the picture and it will accomplish its purpose by spreading quiet smiles over the faces of all who see it.

PICTURESQUE SCANDINAVIA (Pathe), June 8.—Subject matter of the highest grade and remarkable workmanship on the part of the producers, from the camera man down to the last man to handle the picture, combine to make this travel release a particularly fine one. On the same reel with "Whoof, Watch Whiffles!"

THE POISONS OF SERPENTS (Pathe), June 9.—Raymond L. Ditmars, curator of the New York Zoological Society, working before the Pathe cameras, has contributed one of the most interesting educational pictures turned out in a long while. The release shows how poisons are extracted from venomous reptiles for purposes of experimentation, and while the manner in which the reptiles are handled will send a chill down the spine of the average observer, there is a fascination in the picture which is almost uncanny.

RIVER TRAVEL IN INDO-CHINA (Pathe), June 9.—The dangerous and picturesque negotiation of rapids which seem impossible of navigation, with the aid of natives who know no fear of the water, is shown in this travel picture on the same reel with "The Poisons of Serpents." The picture is splendidly photographed.

Licensed Specials

TRAPPED BY WIRELESS (Kleine-Eclipse), June 2.—Although there are numerous slips in working it out, one is able to grasp the rather interesting story which has been made the excuse for the presentation of the many beautiful scenic effects and several spectacular bits of action which will make this two-reeler unusually acceptable. Pirates loot a pleasure yacht in the Mediterranean and are prevented from killing the owner's daughter only through a heroic life's sacrifice on the part of a one-time pirate chief who has fallen in love with the girl.

THE LAST WILL (Vitagraph), June 2.—This two-reeler telling a story of family discord and intrigue in the old English days is a decided disappointment. A strong characterization by Miss Anne Schaefer in the female heavy hole is the only bright light.

KISS ME GOOD NIGHT (Lubin), June 3.—In two parts, a rather distressing picture. We are not wholly certain whether it was intended to be a society drama, a farce comedy or a burlesque—it isn't distinctly any of these. There are good elements in the idea (the script is by Shannon Fife) to make a lively farce comedy; but if it was so intended the whole atmosphere is against it and surely all that senseless, brutal, rough work should have been left out and it should have been set in a more breezy atmosphere, as in a western country town. We have never seen Lottie Briscoe or Arthur Johnson to worse advantage than here. The characters as they put them over are truly ill-mannered to be interesting; there is nothing attractive in them; nor is there anything laughable in what they do. It is vulgar. Of the staging and camera work we have only praise. After reading the synopsis of the picture we feel that here, perhaps, is a case where the author deserved better treatment by the producing end.

THE CALL OF THE TRIBE (Kalem), June 3.—People watched this two-part offering pretty closely, on account of the story. Yet it is a story that has been told before, but not with this filling-in which gives it its new interest. Attention lags a little when we see the Indian who has graduated in the East falling in love with the daughter of a white physician; it seemed a bit theatrical and unreal because we have seen it so often. The real font of our close attention comes from the fact that the Indian has become a real doctor and we realize his chance of being a great medicine-man among his own people and his chance of a romance aside from this falling in love with a girl of the white race. So we believe the ending spoils it a bit. The acting, with Art Ortega as the hero, and with Mona Darkfeather, Big Moon, Eva Smith, etc., in the cast, is good. The photography is clear and acceptable.

A GIRL OF THE CAFES (Lubin), June 4.—A girl in league with a confidence man goes West to throw off the old life and marry a ranchman. The crook atmosphere is not very strong, and the story becomes more interesting in the Western scenes, when the confidence man follows the girl. The husband learns the truth and remains faithful to the girl. The photography is good in this and it makes quite an entretaining offering, though there are no particularly strong scenes in it.

PAULINE'S NECKLACE (Melies), June 4.—The trusted agent and his wife make away with a valuable pearl necklace, by hiding it in a brass bedpost. A clever detective, by the employment of a simple ruse, makes them divulge its whereabouts. The simple, straightforward development of this plot makes it gain a decided interest as the story progresses. It makes a first rate mystery yarn and is well handled by a competent cast. A good release.

WHEN THE MAN LEFT TOWN (Edison), June 5.—A comedy in two reels for the more advanced and intellectually wakeful type of spectator. It isn't subtle; on the other hand, it is rather obvious in its humor. But it is aimed at and for those who are interested in woman suffrage and was written by a mere man, Mark Swan. It will irritate both those who want female suffrage and those who don't want it. It will probably amuse both even while it irritates. C. Jay Williams has put it on and one finds a good many clever touches in it, both in the work of the players and in the scene making.

THE ELDER BROTHER (Essanay), June 5.—There is a long stretch of truly good film in this two-part offering, but the opening of the picture is a horrible example of sentimentality unconvincing to the point of silliness. How could such a cabaret dancer have a Bible on her table, right out? Then the way the doctor, elder brother of the weakling, meets the dancer and falls in love with her is crude enough for five years ago. Points of this kind have been handled many times naturally in recent offerings; there are plenty of good ways of establishing such a situation; but, here, the author was hurried or lazy and let it go at that. Only, those looking at it won't put themselves in his place nor make allowances. The heart of the picture is fine and the real story is made effective by the human acting of Francis X. Bushman and Bryant Washburn with the help of Gerda Holmes and John Cossar. The photography is good—clear and picturesque. But the staging is not always in keeping—the cabaret dancer's apartment, for example, how could she afford it?

TOO MANY HUSBANDS (Vitagraph), June 6.—A two-part special; it is funny, but it isn't all funny. It is "nursed" along with things that now and then are as trite as a duel, for example, arranged by an officious third party for two who have no quarrel. Then, not all of the characters get over, the human bloodhound is one that seems pretty thin. Yet there is much all through that makes laughter, is new and worth while. The sleuth's wonderful glass is one good thing; and the whole scheme offers many a fine chance for astonishing events that are very amusing. It is a good offering; but its author, Anthony E. Wills, who wrote "A Regiment of Two," has done much funnier work. Sidney Drew put it on and plays the leading role.

JUDGE DUNN'S DECISION (Selig), June 8.—Interesting release, a two-part subject, and it easily takes first place among the regular offerings of the licensed group to-day. The script is by Mrs. Owen Bronson and Edward Le Saint put it on. Both deserve much credit, as does the cast of very competent players who took the characters. The whole trend of the picture tends to make it a popular offering. It shows justice triumphant; it takes pity on a poor girl who has fallen once and wants to reform; it rebukes the idle, spendthrift rich, and broadly takes account of both upper and lower strata of society. Al W. Filson plays the judge convincingly. Eugenie Besserer and Lillian Hayward play his daughter and wife as clearly and commendably. Stella Razeto and Guy Oliver have important roles and do good work. The staging and photography are in keeping.

NINA OF THE THEATER (Kalem), June 8.—This two-part offering is the first of a prospective series to feature Alice Joyce. It tells a story of two true lovers separated by the lying work of a third party, a doctor, who then marries the heroine, a beautiful actress. This doctor as a character hampers the picture. He is not a convincing villain, but does at the close a sensational and convincing enough death-fall over the banisters. This opens the way for the happy ending in which the actor and the actress can marry and be forever after, etc. It is a good vehicle for the beautiful leading woman, Alice Joyce, who is photographed in many lovely scenes, in which she is herself the thing of greatest beauty. It is a pretty picture rather than a deep or true one.

Independent

FOR THE SAKE OF KATE (Reliance), May 23.—"All the world loves a lover" and because there are two sets of very human lovers to provide the story for this two-reeler, a big percentage of the moving picture world will enjoy this late Reliance release. The story is one of the West and, introducing sheriffs, deputies, and a bandit, permits of plenty of lively action.

TANGO TROUBLES (Royal), June 6.—There is no doubt that this is a serviceable, commercial offering that most spectators will welcome; but there is nothing in it that is new, although most of it is still funny. It has a rough, popular taste that spectators are used to and many like. The spectator who has seen only a few pictures will have to laugh.

THE LAST DRINK OF WHISKEY (Komic), June 7.—Another helter-skelter farce of amusingly outrageous doings. It will compel laughter, draw it even out of a tightly corked audience. There is nothing wonderful about the picture; it is very much like others of the kind; but it has newly tried things and there is a good freshly thought-up scheme behind it with much that is truly funny in it. The acting is according to the best ideas for farces of this kind and it makes what is surely a desirable offering.

UNCLE SAM IN MEXICO (Victor), June 8.—This is a purely descriptive number, showing scenes in Mexico, particularly in the vicinity of Vera Cruz. This is a live series of views, though no actual fighting occurs. It gives a good idea of conditions in Mexico at present.

THE UNDERTOW (Powers), June 8.—A film story picturing the seamy side of life, with Jeanie MacPherson in the part of a girl of the slums. The gang leader follows her after she reforms and she kills him and drowns herself. The slum scenes in this are typical, but the story itself is not very strong.

OUR MUTUAL GIRL, NO. 21 (Reliance), June 8.—This series still keeps up its interesting story and, in this installment, has some of the best city street work we have seen anywhere. The very slums of the city, not a catch of them, but the whole tangle, seem to be laid before us. The gangsters and their work, the work of the "higher" kind of criminal, and a smack of police activities seem, in it, as natural as life. It is also clear that a scenario writer who knows what he wants and how to get it is behind the job; the incidents are novel, fresh and convincing. Photographically it is acceptable. A good offering.

NANCY'S HUSBAND (Beauty), June 9.—A farce comedy, pleasing, light and airy. It makes good use of beautiful gackgrounds and is well photographed. That its plot, or scheme, is old is not of great importance. There is enough in it that is fresh and it makes a pretty and acceptable time-killer. Margaretta Fisher, Harry Pollard and Gladys Kingsbury play it with good support.

SPARROW OF THE CIRCUS (American), June 10.—Pretty, sentimental story. Sparrow is a circus clown happy with his wife and little kid. But she takes the child and runs away with the ringmaster and he is left to make his jokes for the people in spite of a breaking heart. Later, in another city, the circus and the runaways meet. There's a melodramatic happy ending. People still like a good deal of this sort of stuff and this is a very fair commercial offering to please them. It is well acted, staged and clear in photography. The atmosphere is decidedly interesting.

THE COWBOY'S CHICKEN DINNER (Reliance), June 10.—How a ranch cook in fear for his life steals and cooks a $10,000 performing rooster to please his employer, who is dissatisfied with the food he has been getting, is made the basis for this single reel comedy. The story has provided many opportunities for original comedy business and the performers who tell it on the screen have not overlooked any of these.

THE MASKED RIDER (Powers), June 12.—In this number Edna Maison impersonates a famous masked dancer, whose identity Ray Gallagher has vowed to discover. It is a rather unique plot and as the scenes develop quite a pretty love story is unfolded.

AUNTIE'S MONEY BAG (Eclair), June 14.—An unusually clever child play, enacted entirely by juveniles. The costuming and action are full of interest and the story is one that will entertain. The children themselves are very attractive and capable. A good offering.

THE GIRL ACROSS THE HALL (Thanhouser), June 14.—The girl is a seamstress and the man across the hall is a ne'er-do-well, who is getting bitter. He is a widower with a little daughter and she has made friends with the seamstress. The ending is a matter of course. It is a commercial offering, the kind for which most people are quite willing to pay the admission price. Prettily staged, it will be counted as fair, but will not excite enthusiasm.

THE PURSUIT OF HATE (Rex), June 14.—A one-reel number by Lois Weber, in which the author plays the leading part. She falls in love with the husband of a woman who is something of a vixen. This story seemed rather mechanical in construction and ended weakly. It promised more than was realized.

THE SAND HILL LOVERS (Victor), June 15.—In this number Warren Kerrigan doubles as the good and bad brother. Some of the double exposure situations were notably good. The story is a Western one of about ordinary interest. Vera Sisson appears as the girl.

KIDS (Sterling), June 15.—A story featuring principally a group of children, wits love and jealousy to keep the plot in action. Some of the scenes are quite laughable and the motor boat chase toward the close was very good. This is entertaining.

LUCILLE LOVE, Series No. 10 (Gold Seal), June 16.—More of Lucille's highly-colored adventures in the power of the rascally Hugo. He treats her first cruelly and then tenderly, so that observers are beginning to think they will marry at the close of the series. The installment closes with Lucille's rescue from Hugo's clutches by a bandit, the scenes being laid at a Mexican ranch.

BOXES AND BOXERS (Crystal), June 16.—Vivian gives her rival admirers some boxing gloves and lets them fight it out. A slight plot of about average merit.

FOOLISH LOVERS (Crystal), June 16.—This, on same reel with above, is another slight offering. The lovers are reunited after a quarrel by a pretended automobile accident to Chester.

THE FATAL LETTER (Joker), June 17.—Max Asher goes on a hunting trip in this number, pretending he has left home to get away from the tobacco habit. Another woman comes between him and his wife and the principal action of the piece hinges on this situation. It is a fairly entertaining offering.

'CROSS THE MEXICAN LINE (Nestor), June 17.—A number featuring Wallace Reid and Dorothy Davenport. He is captured in Mexico and she follows to meet the same fate. The Mexican senora overcomes her jealousy and aids in their escape. The situations had but little feeling in them and seemed to lack conviction, though the atmosphere was good.

THE BRAND OF CAIN (Powers), June 19.—A Western drama with a wholly conventional situation worked up freshly and with a fair measure of effectiveness. The story is clear as far as the main drift goes; it has speedy riding, an unexpected denouement and enough snap to give it holding interest. The author and producer is George Giblyn and the leading woman, the ranch-owner's daughter, is Grace Maison. The photography is only fair.

SOPHIE OF THE FILMS, Series No. 3 (Nestor), June 19.—In this number the laundry girl who ventured into the movies is told to jump out of a burning house by the desperate manager, who wants to get rid of her. She knocks the house down. Later Eddie saves her from drowning. This makes good burlesque and is the funniest number of this series we have seen.

Independent Specials

THE ROSEBUSH OF MEMORIES (Reliance), June 6.—Pretty, poetic love story in two reels. There is no doubt that it will hold interest; but there is no punch of emotion in it; for it fails to convince strongly. The real estate man's part in the reconciliation is, for example, one of its weak points—its weakest. That the old gardener should take an interest in the quarrel, after his pleasant times with the newly married couple in the garden, is good and there are also many beautifully photographed pictures in it that will charm. Miriam Cooper with Courtenay Foote have the leading roles.

THE INTRUDER (Majestic), June 7.—Francilla Billington puts true, human emotion into this two-part picture of a miss-judged wife. The story is well managed and made the more effective by excellent photography and its setting in a beautiful dwelling, surrounded by a garden of roses and flowers of all kinds. The other characters, the husband (Jack Livingston) who wrongly suspects her of faithlessness, the masher who fools himself without reason (W. E. Lawrence) and the crook who breaks in (George Seigman) play their parts well in support, and the whole, written by Christie Cabinne, makes a pleasing and worthy offering.

THE OATH OF PIERRE (American), June 8.—A substantial two-part offering giving a story of red-blooded frontier people who are not hampered by doubts in their good and in their evil. It deals with a wrong done to a trusting mountain girl by a ruthless surveyor who chances to come to the valley and of the stern vengeance that her brother, Pierre, takes on the malefactor. This part of the story is raised to a higher plain by the fact, clearly shown, that the killing of the villain keeps him from continuing in his nefarious work of destruction and saves the happiness of another girl, his intended victim. The whole is effectively handled and well acted and makes a clear and deeply interesting story, freshly put on the screen, if not new. Good backgrounds help.

RIVALRY (Thanhouser), June 9.—The grand climax in the old reliable "Blue Jeans" in which a pretty girl is snatched from a horrible death just as she is about to shoot into the greedy saws at a lumber mill while strapped to a log on the carriage has been carefully dusted off for presentation in this two-reeler. The story in which the big scene is made to fit is not as clear as it ought to be, but the production has so many good points that it will prove acceptable on almost any program.

THE STIRRUP BROTHER (Eclair), June 3.—An adaptation of one of O. Henry's stories. It is a splendid drama. J. W. Johnston plays the foster-son. Both he and the man who plays the son do fine and consistent work throughout the two reels. The picture is well directed and acted. It will make a hit.

ENMESHED BY FATE (Victor), June 12.—This two-reel number unfolds quite an entertaining story of a conventional, built-up type. Irene marries Danvers as the result of a financial deal. Later she appeals to Kelp for assistance; the husband finds them together and is killed by an ex-convict named Jim. The hero is, of course, blamed for the crime, but afterward cleared. Irene Wallace made an attractive appearance as the heroine and handled some of the scenes very creditably indeed. The photography is generally good and the offering as a whole is a successful one of its kind.

THE BAITED TRAP (Imp), June 15.—A convincing picture of the manner in which white slave gangs work, written by Monte M. Katterjohn. King Baggott and Arline Pretty play the parts of Dennis and his sweetheart, Norah. At a crucial moment in the story some novel scenes are introduced showing the manner in which films are developed, dried and assembled. Then the interesting climax is shown. A strong story with a pleasing novelty feature.

THE HOUR OF RECKONING (Broncho), June 17.—There are incidents so widely different from each other in this two-reeler that it may well be expected to have an appeal for all classes. The story itself is intensely human, but it loses in the telling for the reason that there is a decided lack of continuity. The closing scenes, showing U. S. soldiers in a desperate battle with Indians, and the dramatic squaring of a "social triangle" story are so well done that earlier faults in the matter of direction may be forgiven.

IN THE SOUTHERN HILLS (Domino), June 18.—Many happenings of lively interest, all of them within the limits of human possibility, have been combined in this two-reeler in such an artistic manner that it is bound to please. A young minister who knows how to fight as well as how to preach is the hero of the yarn. There are moonshining incidents and a very realistic scene of a near-lynching.

A LAW UNTO HIMSELF (Rex), June 18.—It is hard to tell in this two-part picture whether the title applies to the man who steals the pretty wife of the Italian peasant, or to the Italian who, in America, finds and kills him. Hazel Buckam plays the woman; Robert Leonard the detective who, after the murder, tracks down the Italian (Lloyd Ingraham) who confesses to him and then dies not convincingly. The story isn't dramatic after the opening scenes and there is too little suspense. Perhaps to have made all its steps clear would have shown its outcome at once and destroyed all suspense; but the fact that much of it is blind—not as in the early scenes with mystery, but with confusion—also keeps suspense from it. It is well acted, has much humanity in lesser things that is charming, and its many artistic scenes are well photographed; but it is not a big offering.

THE VOICE AT THE TELEPHONE, Part 1 (Kay-Bee), June 19.—This two-reeler is the first half of a rapid fire dramatic picture made to be released in two installments. A father disowns a wayward son. Entering the home from which he has been driven surreptitiously to remove his belongings, the son is discovered just after his father has been seriously wounded in a fight with a burglar. A telephone girl at the city exchange has heard the voice of the father's assailant after the instrument has been knocked from the old man's hand as he is calling for help. The son is arrested for the assault and circumstances seem to convict him. There is no waste action in this first installment. Poor photography has marred it in one or two places.

THE VOICE AT THE TELEPHONE, Part 2 (Kay-Bee), June 26.—The concluding two reels of this special dramatic subject in two parts are made interesting with a fairly faithful reproduction of some of the methods which the police use in forcing confessions from people whom they suspect of crime—the "Third Degree," as it is called. The son, falsely accused, is freed when the telephone girl identifies the voice of the real criminal, who has also been arrested. In its entirety, "The Voice at the Telephone" is well worth while; the division into two parts has been skillfully made and those who see the first installment will have great curiosity to see the second.

THE ALARM (Keystone), May 28.—Keystone hasn't turned out anything funnier than this two-part farce in a long while, if ever. As usual, it is rough and tumble, helter-skelter; but the spirit of laughs is behind most of what goes on in it, especially of the second reel. As an offering to the public, it is first class, there can be no doubt at all of that. But it is so full that it would be hard to give a compressive account of it. Roscoe Arbuckle is the author and director. It's a scream.

BLACK NISSON, or THE HUMAN BEAST (Gaumont).—A three-reel offering full of lovely pictures mostly taken along some quiet stream in France. It is the perfect photography and the skillful background choosing rather than the story that makes this offering acceptable; for the story is weak in construction and is most unconvincing. One can see plainly that as an advertisement of a small, compact motor that can be carried in a satchel and attached to a boat at will, the picture is fine.

THE MILLION DOLLAR ROBBERY (Blache Features).—A four-reel sensational and in part humorous melodrama. The story has not been made convincing and depends upon the speed and sensational quality of its incidents to keep one from noticing the lack, at certain points, of true logic in its development. For example, why did the butler who was to "turn state's evidence" run away? The thief was in reality as proved by the denouement, the capitalist himself, walking in his sleep; but the jealous banker who loves the rich man's daughter manages to get the secretary suspected, his intention being to get him out of the way so that the road would be, so he hoped, clear for his love-making. The staging, the photography and the acting, for the most part, are of good quality. And there are acceptable touches of humor in the action.

THE MASTER OF THE WORLD (Film Releases of America).—A three-part melodrama of a type known as sensational. The best thing in it is undoubtedly its truly beautiful photography—it has some woodland scenes that rank with the best we have ever seen. The story deals with a man who has discovered how to make gold on a large scale. It is padded with many vaudeville scenes that are rather cheap looking and include an Egyptian dance. There is little convincing realism in it and little feeling of romance. The acting is not always strong. Yet the staging is excellent and this is the one feature that redeems it and makes it a fairly entertaining offering.

THE RENEGADE'S SISTER (Miller 101 Ranch).—A three-part offering opening with a fine picture of a great cattle ranch and its herd. The scene then shifts to the village barroom and we find that a white man, bar owner, has recently raided an Indian settlement and stolen horses from it. Word is brought that the tribe has found him out and is "after him." The climax is a fight around a lonely cabin in which the man has taken refuge. The cabin is owned by his sister and her husband. The two later are rescued after the villain is shot and the close is happy. There are interesting scenes and the picture was taken along a shallow stream through which horses many times are shown splashing up silver waters. It is an offering that will be watched with interest, but not with great enthusiasm.

THE MEDICINE BAG (Miller 101 Ranch).—A very good Indian picture in three parts. It is well made from a dramatic standpoint: has the wide plains with the typical sod hut of the first settlers and tells a thoroughly romantic story. Not a great picture, it is surely a popular offering and destined, we feel certain, to win the approval and applause of spectators. The photography and general staging is excellent and the acting fair.

THE LUST OF REDMEN (Albuquerque).—A picture in four reels that shows the Indian as he really is. We have seen no other offering that was closely like it and do not feel any too certain as to how it will go with the general spectator. It is much better than the average Indian picure; but is brutal and may offend very sensitive folks. There have been others pictures of Indian brutality; but here, although Uncle Sam's soldiers come to the rescue in time to save husband and wife, these have lost everything and almost their faith in God. The picture gives four reels without a touch of romance—there was none to give. The author is Dot Farley who plays the leading woman's role well. The director is G. P. Hamilton. The acting is fair although the leading man is a bit stagey and unconvincing. The photography is clear.

FINE LOBBY DISPLAY FOR "CABIRIA."

The Kraus Manufacturing Company, of 14 East Seventeenth Street, this city, is the maker of the notable lobby display for "Cabiria" at the Knickerbocker Theater. From still prints 5 x 7 inches in size the Kraus Company in just three days produced seventeen pictures that are creating a lot of attention from pedestrians on Broadway. Eleven of these are 22 x 28, four are 22 x 33, and two are 53 x 55. The Kraus Company has employed its own process of bromide enlargements and hand water-coloring. The Seventeenth street concern has given a lot of attention to work of this description, and has turned out many orders for prominent firms. The increasing demand for this quality of lobby display is but another indication of the widening importance of the motion picture as an amusement factor.

LIFE-PHOTO CORPORATION IN NEW OFFICES.

The Life-Photo Film Corporation is removing its managerial and executive offices from 102 West 101st Street to the Candler Building at West 42nd Street.

The business of the company has increased to such an extent within the past six months that they have outgrown their present quarters. The studio and laboratory will remain at the present address, the laboratory in charge of Leonard Abrahams, the studio in charge of Howard Tobias.

Messrs. Bernard Loewenthal and Jesse J. Goldberg will devote their time at the offices in the Candler Building. Mr. Roskam, upon his return from Europe, will give his personal attention to the technical end of the producing business.

Convention and Exposition of the International Association.

(Continued from page 1664)

wherever censorship has been established it has had the effect of paralyzing men's minds—there is the fear on their part that the things they produce will be killed. Official interference in art or the drama has always resulted in the production of an art expression which in the end was merely the expression of the official board which passed upon it. I think that would be a grievous thing in America. I think it is quite possible that if the Federal Government enters this field we will see the motion picture suffer severely as an agent of civilization.

"I believe as a general idea that the people have a right to be protected from the twentieth man, but I would have the picture as free as possible, that it may bring to the light the literature of four thousand years. It is because I want this agency to be free, as it has been in the past, that personally I am opposed to the entrance of the Federal Government to this field of activity."

In a short general discussion following Mr. Howe's address, Mr. Prentiss, of Minnesota, declared that the exhibitor is anxious to help out the National Board in producing the most desirable class of pictures. Mr. Smith, of Schenectady, cited an instance where he was compelled to cut from a film an objectionable scene. He called up the exchange to learn if he should replace the excised part and was informed that upon investigation it was discovered the elimination had been ordered by the board originally, but had been overlooked. In the meantime the picture had been shown in fourteen theaters.

Advisory Secretary Cocks Explains Board's Work.

Orrin G. Cocks, advisory secretary of the National Board, was the next speaker. "We are working on from 150 to 185 pictures a week," said Mr. Cocks. "The business is growing very rapidly. We are giving all the wisdom we can possibly gather to the consideration of every picture. We are doing it, we believe, in a fair, disinterested sort of way. I believe the judgment of you men will be that we have been fair, disinterested and skilled. We have been trying to favor no one section or class or group.

"In this country there are a whole lot of professional uplifters who think the only way of accomplishing something is to smash something on the head, who don't believe in getting together and talking things over in a friendly way. The exhibitor knows that he has the public welfare of his community in his hand. You men know that you stand for the things that are worth while in your community. Every one of you men is doing a certain type of censorship in your community, perhaps even better than the National Board is doing. You are doing a bigger work than the National Board can possibly do for a hundred million people.

"The censoring in Detroit is done by the exhibitors, and they are doing it to the satisfaction of the community. In Milwaukee they worked out a plan. That was for the exhibitors, the state university and various organizations in town working with the mayor and the public to hold down pictures that are indecent. That is the Milwaukee plan. It is spreading to a number of cities throughout the country, so that a group of people who feel that the standard of the National Board is not satisfactory to a locality can work for the elimination of the very few pictures that get by. I wish some plan might be worked out for the control of these wildcat pictures put out by men who are animated by but one motive—and that is to get the shekels in. I don't think the National Board can control these men who carry pictures around under their arms. You men control these situations and you can help very decidedly. Why isn't it possible where there is only one man in a community who persistently and regularly does those things he ought not to do—why can't you men insist that he abide by certain standards?

"I believe the National Board can do more than a group of five men in Washington with a lot of paid assistants. The National Board has no men with paid assistants with a budget amounting to a hundred thousand dollars—and that you men are going to pay. The proposed law means that these five men are going to have a great deal of leeway; and every manufacturer who believes to be right a picture they censor as wrong is going to fight, is going to carry the matter to the highest court, and is going to be tangled up continually in legal questions. We are going to fight this thing with all the brains, all the skill and all the knowledge we have, and in the city, state and nation.

"I know that the board is not covering 100 per cent. of the pictures. We are covering 95 or 96 per cent. If you men will help we can control 100 per cent. You have got to get together. You have got to have plans. You have got to see that the thing is worked out right. We are going to expect you men to do your share as we do our share, as the manufacturers do their share, to make this thing what we want it."

The following resolutions were introduced, which it was voted to take up for consideration at the Wednesday morning session, after which the convention adjourned for the morning:

Whereas, a measure is now pending before Congress for the establishment of a federal censorship for motion picture films, and the advisability of state censorship is under discussion; and

Whereas, there are at present upon the statute books legal safeguards against the exhibition of any improper photoplays; and

Whereas, the establishment of legal censorship will subject the entire motion picture industry to the despotism of censors without possibility of appeal or review; and

Whereas, legal censorship of any kind is opposed to the fundamental rights of all citizens freely to express their opinions and sentiments, and the abuse thereof is fully subject to legislative control; and

Whereas, the National Board, through its five years' experience in the criticism of motion picture films, has adopted a constructive policy and has endeavored to represent public opinion in a disinterested, fair and skilful way through the adoption of broadminded and intelligent standards of judgment; therefore be it

Resolved, by the International Motion Picture Association, in convention assembled, that the legal censorship of motion picture films is opposed to the best interests of the public, and that no conditions exist requiring such censorship for the protection of the public; and further

Resolved, that this organization declare itself as unalterably opposed to federal, state or local censorship of motion picture films based upon legal authority, on the ground that censorship of this kind is a restriction of the right of free expression; and be it further

Resolved, that this organization record itself as in favor of the voluntary co-operative criticism and regulation of films as at present conducted by the National Board of Censorship, and further, that it be the sense of the exhibitors of the United States, in convention assembled, that as the National Board is a co-operative body, all exhibitors be urged to refuse to exhibit any picture which has not been duly reviewed by that body.

TUESDAY.—Afternoon Session.

EDWARD L. SAUNDERS, manager of the Universal Exchange at 1600 Broadway, spoke at the afternoon session on "The Exchange and the Exhibitor." Mr. Saunders had planned to listen to the discussion of the report of the committee on grievances, and to base his remarks to a great extent on the matter developed in the debate. Owing to the laying over of this report until Wednesday, Mr. Saunders was asked to address the exhibitors. It just happened that the report was discussed the same afternoon, but that is another story.

"One thing is very important between the exhibitor and the exchange," said Mr. Saunders, "and that is coöperation. It seems to have been overlooked by a great many exhibitors. The general run of exhibitors seem to have the idea that the exchange is going to put it over on them whenever it can. They overlook the fact that anything that is detrimental to the exhibitor is detrimental to the exchange. The real success of the exchange is measured by the success of the exhibitor; we must do the things that are in your interest if we seek our own. One of the big items in the management of an exchange is the care of the film, conserving its condition, especially in a thirty-day service. If the film comes back to the exchange in bad condition when it left in good condition, we feel as if we had a complaint. We use every effort to keep the film in the best possible condition.

"The great trouble is that many exhibitors pay no attention to their operating-room. They leave everything to their operator, who may be a good man, a careful man, and he may not. He may not like the exchange, or he may not like its manager, and he may express his grudge in his treatment of the film. If every man will look out for his service the exchange can greatly improve the general result. All the matters in dispute between exhibitors can be straightened out to the satisfaction of both sides, but there must be coöperation. We must work together. You must watch your operator. Be sure that he sends back to the exchange every inch of film that he takes away. A case came under my notice recently where a boy who was carrying a film from one theater to another was selling pieces of it for a penny. We had had complaints of cuts and we started out to find why there were so many on subjects just after they had been run in a certain house. Now, these cuts can't be replaced, and while this case, of course, is an unusual one, still it shows what happens at times and how the service is injured. The exchange is willing, as I said before, to coöperate with the exhibitor, because we have many interests that are common ones."

The Grievance Committee's Report.

The remainder of the afternoon, which was practically the whole afternoon, was taken up in the consideration of the report of the grievance committee. At first it was decided to lay the report over until Wednesday. Then it was discovered the convention had left itself without any business to transact, and there was a long discussion which led nowhere, until finally Judge Tugwell suggested that some one of the thirty-five delegates who had voted in favor of the deference—there were but nine against it, by the way; the vote was taken early– move as one of the majority to reconsider. Eventually this was done, and the convention took up this report section by section:

1. Grievances at buying exchanges. Why are exhibitors compelled to pay for service on days when film is not used? If compelled to pay, why are not exhibitors given privilege to use all the said reels at a later date without extra charge?

2. Why is there not a uniform schedule price strictly adhered to by branch managers?

3. It is further found exhibitors protest against unjust discrimination to the legitimate exhibitor by giving special preference to the rental of programmes to large vaudeville and dramatic theaters during the summer months.

4. That the exhibitors vigorously protest against extra charge for regular release; that the film company should at least collect films in instances when they are to be returned the same night as used. That we are emphatically opposed to crowding out of single reels and replacing same with multiple reel subjects which further has taken the former merit out of single reels.

5. That sufficient leader be put on the beginning and end of films so that the story may be completed.

6. That manufacturers and exchange men should, under all conditions, remain out of the exhibition business.

7. That the poster situation is possibly one of the worst evils facing us, and we believe that the posters should be made part of the film service, booked as we book the reels. That posters advertising a high grade of amusement should be at all times clean and presentable. That manufacturers should have interest in their products being represented to the public in a manner befitting them. That the exhibitors be given the privilege of sufficient advance advertising.

Participating in the discussion were: Messrs. Sam Bullock, Cleveland; L. C. Smith, Schenectady; Secretary Rosenthal, Jas. Delves, Pittsburgh; Katz, Illinois; Trigger, New York; Victor, Pittsburgh; Cohen, New York; Levy, Chicago; President Phillips, Milwaukee; Vice-President Tugwell, Los Angeles; White, Pennsylvania; Saunders, New York, and Downs, Cleveland.

WEDNESDAY.—Morning Session.

IT WAS 11:15 before there were enough delegates present in the convention hall to justify President Phillips in opening proceedings. There had been a big time down at Brighton Beach the night before, and the return to the city had been at a late, or rather early hour. Sam Bullock, of Cleveland, chairman of the resolutions committee, for instance, retired at 4 o'clock; at 8:45 he was knocking at the doors of his fellow-members, calling them to a meeting. Before 12 o'clock there was a goodly assemblage in the convention hall, and the liveliest interest was displayed in the questions under discussion.

The stated order of business for the morning was the resolution on the censorship situation, presented the day before. An amendment was offered, making the following addition: "Be it further resolved, that we urge all exhibitors to apply for associate membership in the National Board of Censorship in order that they may be entitled to receive the weekly bulletins and all other information regarding the work and decisions of the board." The entire resolution was adopted at the close of the session, but in the meantime there had been an address by W. Stephen Bush, of The Moving Picture World, on "The Press and Motion Pictures," and speeches by Orrin G. Cocks, advisory secretary of the National Board of Censorship; Messrs. Denton, of New Jersey; Bullock, and Horsman. Mr. Bush could not refrain from departing from his set speech when he touched on the censorship and the press, and his allusions to the pending Smith-Hughes bill and his condemnation of it were applauded by the delegates. He was given a rising vote of thanks by the convention at the conclusion of his remarks.

"The National Board," said Mr. Cocks, "is ready at any time to give to the exhibitors of the country the information contained in its bulletins, as well as that in its publications. We recognize that you are a large body, but our funds are limited. We have not a large budget in comparison with the budget of the proposed Federal board. We have possibly a tenth or a twelfth of the money to handle. Our proposal is that we give you the literature of the board for $6 a year. If you want the bulletins we get out weekly, covering all the releases, we will furnish you with all the literature for $5 a year, which will just about meet the printing and mailing expense. Our bulletins are sent out every Saturday in advance of the release dates of the pictures covered."

Mr. Bullock took issue with Mr. Denton, who had suggested that it seemed to him that if any one needed representation on the National Board it was the exhibitors. Mr. Bullock said that he had perused the board's bulletins for three years, and had followed the eliminations. He had got these issues, he said, from his exchange. Under the proposed clause it will be possible for every man to receive that information every week right at his own door. Referring to the proposal that an exhibitor be placed upon the National Board, he asked where could be found a man, necessarily a New Yorker, who could give the necessary time to the work. "It is a labor of love," he continued. "I believe the work of the board is eminently satisfactory.

"In Ohio six weeks ago we adopted a scheme to test the opinion of the exhibitors. We sent out a list of eleven questions, and we now have a record of 846 shows. You could not get that number of men in this hall, but we have got their opinions on censorship. We threw a hammer into the legal cogs in Ohio last November and stopped the censorship from working. From the returns we have received from all these reports which I am now showing you, we learn that but three exhibitors have received and sent on to us complaints in regard to pictures. That shows the good work the National Board is doing—it is the best test. There is every reason to believe that the sentiment expressed by the Ohio showmen will be the same all over the United States. There was a unanimous NO to the question: 'Have you ever been in favor of legalized censorship?' To the query, 'Do you favor the repeal of the Ohio law? with two exceptions they all answered YES. (Hearty applause.) We know now what the people want. Nobody ever did find out before. We are going to put in a repeal bill in Ohio. We have got the exhibitors with us. We are going to do some missionary work on our screens. There won't be a censorite left before next November. That shows the necessity of the exhibitors receiving the reports of the National Board of Censorship. Thus, by working in collaboration with the National Board, each man may become his own censor. You can take out your film, even a first run, and if you see there has been ordered an elimination that has not been made, you can cut it out yourself and the exchange will thank you."

Address of W. Stephen Bush.

Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of this convention:—You have conferred an unsolicited honor upon me by asking me to speak on "The Motion Picture and the Press." The motion picture has really become part of the press. Newspapers all over the country are seeking to supplement their news service by enlisting the greatest of all reporters—the moving picture camera. As a reporter the moving picture camera has marvelous features of fitness. It does not lie. Its reports are complete in every detail. It is free from all kinds of bias and prejudices, whether conscious, unconscious or sub-conscious. If there is any coloring at all it is natural and adds to the perfection of the report. Who can forecast at this moment the nature and extent of the pictorial news service of the future? At some future day your children and your children's children, looking not through the files of newspapers, but through the old screen records, will wonder how mankind existed and how our civilization was preserved and perpetuated without the aid of the film.

In these latter days we have won the friendship of the press. It was not always thus. Indeed it seems but yesterday that we were described as outcasts foredoomed to early extinction. The moving picture was the subject of unkind prophecy. It was listed as a passing fad or craze due to some strange freak of the public taste. Today this same press employs its staff writers in reviewing big feature films; its famous cartoonists and artists use their talents to tell of the picture, its lore and its progress.

Let us be duly grateful for all this. Let us rejoice to see the motion picture honored where but lately it had been reviled. Let us, however, bestow a higher praise and discharge a greater debt of gratitude to the pioneers of motion picture journalism who stood up staunchly for the good name and fame of this new art when the daily press was given to much sneering and belittling. No are and no industry has ever had a more loyal and conscientious press than the motion picture. I say it not with any partisan pride, but I must mention it as a matter of historic record that the first and foremost pioneer in moving picture journalism was my late honored chief, the founder of the Moving Picture World, James P. Chalmers. The rules which he laid down and the policy which he pursued were wise and broad enough to be accepted as a code of ethics for this great field of motion picture journalism. The one thing which he taught and practiced above all others was the necessity of the fairly and equally representing every section and every interest in the entire motion picture industry. The use of his columns was open on even terms to the producer, the distributor and the exhibitor, including every lesser allied interest within the four corners of the industry. He always made it plain in word and deed that the moving picture had a special duty to the exhibitor nor in his opinion was this duty discharged by merely urging the exhibitors to organize. Nothing delighted him more than to see exhibitors working together in a common cause, and all the resources of his powerful journal were as a matter of course employed to accomplish this end. He thought the press ought to faithfully report the news of the industry, but this he did not regard as either its highest or its most important function.

Here in brief was his program for the useful motion picture journal: Stand at all times and under all circumstances for clean pictures. Insist on quality, emphasize the educational value of the picture, make war to the last ditch upon every degrading and debasing influence within the industry. Tell the exhibitor the absolute truth about all films offered for sale or for rent. Herein lies the real strength and vitality of every motion picture publication. Never hesitate to throw on the light; it is not the fault of the light if it shows things to be unpleasing. Let not a prospect of plenteous advertising nor any fear of loss of advertising swerve the moving picture critic from the fair and honest performance of his whole duty. Give the exhibitor the best information obtainable in regard to his daily needs. You exhibitors have appreciated this attitude of the moving picture press, and when you are looking for candid reviews or practical hints as to projection you know where to find them. The true motion picture journal aiming to be useful to all exhibitors cannot afford to be a house organ. The true motion picture journal must be fearless, non-partisan and swayed by no single and one-sided interest. I believe that I voice the unanimous sentiment of every man actively and usefully engaged in moving picture journalism when I say that our ideal is a great united body of exhibitors working in intelligent harmony with the other great branches of the industry. The moving picture press knows no difference of opinion in that respect. On all the great and vital questions now affecting the industry there has been a rare and splendid consensus of opinion in the motion picture press. We are all opposed to official censorship of any kind and we are all inclined to scrutinize the motives of the men behind the agitation for official censorship. I am happy to say that all the responsible moving picture journals are fair and truthful in their reports and equally so in their reviews.

Am I overestimating the value of the moving picture press when I call it the hope and the anchor of the industry? I believe it has been that in the past and I believe it will be that in the future. The moving picture press will go on with unwearied and persistent energy in fighting the battles of every friend of the motion picture. To you exhibitors I promise the continued loyalty of the moving picture press. What you have said and done here in this convention has been set down fairly and fully in the motion picture press and is even now on its way to your friends in distant parts. I hope that every one of you hearing or reading these words will renew his faith in the importance and in the absolute independence of the motion picture press and that he will carry home with him the firm conviction that the exhibitor's best and staunchest friend is the motion picture press.

President Horstman, of the Massachusetts branch of the association, was the next speaker. "To-day there is a license commissioner in the city of Boston," said Mr. Horsman, "who will allow no picture to be shown unless it has been approved by the National Board. I think that is a strong point in favor of these resolutions. There was a censorship bill presented in the last session of the Massachusetts Legislature. Exhibitors got together in midnight sessions and pledged themselves to see every legislator in the state and ask him to work against the bill and to tell him why he should. Leave to withdraw was unanimously given the bill."

The resolutions were then passed and the convention adjourned.

WEDNESDAY.—Afternoon Session.

From the standpoint of general interest to the exhibitor, the afternoon session was the best so far held. Up for chief consideration was the subject—so rapidly growing in importance—of the multiple reel. Joe Brandt, of the Universal Company, contributed a paper to the discussion. His subject was "The Poster Question in All Its Phases." Mr. Brandt later answered a few questions leveled at him by his listeners. Those who talked on the poster question and gave their views on the multiple reel as a part of a regular house program were: Messrs. Katz, Bullock, Phillips, Hollander, Arnheimer, Ansbach, Raymond, White, Brandt, Trigger, Miller, Harrington, Furniss, Rembusch, Gilosky, Pearson, Sachter, Victor, Levy, Leader, L. C. Smith, Rosenthal, Streimer, Gross and Tugwell. Count 'em—and some of 'em spoke more than once. There was much light and a little heat developed. The latter was the result of a Brooklyn exhibitor telling the poster lengths to which he had to go to keep up with a competitor. It became suddenly clear as he finished that the aforesaid competitor had been sitting just a few feet to one side. His deliberate and icy retort ended as suddenly as it began, when a point of order was raised. Mr. Rembusch interjected a subject not down on the cards, but it is one that is bound to come to the front sooner or later. The talk had drifted to padding out multiple reels. Mr. Rembusch condemned the idea of selling art by the mile or in stated subdivisions of that distance. He made a plea for the natural-length picture.

The question of posters was the first up. Mr. Katz said it was one of the vital points before the delegates. "The best solution of the evil would be the entire elimination of posters," he said. "But that is a far-off dream. The idea of giving out old posters when you are running a first-class production is not reasonable. How do you expect to get people in your house on those? We must fight and get clean posters. We want scenes that will most strongly transmit the story of the film. Manufacturers don't seem to take the interest in this subject they should. I believe it is time to get away from the old system of a show or a circus. We are not trying to humbug people any more. We are trying to give clean entertainment. Let's get together and say that on a good show we'll make our fronts inviting and not make them disgraceful to people of discriminating tastes."

Mr. Bullock insisted that he had no trouble with his posters. "In a daily change proposition it is utter nonsense," he said. "to get a week's advertising ahead. You lose all the force of it." President Phillips introduced Mr. Brandt at this point.

Joe Brandt Talks on Posters.

There are so many different angles to the Poster Situation that I have determined to base my talk this afternoon on two particular points that I consider most essential. One is a clean front and the other poster-progressiveness!

In the list of grievances which were presented at your yesterday afternoon's session I find the following:

Poster advertising of a high grade amusement should at all times be clean and presentable.

Your grievance committee could not have sounded the keynote of the situation better. Posters have become recognized as a tremendously vital element in the success or failure of a theater. They are almost as important as the quality of your program. No matter what program you are using, either through choice or by force of circumstances, you are not getting one hundred per cent. value out of your investment if you are using dirty, wornout paper. It may cost you a few cents or a few dollars more to get up a clean front as well as an attractive one, but it will pay you bigger dividends as sure as fate.

I was talking with an exchange man recently on the question of mounted paper and he agreed with me that no matter how careful the shipping department was when the paper went out, when it came back in nine cases out of ten it had been so badly handled and so badly creased that when unfolded it looked like a checker board. It doesn't take long to put a piece of mounted paper in an awful state. Sometimes even a ten day run customer will get a piece of paper that will be so badly banged up that it is a disgrace and a shame hanging in his lobby.

You will probably come back at me and say the exchanges are to blame for this, but during my extended trips I have found that this condition is due to the fact that the exhibitors are not willing to pay even the cost price of lithographs, in order to make a decent front for their houses.

What is the use of having cracking good films and a hundred per cent. program if you are going to show mussed up posters? You have received a black eye from the public before it has even entered your theater.

I can't understand, to save my life, why an exhibitor should be careless about the front of his theater. He ought to make it as attractive as he knows how. No matter what run of film he is using, he ought to insist on clean, fresh posters. Posters are always an attractive form of advertising. Every time you stick up a duty, mussed up lithograph on the front of your house you are plainly advertising the fact that you [illegible] business man. You are practically forcing an opinion on the people that your show is as poor as your posters and that is what hurts [illegible]

I don't believe there is a man within the hearing of my voice [illegible] way down deep in his heart, feel that he ought to [illegible] front and most attractive paper that he can lay his hands on. It is more economical to pay for new paper than it is to rent paper that has been handled two or three times. Even though you may save a little money on the paper cost, are you considering the amount you are losing by the unfavorable impression you are creating?

While I am talking about clean paper, let me touch on the subject of attractiveness as well. Under this heading comes the poster that doesn't tell the truth. There was a time when the moving picture industry was in its infancy, when you could buy any old kind of a lithograph and stick it up in your lobby, and humbug the public. That day is past. But once in a while you will find some film manufacturer putting out a piece of paper that is not only a disgrace to the industry, but a disgrace to the community as well.

I don't really think that the manufacturer is entirely to blame for this. There's not a day passes that a publicity man doesn't receive at least two or three kicks from exhibitors, who want highly sensational posters with plenty of gun play and red blood smeared all over them.

Take the Universal as an instance on this subject of sensational posters. We have induced the Morgan Lithograph Company to establish a separate art department for our special benefit, and there is not a drawing for a poster made that is not based on some scene actually in the film the public will see.

You probably realize that we are up against a difficult proposition where we have to satisfy everybody. The following will give you an idea of the many different phases of the poster situation:

Our exchange men writes to us, "Your posters on the whole are excellent, but be careful not to go strong on the sensational business, as the local authorities are watching the poster situation like a hawk, ready to pounce on any exhibitor who shows too much blood and thunder. I call this particularly to the attention of the New York exhibitors, especially those who come from Buffalo." A few days ago we received the following complaint from an exhibitor: "I noticed that you are cutting out all the dead bodies from the six-sheets on your war features. This is a big mistake, as it takes all realism out of the poster." This particular complaint happened to come from Boston, and upon looking up the matter, we found that a movement was on foot in Boston to establish a rigid censorship on posters.

Having been notified of this movement, we decided to ease up a bit, so as not to stir up further agitation against sensationalism.

When the matter was brought to the attention of the exhibitor he admitted that we were right, and that it was the best thing to do.

I am in sympathy with the man who wants to put punch paper in front of his theater to get the money. But I think there are a great many enemies to the industry in the form of exhibitors who deliberately smear up a piece of paper in order to get a few extra dimes, not thinking of the general effect it has on the public. I am referring particularly, in this instance, to something that occurred in Denver. We sent out a three-sheet that had plenty of punch in it, but the exhibitor was not satisfied; he painted in a few more dead bodies, threw some red paint on it and made it look like a miniature slaughter house. Of course, it got the crowd, but it also got a complaint from the Chief of Police.

Now on the subject of poster progressiveness:

In my opinion it is the falsest kind of economy to economize on posters. You can't use enough posters in front of your house if you are using fresh, clean, new ones. If your exchange is not in a position to furnish you the quantity that you want, make a deal direct with the lithograph manufacturer. There is not a film manufacturer in the business who makes a cent on paper, even if you bought a thousand posters for each release. The average film manufacturer would not be a penny richer.

The lithograph companies get the profit, whatever it may be, but they are entitled to it as long as they uphold the superior quality of posters, and as long as they are giving you the best paper that money can buy.

Using soiled or torn paper on your front is a gigantic mistake. It is a costly folly. Every exhibitor who is doing it is hurting himself and hurting the program he is using.

After you've got the clean poster idea in your mind open up the business throttle. If you have been using one or two six-sheets, try and experiment. Try twice the amount. If you have been buying ten or twenty and doing a little billing in your town, take a couple of more stands. In other words, branch out. Go after new business as though you meant it. Put up a few stands in some new location you have not touched before. You will be surprised at the extra patronage you will get with the small amount expended. Advertising makes dollars grow where pennies grew before. Posters are advertising. Slap them up in front of the people and make them like it; spend your own time and money putting ginger and snap and zip into your business. Be original. Go after new business from a new angle every time. Never let up. Never get into a rut. Don't be afraid to do a new thing, just because it has never been done before. You will find you are making more money by making a hundred little mistakes in experimenting than by the one big mistake of sitting back and doing nothing.

Gets Excellent Results from Posting Heralds.

Mr. Ansbach, of Newark, spoke strongly in favor of heralds. "Manufacturers send these to all exhibitors," he said, "and I have found the very best results by using them. These cost nothing. Of course, I do use two or three posters, but my poster bill is very small. I have a house seating 800, and in spite of the fact that I do not do extensive advertising, I am now in the summer doing a capacity business. Use the heralds. They are just as good as the circus advertising."

Mr. Bullock was inclined to restrict the number of posters to each exhibitor and Mr. Raymond took issue with him. "I don't think it would be possible for this convention to say that any theater should put up so many posters and no more until such time as we can corral every exhibitor and bind him."

"Don't you think you should advise us to use less instead of more posters?" inquired Mr. Katz of Mr. Brandt. "You forget that we are trying to build up a clientele which will come to our theaters two and three times a week merely because we present a good show and that, consequently, we want good posters. I believe the publicity men of the film companies should dig into this subject." Mr. Brandt in reply stated that the Consolidated Exchange inaugurated the system twenty days ago of issuing a fresh poster with each film sent out and that he believed within a month or two all the exchanges of his company would have the same scheme in effect. "You know," he said, "Conditions are radically different in every city. In San Francisco, for instance, you will find there is no theater of any size that does not use up to a twenty-four sheet."

Flashlight Photograph Taken Just After Singing "The Star Spangled Banner" by Alma Gluck at Opening of Exposition.

Those officiating on platform are: 1—John Koerpel, 2—H. W. Rosenthal, 3—W. J. Sweeney, 4—Rev. W. Miller Reid, 5—Thomas Furniss, 6—Chas. H. Phillips, 7—Judge A. P. Tugwell, 8—Borough President of Manhattan Marcus M. Marks, 9—Mrs. H. A. Victor, 10—William Brandt, 11—Daniel Frohman, 12—A. G. Rogers, 13—Alma Gluk, 14—F. Marion Brandon, 15 Madame Nemo, 16—Eugene Elmore, 17—Adolph Weiss, 18—SaSmuel H. Trigger, 19—Rudolph Sanders.

Mr. Trigger said that New York has more gaudy displays in front of its theaters than any place he knows, and added that he believed that more attention should be paid to quality rather than to quantity. The resolution of the committee in regard to posters was then passed.

Much Oratory on the Multiple Reel Question.

An amendment to the report of the resolutions committee was offered by Mr. Levy, of Chicago. It was as follows:

"Resolved, That it is the sense of this convention that manufacturers furnishing regularly a one and two-reel service to exhibitors be requested to confine their energies and resources to such regular service at regular prices and refrain from inflicting upon their regular customers long multiple reels at extra cost, and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the manufacturers."

"We started in business with one-reel pictures," said Mr. Hollander, "and all were satisfied. All of a sudden along came the two-reel. 'Fine!' said the exhibitor. The manufacturer shoved in a three-reeler, and we commenced to fight for it. Then the exchange said: 'We'll charge you four or five dollars extra.' Now they are bringing out five and six-reel productions and charging us $50 a day. The man with a large seating capacity can stand it. The small man can't. I'd like to do what the big theaters do, but how can I with a 300-seat house? With posters it costs me $55 or $60, and I can't do it. Eliminate the big stuff. We want the films manufactured by the companies in their regular routine."

"The multiple reel has done more than any other agency to make a circus and a menagerie out of picture houses," said Mr. Harrington. "The question that confronts us is not, Shall we make another two or three-reel production a week?' The question that confronts us is 'quality, not quantity.' You made more money with the single reel. Another thing: When the manufacturers write you asking for information answer the card. Tell them what you want."

Mr. Furniss, of Wisconsin, was recognized. "I have listened to the discussion on the multiple reel and the single reel," he said. "I want to say to you that we visited the manufacturers this morning and grabbed the bull by the horns. All are backing away from the features. They are coming down to two reels, with possibly three reels once a month. All claim they are losing money. The manufacturer will welcome this resolution. He is coming to you just as fast as he can with his idea. He has found the needs of the country and is coming to you with the result." Mr. Furniss was heartily applauded.

Talks Against Selling Art by the Mile.

Mr. Rembusch, of Indiana, strayed from the immediate question a bit, but the delegates were so interested in his reflections that no one raised a point of order. "The idea of selling art by the mile!" he said in indignation. "Until we get away from that we will never have the highest expression in moving pictures. No other science is measured by the mile. It is fundamentally wrong that we have films that run just a thousand feet or two thousand feet or three thousand feet. When the time comes—it must come eventually—that films are made for the story and not by the foot we will have the highest art in moving pictures. You take a little story that runs less than a thousand feet; 'We can't dispose of that,' says the producer; 'we'll add more to it.' And he takes all the vim and snap out of it. I would like to see an expression made that would help the moving picture art and help the exhibitor. We will never have the highest art in film production until we have film by artistic measure and not by the foot."

Mr. Ansbach, who, by the way, claims the credit for interesting the Methodists in motion pictures—and he must have done so when they allow him to show films in the great Ocean Grove Auditorium, seating 14,000—told of the results attending an inquiry he made among his patrons. "I took occasion to hand out cards," he said, "and you would scarcely believe the returns. Twenty per cent. responded, and of them seventy per cent. said they wanted variety and one-reel subjects. Only a very few favored the five and six reels."

Mr. Gilosky, of St. Paul, who, with Mr. Van Dusen, accompanied Mr. Furniss on his visit to the manufacturers in the morning, amplified the report of his colleague. "The main topic discussed," he said, "was the multiple subject—from four to seven reels. The manufacturers told us that whenever they put out a long production it meant advertising, it meant pushing, and the result was they very rarely got their money back out of their multiple reels."

Mr. Leader, of Portland, Me., who had just arrived in the city, brought word to the convention that the Maine branch of the national association had the day before withdrawn from the parent body. He said they had not yet taken up the question of further affiliation. Mr. Leader said that in his house, seating 1,400, he was compelled to run features, as his competitor around the corner used the service that after September will be released through Paramount Pictures, of which corporation his competitor, by the way, was a director. Mr. Smith, of Schenectady, also stated that the feature is necessary in his business. It was pointed out by other delegates that there will be no difficulty in any exhibitor getting all the features he desires. Mr. Streimer referred to the impression that the exhibitor must look to the manufacturer for the reduction to the regular service charge for multiple-reel subjects, and called attention to the fact that they must go to the exchanges—that the manufacturer sells his longer subjects to the exchange for the same price per foot as he charges for the shorter productions.

President Phillips said it had been his experience that more money was to be made with single reels. "The exhibitor will be better off if he is placed in the same position he was prior to the making of the multiple reel," he said. "I know the exhibitors are to-day making less money than when they had and could get fine single-reel subjects."

"My people are getting tired and sick of features," said Mr. Tugwell just before the convention adopted the resolution. "I don't intend to run any more in my house because I find it is detrimental to my business."

Exposition Attracts Crowds

Moving Picture People Find Much to Interest Them in the Various Exhibits and General Public Even More in Entertainment Provided—Description of the Booths.

By Randall M. White.

MOVING picture exhibitors from New York City and various sections of the country, as well as thousands of others, belonging to that vast army of "moving picture fans," began their pilgramages to Grand Central Palace soon after the opening of the Second International Exposition of the Moving Picture Art, Monday afternoon, June 8. The Monday evening crowd was quite satisfactory from the box-office point of view and on each succeeding day of the week there was a very perceptible increase in the attendance.

While the various exhibits had greatest interest for members of the trade there was quite a little to entertain the many whose only knowledge of a moving picture was that it was a "picture that moved."

Expert operators in charge of the various musical instruments being exhibited at the exposition found little difficulty in keeping crowds about them all day long and they played everything on the musical calender from ragtime to the classics.

The Universal Film Corporation's invitation to "dance with your favorite moving picture player" on a floor which they had provided for the purpose found many takers and theirs was a particularly busy corner. On the mezzanine floor of the Palace where the exposition people had provided a larger floor and a good orchestra, there was more dancing, the general public as well as the screen players participating. Nightly dancing contests participated in by well known photo-players, with handsome silver loving cups as the prizes, proved a big attraction.

Quite naturally, the four model moving picture theaters on the mezzanine floor proved the biggest magnet for the general public and, in the evenings particularly, these theaters, each seating about 200 persons, were crowded. In keeping with the "model theater" plan these little showshops were providing the best programs which could be secured with the world's film supply to choose from and presenting the programs under the best possible conditions..

In Theater No. 1 the projection was upon a Radium Gold Fibre screen with a Power's 6 A Cameragraph and the Cameron projector used alternately, the subjects coming from various feature film exchanges; some of the best of the Box Office Attractions Company's features were shown here.

In Theater No. 2 a Power 6A and the new Ernemann Imperator projector were working side by side, the screen being a Day and Night. The program here was provided by the General Film Company.

Universal, Mutual, World Film, and Jesse L. Lasky pictures were shown in Theater No. 3 on a Radium Gold Fibre screen with a Power 6 A and an Edison projector.

In Theater No. 4 the projectors were a Power 6 A and a Motiograph, the screen a Mirroride, and the program from the Famous Players, Warner's Features, and the All Star Features.

The seating equipment in all of the theaters was from the American Seating Company and the music was provided by various models of the Wurlitzer instruments with expert operators to demonstrate them.

Wednesday evening at the exposition was made notable by two extraordinary events which drew thousands of people. Miss Mary Pickford, of the Famous Players Film Company's forces, held a reception in the company's booth during the evening and it was utterly impossible for late comers to get near the place. In another corner of the hall, where the model studio was located, a company of Kalem players were engaged in making a number of scenes for insertion in a release which the company is about to make. The plan called for the immediate development of the negative and the running a print from it in one of the theaters before the expiration of the exposition. Here, too, the crowd was enormous and the mistake of so inadequately providing for such a big feature was made evident to the promoters of the show.

Arranged on the floor of the exposition, the exhibits provided were noticeably representative of the great and growing moving picture industry in all of its varied branches, as is indicated by the following:

Film Manufacturing and Renting Companies.

Numbering almost as many as all the exhibits of other classes put together and occupying much more than half of the display space at the exposition, the booths fitted up by the film manufacturing and renting companies attracted great attention. Visitors engaged in the moving picture industry quite naturally were interested and the general public who quite naturally passed by the technical trade displays were easily attracted by the names of companies and individual photoplay performers which they have seen flashed upon the screen thousands of times.

The Thomas A. Edison, Inc., booth sprung into popularity early in the week. John Collins and Frank Bannon, from the Edison studios, had erected the booth, its construction suggesting the Grecian palace. An electric fountain had been worked into the general decorative scheme with good effect. L. W. McChesney, sales manager of the Edison Company's Kinetograph Department, was in charge of the display, assisted by John Farrell, Fred Clark, and Ben W. Beadell. Edison photoplayers were in attendance at the exposition every evening and souvenirs in the form of artistic postal photographs of the screen favorites were distributed.

Francis X. Bushman, Miss Beverly Bayne, and other well Essanay players who have been especially prominent in the public eye because of the "One Wonderful Night" photoplay now being produced, proved a big drawing card at the Essanay booth. George K. Spoor and Vernon R. Day, of the Essanay executive department, had also come on from Chicago and were at the booth almost every night.

Two or three things were responsible for the enormous crowds which were the rule at the Famous Players' Film Company's booth. The booth itself was one of the prettiest in the exposition hall. Oil paintings and large colored photographs of the many popular stars who appear in the company's productions were attractively hung on the back wall, a life size oil painting of charming little Mary Pickford in an electrically lighted shadow box occupying the place of honor. Artificial vines and flowers and pretty lighting effects helped out the general scheme. Every time one looked at the Famous Players' booth there were a couple of young ladies as pretty as those pretty pictures on the wall in smiling attendance upon such visitors as had stopped to chat, and each evening a number of the company's photoplay stars themselves were on hand to hold receptions.

Without asking questions, practically every visitor to the exposition knew the Lubin booth when his tour of the hall brought him to a great big bell which sent his thoughts flashing first to the Liberty Bell and almost as quickly to the "pictures as clear as a bell" which come from the city of independence fame. Representatives of the Lubin Company were in attendance almost every day of the convention and the official visit of the company's stars was paid one evening when "Pop" Lubin chartered a special parlor car and brought his party over from Philadelphia in royal style.

The Universal people, with Joe Brandt very much in evidence, were doing business in quite a novel way over in one corner of the hall where they had taken a generous amount of space. Quite evidently figuring that what they were buying at the exposition and what they were there for was popularity in the eyes of all those who attended, the Universal folks just tied their proposition onto the tail of the modern dance craze. Their booth space was given over to dancing, an orchestra of three pieces providing the music. So great were the crowds around the booth that bright and early Tuesday morning an exhibitor at an adjoining booth changed his location because his display was being "blanketed."

An air of distinction had been given the Mutual Film Corporation's booth through the use of natural flowers and twines in the decorative scheme. Big boxes of red geraniums and ivy had been tastefully placed in the booth and small evergreen trees here and there provided just the right color touch. Photographs of the many screen favorites who appear in the "Mutual Movies" were on exhibition in the booth as well as copies of the two popular "house organs" which the Mutual people print.

A transparent drop showing the Vitagraph Theater at Broadway and Forty-fourth Street was an attractive decorative feature at the American Vitagraph booth. Members of the screen companies who turn out the Flying Eagle product were in attendance each evening and their popularity was attested by the crowds which they drew. John Bunny and his own personal booth at the exposition (his size required it) and his nightly levees were among the most enjoyable events of the week.

The Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company's display at the exposition was a modest one arranged in the best of taste. Two electrical devices, one a revolving stand which showed scenes from the company's biggest productions, and the other an automatic projector which flashed words of wisdom as to the merits of the Lasky productions, were given the places of honor. The Lasky Company's principal activities at the exposition—and activities which counted for a great deal—were in connection with the entertainment provided for visitors to the convention. Each evening found something doing at the exposition booth, however. David Belasco, whose plays the Lasky Company are to film, made his headquarters at the Lasky booth upon the occasion of his several visits to the exposition.

Joe Farnum was plenty heavy enough to hold things down at the All Star Feature Corporation's booth where Harry Raver and his associates were "meeting the trade" every day. Having been given official charge of the exposition's dancing contests, Joe had in his company's booths the pretty silver cups which had been provided as prizes.

Warner's Features, Inc., pulled a couple of novelties at their booth which caught the fancy of the visitors. At one corner of the booth they had rigged up a small photographic studio, using a bank of Cooper Hewitt lights and a background. Each evening they took approximately two thousand feet of moving pictures, exposing ten or twelve feet of film with various individual exhibitors to the exposition as respective subjects. Prints of these pictures, in the ten or twelve foot lengths, were given to the exhibitors who had been photographed the day after the pictures were taken, the suggestion being made that the prints be run upon the screen of the exhibitor's own theater. The Warner people also had in their booth a ballot box in which visiting exhibitors were asked to deposit slips upon which they had indicated the size of feature—whether two, three, four, five or six reels—which they found best suited to their needs.

William F. Fox, who has recently become such an important factor in the film renting industry by reason of his various connections, divided his time at the exposition between the two pretty booths fitted up for the Box Office Attractions Company and the Greater New York Film Rental Company.

John Pelzer, sales manager of the company, was in charge of the Pathe Freres booth, attractively decorated as a rustic pagoda. Victor Hodupp, who has been devoting his attention to the promotion of the Pathe Daily News service for some weeks, was also on hand throughout the week and closed a surprisingly large number of contracts with visiting exhibitors whom he said he found "hungering for Pathe topical stuff." Members of the Pathe screen companies were in attendance at the booth each evening.

Representatives of the Shubert Feature Film Company, in aatendance at the company's booth, found a great deal of interest among exhibitors and exposition visitors generally in the initial releases which the company is to make in September. "The Lure," "America" (New York Hippodrome production), "The Whip," "The Dancer and the King," "Across the Pacific," and other productions have already been prepared for release. L. E. Weed, at the Shubert booth, said that the exposition had been the means of his company's closing a contract with Joseph Fisher, of Fisher's Elite Bioscope, Ltd., Grand Theater, Cape Town, South Africa, to bookall the Shubert attractions in the Fisher houses.

The presence of C. Francis Jenkins, projection expert, of Washington, D. C., with his Phantoscope and Kenopticon in the World Film Corporation booth added interest. Mr. Jenkins and his associates were kept busy explaining the good points of the little projecting machines—for moving pictures and stereopticon views—while the World people enlarged upon the value of their feature film service. Developments of unusual importance are expected in connection with the World Corporation's business in the near future.

The wide interest which exists in "The Perils of Pauline" was attested by the popular interest shown in the Eclectic Film Company's booth. The Eclectic people, in a few months, seem to have accomplished wonders in the publicity line.

Mme. Blache was in almost constant attendance at the Solax-Blache and United States Amusement Company booth during the exposition. James J. Corbett, often spoken of as the "only prizefighter who ever became a real actor," attended the exposition Thursday evening, representing the United States company, for whom he has been presenting his plays. Bernard Daly, of the Solax forces, was there Tuesday evening, and Miss Claire Whitney, of the Solax-Blache Features, on Wednesday evening. Instead of distributing souvenirs, the Solax-Blache people decided to give to the holder of some lucky number a fine piece of bronze statuary which was on display at the booth.

The Gaumont, the Ambrosio-American, and the Eclair film manufacturing companies, all so popular among exhibitors and moving picture devotees, were represented at the exposition with respective booths presided over by representatives of their sales and publicity departments. Gaumont players working in the company's American studios held receptions at the Gaumont booth during the week.

The Colonial, the Cosmos, the Dragon, and the Intercontinental—all feature film companies—made their displays of attractive photographs, heralds, posters, and other publicity matter which they supply to exhibitors who use their photoplays.

At the George Kleine Attractions booth were shown pictorial reminders of all of the spectacular photoplay productions with which the name of the well known Chicago screen impressario has been identified during the past few years. Mr. Kleine himself was in attendance at the exposition as well as other representatives from the Chicago offices and men prominently identified with the Kleine company in the East.

The Selig Polyscope Company, also representing one of the big film interests of the Middle West and West, were popularly advertised to exposition visitors with liberal booth space.

Favorite photoplayers from the several Kalem companies made their headquarters at the Kalem booth each evening, with representatives of the publicity and sales departments in charge.

The advance story of a new line of Fred Mace comedies, now being made in Europe, was told by the University Film Company.

Motion Picture Musical Instruments.

Demonstrations of five different makes of musical instruments especially adapted to the peculiar needs of the moving picture theater contributed greatly to the carnival spirit of the exposition.

The Fotoplayer had its innings in one part of the hall, under the direction of H. Herman, assisted by Charles K. Koch and A. W. Droge, comprising the Koch & Droge Piano Company, Eastern representatives of the American Photoplayer Company, of Berkeley, Cal.

Dan Barton, inventor of the Bartola musical instrument, was in attendance at the exposition, coming on from the Oshkosh factory in company with Harry Aue and Charles P. Pyle, of Chicago. W. G. Maxey and W. J. Weller were also in the booth shaking hands with friends they have made among the moving picture people.

Two solo orchestrions and the Seeburg Motion Picture Player comprised the exhibit in the J. P. Seeburg Piano Company's booth. Mr. Seeburg, for whom the company is named, was in attendance, as were also C. L. Redick, Oscar Nelson and A. Larson, of the company's forces.

The Lapin Musical Company's Drumograph attracted no little attention on the exposition form; as the name would indicate, this is an attachment for any piano which gives the combination of piano drums, cymbals, etc., which is favored by many exhibitors.

The Wurlitzer people had a booth, but their principal demonstrations were in the theaters operated in conjunction with the exposition.

Home and Office Projecting Machines.

Two different models of the Pathescope, the Optiograph, the Phantoscope, the Animatograph, and the Grifford machines were shown in several booths.

The Pathescope model, which generates its own lighting current through the mere turning of the crank which sends the film through the machine, seemed to prove particularly interesting to visitors.

Differing from the Pathescope models, all the other machines show standard film in lengths varying from 300 to 1,000 feet. In conjunction with a number of these "home projectors" were shown cameras especially designed for taking moving pictures to be shown in the machines.

Screens and Screen Manufacture Demonstrated..

The Atsco Radium Gold Fibre, the Day and Night, and J. H. Genter's Mirroroide screens were on view for exhibitors and others to carefully investigate. Men who have had to do with the production of these screens were on hand to explain just how they are turned out.

Pictures, Picture Frames and Printing.

The importance of the moving picture industry to the men engaged in making photographs, picture frames, and printed and lithographed matter was indicated by the comparatively large number of exhibits of this class at the exposition.

The White Studios, makers of high class professional photographs, were represented with a display of highly artistic pictures, many of them hand colored; included in the display were photographs of Lillian Walker, Gene Gauntier, Mary Pickford, Lillian Wiggins, Alice Joyce, and others.

The Wyanoak Publishing Company, who make many of the portraits used in the moving picture trade for lobby display, had men working in their booth demonstrating some of the interesting processes with the aid of which they produce their best results.

The Newman Manufacturing Company's display of brass picture frames for lobby use and other brass furnishings for theaters was a particularly interesting one. A box office made entirely of brass and so constructed that the framework on all sides works out in the artistic framing of posters attracted a great deal of attention.

Menger & Ring, well-known manufacturers of picture frames, were at bat with a booth completely filled with specimens of high class work which they have done for moving picture people.

Bland adjustable picture frames, made of heavy cardboard with metal bindings in such a manner that they will fit any size of picture, were also shown.

The printing and lithographing branches of the business were well represented by the Morgan Lithographing Company, the H. C. Miner Company, and the United States Lithographing Company, their exhibits indicating the vast amount of trade they have developed with the moving picture men. A representative of one of the largest of these companies remarked that seventy-five per cent. of his company's business was now done in connection with the moving picture industry.

The Goldberg Poster Display Company exhibited the racks they have been selling to moving picture exchange men for the purpose of properly showing and caring for the posters which are such an important part of the exchange's service.

Technical Trade Supplies.

Prominent among the displays which may be described as having to do with technical trade supplies was that of the Nicholas Power Company. The Cameragraph 6A, latest of the company's projecting models, was on view for close inspection at the booth and also in operation in a number of the exposition theaters. An interesting demonstration intended to show the superiority of the new style of intermittent action over the old style had also been arranged. Besides projectors, the various other well-known products of the Power Company were on exhibition. J. F. Skerrett, general manager of the company, was in charge, assisted by the following: W. C. Smith, L. W. Atwater, F. N. Swett, Bert Bohannon, and Herbert Griffin.

The Motiograph, a favorite projector made by the Enterprise Optical Company, was shown to admiring friends at the Enterprise booth and was used in one of the theaters.

The new Ernemann all-steel Imperator projecting machine attracted most attention at the Ernemann Photo Kino Works booth; this machine was also in operation in one of the theaters on the mezzanine floor. Printers, perforators, rewinders, etc., were also shown by the Ernemann people.

The Picture Theater Equipment Company made good on their promise to show everything necessary to the equipment and operation of a moving picture theater, their exhibit including several types of projecting machines, theater chairs, asbestos booths, ticket vending machines, ticket choppers, etc.

S. Williamson, of the Williamson Kinematograph Company, of London, was among those in attendance at the G. Gennert booth, where Williamson products, in the way of moving picture cameras, printers, perforators, etc., were among the exhibits. The Gennert people took over the United States agency for Williamson goods a few weeks ago and the London visitor and made the trip to the States for the purpose of helping start things going at the big trade exposition.

The Motion Picture Apparatus Company display, under the direction of R. Hastings, P. Housley, and H. Wyckoff, consisted of several makes of motion picture cameras, tripods, a new printer with an automatic light regulator, which was quite a drawing card among the film manufacturers, and other supplies for the trade.

L. C. Smith, of Schenectady, among other accessories in a very complete line, showed a new rewinder which ought to become popular if the interest of the scores of exhibitors who stopped at his booth counts for anything.

In the H. W. Johns-Manville booth were many articles chosen from this concern's tremendous line of mechanical and electrical wares because of their especial appeal to moving picture people. The company's asbestos booths are quite generally used as are their fire extinguishers, their patented lighting systems and fixtures, and all of the favorite devices, as well as some new ones, were shown.

Two interesting electric lighting exhibits were provided by the Cooper-Hewitt Electric Company and Koerting & Mathiesen, the former showing their wonderful equipment for moving picture studio work, and the latter their famous Excello flaming arc lamps for outdoor lighting, in front of theaters, etc. The Cooper-Hewitt people had "banks" of mercury tube lights scattered all over the exposition, an extensive battery being used in the little studio in which pictures were made during the week. Included in the Koerting & Mathiesen exhibit were flaming arcs of all sizes and adapted for all uses, as well as arc lamps of other types for interior lighting.

Theater Furniture and Fixtures.

Two styles of automatic ticket selling and cash registering devices were on exhibition, the National Cash Register Company appearing as a competitor in the field where the Automatic Ticket Seller and Cash Register Company has been most prominent. The Automatic people met many exhibitors at the exposition who had used their machines for a long time, and were willing to join the demonstrators in praise of its good points. The device being marketed by the National people differs from the other in that it prints the tickets in much the same manner that the ordinary cash register prints a receipt for a sale.

The American Seating Company exhibited about twenty-five different styles of theater chairs, featuring those styles which exhibitors throughout the country have found best suited to their peculiar needs. L. M. Olmstead was in charge of the display and was assisted by representatives of the company from various sections of the country.

Demonstrations of the efficiency of the Pyrene Fire Extinguisher, on a very small scale, were given in the company's booth at the exposition, and the company's representatives invited visitors to the exposition to visit their factory in New York and witness more important demonstrations.

On the mezzanine floor of the Palace, and operating in each of the model theaters, were various types of ventilating fans made by the Typhoon Fan Company, and especially adapted for use in moving picture theaters. In point of massiveness, this display was perhaps the biggest in the exposition hall.

Novelty Advertising Devices.

At their booth at the exposition, the Mott le-Gaige Animated Advertising Company were giving the first public demonstrations of the cleverly devised screen advertising machine, which they are just now putting on the market. Sam Harris, of Cohan & Harris; Mort Shea, of Feiber & Shea; Roscoe Gage and A. J. Levy are the men interested in the company.

"Talk boxes" were another novelty advertising device shown. J. C. McCurdy, of the Business Efficiency Company, was in attendance to tell visiting exhibitors of his plan whereby they could get back half the rent of their theater each year by installing a number of his inventions.

David Horsley, representing the Centaur Film Company and Lumiere film, had a booth at which he was meeting his friends all week. Raw film was also shown at another booth at the exposition where H. O. Bodine, director of sales for the Raw Film Supply Company, had specimens of "non-flamm Agfa," an European product which is just being put on the American market.

The Automatic Vending & Supply Company, demonstrating their devices which they sell to moving picture exhibitors everywhere as "rent earners," occupied a booth.

Trade Publications Well Represented.

Trade papers and publications in general dealing with the moving picture industry were well represented at the exposition. The McClure publications, featuring the Ladies' World, the Motion Picture Story Magazine, Motography, the Kinematograph Weekly and Leslie's Page, the Dramatic Mirror, the Moving Picture News, and the Moving Picture World maintained booths. The interest which the New York dailies are taking in the industry was shown by the fact that the Globe was bidding for attention with a small display at the exposition.

GUESTS BEING WELL ENTERTAINED.

Visitors to Big Convention and Exposition Enthusiastic in Their Praise of Good Things Arranged for Them.

Visitors to the Convention were enthusiastic over the entertainment which had been provided for them. At mid-week, after having enjoyed two big events, they were saying that if the other affairs were as pleasing as the early ones, memories of the good time they had had would linger long in the memory of every visitor who had made the journey to New York.

The crowd in attendance at the clambake at the Brighton Beach Hotel, Tuesday evening, June 9, numbered several hundred. One of those seafood menus for which New York is famous had been provided under the personal direction of C. Morton Bellah, proprietor of the hotel, and everything served was heartily enjoyed. There were clams, oysters, and lobsters in all styles, and the usual adjuncts of the old fashioned clambake, finishing up with ice cream, coffee, cigars and cigarettes.

Proprietor Bellah went a little further with his entertainment and provided six handsome loving cups as prizes for the dancing contests which were held in the Brighton Beach Hotel ballroom during the evening.

The sport at the "Island" continued until the wee small hours of the morning and, upon the party's return to Manhattan, there were little side trips into Chinatown and other interesting sections of the city.

Jesse L. Lasky Host Wednesday Night.

Although arranged by the promoter of the convention and exposition, Wednesday night's affair at Wm. Morris' Jardin de Danse atop the New York Theater was largely an entertainment for convention visitors with Jesse L. Lasky, of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, serving as host. Vaudeville performers on the Lasky payroll provided practically the entire show which was presented. Harry Reichenbach, of the Lasky publicity department, directed the affair from start to finish, and there was a considerable expenditure of Lasky money in arranging things.

The big feature of the evening was the first public showing of a new Lasky vaudeville act called "The Aurora of Light" which has been prepared for the big time and is to appear at the Palace Theater within a week or two. In the nature of a novel posing act in which a single performer floats about in space while transformations in color are effected, the new act was particularly well chosen for the occasion—it was a "living moving picture." So enthusiastically was the feature received that it was found necessary to repeat the performance during the evening.

There were other vaudeville acts, and special dancing numbers by Carlos Sebastian and the Dolly Sisters, and splendid artists who are regularly featured at the Jardin de Danse. One of their special numbers was called the "Movie Tango."

The Keno Dance (whatever that is) and the one-step were used in the contests, a number of which were held. Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Lasky, Frederick Stine, John Bunny, and Joe Farnum served as judges. Miss Muruel Ostriche, of the Thanhouser company, and Irving Cummings, of the Pathé Company, won one of the prizes and Miss Jeannette Cohn, of the Metro Lithographing Co., with her partner, another.

As some person expressed it, in describing the attendance, "Everybody—and his brother—connected with any branch of the business that touches the moving picture industry tried to get in." After the big auditorium had been all choked up with moving picture humanity, hundreds were turned away from the doors. Among those noted in the crowd were: David Belasco, Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Lasky, Miss Mary Pickford, Miss Pearl Sindelar, Miss Muriel Ostriche, Miss Anita Stewart, John Bunny, King Baggot, Joe Smiley, Nicholas Power, H. J. Cohen, and Paul Panzer.

The Thursday evening entertainment event was a moonlight sail on the Hudson for which the Steamboat Adirondack, of the Hudson River Night Line's fleet, was engaged.

LARGEST INCANDESCENT LAMP IN THE WORLD.

While the splendid exterior lighting at the Grand Central Palace was commented upon by many of the out-of-town visitors to the big exposition and convention, it is safe to say that few of the visitors knew that there was being used on the building during the big event the largest incandescent lamp ever manufactured.

The Cooper Hewitt Electric Company, as a part of their display at the exposition, were showing their new Targon lamps, which are incandescents, of high candle power. In developing the Targon idea, the company, largely as an experiment, constructed a lamp of 12,000 candle power, 5500 watts. This lamp was shown at a recent electrical exposition in Philadelphia and the company was prevailed upon to hang it outside the Palace during the moving picture exposition.

Thursday's Convention Proceedings.

F. J. Rembusch and F. H. Richardson Address the Exhibitors —Delegates Discuss a Board of Trade and One Organization.

THE delegates in attendance at the convention of the International Motion Picture Association listened on Thursday morning to an address by F. J. Rembusch, of Indiana, on "Screens." Mr. Rembusch's talk was highly technical at times, at others decidedly interesting, as well as instructive to the exhibitors. He advocated the establishment of the profession of architects of projection, saying that the relation of the screen to the theater was of the highest importance. At the afternoon session, F. H. Richardson, of the projection department of the Moving Picture World, talked on the work of the operator and of the necessity of giving him the proper equipment as well as the proper surroundings. Mr. Rembusch introduced a resolution, which was passed unanimously, urging upon the manufacturers the consideration of the advisability of making 500-foot units in the production of pictures as opposed to the present divisions of 1,000 feet.

Much discussion was given to a resolution urging the formation of a board of trade among the various branches of the moving picture industry. The question was laid over until Friday for settlement. There was much general talk on the subject of getting together with the older association, a majority of the members being in favor of conciliatory methods.

MR. RICHARDSON TALKS ON PROJECTION.

The opportunity to address your Convention, gentlemen, affords me a very sincere pleasure, not only by reason of the fact that I am thus enabled to forego your personal acquaintance, but also that I may perhaps be able to impress upon your minds something of the importance of the work of the "man behind the gun;" in other words, the operator.

As all of you who have followed my work in the Projection Department of The Moving Picture World, and in my Handbooks know, Richardson is a "crank" on one subject, and that subject is projection. But, gentlemen, the word projection as used by me covers a multitude of things, and I am sorry to say that in all too many theaters it covers a multitude of sins, since most certainly in many of our photoplay houses very wicked sins are committed under the guise of "projection."

The term projection includes all of those various things which go to make up the ultimate result upon the screen, and this includes not only the various things contained in the operating room, but also it includes the screen, the location of the operating room, the condition of the films, and the lighting of the auditorium.

First and foremost, gentlemen, I would call your undivided attention to the relative importance to you of the result on the screen, as compared to the other features of your theater.

Comfortable seats, excellence in ventilation, a beautiful front, courteous attendants and cleanliness, all of course, have much to do with the popularity of the house, but, after all, the audience pays good, hard money mainly for the purpose of viewing the photoplay—the result on the screen.

In order to impress you with the relative importance of things let me make an assertion with which I think the majority of progressive exhibitors will agree. You may locate two theaters, precisely the same, in so far as their size, shape, etc., be concerned, side by side. You may fit one up with cheap seats, you may give it rather indifferent ventilation, you may decorate its walls very plainly or not at all, and pay little attention to the front. The other you may equip with the finest of seats, decorate it inside and out beautifully, equip it with a splendid ventilation system, and then in the first, plain theater, place the projection on a very high plane, and in the second, elaborately decorated and very beautiful theater, put on a poor picture, and the plain theater, unless the two be catering to an entirely transient trade, with have greater success than the other, which proves that it is the picture itself which is of paramount importance. I, of course, assume that none of you will misunderstand me in this matter. I believe in the combination of excellence in projection, and excellence in the other things named, also, but unfortunately too many managers seem to attach great importance to everything connected with their theater except the projection—the picture.

And now let us consider the items which go to make up excellence in projection, particularly as applied to the operator himself. Many of you have disagreed with me in the past because I have insisted on higher salaries for operators and better conditions in operating rooms. Your opposition to my course in this respect has undoubtedly been honest, but it has, I think, sprung from a wrong conception and a lack of broad understanding of the situation. The moving picture operator in order to produce really high-class results on the screen of your theater must, in the first place, be well versed in at least certain branches of the art or trade of the electrician. In order to give you the best possible service he must thoroughly understand the arc light, including carbons. He must understand quite a number of things about electrical conductors, he must be thoroughly conversant with resistance and its action and in this day and age with motors, generators, transformers, auto-transformers, and several other things pertaining to electrics. He must have a very good grounding in the rudiments of the art of the optician; understand at least something of the action of light through lenses, and be able to select the ones best fitted to his work. He must understand the good and bad points with relation to the various kinds of projection surfaces. In order that he may keep the plant in the best possible condition without excessive expense he must be a good mechanic and something of a machinist, and, in addition to all this, must be sober, because he is placed in charge of a highly dangerous combination of concentrated light and celluloid, and he must be thoroughly reliable and industrious. And yet, gentlemen, some of you seem to have an idea you can secure this sort of combination for fifteen dollars a week, or at the very most, twenty or twenty-five dollars.

Gentlemen, the idea is absurd. It is ridiculous on the face of it. It cannot be done. I have insisted on better operating rooms and better equipment and better ventilation for those operating rooms, for the very simple reason that I know that the best possible results will not be placed on the screen by an operator who is working in a little, ill-ventilated sweat-box, or with equipment with an antiquated out-of-date type, or with equipment in bad state of repair. It is not in the nature of things that high-class results will be had under these conditions, and to the extent of my ability I have fought against these conditions, because I desire to see the really splendid, magnificent photoplays now being produced placed on the screen in a manner befitting their excellence.

I have insisted, in season and out of season, and I shall continue to insist upon high salaries for operators, for the very simple reason that very much depends on the work of the operator, and this responsibility cannot consistently be placed in the hands of a cheap man. And it is not a good business proposition to place it in the hands of a cheap man, since cheapness and excellence seldom travel together.

Why is it, gentlemen, that the railroad can secure section men at a dollar a day? Answering my own question, I will say that it is because the section man only has to use his muscles, and arms and legs are cheap. Brains, on the other hand, cost money.

Now, gentlemen, is there a man in this entire audience who would dare assert that the splendid productions of our manufacturers can be placed on the screen of his theater to the best possible way without the use of brains on the part of the operator? Assuredly there is not. Remember, gentlemen, the many things which go to make up the finished result on the screen. Is it not a little bit foolish to invest thousands of dollars in a theater, the income of which is going to depend directly upon the results shown on the screen, and then place the production of those results in the hands of a cheap man? Is not that, after all, a rather silly thing to do? Is it not business suicide?

We have right here in New York City a number of moving picture theaters which are filling their seats at from 25 cents to $1, and, gentlemen, while it is not all due directly to the excellence of projection in those houses, still I venture the assertion that it could not be done if the projection were not high class.

And now I wish to take this opportunity to briefly call your attention to one or two things which are of prime importance; the first being the observation port. I select this subject by reason of the fact that observation ports are wrongly made in about eight theaters out of every ten, and in practically all theaters having asbestos operating rooms. In order to assure the best possible results it is absolutely necessary that the operator have a clear, uninterrupted view of his picture all the time, and that the operating room shall be dark, the latter in order that he may be able quickly to discern faint shadows on the screen. Time forbids my elaborating on these matters, so I will simply say to you that when you return to your theater go up to the operating room and place yourself in a position with your eyes say six inches back of the machine head, which is about ordinary, comfortable operating position, and unless you can then see the full width of the picture without moving your head then your observation ports are too narrow, and should be cut out until you can get a clear view of the whole picture from the position named. In the second place, do not expect high-class results on your screen with low amperage, antiquated equipment or equipment in poor repair.

As a general proposition poor projection is due to one of three things, or a combination of the three: first, cheapness in the operator himself, or cheapness in the equipment, which also would cover the lack of proper repairs; second, poor photography or printing, or films in bad condition; third, lack of sufficient knowledge on the part of the manager to enable him to check up the results on the screen; in other words, to know when the picture is not perfect, and why it is not perfect. I have not the time to enter into details regarding these things as I would like to, but one thing I wish to call your particular and undivided attention to is the fact that, with the exception of first-run films, all too many exchanges send out their films in miserable condition. The reels sent out by many exchanges are dirty and oily; contain misframes, poorly made patches, and ripped sprocket holes galore. There should be concerted action on the part of the exhibitor to stop this sort of thing. It is wrong! It is a shame! It is an outrage from any and every point of view, and is the direct result of two things: First, the desire on the part of the exchanges to get every possible hour of service out of the reel; and second, the demand on the part of the exhibitor to receive reels from the exchange without giving the exchange time to make a proper and complete inspection thereof. This sort of thing is extremely bad from any and every point of view. But just so long as exhibitors do not combine to stop practices of this kind they will continue, and they make heavily for poor results on the screens of your theaters as well as very largely increase the fire hazard.

The manager himself, I am sorry to say, is seldom in a position to criticize the work of the operator in its finer points, and this is not as it should be. While the high-priced man usually is the type of man who will keep his work up to the standard because he is a high priced man, his lower priced brother almost invariably will not do any more than he is obliged to. The railroad brakeman performs certain duties, and does exactly what he has to do, and no more, but the railroad superintendent makes work for himself to do, and that is the reason he is a high-class, high-priced man. We need more superintendents and less brakemen in operating rooms, but as long as we have the brakemmn operator, we have got to have managers who are able to check up the work of those men and insist on them keep up to the standard. Time and again I have had theater managers proudly boast to me of the excellence of their picture, only to point out half a dozen faults to them in less than five minutes, and they were very real faults, too, but these managers had not studied the picture; they did not know the possibilities of projection, therefore were unable to intelligently criticise the work of their operator.

And so, gentlemen, I could go on thus talking for hours on the subject which is very near to my heart. It is a subject which has occupied my entire time and attention for more than five years, and has become to me almost a religion. I do not think, however, that I should take advantage of the opportunity so kindly afforded me by your committee, and consume too much of your time. Therefore, I will close, by wishing your convention and yourselves as individual theater managers, every possible success, assuring you that at any time I or the Department of The Moving Picture World, over which I preside, can be of any benefit or assistance either to your organization or to you as individuals, you have only to let that fact be known.

BIG DOINGS PROMISED AT DAYTON.

Interesting Program Arranged for the Motion Picture Exhibitors League Convention—Trade Show Will be Comprehensive.

GEORGE H. WILEY, managing secretary of the Convention and Exposition of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, to be held at Dayton, Ohio, July 6th to 11th, was in New York during the last days of the exposition at Grand Central Palace. Mr. Wiley reported that plans had been about completed for the big convention of exhibitors before he left Dayton, and that all signs pointed to a meeting that would eclipse anything that had ever been held by the League. According to Mr. Wiley, reservations for hotel accommodations had already exhausted the capacity of the several hostelries of that city and that requisitions were being made upon the citizens for accommodations for visitors in private houses. The town has gone wild over the prospects of a big celebration on this particular occasion and everybody is doing their utmost to take care of all comers.

A most elaborate program has been prepared for the convention. Proceedings will open at 10 o'clock A. M., Tuesday, July 7th, with an address of welcome by the Mayor of Dayton. The National Cash Register Company will provide the entertainment features for the day.

On Wednesday, the election of officers of the League will occur, and there will be an exhibition of aeroplane flights at Wright's Field, with an auto tour of the city.

In addition to the regular work of the convention on Thursday, prizes will be awarded to the State Branches having the best representation, and to the manufacturer making the best show in the trade parade. There will be a visit to the National Soldiers' Home and other interesting points about Dayton.

After the business of the convention has been disposed of on Friday the annual banquet of the League will be held. Saturday will see the close of business of both convention and exposition.

Many of the exhibits that appeared at the Grand Central Palace will be shown at the Dayton Convention and most of the exhibitors who attended the meetings in New York will also attend the Dayton Convention. In point of attendance by the trade, it is expected that the Dayton Convention will greatly exceed the meeting in New York.

VIRGINIA CONVENTION CALLED.

National Vice-President D. P.. Wine of Virginia, announces that the state convention of Virginia Branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League will be held at Staunton, Va., on June 18.

NEW YORK CONVENTION PEACEFUL.

Empire State Exhibitors Re-elect Samuel Trigger President—John C. Davis and W. A. Douque Returned as Treasurer and Secretary, Respectively.

AFTER deliberations, which were conducted with strictest harmony, the annual convention of the New York State Exhibitors' Association which had been called for Saturday, June 6th, at the Hotel Imperial, New York City, was adjourned sine die Monday evening, June 8th.

Some trouble was experienced in getting the desired representation of the organization together because of the demands which were being made upon the members' time by the big exposition and convention at Grand Central Palace. When the convention was called to order at the Imperial Saturday morning, President Samuel Trigger, of New York, presiding, it was deemed inadvisable to transact any of the important business for the reason that delegations from upstate cities in which the association is strong, although on their way, had not then arrived. It was decided to hold a short session of the convention and then adjourn until Monday afternoon.

The following were appointed members of the Committee on Credentials: W. H. Linton, Utica (chairman); William A. Beam, Buffalo; S. Suckno, Albany; Max Samuels, Yonkers; Harold Rosenthal, New York City.

Short addresses by various people in attendance at this opening session of the convention followed. W. Stephen Bush, of The Moving Picture World, was caught for a minute as he was leaving the hall and compelled to make a few remarks. "Hit censorship solidly between the eyes" was the burden of his message.

Judge A. P. Tugwell, vice-president of the International Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, and in New York to attend the big convention and exposition at the Palace, was present at the meeting of the New York men and responded in a particularly forceful manner when called upon to make an address. Judge Tugwell hales from Los Angeles, Cal., where he operates two big moving picture theaters, and is a leader among the exhibitors. In speaking to the New York men, the judge opened up by referring to his previous prominent association with the National League of Moving Picture Exhibitors of America and M. A. Neff, president of that organization. He spoke of his differences with Mr. Neff over the censorship question, and paid the president of the league some compliments of the kind often described as of the "left-handed" variety. In reciting the history of an attempt which was unsuccessfully made to establish state censorship of moving pictures in his home state, Judge Tugwell used as an argument against the Neff policy that the Ohio censorship law had been taken as the pattern upon which to draw the California law, and that the support which had been given the Ohio law by prominent moving picture men had been enlarged upon as one of the best arguments for the passage of the California bill. The gentleman from California talks in a breezy, whole-souled western style, and when he opened up the Neff subject the promise of excitement grew greater and greater each second.

At the conclusion of Judge Tugwell's speech, John F. Miller, of Buffalo, with remarks which were humorous, but intended to impress with a germ of serious thought, suggested that the deliberations of the convention be continued without mention of the name of Mr. Neff, whom he referred to as the "lately departed." William A. Beam, recently elected president of the exhibitors' local in Buffalo, made a few remarks. Luncheon at the Imperial followed the adjournment until Monday afternoon.

Excitement incident to the formal opening of the exposition and convention at the Palace interfered with the plans of the New York men to continue their deliberations Monday afternoon, June 8th, in the convention hall of the Palace immediately after the formal exposition opening ceremonies and business was not resumed until some time after the delegates had dined at the Marlborough-Blenheim Hotel, Monday evening.

The most important business transacted there was the election of officers which went through without a single contest and without a suggestion of friction or dissatisfaction. Each of the officers was unanimously chosen, the secretary of the association casting the association's unit vote for the following:

President—Samuel Trigger, of New York City, to serve his third consecutive term.

First Vice-President—William A. Beam, of Buffalo, elected for the first time.

Second Vice-President—S. Suckno, of Albany, elected for the first time.

Third Vice-President—William H. Hollander, of Brooklyn, elected for the first time.

Treasurer—John C. Davis, of Saugerties, elected for the third consecutive term.

Secretary—W. A. Douque, of New York City, elected for the second consecutive term.

International Committeeman—L. C. Smith, of Schenectady, elected for the second consecutive term.

The report of the Credentials Committee made just before the election of officers announced the division of the state into districts and the apportionment of votes in the convention as follows: Buffalo, seven; Syracuse, three; Binghamton, two; Utica, three; Albany, four; Westchester, two; Greater New York, twenty-one. This apportionment gave Greater New York votes equaling the combined votes of the several upstate districts.

Differences of opinion which apparently exist among members of the association's committee, which has in charge the preparation of by-laws and a constitution for the government of the association, were responsible for the only lively discussion which took place during the convention.

W. H. Linton, of Little Falls, N. Y., chairman of the Committee on Constitution and By-Laws, informed the convention that the committee was desirous of knowing the opinions of members of the association concerning several points upon which members of the committee had been unable to agree. Chief of these points, he said, had to do with the fixing of the amount of dues to be paid by members of the state organization and the manner of collecting these dues. Discussion which followed, participated in by Mr. Linton, L. C. Smith, of Schenectady; Philip Rosenson, of Brooklyn; John F. Miller, of Buffalo; Secretary Douque, and others, showed much diversity of opinion on these matters among the members of the association. One view expressed was that the dues fixed by the state organization should be so small that an organization strong in membership could not fail to result and another view was that the question of dues was an insignificant one, the most important thing being to show the exhibitors throughout the state the benefits which they were receiving, and were in line to receive, from the state organization. The relative importance of the state organization and the various exhibitors' locals throughout the state also came up for discussion. Some of the members expressed the opinion that a strong state organization should be built up first and locals formed afterwards to partake more of a social nature. Others felt that the locals should come first. This discussion resulted from a difference of opinion among the members of the Committee on Constitution and By-Laws as to whether or not it ought to be made possible for an exhibitor to keep himself in good standing with the state organization without actively engaging in the work of an exhibitors' local should one exist in his community.

It had been expected that the Committee on Constitution and By-Laws would present a draft of their work to the convention in order that a form of constitution and by-laws might be adopted. Mr. Linton explained that the expected report could not be made because of the differences of opinion which had come up. After much discussion, on motion of Mr. Miller, of Buffalo, the matter of a constitution and by-laws was once more placed in the hands of the committee previously appointed with the understanding that they were to make their report to the board of directors of the association, who were given power to act in either adopting for the association the draft presented to them or forcing such changes as seemed best to them.

When adjournment was taken, no time or place had been specified for the holding of the next meeting.

TORONTO EXPOSITION NEXT.

G. Gordon McGarry, director general of the Motion Picture Exposition at Toronto, Ont., scheduled for June 20th to 27th, was among the visitors at Grand Central Palace during the New York Exposition. Mr. McGarry reports many reservations for space at Toronto by manufacturers exhibiting in New York and has made arrangements to ship the exhibits direct from the Grand Central Palace to the Toronto Exposition hall.

OLCOTT'S COMPANY SAILS.

Sid Olcott and his company of motion picture players sailed on the Adriatic Thursday, June 11, for London. After a few days in that city the company will go to Beaufort, Ireland, where it will remain for some months making pictures. With Mr. Olcott is Miss Grant, leading woman; Hal. Young, cameraman; F. C. Gunning, scenario editor and press representative; Pat O'Malley, Will Reinick and several other players.

WM. RILEY HATCH WITH PATHE.

William Riley Hatch, who did such fine work as the Captain in "Paid in Full," is the latest acquisition to the Pathé Stock Company. To be not only a successful actor but an opera singer and artist as well is certainly most unusual, but Mr. Hatch has been all three. He first appeared in opera and from that to musical comedy was but a step. After a number of years of a musical career he was engaged by E. M. Royle for "The Squaw Man." Other engagements with such productions as those of William Gillette, "The Master Mind," etc., followed and his success in "Paid in Full" is still fresh in the minds of theatergoers.

Shuberts and World Film in Big Deal

Three-Million-Dollar Corporation Will Manufacture and Distribute Photoplay Versions of Big Dramatic Successes Controlled by Several Prominent Producers.

ONE of the most important combinations which has ever been formed in the photoplay world was effected Wednesday, June 10th, when a three-million-dollar corporation, representing the combined interests of the World Film Corporation and the Shubert Theatrical Company, was announced.

The purpose of the combination is to add in photoplay form, throughout the civilized world, the big dramatic and spectacular successes controlled by the Shubert Company to the regular output of the World Corporation.

The plan is stupendous and an organization to carry it through has been worked out in such a manner that the success of the undertaking seems assured.

Officers of the big corporation which is to both manufacture and distribute the features have not yet been elected, but will be within the next few days.

The combination is one of two very important companies, each of which has long been possessed of a powerful working organization. In a general way, the Shubert interests in the combination will be the manufacturing interests and the World interests the distributing and sales interests.

The World company, originally capitalized at $50,000, and now operating twenty-two distributing offices throughout the country, with a capitalization of $250,000, has been raised to a position of commanding importance in the field through a still further increase in capitalization to $2,000,000, which represents two-thirds of the capitalization of the new combination. The Shubert end of the deal is represented by a capitalization of $1,000,000. All of the stock for the new enterprise has been underwritten and bought by the banking firms of Edward B. Smith & Co., of New York and Philadelphia; Huhn, Eddy & Co., of New York, and George A. Huhn & Sons, of Philadelphia.

The Shubert Theatrical Company, which has joined the World Corporation in bringing about this new combination, controls hundreds of stage productions, including dramas, farces, comedies and spectacles, representing the interests of the William A. Brady enterprises, the Charles A. Blaney enterprises, and Owen Davis. Some months ago, it will be recalled, the Shubert-Brady combination embarked in the film manufacturing business and the Shubert Feature Film Corporation, an organization for the handling of the product, resulted. No releases have been made up to the present time, but a number of features, including the film version of such successes as "The Lure," "America" (the New York Hippodrome production), "The Gentleman from Mississippi," "The Whip" and "The Dancer and the King" have been made and are ready for the screen. The combination which has just been made was planned about two months ago, and while the details were being worked out the Shubert features were kept off the market. It is now announced that releases will begin, through the World Film Corporation, early in September.

Under the terms of the contract between the Shubert Theatrical Company and the World Film Corporation, the Shubert Film Corporation will be eliminated, at least in the matter of distributing, the superior organization of the World company handling the features.

It has been announced that there are already available for filming purposes by the manufacturing end of the combination more than 200 plays, among which may be mentioned: "The Midnight Sons," "Girls," "Marcelle," "The Blue Mouse," "The Summer Widowers," "The Girl Behind the Counter," "Way Down East," "Little Miss Brown," "Baby Mine," "Bought and Paid For," "Mother," "Little Women," "The Balkan Princess," "The Little Church Around the Corner," "Across the Pacific" and "The Boy Detective," in addition to the three or four big features which have already been made.

The plan of the new organization is to release one of these big Shubert features each week, beginning in September. These features, of course, will be in addition to such other of the very best features as can be bought in the open market in the future in accordance with the World Film Corporation's practice of the past.

Some idea of the ultimate scope of the new combination may be had when it is recalled that the World Film Corporation, even before the present big deal which will give it a tremendous increase in its working capital, was operating offices in the following cities in the United States and Canada: New York, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Detroit, Minneapolis, Boston, Indianapolis, Chicago, Kansas City, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, Atlanta, Buffalo, St. Louis, Dallas, New Orleans, Washington, Denver, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle and Toronto.

HACKETT'S STRONG ARGUMENTS FOR PICTURES.

Well-known American "Legit" Star, Now Filming "Monsieur Beaucaire" in France, Sets Forth Novel and Radical Views.

James K. Hackett, who is now in Paris playing in the film presentation of "Monsieur Beaucaire," which is being made by the Famous Players Film Company, under the direction of Edwin S. Porter and Hugh Ford, became an enthusiastic advocate of the moving picture more than a year ago when he posed for the Famous Players' production of "The Prisoner of Zenda"—among the first of the American stars to appear in a feature film. At that time he was enthusiastic from the standpoint of the scenic and artistic possibilities, and the courtesy and liberality with which he was treated by Messrs. Zukor, Frohman and Porter; but in an interview which Mr. Hackett has just given to a Paris newspaper, Le Courrier, he has announced another even more cogent reason for allegiance to the films.

"When I posed for the Famous Players Company in 'The Prisoner of Zenda,'" said Mr. Hackett, "I do not now mind confessing that I expected that so doing would have an effect—trifling, I hoped, but, nevertheless, noticeable—upon the receipts to which I would play in the following regular dramatic season. I was warned by many of my friends that when the public could see me for the small prices charged in the picture houses they would be reluctant to pay the higher scale I charge in the theaters.

"Having always been fond of being a discoverer and pathfinder, however, I decided to see for myself what the effect would be. To my amazement, I find that my business the past year has been the best that I have had in many seasons, despite the fact that the past theatrical year has been notorious as the worst in many years.

"That my personal exception to the rule can be charged to nothing but the advertising and interest in me created by the Famous Players for my performance in the 'Prisoner of Zenda,' I am absolutely convinced. As soon as I realized this I immediately arranged to pose for the Famous Players in 'Monsieur Beaucaire,' and you may rest assured that I shall never allow a year to pass without posing for at least one big feature film for the Famous Players, and I hope to find time to appear in at least three.

Valuable Advertising for Even "Legit" Stars.

"In my opinion, any player who neglects an opportunity to appear on the screen is losing a possibility for the most valuable advertising in the world, and those who do not take advantage of it will quickly find themselves surpassed in the race for distinction and financial recompense in the legitimate theatrical world.

"I do not agree with those who say that the moving picture has had a bad effect on the regular theatrical business. I do say most emphatically, however, that the moving picture has done more to raise the standard of the legitimate productions than any other influence which has ever been known. There is just as much reward to-day for the meritorious production as there ever was, but the moving pictures provide so much and such good entertainment for so little cost that they have made absolutely hopeless the mediocre play presented at a scale of prices ranging from twenty-five cents to one dollar or one dollar and a half or two dollars.

On my return to the United States I am going to introduce a new idea in connection with my theatrical productions. It seems to me to be almost revolutionary in its departure from established custom and if it has the effect which I foresee it will tend to make a success almost unheard of.

Photoplay as Aid to Stage Presentation.

"The idea is this—I am going to rehearse my company in the usual way until they have reached the stage of perfection at which a dress rehearsal is called. Then at a dress rehearsal I am going to have a moving picture made of the play, and I am confident that when I have this before me and can repeat it time after time without the slightest change that I shall be able to discover many helpful ideas and improvements which cannot be seen in the regular rehearsal or performance. Even more valuable than to the manager or stage director will this film be to the player. Watching themselves on a screen with every detail reproduced in exact and pitiless sharpness, should enable actors to correct faults and make improvements in their work far more intelligently than by the directions of any director.

"Words cannot describe how this method will aid a manager to obtain the proper perspective of his production, and to properly weigh the values. When he watches it in rehearsal day after day he is insensibly impressed with the personalities of his players. No matter how hard he tries to be impartial he is influenced by his personal likes and dislikes. He may perhaps think that the voice of a player is so beautiful or so suited to the part that he loses the effect of the player's work and thus fails to see faults which are instantly apparent to an audience. Again, he may be so impressed by that intangible something which, for want of a better name, we call magnetism, that he is carried away with it and fails to see the technical faults of the actor.

"With the entire performance unfolded before him as a moving picture will do, he will be able to analyze and criticise without the personal equation entering into the matter and so his judgment should be materially improved.

Hackett Program Calls for Some Long "Leps."

"As soon as I have finished the scenes of 'Monsieur Beaucaire' which are now being taken in France, I shall cross over to England for those which are to be made there and then sail at once for New York. After a day or two there I go to California to play in the Greek Theater of the University of California, and then jump across the Continent once more to begin the series of productions I shall make at the Hackett Theater in New York."

HAS CAPITALIZED HIS "WASTING" PROCLIVITY.

Thornton Fisher, Well Known Newspaper Artist, Drew His First Funny Pictures in Copy and Text Books at School to the Great Annoyance of His Teachers.

Readers of the Moving Picture World from time to time have been permitted to enjoy some of the clever work done by Thornton Fisher, well known cartoonist with the New York Herald and known throughout the country through the "syndicating" of some of his important series of drawings. Mr. Fisher has written and illustrated a number of biographical sketches which have appeared in the World.

A disposition to "waste his time" in school by drawing funny pictures in his copy book and text books to the delight of his fellow pupils and the disgust of his teachers, seems to have been the compelling influence in launching Mr. Fisher upon the career which he has made so successful. From the public schools in Cincinnati, his birthplace;

Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Washington, and Greensboro, N. C., Mr. Fisher moved on to the art school in New York. Some time later he became a reporter on the old Daily News in New York and saw the inside of a newspaper art department for the first time.

His early experience as a newspaper reporter has given Mr. Fisher a considerable advantage over some others in the same line of work. He writes jingles and verses with facility and skill and has "covered" national political conventions, interviews, court work, and police news for a number of the leading newspapers and is therefore well grounded in "atmosphere."

On the New York Herald Mr. Fisher did a series for the Sunday edition entitled "The Wishing Wasp" which was syndicated to various newspapers. Another series, "Do You Know Why?", is handled by the World Color Printing Company, of St. Louis.

Quite recently Mr. Fisher has transferred his allegiance from the New York Herald to the New York World.

PICTURE MAKING ON MT. SHASTA.

Here is shown the entire cast of principals from the Lasky Studios, on their way up the side of Mount Shasta for a snow scene. The players left Los Angeles for Frisco by rail, and from San Francisco to the foot of Shasta, they toured in rented cars. Guides and other motor cars were then procured and the run to the top of Shasta was begun.

The autos took the party several thousand feet, after which climbing was resorted to. Roped together, much the same as Alpine climbers, the party, consisting of Dustin Farnum, Winifred Kingston, Messrs. Salisbury, Kley, De Mille, Apfel, La Reno, Miss Zuber and Billy Elmer struggled for nine hours ere they passed the timber line and struck the deep snow.

The Lasky Company Going up Mt. Shasta.

Several scenes were taken atop Shasta and immediately after the company left for Calistoga, Cal., where a few scenes are to be taken on the hillsides and midst the petrified forests.

We have the word of Harry Reischenbach that these autos are going uphill, although they appear to be going down. He says on Mt. Shasta you have to go down to go up—a la scenic railway at Coney Island. He said something about "Momentum," whatever that means. Anyhow, our faith in Mr. Reischenbach's veracity is so profound that we take his word for it.

ERNEST SHIPMAN.

MR. SHIPMAN, whose energies have in the past been devoted to the general office management of the business of the Pan American Film Company, will hereafter be active, on the outside in the affairs of the various film companies in which he is personally interested, including, of course, those of his pet child, as it were, the Pan American Film Company.

Ernest Shipman.

The following is a list of companies of which Mr. Shipman is the active representative: The Pan American Film Company, the Capital Film Company, the Colorado Motion Picture Company, the Rocky Mountain Picture Company, Arthur J. Aylesworth Pictures, Ltd., the Great West Motion Picture Company, the Occidental Motion Picture Company.

In addition to these interests, Mr. Shipman is associated with Stanley H. Twist in the management of the Inter-Ocean Sales Company. In assuming these added responsibilities, Mr. Shipman"s vigorous physique will prove a valuable asset, and he carries with him the best wishes of all who know him.

Lillian Gish

PERHAPS none of the young women now appearing in motion pictures has arisen more rapidly in popular favor than has Lillian Gish, one of the Majestic stars, who is now only seventeen years old. She gained her first stage experience in Springfield, her home city, when six years of age. Her aunt was a member of a theatrical company playing "The Little Red Schoolhouse." A child was needed in the play and Miss Gish was pressed into service. She went out on the road with the company and remained several weeks.

Lillian Gish.

Miss Gish was ambitious to be a dancer. After taking a course in fancy dancing, she became one of the fairy dancers with Sarah Bernhardt during one of her American tours, when eight years old. After two years with Bernhardt, Miss Gish quit the stage and entered a girls' school where she remained until she was fifteen. She then left school and went to New York to complete her dancing course.

The natural poise and power of expression possessed by Miss Gish attracted D. W. Griffijth's attention and he promptly engaged her for the Biograph Company. This was two years ago. Under the able instruction of Mr. Griffith, Miss Gish made rapid progress, and in less than a year she was considered one of the foremost emotional actresses in silent drama. When Mr. Griffith left the Biograph to become chief producer of the Reliance and Majestic companies in the Mutual Film Corporation, Miss Gish went with him.

With only two years' experience before the motion picture camera, Miss Gish has gained the distinction of being one of the most natural emotional actresses in the silent drama. Her chief charm lies in her natural poise. She seems to live in the part she is endeavoring to portray, and in the art of conveying her emotions to the motion picture screen, without resorting to gestures of unnatural facial expressions, Miss Gish is probably without a peer.

Miss Gish has two hobbies—collecting rare old books and playing golf. She is a keen student of literature and very fond of Shakespeare's works. She is also a lover of poetry, with Tennyson's poems as her favorites. She appeared recently in "The Battle of the Sexes," "Home, Sweet Home," and other Griffith productions.

$80,000 THEATER FOR DETROIT.

Detroit Theaters, Inc., 1106 Union Trust Building, Detroit, Mich., composed of William F. Klatt as president, and James Strasburg as secretary-treasurer, is to build an $80,000 picture house in Woodward Avenue, between Englewood and Rosedale Avenues, that city. Plans have been completed by William B. Stratton, architect, and work will be started shortly. The structure will be two stories in height, of brick and stucco with stone and marble trimmings. The name of the house will be the Rosedale, and it will have a seating capacity of 1,800. The appointments will be luxurious and the furnishings will be of the first order. A pipe organ of the latest type will be one of the numerous interesting features.

SULLIVAN PURCHASES GRAND THEATER.

C. S. Sullivan, proprietor of the Royal at Escanaba, Mich., has purchased the Grand Theater in that town. Mr. Sullivan has completely remodeled his latest acquisition, making it one of the most handsome and up-to-date picture houses in upper Michigan. It has a seating capacity of 350. The projection battery consists of two Simplex projectors and a Mercury Arc Rectifier. The pictures are projected upon a Gold Fibre screen, and the X-Ray lighting system is used. The program is changed three times a week—Monday, Thursday and Sunday. The house had been closed for about eight months before Mr. Sullivan took it, and business has been excellent since the house has been under its new management.

The Lunatics

A Two-Part "Leading Players" Picture That Achieves Breathless Suspense in Developing a Startling Situation.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

MYSTERY AND TERROR are two of the ever-ready chords leading to the human heart. Any picture that touches these effectively is sure to be popular. Love, mother-love, the triumph of justice, the struggle of the brave against great odds, terror and mystery—art has no deeper or greater themes than these. "The Lunatics" is set in an asylum in which the inmates have got the upper hand and are ruling things while a terrible thunder storm lasts. There are many attendants; but they have all been locked in a barred chamber. The head doctor has been "cured." He now lies in one of the offices. The craftiest crazyman of them all has taken his place. Immaculate in the doctor's frock coat, one of his hands splashed with red, he is now the sententious head doctor and ready to "cure" any others who may need his administrations.

Scene from "The Lunatics" (Leading Players).

It so happens that a young journalist has been given as an assignment the duty of writing-up the "system" of the doctor of this asylum. Some new and interesting ways of treating defectives and psychopaths have been developed, and the magazine wants an account of them. A trip to the asylum has appealed to the man's pretty wife, so she is accompaning him. Just as a terrible storm breaks they arrive, knowing nothing of what they are coming to. We know just enough to be sure that something fearful has happened. We have seen that the crazy people have escaped from the cells and that they have overcome some of the guards. By skillfully worked-out stages, suggesting stealth and filled with suspense, we have watched how the doctor was caught and held down, the inmates crowding around him, one with a knife to "cure" him quickly. That is all we have seen. Now the journalist with his wife finds no one at the outer gate. The court inside is also empty. They approach the old mansion and it, too, seems deserted. No one meets them in the halls or rooms until they enter the office of the head physician and there, sitting alone, is the craftiest lunatic. They bow, introduce themselves and show their letter which he reads with interest. Begging them to be seated he describes his "method" to them. To their astonishment, one of the chief steps in this new cure is cutting out an eye and then, very carefully, the throat is to be sliced with a sharp knife. They notice that his hand is covered with blood.

Scene from "The Lunatics" (Leading Players).

At this point a carefully chosen collection of queer "mugs" comes in and it is impossible for the visitors to escape. One of the lunatics wants to begin the treatment on the journalist. The storm is seen flashing brightly through the folding, tall windows and this so disturbs the cranks that nothing is done for the time. At length the man is grabbed and drawn to the table. A wilder gust of wind than usual blows the big window wide. The wind sweeps across tearing at curtains and scattering the doctor's papers to all corners. Again the lunatics cower and this gives time for the keepers, now freed by one of their number who has taken a boat around by the moat and carried them out of the barred court, to arrive and bring help.

The backgrounds are a great aid in making the impression this picture aims at. It is no scientific asylum full of dreary sameness where it happens, but a private sanitarium in an old castle with its grounds and high iron fence. It is weird and awe-inspiring; just the place for a terrible adventure. The photography, in tone and distinctness, in spite of the fact that the storm is heavy overhead, seems alive. Glimpses of the hurrying clouds are shown and long flashes of lightning. The players, especially the crafty lunatic, who is played by M. Gouget, a strong man with powerful hands and a good actor, keep the action convincing. It is not a picture good for three-year-olds to see just before going to bed at night; but for grown folks it is a strong offering. It is the kind of picture that will put immediate quietus on any buzz of conversation in the auditorium and will be called "a terrible, powerful" picture. It is artistic, real and gripping.

"Pierrot, the Prodigal"

An Adaptation from the French Pantomimic Opera of the Above Caption by Mario Costa.

This offering is certainly unique in many ways. It differentiates initially from other picture offerings in that it contains no sub-titles. However, it is remarkably clear and unfolds into a delectable entertainment, and the most captious critic is disarmed by the accompanying music, which is not only charming but stimulating. Mr. Kleine is furnishing a treat for lovers of music as well as motion picture enthusiasts. It is an allegorical story full of romantic incidents and vicisitudes in the life of Pierrot, who is weak-willed and amative.

Mlle. Francesca Bertini handles the title role admirably. The supporting cast is adequate in all respects, especially on the part of Louisette, his wife, whom he forgets, but to whom he is ultimately reunited through the efforts of the fatherly Pochinet (one of the best rendered parts in the production). This offering to the public, in the beautiful new Candler Theater, New York, reflects great credit not only on the producer of this visualized version of "Pierrot, the Prodigal," but to Messrs. Kleine and Bloom, the proprietors.

Pierrot is followed by another three-reel offering, featuring Mlle. Lyda Dorelli, a famous actress in "The Naked Truth," the plot of which is taken from the sensational French novel, "La Femme Nue," by Henry Bataille. A dramatization in English was a big success in London entitled "Dame Nature." This production was well received. The musical accompaniment for "The Naked Truth" is by Modest Altschuler, conductor of the Russian Symphony Orchestra, of New York City. Much applause greeted both numbers. The harmony of the whole evening was highly delectable.

WORLD FILM CORP. AGENTS IN NEW YORK.

The World Film Corporation has taken advantage of the New York Exposition to call in the following managers for a conference: Sidney Harris, E. H. Painter, D. Dickerson, F. B. Murphy, Harry Weiss, G. J.. Trask, Leo Levison, W. H. Irvine, R. S. Bell, Geo. J. Beihoff, Hunter Bennett, Jos. Partridge. The boys were given a lunch at the Astor Hotel, on Monday, after which they went into executive session to discuss trade conditions.

"The Actress' Redemption."

Pretty Light-O-Love Heroine Ruins a Man Then Falls in Love With Him in a New "Features Ideal" Four-Part Picture.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

IN GIVING an account of this offering perhaps we should reckon as most important the picture that it draws of a son wasting his time at college and spending thousands of francs on a woman while his old parents at home are stinting themselves to keep him going. This actress, a very pretty woman, is played by Maria Jacobini, who puts into her role the appeal of her sex by her wheedling, coaxing, yet charming ways. We sympathize with the youth enough to make us interested in him. To get her a pearl necklace he puts himself into the hands of an evil usurer, a true bird of prey who induces him to forge his father's name to three notes. This villain knows that the old man has an ancestral home and thinks he can get it cheap. He reasons rightly that the father will let it go to save the family reputation; will give up his all rather than have his only son branded as a forger. The usurer is the picture's best drawn character. He is very well acted and full of atmosphere. The third asset of the offering is its elaborate sets, interesting backgrounds and perfect photography. These last three items are grouped together, for they fall naturally under the head of staging.

Scene from "The Actress' Redemption" (Features Ideal).

The story is fair. No one will count it a great picture of life; but it gives a good chance to Mlle. Jacobini, provides action that doesn't drag and leaves a concise and definite impression. It is not new and the ending is not quite what one would ordinarily expect from the situation, nor does it convince wholly. Yet it is sensational, has a fair measure of suspense, and will pass very well, bolstered as it is by its many points of undoubted excellence, as an entertaining, average feature offering.

When the son has brought ruin on his parents and they are turned out of the home where they have lived together, he runs away with the intention of rehabilitating himself elsewhere. The actress finds the torn fragments of the father's note to the son, and, piecing them together, learns the inner truth of the matter. She finds that she really loves the young man and determines to make such restitution as she can. She hears that the home now owned by the usurer is vacant and herself rents it from him. We can see that the old man has been somewhat stricken by her beauty. He calls on her after she has occupied the house and she persuades him to sign the place away to her. Her actress smile fades a bit too quickly and he realizes that he is really repugnant to her and tries to snatch the deed back. She dodges around the table and slips past him and, in the library, has time to hide it in a book. He is too slow to see which book and her servants eject him forthwith from the room.

We are shown that the village people, who have long respected the former owners, look upon her as an interloper. One evening she meets the boy's father, who has stolen in to grieve in the old garden. He recognizes her and curses her. The usurer comes again and bribes the gardener to let him into the house so that he can search for the deed. The actress finds him going through the library. When she thinks him gone, she takes the document from its hiding place. He appears again with a revolver and, as she flees to take the deed to her lover's parents, he fires. She is wounded; but the villagers arrest the frantic usurer, and she stumbles into the cottage where the old people are living. Their son has just come home successful. There is a reconciliation and the pleasant close of the story. The actress has now redeemed herself by her devotion to her duty greater than her fear of being shot.

AL. LICHTMAN LEAVES FAMOUS PLAYERS.

About to Embark on Personal Venture.

Al. Lichtman, who has been sales manager of the Famous Players Film Company since its organization, will leave that concern Saturday, June 20th, for the purpose of inaugurating a film brokerage office through which he will offer a personal sales service to film buyers, renters and producers. From a long and thorough study of trade conditions he has concluded that the necessity and desirability of such a connecting link among the three factors of the industry is so obvious that he is confident that his enterprise will fill a long-felt want.

Al. Lichtman.

In leaving the Famous Players, Mr. Lichtman stated that he did so with a great deal of sincere regret, as his connection with Mr. Zukor and his associates in the company has always been the most pleasant and harmonious, but gave as his reason for the change the ambition to do bigger things and create and nurture an enterprise of his own. He leaves with the good wishes and friendship of all the members of the Famous Players organization, who are as confident of his future success as Mr. Lichtman is himself.

DANCE AT COAST STUDIOS.

The Universal Film Company gave an informal dance to the west coast employees, June 6th, in appreciation of the splendid work of every man and woman connected with the organization in making up for recent fire loss in New York.

The dance was held at the Hollywood studios on the great 400-foot stage, which was enclosed with canvas and gaily decorated for the occasion.

The Two Big Men of the Mutual.

Harry E. Aitken, President—C. J. Hite, First Vice-President. Congratulating each other on a great year's business.

Manufacturers Advance Notes

"THE OLD COBBLER" (101 Bison).

What is success? Does it come from within or from without? That depends, one may say, on the attitude one assumes as to what success is. But why is it that some people, honest and wholesome, who have made the world better by living in it, seem cut out for misfortune and sorrow? If any man deserved the best the world had to offer it was old Nathan, the hero of this play. Howbeit, few men fared harder. And why? Some people would be inclined to throw down their hands when confronted with such cases, preferringt o consider them conundrums of life that never will be explained. Old Nathan could not understand the treatment that was accorded him, his wife was a drinker and his only son became a thief. And yet, was his life a failure?

Scene from "The Old Cobbler" (101 Bison).

"The Old Cobbler" is a play that at once reaches the deepest human sympathies, and while the principal figure in the story is largely a character study, a situation is developed and a problem propounded that demands a solution and explanation. As to what they are, you must see the play to find out. But in the finding out you will not only be absorbed in the working out of the tense story, but you will have pointed out an answer to a question—what is success?—in a way that is both new and startling. It is a play that is different—that has a meaning to it.

Murdock MacQuarrie is featured in the title role, that of the old cobbler. Mr. MacQuarrie shines greatest in a character role, and here is one that could not have been improved upon if it had been written especially for him. The supporting cast, with Lon Chaney and Mr. Rosson at the head, gives a telling account of itself. The settings, for the most part, are Western, picturesque and beautifully photographed. Mr. MacQuarrie, besides playing the lead, directed the picture. Incidently, it is his first since his affiliation with the Universal. The picture is in two reels; scheduled for release June 27.

ARCTIC HUNT FILMS.

Captain Kleinschmidt's Arctic Hunt Pictures, taken last summer, are a series of very unusual scenes. Never before have so many different large animals of these regions been shown in their natural haunts.

These pictures have been exhibited before the most representative bodies of men in the United States. When Captain Klinschmidt exhibited them for the first time in the Waldorf-Astoria, before the New York Zoological Society, the novelty afforded by the presentation in motion picture form of a report covering the results of the big scientific expedition brought out a critical audience of scientists, students and sportsmen given to big game hunting and motion picture exhibitors, each curious from an individual standpoint.

"Many of the audience have said that they never before heard a lecture that gave so much natural history as the one last evening," wrote Director Madison Grant the following day.

The pictures show close up views of roping sea lions, seals, walrus, scores of dogs fighting for the meat, polar bear swimming and being roped from the deck of the vessel, moose, caribou, porcupine, Arctic birds on their rookeries and in their native wilds.

There also are shown for the first time the immense herds of the hardy reindeer, there again we have millions of silver salmon shown swimming about and in the fish trap and being dumped aboard the fishing vessels.

The six reels were recently shown in the fine Montclair theater, New Jersey, at the end of a regular three-reel program for a charity benefit. This made a long program, but the audience, with very few exceptions, remained until the very last, and showed the keenest interest throughout.

"THE YELLOW TRAFFIC" (Blache Features).

A photoplay having the advantage of an exceptionally strong story dealing with a subject of intense interest to all lovers of picturesque drama far removed from the ordinary and well worthy of the great effort required for its artistic production.

Scene from "The Yellow Traffic" (Blache).

An excellent cast adds to the effectiveness of this virile drama. Olaf Skavalan, who besides being an actor of note is the champion under-water swimmer of the world, plays the first mate brother and is surrounded by a large company including Fay Cusick, Albert Lang, William Mong, George Davis, Jack Burns, Arthur Hill, Fred Erenst, Murry Belmont and John Montjoy, supplemented by a large number of Chinese actors.

A FIVE-REEL SUBMARINE PICTURE.

George M. Williamson, treasurer of the Williamson Submarine Film Company, Norfolk, Va., has been in New Rochelle, at the Thanhouser plant, which is to produce the under-sea prints for the Williamson Company, awaiting the return of Carl Louis Gregory, the first man in the world to take motion pictures under water. About 20,000 feet of under-sea stuff was taken, and the first release will be a five-reel feature. This five-reel production, by the way, will be the culmination of thirty years' experimentation with the Williamson submersible tube. The Moving Picture World had a story on this remarkable expedition on April 25. Mr. Gregory has been absent for two months in Nassau, Bahama Islands, and returned Wednesday, June 10.

"THE STRUGGLE EVERLASTING" (Lubin).

A vigorous society melodrama in which Henry Dawson is arrayed against his own father. The young man being possessed of a high sense of honor discovers that his father's immense fortune has been built upon the crookedness of high finance methods, he refuses to participate and leaves his home, mother and the girl of his heart. He also joins forces with the district attorney becoming his second and when the crash comes it becomes his duty to prosecute. The ordeal is tense and the old man dies of heartfailure under the merciless grilling of his own son. Honesty, however, prevails and Henry wins a glorious victory. The story is by Shannon Fife and the photoplay produced by Edgar Jones. The cast includes one of the best selected from the Lubin forces.

An Exciting Scene from "The Struggle Everlasting."

"THE SILENT WITNESS" (Victor).

A boy and girl who loved each other and the out-of-doors, a villain who sought to come between them and incidently enrich himself, and a camera; these are the principal actors in this human and thrilling drama of the West. Things looked black for the boy. The villain, his foreman, had contrived to compromise him in cattle stealing that was going on, but the eye of the camera told who the guilty party really was and also where the girl's heart really lay.

Lately the demand has been so strong and persistent that Warren Kerrigan appears in a series of the roles that first made him famous on the screen, that "The Silent Witness," and others to follow, is the result. The atmosphere of the West is vivid, there is a delightful romance in the story and the action is stirring.

Jack comes into the cattle town broke, looking for work. This he secures with a ranchman and, in that this ranchman has a pretty daughter, Vera, the position particularly appeals to the young cowboy. As the days pass Jack and Vera become attached to each other much to the disgust and anger of the foreman, George, who seeks Vera for himself. This foreman is the secret head of a gang of cattle thieves and he has been planning raids on his own boss' ranch.

Jack, in the course of his work, comes to suspect the foreman, but can find nothing on him. The foreman, on the other hand, schemes to compromise Jack in the cattle raids with the assistance of a Mexican. They plant on Jack's saddle an iron used in making over the brand on the horses that have been stolen. How a camera saves Jack, gives him the girl and the position of foreman, is the substance of the rest of the play.

SMALLWOOD AND GRANDIN LEAVE UNIVERSAL.

Ray C. Smallwood, director-photographer for Imp pictures on the Universal program, and Ethel Grandin, who has been featured in his productions, have announced their leaving that company this week.

Miss Grandin, although only twenty years of age, has been a motion picture favorite for the past three and a half years. Her first appearance in pictures was as leading woman of the Imp Company, where she followed Mary Pickford, playing opposite King Baggott. She later appeared in Bison 101 Ranch, Kaybee, Gem, Victor and Power's brands. For the past year Miss Grandin has appeared exclusively in Imp releases.

Mr. Smallwood is one of the pioneer independents, having been a member of the United States Film Company, of Cincinnati, six years ago, which company was a member of the old Motion Picture Alliance. Later he was associated with Melies, Imp, Kaybee and Universal.

In addition to being a capable director, Mr. Smallwood is one of the best photographic and technical experts in the motion picture industry.

Neither Miss Grandin or Mr. Smallwood have as yet announced any plans for the future. Mr. Smallwood is a member of the Photoplayer's Club in Los Angeles and the Screen Club, New York.

JACOB P. ADLER.

JACOB P. ADLER, the great romantic actor, who will be seen in the title role of "Michael Strogoff," the big five-reel feature which is the first production of Popular Plays and Players, Inc., has had an interesting career on the stage. Though nearly sixty years old, his carriage is as erect, his step as firm, his eyes as bright and his hand-clasp as eager as thirty years ago. His remarkable dignity of bearing makes him a conspicuous figure.

Jacob P. Adler.

Mr. Adler is well known in this country, where he has been appearing on the legitimate stage for twenty-eight years, in England and in Germany. His repertoire of speaking plays includes more than 200 different productions. He was born in 1855. He has been on the stage for thirty-six years. His first appearance was in Russia when he was twenty-three. Nearly thirty-two years ago, on November 9, 1882, he first appeared on the stage in England in "The Robbers," by Schiller. Twenty-eight years ago he came to America, where he has remained most of the time since, and was first seen in "Uriel Acosta" at the old German Theater in Eighth Street.

Mr. Adler has a following of thousands of theatergoers in the United States. Some ten years ago he toured the country playing Shylock in "The Merchant of Venice," and also in "The Kreutzer Sonata." Mr. Adler has his own theaters in New York, Philadelphia, Boston and Chicago. He has a high reputation on the stage as a master of facial expression and pantomime.

"I am greatly pleased with the selection of 'Michael Strogoff' for my appearance in motion pictures," he said. "Of all the plays in my repertoire, I think this best fitted for the screen because it has many thrilling and spectacular scenes. There is the burning of Moscow, the blinding of Strogoff, the burning of Irkutsk, the river ablaze as the fugitives escape by raft; Bohara, the big Tartar camp, and the big court and palace scenes. I think the picture is good. I'm sure we produced it very carefully and with enormous ensembles in the battle, fête and court scenes. The costumes alone must have cost a small fortune.

"I am very glad to be associated with Popular Plays and Players, Inc. You know I am under contract for two years to appear only in their pictures, so, perhaps, I will be seen soon again in another of my plays. I hope so, anyway, because I like moving picture work."

BRINGING THE EGGS TO MARKET.

The Wharton brothers, Theo and Leo, who comprise "Wharton, Inc.," of Ithaca, N. Y., came down to New York City the other day with their first production, a five-reeler, entitled, "In the Revenue Service." The negative was sold to Pathé Freres the same day for a mighty tidy figure and the boys took the night train back to the Feature Farm at Ithaca to raise another crop of thrills.

PICKER PURCHASES BURLAND THEATER.

David V. Picker, lessee of the Metropolis Theater, Third Avenue and 142nd Street, Bronx, New York, has purchased the entire stock of the Midas Amusement Company, controlling the Burland Theater, 985 Prospect Avenue, Bronx. The Burland is one of the biggest exclusive picture houses in the Bronx. Mr. Picker has resold to Mrs. Mary Matchet the Nostrand Theater, situated at Nostrand and St. Mark's Avenues, Brooklyn, N. Y.

"HIS SYMPHONY" (Kleine-Celio).

The caption, "a psychological photodrama," used in describing a motion picture play, sometimes frightens away lovers of quick action and stirring scenes who fear that these elements will be lacking. The fact that exciting physical action can abound in such a production, however, is beautifully exemplified in George Kleine's splendid Celio subject, "His Symphony," which will be released through the General Film Company Tuesday, June 23rd. This film contains not only a psychological vein of keen interest, but also an abundance of romantic dramatic action, including one of the best duel scenes ever shown in a two-reel picture.

Scene from "His Symphony" (Kleine-Celio).

"His Symphony" tells a story of life and love that cannot fail to be universal in its appeal. Princess Louise of Duxbaria meets, loves and is loved by Conrad Werner, a young composer, but the youth soon becomes a victim of the fascination of a charming Parisienne and follows her to France. Her flirtations awaken his jealousy and finally involve him in an affair of honor with one of the most proficient swordsmen on the continent. How he discovers the falsity of the Parisienne's affection, realizes his own real love for the princess and is regenerated through hearing the soft strains of one of his own symphonies, is prettily and convincingly portrayed. The role of the Princess Louise is played by Miss Francesca Bertini, a Kleine-Celio favorite.

"TRICKING THE GOVERNMENT" (Warner's).

Sid Olcott and his associates are establishing a reputation of turning out uniformly good pictures. Some are better than others but that none of them are without at least some distinguishing points of merit is a fact that is rapidly becoming established in the trade. "Tricking the Government," a three-reeler made by Mr. Olcott's company and scheduled for release by Warner's Features, Inc., June 22, is one of these "good" productions—it is not great but there is enough in it to make it attract attention on most programs.

Scene from "Tricking the Government" (Warner's).

The story is one of those sections of the South where making "moonshine" whiskey is a favorite indoor and outdoor sport. Moonshiners with long guns, the internal revenue officer who has been sent to ferret them out, and the inevitable girl who bestows her love upon the natural enemy of her father, are the ingredients of the tale.

Mr. Olcott is credited with having written "Tricking the Government" as well as producing it. His friends will congratulate him more upon the production than upon the story. Night scenes in the Everglades of Florida and a faithful representation of the picturesque environment of the "Florida cracker," poorest of the "po' white trash," are the most commendable features of the release.

"THE GUN MEN OF PLUMAS" (FRONTIER).

When the sheriff of Plumas County decided that he would not run again for office Joe and Arthur announce their candidacy for that position. Their rivalry is whetted to a keener edge by Dolly, who tells them that she intends to wait and see who becomes sheriff before considering either of their proposals. As election day draws near Joe fears that his chances are mighty slim.. Three professional gun men are called in and told to "get" Arthur. A fierce running fight follows shortly in which the stage is overturned and Arthur thrown out. The gun men are about to land their victim when the sheriff and his posse arrive and capture them. Later, Walt, the sheriff, takes the gun men from the jail and informs them that if they know what is healthy for themselves that they will vote for the right party. Their votes decide the election, Arthur winning. Dolly Larkin, Jos. J. Franz, Arthur Allardt, Walter Rodgers and Charles Huber carry the important roles. The producer is J. J. Franz and the author Karl R. Coolidge.

Scene from "The Gun Men of Plumas" (Frontier).

Notes of the Trade

THOMAS W. ROSS, who posed in Jesse Lasky's "The Only Son," arrived from Hollywood, Cal., with a reel of the picture at one o'clock, Thursday. A little later he delivered it at convention hall in the Grand Central Palace to Powers' operator, who ran it for the trade at three o'clock. "The Only Son" will open at the Strand for the week beginning Monday, June 15th.

• • •

The Vitagraph company, under the direction of James Young, is producing the historic play of "David Garrick." This production will possess great dramatic power. Mr. Young, who has played in "David Garrick," has made a special study of the drama and will leave nothing undone to make it a masterpiece.

• • •

Miss Ethel Grandin, the "Imp" of the Imp Company, is to be seen shortly in the role of a female reporter. It is the lead in a two-reel melodrama known as "The Reporter," now being produced by Ray Smallwood, director, at the Imp studio.

• • •

"Officer Kate," now in the course of construction at the Vitagraph studios, to be released in the near future, is one of those unusual comedies from the facile pen of William Addison Lathrop, the well known writer. Kate Price, the Vitagraph comedienne, will assume the title role. Kate will be seen at her best in this picture.

• • •

That famous story of many thrills, Marie Corelli's "Vendetta," is soon to be released as a special feature through the General Film Company by George Kleine. This is a big multiple reel feature and the greatest effort of the "Eclipse" Company of Paris.

"The Luck of the Tailor" is a refined comedy in which Harry Pollard plays the titular role. As a "Beauty" subject it maintains the standard of refined comedy established and will be well received. Excellent photographic quality and the splendid work of Margarita Fischer makes this a very attractive feature. Release June 23, 1914.

* * *

The spirited and colorful romance of B. M. Bowers' "Chip of the Flying U" is being produced in California by the Selig Company, with Tom Mix, the champion cowboy, in the leading role, which will sustain the leadship of the diamond S brand in the Western line.

* * *

It appears that the Vitagraph Company, through "The Price of Thoughtlessness," which they produced for the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Safety Crusade, has gained a reputation which makes them the recognized producers of films of that character. They have made three already, under the directorship of Ned Finley.

* * *

One of the pretentious photodramatic attractions soon to be presented by George Kleine, will be "Carmen," with Marguerite Sylva, the famous grand opera diva, in the title role. It was made at Seville, Spain, in order to give local color. Mlle. Sylva gained widespread popularity in this country as the prima donna of "Gypsy Love."

* * *

"The Painted Lady's Child" is a two-part society drama with an intense pathos permeating the entire production, but concluding with a vigorous and wholesome atmosphere. Wm. Garwood and Vivian Rich play leads with Jack Richardson as the villain. The histrionic work is exceptionally well presented and deserving of marked commendation. The subject will be released June 22, 1914.

* * *

Wm. N. Selig is back east after a brief but busy experience in California, where he has been inspecting and regulating the big Selig interests in Los Angeles. Thomas Nash, who had been associated with Mr. Selig for seventeen years, formerly manager of the Selig Edendale studio, resigned and Thomas Parsons, who had been next in length in Selig service, was appointed as the general manager and will continue in his former capacity as manager of the Selig Zoo.

* * *

"Goodness Gracious" ran for a week in a big theater in Los Angeles, and was a big hit. One of the beach houses, Le Petite, which advertises as having "The Pick of the Pictures," featured "Goodness Gracious" and packed the house three times an evening for three evenings.

* * *

Modest Altschuler, conductor of the Russian Symphony Orchestra of New York City, has been engaged by George Kleine to direct the orchestra of the new Candler Theater, Forty-second Street, west of Broadway.

* * *

"To Kill a Man," Jack London's story under this title, was dramatized by Frank A. Cooley, assistant director of the "Beauty" company, and presented by himself and Mrs. Cooley at the Potter Theater, Santa Barbara, Cal., on Memorial Day on the occasion of the "Flying A" baseball clubs Vaudeville.

* * *

Colin Campbell, of the Selig Edendale studio, and his players will voyage to the Panama Canal Zone, where they will vitalize Rex Beach's romance, "The Ne'er Do Well."

* * *

Tefft Johnson, the Vitagraph director, has added another gem to his "Sonny Jim" series. His latest production has given him chance of showing his ability as an animal trainer. The picture has four bears in the cast and the way he has put them through their stunts has put him in line for the production of several of these animal pictures, in which little Bobby Connelly will be the hero.

* * *

"A Kingdom at Stake," the three-reel Kleine-Eclipse feature, is scheduled for release through the General Film Company as a special feature June 29.

* * *

Wm. J. Tedmarsh, more familiarly known as "Ted," has been in pictures of the "Flying A" variety for about two years. He has proven very popular and is the personification of good nature.

* * *

In Los Angeles the stock companies united enlist over a hundred people and seven producers, started work on "The Rosary," a big seven-reel subject, based upon Rowland and Clifford's melodramatic masterpiece by Edward Rose, which has been a wonderful stage success for many seasons.

* * *

The warm weather does not seem to affect the attendance at the Vitagraph Theater, as the interest in the new bill grows daily and presages a long engagement for the present program.

* * *

A wireless message to the offices of the Life Photo Film Corporation from Edward M. Roskam, its president, on board the Olympic, advising that he has taken several hundred feet of motion pictures on board, showing Colonel Roosevelt, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, Evelyn Nesbitt Thaw and twenty of her stars, Marie Lloyd, etc.

* * *

Martin J. Faust, director with the Whitman Feature Company, Cliffside, N. J., is finishing up "Jane Eyre," a five-reel production treated at a different angle than other Bronte plays, and will follow it with "Lena Rivers," in five reels, the scenarios for which were written by John William Kellette.

* * *

Thomas Santschi, who has been associated with the Selig stock company longer than any other actor, has been appointed a producer, a position well earned both for faithfulness and artistic capacity.

* * *

The artists of the Selig Polyscope plant in Chicago have received numerous courteous letters of appreciation from representatives of the Edison, the Vitagraph and the Lubin companies, who went to Chicago to atttend the grand ball given by the moving picture exhibitors at the Coliseum, and who were afterwards entertained informally at the big plant around Selig Square. The universality of opinion is that the Selig plant is one of the most perfectly appointed that the players had ever visited.

Elmer Boseke and his famous polo pony, Blue Knot, take part in "Blue Knot, King of Polo." Edward Coxen and George Field appear as brothers, rivals for the hand of the same woman. Coxen wins as the story evloves and Field concocts a diabolical plot to get advantage, but fate exposes him. The picture is being made by the American Film Company. It will be released June 24th.

* * *

John William Kellette, director for Whitman Feature Company, is writing the scenario of "Ole Oleson," a Ben Hendricks comedy, in a four-reel feature, with Hendricks in the title role of Ole.

* * *

J. N. Arens, manager of the Frontier studio at Santa Paula, loves California. During the last seven weeks there has been only three real sunshiny days. "California is all right, but give me Greenland for mine" is a little ditty that Mr. Arens has composed.

* * *

The Selig Polyscope Company last week received a very valuable consignment of unusual and interesting films from their far island possessions that show the habits and customs of the Aboriginals. This series of film is considered a very valuable addition to the great and growing catalogue of Selig Educational. W. N. Selig spares neither effort nor expense to secure the very best records of strange peoples in the odd corners of the earth.

* * *

Due to the able management of R. S. Bell, manager of the Toronto office of the World Film Corporation, it has become necessary to add to their staff in order to open additional offices throughout the Dominion.

* * *

Al Christie, director of the Nestor comedies, is aiding in the rebuilding of the burned program. Always far ahead of his own release, he offered to produce three dramas to fill in belated release. "The Way of Life," a story of the peculiar acts of fate in the underworld, has been completed. "On Rugged Shores" will be another bit of realism, while the third Christie drama will be "The Good Within."

* * *

A. A. Davison, superintendent of the Selig Chicago plant, who has been sorely troubled with "Jobs-Confortors" almost to the point of tragic termination, has happily fully recovered, and after a long and severe seige he is again on duty.

* * *

Mr. George H. Christoffers, special representative of the Syndicate Film Corporation, who have the distributing of Thanhouser's "Million Dollar Mystery" serial, is the father of a ten-pound baby boy, born May 27th. The mother is a sister of Mignon Anderson, of Thanhouser fame.

* * *

When the enlargement and refining of the Imp studio is completed, all the present scenery, at the studio will have been replaced with new and considerable improved sets. Also, all the lighting systems will have been remodeled, a fact that will materially improve, what with the new developing plant that is being installed, the Imp photography.

* * *

"On the Verge" is a coming Frontier drama that goes back to the days of the old Western dance halls. Joe Franz, Dolly Larkin, Walter Rodgers, Arthur Allardt and Nellie Bell are the principals; J. J. Franz the director, and Karl R. Coolidge the author.

* * *

The date for the release of Belasco's "Du Barry," produced for George Kleine, with Mrs. Leslie Carter in the title role, has not been definitely fixed. It is reported that Belasco's "Heart of Maryland," with Mrs. Lesile Carter, will be the first important film to be made by Mr. George Kleine in this country.

* * *

Joseph Partridge, former general manager of the Canadian offices of the General Film Company, has been put in charge of the same territory by the World Film Corporation.

* * *

Miss Ruth Donnelly now occupies the place of second lead woman in Director Frank Crane's company of Imp players. Miss Donnelly is a recruit from the legitimate stage and while her career and experienc was somewhat short-lived, compared to some, the experience and training was thorough and proficient.

* * *

Charles Huber, of the Frontier Company, is able to be around again after a month spent on crutches. He was seriously injured by a fall from a horse during a thrilling bareback riding scene in "Won By Wire."

* * *

Clifford Bruce, who has been playing leads with the Pathe St. Augustine company, has returned to Jersey City and from now on will be working regularly in the Pathe stock company at the main studio.

* * *

Lisbeth Blackstone, Dallas Tyler, Harrish Ingraham and John Charles have finished up their work in "The Toll of Love," a four-reel story of sacrifice released through Garrison Film Co., distributors, 1402 Broadway, New York City, and have the leads in "Jane Eyre," a four-reel story from Charlotte Bronte's book. John William Kellette, editor of the Whitman Features, is the author of "The Toll of Love" and adapted "Jane Eyre" for the screen.

* * *

"The Great Divide," the recent spectacular success of Henry Miller and Margaret Anglin on the speaking stage, will soon be seen in motion pictures. It is now being produced on a pretentious scale as a plural reel feature by Popular Plays and Players, Inc., with officers at 1600 Broadway, New York.

* * *

Mr. E. Mandelbaum, of the World Film Corporation, went to Cleveland this week to bring his family back to New York for the summer. The trip from Cleveland will be made by auto, which, barring any accidents, Mr. Mandelbaum expects to make in three days.

* * *

Mr. H. S. Ansley, of the Wisconsin Seating Company, Longacre Building, has closed a contract with Mr. George Balsdon, general manager, Photoplay Theaters Company, for eight thousand special design theater chairs to be installed in the six new houses they are now building.

The Famous Players Film Company presented for the first time, at the Strand Theater, New York City, on Thursday morning, June 11, H. B. Warner in the film version of the well-known drama of capital and labor, "The Lost Paradise," by Ludwig Fulda and Henry C. DeMille.

• • •

Albert Blinkhorn's seven-part feature, "David Copperfield," produced by the Hepworth Manufacturing Company of London, and released more than ten months ago, still continues to be a big attraction and heavy bookings are reported. Hepworth's other large productions, "The Old Curiosity Shop," "The Cloister and the Hearth" and "The Heart of Midlothian" bid fair to do likewise, if the existing demand may be taken as a criterion.

• • •

Paul Arlington, author of many comedy successes for Kalem and Mutual, has been engaged by the Nonpareil Company to adapt the famous "Happy Hooligan" cartoons for the screen. Jack Mahony, formerly of Reliance, will direct, and Billy Ritchie, the well known burlesque comedian, will portray the role of "Happy."

• • •

Charles Handford, recent manager of the Montreal office of the International Feature Film Corporation, Ltd., was entertained at dinner last week in New York by Herbert Lubin, president and general manager of that company, which lately has been taken over by the Allied Features, Inc. Hanford is playing center field for the Buffalo Federal League baseball club. At the end of the season he will resume his position in the Montreal exchange.

• • •

An echo of the Mexican war situation is graphically told in the "Arms and the Gringo," by Miss Anna Tuppen Wilkes, being produced by W. C. Cabanne, at the Reliance and Majestic Hollywood studios. The scenes of the "Arms and the Gringo" take place along the Mexican border. A romance setting forth the conditions between Mexico and the United States on the border during the war trouble, is vividly portrayed.

• • •

Arthur Leslie, chairman of the press committee of the Screen Club, has again been appointed on the press committee of the New York Moving Picture Exposition. Last year Mr. Leslie handled all the publicity for the exposition and made a record for front page stories on the New York dailies.

• • •

The Loftus Features, of Los Angeles, will manufacture two features per month, of four reels and more in length. Constance Crawley and Arthur Maude will star in one series, while modern pictures manufactured on the burning questions of the hour will be utilized for the second output. A large monitor investiture has been made in studio and equipment, and Joseph Shipman has quite an interest in the company, acting in capacity of general manager.

• • •

The Wiltwyck Feature Film Company, a new corporation, have established offices at Kingston, N. Y., and have purchased the New York State rights for the five-part dramatic classic, "The Human Wolves."

The presentation of "Cabiria" at the Illinois, Chicago's most exclusive theater, beginning June 18th, will be the first time photo-tableaux have ever been presented at the Illinois. This print and the one at the Knickerbocker, New York, which will remain indefinitely, will be the only ones shown in America this summer.

• • •

The Mott-Legaize Company controls a rather remarkable automatic machine for the projection of moving picture advertising in natural colors. By the use of a very inexpensive and ingenious glass slide, photographic negatives taken from life are super-imposed, one over the other, in a way that produces an exteremely brilliant colored moving picture, the translucent properties of the glass far surpassing those of any film yet devised. By means of this device, the article advertised is shown in actual use. The M. L. G. Co. has a space at the New York exposition.

• • •

The Industrial Moving Picture Company has completed, and has now in full operation at Chicago, the largest factory in the world devoted exclusively to the manufacture of commercial moving pictures. This new plant is located at 223-233 West Erie Street, within five minutes' walking distance of Chicago's business center. It occupies 7,000 square feet of floor space.

• • •

"Doc," a story by Eleanor Gates, author of books, stories and plays, including "The Poor Little Rich Girl," will be the first three-reel feature film to be released by the Eleanor Gates Photo Play Company. The story ran serially in the Saturday Evening Post of Philadelphia, and is now being made into a film by Director Richard Garrick at the studios of the company at Mt. Kisco, New York. Miss Gates personally selected the cast, choosing people who fitted the types in the story.

• • •

The Chariot Film Corporation is about to release a big feature having to do with the latest invention, "the tele-photophone," the telephone through which it is possible to see. This invention was recently demonstrated in Berlin, by the inventor, Professor O. R. Korn, and proved a big success.

• • •

The Golden Gate Film Exchange, 234 Eddy Street, San Francisco, has secured for California the Vitagraph-Leibler, eight-reel feature film, "The Christian."

• • •

Eddie Dillon, comedy director at the Reliance and Majestic studios in Hollywood, has started to produce "The Deceiver," a farce comedy by Miss Anita Loos, the youngest scenario writer in the country. Aside from directing the production, Fay Tincher, Tod Browning and Eddie Dillon are featured.

• • •

Director Fred Wright, of Pathe, has brought back his company from St. Augustine, Fla., for the summer. Among the players who return with him are William Riley Hatch, Clifford Bruce and Nell Craig. Mr. Wright says he is finishing up a picture of the Roman era which will be a winner.

WE THANK YOU

ATSCO, Inc., thanks its patrons for their liberal orders during the Convention, both of RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREENS and other supplies. Remember, please, we are equipped to supply everything—from the sidewalk to the back wall.

ATSCO, Inc. 218 W. 42d St. New York

POOR PICTURE LEADERS A CRIME.

Lack of Care in Preparing Explanatory Matter and Subtitles for the Screen a Deep Mystery of Business.

Written by Murray E. Crain.

A good many cases where some super-sensitive individual asked for a divorce from his or her mate because the latter mangled the English language with joyous abandon are on record in the courts. The decisions in such cases have varied, but the records seem to indicate that such an offense entitled the innocent partner to freedom from the galling bonds of matrimony in at least half the instances reported. The court has held in more than one such case that a certain amount of latitude in handling the King's or the President's English is permissible, but that there is a definite line of demarcation, which, when passed frequently, gives the victim grounds on which to sue for divorce.

The connection between the foregoing passage and motion pictures is that a good many people who insist on correct grammar in their associates are likely to ask for a divorce from the silent drama unless there is a change for the better in such subordinate details as the writing of leaders. The writer, while disclaiming relationship with Mr. Webster and having only a remote acquaintance with the celebrated Dr. Johnson through one or two popular writers of fiction, nevertheless has been struck time and again by the fact that the directors of expensive photoplays, after spending days and thousands of dollars on the correct staging of the productions, have been so wearied that they forthwith delegated the office boy or the porter to write the leaders. The writer, apparently, has not been alone in his observation of this point, judging from the unfavorable comments heard in many photoplay houses after a particularly crude leader has been flashed on the screen.

Just why so few pains have been taken in writing leaders must be left to some producing expert for explanation. The fact remains that the finished film, usually perfect in photography and other respects, often leaves much to be desired when it comes to this point.

An audience was watching with deep interest a Lubin production, entitled "A Real Estate Deal," in a Western city recently. The plot was promising and fascinating and the patrons of the house watched its unfolding with close attention. Toward the end of the reel, the wealthy landowner who had indulged in some peculiar tactics in an effort to depress the quotations on a certain piece of property, was caught red-handed and forced to write a letter to absolve the editor of the Tribune from blame by reason of an item which had appeared in his paper. So he wrote, "Drop all preceedings against the Tribune." The audience looked, rubbed its eyes, and looked again. The "e" had usurped the rightful place of the "o" without doubt. The picture was flashed on, but interest had flagged and the audience was busy discussing the note and the mistake. "Must have been a self-educated cuss," remarked one patron. "I shall never come to this theater again," said one middle-aged woman, whisking out with her son and heir tightly grasped by the hand. Thus the poor exhibitor, who probably had not noted the slight error committed by the film character, lost a perfectly good patron, and one who was good for at least three shows a week.

Something of the same sort was noticeable in Selig Polyscope's "The Game of Life." The hero who voluntarily marooned himself on an unchartered island, wrote, "My friend and executor, Paul Lawlor, is too return for me." A mere mistake of using the adverb instead of the infinitive, yet the audience looked on it as unpardonable. The hero in this case was a millionaire, presumably well-educated, though he went to a private school probably. This may explain the mistake. More likely, however, seems the suggestion that the little son of the director of the Selig Polyscope Company played a joke on his sire.

Some of the best of the producing companies evidently have paid comparatively little attention to this matter. Such errors are so frequent that it is evident, however, that some steps should be taken to have the leaders on a par with the mechanical excellence of the remainder of the film. Leaders are a minor part of the completed, finished production, of course, but the leader, as a matter of fact, bears about the same relation to the film as a newspaper head does to the story, and should receive the same amount of attention.

1914 MODEL MOTIOGRAPH

Made of the Best Material by Expert Mechanics with Latest Improved Machinery

IS A QUALITY MACHINE

All Exhibitors will Save 50% of Machine Cost in Investing in MOTIOGRAPHS

Used when the Best is Needed

ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MANUFACTURING CO.,

EASTERN BRANCH
21 East 14th Street, New York City

WESTERN BRANCH
564 West Randolph Street, Chicago, Ill.

Exhibitors News

Interesting Information Concerning Moving Picture Men Gathered By Moving Picture World Correspondents Everywhere.

MISSOURI.

THE court of appeals planned for Kansas City has been named by Mayor Jost. The court will be composed of Dr. George H. Combs, a minister; Trigg A. Long, a fire insurance agent, and Battie McCardle, an attorney. The court will have final judgment where the propriety of films shown in Kansas City is concerned. Fred F. McClure will continue to act as censor, with authority to suppress pictures he regards as objectionable. The exhibitor may then appeal to the Court of Appeals, judgment of which will be final.

Residents of Atchison, Kan., are exhibiting a good deal of pride over the advancement of Arthur Kane, now general manager of the Eclectic Feature Film Company. Mr. Kane makes his headquarters in New York. A few years ago, he was a leading exhibitor at Atchison, being manager of the old Palm Theater in that city. Mrs. Kane also is an Atchison product.

Levo Broman has opened an airdome at Marquette, Kan., the theater being redecorated for the formal opening.

L. Bevan Sands, a well-known exhibitor, with several houses in Missouri, has added the Gem Theater at Clinton, to his string. Mr. Sands operates theaters at Warsaw, Windsor and Chilhowee.

A new airdome has opened at Gentry, the orthodox theater being closed by the owners.

The Granby Missourian, a weekly newspaper, has entered into an arrangement with the owners of the Cozy Theater of Granby, whereby coupons clipped from the paper admit the holder to the performance any day in the week, with the exception of Saturday night.

A board of public welfare is provided for Pittsburg, Kan., in an ordinance recently introduced by the mayor. The board will consist of five members, and a salaried secretary. The latter will act as censor of the pictures shown in the city, other members of the board acting as a court of appeals to finally sit on protests.

The case against eighteen proprietors and employees of motion picture theaters of Pittsburg, Kan., went to trial on May 29. The exhibitors are charged with the heinous offense of operating their houses on Sundays. The moving picture men indicated their intention of demanding trial by jury.

Two Kansas City men hit upon the idea of making moving pictures of local events and showing them at local theaters. J. J. Brown and R. T. Miller recently launched their respective plans and as a result, Kansas City patrons of the silent drama are seeing all the sights at theaters. The innovation is proving popular, and no difficulty is being encountered in booking the new productions.

C. S. Edwards, a verteran of the motion picture industry and for the past five years with the Kansas City branch of the General Film Company, has tendered his resignation and taken charge of the new Kansas City offices of the Eclectic Film Company. Mr. Edwards is a pioneer in the moving picture business, entering it about eight years ago. He was assistant manager of the Yale Company until October, 1910, when that concern sold to the General. At that time, Mr. Edwards joined the Kansas City branch of the General as assistant manager, later being made manager. His resignation was effective June 1. He immediately opened offices on the second floor of the Ozark building at 928 Main street. The Eclectic branch will carry extensive lines of supplies as soon as alterations in the new quarters are completed. The General branch is temporarily under the management of J. E. Willis, special representative of the company, with offices at Chicago. Mr. Willis will select Mr. Edwards' successor in the near future.

The Gillham Amusement Company, which operates the Gillham theater at Thirty-first street and Gillham road, has filed articles of incorporation, the capitalization being fixed at $15,000. The chief stockholder is Robert (Dusty) Rhoades, the former major league twirler, who has been in the moving picture business in Kansas City since he withdrew from the other National pastime. Other incorporators are Cora Rhoades, H. E. Dean and Estella Dean.

The Standard Amusement Company, which recently leased the Willis Wood Theater, will not open that house to the public before September 1. In the meanwhile, extensive alterations will be made, and the old theater will present an altogether new aspect when again ready for devotees of the pictorial drama.

The Standard Amusement Company of Kansas City has made shifts in its houses as the result of the recent departure of Joseph Spero, manager of the Alamo, for New York. N. J. Flynn will have charge of the Alama in the future. J. H. Gilday will remain at the Twelfth-street Theater in the afternoon, but will be at the Broadmour at night. W. J. Smith will supervise the Twelfth-street house in the evening.

MURRAY.

SAN FRANCISCO.

THE Parnassus Theater in the Sunset district, which has been closed for some time, has been opened under the direction of J. P. Schoenberger. Mr. Schoenberger is well known in the Coast moving picture field, being the owner of the Harry Whitney and "Lucky" Scott pictures of hunting big game in Alaska.

The Forestic Theater, which was opened in the Sunset district a few months ago, but which has been closed for several weeks, has been re-opened by W. L. Hall.

Ben S. Cohen, representing the Film Syndicate, is here from Chicago to arrange for the release of the "Million Dollar Mystery." Several bookings have already been made and considerable interest has been aroused in the production. The story will probably be handled by the San Francisco Chronicle, but arrangements for this have not been completed. X. K. Stout is to have charge of the production in the San Francisco field and Mr. Cohen will leave shortly to establish headquarters at Los Angeles.

The Vitaslide Company, 70 Turk street, is getting a splendid volume of business from New York, a recent order from its traveling representative, Bernard Wolf, received by wire calling for one hundred slides. New ideas are being brought out regularly in the factory, and the capacity of this is to be enlarged to care for the immense increase in business that is promised.

The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of San Francisco adopted resolutions at its last meeting condemning the present practice of certain of the local exchanges in renting its posters, declaring that the rates are too high and the restrictions un-

At a recent public auction held in the Palace Hotel, an offer of $87,250 was made for the Princess Theater property on Ellis street, near Fillmore. This has been submitted to the owners and will probably be accepted.

Paxson Muir has secured a permit from the Board of Police Commissioners to conduct a picture theater at 802 Courtland avenue, and this will be opened shortly.

The Macograph Film Company has been reorganized and articles of incorporation were filed May 25. The directors of the concern are Walter L. McGinn, H. Von Hohenvest, G. E. Schneider, R. Becsey and J. P. Meiners, the company being controlled by Mr. McGinn and Mr. Von Hohenvest. The capital stock is placed at $200,000. This concern conducts a studio at Forest Hill, one of the most beautiful residence parks in San Francisco, and operates a school in connection with this. The office space in the Claus Spreckels building has been enlarged and preparations are being made for staging a number of high class productions.

The Larkin Theater will be opened at 816 Larkin street early in June by Joy B. Rothschild, a permit for this having recently been granted by the Board of Police Commissioners, which passes upon all applicaions of this character.

Th second week's showing of "Tess of the Storm Country," at Grauman's Imperial Theater, has been fully as successful as the first and crowds were turned away almost every evening. Had Mary Pickford happened in town during this week she would probably have been met at the Ferry by one or two of the Tesses who have been so noticeable on the street of late. Dressed in the garb of the heroine of the story, and carrying a basket of fish, several diminutive Mary Pickfords have threaded their way through the crowded streets this week, making as effective a showing as any advertising "stunt" ever carried out by a local moving picture house.

C. B. Price, who recently went to Los Angeles to take charge of the branch maintained there by the World Film Corporation, has resigned his position and left for the East, his place having been taken temporarily by William V. Wood, who travels for the firm in this territory. E. H. Duffy, assistant general manager there. Harry C. Drum, the new manager of the San Francisco office, arrived recently, coming by way of Los Angeles.

C. A. Alderman, recently of Butte, Mont., and well known through the Northwest, has accepted a position with the San Francisco office of the Eclectic Film Company, 67 Turk street.

Work on the remodelling of the Globe Theater on Mission street will be started within a few days for Turner & Dahnken and it will be but a short time until this popular house will again be open. The commencement of the work has been delayed but contracts have been let and an extension of time secured from the Board of Public Works.

The Eclectic Film Company, 67 Turk street, is fitting up a splendid exhibition room where exhibitors will have an opportunity of inspecting productions before making arrangements for showing them. This will be the first exchange here to have its own exhibition room. A Simplex projection machine will be installed.

The Globe Film Exchange has opened for business at 935 Market street, on the fourth floor of the Pantages Theater building, with a large stock of subjects. The business of this concern will be divided into two departments, one for features and the other a regular service department. The former will be devoted to state rights subjects. While in the East recently Marion H. Kohn, general manager of the firm, secured the Pacific Coast sales agency for the Underwood & Underwood photograph views released through the Elliott Service Company. Mr. Kohn plans to establish a branch exchange at Los Angeles early in July and later will open another at Seattle, Wash.

The California Motion Picture Corporation recently secured the consent of the Federal authorities to take moving pictures on Angel Island, where the quarantine station is located, and several scenes in one of its first productions were enacted there.

Business with Warner's Features has increased fully one hundred per cent. on the Pacific Slope during the past three months and J. L. Warner, who has had charge of this territory for some time, is leaving for New York well satisfied with the manner in which this concern's productions are being received. A. S. Hyman, the new manager for the San Francisco branch, arrived here recently and has since made a short trip to Los Angeles.

The National Film Producing Company, 111 Turk street, has just completed the taking of 1200 feet of scenic film for the Lake Tahoe Transportation Company. Pictures were also taken of the first automobile to pass over the Summit, in the Sierra Nevada mountains, during the present season, an honor much striven for. Moving pictures were also taken of the opening of the new ball park at San Francisco. E. N. Dusenberry of this firm has had considerable experience in taking pictures from aeroplanes and has a large amount of work of this character in view.

C. E. Ellis, formerly of the Unique Theater, Taft, Cal., has disposed of his interests to U. E. Jackson and is now operating at the Edison Theater, Newman.

The Peralta Theater has been opened at Fourteenth and Peralta streets, Oakland, by J. M. Samuel.

John's Theater will be opened at Elmhurst about the end of June. This is a new and splendidly equipped house.

The Jewel Theater at Palo Alto, Cal., is now being conducted by C. J. Russell, Jr., and L. A. Wetzel as the Bijou.

The Adeline Theater, Seventh and Adeline streets, Oakland, Cal., has been opened by K. Sudaha and A. Saba.

A. D. Bynon, formerly of the American Theater, Willows, has disposed of his interests in this and has opened an airdome in the lumber town of Weed in the northern part of the state.

F. M. Burgi has purchased the American Theater at Willows and has changed the name to the Princess.

The Bijou Theater has been opened at Visalia by G. S. Yamauchi.

Plans for the new theater of Turner & Dahnken at Watsonville have been revised and arrangements have been made for seating 1200 instead of 1000, as at first planned.

A. Richards, formerly in vaudeville, has taken over the Gem Theater, Santa Clara, Cal.

James M. French has disposed of his moving picture theater at Sisson, and is planning to take a road show through Northern California during the summer.

Work has been commenced on the enlargement of the Varsity Theater, University an San Pablo avenues, Berkeley, and when this is completed the seating capacity will have been increased to 700. The owner of this attractive and well patronized house is C. L. Mehrten, treasurer of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of California, and one of the pioneer exhibitors of the state. Mr. Mehrten entered the moving picture business with a traveling show about ten years ago and has kept pace with its many developments since then. He has a long-term lease on the Varsity Theater and has placed it well in the lead of the amusement houses of Berkeley.

Work is to be commenced early in July on the additions to the Lorin Photoplay Theater at South Berkeley and the capacity of this house will be greatly enlarged.

The National Photoplay Company has been incorporated at Los Angeles with a capital of $50,000, the directors being C. P. Larsen, A. E. Garcia, J. Jacobs, M. Fisher and R. Allen.

The Santa Barbara Motion Picture Company has been incorporated at Santa Barbara, Cal., with a capital stock of $200,000 by Lorimer Johnston, A. R. Edmonson, H. M. A. Postley, Clara B. Vail, E. J. Roesske, Caroline Johnston and O. W. Roesske.

Articles of incorporation of the America-Europa Film Co., have been filed at Los Angeles by C. J. Sineby, R. E. Nathansohn, Mrs. Cora Rose, E. K. Wiley and J. P. Keogh, the capital stock being placed at $75,000.

The Universal Screen Company has been incorporated at Los Angeles by G. Hessler, A. Bloomberg, R. Mays and A. Dodge, with a capital stock of $20,000.

After June 15 all places of amusement at Dinuba, Cal., will be closed Sundays, an ordinance to this effect having been passed by the city council. Moving picture shows come under the ban.

A communication was recently received from H. J. Loken, of the First Christian Church of Berkeley, for permission to operate a moving picture machine in that church. At the request of the council Everitt Northrup, deputy marshal and representative of the fire underwriters, presented a communication setting forth specifications for the erection of the booth which the fire underwriters would require. Robert Baird, representing property owners, filed objections to the operation of a moving picture machine on the grounds that it would increase the insurance rates on the adjoining property. As the subject is not covered by the ordinance regulating the erection of moving pictures the matter was referred to the fire marshal.

A brick theater building, covering a lot 50 by 100 feet, will be erected at Marshfield, Ore., by the William Noble estate, for G. J. Lomanski, of the Royal Theater.

A moving picture house with a seating capacity of 750 is to be erected at Hoor River, Ore., at a cost of $15,000 for William Baker.

CHURCH.

NORTHWESTERN NEW YORK.

M. B. SCHLESINGER, who, according to a former announcement, was to manage the Olympic Theater, Buffalo, later decided to continue as manager of the Academy in that city.

Henry F. Thurston has temporarily given up the idea of building a $40,000 theater at Walnut and Pine streets, Lockport, N. Y. According to printed reports, his plans for this house may be carried out in the course of three or four years. Mr. Thurston, who now owns and operates the Temple vaudeville and moving picture theater in that city, has decided to build an open air moving picture house on his new site. He will build a place 70 by 120, with a ten-foot fence enclosing the structure. The approximate expense will be $2,000. It is proposed to run night shows only throughout June, July and August.

The Broadway Amusement Co. has received a permit from the Bureau of Buildings to erect a $20,000 moving picture theater at 566 Broadway, Buffalo. Plans have been filed in the same city by the Sattler Theater Corporation, which expects to build a $35,000 fireproof theater at 512-516 Broadway, Buffalo.

The Allendale Moving Picture Theater, built and owned by L. Michaels, has been leased by the Allendale Amusement Co. The house is located in Allen street, near Elmwood avenue, Buffalo. Details of change of service and other features will be given later.

Henry M. Marcus has resigned as manager of the New Lyric Theater, Buffalo. He came to the Lyric from the Academy, which he managed. He is a successful show man and a pioneer in the business. He was a member of the committee which welcomed the Lambs on their recent visit in that city. Besides being experienced in vaudeville and moving pictures, he is well known as an orchestra director. For several years he was leader of the orchestra at Shea's Theater, Buffalo. Mr. Marcus has several favorable offers, but will take a much needed rest before resuming active business.

Niagara Falls will be advertised in moving pictures at the Panama-Pacific exposition in San Francisco next year. The moving picture bureau of the exposition has communicated with Mayor Laughlin, of the Falls, in regard to the taking of pictures for the New York State exhibit. The pictures, which will include scenic and industrial features, will be shown in the New York State building each afternoon during the fair.

Shriners' night was recently celebrated at the Majestic Theater, Buffalo. The house was packed with members of Ismailia Temple and their friends. "Spartacus," a feature of George Kleine Attractions, was the offering. The program also included pictures of Buffalo Masons at a recent convention in Atlanta, Ga. The affair was managed by George K. Staples, a prominent Shriner; John Laughlin, manager of the Majestic; Foster Moore, Mr. Kleine's Buffalo representative, and others. It was necessary to hold an overflow performance the following evening. This concluded the engagement of "Spartacus" at the Majestic.

A large, new electric sign has been placed in front of the new Hippodrome Theater, Buffalo. The house will open at an early date.

F. W. Blair, of the Eastman Co., Rochester, N. Y., recently went to Los Angeles to visit the makers of pictures who use Eastman film and some whom he wants to use it. Mr. Blair stopped at Dayton, Ohio, and arranged for the Eastman exhibit at the big International convention, week of July 5th. It is reported that the Eastman Co. will not have an exhibit at the New York City convention, but will play up their product strongly at Dayton.

The Munroe Theater, on Munroe avenue near Convention Hall, Rochester, recently went out of business. W. C. Hubbard, secretary of the state exhibitors, has run the place for several years, but lately business fell off to a non-profit basis. The house will be remodeled into a grain elevator.

Jack London's "Sea Wolf" recently ran a solid week to capacity business at the Gordon Theater, Rochester.

The Sunday opening movement has died a political death in Rochester, N. Y. The exhibitors have been told that the city council does not dare to face the wrath of the clergymen who are against Sunday moving pictures. The exhibitors are planning to send a speaker into the ministerial meeting at some future date. In this connection a Rochester exhibitor says: "The speaker will show the church people that the moving picture show on Sunday, like the Salvation Army, has its mission in helping the church do work in some channels which the church does not reach."

The new Regent Moving Picture Theater, Syracuse, promoted by Harold Edel, manager of the Strand Theater, Buffalo, will be opened by August 1. The house will have a capacity of 1,500. Music will be furnished by a large Pipe organ and a 12-piece orchestra. Another Regent moving picture theater is being built in Main street, near Utica, Buffalo, under Mr. Edel's supervision. This house will cost $100,000. He is also supervising the Palace Theater, a Mark-Brock house being built at 319 Main street, Buffalo, at a cost of $150,000.

The effort of George Kling, suing as a Buffalo taxpayer, to stop the remodeling of the Olympic Theater, Buffalo, has been set aside by the court. That the building ordinances were not complied with was the claim of the plaintiff. Justice Wheeler, who tried the case, holds that the ordinance sought to be invoked, vests the Buffalo commissioner of public works with discretionary power in regard to stopping the work and that the language used is permissive, not mandatory.

BILLY BISON.

INDIANA.

VAUDEVILLE and moving pictures will constitute the program at the Sipe Theater, Kokomo, during the summer season under the new management. The Allardt Brothers of Chicago have taken over the show house for five years with privilege of renewal of the lease. Mr. Sipe retires from active business life. The new lessees control houses in various cities throughout Indiana and make moving pictures a special feature of their program.

Clarence C. Johnson, of Vincennes, is taking moving pictures of Indiana cities for an educational film entitled "Through Indiana in Sixty Minutes."

"The Dawn of Plenty," a moton picture film showing the history of bread, has been brought to Ft. Wayne, Ind., by the retail merchants of the city. No admission is charged.

The Habit picture theater, Tipton, has reopened. The house now will accommodate many more persons than formerly and has good ventilation and plenty of electric fans.

The new Columbus, moving picture house, which was opened on June 3, can seat 600 persons. C. E. Hemphill and W. R. Dunavent are behind the new show house.

James Staley, operating the Royal at Frankfort, is making improvements which will give the house additional capacity. It will seat 550.

A thirty-eight-foot addition is to be made to the Venus Theater, Gary. More than $8,000 will be expended on the house, which will become one of the finest picture show houses in the city. A spacious lobby with an artistically designed drinking fountain is to be a feature of the improvements. The proprietor, Andrew J. Obreshk, also owns the Roland Theater, Gary.

The Grand Theater, Clinton, now under control of the Eagles, will have moving pictures exclusively. It has been decided to give the public what is wanted, and vaudeville, therefore, is taboo.

A five-piece orchestra is an added attraction at the Princess, Clinton.

David Beard is now managing the New Grand Theater, Albany, and high class motion pictures are promised.

Edward G. Sourbier, owner of one of the most up-to-date motion picture houses in Indianapolis, has been named receiver for the Peerless Film Company by the Marion County superior courts. Application for a receiver was made recently on the grounds the concern is insolvent. It has offices in Indianapolis.

Another new picture house will be opened on Broadway, Gary, June 15. The owners will spend $3,000 in transforming the building into an amusement house. Messrs. Duma and Vaiches, owners, paid $24,000 for a ten-year lease.

William Gappinger, of the Princess Theater, Kendalville, is advertising his house by means of a Gabriel horn affixed to a big touring car.

Judge Drake, in the Goshen circuit court, has appointed Robert E. Chaten receiver for the Jefferson Theater Company, adjudged insolvent. The property is ordered sold to pay a claim of $35,491. The Jefferson Theater was built in 1905 and burned in 1906. It was rebuilt in 1907 costing $71,000. Drake is a stockholder. The rental is $2,000 a year. Motion pictures have been featured at the play house.

The Greensburg, Ind., Lyric, where pictures will be shown, is shortly to open.

Four moving picture men of Muncie are the subjects of affidavits charging violation of the Sunday closing laws. The Muncie Ministerial Association is behind the move. The houses involved are the Royal, the Lyric, the Majestic and the Orpheum.

A. L. Morris, of the Advanced Motion Picture Company of Chicago, addressed the Bowser Efficiency Club, Ft. Wayne, Ind., at its recent meeting when study of the moving picture was made.

A. F. Brentlinger, former proprietor of the Orpheum, Terre Haute, Ind., says his new picture house in Ft. Wayne will be among the best in the country. It will seat 1,400 and will be of white enameled brick.

WILLIAM.

CINCINNATI

MATRIMONY has run havoc in the ranks of the General Film Company's Cincinnati staff recently, or, at least, threatens to do so, as no less than three weddings are scheduled for the near future in which one or both of the principal parties are connected with the General offices. The earliest of these summer film exchange weddings is to be that of Robert Laws, assistant manager of the Cincinnati offices, and Miss Ida M. Ammon. Both have been with the company for about five years. Mr. Laws resides in Covington, Ky., just across the river from Cincinnati, while Miss Ammon is a Cincinnati girl. On the same day, in Covington, Randolph Crowell, another member of the General staff, will marry Miss Tillie Becker, of Covington, and Miss M. Whitney, who is another valued employee of the company, is to marry John Todd, of New York, within a few weeks, it has leaked out. Guy S. Cornish, the fourth victim of this popular form of midsummer madness, admits that he is to be married in July, but no further details are yet available. Manager Frank Smith is entirely complacent about the matter, however, at least as far as his male assistants are concerned, as he has observed that the responsibilities of married life usually tend to make the Benedict work even harder than the ambitious bachelor, and he anticipates herculean efforts on the part of these members of his staff hereafter.

The Vernon Castle pictures, showing the famous and popular couple in some of the dances at which they are adepts, and which are produced under the insignia of the Castle Film Co., are being booked from Cincinnati for a large territory by Harry M. Brice, who was formerly with the local branch of the Universal Film Company. Mr. Brice is handling these films under the name of the Faultless Feature Company, and states that the Castle pictures are proving immensely popular, due not only to the wide interest in the Castles themselves, but to the almost universal popularity of the new dances.

Contrary to the general supposition that the average man in any line of business dislikes anything pertaining to the shop after his day's work is over, Manager Frank Smith, the head of the Cincinnati office of the General Film Company, owns and uses a small projecting machine, which is one of the most popular amusement devices in his home. Moreover, he has taken a number of motion pictures at his pretty place in Newport, Ky. Mr. Smith believes firmly that home cinematography is destined to become a universal pastime, and thinks it entirely proper that he should be one of the pioneers, in view of his affiliations with the film business.

Jack Needham, of the Animated Film Company, which has busied itself for some time in securing interesting pictures around Cincinnati for exhibition at local theaters, did some unusually clever work in this line during the recent meeting in Cincinnati of the Western Yale Clubs, which was attended by several hundred Yale graduates from all over the West. Mr. Needham's operators were on the ground at the Country Club in the afternoon given over to the various outdoor entertainments held there by and for the Yale men, and five hours later the scene was re-enacted on the screen in the Sinton hotel before a gathering composed for the most part of those who had participated in it.

The "sky theater," as the Orpheum management calls its roof, where a fine motion picture program, mingled with one or two first-class vaudeville offerings, is now being staged nightly, proved a boon to people in that part of Cincinnati during the excessive heat of last week, showing convincingly the degree of success which may be expected during the summer. The roof is 690 feet above the river, and there is always a pleasant breeze to be found, no matter how hot it is at the street level. At the same time, there has been no perceptible falling off in the attendance in the big auditorium of the theater proper, where performances have been continued without interruption, the ventilating system and plenty of electric fans maintaining the temperature at a comfortable level. Altogether, the Orpheum management seems to be in for a highly prosperous summer. The double arrangement is especially telling by reason of the fact that the auditorium in the theater is occupied on an average of a night a week by a regular dramatic performance, and the house is thus enabled to present its full photoplay program to its patrons on the roof without interruption.

Klaw & Erlanger's "Fatal Wedding," produced in the Biograph studios in New York, made a pronounced hit at the Gayety last week, large audiences greeting this film revival of an old and popular play.

The Nordland Plaza scored another hit last week with the big Rabin feature, "Daughters of Men," Manager Brown reporting that the numerous telling bits of this production met with the approval of several large audiences. Mr. Brown says that the hot weather has not affected his attendance preceptibly so far, as the excellent arrangement of his house and its fine ventilation enable him to keep it cool at all times.

The Oakley Building & Theater Company has been organized by James B. Carragien, who recently took over the Oakley playhouse on Madison road, at Williams avenue. The capital stock of the company is fixed at $60,000, and offices have been leased in the Lyric building from which the business of handling the Oakley and other amusement places which will be acquired will be conducted. Besides Mr. Carragien, the following are interested in the company: Fred Cook, George E. Rockwell, John B. Poole and Alfred Ryan.

CASEY.

KENTUCKY.

THERE is no question in any picture man's mind at present regarding the growth of motion picture houses in Kentucky. There is about $150,000 worth of work either being done or to be done shortly on new houses in Louisville, and even the very small towns are opening new shows steadily. Most of the country houses are built to seat 150 to 200 persons, and a number of small towns are supporting as many as two to three shows.

President M. Switow, of the Switow Amusement Company, Louisville, has announced that the company has decided to sell all of its houses in the smaller towns, including Madison, Martinsville, Centerville, French Lick and Salem, Ind., and Madisonville, Ky., and two new houses under course of construction at North Vernon and Corydon, Ind. Mr. Switow has decided that it is too large a proposition to look after theaters scattered in a dozen different towns, and expects to confine his attention to operating the new house to be erected on Fourth avenue in Louisville and the houses in New Albany and Jeffersonville, Ind., just across the river. The Switow Amusement Company also owns the Gem and Manhattan theaters in Indianapolis, Ind. These houses may also be sold. Mr. Switow said that operating a string of moving picture theaters would be any easy proposition if good managers could be obtained, but that it is almost impossible to get good men at a figure which would show a profit for the theater. The poorer ones, if they have a successful month or two, he said, decide they are as good as the experts, and if they are not given the same sort of salary they throw up the job.

Nolan Lindsay, a youngster from Campbellsville, has purchased the Jefferson Theater of Jeffersonville, Ind., and is operating it in a very successful manner. The Jefferson has changed hands a good many times during the last few months, but Mr. Nolan likes the house and said that he is going to stick to it.

The Rev. D. Leroy Ferguson, a negro preacher at the Church of Our Merciful Savior, Louisville, has installed a motion picture machine in the Sunday-school room, and will use it in educating the negro children of the congregation.

The Romane Society, of Louisville, which is composed of Roumanians, has purchased a complete motion picture outfit, which will be used in the club's hall, at Jackson and Kentucky streets.

C. E. Hampson, who at one time owned the Victoria Theater, of New Albany, Ind., and sold it to the Switow Amusement Company, of Louisville, has purchased the house from the Switow Company, and is now operating it himself. For the two years he was away from the house he was M. Switow's assistant in the management of the string of houses operated by the company.

The Baxter Airdome, in the Highlands, has one of the longest throws for the projecting machines of any house in this district. The pictures in this theater are thrown 135 feet to the screen with excellent results.

The Westonian Airdome, of Louisville, is getting a good run, and its owners are very well satisfied with the showing made so far. On Decoration Day a little over 2,000 people paid to see the pictures at the admission price of ten cents.

The Broadway Amusement Company, Louisville, has rented two nine-foot figures, one of a policeman and the other of a woman, which will be used for advertising purposes around the streets. A man gets inside of the large figure and walks around town with a card bearing the sign of the theater which is being advertised.

M. J. Faith, of Elizabethtown, Ind., is opening a new picture show at Kosmosdale, near West Point, Ky., and has been in Louisville buying equipment and supplies for the new theater. This house will have a seating capacity of 200.

E. J. Phipps, of Simmons, is contemplating the purchase of full euipment for a motion picture show at Simmons. He expects to make arrangements shortly for the remodeling of a building to seat 200 persons.

A. S. Stewart, an electrical engineer, of Bedford, is figuring on an equipment for a new house at Bedford with a seating capacity of 175. He was in Louisville recently getting prices on some used material.

By virtue of a combine of the interests of the National Theater, B. F. Keith's Theater and the United Booking Company, recently effected in Louisville, the National Theater, beginning September 1 next, will play the big feature acts of the Keith Vaudeville Circuit. The present Keith house in Fourth avenue will probably run popular price vaudeville, or possibly will show feature pictures. The National Theater will be known as Keith's National Theater. The combine represents nearly $1,000,000 of property interests and had been under consideration for some time, as the old Keith house was rather crowded and the new theater is the largest in the city. The combine was perfected at a recent meeting of the stockholders of the company, at which David King, of Detroit, president of the company, was present, besides Adolph Fensterwald, the secretary-treasurer. Mr. King held the proxies of all of the Detroit stockholders. The Keith interests were represented by Paul Keith, E. T. Albee, John J. Murdock and Maurice Goodman.

C. J. Dorsey, of Glasgow, intends to open a moving picture theater in that city. The new house will have a seating capacity of 212, and should make a good profit as it is situated in a rich district. Glasgow is a town of 6,000.

G. D. CRAIN, JR.

NEW ENGLAND.

THE Acme Amusement Company continues its activity in Maine state, and has opened a new theater in Winthrop, called the Acme Theater. The same company also opened the Acme Theater at Belgrade. Both houses will play picture programs, and have installed Powers cameragraph 6a machines.

The partnership existing between Smith and St. Dedger, of the Star Theater, Skowhegan, Maine, has been dissolved, and Mr. Smith has purchased Mr. St. Ledger's interest in the Star. Mr. St. Ledger has leased the Bijou Theater, Skowhegan, from Dr. A. Borden.

A. J. Ponsant, of Waterville, Maine, has opened the Bijou Theater in this city, and reports fair business, considering the season of the year.

J. L. Jenne, formerly head operator of the Gem Theater, Lewiston, Maine, is now proprietor of Columbia Hall, Lisbon Falls, Maine.

The Star Theater, Boston, has cut out the vaudeville from its programs, and has replaced the acts with illustrated singers.

The Empire Theater, Boston, Mass., formerly called the Joliette Theater, is to be entirely changed according to information. The building of which the Empire forms a part, has been sold for $90,000, and the new owners will take the adjoining property and greatly enlarge the Empire. The seating capacity will be doubled, and the new house will be up to date and first class in every respect. Business will be increased by this change, it is hoped, as lately the Empire found things very slow and closed its doors.

Green & Eilenberg are expecting to open their new theater at Malden, Mass., by September 1. This house is to seat 1,200 and will be a handsome theater, with all modern improvements. The policy will be moving pictures, and a few acts of good vaudeville will also be used.

"New England in Motion" is the name of a new weekly, produced by Dadmum, 1 Washington street, Boston. The weekly deals with local events. B. F. Keith's Boston theater is using "New England in Motion," and it is being well received.

The Waltham Theater, Waltham, Mass., continues to do an excellent business for its owners, Messrs. Kingsbury and Bendsley. This house observed its first anniversary week, May 4 to 9, inclusive.

The Empire Theater, Brattleboro, Vt., celebrated its anniversary week, to very good business. The Empire continues to show steady box office results.

The Empire Theater Company has been formed at Lewiston, Maine, with $100,000 capital. Harry Statson and James A. O'Brien, of Lewiston; George W. Lane, Jr., and William N. Monroe, of Auburn, Maine, are the promoters. The company was organized to take over the Empire Theater, Lewiston, which was acquired from Julius Cahn.

H. C. Messenger has decided to re-open his Cozy Theater, Salem, Mass., which has been closed for some time.

E. J. Bullard, 132 Pleasant street, New Bedford, Mass., will build a theater in that city, to seat about 1,300. The policy will be moving pictures.

Father W. J. Foran, who met with signal success showing moving pictures at Lenox, Mass., is now in Worcester, Mass. Father Foran has secured a local theater for Saturday morning in which he shows specially selected pictures to children, with free admission. "Washington at Valley Forge," a Universal feature, was used with great success by Father Foran this week.

It is understood that Manager Bogrette, of the Bijou Theater, Bangor, Maine, will close for the summer within the next two weeks. Business is quiet in Bangor.

M. P. Vahey has secured the Dream Theater at Cliftondale, Mass., and will manage this theater himself.

Hiram Abrams has sold an interest in his City Opera House, Bath, Maine, to E. L. Crawford, of Brunswick, Maine. Mr. Crawford will assume the managership of this house, leaving Brunswick.

A reproduction of the building of the Panama Canal is one of the features of Lyman H. Howe's moving pictures, which are being shown at the Cort Theater, Boston.

The Garden Theater, New Haven, Conn., is doing very well these days, under the efficient management of C. K. Kazanjian, and the house intends to remain open all summer, if present business holds out over the heated term.

Manager Carron, of the Star Theater, Manchester, N. H., is a believer in and user of feature pieeures, and this policy, in addition to the regular service, has done exceedingly well.

The new policy of vaudeville and pictures, inaugurated at the Globe Theater, Boston, since the house came under the Marcus Loew banner, seems to be meeting with unusual favor.

A new theater, to be devoted to vaudeville and pictures, is being built in Malden, Mass. It is to be called the Mystic Theater, by the owners, the Malden Amusement Company. It is stated that Frank L. Browne will manage the house.

The ninth season at Lexington Park, Mass., started on May 30. Excellent programs of vaudeville and motion pictures are being given, and every indication points to a prosperous season at this summer theater.

Moving picture theaters at Waterbury, Conn., are having their hands full these days, because of alleged violation of the laws. Recently a Waterbury exhibitor was fined $100 and costs for exhibiting the "Traffic in Souls," which the local authorities claim "immoral and obscene." Two Waterbury exhibitors last month were forced to deliver $50 each, as fines, for allowing children under 14 years to enter their theaters unaccompanied by adults. The victims were William Carroll, of the Carroll Theater, and Ben. Tait, the well known manager of the Alhambra Theater. But the real bomb in this matter was fired by Judge Thoms, who remarked, as he levied the fines, that unless every exhibitor obeyed the law, relative to the admission of children to theaters, he would proceed to immediately close every theater in Waterbury on Sundays. The Lord's Day has always been a "lifesaver" for Waterbury moving picture men, and so Judge Thoms' statement was received with no little alarm. It appears that the children hang around the moving picture theaters and persuade adults to buy them tickets and then go into the theaters alongside of the adults. The trouble arises when the latter leave the theaters, while the youngsters are left behind. As to the "Traffic in Souls" episode, James Sheehan was the victim. Mr Sheehan advertised this feature at the Jacques Theater, which he recently leased from S. Z. Poli. As soon as the reels were exhibited, Prosecuting Attorney J. F. Lynch swore out a warrant for Mr. Sheehan. The law was represented by Mr. Lynch, claimed that the "Traffic in Souls" was indecent, lewd, obscene and immoral. Mr. Sheehan was defended by former Judge Cole, and appealed.

The Agawan Selectmen, in which Riverside Park is situated, near Springfield, Mass., have decided that the management may keep open on Sundays.

J. Fred Miller has closed the Savoy Theater, Fall River, Mass., and the house is not due to reopen until Labor Day.

The second week of Poli's Palace Theater, Hartford, Conn., passed off very well, and this handhome house is very popular with the local vaudeville and picture fans. The local manager is W. D. Ascough, well known to the trade.

Carl Scranton is managing the Casco Theater, Portland, Maine, and featured "Evangeline" the week of June 1.

The Cape Theater, Cape Cottage Park, near Portland, Maine, is due to open June 15 for the summer season.

In a recent issue, these columns told how well the Civic Theater, Pawtucket, R. I., had succeeded. Because of its progress, a Civic Theater is assured for Providence, R. I. The movement in this town is headed by Rev. J. D. Dingwell, and is financially backed by a score of prominent Providence people. The plan is to "educate, amuse, and instruct." The Civic Theater will be supplemented by provision on the part of the park commission and city council for public exhibitions of motion pictures in Providence Park. In fact, Councilman Helander has introduced a resolution, calling upon the Park Commission to report on the feasibility of such a plan. Mr. Helander states that it is his idea to show educational pictures, showing the ravages caused by tuberculosis and other kindred subjects, dealing with contagious diseases. Mr. Helander feels sure that by so dealing with these ills, many practical lessons can be imparted in hygiene. In other words, it is the present plan to feature health subjects, and to educate the public how to avoid those diseases by means of proper sanitation and hygiene. The expense of this kind of program should be small compared with the great benefits to be derived from it, by people living in the crowded parts of Providence, is Mr. Helander's contention, who has given a great deal of time and study to the matter.

A new theater, to be devoted to moving pictures, is now assured to the people of Spencer, Mass., as Alfred Berthiaume has secured a license, and will build a theater. A fee of $100 was charged Mr. Berthiaume by the local authorities. Formerly no fee had been asked.

More building activity in the moving picture theater line is scheduled for Providence, R. I., as the Fair, Incorporated, is about to erect a theater on Weybosset street. This house will seat over 1,000 and will be a two-story building.

The Magnet Theater, Dorchester, Mass., is now doing a steady business, as was promised by the way in which the public received this new theater, on its opening week. Manager Vizdon is more than satisfied with the opening of the Magnet, which is a very handsome house, seating 800. The house will run right through the summer.

Manager E. J. Farrel has been making things hum around Commercial street, Boston, ever since he became manager of the General Film Company's Boston office. Several changes in the staff were made by Mr. Farrell.

All troubles existing between the members of the Moving Picture Exhibitors' League of Massachusetts, and the Operators' Union, Boston Local 182, have been amicably settled. An agreement satisfactory to both sides has been signed, to run for three years, and all future grievances are to be settled by arbitration.

At the monthly meeting of the Winthrop Mass., Women's Civic League, held this week it was voted to communicate with the proprietors of the various moving picture theaters in Winthrop, and to urge them to display "Old Glory" at the beginning of each performance. The Civic League believes that this will arouse a spirit of patriotism.

The Somerville Theater, Davis Square, Somerville, Mass., known as the "House of Quality," has opened to good trade, with vaudeville and pictures. Two performances are given daily, at 2:30 and 8 p. m.

HENRY.

DETROIT

THE Washington Theater, through A. E. Whitbeck, general manager, will positively go to pictures for the summer. The theater has been playing musical stock and closed June 7, pending suitable arrangements for feature films. This will necessitate the installation of a complete moving picture outfit, as it is the first time that pictures will be shown since the house opened. "We can not tell whether pictures will draw them to the Washington or not," said General Manager Whitbeck, "and the only way we can tell is to try." The plan is to give feature films at 25 cents admission price.

The Liberty Theater has two "Question Boxes" in the lobby for the use of its patrons. Cards are distributed among the patrons regularly which read: "Kindly place a cross after the kind of motion picture subjects you prefer. Drop into the suggestion box at the rear of theater, or mail. Postal notices of the photoplays which interest you will be sent from time to time. Society Dramas, Western Dramas, Comedy, Tragedy, Shakespearean, Famous Players, Current Events, Scenic, Industrial and Our Regular Bill." Manager Pierce says that not a day goes by that he does not receive two or three cards containing suggestions.

On and after July 1, 1914, the Police Board of Censorship will be discontinued in Detroit. The outcome will be watched with interest; that is, whether or not attempts will be made to show films not up to the standard maintained while the censorship department was in effect.

"Neptune's Daughter," a Universal picture, which opened at the Detroit Opera House, May 25, continued until June 3 and then was shown for three days at Mt. Clemens, returning to Detroit on June 8 for an indefinite stay.

Plans have been completed by William B. Stratton, architect, for the Dossedale Theater, in Detroit, to be erected at a cost of $80,000, on the east side of Woodward Avenue, between Englewood and Rosedale Avenues, for William Klatt, of the Detroit Theaters, Inc. The seating capacity will be about 1,800. There will be a women's retiring room and smoking room for men. Another feature will be a room in charge of a competent attendant for babies and baby carriages.

Capacity houses at the Broadway Theater, Detroit, greeted the first presentation of the photodrama, "Creation," on May 31, Sunday, it being given under the auspices of the local branch of the International Bible Students' Association. The exhibition, comprising four parts, will continue for four weeks, one part being given each week. Admission is free. The same feature is being shown in Grand Rapids, Mich.

Architect W. S. Joy, 516 Stevens Building, Detroit, will take bids this month for a picture theater and store building to cost $10,000.

Many motion picture houses in Detroit contributed the receipts of one show towards the Tuberculosis Fund on Blue Star Day, June 4. For several weeks previous to this day, seventy-five motion picture houses threw slides without charge on their curtains calling attention to the cause for which tags are sold.

The Broadway Theater, Detroit, will discontinue its policy of moving pictures late in the summer and install a dramatic stock company at popular prices.

SMITH.

ST. LOUIS.

THE Broadway Theater, Broadway and St. Charles Street, which is one of the seven houses comprising the Associated Theaters Company, has inaugurated a program of all large features, beginning June 2d. Edward Schwartz, manager of the Broadway, says his audience took to the new program with enthusiasm.

The McKinley Theater, at 2214 South Jefferson Avenue, is showing its program on the roof of the building since the hot weather started. The McKinley Roor Garden is equipped with eight hundred seats, and is said to be the coolest place in town.

The Hippodrome, at 15 South Sixth Street, has closed for the hot season and will reopen early in August.

Last week St. Louis celebrated its hundred and fiftieth birthday, and the event was commemorated with a historical pageant and masque lasting five days, in which more than seven thousand five hundred performers took part. It is estimated that half a million people visited the beautiful natural amphitheater extending from the Art Museum, in Forest Park, to the lagoon, a quarter of a mile below, where the vast stage was built for the exhibition. The moving picture theaters expected business to be somewhat dull during the week of the pageant, but the great number of out-of-town people that came in on every train kept the theaters from losing money by going to the pageant one night and going to airdomes and amusement parks on the other nights.

Angelich Brothers, proprietors of two moving picture theaters, the Sun and the Rainbow, near each other on North Broadway, have closed the Sun for the summer. The Sun will reopen with pictures early in the fall.

F. Wehrenberg, manager of the Best Theater, 3360 South Jefferson Avenue, maintains his own electric plant, which furnishes power and light for his theater, and the cafe nearby, of which he is also proprietor.

The St. Louis Motion Picture Co., which is the successful bidder for the filming privileges of the pageant and masque, held here the last four days in May, used eighteen thousand feet of film in photographing the great spectacle. The pictures were made at special rehearsals given on the monster stage before the regular performances took place. Willis L. Robard, who came on from the Frontier Studios at Santa Paula, California, to direct the filming, worked like the proverbial horse in directing the seven thousand five hundred actors that took part in the great show, but he says he feels rewarded by the fine and beautiful feature which was secured. Bookings are now being arranged for the attraction.

GIEBLER.

PHILADELPHIA.

THE motion picture censorship law that recently went into effect and caused a wave of indignation to sweep the entire state of Pennsylvania was brought to bay on June 3, in the Common Pleas Court when the producers presented their suit asking an injunction against the law on grounds that it is unconstitutional. This law has been in effect since the first of the month but to allow a number of lethargic producers time to comply with it they have been granted time until the fifteenth of the month.

Producers who are contesting this law say that the $2.50 claimed by the censors for the examination of each negative and each positive is exhorbitant and such a method will put more money in the State treasury than is necessary to pay the expenses and salary of the Board. They also claim that it is impossible for the censors to examine all the films necesary to supply the theaters in one week's time. This fact is brought into view when it is known that in four days they have only examined 110 reels. This supply is inadequate to meet the demand; there are 200 picture houses in the city and they average four reels a day, some of them more. This means that at least 800 reels a day are needed, and when the censors average only 110 films a day there will be a great many of the smaller theaters go out of business because the larger ones will demand all the films.

Thos pictures which show low life in the Paris dens and the long drawn out barroom scenes will feel the effects of this law more than the rest of them. Flirtations, scenes in the opium dens, and the like must be shown in a manner that will not be offensive.

William A. Miller, the manager of the Gayety theater, died at the home of his father-in-law on June 2. He had been ill only a short time.

Title to the moving picture theater, 412-14 Market Street, lot 32 by 113 feet, known as the Central theater, which was purchased by the East Market Realty Company, has been sold to Morris Ritch, for $127,500, of which $15,000 was paid in cash, the balance remaining on a first mortgage. The theater has a seating capacity of 500 persons and is assessed at $90,000.

The Diamond Airdome opened with a large attendance on Saturday, June 6. The promoters of this venture have announced that they would only show first run features.

The Arcade theater, 51 and Baltimore avenues, has changed managers. Mr. Potter, the new manager, has announced a change in the operation of the theater, which from now on will display the finest pictures that are to be obtained.

CONGDON.

PITTSBURGH.

THE Auditorium motion picture theater in East Fourth street, has undergone a change of owners. Several improvements have already been made to the building and preparations are being made for a complete remodeling of the theater. Benjamin G. Wheeler will still continue in the capacity of manager. He will make it a point to present something of interest for the "kiddies" each week. Quite a lot of new capital has been placed in the business, and everything possible will be done in the way of improvement to make the theater desirable and enjoyable to the patrons.

After having disposed of his interest in the Dreamland moving picture theater, of Dayton, Pa., Richard Rayner, president of the Dayton Branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, presented his resignation to the members of that body; however, it was not accepted. He will continue in the chair until January 1, when his term expires.

The Ivanhoe Amusement Company, of Pittsburgh, was recently incorporated under the laws of Pennsylvania, with a capital stock of $7,500. The incorporators are F. C. Baurer, George C. Baurer, and Martin A. Dainke, who all reside in Pittsburgh.

The Richards Feature Company has been incorporated in Pittsburgh with a capital stock of $5,000. The object of the company is to sell moving picture films and supplies. The incorporators are G. A. Jones, R. A. Jones, B. L. Jones and C. F. Michael, all of Pittsburgh.

Another great demonstration of the usefulness of the motion picture was shown when the Duesquene Light Company of Pittsburgh laid twelve large submarine cables under the bed of the Ohio River. From the unloading of the cables at the freight station to the final filling of the trench in the bed of the river moving pictures were taken of the work in progress to obtain a complete, accurate and permanent record.

Following an illness of three weeks, during which time he was undergoing an operation for appendicitis, Girard Tress, manager of the Elite Theater, Federal street, Northside, this city, was discharged from the St. John's Hospital. He is again on a fair road to his former healthy condition, and it is thought that within a week he will again take up his duties at the Elite Theater.

G. Burghard, of New Kensington, Pa., is contemplating the erection of a $30,0000 motion picture and vaudeville house, but is holding off pending just what action will be taken by the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry on the rules and regulations for the construction and erection of moving picture houses in this state.

E. Bolsdon, manager of the Crystal Theater, of Braddock, Pa., recently left that city for Fort Wayne, Ind., where he intends to meet his fiancee, and on June 7 the marriage ceremony will take place in Fort Wayne. After the marriage the newly wedded couple will take a trip to the Great Lakes, Detroit, Buffalo and the Niagara Falls, then back to Braddock where they will take up their premanent residence.

Work has been started on the construction of a motion picture house in East Liberty, Pittsburgh, for G. Clarke, 1101 Empire building. When completed the theater will have a seating capacity of one thousand, and will be located in the heart of the resident section, at Penn and Highland avenues. The theater when constructed will be called the "Regent."

The Keystone Theater, 528 Ohio street, North Side Pittsburgh, has undergone a change of owners. The theater was formerly owned by R. J. Kinder, but was sold by him last week to the Keystone Amusement Company.

James Delves, secretary of the Moving Picture Exhibitor's Association of Pennsylvania, has just returned from Harrisburg, where he represented the Association in the arrangement of the code that will govern the rules of the erection of motion picture theaters in this State. Mr. Delves reports that many changes that will benefit the exhibitors were made n the code. He fears, however, that many of the old houses will be forced to close, and he also states that the way the Pittsburgh motion picture exhibitors have gone after censorship has made a big impression.

Preliminary plans have been started for the construction of a motion picture theater in Monongahela City, Pa., for Harry K. Bently. Mr. Bently has picked out the location for his theater in Main street, and work will start on the construction of the building in the course of the next few weeks. It is estimated that the cost of erection will amount to about $10,000.

The opening of the "Nittany," which is one of the finest motion picture theaters in Allen street, State College, Pa., came as a surprise to the residents of that place. The house is equipped with modern opera chairs, and everything is up-to-date. The lighting domes are also of the very latest type and are very beautiful in their arrangement. The color scheme throughout the interior is terracotta and gold, which affords a pleasing contrast. Although the theater is not by any means large in comparison with others in this section of the State, the architecture and general beauty of both exterior and interior far surpass that of any other theater that has been erected in this section recently.

A new system of illumination for moving picture theaters has been invented by Frank G. McPherson, of Beaver Falls, Pa. The new system has been installed in the Colonial theater, that city, and already it has attracted the attention of moving picture exhibitors all over he country. The light is placed in a reflector, made in V shape. This is attached to the ceiling and the powerful light is so reflected that the rays do not conflict with the light thrown on the screen. It only requires six of these "shadowlites," as they are called, to illuminate any auditorium, so that it will pass the censorship of the inspectors.

The opening of the Majestic theater of Johnstown, Pa., as a moving picture house, proved a tremendous success. The Majestic had been formerly carrying on business as a vaudeville house. For the opening occasion Mr. Boyle, manager of the theater, had secured many feature pictures among which was "A Million Dollar Bid." It was heartily applauded by the patrons.

Plans are in progress for the erection of a motion picture house on Linden avenue, in East Pittsburgh, Pa., for Alphonse Fritch. The building will be four stories high, and the upper floors will be used for apartments.

H. J. Smith, manager of the Feature Film Exchange, has just returned from an automobile trip to Bedford Springs. While at the Springs Mr. Smith took over seven hundred feet of motion picture film of the rolling mill of the Carnegie Steel Company.

Bids are being received for the erection of a motion picture theater and office building, on Second avenue near Flower street, Pittsburgh, Pa., for A. J. Smith. The theater will be 42 feet wide by 100 feet long.

Final plans are being arranged for the construction of a motion picture house in Charleroi, Pa., on Fallowfield avenue. The amount required to build the theater will be about $25,000. Eugene Fan, the well known men's furnisher of Charleroi, will be the proprietor of the theater, and he will use every means possible to make his new enterprise a success.

The employees of Warner's Feature office have organized a baseball team and have sent out challenges to the other film houses. Movement is on foot to get all the supply houses to organize teams and then form a league.

N. Dipon, owner of the Photoplay theater, of Jeanette, Pa., has closed down for a period of a couple of weeks. The theater will go under a complete remodelling and when finished it will have a seating capacity of 900.

Excavating work has started on the erection of a motion picture theater in Moxham, Pa., for G. B. Glonn, the well known real estate broker of that place.

The Pastime theater of Sharon, Pa., was closed recently on account of the building not meeting with the requirements of the State law. George Watson, proprietor of the theater has purchased the Colonial theater, and everything possible will be done by him to make his theater desirable to his patrons.

In the course of a week work will begin on the construction of an opera house and motion picture theater in Ford street, in Ford City, Pa. The building will be one story high and will be of brick construction, 44 feet wide by 106 feet long. The stage will be 22 by 24 feet. The new theater will be owned by Harvey Heilmann.

The general contract will be awarded soon for the erection of a motion picture theater building in Main street, Butler, Pa., for C. E. Carlton. It has been planed to construct the theater in a novel contrast of brick and stone.

MANLEY.

ILLINOIS.

THE Hoeffler-McConnel Company, of Quincy, which will erect the new Orpheum moving picture and vaudeville house in Quincy, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $2,400 to do a theater and amusement business. The incorporators are John F. Hoeffler, Wiley N. McConnell and John T. Ingraham. The plans for the structure have been drawn, and it is hoped to commence the excavation some time in June.

A new moving picture theater is being erected at Bluffs for Thomas Mehan.

The new moving picture theater, erected in Wilmette at a cost of $35,000 by C. H. Kusel, of Chicago, has been opened. C. A. Brown, of Chicago, has leased the house and will give a three-reel show every week night, and also Thursday and Saturday afternoons. Pictures will not be shown which have not been passed by the Chicago Board of Censorship.

S. E. Pirtle assumed the management of the Opera House at Flora on June 1, presenting as a feature "Vanhoe." Pictures will be the big thing in Mr. Pirtle's policy, other attractions being asked to show a certificate of merit.

The New Apollo Amusement Company, of Chicago, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000 to do an amusement business. The incorporators are Benjamin Derber, Morris A. Milkewitch and Israel B. Perlman.

The Rex Theater at Petersburg co-operated with the Woman's Club of that city in showing an anti-fly film.

The Majestic Theater at Waukegan was rented for sixteen nights for the presentation of the "Creation" films.

The front of the Grand Theater at Harvey has been remodeled.

Manager Bert Damon, of the Majestic Theater at Rockford, will manage the Orpheum Theater in that city while Manager Lake takes a six-weeks' vacation.

A full page advertisement was used by the Washington Theater and Garden at Granite City to show that co-operation with the other houses operated by the company made it possible to secure good bookings in pictures and vaudeville. The place which has some zoological features has a capacity of 2,000. Children will be admitted, during the airdome season only, for five cents.

The City Council at Rockford has granted permission to J. Weber Wilcox to operate a moving picture theater on South Main street in that city.

John Sollis, manager of the Gem Theater in Clinton, leased the airdome at West Washington and North Quincy streets in that city from Clarence Tharp, and opened it for the summer June 1.

There will be no vaudeville at the new moving picture theater to be operated at Third and Market streets in Alton, according to George Fielding, who will operate it. It will be an exclusive five-cent photoplay house.

The airdome at Lovington has been stimulating business by giving away prizes.

The Majestic and Willard moving picture theaters at Kewanee, which are under the management of W. J. West, are emphasizing the "Safety First" idea by running a series of instructive slides.

A. M. Beare, who has been operating the Gem Moving Picture Theater at Chester since its construction several years ago, has purchased the business and structure from James A. Douglas and Miss Mary Speckman. He has made plans for many interior changes, reseating, inclined floor and an addition to the rear.

The one-day attendance record at the new Eagle Theater in Princeton conducted by W. O. Stevens recently was smashed. The evening program included an installment of "Kathlyn," which brought big business, and in the afternoon a special educational matinee for school children was given. The instructive reels were run at the instigation of the Princeton Commercial Club.

Four reels of pictures and one act of vaudeville make up the hot weather program of the Grand Central Theater at Cairo which has started its summer season.

A delegation from the Twentieth Century Club and Village President Tolsted, of Maywood, recently paid a visit to the Board of Censors in Chicago. The results of the visit were reported to the village board, which instructed the president to have drawn an ordinance which will prohibit the exhibition of pictures in Maywood unless they have been passed by the Chicago board.

Pupils of the west side North Aurora and Montgomery schools in Aurora were shown patriotic pictures on Memorial Day through the co-operation of Manager Jules Rubin and the local post of the Grand Army of the Republic.

The Princess Theater at Canton has gone over to a summer season of pictures at a five-cent admission.

Paul Wyatt, the moving picture man of Rantoul, will have charge of the public moving picture shows to be given one night each week under the auspices of the Rantoul Improvement Association. These shows tried last year as a trade-fostering entertainment were so successful that they will be repeated.

The Popular Amusement Company, of Chicago, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $25,000 to do an amusement business. The incorporators are George W. Stewart, Charles E. Cheney and Thomas F. Barrett.

A. Frostle, of Monmouth, is preparing to open a moving picture show in Burgess.

The opening of a moving picture theater in the opera house at Bracevillle has been contemplated, shows to be given two nights each week.

The Canton Register, which is running "The Perils of Pauline" in that territory, gave free tickets to women and children, which were used at the initial production of the serial picture at the Princess Theater.

Rev. F. J. Milnes, of Evanston, president and secretary of the National Indoor Game Association, is continuing his campaign in Illinois in behalf of the young folk. He tells of a recent visit to one small town: "It was Sunday. I went to church. Heard a sermon on the 'Straight and Narrow Path.' The exhortation was to 'Forsake all and follow Me.' The minister scored the young people of our age as 'play mad' and 'amusement crazy.' He condemned the spirit of the times as self-indulgent, etc. His whole idea was the suppression rather than the expression of life. The church was less than half full, mostly young women, one solitary young man was noted outside of myself and I was not surprised. Next morning I arose from a dingy hotel and spent the day in conversation with the business men, editor, principal of schools and village trustees. Most of these men congratulated themselves in that they had just been successful in voting their dance halls closed. They had closed the billiard room some time ago and had just saddled a license fee upon the moving picture man and restricted his hours to a degree equivalent to prohibition. . . . Instead of staying at home and saving their money (the reformers' declared object) most of the young men were boarding the interurban for the larger city where they spent more money in a much more questionable manner in addition to their carfares. Others were leaving the village constantly and permanently for the city as their future home. . . . The play instinct is not so easily suppressed."

Oliver Hurley is now permanently located at Carmi, where he purchased the Weigant Moving Picture Theater, having removed from Madisonville, Ky.

Claude Lewis and Roff Dale, of Lebanon, Ind., have purchased the White City Theater at Georgetown and, after refitting it, commenced operation.

The plans for the new theater to replace the "B" Moving Picture House on North Broadway in Aurora call for an $20,000 structure, seating 1,000 persons. The auditorium will be 110 x 45 feet. The building will be in the rear of the present theater, which will be used as a foyer. John Berscheidt is the owner of the "B" and John Olinger and Olinger & Hankes are interested in the new theater.

White Hall is to have two new theaters. Carl Lowenstein, of that city, has purchased the Dowdall building and with Louis Lowenstein and F. L. Grant has had plans made for a combined theater and store building 48 x 130 feet. The auditorium will seat 500. An entirely new structure will be erected. It will be equipped for use by dramatic attractions as well as for photoplays. Ben Kincaid and Carson T. Metcalf, of Greenfield, have purchased a site at the corner of Sherman and Jacksonville streets and, after razing the buildings occupying it, will erect a two-story, possibly three, opera house and hall building 77 x 90 feet.

The City Council of Rock Island issued a permit to E. Johnston, of that city, to construct an airdome at Exposition Park.

R. T. LaGrille, proprietor of the Grand Moving Picture Theater at Sterling, recently was in Dixon seeking a building for a new photoplay house in that city. It was announced that if a suitable structure could not be found a new theater would be erected.

The committee of the Winnetka Community House, a social center at Winnetka, has decided upon a program of moving pictures for three nights a week this summer. Films will take the place of the usual Sunday night meetings in the gymnasium hall. Pictures also will be shown on Tuesday and Friday nights.

Albert Wilson, who purchased the Princess Theater at Macomb early in May from Frank Maguire, did not retain it long. He has sold the house to Marion Stultz, of Monmouth, who is now operating it. Stultz formerly was in the photoplay business at White Hall.

Manager R. L. Blake, of the moving picture theater at Chenoa, gave a benefit for the Woman's Civic Improvement League of that city.

The Capitol Theater, Friedrich Brothers, managers, at Pekin, have installed a five-piece orchestra which gives a program one night each week in connection with the pictures.

Manager Schade, of the Majestic Theater at Bloomington, has adopted a summer policy of moving pictures.

Industrial pictures of the manufacture of wrought-iron pipe at the plant of the National Tube Company at Pittsburgh, Pa., were shown at an evening show of the Hippodrome at Peoria.

W. H. Claggett, who for the last year has been in the moving picture supply business, has purchased the Nickeldome Theater in Lexington from Charles Schade, who has been appointed postmaster. Claggett formerly operated a moving picture show at Chenoa.

The Westcott airdome, playing pictures, has been opened at Chillicothe.

A moving picture airdome has been opened in Averyville, a suburb of Peoria.

D. G. Alger will remain as manager of the Derthick Opera House at Belvidere, which has been sold by W. F. Conway, of Decatur, to P. J. Persinger, of Decatur.

E. A. Atkinson has sold his half interest in the Yale Theater at Carbondale to the Yale Amusement Company. He will remain in the employ of the company.

F. D. Whittington, of Benton, filmed the local company of the Illinois National Guard as it went through its maneuvers and also got some good pictures of camp life. The films were shown at the airdome in Benton.

Isaac Kuhn, one of the proprietors of the Park Theater in Champaign, recently became an alderman. By way of a joke, some of his fellow councilors agitated a movement to increase the license of the moving picture theaters from $75 to $350 a year. After several had made speeches Kuhn surprised them by agreeing that the fee should be raised, but that $200 a year would be high enough. Then they told him.

A policy of high-class pictures alternating with other attractions was decided upon for the coming year at the annual meeting of the Opera House Company, of Quincy, which operates the Empire-Hippodrome in that city. J. W. Gardner was elected president; W. E. Blake, vice-president; S. B. Harrington, secretary; W. S. Warfield, treasurer and W. L. Busby manager. Improvements costing $5,000 have been made to the house.

A benefit for the St. Charles Ladies' Cemetery Association was given at the Star Moving Picture Theater in that city.

Manager Noben, of the Rockford Theater at Rockford, is featuring all Essanay pictures in which a part is taken by Mrs. Bertha Scott, a former resident of that city.

The Middle States Feature Film Company, of Chicago, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $50,000 to manufacture and deal in feature films and moving pictures. The incorporators are Elias Mayer, Albert W. De Latour and Sydney Stein.

Bowlby's Music House in Rock Island will be the home of moving pictures sponsored by the 1,600 Block Business Men's Association which has taken up the problem of keeping the amusement-seekers in the home neighborhood.

"The Battle Hymn of the Republic" by the Vitagraph Company retains the prestige gained at the time it was first released. It was the feature picture at the benefit performance given at the Princess Theater in Joliet for the Spanish-American War veterans. Interest in the production was increased by a display in the lobby of relics of three wars. In a recent review of an epochal novel in a literary magazine Nicholas Vachel Lindsay, the Springfield poet, declared he would like to see the story filmed provided it could be done by the man who directed "The Battle Hymn of the Republic."

Souvenirs of small silk flags for all and flowers for the women and girls were given at the reopening on the eve of Memorial Day of the Aurora Theater at Aurora. William C. Flannagan and William Mullen, the owners, have leased the house for a year to W. D. Burford, of Aurora and H. E. Burford and M. Rosentstein, who are in the moving picture business at La Crosse, Wis. D. S. Greig is acting as manager. The seating capacity has been slightly reduced to secure a more satisfactory arrangement; the projection has been changed to get larger pictures, and the interior has been redecorated.

Manager H. W. Lewis has closed the Gaiety Theater at Ottawa. It will re-open about the middle of August.

Floyd Lane, formerly an advertising man in Chicago, but now of Galesburg, has announced that he will publish a weekly paper called "The Spotlight" to be devoted to moving pictures. It will contain the week's programs for the local houses and feature matter. Copies will be mailed free to patrons, through the co-operation of the Galesburg managers, but newsstand and mail copies will sell at five cents each.

While the Colonials at Galesburg are closed for remodeling this summer, Manager R. C. Schroeder will have charge of a moving picture airdome for the Elks lodge on North Prairie street. The order has fitted up a stucco enclosed place seating 500.

F. E. Whitmer, of the Central Feature Company, of Chicago, which outfitted the new Princess Theater at Fifth and Capitol avenues, was down for the opening of the new house on Memorial Day. The six-reel feature "Samson" was the initial attraction and did big business. The Princess has two entrances, ten exits and seats five hundred in good range of the pictures. A four-piece orchestra has been provided.

The Vaudette Amusement Company has closed the Gaiety Theater for re-modeling, prior to the reopening of the vaudeville season. The picture season was short.

A special trainload of employees of the Wabash Railroad in Springfield was sent to Decatur that they might see moving pictures, as part of the "Safety Always" campaign being conducted by the road.

The Panama-Pacific Exposition Commission of Illinois has decided to use moving pictures extensively in the exhibits at the fair and the state architect has started a prize contest for the best design for a state building which is to include, among other things, a moving picture theater.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

IN THE NORTHWEST.

THE First Baptist Church, one of the downtown churches at Ninth and Wacouta streets in St. Paul, Minn., has installed a moving picture machine to be used in connection with its social center, educational and religious work.

Carl Thiel, a photographer of Hibbing, Minn., is said to be working on a plan for an elaborate use of moving pictures in the schools of Minnesota. One of the problems, in his opinion, was to find some means of holding a certain scene or picture while some member of the faculty or other teacher was explaining it. This has been remedied, he believes, by the adoption of a simple type of projector made in Germany. To this he has added an electrical attachment of his own design which, it is claimed, will allow the film to be stationary without burning. A canvass of the school boards of the state found them favorable to the plan if satisfactory apparatus could be obtained. Mr. Thiel planned to demonstrate his device to the Hibbing School Board, showing films made of a fire drill in the school there.

A reel made up of pictures of the school children's May Day exercises, the field day events and inspection of the Old Soldiers' Home at Boise, Idaho, did a good business at the Rex Theater in that city.

Each child paying five cents admission to the special Saturday matinee at the Grand Theater in Brainerd, Minn., receives a free ticket for the following Saturday, virtually making it a two-for-five proposition.

The Pastime Theater at Red Wing, Minn., recently conducted a voting contest, giving away a piano.

A very pretentious opening for the remodeled Parg Theater at Brainerd, Minn., had been planned by the new lessee, F. E. Nemec, of St. Cloud, and Manager E. A. Adams. Nothing less than an address by Governor Eberhart had been announced, but the Norwegian celebration in St. Paul detained him, and the talk was made by a prominent local attorney. The house will feature its photoplay programs, although some vaudeville will be given. Girl ushers are an innovation for Brainerd.

Schrepfer & Son, proprietors of the Rex Theater at Boulder, Colo., got the public acquainted with the projection possibilities of their new Power's machine by publishing in the papers when it arrived a coupon which would admit free any person over fifteen years of age.

The five McCarthy Brothers, of Fargo, N. D., plan to establish a string of five theaters in the Dakotas from Grand Forks to Aberdeen. They have been conducting the Isis at Fargo and recently purchased the Princess Theater at Aberdeen from N. Hollen. W. H. McCarthy will be the manager of the Aberdeen house, which will be an exclusive photoplay theater, with the exception that E. T. McCarthy, a tenor of ability, will give popular songs twice or three times a week.

Henry Herried has purchased the interest of his partner, Leslie Clark, in the Lyceum Theater at Duluth, Minn. Clark will remove to his farm.

The Princess Theater at St. Cloud, Minn., has been sold to D. E. Palmer, of Wadena.

Forty members of the faculty and students of the Minnesota State University at St. Paul are on a tour of twenty-four cities and towns in the state as a part of the extension work of the university. Lectures, demonstrations, debates, music and dramatic productions make up the program which tends to show the people of the state of the value of the school. Most of the evening sessions will be devoted to illustrated travelogues, the university being an enthusiastic believer in the efficiency of moving pictures.

The Unique Theater at Minneapolis, Minn., has begun the operation of its summer schedule, which includes three and four reels of moving pictures.

The Minneapolis Civic and Commerce Association sent out word in advance to the sixty-three cities which its special boosting train will visit that no reception was to be prepared for the boosters: they would do the entertaining. In addition to projecting apparatus, enough films for a two-hour moving picture show each night will be carried. One set of films will show Minneapolis on a busy day and all its points of interest; another will be the dramatization of "Hiawatha" at Minnehaha Falls, and the rest of the program will be made up of dramas and comedies.

Motion pictures can and should be used effectively in vocational education according to E. W. Maundles, of the advisory commission, who has taken up the matter of trade schools for Minneapolis. He says this is distinctly to the advantage of any community and to the pupil when films of local industries and their processes of manufacture are studied.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

IOWA

EVEN the moving picture patrons are demanding real music instead of the canned stuff, or "none at all," declared Adolph Meyer, a delegate from Illinois to the recent meeting of the American Federation of Musicians at Cedar Rapids. The subject of music at the picture shows or the problem of union orchestra in the photoplay houses was little discussed, grievances being directed at the dramatic houses which have done away with the orchestras.

Moving picture shows will be given at the Orpheum Theater in Marion only on stormy nights, Managers C. W. and E. C. Davis having moved the show out of doors. An orchestra will be a Saturday night attraction.

Georgen & Henriksen, managers of the Crystal Theater at Anamosa, have opened an airdome holding the Crystal ready, however, for unseasonable weather and other emergencies.

Percy Caris is now manager of the Auditorium at Mt. Pleasant, Emil Hansen having transferred his lease to Chicago parties.

Ben Morgan has returned from the moving picture business at Cedar Falls and has returned to Toledo.

J. E. Purcell remains as manager of the A-Muse-U Theater at Clinton, which has been sold by E. M. Henle, of Muscatine, to C. H. Henle, of Fraser, and Dr. M. F. Henle, of Lyons.

The management of the Grand Theater at Lake City contemplates returning to the policy of three nights of vaudeville each week in addition to the pictures and the house has been enlarged and the stage re-built.

A new screen is one of the many improvements being made at a cost of $4,000 to the DeWitt Opera House at DeWitt.

Work on the building the Mrs. Iver Larsen building in Decorah for use as a moving picture theater has commenced. It is probable that a lease on the house will be taken by a Decorah man.

Moving pictures of Muscatine were such profitable attractions at the Princess and Crescent Theaters in Muscatine that Manager Boston, of the two houses, had the cameraman return for a second reel.

Moving pictures are so popular and good theatrical attractions so scarce that the owners of the Grand Opera House at Spencer have announced the place will be closed and the building converted to other uses.

Sunday shows have been forbidden by the town council at Ute.

The opera house at Lewis has been purchased by Joseph Batterson, who has remodeled it for use as a moving picture theater.

Louis Schroeder has purchased the moving picture theater at Wellman.

The National Theater, owned by J. J. Keefe and Marshall Brothers, was opened May 30 at Sioux City, Iowa, with "Washington at Valley Forge." During the summer months but one act of vaudeville will be booked, but in cooler weather this will be increased to four. The house is practically fireproof. It has a capacity of 550 on the main floor, 200 in the gallery and ninety in the boxes.

O. B. Crane has opened a moving picture airdome, seating 500 persons, on First street in Monticello.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

WISCONSIN.

SOME good local presswork was done for "Les Miserables in the course of its run at the Orpheum in Milwaukee. The superintendent of circulation at the public library allowed himself to be quoted on the demand which the films created for the book and the assistant superintendent of the public schools gave the pictures an enthusiastic endorsement.

W. H. Fenyzel, of Webster, S. D., who has purchased the Bijou Theater at Grand Rapids, announced a number of changes in the house.

Fred Koster will be the manager of the new moving picture theater to be erected on South Twelfth street in Sheboygan by a local company. The house will seat 500.

The Palace Theater at Antigo was closed several days because of a carnival.

A. T. Larson expected to have his new moving picture theater in Pewaukee completed and open for business about the middle of June. The house is 21 x 80 feet.

The Gem Picture Show Company has opened a photoplay theater in the Leamy Building at Shullsburg, and will give shows each Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday night.

Announcement has been made in Milwaukee of the plans of Thomas and E. J. Saxe in connection with the Loew, Sullivan & Considine, and Miles, Jones, Linnick & Schaeffer interests to erect a $650,000 theater on Third street near the Hotel Wisconsin. The house will be one of the string which will offer six hundred nights booking for feature pictures. The new house will seat 3,500 persons. Feature pictures and vaudeville will be presented by the combination in the Crystal Theater until the new theater is completed. The Saxe Brothers have secured control of the Empress, and no vaudeville will be presented there next season, but its policy has not been determined.

Mrs. Minnie Svendsen and Mrs. Eddie Rooney, of Baraboo have opened an airdome, presenting pictures in that city.

The Alhambra Theater on Grand avenue in Milwaukee is doing everything to heighten the effect of coolness for its summer photoplay patrons. The seats have been covered with white duck, which will be laundered daily; the attendants are dressed in white; cakes of ice are displayed prominently; sixty-four fans are used and a seashore "drop" is displayed.

The Majestic Theater at Mauston has re-opened in its remodeled building and will give picture shows every night but Monday.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

MONTREAL

MR. ENGLISH, the popular manager of the Tivoli, has taken over the management of yet another house, the Electra. The Tivoli's management is presenting each woman patron with a copy of the Mutual Girl Magazine on "Mutual Girl" days. Tuesday is given over to comedy when three Keystone films are shown.

Another proof that moving picture stars are becoming more and more well known lies in the fact that one of the favorites at a local race track was called "Mary Pickford."

The Boy Scouts of Montreal were the guests of the management of His Majesty's Theater at a performance of "With the Greeks in the Firing Line."

"Sixty Years a Queen," depicting the life of the late Queen Victoria, was the attraction for two weeks at the Princess, beginning June 1. The local Boy Scouts were admitted at reduced prices. Both the press and the public were loud in praising this Barker production.

The "Empress of Ireland" disaster plunged Montreal into sorrow and mourning. The local photoplay houses were not slow to satisfy the public for their demand of scenes relating to the great marine disaster. Mr. Cross, manager of the Colonial, despatched a special cameraman to Quebec, and was showing scenes of the rescued within a few hours. Mr. English, of the Tivoli, was on hand with some excellent film, and did capacity business. Mr. Hooley, of the Francais, had a unique feature. It consisted of parts of film from different marine releases, and told the story of what happens during a wreck. Mr. West, of the Family, through special arrangements with Pathe Freres, had some excellent scenes. He was rewarded with large crowds.

That the Canadian Cinematograph Company, Ltd., intends producing immediately is shown by the fact that two of its directors, Messrs. Marcelot and Peachy, have visited New York City to conclude arrangements with a first class producer and players. Another purpose of the trip was to make arrangements with its New York brokers to place a portion of its stock on the market. The company is incorporated under Dominion laws, with an authorized capital of $500,000, divided into $200,000 seven per cent. cumulative preferred stock, and $300,000 common stock, of which they are now offering to the public, $50,000 of the preferred stock carrying with it, as bonus, an equal amount of common stock.

During the week of June 22 the Firemen's Benefit Association will take over the Francais Theater when pictures and amateur vaudeville will be the program. The receipts will go to the firemen.

Two prominent officers of the Canadian Film Company, which handle Universal films, are changing their positions. M. Feldstein has been appointed general manager for Canada of Warner's Features, Inc., while A. Fisher has become Montreal manager and special representative for Canada. The head office of Warner's Features will continue to be in Montreal.

The Princess Theater closed its doors for a day during the week of June 1, in respect for Laurence Irving, the noted actor, who was one of the victims in the "Empress of Ireland" disaster.

The Midway is doing excellent business under the management of O. McBrien. This cozy theater seats 1,000, and gives an excellent show. "The Triumph of an Emperor" was a recent attraction.

Feet of film examined, 11,241,000; 9,399,000 feet passed without modification; 581,000 feet prohibited and confiscated; 1,261 reels cut in 1,656 places with a total of 33,528 feet eliminated; 9,853 subjects examined; 8,986 passed without modification; 506 passed with modifications and 361 rejected as a whole.

Such in brief is a resume of first year's work of the Province of Quebec Board of Censors appointed a year ago to supervise all films shown in the various moving picture theaters in this province. Since the establishment of the board, the censors, Dr. L. J. Lemieux, M. J. Walsh, and G. M. Sinn, report that a marked improvement in the character of the pictures submitted for examination has been noted. The film producers, they say, have not been slow in adjusting their wares to the standard set by the board, with the result that at the present time not one whit of difficulty met with in the opening days of the board's activities is now encountered.

An action where the plaintiff claimed a certain shortage of land would decrease the seating capacity of the picture house which he proposed to build upon it, by 100 seats, has been decided by the Court of Review. The case was that of Charles Freeman against Jos. Mageau, and the appeal was taken by defendant against a judgment rendered by Justice Monet on May 27, of last year, ordering the former to deliver to the plaintiff a certain deed of sale of the property, 763-765 Mount Royal avenue east, at a price $312.50 less than the fixed purchase price, $1,000. The defendant alleged that after he had agreed to sell plaintiff the land, he discovered a shortage in the measurement and offered to cancel the agreement, but this plaintiff refused. He insisted on carrying out of the sale less the price of shortage. Their Lordships reversed the lower court's judgment. GALLAGHER.

MICHIGAN.

THE editor of the Kalamazoo Telegraph, Kalamazoo, has slangily but aptly sized up the situation in regard to the reported outburst of Governor Ferris, of Michigan, who is reported to have advocated a law forbidding children to visit moving picture shows unless attended. "The governor should roll over; he's on his back," remarks the editor. The governor's statement was made at a meeting of the Michigan Printers' Cost Congress in Saginaw. Apropos of the high cost of living he is quoted: "We have not reached the limit of the high cost of living. We didn't starve to death for picture shows in 1861. We didn't spend $600,000 a year for chewing gum. . . . There should be a law in the state making it compulsory for an attendant for every boy and girl going to a moving picture show. These first steps down, they breed clandestine meetings." The first visit of the governor to a moving picture theater was recorded, but a few weeks ago and he announced himself as displeased with the subjects shown.

The Columbia Theater in Grand Rapids gave a special exhibition to the members of the local temple of the Ancient Arabic Order of Nobles of the Mystic Shrine when the four reels portraying the visit of the St. Paul Shriners to the Panama Canal were shown.

Romantic automobile races, featuring two cars made in Jackson, removed the industrial pictures made for the Jackson Chamber of Commerce from the ordinary. The pictures were made by the Paragon Film Company. Interest in the production was stimulated by the offer of the commercial organization of a prize of $5 for a suitable title for the picture, the title to contain the word "Jackson." The South Bend, Ind., film, "Sunny Hours in St. Joe Valley," which is along similar lines, was shown recently at the Temple Theater in Jackson.

Petitions for and against the operation of moving picture theaters on Sunday in Gladstone are expected as the result of the announcement by the mayor that the verdict of the people will settle the question. An attempt was made recently, it is said, by the mayor to arrest the proprietor of one of the picture houses, without a warrant, for showing on Sunday and a disturbance followed.

E. W. Tiffany, of Lansing, has purchased a site in Bancroft and contemplates the erection of a handsome little theater.

The moving picture theater which Gillingham & Smith, owners of moving picture theaters in Grand Rapids plan to erect in Bay City, will cost about $25,000. It will seat 800 persons.

Kalamazoo citizens may get a chance to vote upon the question of Sunday amusements. The editor of the Advocate has begun an agitation for clean amusements, seven days a week, in order to prevent the youths from going to the larger and more perilous cities.

The increased capacity of the Cozy Theater at Iron River will be 450. A stage has been added in accordance with a plan to supplement the photoplay program by bookings of vaudeville and dramatic attractions.

Griffith & Rupert, of Boyne City, Ia., have taken over the management of the Idle Hour Theater on West Main street in Battle Creek.

The Kalamazoo Commercial Club made arrangements with the Pathe Weekly to film the 5,000 school children in the annual play festival June 4. The club plans to send the picture out with its promotion film, "The Lure of Kalamazoo."

Major M. J. Phillips, of Owosso, field manager for the Military Movies Company, is establishing the moving picture in the camps of the Canada militia this summer. The Department of Militia and Defense of Canada has awarded a contract to the Military Company to furnish photoplays to the soldiers in the eight camps maintained. The officers believe that the men will be kept in camp at night, and the evils from frequent visits to nearby cities and towns minimized.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

NEBRASKA.

DECISION by F. G. Keens to erect a moving picture theater on Central Avenue in Kearney will give that city a modern home for high-class films. It will seat 700 persons, will be 50 x 130 and will be finished in tile and Italian marble. It is expected to open some time in September.

Frank E. Reeman, owner of the building in which the Isis Theater at Kearney is located, has purchased the picture show and purposes to make it more popular by a thorough campaign, featuring the high grade of pictures offered.

Manager Charles A. Franke, of the Airdome at Twenty-ninth and Farnum streets, Omaha, will give a four-reel show. He has installed two new machines, increased the seating capacity and made a number of other improvements.

The Brandeis, the Orpheum and the Gayety are among the Omaha houses which will run pictures this summer. These, aided to the Lothrop, at Lothrop and Twenty-fourth, the Alamo at Fourth and Twenty-fourth and the New American at Tenth and Hickory streets, promise to make things lively in the photoplay field. The Lothrop and the Alamo have opened and the New American expected to have its new home ready by the last of May. The Orpheum opened with "The Spoilers."

Advertisers

Will kindly note that all Special Copy intended for the

SPECIAL NUMBER

must be in our New York Office on or before Saturday, June 20. This is our Only Special Number of the Year, and will be more interesting this Year than ever before.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

17 Madison Avenue

New York City

IN THE SOUTHWEST.

ADDITION of a moving picture camera to the equipment of the Arkansas State University at Fayetteville, Ark., is but the start of a system which eventually will include the making of educational films to be loaned to high schools throughout the state which possess projecting apparatus. At first the camera will be used for taking pictures around the university, of drills, athletic events and fete days, and other features which will tend to attract more students when the films are shown in Arkansas theaters. The College of Agriculture plans to use it for illustrating the experiments and new methods of farming, sending the pictures to the institute meetings which are conducted in various parts of the state by the farm school faculty. Prof. W. M. Gladson, of the electrical engineering department of the university, will have charge of the photographing and printing work.

L. N. Bracker and R. L. Ruckle, who have leased the building in Brenham, Tex., formerly occupied by the Dixie Moving Picture Theater, will call their house the Queen Theater.

The Hippodrome Theater Company of Shreveport, La., has been granted a permit to do business in Texas with state headquarters at Texarkana. The capital stock of the company is $25,000.

Members of the Arkansas Press Association, which recently held its convention in Jonesboro, Ark., said they were much pleased with the treatment accorded them while they were guests of Managers Mack and Carson, of the Grand and Princess Theaters.

The Rusk School Social Center in Houston, Tex., is now using moving pictures.

Playgrounds in Fort Smith, Ark., will be used by the Y. M. C. A., of that city, in offering open air moving pictures this summer.

A series of weekly moving picture shows has been started by the Dallas Automobile Building Association, of Dallas, Tex.

The Grace Theater has given up its location on North Main street in McPherson, Kan., and is said to be contemplating a location in the southern part of the city.

The Old Mill Theater Company, of Dallas, Tex., has been incorporated with a capital stock of $100,000. The incorporators are F. O. Dalton, B. O. Dalton and P. L. Bible.

The Queen Theater, of Houston, Tex., is advertising to the public that much of the responsibility for the showing of unclean pictures rests upon the exhibitors themselves. The editorial from the Moving Picture World commenting upon the conviction of the New York exhibitor for displaying such pictures was reproduced verbatim. "The Queen takes this occasion to go on record for clean photoplays, especially since there seems to be a determined effort to surfeit the country with these productions. The Queen has never shown a play dealing with the more questionable phases of life —AND IT NEVER WILL." This house has an ally in Mayor Campbell, of Houston, who disapproves of 'White Slave' pictures. "They may do some good, but I doubt it," he said. "It probably would do more good to take young people through the restricted districts in reality if it is thought that disgust for conditions can be aroused."

The City Council of Pocahontas, Ark., has granted a permit to Cleo Davis, of Black Rock, to operate an airdome.

Mrs. M. L. Fulton has purchased the Dixie Theater on Main street in Houston, Tex. Mrs. Fulton has had considerable experience in the moving picture field, having controlled several features.

Announcement was made by the management of the Rex Theater, opened May 30 at Carson City, Nev., by the "Circuit of 21" that especial attention would be paid to arranging special features for lodges and societies. This picture show is located in the old Park Theater building, which has been remodeled.

Maurice Coste, who recently acquired the Yale Theater at Wichita, Kan., is lecturing the pictures. Four reels of pictures and a vaudeville act are given for five cents.

"The Polyanna Theater, the Glad Show" was the name selected in a prize contest for the new open air moving picture theater at Tenth street and Minnesota avenue in Kansas City, Kan. The place is operated by Mrs. Earl Kelley.

A thirty-piece orchestra was used at the opening of the airdome in McPherson, Kan. Pictures and vaudeville make up the bill at the new place.

The Wills Townsite Company has purchased the Yale Moving Picture Theater at Tishomingo, Okla.

Smalley & Fouts, of Pawnee, Okla., have purchased an electric light plant to be used in supplying light and power for their moving picture show at that place.

The Garden Airdome, with vaudeville and pictures, has opened at Oklahoma City, Okla.

High class pictures with the Favorite Quintet and an orchestra will be featured at the Colonel Airdome, which has opened in Oklahoma City, Okla.

W. H. Stewart will represent the motion picture operators' union of Galveston, Tex., in preparing the plans for the Labor Day celebration in that city.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

Calendar of Licensed Releases

Current Releases

MONDAY, JUNE 15th, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—The Prize Employer (Comedy)
—Brown's Bachelor Supper (Comedy)
EDISON—The Adventure of the Missing Legacy (Sixth of "Octavius Amateur Detective" Series) (Comedy)
KALEM—Mrs. Peyton's Pearls (Special—Two parts—Drama)
PATHE—Whiffles, The Spotter (Comedy)
—Cournailles Brittany, France (Travel)
SELIG—The Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 13 (The Court of Death) (Special—Two parts—Drama)
—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 31 (News)
VITAGRAPH—The Crime of Cain (Drama)

TUESDAY, JUNE 16th, 1914.

CINES—One Woman's Way (Special—Two parts—Drama)
EDISON—The Gap (Sixth of "The Man Who Disappeared" Series) (Drama)
ESSANAY—The Little "He and She" (Comedy-Drama)
KALEM—The Missing Jewels (Drama)
LUBIN—The Shell Comb Industry (Industrial)
—Good Cider (Comedy)
MELIES—On the Beach (Comedy)
PATHE—Simple Experiments In Electricity (Educational)
—Through the Bosphorus (Turkey) (Travel)
SELIG—How Lone Wolf Died (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—A Wayward Daughter (Special—Two parts—Comedy-Drama)

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 17th, 1914.

EDISON—A Modern Samson (Comedy)
—On the Steps (Comedy)
ESSANAY—The Fable of the Brash Drummer and the Nectarine (Comedy)
KALEM—Home Run Baker's Double (Special—Two parts—Drama)
LUBIN—The Struggle Everlasting (Special—Two parts—Drama)
MELIES—At the Mercy of the Waves (Drama)
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly, No. 41, 1914 (News)
SELIG—Castles in the Air (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—The Ladies' War (Comedy)

THURSDAY, JUNE 18th, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—Her Neighbors Next Door (Drama)
ESSANAY—The Wooing of Sophie (Western—Comedy)
LUBIN—The House of Darkness (Special—Two parts—Drama)
MELIES—Hidden Death (Two parts—Drama)
—His Dream Fulfilled (Comedy)
—Everybody's Doing It (Comedy)
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 32 (News)
VITAGRAPH—Onl-- a Sister (Drama)

FRIDAY, JUNE 19th, 1914.

EDISON—The Hand of Horror (Special—Two parts—Drama)
ESSANAY—Finger Prints (Special—Two parts—Drama)
KALEM—The Wages of Sinn (Comedy)
—Military Tattoo at Aldershot, England (Top.)
LUBIN—The Parent Strain (Drama)
SELIG—Peter's Relations (Comedy)
—Chickens (Comedy)
VITAGRAPH—The Persistent Mr. Prince (Comedy)

SATURDAY, JUNE 20th, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—By the Old Dead Tree (Drama)
EDISON—In the Days of Slavery (Drama)
ESSANAY—Bronc!.o Billy—Outlaw (Drama)
KALEM—Brought to Justice (Drama)
LUBIN—Getting Solid With Pa (Comedy)
—Long May It Wave (Comedy)
MELIES—Pills and Pills (Two parts—Comedy)
SELIG—The Girl At His Side (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—Father's Flirtation (Special—Two parts—Comedy)

Advance Releases

MONDAY, JUNE 22, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—Song of Sunny Italy (Drama)
EDISON—The Basket Habit (Comedy)
KALEM—The Show Girl's Glove (Special—Two parts—Drama)
PATHE—Max, The Magician (Comedy)
—Historic St. Cloud (Travel)
SELIG—Me An' Bill (Special—Two parts—Drama)
—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 33 (News)
VITAGRAPH—Maria's Sacrifice (Drama)

TUESDAY, JUNE 23, 1914.

CINES—A Midnight Guest (Special—2 parts—Drama)
EDISON—A Foolish Agreement (Drama)
ESSANAY—The Countess (Drama)
KALEM—The Conductor's Courtship (Comedy-Drama).
LUBIN—Nice Nursey (Comedy)
—Brown's Big Brother (Comedy)
MELIES—A Good Time Spoiled (Comedy)
PATHE—Glacier National Park in Winter (Educational)
—The Marmot (Educational)
SELIG—The Servant Question Out West (Comedy)
—Doc Yak and the Limited Train (Comedy)
VITAGRAPH—The Passing of Diana (Special—Two parts—Drama)

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 24, 1914.

EDISON—The Mysterious Package (Comedy)
—On the Ice (A Demonstration of Fancy Skating at Wengen, Switzerland (Sports)
ESSANAY—The Epidemic (Comedy)
KALEM—Through the Flames (Special—Two parts—Drama)
LUBIN—The Greater Treasure (Special—Two parts—Drama)
MELIES—Mother (Drama)
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly, No. 42, 1914 (News)
SELIG—Somebody's Sister (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—The "Bear" Facts (Comedy)

THURSDAY, JUNE 25, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—
ESSANAY—Sophie Finds a Hero (Comedy)
LUBIN—The Candidate for Mayor (Special—Two parts—Drama)
MELIES—A Peculiar Inheritance (Comedy)
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 34 (News)
VITAGRAPH—Happy-Go-Lucky (Comedy-Drama)

FRIDAY, JUNE 26, 1914.

EDISON—The Man In the Street (Special—Three parts—Drama)
ESSANAY—The Chasm (Special—Two parts—Drama)..
KALEM—An Elopment in Rome (Comedy)
—Labor Demonstration in Hyde Park, London (Topical)
LUBIN—A Practical Demonstration (Drama)
SELIG—The Captain Chair (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—The Old Maid's Baby (Comedy)

SATURDAY, JUNE 27, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—
EDISON—Dolly Plays Detective (Tenth of the "Dolly of the Dailies" Series)—(Drama)
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy's Jealousy (Drama)
KALEM—The Gypsy Gambler (Drama)
LUBIN—Who's Boss (Comedy)
—His Sudden Recovery (Comedy)
MELIES—A Shadow on the Wall (Special—2 parts—Drama)
SELIG—The Right To Happiness (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—His Wife and His Work (Special—2 parts—Drama)

WEEK'S SUPPLY IN ONE SHIPMENT IN ADVANCE. SONG SLIDES ADD VARIETY TO YOUR SHOW. WRITE FOR SPECIAL SUMMER PRICES
AMERICAN SLIDE & POSTER CO. First National Bank Building, Chicago
BEST SONG SLIDE SERVICE IN AMERICA

Klaw & Erlanger

PRESENTING

Well-Known Plays in MOTION PICTURES

PRODUCED IN

BIOGRAPH

STUDIOS

ANNOUNCE

LORD CHUMLEY

IN FOUR PARTS

A splendid motion picture of the famous E. H. Sothern's initial and great success.

Now scoring international success

THE FATAL WEDDING

IN THREE PARTS

CLASSMATES

IN FOUR PARTS

BILLIONAIRE

IN THREE PARTS

STRONGHEART

IN THREE PARTS

BOOKED THROUGH GENERAL FILM COMPANY EXCLUSIVELY

Special photographs and two styles of one and three sheet posters and three styles of eight sheet posters available

Calendar of Independent Releases

Universal Film Mfg. Co.

SUNDAY, JUNE 14th, 1914.

ECLAIR—Aunty's Money Bag (Comedy-Drama).....
FRONTIER—His Dress Rehearsal (Drama).....
REX—The Pursuit of Hate (Drama).....

MONDAY, JUNE 15th, 1914.

IMP—The Baited Trap (Two parts—Drama).....
STERLING—Kids (Comedy).....
VICTOR—The Sandhill Lovers (Western Comedy).....

TUESDAY, JUNE 16th, 1914.

CRYSTAL—Boxes and Boxers (Comedy).....
—Foolish Lovers (Comedy).....
GOLD SEAL—Lucille Love, The Girl of Mystery (Series No. 10) (Two Parts—Drama).....
UNIVERSAL IKE—Universal Ike Jr. Bearly Won Her (Comedy).....

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 17th, 1914.

ECLAIR—The Mask of Affliction (Two parts—Western Drama).....
JOKER—The Fatal Letter (Comedy).....
NESTOR—'Cross the Mexican Line (Western Drama).
UNIVERSAL—Animated Weekly, No. 119 (News).....

THURSDAY, JUNE 18th, 1914.

IMP—The Fatal Step (Drama).....
REX—The Law Unto Himself (Two parts—Drama)...
STERLING—A Jealous Husband (Comedy).....

FRIDAY, JUNE 19th, 1914.

NESTOR—Sophie of the Films (Series No. 3) (Comedy)
POWERS—The Brand of Cain (Drama).....
VICTOR—A Singular Cynic (Two parts—Com.).....

SATURDAY, JUNE 20th, 1914.

101 BISON—The Forbidden Room (Three parts—Drama).....
JOKER—A Quiet Day at Murphy's (Comedy).....

SUNDAY, JUNE 21, 1914.

ECLAIR—The Blunderer's Mark (Western-Drama).....
FRONTIER—The Gun Men of Plumas (Drama).....
REX—The Boob Detective (Comedy).....

MONDAY, JUNE 22, 1914.

IMP—Papa's Darling (Comedy).....
STERLING—The Flirt (Comedy).....
VICTOR—The Silent Witness (Two parts—Drama)....

TUESDAY, JUNE 23, 1914.

CRYSTAL—In Wrong (Comedy).....
GOLD SEAL—Lucille Love, The Girl of Mystery (Series No. 11) (Two parts—Drama).....
UNIVERSAL IKE—Universal Ike, Jr., In a Case On the Doctor (Drama).....

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 24, 1914.

ECLAIR—Dead Men's Tales (Three parts—Western Drama).....
JOKER—Willy Walrus, Detective (Comedy).....
NESTOR—The Den of Thieves (Drama).....
UNIVERSAL—Animated Weekly, No. 120 (News).....

THURSDAY, JUNE 25, 1914.

IMP—The Skull (Two parts—Drama).....
REX—The Woman in Black (Drama).....
STERLING—The Crash (Comedy).....

FRIDAY, JUNE 26, 1914.

NESTOR—Sophie of the Films (Series No. 4) (Comedy)
POWERS—The Love Victorious (Two parts—Drama)..
VICTOR—The Slavey's Romance (Drama).....

SATURDAY, JUNE 27, 1914.

"101" BISON—The Old Cobbler (Two parts—Western-Drama).....
JOKER—Love and Electricity (Comedy).....

Mutual Film Corporation

SUNDAY, JUNE 14th, 1914.

KOMIC—Hubby to the Rescue (Comedy).....
MAJESTIC—The Rebellion of Kitty Bell (Two parts—Drama).....
THANHOUSER—The Girl Across the Hall (Drama)..

MONDAY, JUNE 15th, 1914.

AMERICAN—Jim (Two parts—Drama).....
KEYSTONE—(Title Not Yet Announced).....
RELIANCE—Our Mutual Girl No. 22.....

TUESDAY, JUNE 16th, 1914.

BEAUTY—The Dream Ship (Drama).....
MAJESTIC—Their First Acquaintance (Drama).....
THANHOUSER—Remorse (Two parts—Drama).....

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 17th, 1914.

AMERICAN—The Unmasking (Drama).....
BRONCHO—The Hour of Reckoning (Two parts—Drama).....
RELIANCE—The Peace Brand (Drama).....

THURSDAY, JUNE 18th, 1914.

DOMINO—In the Southern Hills (Two parts—Drama)
KEYSTONE—(Title Not Yet Announced).....
MUTUAL WEEKLY—Number 77 (News).....

FRIDAY, JUNE 19th, 1914.

KAY-BEE—The Voice at the 'Phone (Part 1) (Two parts—Drama).....
PRINCESS—The Little Senorita (Drama).....
THANHOUSER—The Man Without Fear (Drama)....

SATURDAY, JUNE 20th, 1914.

KEYSTONE—(Title Not Yet Announced).....
RELIANCE—The Stolen Code (Two parts—Drama)...
ROYAL—Such a Business (Comedy).....
—The Busy Man (Comedy).....

SUNDAY, JUNE 21, 1914.

KOMIC—The Deceiver (Comedy).....
MAJESTIC—The Severed Thong (Two parts—Drama).
THANHOUSER—The Outlaw's Nemesis (Comedy-Drama).....

MONDAY, JUNE 22, 1914.

AMERICAN—The Painted Lady's Child (Two parts—Drama).....
KEYSTONE—(Title Not Yet Announced).....
RELIANCE—Our Mutual Girl, No. 23 (News).....

TUESDAY, JUNE 23, 1914.

BEAUTY—The Tale of the Tailor (Comedy).....
MAJESTIC—The Burden (Drama).....
THANHOUSER—For Her Child (Two parts—Drama).

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 24, 1914.

AMERICAN—Blue Knot, King of Polo (Drama).....
BRONCHO—Desert Thieves (Two parts—Drama)...
RELIANCE—Izzy's Night Out (Drama).....

THURSDAY, JUNE 25, 1914.

DOMINO—Frontier Mother (Two parts—Drama).....
KEYSTONE—(Title Not Yet Announced).....
MUTUAL WEEKLY—Number 78 (News).....

FRIDAY, JUNE 26, 1914.

KAY-BEE—The Voice at the 'Phone (Part Two) (Two parts—Drama).....
MAJESTIC—The Idiot (Drama).....
PRINCESS—Professor Snaith (Comedy).....

SATURDAY, JUNE 27, 1914.

KEYSTONE—(Title Not Yet Announced).....
RELIANCE—The Broken Barrier (Two parts—Drama)
ROYAL—A Hasty Exit (Comedy).....

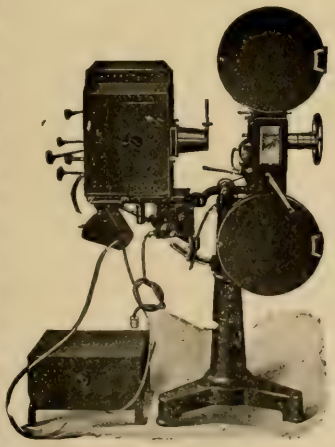
WHEN IN NEW YORK

VISIT THE Simplex FACTORY

Delegates and visitors to the New York Exposition at the Grand Central Palace and members of the trade who visit New York at any time, should avail themselves of our cordial invitation to call and see how Simplex projectors are built.

It is a revelation to see the many operations necessary on each little piece before it is ready to be assembled as a part of the whole machine. The wonderful care and precision exercised in each operation is a surprise to master mechanics as well as to the laymen.

Our system of inspection is also of interest and shows how impossible it is for an imperfect machine to leave our hands.



Simplex methods insure Simplex quality. A year's guarantee signed by our General Manager goes with each machine.

VISIT THE SIMPLEX FACTORY

If you cannot come to us, our new Catalog A will be sent to you upon request.

MADE AND GUARANTEED BY

THE PRECISION MACHINE CO. INC.

317 East 34th St. New York

LICENSED FILM STORIES

EDISON.

THE BASKET HABIT (June 22).—A feature of housekeeping in the South is "The Basket Habit," a playful little eccentricity on the part of the colored servant. The manner and matter of it is this. After a meal or at the end of the day, the darkey maid, carefully concealing a large basket, approaches the refrigerator, and removes therefrom all the remnants, scraps and odds and ends of food which may have been left at any meal, and which have been saved by the thrifty housewife. When the latter approaches her larder for a snack or a cold lunch, she finds it empty.

Mrs. Clifford has a new servant named Phyllis, who, unknown to her mistress, has the basket habit. After dinner, she sweeps the ice box clear and gives the basket to her husband, who puts it in what he considers a place of safety, until he is ready to take it home. Mr. Clifford unexpectedly brings home a guest, Matthew Porter. Mr. Porter has just come off a railroad train and is hungry. Thanks to Phyllis, there is nothing in the house to eat. Moreover, none of the neighbors can help Mrs. Clifford out.

Eddie Chance is in love with Maud, sister of Mrs. Clifford, but is compelled to meet his sweetheart surreptitiously, owing to his being poor, and consequently regarded with disfavor by Mrs. Clifford and her husband. Eddie finds the basket of dainties secreted by Phyllis' husband, and feeds up Mr. Porter, who, being fed and happy, concludes a big business deal with Clifford and takes the next train. Clifford is so grateful that he gives Ed a good job, and Mrs. Clifford allows the two young people to consider themselves engaged.

A FOOLISH AGREEMENT (June 23).—When Harry Wallace, coming home late at night, discovered a burglar in the act of rifling his father's safe, he disregarded the advice of the two young men who accompanied him, and instead of handing the man over to the police, he decided to give him another chance. So he offered the surprised burglar the position of butler in the house.

When the other young men protested against his foolish trust in the man Harry proposed a novel test of their own characters. He proposed that each of them put $200 in a certain safe in order to see how long they could resist the temptation of taking it. When Harry made this proposal, he knew that his father's savings' bank, in which his companions' money was deposited, would be obliged to suspend payment for a few days. He suspected that McClure and Bennett might fall in need of money, and he was curious to see how much resistance they would offer to temptation.

A few days later, the bank closed. At about the same time, Harry's mother was taken very ill, and the doctor advised the family that a change of climate was the only thing that could save her life. Bert McClure, one of the young men who had made the wager, was nipped badly in a drop of the stock market, and put in desperate need of funds for more margin. Ralph Bennett, the other young man, lost a $500 payroll of which he was in charge.

On the evening, following the closing of the bank, several shadowy figures entered the drawing room of the Wallace home. When the lights were turned on, Harry Wallace, his father and sister, Bert McClure, Ralph Bennett, Helen Wright, his sweetheart, and Saunders, the butler, were discovered. The safe was open and the money gone!

An intensely dramatic scene followed. A policeman was called and each of the people in the room confessed, for various reasons, that he or she was the guilty party. Finally, Hetty Wallace produced the money, and confessed that she had taken it to save her brother from temptation. A telegram to Mr. Wallace, containing news that led to an announcement on his part that the bank would open in the morning, cleared matters up, and Harry Wallace decided, in the future, to leave well enough alone.

THE MYSTERIOUS PACKAGE (June 24).—Jones County was greatly stirred up over the tramp question. A number of petty thefts and minor crimes had finally culminated in two simultaneous outrages—the firing of a barn near Oak Corners and the explosion of a bomb in the Jenkinsville postoffice. When the news of these dastardly crimes reached Pohonkasville, the county seat, the village paper said, was felt by all. Pohonkasville had always been rather generous to tramps, but the days of her generosity were over if the low skunks were a going to cut up that way. The indignation ran to fever heat when a tramp to whose gartronomie requirements Cynthia refused to cater, "assed" that young lady. With the noble spirit of enthusiasm which brought the Crusades into being, Pohonkasville collectively and individually decided that the tramps must be turned out of town. Headed by their gallant constables the villagers rushed forth to the attack.

The only three tramps in the vicinity were sitting in the lee of a fence when the ferocious villagers rushed by. Naturally, curious with regard to the motive of the chase, the tramps fell in and ran blindly along in the tail of the procession. It was quite a time before Pohonkasville's gallant band discovered where the tramps were, but it was only a moment or so after they did that the tramps were run out of town in the most satisfactory manner. But when the victorious defenders returned to the village store and postoffice, a terrible surprise was awaiting them in the shape of a brown paper-covered parcel, addressed in straggly letters to Cynthia. Instantly jumping to the conclusion that the tramps had sent them a bomb, they threw the parcel into a bucket of water, and rushing from the store, waited breathlessly for the explosion. While they were waiting, two small boys entered the store, opened the "bomb" and ate a very excellent fudge which it contained. It had originally been intended as a present for Cynthia from a little girl in the city who had made it herself.

ON THE ICE—A Demonstration of Fancy Skating at Wengen, Switzerland (June 24).—Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Syers have perfected a number of intricate and graceful figures which will be of interest to anyone appreciative either of skill or beauty. The picture was taken at Wengen, Switzerland, and on account of the wonderfully dry atmosphere is superb photographically. None of the blur and haze, which so frequently lessen the value of pictures of athletic sports, is at all in evidence. Every movement stands out as distinctly as the etching on a cameo.

The feature of the picture, which will be of greatest interest to patrons of motion picture houses, is an ice dance in which Mr. and Mrs. Syers take part —a sort of tango, magnified a thousand fold in speed and grace. No professional dancer, however clever, could hope to approximate the dash and perfect poise of this beautiful dance.

THE MAN IN THE STREET (Special—Three Parts—June 26).—When John Richerson discovered that a few hundred dollars were all that remained of the million he had inherited, he did not decide to turn over a new leaf and start afresh as a wiser and better man might have done. Instead, he spent the remainder of his fortune on an extravagant dinner to the friends of his vanished prosperity. After the last of the guests had started on his unsteady way homewards, John Richerson sat alone among the ashes of his fortune, and pondered. A brief consideration of the bitter prospects of the morrow convinced him that suicide was the only possible solution of his problem. It had started to rain, and Richerson went to the window and looked out. A woe-begone looking individual was leaning against a lamp post in the midst of the downpour. Acting on a sudden impulse, Richerson called him into the house. When the man was warmed and fed, he told Richerson his story.

Joe Gadsden's downfall had been caused by drink. An immoderate love of liquor had caused him to lose everything worth while in life—position, the respect of his friends, and the love of the only girl who meant anything to him. His only decent achievement had been the writing of a play, and that had been without profit because his attempts to find somebody willing to read it had been fruitless. Stirred by idle curiosity, Richerson took the man's play, and glanced over the pages. What he saw, caused him to read more carefully. Two hours later, Richerson reached the last pages of the manuscript, and drew a long breath. It was a masterpiece! The exhausted author had fallen asleep. As Richerson watched the sleeping man, he was struck with a sudden cunning plan. Calling his servant, he instructed him to wake Gadsden, give him money and a meal a day later. Gadsden called and asked for his play, Richerson apologetically informed him that the servant had thrown it into the fire. Richerson took the play to a theatrical manager whom he knew well, and persuaded him to read it. Griswold, the manager, confirmed Richerson's sanguine hopes, and immediately set about to produce it. In the cast selected for its production, was Kitty French, the girl whom Gadsden had loved and lost.

Richerson's troubles began when he was asked to rewrite a portion of one of the acts. Kitty French came to his rescue, and helped him out of his difficulty. Richerson promptly fell in love with her and proposed. Shortly afterwards, Gadsden confronted and denounced Richerson, and Kitty's suspicions were aroused. Space forbids us to tell how her loyalty to her first love, and woman's wit enabled her to expose the imposter, and make all things right again for Gadsden.

DOLLY PLAYS DETECTIVE (Tenth of the Dolly of the Dailies—June 27).—When Mrs. Cambridge invited Dolly Desmond, and Malone, the managing editor of the Comet, to a dinner party, Malone naturally offered to take Dolly around to the Cambridges' in his car. For in the short space of time in which he had held his new office on the Comet staff, Malone had grown very fond of the clever young girl. When, on their way to the party, Dolly waved her hand to her old friend the policeman on the beat, she noticed a quick frown of displeasure on Malone's face. To tease him, she started to flirt outrageously with all the men present as soon as she arrived at the dinner, among whom was one of society's newest lions, the Count de Rochepierre.

In the midst of the dinner, it was suddenly discovered that one of the ladies' necklaces was missing. She had worn it about her neck when she sat down, and it seemed absolutely inconceivable that anybody should have been able to remove it in the brilliantly-lighted room. On the following afternoon, the count called on Dolly, and begged her to accept a beautiful ring as a slight token of his esteem. Dolly, who rather enjoyed leading the count on, told him she should be delighted to wear it. Shortly after all apparently taken his leave, Mrs. Cambridge and several ladies came to call. At Dolly's suggestion, a game of auction bridge was commenced.

As they sat about the table, precisely the same thing happened as on the preceding night. Two of the ladies' necklaces vanished. The fact that Dolly had been present at both occasions when the mysterious occurrence had taken place, seemed a little significant. The ladies left hurriedly, and somewhat coolly. Left alone, Dolly decided to go and see the Count. She was led to this decision by several suspicious little incidents she had observed. In the Count's quarters, she discovered not only the missing necklaces, but absolute proof of how he had perpetrated his astonishing crimes. But even cleverer than her discovery of his method, was the way in which she inveigled the Count into playing a game of "Forfeits" at the Cambridge's, and at the crucial moment in the game, clapped a pair of handcuffs on him and turned him over to the police.

BIOGRAPH.

BROWN'S BACHELOR SUPPER (June 15).—Brown, on the eve of marriage, gives a bachelor supper to his friends. Brown's housekeeper brings her infant child to his apartment and deposits same in his bedroom, while she puts his room in order. He sends her out to post a letter to a friend. In the meantime his fiancee's mother makes a tour of inspection and discovers the baby among other evidences of Brown's bachelor dissipations. Misunderstandings naturally ensue, which are finally adjusted by the return of the housekeeper.

THE PRIZE EMPLOYER (June 15).—Mrs. Smith has a maid, Mary Ann, who cares more about tango than work. When she smashes a set of crockery while dancing with Mike, the iceman, in the kitchen, Mrs. Smith "fixes" her. Mary Ann makes preparations to leave, but before she goes, her mistress reads an offer published in the Home Journal, to give the mistress kindest to her servant the sum of $1000. Mrs. Smith's sentiment toward Mary Ann reverses and she proceeds to treat her servant with extreme kindness. She sends her husband to escort her to places of entertainment. Mrs. Smith "butts" in on the Icemen's Tango Tea. Mike resents his interference and Smith is fit for the ambulance. Mary Ann realizing Mike's mistake, bids her job "good-bye," much to the distress of her too solicitous mistress.

HER NEIGHBORS NEXT DOOR (June 18).—Louise did not see her sweetheart again after that fatal voyage until years later. He had been lost among a tribe of savages on a desert island, while she had hidden herself from the world in a distant city. Unexpectedly Louise saved her lover's life when threatened by the strikers.

BY THE OLD DEAD TREE (June 20).—No doubt the call of the simple life brought the young bachelor to the country. No doubt his love for the plain and true prompted his friendship for the little teacher. Yet his intentions were misunderstood—this wealthy young man from the city. A better understanding came by the old dead tree where the young man proved the hero.

VITAGRAPH.

MARIA'S SACRIFICE (June 22).—On the advent of their first baby, Maria, the pretty wife of Candido, an Italian workman, feels keenly the high cost of living, and thriftily accepts as a boarder, Beppo, an intimate friend of Candido's. Becoming infatuated with Maria, Beppo tries to win her from her husband, but she scorns him. Gossipy neighbors arouse Candido's jealousy and his suspicions are confirmed when he returns one evening and finds Maria and Beppo in what his state of mind leads him to believe a compromising position. A fierce quarrel ensues and although his wife is perfectly innocent, Beppo is ordered from the house. Later, flushed with liquor, Beppo attempts to stab Candido, who sees him and, in defense, pulls out a revolver and shoots Beppo. Arrested and placed on trial, Candido's wife saves him by giving testimony compromising to her own character, proving that her husband shot Beppo in self-defence. The jury returns a verdict of not guilty. Brooding over his wife's testimony, Candido believes her unfaithful and vows vengeance. Arrived at their little home he heaps upon her his long pent-up fury. Looking straight into his eyes, she then tells him she lied to save him from the law, convincing him she is telling the truth and guiltless of any wrongdoing. With a cry of gladness he kisses the little woman passionately and the two enter the house arm-in-arm, where they are greeted by the cries of their first-born, cementing more firmly the love and trust of the now happy couple.

THE PASSING OF DIANA (Special—Two Parts—June 23).—Geoffrey Brooke, an African explorer, becomes a friend of Rodney Miller, a struggling young artist. Through his influence Miller becomes celebrated. Brooke is called to the Congo, leaving behind his bride of a few months. Miller is about to despair of finding a suitable model for his supreme artistic effort, a painting of Circe, the temptress, when Cleo, a bewitchingly beautiful woman enters and offers to pose for it. They fall deeply in love with each other. Later he becomes

THE TRIAL OF THE ORACLE

The Perils of Pauline

There is not one exhibitor in any part of the country who is not a booster for the "Perils of Pauline." It has paid for itself in many instances on the showing of the first episode, leaving the returns from all the others as clear profit. What would you not pay for a series that forces you to turn people away from your door every time you show it. What would you not give to be able to show one that is so popular your patrons call up and ask that you issue reserved seat tickets for the evenings it is to be shown as they wanted to buy for the full series in advance. Yet this has happened in several instances. Some of the exhibitors have advertised that on the days the "Perils of Pauline" are to be shown the prices will be advanced. They had to do this to protect themselves. Do you need any better evidence of the immense pulling power of this picture?

Pauline Pulls People—She's A Gold Mine

THE ECLECTIC FILM COMPANY

110 West 40th Street

New York City

Leaves of Memory

(4 Parts)

This is a strong, real drama showing that there is a just Providence following the destiny of a helpless human being to clear him in the end of a false charge. It is exceptionally strong.

The Lion's Bride

(3 Parts)

Featuring Mme. Emmy Destinn, the great Prima Donna, singing a part of Mignon in a cage containing fourteen lions, one of which was within two or three feet of the singer all the time. The nerve she shows is almost hair raising.

Giants White-Sox World Tour

(6 Parts)

Everyone Wants to See It.

KING GEORGE WATCHES THE GAME

An exceptionally interesting pictorial trip around the world for anyone old or young. The baseball has been lessened to make way for the interesting scenic and historical episodes and places visited. The comedy is of the side-splitting variety. You never saw anything so funny as the expression on the faces of the foreign audiences when the "BUG" is rooting in true style. There are many more amusing incidents that will hold the audience from start to finish.

It Means Crowded Houses—Big Money

ECLECTIC FEATURE FILM EXCHANGES FOR YOUR USE

ATLANTA Rhodes Bldg.	BOSTON 3 Tremont Row	CHICAGO 5 So. Wabash Ave.	DALLAS Andrews Bldg.	LOS ANGELES 114 E. 7th St.	MINNEAPOLIS 4th & Hennepin Sts.
NEW YORK 115 E. 23rd St.	PITTSBURGH 715 Liberty Ave.	SAN FRANCISCO 67 Turk St.	ST. LOUIS 3210 Locust St.	SYRACUSE 214 E. Fayette St.	CINCINNATI 217 E. 5th St.
CLEVELAND 622 Prospect Av., S.E.	PORTLAND 392 Burnside St.	PHILADELPHIA 1235 Vine St.	WASHINGTON 7th & E Sts., N. W.	NEW ORLEANS 910 Gravier St.
SEATTLE 810 Third Ave.	OMAHA 1312 Farnam St.		DENVER Nassau Bldg.	KANSAS CITY 928 Main St.

THE ECLECTIC FILM COMPANY

110 West 40th Street — New York City

"The Cream of American and European Studios"

engaged to Eva Warren, daughter of one of his patrons. Cleo learns of this and tries to poison herself. Brooke returns from Africa and invites Miller home to meet his wife. There the artist discovers that Brooke's wife is none other than Cleo, his model.

Both are greatly alarmed as Miller has sold Cleo's picture to an art dealer, who is about to exhibit it. Fearing Brooke will recognize the features, Miller tries in vain to repurchase the picture. Cleo suggests he visit the gallery that night and mutilate the portrait. Face to face with his masterpiece, the artist is unable to destroy it and instead paints in another face. The day before Miller's wedding, Cleo leaves a note in his studio saying she is going to kill both herself and Eva. Learning they have gone motoring, Miller frantically follows, hoping to intercept the woman's terrible plan. He almost catches them when Cleo's high-powered machine plunges over a steep cliff, killing her instantly. Eva jumps in time to miraculously escape death.

THE "BEAR" FACTS (June 24).—Seeing his daddy return home tired out, Sonny Jim decides he must be very sick and calls the doctor, who advises Daddy to get away to the country at once. Mother writes to sister Kate and she invites them to visit her for a few weeks at their house in the woods. Sonny is absorbed in reading the story of "The Three Bears." Shortly after their arrival in the country, all go on a picnic. Sonny and Daddy Jim going fishing after lunch. Sonny tells Teddy Bear "Perhaps we can find the Three Bears' house by ourselves" and runs off into the forest alone. He wanders along until he sees a little house just like the one described in the story of the Three Bears. It is the home of Hans, a woodcutter, who has gone with his family to the circus. Sonny finds the interior and its furniture fits the story's description exactly and he is highly delighted. Pretty soon he gets awful sleepy and lays down on one of the little beds. Meantime, Bruno, keeper of the bears at the circus, goes to sleep and leaves the cag door open. After nearly scaring the circus patrons out of their wits, the bears wander into the woods and enter the woodcutter's house in search of food. The animals are very tame and Sonny on being awakened, is soon having a great time playing with them. Hearing the bears are loose and Sonny missing, Mother Dear faints, while Daddy rushes off nearly frantic with fear, followed by Bruno and a crowd. Sonny is discovered fast asleep with one of the little bears in his arms. Daddy rushes in and picks up the boy almost overcome with joy. Sonny awakes and sleepily tells Daddy "not to feel bad because this is the Three Bears' House," and asks to take one of the live Teddy Bears home instead of his make-believe one.

HAPPY-GO-LUCKY (June 25).—The brightest and merriest member of the traveling show, Happy-Go-Lucky, is the pet of the company. After a particularly frosty reception at a small town, they decide to paper the town, leaving a playbill at every house. In this way Happy-Go-Lucky meets Mrs. Vanrennan, a wealthy widow, who is very lonely, her only child, Jim, being away at college. She becomes greatly attached to Happy and induces her to leave the stage and become her companion. Jim, while in college, has seen Happy during one of her tours and fallen in love with her. Home on his vacation he again meets the girl, tells her of his love and asks her to marry him. His mother witnesses the scene and maternal jealousy causes her to think Happy is scheming to fascinate and marry her son. She steps into the room, scornfully reproaches Happy, who deciding she can live there no longer, quietly packs up and leaves the house. Mrs. Vanrennan learns that she had refused Jim and with a change of feeling towards the girl, prepares to make amends for her hasty words, but finds Happy gone. Jim starts out in search of her and at last finds a clue. In the waiting room of a small theatrical manager's office he is told Happy is inside talking to the manager. The manager offers Happy a contract to sign and as she leans over to do so, seizes her in his arms and tries to kiss her. She struggles desperately and screams. Jim hears her, bursts in the door and chokes the manager into submission. On their arrival home, Jim goes in to see his mother alone and finds her heartbroken over Happy's absence. Jim then smilingly ushers in the girl and there is a joyful reunion.

THE OLD MAID'S BABY (June 26).—Just as Bunny is on the point of proposing to Flora, he looks down at the floor and sees his new gloves ripped to shreds by her dog. Flora picks up Fido, shakes her finger at the animal and says, "Naughty Fido," assuring Bunny the dog is only playing. He again tries to pop the question, but this time discovers his hat has received the same treatment as his gloves, and jumps up in a rage. After a war of words, Flora orders Bunny out of the house and decides to go away for a short vacation. Flora receives word from her mother that she is very ill and Flora orders the maid to pack up at once. Of course, she could not leave dear Fido behind, and learning the dog will have to travel in the baggage car, is very much displeased. She then lets upon the idea of dressing Fido up like a baby. In the Pullman car she succeeds in passing off the dog for a baby. It happens that John takes the same train. They meet and she passes on with her coat in the air. John steps on Fido's tail and that precipitates an awful quarrel. John angrily tells the conductor the "baby" is a dog. The conductor tries to take the dog from Flora and she accidentally drops Fido out of the window. John pulls the emergency cord, stops the train and runs back after the dog, returning Fido, unhurt, to Flora, who is overjoyed and very grateful to John. He slips the conductor a bill and sitting by Flora's side, strokes Fido, looking shyly at her, proposes again and this time is accepted. Fido approvingly wagging his tail.

THE EVIL MEN DO (Special—Two Parts—June 27).—As childhood sweethearts, David Horton and Beatrice Elton are inseparable. Fifteen years later Beatrice goes abroad and while there is heartbroken to learn that David has married Margaret Forsythe, a social climber. Margaret starts to entertain on a lavish scale. David, in order to pay the bills, speculates, loses everything and his wife elopes with Captain Clifford, a dashing army officer. Beatrice returns from abroad, meets David, learns all and urges him to go West and start all over again. Horton does so and locates at Ranchville, where he buys a small ranch. Meanwhile, Clifford has tired of Margaret and deserted her. He later meets Beatrice, they marry and he takes her out west with him.

Beatrice meets David at his ranch and tells him she is married. Horton meets Clifford, but keeps silent about Clifford's former life. Beatrice pleads to reunite Margaret and her husband and invites the girl to Ranchville. On her arrival, Beatrice asks David to give Margaret another chance, pleading so hard he finally takes Margaret back. Foreseeing trouble should Margaret and Clifford meet, he urges her to leave that section until the Cliffords have gone. Unfortunately she does meet Clifford, he threatens her, they struggle and she is accidentally killed. Horton finds the body and a clue to the guilty one. He accuses Clifford, who breaks down and confesses the whole truth, which Beatrice overhears. She tells Clifford it is all over between them and he kills himself. After the funeral, Horton and Beatrice leave for the East together, determined to forget the past and start life anew as man and wife.

"Hallberg"

TALK No. 32

A Word From an Operator.

While walking around the exhibit at GRAND CENTRAL PALACE, an operator hailed me: "How do you do, Mr. Hallberg?" and turned to the man who employed him to demonstrate the Optigraph machine, and said: "Mr. Hallberg is the best friend the good operators ever had, because he gives us a square deal." I asked him what he meant, and he said: "You tell our employers to buy only good and first-class machines and equipments, and you are not afraid to tell the boss that the best operator in the world cannot make a decent show with old and inferior equipment, nor can a bum operator make a show with the best equipment; but it takes the combination of the two, as you have always preached, to make a success. That's the reason we operators like you and your goods."

TAKE NOTICE AND DROP ME A LINE

I take old machines in trade as part payment for new ones, and I also make liberal allowance on your old rheostats, A. C. Economizers, A. C. to D. C. Converters and Rectifiers in trade for the celebrated "HALLBERG" A. C. to D. C. Economizers, which give the BEST LIGHT with the LEAST CURRENT.

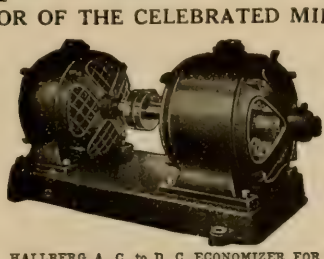
KALEM.

THE CONDUCTOR'S COURTSHIP (June 23).—Bill and Tom are rivals for the hand of Gail Allan, daughter of a station agent. Although her father orders Gail to marry Bill, who is an engineer, the girl is determined to marry Tom, a freight conductor. Allan sees Tom talking to Gail and orders the man away. Just as he hops aboard his train, the conductor slips a note into his sweetheart's hand, informing her that arrangements have been completed for their elopement the following day.

DISTRIBUTOR OF THE CELEBRATED MIRROR SCREEN

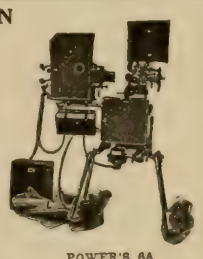
SIMPLEX

Distributor Simplex Machines



HALLBERG A. C. to D. C. ECONOMIZER FOR ONE OR TWO LAMPS.

Distributor Power's 6-A Machines



POWER'S 6A

Factory Selling Headquarters for POWER'S, SIMPLEX, MOTIOGRAPH and EDISON MACHINES, "HALLBERG" STANDARD A. C. ECONOMIZERS, "HALLBERG" D. C. ECONOMIZERS, MERCURY ARC RECTIFIERS, MOVING PICTURE MACHINES and FLAME ARC CARBONS. I EQUIP THEATRES COMPLETELY

Free Circular on all makes of M. P. Machines, but Hallberg's Big Catalogue, 100 pages, costs you 25c. by mail

J. H. HALLBERG "THE HOUSE OF QUALITY" 36 East 23rd Street, New York

The next morning, Allan again sees Tom conversing with Gail and angrily shoves the man away. Tom bides his time. Bidding Gail to stand close to the track, he reaches out from the caboose platform and snatches her in his arms as the train speeds by.

Furious, Allan and Bill leap into the latter's locomotive and go in pursuit of the freight train. Tom, however, is equal to the occasion. He and one of his brakemen cautiously lean over the edge of the caboose and pour oil on the tracks. Consequently, when Bill's locomotive reaches the greased tracks, it comes to a standstill.

The pursuers see a handcar on a siding. Appropriating it, they continue the chase. But the lovers reach the spot where a minister is waiting, and by the time Allan and Bill arrive, Tom and Gail are married.

Wild with anger, Bill and Allan return to their handcar. Allan's rage gets the best of him. Feeling he must give vent to his rage, the father turns upon poor Bill just as they pass a ditch and, with a lusty blow, knocks him into it.

THE SHOW GRIL'S GLOVE (Special—Two Parts—June 22).—Hampton, a broker, employs a detective to investigate Stella, a show girl, with whom his younger brother Dick is in love. As a result of the detective's discoveries, Dick breaks his engagement with Stella.

The woman calls at Dick's office late that afternoon. Hampton leaves the two alone. Unable to alter Dick's decision, Stella seazes a knife and threatens suicide. Dick tries to wrest the weapon from her and is accidentally killed. Stella flees in terror, dropping one of her gloves in her haste.

In leaving the building, the show girl sees Hampton waiting outside for the interview to end. Seized by a disbolical idea, the woman summons a policeman and returns to the office. Hampton is found leaning over his brother's body. The man is placed under arrest.

Missing her glove Stella later throws its blood-stained mate into an ashcan. Mary, wife of the accused man, finds the glove that had been dropped at the secen of the murder. Suspecting a foul plot, the woman resolves to run the real murderer to earth.

Mary has befriended Rosie, the daughter of a ragpicker. While the girl is doing some sewing for the griefstricken wife, she sees the show girl's glove lying on the table. Rosie mentions the fact that her father had found a glove greatly resembling the one on the table. When the ragpicker's daughter later brings the blood-stained glove her father had found, Mary discovers they are mates.

The wife's chance comes when she learns that Stella is advertising for a maid. Ignorant of the applicant's identity, the show girl employs the wife of the man she has accused. Awaiting her opportunity, Mary places the gloves on Stella's dressing table. Detectives stationed in the next room hear the show girl's cry of horror when she finds the tell-tale gloves. They place the murderess under arrest. Overcome, Stella confesses her crime.

THROUGH THE FLAMES (Special—Two Parts—June 24).—Donald Hall discovers that his wife is engaged in a flirtation with Major Humphreys. The husband forbids Marion to see the man again. Despite this injunction, the woman accompanies Humphries to a road house with a party of friends, while Donald is at a directors' meeting.

A fire breaks out and destroys the road house. Marion and Humphreys barely escape. Fearing to return home, the woman heeds Humphreys' pleas and elopes with him. Her handbag is found in the ruins of the building. Donald is led to believe his wife dead.

Overwhelmed, he goes to the country. There he meets Milly Rogers. As time passes, the two fall in love. Donald makes Milly his wife. In a distant land, Humphries tires of Marion and deserts her. The woman thereupon resolves to return to her husband.

Ascertaining Donald's whereabouts, the woman enters the country home of Donald and Milly. The terrible revelation causes Milly to swoon. Stunned, Donald makes provisions for Marion. Forbidden to see Milly by her father, the unhappy man departs for the West. Shortly afterward, Donald receives a message telling him that Milly had died in childbirth.

Three years later, old Rogers and his grandchild pass over the bridge where Donald had first met Milly. The child places her doll on the handrail and forgets it. Late that night, Donald, heartsick and weary, returns to the spot where he and Milly had met. Tired of life, the man raises a pistol to his head. A little figure trudging toward him, stays his hand.

The child's features reveal her identity to Donald. As the little one reaches for the doll she had forgotten, the trembling man inquiries her name. A moment later, Donald Hall presses his daughter to his breast.

AN ELOPEMENT IN ROME (June 26).—Cleo loves Darius, a penniless poet, but her father, the noble Sportus, sets his face against the match.

Markus, the father of Thinus, and Pompus, the parent of Fatus, each desires his son to marry Cleo. The fathers each bring a bag of gold to Sportus, declaring that it is to be the marriage portion of their sons.

Sportus thereupon orders Cleo to choose between Thinus and Fatus. Cleo begs Darius for advice. An inspiration causes the poet to suggest that the rival suitors don boxing gloves and fight it out. Their sporting blood aroused, Markus and Pompus agree. Each wagers the gold that was to have been his son's marriage portion. Sportus is stakeholder.

While the battle waxes furious, Darius and Cleo steal away and are married. Fattus and Thinus using fists, teeth and feet, fight until exhausted. With a final desperate effort each hits the other a blow. Both are knocked out.

At this moment, the lovers return and announce their marriage. In consternation, Markus and Pompus demand the return of their money. But Sportus calmly announces that since the fight has ended in a draw, the stakes belong to him.

LABOR DEMONSTRATION IN HYDE PARK, LONDON (June 26).—That the I. W. W. is as active abroad as in America, is demonstrated by this absorbing feature which was photographed in London recently, where the members of the I. W. W. participated in a gigantic demonstration and parade.

Two other interesting topical views taken abroad show the launching of England's newest and most powerful dreadnaught, the "Marlborough," and coaching in Hyde Park.

THE GYPSY GAMBLER (June 27).—Espan, a Gypsy gambler, loves Pardena, daughter of Romano, the chief of the band. Pardena dislikes the man and informs the father of his attentions. Later, when Espan asks Romano for his daughter's hand, the Gypsy chief knocks him down.

Filled with rage, Espan crawls away. The following day Romano stops to watch a game of cards. The leader finally sits in on the game. Espan stacks the cards and wins Romano's money. Stung by his losses, the chief wages his horses, but again loses. In desperation, Romano offers to wager Pardena against the money and horses Espan has won. The latter agrees.

Romano discovers that he has been cheated. He springs upon Espan and the two engage in a knife duel. The chief is slain. The victor immediately goes to Romano's wagon to claim Pardena, but the girl has disappeared.

While the game is in progress, the girl makes her way from the camp. Before long, Pardena becomes bewildered. Light Cloud, a young Indian chief, comes to her rescue and guides her back to the camping ground. There the two find the body of Romano. The Gypsies have disappeared.

Light Cloud has lost his heart to Pardena. He urges her to make her home with his people. The girl becomes his squaw. The tribe, however, regard her with hatred. Later, when the hunters return empty-handed, they declare that Pardena is possessed of an evil spirit and demand that she leave the village.

Unable to alter the determination of his people, Light Cloud renounces his chieftainship and takes his place by Pardena's side. Turning his back upon all tribal ties, Light Cloud walks from the camp with his Gypsy squaw.

THE MISSING JEWELS (June 16).—Jim, a train yard man, finds a $30,000 necklace that had been lost by Ruth Vaughn, a young society matron. Ignorant of its value, the man places it about the neck of his seven-year-old daughter, Nell, who is motherless. Jim falls ill. His savings vanish. Nell tries to nurse her father. Unable to secure money for medicine, the girl resolves to sell a potted plant which had been given to her by church workers. Nell wanders far in her effort to dispose of the plant. A jeweler, in front of whose shop the child pauses for a moment, recognizes the Vaughn necklace and has one of his clerks follow Nell home. Mrs. Vaughn and the police are notified.

Detectives enter Jim's miserable home and accuse him of having stolen the necklace which they remove from Nell's throat. They are about to arrest him, when Mrs. Vaughn enters. Taking in the situation at a glance, the woman orders Nell's father freed. Jim tells how he had found the jewels and of how Nell has taken care of him during his illness. Touched, Mrs. Vaughn takes the child under her own care while a brighter future dawns for Nell's father who becomes Mrs. Vaughn's gardener.

ESSANAY.

THE COUNTESS (June 23).—Richard Hasbrook, an ambitious reporter on the Morning Globe, is assigned to get a feature story for Sunday. An idea occurs to him to look through the wants ads. There he discovers that Countess Ysiolf "wants a reliable butler." His appearance gets him the position, and a day or two later the Countess returns from Europe. She tells him he is not only to be the butler, but to be her personal representative and bodyguard—that she fears trouble. Some time later, as she is partaking of her evening's repast, a burly man of questionable appearance tries to force an entrance into her home. The athletic butler stamps furiously on his foot and the man flees. Later he succeeds in entering the house, where a furious battle ensues between the butler and the crook—the former finally overpowering him. The countess then confesses of a broken vow she had made to the leader of a notorious gang in Europe, and the man whom Hasbrook had saved her from, had come to seek her life. Hasbrook then reveals his identity—and his feature story in the Sunday Globe is the announcement of a weeding to take place soon.

THE EPIDEMIC (June 24).—Argentino Boldo has a valuable book in his possession that Texas Tommy, Hesitation Nell and One-Step McGinnis desire to appropriate. The hero, Prancing Daly, and his sweetheart, Tango Kate, try to prevent the intruders from stealing the book. The tangoists have

READY FOR DELIVERY

URIEL ACOSTA
URIEL ACOSTA
URIEL ACOSTA

B. ADLER
Eminent Dramatist
PLAYS TITLE ROLE

We want to impress upon you that our great five reel masterpiece is the feature for you.

URIEL ACOSTA

THERE IS A REASON! The play and book by Karl Kutzkou, has gained fame all over the world. Consequently the photoplay will reap a gold harvest.

GET BUSY; take advantage of a good opportunity and make money. Wire for your territory.

Great lithographs 1-9, 1-3, 1-1, heralds, slides, lobby photos 8 x 10, 20 x 24 hand colored.

ESCAPED FROM SIBERIA
FIVE REELS

THE NAME ITSELF SUGGESTS ACTION THAT MAKES THE BLOOD TINGLE

SEVERAL STATES OPEN

NO TIME LIKE THE PRESENT. WRITE OR WIRE

GREAT PLAYERS
FEATURE FILM CORP.
909 Longacre Building
Broadway and 42nd St.
NEW YORK

Capt. Kleinschmidt and Walrus Head

A Sure Money Maker

For the Hot Summer Months

CAPT. F. E. KLEINSCHMIDT'S

Arctic Hunt

IN SIX REELS

Native and animal life in the north. A revelation of life and affairs in the frigid zone that has never been equalled. An intimate close range study of the animal life, including Moose, Caribou, Sea Lion, Polar Bear, Great Kodiak Bear, Walrus and Millions of birds on their rookeries. Glaciers in action. Icebergs, the size of twenty-story buildings, precipitated headlong into the sea.

Chance to secure the bargain of a lifetime in Exclusive State Rights

Attractive paper, 1, 3, 6 and 24 Sheets. Large photos for lobby display. Heralds, cuts, lantern slides, lecture and press matter. Two three-reel features or three two-reel features.

Wire or write for some fine territory at temptingly low prices

Capt. Kleinschmidt and Sea Lion Aboard Vessel

Arctic Film Co.

Suite 1209

220 West 42nd Street

NEW YORK

Phone Bryant 3559

IMPORTANT

¶ Attention is directed to the fact that the Goodwin Film & Camera Company have granted us the right and license to import, use and sell to others to be sold or used during the life of the United States Letters Patent No. 610861 (the so-called Goodwin Patent) both AGFA and GEVAERT cinematograph or motion picture film.

This action on our part has been prompted mainly by our desire to relieve our customers of any concern that may have been caused by any claims made in the past or that may be made in the future, to the effect that film purchased from us infringed upon such patent.

We shall continue as heretofore to market AGFA and GEVAERT negative and positive motion picture films, which have become famous throughout the world for their superior photographic qualities.

Samples, etc., furnished gratis upon request

RAW FILM SUPPLY CO., SOLE AMERICAN AGENTS 15 East 26th Street, New York City

a lively time, which brings about many comical scenes. The action is great and the story unusual.

SOPHIE FINDS A HERO (June 25).—Mustang Pete promises three dollars and twenty cents to anyone who will make him a hero. Slim hears of the offer and raises the price fifty-five cents. Slim and Pete quarrel and decide to settle the argument with a duel. Both men are nearly scared to death, and the duel is a terrible fizzle. Pete is given a note proclaiming him a hero, and he rushes to Sophie to claim her for his own. Slim gets a professional bad man to stop the wedding, and many complications arise, which are decidedly comical.

BRONCHO BILLY'S JEALOUSY (June 27).—Broncho Billy had promised Marguerite that he would never drink again. She agreed to marry him. That afternoon, one of the village gossips sees Marguerite with Roy Turner, a surveyor, and hastens to inform Broncho of it. Marguerite's sweetheart threatens to kill the surveyor, but finally suggests a duel to be fought ten minutes later. Marguerite hears of it, hastens to the minister's home, where she gets him and takes him to Kelly's saloon. The minister straightens out the tangle by marrying Marguerite to the jealous Broncho.

THE CHASM (Special—Two Parts—June 26).—Shirley Black had worked for Don Waverly for some time in the capacity of stenographer and private secretary. She had learned to love Frank Goodrich, a salesman for the company. His health had been very poor and when the doctor ordered him West, he was at a loss to know how he was to get there, having saved very little money. He asks his employer to help him, but Waverly refuses. The employer, fascinated with Miss Black, finally consents to help her, and she forwards money to Frank each week. His health improves. Shirley, sacrificing her love for Goodrich, allows her employer to press his attentions—and she did it to help the man she loved. She writes Frank every week and continues sending him money that she receives from her employer. Finally, she marries Waverly, to save the life of her sweetheart. Johnson, a clerk in Waverly's employ, writes a letter to Goodrich, informing him of Shirley's marriage, and he hastens to the East, where he threatens to deliver Shirley's letters to her husband. Shirley denounces him, stating that now she really loves Waverly, and that nothing can separate them. Goodrich is on one side of the chasm, now utterly out of reach of the love Shirley had sacrificed.

PATHE.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 40 (June 10).—New York City, N. Y.—A hundred oarsmen compete for supremacy in the Harlem Regatta. The junior four-oared race, chief of the program.

Washington, D. C.—President Wilson formally opens the new American University here.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Thirty daredevil drivers whirl over the five hundred mile International Automobile Race Course.

Glen Cove, L. I.—The Vanitie, contending yacht for the America's cup defense, wins her first race with Resolute by three miles.

Boston, Mass.—The Cornell Varsity, star intercollegiate rowing crew, defeats Harvard by a length on the Charles River.

Quebec, Canada.—Dominion government steamer, Lady Grey, reaches this city with a grim passenger list, 188 victims of the Empress of Ireland disaster.

Quincy, Mass.—The steamer Atlantic, first of a fleet to ply between Boston and Pacific ports via the Panama Canal, is launched here.

Hamburg, Germany.—The steamer Warner strikes an obstruction and sinks at the entrance to the harbor, blocking traffic.

Oil City, Pa.—A spectacular fire sweeps the oil plant here, consuming 30,000 barrels of oil.

Bombay, India.—The Viceroy of India formally opens the new docks here, largest in the Far East.

Paris, France.—Evening gowns and wraps, product of leading Parisian modistes, are shown here in advance styles.

WHIFFLES THE "SPOTTER" (June 15).—Whiffles, the timorous, in matters of the heart invariably rises to the occasion, and in this particular instance is his quick-witted plan and scheme laughingly portrayed. Starting for a walk with the darling of his heart and her constant companion, the spotted fox-terrier, they meet another admirer of the fair one and Whiffles through his bashfulness is soon relegated as cavalier to the canine. Seated in the park, Whiffles now as important as any part of the park furniture, rouses himself to action and breaks up the impromptu love-making, with the aid of a lit cigarette. Meanwhile the dog has strayed.

His loss discovered a hasty search proves fruitless and in despair the dog's mistress declares she will marry the man who finds him. Whiffles' search unavailing he quickly seizes another dog, takes him to a painter's and has him "spotted" to resemble the lost terrier. Hastening to the house with joyful step, he is chagrined to find on his arrival that his rival has "beat" him to it. But once again the artful schemer gets busy and not only does he retrieve his fair one's admiration, but unfeelingly gives his rival the "Gate".

COURNAILLES—BRITTANY (FRANCE) (June 15).— Brittany, quaint and picturesque holds forth many delightful spots for the curious traveller. Whether it be the old tower of Concarneau, the "Calvary" wayside shrine built in 1520, or the peculiar customs and fashions of the inhabitants of the province, one finds something strange and interesting at every turn.

SIMPLE EXPERIMENTS IN ELECTRICITY (June 16).—To-day, with the complex electrical phenomena making our modern life possible, it is still the very simple experiments which hold the interest of the public. For instance, a glass rod, rubbed briskly with a woolen cloth will attract a ball of pith, pieces of paper, and bits of feathers. Rosin treated similarly acts similarly, and will also attract a stream of water out of a vertical line. The glass and the rosin are, however, charged oppositely and one is known as the positive pole and the other is negative. Bodies which the positive pole attracts are repelled by the negative, and vice versa.

Bodies so charged only become electrified at the point of rubbing. The stick of rosin rubbed in the middle attracts the ball of pith only at that spot but the extremeties are more susceptile than the centre. In these pictures are shown the simple experiments of the Volta disk and the Static Chimes. It is also demonstrated how a person suspended in mid-air can receive the electrical current with one hand and transmit it with the other.

THROUGH THE BOSPHORUS (TURKEY) (June 16).—Although only two miles in length the Bosphorus connecting the Black Sea with the Sea of Marmora is virtually alive with landmarks of ancient and modern interest. Among these are the Palace of Mohamed V, the old Geonese Fortress, Thrapia—"The Newport of Turkey" and the buildings of the various European embassies.

LUBIN.

BROWN'S BIG BUTLER (June 23).—Benjamin Brown, a bachelor, is called out of town just as he expects a visit from a friend. He writes the latter to make himself entirely at home in the Brown apartment. The friend, Jack Reed, arrives and rings Brown's bell. He does not see the Brown butler, who is only about three feet high, and he feels a bit unsettled when the door closes as he can see no one. He turns to pick up his suit-case and finds that it has disappeared. He makes his way to the dining room where a decanter and glasses seem to mysteriously appear on the table, and later this is followed by breakfast. The butler supposes that Jack knows that he is there and goes about his tasks so quietly that Jack does not catch sight of him and is beginning to attribute the mysterious appearance to supernatural causes. The last straw is when the table cloth apparently vanishes of its own accord. He gets a policeman to help his solve the mystery but the policeman is no more fortunate in catching sight of the butler and both are pretty badly scared at the strange things that happen until the butler starts to climb to the top shelf of the butler's pantry and falls, carrying the shelf down with him. The crash attracts the policeman and Jack and they enjoy a good laugh as they extricate the half-portion butler from his predicament.

NICE NURSEY (June 23).—Bill Glynn enjoys being sick so much that long after he is well he keeps on being sick that he may enjoy the tender ministrations of his pretty nurse. Now and then he "sneaks a smoke" out of the window and the negro butler has been ordered to bring him whisky, so he has a pretty good time while nurse is taking her daily exercise. But he takes one chance too many. The nurse tells him she will be back in an hour. Bill makes himself comfortable with cigarettes and whisky and falls asleep. The nurse catches him and steals from the room before he wakes. She calls up the doctor and tells him that she thinks a change of nurses will be better than a change of scene for Bill. The doctor promises to send one around. Meanwhile Bill has cleaned things up. In about a half an hour the new nurse comes. She is the exact opposite of the other. Bill gives one look and springs from the bed to rush to the telephone and tell the doctor to come quickly because he is cured. It was a mighty quick recovery.

THE GREATER TREASURE (Special—Two Parts—June 24).—Ellen Cary, poor, but passionately desiring luxury and thinking that wealth can, alone, and irrespective of all other considerations, afford happiness, loves and is to marry Robert Bray, a young lawyer, who has yet to attain financial success in his profession. The first promise of great success comes to Robert when John Street, millionaire president of the Empire Trust Company, informs him that he has decided to give him some of the business of that concern. In delight, Robert invites Ellen to a simple celebration, but this as everything else she does or has is spoiled for the girl by her contrasting of actualities with dreams of wealth.

Street is a widower with one child, Rose, a girl of simple tastes and attractive personality. By chance Street meets Ellen at Robert's office, and the millionaire falls in love with her, in a short time asking her to be his wife. In Ellen's heart there is a terrible struggle between her love for Robert and her yearning for wealth, but at length the craving for luxury and social station is triumphant, and she marries Street.

Shortly after, Robert who has been almost broken hearted at the sordid faithlessness of Ellen, chances

COMING:

THE LAND OF THE LOST

STERLING CAMERA & FILM CO., 145 WEST 45th STREET, NEW YORK

GOOD—ALL THROUGH

NO finer feature films have ever found their way into the hands of the exhibitors than those released by WARNER'S FEATURES, Inc.

THREE REASONS WHY

1st. We buy Open Market films exclusively, rejecting the unfit and accepting only those that measure up to our standards of "the best in motion pictures."

2nd. We pay producers of note more for their negatives than any other independent organization can afford to pay, thus encouraging the manufacture of more and better feature films.

3rd. It is our good fortune to deal with producers, having in their employ recognized stars of the screen, capably supported by artists of ability.

NET RESULT: Lavish photoplays, well acted, brimming over with action and possessing that requisite of all good pictures—perfect photography.

Write for interesting booklet describing our de luxe feature service.

WARNER'S FEATURES, Inc.

130 West 46th Street NEW YORK

to meet Rose, who, in her strength of character and sweetness, proves to be all he had thought Ellen to be. Robert and Rose are soon deeply in love. Robert asks her father's consent to their marriage, and is scornfully refused. Though saddened to act against her father's will, Rose nevertheless declares her determination to marry Robert, and is ordered from Street's house. In his rage Street changes his will, disinheriting Rose and leaving his entire fortune to Ellen. Before he reflects, he is killed by a locomotive which strikes his automobile. By this time Ellen has realized that wealth, without love, is a gilded mockery of happiness, and free determines to win back Robert. Ellen cannot comprehend that Robert does not prefer her and the enormous fortune which is now hers to the penniless Rose. Ellen, at length, desperate, approaches Rose, offering to turn over to her the entire Street fortune if she will give Robert up, but Rose, to Ellen's astonishment, rejects the offer. Robert and Rose are married and begin their lives of simple happiness. Ellen, a vast fortune at her command, and surrounded by the gorgeous luxury for which she once longer, realizes in bitter agony the value of the treasure of love which she bartered for wealth.

THE CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR (Special—Two Parts—June 25).—Mrs. Nelson, a widow, dies, leaving twin sons eight years old, David and Robert. David is adopted by Dr. Sterling, the family physician, and becomes David Sterling. Robert is taken West to Los Angeles, where James Baker, a prominent politician, accepts the boy as his son.

Twenty years pass. David's foster father is dead and the young man takes up his practice as a physician in the little Virginia village. Robert has become a rising young politician and is engaged to marry Bakers niece, Grace Dodge. Robert allows his name to be used as a candidate for mayor of Los Angeles, and Monty Brice becomes his campaign manager. The gambling interests are strongly opposed to Robert, knowing that if he is elected they will be closed up.

About a week before the convention, David, in Virginia, determines to try to find his brother, knowing only that he was adopted by some man in Los Angeles. He leaves for the West. At the same time in Los Angeles Robert is seized secretaly by some of the gamblers and hidden away in a Chinese opium den, where he is held a prisoner. The day of the convention arrives and no trace has been found of Robert. Monty, in a last desperate search, runs across David as he is leaving the Los Angeles railroad station. Monty takes David for Robert, but when he finds he is mistaken, he urges David to dress in Robert's clothes and appear before the convention. David steadily refuses, until he learns through a photograph of his mother that Robert must be his twin brother. Then he agrees to take his place until Robert can be founr. Known as Robert Baker to all except Monty, David is elected Mayor. He is also forced to play the part with Grace, who finds a new strength in her lover that makes her care all the more. David finds he loves Grace. Robert is finally rescued; cured by David of the opium habit and placed in the mayor's chair. Grace solves the love tangle.

A PRACTICAL DEMONSTRATION (June 26).—Jim Harris, division engineer of the C. & K. and Mary Lane, are sweethearts but quarrel when Mary, a convert of the suffragette movement, asserts her intention of provoking by securing and holding a "man's job" that woman is fully as competent, and therefore entitled to all privileges enjoyed by man. Mary studies telegraphy, and applies to the C. & K. for a position. Jim, thinking to cure her of her folly, arranges that she be appointed station agent at a lonely siding where she will even have to do her own cooking and washing.

Mary takes the job and upon learning of Jim's plot not only determines to keep the place but furiously orders Jim to keep away from her station. Jim does so, but deeply concerned makes daily visits to a point from which, with the aid of a glass, he can assure himself that all is well at the station. Mary discovers in an unclaimed express package a pair of field glasses and in amusing herself with them learns of Jim's faithful espionage. She is at first angry at what she regards as his spying, but a different emotion presently asserts itself as his patient and unobtrusive watchfulness continues.

A small band of bandits take possession of Mary's station and prepare to hold up a train. Some time will elapse before the train is due to pass, and the bandits make themselves at home. Mary, helpless, manages to put on a brave front, even asking permission to continue the washing of her clothes, and the bandits good naturedly agree. Mary is allowed to hang her clothes to dry on a wire fence running directly away from the station. On account of the angle, the bandits see nothing suspicious. Mary pins the linen on the fence in such a way that the letters H E L P are roughly shaped and at the proper distance the word can be clearly read. Jim, through his glasses reads the appeal, and, gathering up a track gang on the way, comes to Mary's aid. The bandits are surprised and captured. Mary decides she has had quite enough of a man's job, and intimates that she is now quite ready to assume the position of housekeeper that Jim has so long urged her to accept.

WHO'S BOSS (June 27).—Sue Briggs is a militant suffragette, and even though her husband is the head of the police force she is not a bit afraid of him and she tells him so, more by her actions than her words. Sue is hospitable and the men of the force all know how good her coffee and pies are, and when Pat Murphy gets clubbed by the chief they take him down to the chief's house to get first aid—and pie. But the subjugation rankles in the police breast and one afternoon when he has about three good drinks to back him up, the chief determines on revolt. The best way seems to him to be to get his force and awe his wife, so he takes his police whistle and plays a tune in front of the house. Not to be outdone Sue too pipes in front of the house. The forces meet in the house and the men shamelessly desert their chief and at Sue's word of command they jump all over him. The chief is willing to arbitrate even to the point of admitting that Sue is the boss, after which pie is served. The chief gets his external application, but he hasn't a word to say.

HIS SUDDEN RECOVERY (June 27).—Jones is a very large healthy man, but he reads a medical almanac and imagines he has every ailment in the book. He goes to bed sick, and great excitement prevails in the family. Everybody phones for a doctor. The physicians arrive and all prescribe different medicines and treatment. Veterinaries, osteopaths, corn doctors all respond to the call. They have bitter arguments and throw out each other's medicines. The neighbors send in wine and delicacies which load the dining-room table. The doctors work on Jones until he is exhausted and thinking he is dying he sends for all of his relatives. A swarm of queer looking relatives arrive and make it a jubilee occasion. They consume the delicacies sent in by the neighbors and carry away the furniture and wreck the place. Jones hears the riot and recovers his strength. He gets out of bed and throws the mob out of the house. An ambulance arrives. Jones throws the trained nurse and the medicines in the stretcher and tears up the almanac.

LONG MAY IT WAVE (June 20).—Pat McCarthy is not entirely happy in his married life. Nora has a strong fist and a short temper and she is bigger than Pat anyhow. Pat gets interested in the paper and forgets to bring in the coal, but when she throws the dishpan at him he goes to work hurriedly. On his way to work he is given a hand-bill of "The Flag We Love," a lurid melodrama to show at the town hall. Pat buys a pair of seats and uses them for a peace offering.

The play is tremendously interesting. At the end of the first act General Grabimoff, of the Imperial Army, swears that the fair Lucille shall be "His'n," but she floats the American flag she carries for such emergencies and it is all off. In the second act, Paul, her heroic sweetheart, is condemned to death, but she gets there just in time to save his life with the flag, and Paul kicks the general with impunity and his right foot. In the third act, the general has them captured and brought before the king for treason, but the U. S. Army (three marines) get there in time to provide the flag and Paul steals the king's crown.

A new nights later Pat is playing poker when he should be home. He gets the idea that the flag will protect him, and to be on the safe side he takes both the American and Irish flags. It looks like a defeat for Nora, but she offers Pat a drink. He has to lay down the flags to get it, but she gets him and sits him on the hot cook stove until he repents.

(Continued on page 1748)

SEE THEM in Booth 352, at the N.Y. EXPOSITION

3 sheet frame, 4 inch brass used, Compo-board back, 3 inch leg,
$12.50

NO. 7

3 sheet frame, 3 inch brass used, Compo-board back, 3 inch leg,
$10.00

COMPARE OUR DESIGNS, MATERIAL AND WORKMANSHIP

with any other manufacturer of

BRASS LOBBY FRAMES

We are after your orders on the merits of our goods.

Ask some of the largest users, dealers or Film Companies, what they think of our goods.

Write us for our catalogue and prices. A fine Lobby Display will increase your receipts.

The Theatre Specialty Mfg. Co.
1232 East 3rd St. Cleveland, Ohio

"FOTOPLAYER"
the instrument that supplies
MUSIC FOR THE PICTURES
The American Photo Player Sales Co.
Berkeley, California.

BEST OF CAMERA MEN
Furnished for all Occasions
CHICAGO FEATURE FILM CO.
4108-22 Lincoln Ave., Chicago, Ill.

PRINTING AND DEVELOPING FILM TITLES
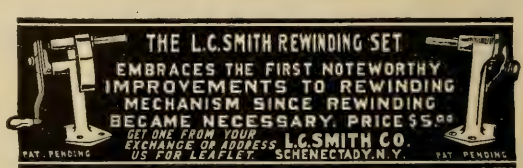
Give us a trial. All work guaranteed.
Prompt service. Prices right.
If there is any event that you want photographed, we can furnish expert camera men.
STANDARD MOTION PICTURE CO.
Telephone, Central 2853, 5 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago

PIPE ORGANS FOR THEATRES
Prompt delivery.
Write for Illustrated Catalogue or telephone Harrison 1478.
T. D. HUME & CO.
Suite 513-522, 806 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

WE EQUIP YOUR THEATRE COMPLETE
Edison, Powers, Simplex, Motiograph and Edengraph Machines and Genuine Parts.
Photo and Poster Frames, Indirect Lighting Fixtures, Curtains and Screens, Rebuilt Machines, etc. Cash or Time. Send for catalog today.
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY COMPANY
160A No. Fifth Ave. - - - Chicago



THE L.C.SMITH REWINDING SET
EMBRACES THE FIRST NOTEWORTHY IMPROVEMENTS TO REWINDING MECHANISM SINCE REWINDING BECAME NECESSARY. PRICE $5.00
GET ONE FROM YOUR EXCHANGE OR ADDRESS US FOR LEAFLET.
L.C.SMITH CO.
SCHENECTADY, N.Y.
PAT. PENDING
PAT. PENDING

—Attention, Feature Men—

The Greatest and Best Wild West Motion Picture in Four Reels Ever Produced

"THE ROUND UP"

Featuring Sioux City Frontier Days and Indian Congress
200 Big Scenes Hundreds of Contestants
Four Reels of Thrilling Action and Superb Photography

The Most Diversified Film from Start to Finish Ever Produced

Featuring champion cowboys and cowgirls from every western state in the Union. Sioux and Winnebago Indians competing for prizes. Scouts, Frontiersmen, Buffalo Hunters. Famous veteran buckers.

SPECIAL LITHOGRAPHS—NO STOCK STUFF. In five styles in one, three and six sheets. Photos, banners, heralds and flyers, constituting the GREATEST LOBBY DISPLAY EVER PUT OUT ON A WESTERN FEATURE.

Write for descriptive matter and price of your state

SUPERIOR FILM MFG. CO.
DES MOINES, IOWA

INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES

UNIVERSAL

ECLAIR.

DEAD MEN'S TALES (Three Parts—June 24).—Tom Hopkins, crossing the plains with his wife and child, comes upon Blair and his family who have been attacked by Indians. He takes Blair, a shiftless and crooked miner, together with his family and sets them up next door to him in town. Hopkins has been left a map of a gold mine by his deceased uncle. With Blair he starts out to search for it. Finding it Tom stakes his claim, but that night when the two have lain down, Blair empties the other's canteen and driving his horse off makes away with the map and the gold they have picked up. From lack of water and exposure the unfortunate Tom dies. He leaves a note written in his own blood stating that his partner has left him to die after stealing his claim.

Meanwhile Blair stakes out the claim in his own name and returning to town, brings a force of miners to work the stolen property, after telling Tom's wife that he has died from fever. A cowboy comes across Hopkin's body and finding the message rides to town with it. A posse is organized. Blair's wife, ill-treated as she is, goes to warn him. In order to gain her fresh horse, he pushes her off a cliff and escapes. The days pass and the broken hearted wife of Tom, who has kept Blair's little girl with her starts a boarding house.

Eighteen years after a strike occurs in the mines and Blair is sent for. He stops at the house of his dead partner's wife and is recognized. Mrs. Hopkin's son bribes a Mexican to avenge his father's death but Blair struggles free from his bonds and is escaping when he runs into a crowd of striking miners. They are about to shoot him when Hopkins enters upon the scene and the crooked mine owner tells them that young Tom is the rightful boss. Out of love for Blair's daughter, Hopkins' anger cools and Blair is saved from the violence of the mob where he stands with lowered eyes watching his daughter in the embrace of his dead partner's son.

PRINCE WILLY (June 26).—Willy's tutor is unnecessarily sever in giving the little fellow his lesson. When the old professor falls asleep, Willy goes softly out of the room and to the dusty country road.

Meeting a small boy like himself, he asks him how he would like to become a prince. Before his startled companion can answer he changes clothes with him and while the little country boy dons his fine clothes, Willy walks on arrayed as a country boy. Prince Willy walks on for a time until becoming tired. He falls asleep and is found by an old, thrifty, but honest farmer, named Adlebert. The old fellow takes Willy home to his large family where he is seated at the table with Adlebert's children. By this time the tutor of the little Prince has awakened and finding the little fellow gone, starts wildly on in search of him. A reward of 1000 pounds is offered to the man who brings back the Prince. Willy happy and contented among his simple surroundings hears of this and although reluctant to leave the farmer's house, brings him back to the castle where Adlebert receives the money and Willy saves the careless professor from being punished for his neglect.

GOLD SEAL

LUCILLE LOVE, THE GIRL OF MYSTERY (Series No. 8—Two Parts—June 2).—No sooner than Lucille hides herself among the boxes on the wharf than she hears Loubeque's voice. An officer of the Chinese police is questioning him concerning the whereabouts of Lucille. Her overt act in protecting her life against a Chinese woman has been construed as murder, and she is confronted by this new danger. Even while Loubeque is talking with the policeman, he looks around the corner of the boxes and sees Lucille. He is impressed by her forlorn situation, and out of sheer pity for her he throws the policeman off the trail.

Loubeque then goes aboard the ship, and it sets sail—not, however, before Lucille has stolen into the hold and found a hiding place. Again Loubeque is touched by pity for the girl, and he sends a sailor into the hold that he may discover Lucille, and that she may not want for the necessities of existence. The girl is discovered and taken before the captain. The good old mariner takes on an air of mock seriousness, and ordains that he punishment shall consist in serving as his cabin boy during the voyage.

The documents of which Lucille is in search are again in the possession of Loubeque. One day, while he is in his stateroom, he catches sight of Lucille spying on him through a porthole. Surmising her purpose, Loubeque takes the documents from his pocket, places them in a scarf and hides the scarf under a cushion. The face of Lucille disappears from the porthole. The man now removes the genuine documents from the scarf and places a package of blank papers in their place.

As a result, when Lucille steals in to his state room, she falls into Loubeque's trap. She steals the blank papers, and when she discovers Loubeque's trick, her anger is only equalled by her chagrin. But two can play at the same game. The girl holds the papers signed by Loubeque, which mark him as a smuggler of contraband arms into China. The international spy discovers the girl in his state room. He proposes to her that she give him the papers in exchange for the documents which will save her father's honor. She agrees and each hands the other a package of blank papers. It is still a neck to neck race of wits and cunning until Loubeque makes veiled threats as to what will transpire when the ship arrives at San Francisco. Lucille appeals to the captain for aid and describes her adventures to him. The captain calls Loubeque for an explanation of his conduct, and Loubeque tells the captain that she is insane. Her strange story partly corroborates this, and the captain is not decided in the mater when the boat arrives at San Francisco. Despite the captain's precautions, Loubeque's agents press around Lucille at the gangplank and abduct her. She is whisked away in a taxicab in a city where she has no friends.

VICTOR.

ENMESHED BY FATE (Two Parts—June 12).—Attorney Kelp, a great lover of curios, receives from a friend a souvenir of the East, a peculiarly shaped dagger with Kelp's name engraver on it. Kelp shows this to his sweetheart, Irene Marshall. Later, Kelp quarrels with Irene on account of the attentions Kelp has been showing to the Crawfords, a destitute family, the head of which, Jim Crawford, is "doing time".

Kelp fails to call on Irene. She, in turn, accepts the suit of the District Attorney, Danvers, a cold-blooded fellow, piqued because of Kelp's indifference. Soon after she marries Danvers, only to repent almost immediately.

Jim Crawford is released from prison, and attempts a robbery, unwittingly picking out Kelp's house. Frightened before the job is completed, Jim carries away the dagger as his only reward. His next robbery is on Danvers' home. As it happens, Irene has returned, just prior to Jim's entrance, determined to leave Danvers, who treats her brutally. She telephones Kelp and he comes to her. Jim is hiding behind the portieres. Danvers enters to find his wife with her old sweetheart. A fight results. Jim, looking on, recognizes Danvers as the man who "sent him up." As Danvers is about to strike Kelp down, Jim rushes out and stabs Danvers to death. Irene has left the room. When she returns she finds Kelp standing over the body of her husband holding the dagger.

All the old love rises up in Irene. She persuades Kelp to go. When her father enters and observes her with the dagger he believes her guilty. When the police arrive, the father tries to shield the daughter, and she, in turn, tries to shield Kelp. However, one of the detectives, finding a fountain pen of Kelp's, arrests him. Irene, bearing of this, goes to the station and declares that she is the guilty party.

Jim, in the meantime, has been arrested as a material witness. At the station he is confronted by his wife and family. His wife tells him of Kelp's kindness to her and urges Jim to be a man for once and confess if he is guilty. Jim does. Kelp and Irene are freed and find happiness together.

THE SLAVEY'S ROMANCE (June 26).—Paul Mason has perfected an invention, but lacks the money to patent it. Pressed for cash, he is threatened with being thrown out of his boarding house. Anna, the little slavey, who secretly loves him, takes some of her own savings and gives it to the landlady saying that Paul had paid it on account.

Paul visits the Globe Manufacturing company only to have the manager laugh at his invention. However, the manager realizes its value and when Paul goes, he has one of his clerks follow him. In the boarding house the clerk takes a room where he can spy on Paul. It is not until several days later that Paul discovers that Anna, the little slavey, loves him. The clerk tries to steal the plans, but Anna interferes.

Later, the clerk is advised to try and buy the plans. Paul is about to accept the offer when Anna receives a legacy from a distant relative in the old country and comes to his rescue. She offers to go into partnership. The invention is patented and the manager of the Globe Mfg. Company recognizing the advantages to his firm, offers Paul a remunerative position and a royalty on his device. Paul accepts, after making Anna a partner for life.

POWERS

THE LAST OF THEIR RACE (Two Parts—May 29).—The Cameron and McBride families have been at peace with each other for some time, though for years there was a feud between the respective families. Margot Cameron and Jack McBride are sweethearts. Bad Joe Cameron, a cousing of Margot's, is also in love with her and resents the girl's preference for Jack. In order to break up the match, Joe conceives the idea of telling the revenue officers where the Cameron still is, and then blaming Jack McBride as the informer. In this way he hopes to re-establish the feud between the Cameron and McBride families.

Joe succeeds in his scheme. The Camerons are furious over the raid on their still, and go out to get Jack McBride. An estrangement is brought about between Jack and Margot, and when the latter's mother is killed in one of the battles, she goes out with a gun against Jack, believing he did it. Following these developments there is a series of terrific three-cornered battles between the Camerons, the McBrides and the revenue men. Jack refusing to fight the girl, turns her loose. When the smoke of battle subsides, when the rain of bullets ceases, there are only two left of the Cameron and McBride families—Margot and Jack. And these two, standing together amid the carnage and bloodshed, realize the futility, the crime of it all. But having been spared, they join hands, determined to make over their lives and try to find happiness somewhere, somehow.

HEARTSTRINGS (June 5).—Gray-haired, checker-playing Amos Purdy is so far removed in both years and spirit form the ways of his youth that he cannot sympathize with his daughter, Ann, who longs for the gay life of youth. He forbids her to attend a dance. Determined to enjoy herself whether or no, Ann waits until her father is in bed and slips out to the dance. On the way home she loses her purse. It is found by a policeman and returned to her father the next day. In his anger he tells the girl to get out of his house.

Five years pass. Ann is a widow with a little daughter. She loses her position in a factory and, unable to support it, takes the child to an orpran asylum. Dr. Green, her father's old friend, meets her and at last arranges a reconciliation between the father and daughter.

JOKER

THEIR FIRST ANNIVERSAY (June 3).—On their first anniversary, Mrs. Younghub by plans to surprise her spouse with a party. She also tells him not to forget to order coal. She entertains the ladies of the party in the afternoon, and their husbands are to join them for dinner. Mr. Younghubby, with an anniversary present, comes home early, prepared to sneak in through the cellar and surprise his frau. He gets locked in the cellar, and the coal is dumped in on top of him. His wife and her friends send for the police to take the "burglar."

After a wild experience, in which Hubby is arrested, the coal heavers get away with the jewelry, and trouble reigns generally. Matters are straightened out to the satisfaction of all, save perhaps the coal heavers, who spend the night in a rat-infested jail.

LOVE AND ELECTRICITY (June 27).—Bob comes to wire the Schultz house for a tango party. Between love matches with the fair Louise he manages to get a few lines of wire attached to the chandelier, having first carefully thrown off the switch. Papa interrupts a kiss and throws Bob out, saying he will finish the wiring himself. Meanwhile an agent is showing the cook the value of an electric iron. It doesn't get hot and he discovers the open switch. Closing it, the maid leaves the iron on top of Louise's dress while she flirts with the agent. The butler objects. Papa is having his troubles. Working with the wires when the current was turned on, he finds he cannot let go. He is rescued by Bob after promising his blessing.

A QUIET DAY AT MURPHY'S (June 30).—The day begins at 5 A. M. The patients at Murphy's (be it here known that Murphy is a doctor who cures men of the result of the sins, not of the sins themselves), among them Willie and Johnnie, are aroused for their exercise and cold showers. At 8 A. M. Beatrice and her father arrive. Dad has the bottle habit. The ardent daughter of barley never worked such havoc among Murphy's patients as did the beautious Beatrice in the hearts of Willie and Johnnie. On mattresses and horizontal bar, with dumb bells and clubs, they perform marvelous feats for her entertainment. Johnnie is ousted from favor by Willie. Cleverly he hides a banana peel at the critical spot, and the unsuspecting Willie lands on it to his ultimate discomfiture. However, Beatrice consoles the wounded man and Johnnie decides on severe methods. He fetches gunpowder and sprinkles it about.

Suddenly fate, in a gray suit, gray silk socks, necktie and hat to match raps for attention. Beatrice springs to his arms with two words, "My husband." The final sub-title is "Farewell, cruel world," spoken by Willie and Johnnie. Into each disconsolate mouth goes a handful of powder—a match is struck.

REX.

LOST BY A HAIR (June 28).—The name of the trouble is Max Wilson, a celebrated tenor. When he arrives at a seaside hotel every other brand of hero sinks into insignificance. However, the boys do not wish to play second fiddle. They refuse to do it. One rejected suitor goes so far as to spy upon the tenor. He sees him powder his nose and—but to tell would spoil the story.

Howbeit he carries the news to other rejected suitors. Between them they plan an intrigue. While the singer is entertaining the girls on the front porch the suitors procure a fish pole and station themselves upon the upper balcony. At an opportune moment a rejected suitor lowers a fishline and allows the hook to catch in the great singer's hair. He then pulls. No, the tenor is not pulled up by the hair! The hair is pulled up by itself. Confusion, chagrin, embarrassment—these are the emotions of the victim and in less time than it takes to tell, the lady-killer is enroute to the city while the other brands of heroes stand at a premium.

NESTOR

THE DEN OF THIEVES (June 24).—Lillian is an unfortunate woman. After leaving her baby at the door of a hospital she meets David, the author of

HARRY LAUDER
A REEL OF REAL COMEDY

TRADE MARK TRADE MARK

This Is What HE Wrote:

Dressing Room
Casino Theatre
New York
June 10 - 1914

I hereby certify that this is the original golfing film produced at Wembley Park England
by Neil Kenyon and myself and is the only film in which I have ever appeared.

Harry Lauder

State Rights now offered for sale. Prints on Eastman Stock. Complete line of paper and advertising now in work. We are booking it now in our territory

UNITED STATES and CANADIAN RIGHTS Owned by

Celebrated Players Film Company

LEADERS IN FILMDOM'S PROGRESS

64 W. Randolph St. Schiller Bldg. Chicago, Ill.

her misfortune. It is a case of starvation or the "easiest way." She chooses the "easiest way."

After eighteen years she again shows up, a social outcast and a tool for David' black profession. David has his eye upon a mere slip of a girl who works in a department store. He attempts to lure her to his resort, but fails. He then turns the case over to Lillian. Dorothy needs money for clothes. Lillian offers her the position and she accompanies the older woman to David's resort. Wallace, Dorothy's sweetheart, waits for her outside the house. Once inside the resort Dorothy is beautifully gowned. While changing her dress she takes a locket from her neck and lays it aside.

Lillian finds it. Dorothy is her daughter. All the mother instinct and realization of her actions awaken in Lillian. She saves her daughter from David and her own fate and turns her over to Wallace. David is sent to prison. Lillian flies, despised and shunned, and Dorothy never knows that the woman who delivered her to evil and then saved her was her mother.

SOPHIE OF THE FILMS (Series No. 4—June 26).—Thus far Sophie has failed completely as a motion picture actress. She has spoiled every scene, but through the general manager she is to be given one more chance. She is sent to the border to act in Mexican war pictures. The director has no appetite for real war so he hires a band of cowboys to impersonate first the border guards and then the Mexican soldiery. They then begin to enact a series of blood-curdling melo-drama of fearful massacre and carnage.

Mexican girls mistake what is going on for a real American invasion and General Wienerwurst, the Mexican commander, is notified. Wienerwurst and his command make war upon the motion picture people and another beautiful feature is ruined. The actors and director barely escape with their lives. When they finally arrive at the studio, poor Sophie is fired. She returns to the old homestead. Her sorrow is lessend, however, when she is given her old job in a laundry. It is said that forever after she never grew weary of recalling the days when she was a leading lady.

CRYSTAL.

IN WRONG (June 23).—Charlie advertises for a wife. Madeline Blue, widow, writes Charlie to the effect that she will meet him at the park gate and that he is to wear a white rose while she will do the same. The queen of the anarchists also writes to a prospective member who is anxious to meet her, that she will meet him at the park gate and that he is to wear a white rose.

The queen and Charlie are the first to arrive at the meeting place. Charlie is dragged off to the anarchist's rendezvous by the queen under the impression that he is an applicant for membership. The other man meets Madeline and accompanies her home where she and her uncle are arrested under suspicion of being bomb throwers. The stranger turned out to be a detective. After many difficulties the girl and her uncle are released. Meanwhile Charlie has had his trouble. He finally makes his escape after having been ordered to blow up the judge, and succeeds in meeting Madeline and developing quite a romance.

IMP.

THE MAN WHO LOST, BUT WON (Two Parts—June 8).—John Rankin is engaged to marry Margaret, a member of his flock. The wedding das is only two days off. Phillips Denver is also in love with Margaret, but has little hopes of preventing the marriage.

About this time Rose Mason turns up in the little town and calls on John. Rose was a sweetheart of John's when he was a divinity student—but she left him to join a tL atrical company. On confronting John, Rose reminds him of their former love, and asks if he is still ready to marry her. John informs her of his prospective marriage to Margaret. Rose is angry and upbraids him. Phillips Denver discovers them quarreling and sees an opportunity of breaking of the match between John and Margaret.

Phillips secures an opportunity of meeting Rose: he manages to inflame her jealousy and she agrees to his plan. The next evening she calls on John again and manages to be seen in a compromising position when Margaret enters. A scene results wherein Margaret breaks off her engagement.

When Margaret has gone Rose observes just how badly John is hurt. She is touched and promises him that she will bring matters to an adjustment. She visits Margaret and tries to explain; but when the furious girl tells her that any explanation that a woman of her kind could make would be useless, Rose determines to win John in spite of all.

Later Margaret accepts Phillips and John finds himself, as the minister, forced to marry them. In desperation he turns to Rose, whose love has returned, and marries her.

Contrary to John's expectations—he believed Rose a flippant woman with little good in her—Rose turns out to be a splendid wife, doing good wherever she can. Margaret, on the other hand, shows herself to be a shrew, while her husband, poor man, cannot call his soul his own.

PAPA'S DARLING (June 22).—The daughter of a Wall street broker asks her father to give her a trip to Europe. She is refused. She suggests to her father that he sign an agreement with her to the effect that if she can make enough money in three months to pay for the trip he will permit her to take it. He takes it as a joke, but signs.

Ethel then endeavors to get a position, but finds that chances for work are all for the men. Finally, when almost in tears and entirely discouraged she decides to don man's attire. She deceives even her own father as to her sex and obtains work in his office where she falls in love with Billy, her father's general manager.

She reads a telegram giving a "sure thing" tip on the market and gets Billy to invest her money. She wins. She goes into the private office to put the money in her stocking and is surprised by a mouse. Her sex, getting the better of her she screams, throwing her wig at the mouse. Billy enters, and is surprised and happy to find that she is a girl, having been unable to account for "his" peculiar attractiveness. Father gives her the trip to Europe as a honeymoon.

THE SKULL (Two Parts—June 25).—When Elliot, a master crook, fires his secretary, Bruce Morgan applies for and secures the position. Elliot has a sister, Sybil, who is in love with Eden Villiere, a young author. Matt Owen, a tool, of Elliot's, is instructed to rob a bank. While doing the "job" he is interrupted and pursued by a policeman. He takes refuge in Elliot's home. While the man is still in hiding Sybil observes a figure in the garden watching the house. Elliot investigates and finds that it is Morgan. On being questioned about his presence there. Moragn simply says that he was enjoying an evening walk. Elliot is satisfied.

However, Morgan continues his watch, and when Matt leaves the house, Morgan follows him. Matt finds that he is being followed and confronts Morgan. They fight, Morgan is tricked and Matt gets away. Later, back in Elliot's office, Matt recognizes Morgan and informs his leader. Elliot asks Morgan what he knows and receives the reply, "everything." Morgan refuses to name his "price." Elliot, though, believes that Morgan will become his tool also. Matt on the other hand, does not trust him and persuades Elliot to send him to kill Morgan. He attempts it while Morgan sleeps. Another fight follows between them—then the room is pitched into darkness. Morgan goes to Elliot with the information that he has killed the man sent to kill him and that it is now up to Elliot. Meantime Sybil and Eden find a skull in the garden. Eden takes it home, in the hope that a study of it will give him inspiration for a story. As he watches the skull it disolves into a human head and tells him the story of how he was murdered. Eden writes the tale down.

Elliot comes upon the finished script, reads it and finds it a history of his own crime. He instructs Eden not to publish the story. Eden refuses to obey. Elliot threatens—there is another terrific fight. Sybil tries to enter the room, but finds herself locked out. Morgan watches the fight through a hole in the floor above. This proves one of the unique photographic effects of the picture. Before the fight is finished, Morgan brings the police. The door is broken down and Elliot, the "Master Crook" is arrested. As he is led off he asks Morgan who he is. Morgan replies, "Sybil's brother and the son of the man you murdered eighteen years ago." Later, it develops that Morgan had Matt in hiding—he had not killed him.

FRONTIER.

THE GIRL NEXT DOOR (June 4).—Little Horace Denmore is in love with Alice Adair, "The Girl Next Door." When the Adair family move to a ranch in another county, Horace gives Alice a ring to remember him by.

Twelve years pass. The children have never met since. Mrs. Adair is dead and Alice, now a young woman, is burdened with the care of a dissipating father who has fallen in with evil companions. On an evening when she discovers her father, in connection with another, is a horse-thief, the sheriff calls at the house. There is a terrific fight in which the sheriff is killed. Against her will, the girl is forced to act as driver to a wagon in which the two men, hiding, are attempting to escape.

Horace, in the meantime, has been called to the city. On the way he camps for the night at "The Broken Bough." Late in the night he is aroused by the screams of a woman; on searching around he finds a young girl half crazed in the sand. Fearing it is the work of Indians, Horace persuades the girl to come with him to his camp. But when he gets back he finds all his own belongings gone. They search out an old hut. While she is breaking wood, Horace discovers the ring upon Alice's finger. There is happy recognition.

Before the morning comes, however, one of the horse-thieves finds his way to the house. He has killed Alice's father in a quarrel over spoils. Horace captures him and the young couple take him to town. A few days later, a prairie schooner drives into the Denmore grounds and Horace presents the girl to his parents who, after hearing the story, receive her with open arms as the little "Girl Next Door."

UNIVERSAL IKE.

UNIVERSAL IKE, JR., AND HIS MOTHER-IN-LAW (May 26).—The glad tidings that his mother-in-law had arrived in town reached Ike just as he was about to swallow a glass of beer. His agitation was extreme.

His home life was bad enough before but after the mother arrived it was an inferno. To get a moment's respite from persecution. Ike doped the coffee with a sleeping potion. When his wife and by using a compact, quiet, efficient blower designed especially for forcing air through pipes.

Ventilate the Operator's Booth

Westinghouse Sirocco Blower

Easily installed. Requires practically no attention. Costs about 1½ cents an hour to operate. Pays big dividends in comfort.

Let us know the size of your booth and will send full description and price of blower to use.

Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co.
East Pittsburgh, Pa.

WHEN YOUR PICTURE MACHINE NEEDS REPAIRING
WHY DON'T YOU SEND IT TO US?
We have the best equipped machine shop in the country and can repair any make of machine. Write us and get acquainted.
WE BUY SECOND-HAND MACHINES.
GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO.
76 N. State St. (bet Lake and Randolph) Chicago, Ill.

We Buy and Sell Second Hand Films and Moving Picture Machines
WESTERN FILM BROKERS
37 So. Wabash Ave. :: :: Chicago, Ill.

GET SUPPLIES FROM
SAVE HALF
$ FIFTY-FIFTY % COMPANY $
SAVE HALF
86 WALTON STREET ATLANTA, GA.

PACK YOUR THEATER!
Simple plan; brings CAPACITY business every time. Good for small house, large house, small town, large town, anywhere, any time, any admission price. Especially good for moving picture theaters, also vaudeville. Can be used one to three times a week indefinitely. Dead easy; no ability required. No expense. No premiums. No souvenirs. No goods to buy. Patrons delighted. Results guaranteed. Be first in your town. Write QUICK. C. GRAVER, Manager, Colonial Amusement Co., Jackson, Mich.

MOVING PICTURE MEN
NOTICE
FOR SALE—Motion picture machines, will allow you liberally for your old machine in trade. Write me for new catalogue of the Edison Model "D", the perfect projector. Lecturers' outfits complete with light, $40.00. Condensers, Projecting lenses, Bausch & Lomb. The Perfecto Calcium Light $25.00 complete. Motion Picture Cameras complete $39.00. Make your own movies. Exhibitors' supplies. Frank E. Russell, Batavia, N. Y.

312 Sold In Three Weeks

The VICTOR

ANIMATOGRAPH

The First Professional Portable Motion Picture Machine

USES STANDARD ONE THOUSAND FOOT REELS

Illumination

The Animatograph is the first and only moving picture machine successfully projecting a large, brilliant image through attachment to an ordinary electric lamp socket.

Two Power Lamp

The rheostat allows connection to the lamp socket for ordinary throws and connection to main line when high power is needed.

Motion and Stationary Pictures

The Animatograph is completely equipped for projection of both motion pictures and stationary views.

Simplicity

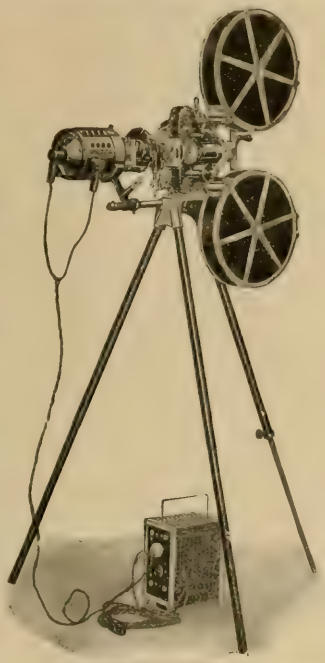
There are no complications requiring previous experience. Anyone is an expert operator after ten minutes' practice.

Steadiness

The new Victor mechanism employs the principle of the gyroscope, insuring absolute rigidity and steadiness of image.

Outfit is Complete

Lenses for both motion and stationary pictures, adjustable stand, rheostat, wiring, extra reel, carrying cases.



PATENTS PENDING.

Permanent Alignment

The Victor permanently adjusted lamp aligned with the optical axis for both the moving picture and stereopticon lenses. Field constantly clear to the corners. An absolutely new and exclusive feature.

Portability

The Animatograph is the only efficient, portable standard film projector. The entire outfit in case weighs less than 35 pounds.

Always Ready

Machine is put to work in five minutes anywhere—setting up, threading the film, placing and focusing the image. The adjustable stand is a part of the instrument.

Safety

Automatic fire shutter and fire proof magazines conform to fire prevention requirements.

Reliability

The Animatograph is built for hard and continuous service. The construction is of steel and aluminum; the workmanship is perfect.

The Victor optical system is the only scientifically correct one used on cinematograph apparatus. The proper conservation of the light results in a ten to fourteen foot motion picture image from a lamp consuming but a small amount of current, allowing direct attachment to the lamp socket. This is an exclusive Victor feature.

The Price ANIMATOGRAPH outfit complete, as described, $125.00

The equipment includes the Victor Electric Arc, 100 to 125 volt D. C. or A. C. rheostat, motion picture and stereopticon lenses, extra reel, rewind, and carrying cases.

Prices of equipments for special requirements on request.

Manufactured and Sold by

VICTOR ANIMATOGRAPH COMPANY

DAVENPORT, IOWA, U. S. A.

1472 Broadway, New York 38 So. Dearborn St., Chicago

mother-in-law were deep in the land of dreams, he dragged the latter to a haystack and covered her with hay. He was spied upon by some of the villagers and the report spread that he had murdered his mother-in-law. The populace rose in a body and set out to lynch the henpecked husband. Murder would actually have been committed had not the effect of the drug worn off and the wife and her mother awakened. He, for his innocent transgression, was made to take a triple dose of the sleeping potion.

UNIVERSAL

ANIMATED WEEKLY, No. 118 (June 10).—Empress of Ireland Disaster.—Rammed in fog by Collier Storstad and in ten minutes the death toll was 1,024 lives. Subtitle: Arrival of royal party, Duke and Duchess of Connaught and Princess Patricia. A survivor overcome by solemn ceremony. Capt. Kendall, of the Empress of Ireland, being assisted from Cathedral. The morgue, which holds unidentified dead. The impressive public funeral. The survivors follow Capt. Kendall's carriage. His Majesty's ship Essex. The Storstad and her wrecked bow. Capt. Anderson, of the Storstad. (Man in shirt sleeves).

New Non-Sinkable Lifeboat.—United States Government approves of new self-bailable and fireproof lifeboat.

Consul Silliman, of Saltillo.—Lately a prisoner of Federal General Maas, who threatened to execute him. Vera Cruz, Mexico. (Silliman in center).

First Step in Aviation.—Juvenile tournament of model aeroplanes in Brooklyn, N. Y.

Derby Day in London.—The only American entry Durbar II. romps home with ease, defeating the King's entry in the greatest classic ever held.

Prominent Men in Bronze.—Statue of Thomas Jefferson, third president of United States, presented to Columbia University by the estate of Joseph Pulitzer, the noted journalist. The Hammer Man presented by class of 1883—New York City.

Launching of Shamrock IV.—Sir Thomas Lipton, the tireless challenger, expects to win the American cup this time.

Speed Demons Defy Death.—Spectators are thrilled as noted motorcyclists compete for International Cup. Hawthorne Race Track, Chicago, Ill.

The English Polo Team.—John Bull's crack players who represented England in the International match.

President Attends Unveiling.—Monument to the memory of Confederate heroes is unveiled in the Arlington National Cemetery—Washington, D. C.

Arrival of Aquitania.—The great sea monster arrives on her maiden trip—New York City.

Cartoons by Hy. Mayer.—World famous cartoonist of Puck.

MUTUAL FILM CORP.

THANHOUSER.

FROM THE SHADOWS (Two Parts—June 2).—The star of a traveling theatrical company is an actor well known on the "road" in classic roles, but has never really made his mark on the stage. Most of his success is due to his wife, who plays with him in the company. Their child, a little girl, accompanies them on their tour. The wife meets a wealthy man, and deserts her husband and little daughter. The husband, half crazed by the shock, takes care of his child, and as the years go by devotes himself to teaching her the art of acting. The child attains womanhood. She and her father are in dire straits. Finally she applies to a theatrical manager for an engagement, who discovers her great talent. He turns out to be her father's former call-boy, and a mutual attraction is evident. In the meantime the old actor finds some relics of his past on the stage which recall the old days, and in the darkened room where he sits he fancies he sees himself playing the famous roles of years gone by. Finally he falls back into his chair, and when the daughter and the theatrical manager arrive to tell him of the splendid future in store for the girl, they find the old actor dead.

THE GIRL ACROSS THE HALL (June 14).—Jim Kelly, a stalwart young workingman, lives alone in a tenement with his little sister, Emma. He drinks hard, is discharged for neglecting his work, and illtreats his little charge. Emma finally finds a protector in Ruth Allen, a little seamstress, who lives across the hall, who fearlessly faces the brutal brother, and Kelly is torn by conflicting motives of dislike and admiration. He is wounded in a brawl, and the injury is dressed by Ruth. It marks a change in Kelly's life, and as soon as he recovers he secures a position, leaves his old companions and starts in to make good. The little seamstress notices the change and her feeling towards him gradually changes. Two of Kelly's old companions, however, unwittingly bring the two together. They break into the girl's flat one evening. Kelly hears her cry for help, runs to her assistance, and after a stirring fight beats his two adversaries and wins the heart and hand of "the girl across the hall."

REMORSE—(Two Parts—June 16)—Jack, a man of thirty-five years, emaciated, with gray hair at his temples, dressed in Salvation Army uniform, is telling the story of his life to a crowd of derelicts. Here is his story:

Jack, aged twenty, is the pride of his father and mother. One day he leaves the house with his father after saying farewell to his mother, who is suffering from heart-trouble, and when they come to a cross-road they separate, Jack going one way and the father going to business down the opposite road. Jack comes to a saloon and meets four men; he chats with them and partakes of plenty of drinks. His father comes along as Jack exits from the saloon, slightly intoxicated, and the father rebukes his son; they turn homeward together. The father helps his son into the house and upstairs, keeping his condition from his mother.

We next find Jack in the gambling room of the same saloon with the other boys, drinking, playing cards. His father enters the saloon, writes a note, and hands it to the bartender. The bartender gives the note to Jack, which reads: "I don't wish to humiliate you, so leave at once. I am waiting for you." Jack comes out, and refuses to go home with his father, who forces him into the wagon and drives off. Jack's mother meets them at the door, realizes the situation, and is very much grieved. A few days later, Jack is on the porch of May's house, making love to her. May's father comes along, and interrupts them. He decides to take May away. Jack swears to May that he will never drink again, and persuades May to elope with him, which she does willingly and foolishly. May's father, much brokenhearted when he finds letter which May has left.

A year later, May is in a log-cabin with her little baby, and preparing supper for Jack, who is at the gambling house, as usual. He finally comes home, abuses her and beats her, and without eating enters into his bedroom. May decides that she can stand his abuse and intoxication no longer, and writes a letter to Jack which says: "I can no longer allow you to drag me down. You prefer your whiskey, so be it. I am going to my father, who is lonely for my love and presence, which mean nothing to you." She puts on her hat, and starts to pack grip to leave. That night Jack returns to the house, finds the letter, but is too intoxicated to care. He falls asleep with his head on the table as he reads it. A few months later, Jack returns home to live with his parents. Jack goes up to his room, and drinks more whiskey. A servant comes into his room, and tries to arouse Jack to go for a doctor for his old mother, who is dying. Jack is too drunk to get up, and the servant runs out of the house, and meets Jack's father on the way. They get the doctor, but he is too late; the mother already has passed away. The father goes upstairs to his son's room, and finds Jack asleep on the bed with a whiskey bottle empty on the floor. Later, the father is stabbed to death while struggling with two men, who try to rob the house. Jack is again too drunk to help his father when in trouble. Jack realizes his father's death, and goes out to the street to hide his grief. He meets May's father with his little four-year-old son, and follows them, and finds out that May is married to an upright man. Jack is grief-stricken and wants to shoot himself, when he hears the music of the Salvation Army, which he joins, and hopes his story will help other young men.

PRINCESS.

THE TOY SHOP (June 12).—Carl Hendricks was only too happy to be able to help Ruth Forbes. He thought of her then only as a little factory girl out of a job, and it wasn't that he needed an assistant in the shop so much as that in giving Ruth employment he made the poor child inexpressibly happy.

Carl Hendricks kept a small toy shop, for many years owned by his father before him. He was the most popular man in town with the children—the keeper of the candy store not excepted. But he often had fits of terrible loneliness. He longed for a wife and children of his own. Then Ruth came, and the shop grew more homelike. The lonely times came scarcely at all, and he found himself loving the girl with all his heart.

Hendricks kept his love a secret and worked hard. When he had put by enough money for a modest home, he felt he would have a right to speak to her. But, with the longed-for day at last in sight, news came that Ruth had been named in the will of a rich uncle, who suddenly had died, as heiress to his fortune. Her uncle's lawyer came for her and she went away leaving Hendricks desolate.

Ruth was entranced by the first glamor of society life. But as the novelty wore off, she found herself thinking constantly of Hendricks. She was homesick for the toy shop. One day she went back. But the curtains were drawn and the door locked. One of the children whom Hendricks had befriended led her to a hospital where he lay very ill.

She came the next day, and the next day. Understanding ripened between the lovers. And Hendricks broke the hospital records with his phenomenal recovery.

AMERICAN

THE PAINTED LADY'S CHILD (Two parts—June 22).—Henry Staples, Sr., multi-millionaire, hard and cold, is wrapped up in his only son and his millions. He discovers through detectives that his son is infatuated with a woman. He surprises his son with the information and compels him to break with the woman or lose his inheritance. The son gives up the woman. It breaks the woman's heart and almost unbalances her mind. In this state the woman takes her child and goes to the man's house. He turns her out into the hallway and upon opening the door discovers the child under a dome of light. Momentarily softened he offers the woman money, but she is so stung and agitated that she spurns his money.

"NEWMAN"
Brass Frames and Rails

"A theatre without a 'front' is like a suit of clothes without buttons," says W. H. Rudolph, of the Majestic Theatre, Dayton, O.—"both are an absolute necessity. Your 'fronts' are far superior to any I have ever seen, and in my lobby and every hotel in Dayton the Newman Brass Easels prominently carry the Majestic announcements."

When buying, be sure the name "Newman" appears on all frames.

Write for new 1914 Catalog.

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
NEW YORK 101 Fourth Ave. CINCINNATI 717 Sycamore St. CHICAGO 108 W. Lake St.
Established 1882

Booking Now for
Illinois and Wisconsin
"The Folks From Way Down East"
in 5 Reels
General Feature Film Co.
5 So. Wabash Ave. Chicago, Ill.

OUR SOUVENIRS WILL INCREASE YOUR ATTENDANCE
A postal will bring our illustrated catalogue.
TAKITO-OGAWA COMPANY,
323 W. Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

Good Power's No. 5 Machine, complete, $70.00
Edison, Exhibition Model, all complete, $90.00
200 reels of film, new lot, $4.00 to $5.00
ECONOMY FILM CO.,
105 FOURTH AVE. PITTSBURGH, PA.

BE UP TO DATE
Install
CORCORAN TANKS
Get No. 6 Price List
A. J. CORCORAN, Inc., 11½ JOHN STREET NEW YORK CITY

TRADE MARK

CHILDREN PHOTOPLAYS
FOR CHILDREN BY CHILDREN

TRADE MARK

Absolutely New!!!

Our Introductory Offering is

"KIDS OF THE MOVIES"

UNUSUAL AND UNIQUE

A ONE REEL COMEDY WITH A "WALLOP."

A FEATURE IN ITSELF

ENTIRELY ORIGINAL

THE FIRST PHOTO-PLAY WITHOUT A "SUB-TITLE" JUST IMAGINE!

IT LEAVES AN INDESCRIBABLE, LINGERING FEELING OF JOY AND CONTENT

Wire, Write or Call

CHILD PLAYERS CO. OF AMERICA, Inc.

45 WEST 34th STREET
NEW YORK

MARTIN P. KORN
President

TELEPHONES 6270 6271 GREELEY

Our aim is, and always will be, to produce wholesome, clean and good portrayals of child-life - the kind that charms and amuses one with sweet memories of childhood days. WATCH US!!

She drifts down the social grade and in her extremity becomes a painted lady and soon comes to an unhappy end. A lodging house neighbor, an old music master, Herr Von Pelzer, takes pity on the little orphaned girl and realizing the danger of her growing up in the lodging house atmosphere with the inclinations which she might inherit from her mother, takes her into a new environment into a country village.

At the age of sixteen the girl meets a gallant young artist on a visit to his native village, who extricates her from a bad bunch of young ruffians, and the girl forms an instant love for him. Herr Von Pelzer, knowing the young man to be a great favorite of the ladies, encounters his ward and the young artist at his gate. He tells the young man to be gone, and gently taking his ward into his room tells her of her mother and makes her pray to her God to deliver her from men like the young artist, David Wagner. In the course of time Von Pelzer, who has devoted his life to bringing up the painted lady's child, dies unknown to fame, but contented as he has helped the little girl to grow into pure womanhood and ready for life's battles.

Thrown upon her own resources she returns to the city and in looking for lodgings encounters David Wagner, the artist. They recognize happily, and David, the true gentleman, takes her to his old nurse and advises her to make the place her home. He leaves her here to attend a gay party given by his great friend, patron and admirer, Staples, Jr., who in the meantime has fallen heir to his father's millions. The next day, Elsie Von Pelzer, so-called, tells David the story of her mother and shows him her mother's photograph. David, the artist, out of kindness and sentiment, takes the photo and Elsie to his studio and begins the painting.

By an ironical situation, Staples, Jr., enters his friend's studio just as Elsie Von Pelzer is leaving. He asks David "Who is the dame?" a remark which Wagner, the artist, resents. While in the studio Staples, Jr., sees the photograph of his dead wife. He asks David who the woman is. The artist says, "Why she is the mother of the young girl who just left the studio." Staples then realizes that he passed his own daughter in a doorway.

He goes to his house terribly agitated and decides to own his disgrace and telephones David to bring Miss Von Pelzer to the Staples mansion. When they arrive the girl stands under the same lighted dome she stood under 15 years before and where her father last saw her. Staples, Jr., goes to a steel box and produces the marriage license and a mate to the photograph which the daughter possessed of her dead mother. He makes the confession and offers to take his daughter home. David Wagner, his dearest friend, denounces him and his own daughter disowns him as her father. The only favor she asks is the marriage license. They leave him and go back to the old nurse of David Wagner's where they express their love for one another. Broken and disowned by friend and daughter, Staples, Jr., becomes a craven creature and has only his money as a life interest.

BLUE KNOT, KING OF POLO (June 24).—Jimmy Karr, lover of horses, and held in his family as a ne'r-do-well, because of the constant deficiency of his budget, on account of the costliness of his string of ponies, attends an auction of horses. He makes a real find in an unpromising looking horse and making a part payment, hurries home to raise the balance of the purchase price. The family of Benefeils, including a charming daughter, Beatrice, a sweetheart of Jimmy's, is down from the city on a week-end to attend the polo game.

Jimmy's brother, Stephen, is a rival for the hand of Beatrice and finding small favor in her eyes, becomes unprincipled and unsportsmanlike. When Jimmy approaches his brother for a loan to buy Blue Knot, Stephen exposes his brother's lack of business ability to Beatrice's father and the father at once opposes the match between Jimmy and his daughter, Beatrice. Jimmy's family purposely slight Jimmy in entertaining their friends, a fact which only arouses sympathies of Beatrice.

Elmer Boeseke, a friend, loans Jimmy enough money to make up part of the difference and Beatrice, overhearing the conversation, buys an interest in Blue Knot. Beatrice knowing her father to be a lover of horses and "of horse sense," assures Jimmy that if Blue Knot turns out to be a winner, all oppositions on the father's part will be swept away and their marriage will have his entire consent. Fearing this, Stephen picks a row with Jimmy, and breaks his arm, thereby disabling him from being able to ride in the polo game. The friend, Elmer Boeseke, volunteers to ride in Jimmy's place. Stephen again foiled, puts a fine wire on Blue Knot's leg to cripple the horse, but his trick is discovered in time and Blue Knot proves such a wonderful mount that the polo fans who scouted the pony at the auction now offer fabulous sums for him.

Beatrice's father, astonished and delighted over the wonderful pony, congratulates Jimmy and makes him an offer of business to raise polo ponies. Stephen, Jimmy's brother, comes in for his proper punishment by being ostracized by decent society. Mr. Benefeils gives a banquet in Jimmy's honor and announces the engagement of his daughter to Jimmy Karr. Amid the felicitations Blue Knot is brought into the dining-room by Jimmy's friend, Elmer Boeseke, and Blue Knot comes in for his share of the honors.

BEAUTY FILM

THE DREAM SHIP (June 16).—The Dream Maid on her nocturnal ramble happens by the King's palace at a time when the King discovers that his captain's daughter has developed into an attractive young lady and commands the captain to bring her to him. The captain hastens to obey, but rather to his surprise, the girl refuses to go to the King, preferring the company of a friendless lad who happens along at that time. The captain informs the King of his daughter's refusal, but is ordered to return and bring his daughter by force, if necessary. The girl is escorted to the King and the Friendless Lad thrown into a dungeon. The King is forcing his attentions on the girl when the Dream Maid, seeing the girl's peril, throws the King a dream rose, putting him to sleep and causing him to dream himself a beggar. She then throws a dream rose to the Friendless Lad and he falls asleep and dreams of deeds of mighty men and that he rescues the King, who is now the beggar. The Dream Maid has also thrown a rose to the beggar, who sleeps and dreams that he is the King. The first command of the beggar king is that he be served with choice food and wine. Fair ladies, having little charm for him, he willingly allows the Friendless Lad to pay his addresses to the captain's daughter. Not finding the King's seat a suitable resting-place, he concludes to seek a more comfortable spot. He gives up his throne to the king beggar and resumes his own former bed upon the steps. When morning comes the beggar finds himself still a beggar—and hungry. The King finds himself still a king, but the memory of his dream is still upon him and he orders the release of the Friendless Lad and sanctions his marriage with the captain's daughter. He also befriends the beggar whom he but lately dreamed had usurped his throne.

THE TALE OF A TAILOR (June 23).—Louis Simon is a fashionable ladies' tailor. One day while kneeling on the floor fitting a lady's costume, he reaches for a pin; intent on his work and without looking up, he takes hold of his beautiful customer's hand by mistake. His wife, Sadie, enters very opportunely and a quarrel ensues.

While this is taking place at the shop, the wife's twin sister Millie and her husband, Harry, who are on their honeymoon, arrive at the tailor's home. Finding no one there, they leave their suitcases and go sightseeing. After they have left Sadie returns. Simon follows and tries to make up. His wife is obdurate, and he decides to live at the tailor shop until she relents. He departs and carries off the honeymooners' suitcase. The wife goes to tell her woes to a friend. Arriving at the shop, Simon changes his clothing and gets a pair of trousers from the suitcase. He puts them on; they are Harry's and an awful misfit. At a loss to understand how another man's clothing got into his suitcase he searches further and brings forth various articles of feminine lingerie. He also finds the following note:

"Dearest—Have gone to inquire about trains and to reserve our sleeper. To save time, meet me at Raynor's Restaurant. Your devoted Harry."

There is only one explanation; his wife is going to elope. Forgetting his hat and coat and the figure he cuts in Harry's trousers, he rushes off to the restaurant, where he claims Millie as his wife and proceeds to pommel the astonished Harry. A policeman is called and Simon is arrested for creating a disturbance. He escapes and pursues Harry and Millie, still believing the latter is his wife. Returning home in a torn and disheveled condition, he finds Sadie sleeping peacefully on the couch in the den. Securing the carving knife he determines to slay the faithless creature, but is prevented by the arrival of a messenger with the following note:

"Dearest Sadie—Sorry we missed you this afternoon. Harry and I had an awful time with a crazy man at Raynor's Cafe. We're all done up and have gone to the hotel. Will see you in the morning and explain. Lovingly, your twin sister, Millie."

BRONCHO.

DESERT THIEVES (Two parts—June 24).—Dave Graham, a prospector, meets with an accident, falling down a steep precipice. Painted Feather, an Indian chief, happens along and bears Graham calling for help. He goes to his rescue, bringing him to his camp, where his sister, Owanono, nurses him. She falls in love with Dave and shows him where a lost gold mine is situated, at the same time showing him some nuggets that have come from the mine.

In the meantime Mr. and Mrs. Blake from a mining camp are caught cheating in a game of poker and sent over the desert, where Mr. Blake is overcome with exhaustion. She manages her way to Dave's log cabin and pleads with him to go and rescue her husband, which he does. He falls in love with Mrs. Blake and she knowing this tries to make him believe that she is going to desert her husband for him, the three of them going to the desert. When they reach the desert Mrs. Blake and her husband knock Dave unconscious and try to get the bags of gold nuggets from him. When they have done this, they are very much surprised to find that the bags do not contain gold nuggets, only rocks. When Blake finds out that the bags contain only rocks, he curses and threatens to kill his wife, but she grasps the revolver and accidentally kills him. In the meantime Dave is struggling to get out of his bonds. After she has killed her husband she attempts to go back where Dave is and being lost accidentally runs up against him. They are both lost in a sandstorm on the desert.

DO THIS NOW!

If you do not receive a copy of "The Universal Weekly" every week, send me the name and address of your theatre and I'll see that you get it, NO MATTER WHAT PROGRAM YOU ARE USING. You can't know what's going on in the film business unless you read "The Universal Weekly." Here's a corking good chance to boost your business. Do it now!

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

205 West Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.
252-A Hennepin Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.
1122 Farnam Street, Omaha, Neb.
Hubbell Building, Des Moines, Iowa.

Agents for All Makes of Machines and Accessories

"The Biggest and Best Film Renter in the World"

LOCAL PICTURES

Your negative developed, printed and titled complete

5c per foot

delivered within 12 hours

We Set the Pace, Let Those That Can, Follow

Feature Work Our Specialty

Titles 6c per foot

GUNBY BROS., Inc.
145 West 45th St. N. Y City

$50 REWARD $50

For information leading to the arrest and conviction of CLYDE P. NEWSON alias CLYDE P. STEIN. Feature Film Man, travelling state of Michigan. Write or wire.

WM. BARIE, Jr.
738 Reserve Bank Bldg. Kansas City, Mo.

THE UNIVERSITY FILM, Inc.

announces that it has secured

FRED MACE

The Comedian, for a series of one reel comedies

TWO JUST RELEASED:

VERY MUCH ALIVE — A PAIR OF QUEENS

STATE RIGHTS SOLD—MACE COMEDIES

New England, Standard Feature Co. of Boston, Mass.
Texas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Arkansas, Texas Film Corp.
California, Arizona and Nevada, Golden Gate Film Exchange.

ALSO JUST RELEASED—TWO PEERLESS DRAMAS

THE COUNTERFEIT

Depicts animated scenes taken in the Golden West, then shifts to the East. A thrilling story of an impostor.

THOU SHALT NOT STEAL

A picture of refinement, full of wholesome sentiment and free from sickening cheapness. A story of the redemption of a woman thief.

FRIEND EXHIBITOR AND STATE RIGHT BUYER

We solicit a call from you. We want to know our customers and let them know we are acquainted with their wants.

We have a projection room with an operator always in attendance. It's no trouble to show our goods and have a chat with you.

We have lots of surprises in store for you.

State Rights selling fast. Wire now for open time and territory.

New York State, Greater New York and Northern New Jersey reserved for University Film, Inc.

STATE RIGHTS SOLD—THOU SHALT NOT STEAL AND THE COUNTERFEIT

New England, Phoenix Feature Film Corp. of Boston.
Texas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Arkansas, Texas Film Corp.
California, Arizona and Nevada, Golden Gate Film Exchange.

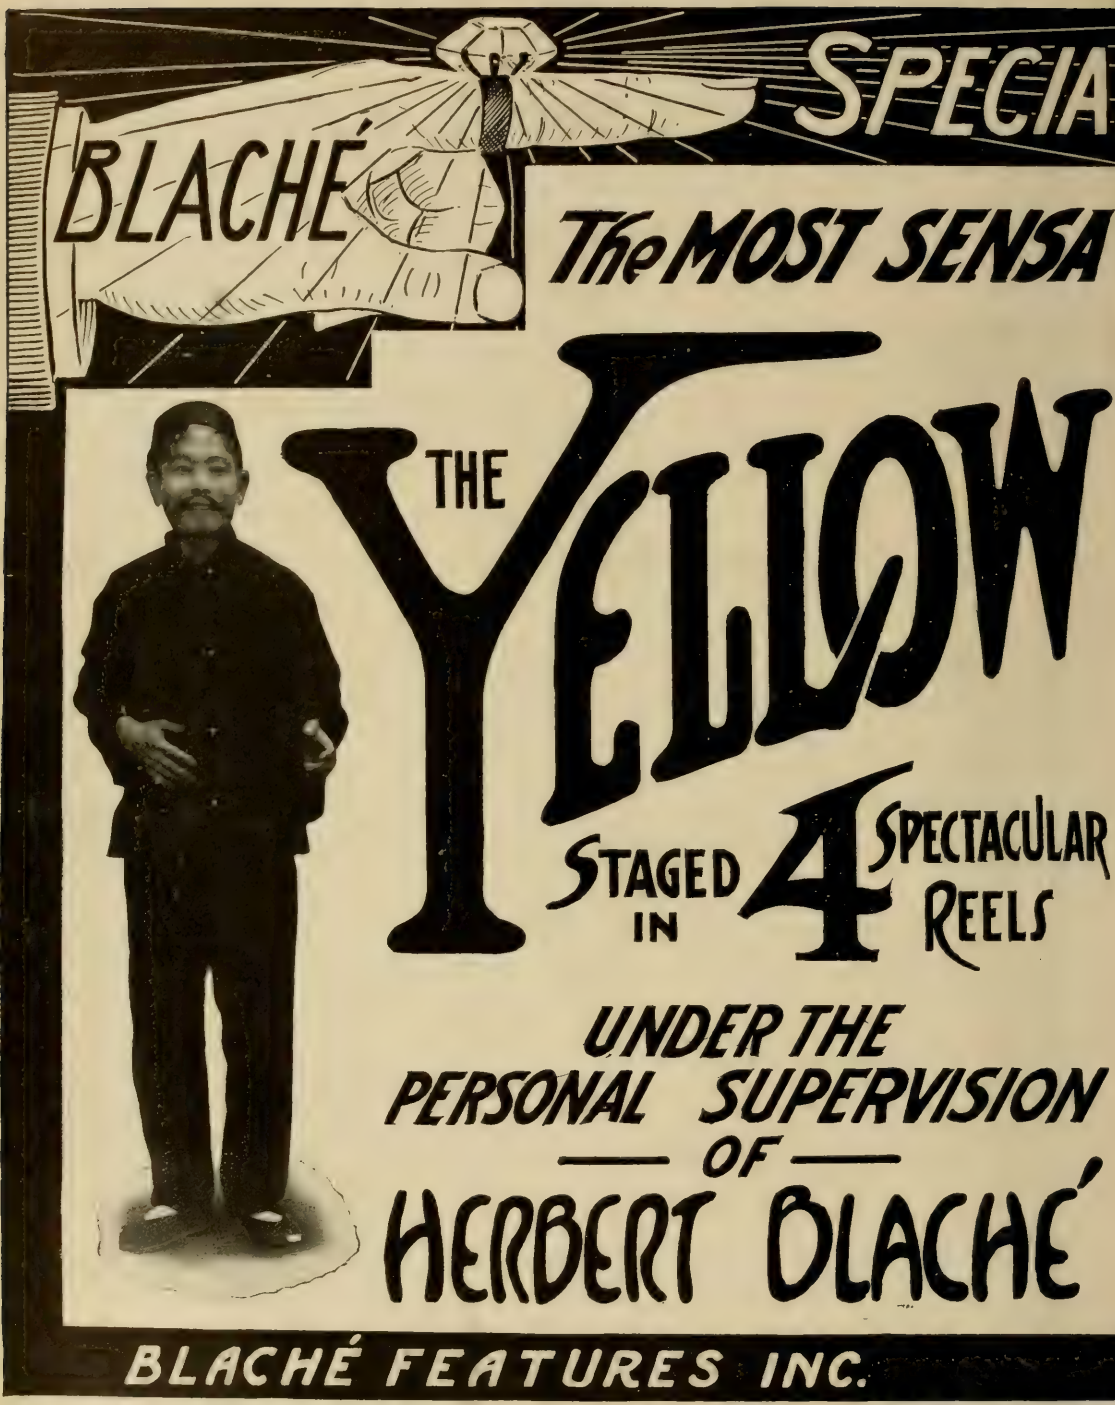
Watch for Lord Lytton's Masterpiece "THE LADY OF LYONS"

ANNOUNCEMENT LATER

UNIVERSITY FILM, Inc.

Executive Office:

110 West 40th St., New York City



BOOKING—NEW YORK STATE and NEW ENGLAND, Box Office Attraction Film Rental Co., 126 West 46th Street, New York City;—EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, NEW JERSEY, MARYLAND, WASHINGTON, D. C., DELAWARE, and VIRGINIA, Electric Theatre Supply Company, 303 Abbott Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa.;—WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA and WEST VIRGINIA, Weiland Film Company, 115 Fourth Avenue, Pittsburg, Pa.;—NORTHERN ILLINOIS, Union Film Company, 167 W. Washington St., Chicago, Ill.;—MICHIGAN, Casino Film Co., 2206 Dime Bank Bldg., Detroit, Mich.;—CALIFORNIA, NEVADA and ARIZONA, Golden Gate Film Exchange, 234 Eddy Street, San Francisco, Cal.;—INDIANA and KENTUCKY, Blaché Feature Service, 119 N. Illinois St., Indianapolis, Ind.;—EASTERN CANADA, International Film Corp., New Birks Bldg., Montreal, Can.;—TEXAS, SOUTHERN OKLAHOMA and LOUISIANA, Texas Film Company, 1917 Main Street, Dallas, Tex.;

STATE RIGHTS FEATURE

TIONAL PHOTODRAMA of the YEAR

TRAFFIC

—A—

THRILLING DRAMA OF THE SEACOAST SMUGGLERS' TRADE IN CHINAMEN

The capture of the two-masted schooner, "Caroline," by smugglers—the coast guard's fight for life—the cargo of "pig-tails"—walking the plank—the miraculous escape of the first mate—the daring flight of the captain's daughter—alone at sea on the bell-buoy—rescued—landing the human cargo—surprised by the coast guard—the battle on the shore—the pursuit of "The Caroline"—and the soul-stirring, hand-to-hand conflict with her desperate crew are a few of the exciting scenes of this remarkable production.

FORT LEE, NEW JERSEY.

IOWA and NEBRASKA Blache Feature Service 403 Observatory Bldg., Des Moines Ia. —WESTERN CANADA Mr. Geo. T. Eaton Columbia Theatre Bldg. Winnipeg Man. —MINNESOTA WISCONSIN and NORTH DAKOTA Zenith F. F. Co. 506 Lyceum Bldg. Duluth Minn. —EASTERN MISSOURI SO. ILLINOIS WESTERN KENTUCKY WESTERN TENNESSEE and ARKANSAS Yale F. F. Co. 14 North 9th St. St. Louis Mo. —COLORADO UTAH MONTANA WYOMING and NEW MEXICO Film Rental Brokers Nassau Bldg. Denver Colo. —GEORGIA FLORIDA MISSISSIPPI ALABAMA TENNESSEE. Apex Film Co. Rhodes Bldg. Atlanta Ga. —KANSAS and NORTHERN OKLAHOMA. Blache Feature Service. 821 Lloyd Bldg. Kansas City Mo.

MUTUAL WEEKLY.

MUTUAL WEEKLY, No. 75 (June 4).—International Horse Show.—Belgian riders show up in good form at Malines.

Cornell Wins.—Exciting race on Cayuga Lake, New York, between Cornell, Princeton and Yale.

A Convertible Bicycle.—French inventor produces machine changeable instantly into a motorcycle.

Sheep Shearing Season Is On.—Idaho ranchmen gather a small fortune in annual harvest of wool.

Royalty Parades.—Bavarian Knights in annual conclave before the King of Munich.

Coxey Arrives.—Leader of Army of Unemployed speaks from Capitol steps in Washington.

350 Years After Shakespeare.—Anniversary of birth of the Bard of Avon is celebrated at Stratford, England.

Burnley 1, Liverpool 0.—Exciting football game between English and Scotch champions at Crystal Palace, London.

The Senior Pilgrimage at U. of C.—University class at Berkeley visits all important college buildings on final day of school life.

Prince of Orleans Becomes a Colonel.—Member of Spanish Royal Family advises King Carol at Bucarest of his nomination.

San Diego Exposition.—California town making splendid progress with its big show of next year.

A Carnival in Zurich.—A historical parade is held in Swiss city.

Portland Opens Market.—City solves problem of high cost of living with municipal co-operation.

The Mediators.—Diplomats seeking to settle Mexican trouble meet in Niagara Falls, Canada.

MAJESTIC

THE REBELLION OF KITTY BELL (June 14).—Hers was simply the case of many a young woman, married to a busy man of few words. But Kitty Bell thought herself the most neglected wife in the state of Texas. Joe was perfectly loyal, of course. And he was getting a good living off the ranch. But he was a mighty poor lover, never to find time to tell how pretty she was and that she did not look a day older than when he married her.

Joe's father lived with them, and that didn't make matters any pleasanter. He was a crusty, fault-finding old soul, rather obstinately devoted to his son, and forever meddling with Kitty's goings and comings. After Bud Parker became a frequent visitor especially Father Bell's inquisitiveness would get on Kitty's nerves.

Parker knew what was the matter with Kitty Bell. And he knew how to feed the fires of her secret resentment. It was sweet to be reminded by a good-looking young man that she was still fair in somebody's eyes, still charming. Like a child who steals forbidden sugar plums, she could not deny herself these delicious thrills. Parker soon had her thinking that she was wasted on that unromantic, plodding husband of hers.

Joe Bell went to Galveston on a business trip. The day he returned a neighbor informed him that Parker and Kitty had just passed, driving toward the railroad depot.

"Why, yes," he answered carelessly. "I went a piece with them, but had to come back for something. We're all going over to Fairview to a wedding."

Ten minutes later saw Joe Bell pelting into the depot yard. There were no signs of Parker or his wife. Carelessly he inquired of the station master, who told him that the train was several hours late and that Parker and Kitty had gone over to the hotel parlor to wait.

"We are all going down to Fairview to a wedding," remarked Bell as he sauntered across to the inn.

Kitty and Parker had been arguing. Her cheeks were flushed, and the corners of her pretty mouth drooped a little. She looked half angry, half repentant. When her husband came in, her big eyes caught his, and stayed wide and fixed like a frightened child's. He approached.

"We are all going to have supper," he said, resolutely and pleasantly, "then we are going to take the first train for Fairview. We're booked for a wedding down there—understand?"

Parker writhed just perceptibly. But a flash from Joe's blue eyes found him hastily complying. An hour later they were seen to board the train. Late that evening they drove back to the ranch. At the gate, Bell gave Parker his orders. He turned on his heel and slouched off into the darkness.

Alone together, Bell faced his wife. His impassivity was shattered. His white lips trembled.

"Kitty, dear—why ever in the world did you—"

She flung herself on his neck, sobbing out broken words. At first he was utterly bewildered. Cruelty! Neglect! Their love dead! Then it came over him—how dependent the woman is on her husband's devotion, his constant tenderness, his spoken sympathy.

"Why!" he wonderingly whispered, drawing her closer, "you're just the same little girl I married! —not a mite changed—Kitty, dear!"

THEIR FIRST ACQUAINTANCE (June 18).—Bob Taylor was a valuable man. Talbot, his employer, told Miriam as much, showing his daughter the good round sum which his new clerk had handed him that evening for a real estate deal he had made in Talbot's absence. It was after banking hours and Talbot slept with the money under his pillow. The next morning he went off in a tearing hurry and forgot the roll of bills.

A transaction calling for ready cash, which came up the first thing at the office, reminded Talbot of the money. He sent Taylor with a note to Miriam, directing her where to find the sum and to deliver it to the clerk. He surmised that she would not object to making the young fellow's acquaintance. But the girl was out, and Taylor knowing his employer's need of the money, persuaded the maid to let him in and allow him to search for it. He was going quickly through Talbot's desk, when two desperate looking fellows, who evidently had overheard his conversation with the servant, made their entrance by a rear window. Taylor had the presence of mind not to try to get to the telephone. It was merely a question of which of them should find the money first. His movements became cooler, more rapid. But one of the crooks suddenly discovered the cash. Taylor rushed at him, and all three scuffled and struggled together.

A moment later, a frightened-faced girl flashed into the room. She ran out again, and had managed to get Talbot's office on the phone before the men realized what she was about. One of the ruffians seized her, and Taylor, wresting the money from his other adversary, sprang to the girl's assistance. She darted from him, into the next room. He followed, securing the door against the thieves. Miriam snatched a revolver from a drawer and covered her father's clerk with the gun. Taylor found himself powerless against the crooks who were breaking down the door.

Desperate as his situation was the young man laughed aloud. And then they heard Talbot's voice. Miriam burst the door open. Two stout policemen were collaring the thieves. Talbot exclaimed.

"Taylor! Praises be!"

The revolver slipped from her fingers. The next moment her hand lay in that of her victim.

Ready for

Immediate Delivery

"THE KING OF THE BEGGARS"

A powerful drama in 4 parts showing the ragged edges of society. Interesting and sensational.

"THE HUMAN WOLVES"

IN 5 PARTS

The pulsing triumph of the Photoplay Art.

COMING

"THE MYSTERIOUS MR. WU CHUNG FOO"

IN 4 PARTS

Advertising matter for all of the above: One, three, nine sheets, heralds, slides, colored photos.

Write for further particulars. You'll be pleased, so will we.

FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO.

220 W. 42nd St., New York City

Candler Bldg. Phone Bryant 8486

KAY-BEE.

THE VOICE AT THE TELEPHONE (Series No. 1—Two parts—June 19).—Dick Carson stole into the familiar hall. A light was still burning in the library. It was an unheard of thing for his father to be up at such an hour. Was it possible the old man was thinking of him—regretting perhaps his inexorable part in the stormy scene of the evening before? Dick hesitated at the library door. Then Clara's face appeared to him. He turned on his heel and hastened noiselessly up the stairs. Like a thief now in his father's house, he must gather together a few old treasures he could not bear to lose, and escape into the night.

Two blocks away, a girl was sitting at the switchboard of the local telephone station. Between twelve and one in the morning there were almost no calls. Clara Morrison had fallen into a reverie. Dick hadn't told her in so many words, but she knew she was the cause of it all. Old Mr. Carson would not hear of his only son marrying a telephone girl. But how terrible that he should have turned Dick out of the house!

Suddenly the instrument began to buzz frantically. It was the Carson's number. Through the receiver, bound about her head, she heard a voice—his father's voice—quivering with fear uttering incoherencies. Now it was interrupted by a volley of rough expletives. There was a confused noise as of a struggle, of furniture overturned, then someone fell heavily. At the same instant the connection was cut off. Clara rang up the police in furious haste. When the officers reached the house, they found Dick in the library bending over his unconscious father. A suspicious looking bundle lay on the floor where, in the struggle the young man had evidently dropped it. The servants, huddling, pale and frightened, in the doorway were jabbering confusedly of a quarrel, of Mr. Dick breaking into the house, of how they had caught him and cut off his retreat. The officers took the young man into custody. His vehement protestations availed nothing. The next morning the papers were full of it.

It was Clara's testimony which saved her lover. She swore that if the real burglar were brought to her, she could identify him from the voice she had heard over the phone. She flung herself heart and soul into the defence. The guilty man was found, and Dick cleared of all shadow of suspicion. Mr. Carson's recovery was not rapid, but when he was himself again, his pride was completely melted before the harrowing events of those weeks. Clara Morrison was a revelation to him of pluck and devotion. Disinherit Dick for loving such a girl? He had already set the day—with the bride's consent.

RELIANCE

THE HORSE WRANGLER (Two parts—June 13).—Tom Spangler, boss of Dog Iron ranch, has been married secretly to Mary Bailey, the daughter of a rancher in another part of the state. He writes Mary not to join him at Dog Iron, as they had planned, because the owner has forbidden the men to have their wives at the round-up. A few days later, a dark boy presents himself at the ranch and asks for work. Spangler knows his wife disguised in sombrero and puma-skin trousers, but he hires "Bobby Jones" as horse wrangler.

Sid Suddath, an old hand at Bailey's, arrives

DETECTIVE HAYES AND THE DUCHESS' DIAMONDS

IN FOUR PARTS Ready Now

DETECTIVE HAYES BY THIS TIME IS SO POPULAR THAT IT IS NOT NECESSARY TO DESCRIBE HIM. AS A DETECTIVE HE IS EASILY THE BEST THERE IS

WE WISH TO CALL ATTENTION IN THIS HALF TO A GENUINE NATIVE RUSSIAN FEATURE ENTITLED:

BROTHER AGAINST BROTHER

IN FOUR PARTS

AFTER THE ABOVE TWO WE WILL RELEASE

THE DEVIL'S EYE—4 PARTS

A RAPID-FIRE DETECTIVE STORY DIRECTED BY HARRY PIEL, WHO MADE THE FAMOUS "BLACK 13"

APEX FILM CO.

NEW YORK OFFICE
145 WEST 45th STREET
P. P. CRAFT, MANAGER

EUROPEAN OFFICE
H. WINIK, 35 LITTLE NEWPORT ST., LONDON

MAUDE FEALY, THANHOUSER FEATURE STAR,

who achieved instantaneous success in moving pictures, first won distinction by her portrayal of "Eunice" in "Quo Vadis," and her success was such that William Gillette engaged her to support him in "Sherlock Holmes." Sir Henry Irving later engaged Miss Fealy to portray the roles enacted by Ellen Terry, in which she completely captivated the London public.

During her career Miss Fealy has supported such stars as Sir Henry Irving, E. S. Willard, William Gillette, Nat Goodwin, Richard Mansfield, William Collier, Robert Hilliard, Holbrook Blinn, and she has starred under the direction of John Cort in "The Pleasure of Beatrice," "The Stronger Sex," "The Rajah Princess," etc. Miss Fealy left Mr. Cort's management in order to immediately enter the moving picture field, in which she has achieved great success, and is now being presented by the Thanhouser Film Company in a series of feature films.

SPECIAL RELEASES OF MAUDE FEALY

"Moths" (Ouida's Novel)	4 Reels	"Pamela Congreve" (Book by Francis Mathews)	4 Reels
"Frou Frou" (Daly's Copyright Version	4 Reels	"The Legend of Provence"	4 Reels
"King Rene's Daughter"	3 Reels	"The Musician's Daughter"	3 Reels
"Little Dorrit"	2 Reels	"Kathleen, the Irish Rose"	2 Reels
"The Golden Cross"	2 Reels	"Should She Forgive Him?"	3 Reels
"The Woman Pays"	3 Reels	"The Orphan's Romance"	2 Reels
"The Runaway Princess"	3 Reels	"The Jewish Maiden's Wrong"	2 Reels

and recognizes the daughter of his former employer. He proceeds to get familiar, and "Bobby" resents this, one day the cowboys go in swimming. The horse wrangler declines to join them, and returns to the camp. Suddath follows her into a tent, and after a struggle, "Bobby" defending herself with a cheap clasp knife, stabs her tormentor. The sheriff is informed. Spangler refuses to surrender "the young cut-throat." It looks as though the posse and the ranchers must fight it out, when the girl, rushes among them and give herself up. When the sheriff has heard her story, he pronounces her justified.

THE PEACH BRAND (June 17).—After Carter's misunderstanding with Mildred he went West to forget everything, and she to New York, where she was soon engulfed in the struggle for subsistence. Mildred had had no vocational training. When the young artist who took his meals at her boarding-place asked her to pose for him she joyously consented.

Paul Leighton had a liberal allowance from his mother, and painting had always been for him more of a pastime and a luxury than a possible means of livelihood. When Mrs. Leighton suddenly died, and the lawyers found it necessary to use what property she had left to settle her affairs, young Leighton, for the first time in his life, was thrown upon his own resources. "Pretty girl heads"—mostly Mildred—saved him, and led to a contract with a big canning concern. He designed—Mildred posing for him—and had a new brand of peaches the firm was putting on the market.

Robert Carter was successful in Montana. He struck pay dirt early, and built a bungalow. The fall of 19—, planning to winter in the new house, he laid in a supply of canned goods. The opening of the first box of peaches proved a surprise Carter was little prepared for.

He traced her to Chicago. His coming just then was providential. The girl suddenly had found herself in the old dilemma familiar to women in her position,—either of having to accept the advances of Leighton when she could not love, or forfeiting her means of self-support.

OUR MUTUAL GIRL No. 23—June 22).—Dunbar was phenomenally on the alert. He was frequently in consultation with Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. One morning he took up his post near Mrs. Knickerbocker's house, inspired by a suggestion of the great British detective story writer. Many persons came and went from the house, and Dunbar scrutinized them all. But he let every one go his way in peace. Then he saw John Travers dismount from his car a block or so down the avenue, and approach with a just discernibly hesitating air. He went up the steps, but, his hand on the bell, the young millionaire wavered, turned quickly and hurried back toward the car. Dunbar sauntered out from the street where he had been lounging unseen. Travers started, and broke into a run. He got away, but Dunbar, hailing a passing motor for hire, gave pursuit. The chase led him up through Westchester county to Travers' beautiful country home.

Travers arrived first, and confident that he had outdistanced the other car, he breathed freely. Scarcely a half hour later Dunbar left his automobile in the road, and cut across the shaved lawn to the house. He climbed in at a window and crept stealthily upstairs. He listened at one door after another in the long hall. Suddenly, he turned a knob, and opened a cautious crack. There, in bed in a luxuriously appointed room, attended by a uniformed nurse and a stately old lady, Alexis Dunbar recognized as Travers' mother, lay Margaret.

Dunbar sat, but thoroughly puzzled. Dunbar backed out noiselessly. He turned to face young Travers.

"Come out of doors," Dunbar whispered, "and give an account of yourself."

Travers, story convinced the reformed gentleman snooper. He said always heard that the young millionaire had a mania for speeding. That he should once collide with and bowl a young lady of his own set and get himself into such a mess, was too deliciously. Here was Travers hiding from the police—all New York by the ears over Margaret's "kidnapping"—and the young lady herself solicitously watched over by her stepmother's own mother! And all because the richest young man in Westchester county didn't want to go to jail!

Dunbar gave his word of honor that he would intercede for Travers with the authorities—but, meanwhile, without an hour's delay, Mrs. Knickerbocker must be informed and brought to her niece. As for "Ratfles" himself, he flung away all thought of extorting ransom, and that same afternoon he had the satisfaction of reuniting Margaret and her aunt.

DOMINO.

IN THE SOUTHERN HILLS (June 18).—Bald Mountain was in a bad way, according to Bill Willis, since the new parson had got Jim Hopkins to sign the pledge and had taken to courting Nan Hopkins' daughter. Bill had lost his best companion, and the girl he had long regarded as his property into the bargain. He was in no good humor that afternoon as he swung along toward the Hopkins' cottage. Jim was standing in the doorway, and his old pal greeted him with a surly hallo.

"Come along and we'll sample some of old Morgan's apple jack," he called testily.

"You won't, hey?" Willis made the doorstep in two strides. "You'd rather be singin' and prayin' with that milk-sidder for a parson!—" Two pairs of fists were doubled, horny and hard as rocks. The blows fell fast and heavy. Then Hopkins keeled over, streaming blood. Willis ran for his life.

When the murder was discovered, Willis brought circumstantial evidence against the minister. He whipped the inflammable minds of the villagers into a blind fury. They rushed down the road yelling "Lynch the parson! String 'im up! Lynch 'im! Lynch 'im!"

Nan Hopkins, pale as death, rode for the sheriff, and he and his posse arrived in time to quell the riot. The fickle mob turned, to a man, against Willis, and one of the mountaineers put a bullet in him. Lying, gasping for life, with his last breath he confessed to the killing of Jim Hopkins.

A FRONTIER MOTHER (Two parts—June 25).—Jim Hull, his wife and their son, Jack, are settlers on the far frontier. While the troops are called away to find the trail of the hostilities, the settlers are attacked by the Indians. Jim Hull is in the field plowing. The Indians tie Mrs. Hull to a tree. Jack gets away and hides under the water in a river, using a reed in his mouth for air. There is a fierce battle and just as they are about to overpower the settlers, the troops arrive, and Jim Hull is overjoyed to have his wife and Jack restored to him.

ROYAL

HANDLE WITH CARE (June 13).—Ben Binks is such a favorite at the boarding-house in the country where he spends his vacation that on his departure he is presented with a can of strained honey, on his way to the depot, he stops in the village saloon to have a parting drink and to say good-bye to the boys. There he forgets the can of honey on the counter, where the barkeeper discovered it and puts it in the cellar for safe-keeping.

A tramp, called Shift Pete, is employed at the saloon as a roustabout. He wanders into the cellar, and after sampling several wines and whiskies, drinks the honey. Meanwhile, Binks, thinking to keep all hands off his delectable gift until he can come for it, writes the bartender that the can contains nitro-glycerine. Upon the revelation that Pete has consumed the contents of Binks's can, a doctor is summoned in great haste, who pronounces Pete hugely overdrawn, and orders that he be handled with care. The police are notified and a special guard detailed to attend Pete. The tramp walks around, like some caged victim of the scourge of God in the one or two days until a tough character who happens that way pitches into him without waiting for an explanation. It is sufficiently demonstrated that Pete is in no danger of exploding, and everybody in town turns in and finishes him up.

GENERAL FILM CO.

THE BILLIONAIRE (Three Parts—Biograph).—John Doe, "The Billionaire" who owns a controlling interest in the earth, decides to spend the week end in Gay Paree and Monte Carlo, and leaves, taking with him Ping Pong, his valet, and a retinue of servants. Mr. and Mrs. Hotspur Peppercorn, newly rich and ambitious to marry their daughter Flora to a nobleman, sail on the same ship with Doe. Doe startles Paris with his lavish spending and is eagerly sought. The Peppercorns go to Nice in hopes of mingling with nobility, and Doe takes a trip to Monte Carlo. Pansy Good, a cabaret singer in Nice, gets in bad and loses her position. At the same time, Signor Baptiste (Count Baptiste Tabasco) the frappé tenor, finds a photo in his wife's possession, and determined to find the original, leaves his wife pleading poverty as an excuse, telling her he cannot see her share his misery. Doe breaks the bank at Monte Carlo and becomes a philantrophist, giving all his winnings to a beautiful and mysterious blonde who has lost heavily and is about to take poison. She in return, gives Doe a card written in French. Curious to know what it means, he asks a waiter to read it. The waiter indignantly refers it to the manager, who orders Doe and Ping thrown out. Determined to know what is on the card, Doe saves a life when he hands it to a stranger who is about to shoot himself. The mysterious card breeds wholesale duelling. The stranger challenges Doe to a duel, and leads him to the field of honor. Doe changes his mind about duelling when he sees the size of the crowd awaiting him, and decides to "beat it." He and Ping make their escape in an airship, and when Ping throws a bomb at his pursuers he loses his balance and falls out.

Pansy Good is in trouble, and having a heated argument with the manager of the hotel about her bill, when Doe arrives, and upon learning of her misfortune, he promptly comes to the rescue and pays her bill. Pansy is truly grateful, and Doe loses his heart. The Peppercorns meet Lieutenant Ladislas, a distinguished Hungarian Officer, who takes Mrs. Peppercorn and Flora on a sight-seeing tour. Peppercorn plans to entertain the telephone operator that night, and feigns a headache to get away from Mrs. Peppercorn. Doe and Pansy decide to do the town, and in the Café Chantant, Doe is recognized by Baptiste as the base American whose picture he found in his wife's possession. Baptiste vows vengeance, and challenges Doe to a duel. Pansy is introduced by Doe as the great American Song Bird, and her singing makes a decided hit. Baptiste meets his old friend Lieutenant Ladislas, who introduces him to Flora and Mrs. Peppercorn. Mrs. Peppercorn is delighted to meet nobility at last, and plans to capture "The Count" for her daughter. Doe sees the mysterious blonde who gave him the card, but she disappears before he is able to reach her. Doe, Pansy and the Peppercorns attend a contest—Feet vs. Fists, between Mons. Achille Petipas, Savatist, (Kicker) and Tim Rafferty, an American Pugilist. Doe places a big bet on Rafferty and wins. Baptiste still on vengeance bent, pursues Doe. Doe accepts his challenge and engages Tim Rafferty as his body guard. Rafferty and Ping, arrayed in armor, meet Baptiste in Doe's apartment. Baptiste is bewildered and gets the worst of a bad bargain at the hands of Rafferty. The duel creates a panic in the hotel, and Doe's apartment is demolished. Honor satisfied, Doe decides to get back to Broadway, and Baptiste still revengeful, plans to follow.

Doe leaves for home with Pansy and Rafferty.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

Classified Advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted

SITUATIONS WANTED.

OPERATOR.—Experienced. Go anywhere. Perfect projection. Good appearance. Sober and reliable. K. GERSTER, 420 S. State St., Chicago, Ill.

MOVING PICTURE OPERATOR.—Experience in all machines, willing to travel. T. D. CALLOWAY, 3309 Rhodes Ave., Chicago, Ill.

AT LIBERTY.—July 1st, A-1 drummer with full line of traps, drums, bells and Xylophones. Up in standard and dance music. Prefer work with orchestra, but will consider job with piano. I have had several years' experience. Best of references. State hours and your highest salary. Prefer Iowa, S. D., or Minn. P. F., care of Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

MANAGER.—Most advertised largest and finest photoplay house outside New York City wants opening. Handle all ends, including vaudeville, special training in publicity. Owned and operated three houses, would take money interest or lease good prospect. Highest connections and references. Write BOX 384, Whitcomb Hotel, Rochester, N. Y.

OPERATOR.—Twelve years' experience, all makes of machines, Motto, A-1 projection; sober and reliable. Married, employed at present, but desire change; will go anywhere; reference from former and present manager. State all in first. Address OPERATOR, care of Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

EXPERIENCED.—Union operator desires position anywhere. Mass. license. References. RALPH THACHER, 35 Mason St., Beverly, Mass.

CAMERAMAN.—Desires position; age 28; sober, reliable. Willing to travel, low salary. Address W. W., care of Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

MARTIN JOHNSON.—Expert motion picture photographer. I have made motion pictures in all parts of the world. Clear steady pictures guaranteed. 251 West 52d St., New York City.

HELP WANTED.

AGENTS WANTED.—For atlas work, map work and Mexican War map. Unusual opportunities for intelligent men with ability to sell. Write for particulars. RAND, McNALLY & CO., Dept. B, Chicago, Ill.

MOTION PICTURE DIRECTOR.—For Canada. Must be high class man with best of references and experience. Reply HIGH CLASS, care of Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES.

ANYONE HAVING.—"Features" of four or more reels, with rights in either Montana, Idaho or Washington correspond with me. I will handle them on commission and secure you more clear cash than you could sell outright for. JAS. H. MILLER, Sandpoint, Idaho.

FOR LEASE.—Five or ten years, desirable ground for picture theater. Exceptional opportunity for right parties. Best location. Land will accommodate theater holding eight hundred seats. Address F. H. MYERS, 140 Westfield Ave., Bridgeport, Conn.

SEE ME FIRST.—Before building your theater. Moving picture theaters a specialty. T. JOHN FOLKS, Architect, 2nd National Bank Bldg., Paterson, N. J.

FOR SALE.—Exclusive picture business, five town of 5,500. Rocky Mountain region. Business includes ownership of two houses, capacity 550 and 400. Absolute security against competition. Address E. P., care of Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

FOR SALE.—Controlling interest in Royal Theater, Atlantic City. Cause of selling, dissension among partners. Seats, 1,050. Apply GREIS & PARSONS, Bartlett Bldg., Atlantic City, N. J.

LOFT TO LET.—Reasonable rent in theater building, centrally located. Suitable either for moving picture operators or moving picture actors' school. LOFT, care of Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

THEATERS FOR SALE OR RENT.

FOR SALE OR RENT.—Large theater, 1500 capacity, equipped with the latest improvements for any amusement. M. G., care Moving Picture World, New York City.

PICTURE THEATER.—Fully equipped in good town in Pennsylvania, $2000 or will take partner with half interest to manage business. No triflers need apply. Address F. S., c/o Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

FOR SALE.—Moving picture theater in county seat, city of ten thousand. Big stage. Three hundred seats. Only vaudeville house in county. Big sacrifice at twenty-five hundred. Reason for selling, terms, etc. Write E. K., care of Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

FOR SALE.—Pastime Theater, Ottumwa, Iowa city, 25,000. Waiting room, corner, marble and mirror front and lobby, $1,200. Investigate this snap. Wanted, Variable motor for Edison D.

MOVING PICTURE HOUSE.—In one of the best towns in Kentucky. Building built especially for the purposes, at a cost of $50,000. Seats 800 people, three-story brick building in first class condition. Well located. Man and wife can make big money. It can be had on easy terms. Price, $16,000, $5,000 cash. Balance can be paid out of the profits. Write us for full particulars. The JAS. H. BUTTON CO., 233 S. Fifth St., Louisville, Ky.

PICTURE THEATERS.—If you wish to buy or have one for sale. Write THE PHOTOPLAY INVESTMENT CO., Muscatine, Iowa.

MOVING PICTURE THEATER.—Seating 600, near New York City, population, 20,000. Modern equipment, doing good business. Best reasons for selling. Address G. T., care of Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

BRASS POSTER FRAMES.—For one, three and six-sheets. Also brass easels, brass railings. Write for complete catalog. THE NEWMAN MFG. CO., Cincinnati, O. 101 4th Ave., N. Y.

ALWAYS ON HAND.—Slightly used moving picture machines and chairs, at a bargain. WESTERN FILM BROKERS, 37 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES.—For sale, for rent and exchange, in first-class condition. CHICAGO MOVING PICTURE SUPPLY CO., 37 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

FOR SALE.—Any part of my moving picture theatre: opera chairs 65c. each, Simplex machines $125; Power's 6A $100; all goods used three months, have many other bargains in other fixtures. A. GLEN, Room 200, Houser Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

FOR THEATRE EQUIPMENTS.—Such as seats, picture machines, etc., see LEARS THEATRE SUPPLY CO., 509 Chestnut St., St. Louis, Mo.

NEW AND SECOND HAND CHAIRS.—At cut prices. Equipments bought and sold. We save you money on outfits. Designs and plans free. JOS. REDINGTON, Scranton, Pa.

FOR SALE.—A Pathe Head complete and ready to use. Address MGR. LYRIC THEATER, Fort Wayne, Ind.

ENTIRE EQUIPMENT.—Of a moving picture house, compelled to vacate on account of owners wishing to build. 2 machines, Powers 6A, practically new, complete with fine lenses. 300 chairs, 1 Mirroroid Screen, 2 large billboards, 3 fire extinguishers, 1 marble outside ticket office. Will be sold at a sacrifice. Apply J. A. COHEN, 387 Main St., Springfield, Mass.

POWER'S—No. 6 Motograph dissolver, lens, 1 Ft. Wayne compensator used six months. LEONARD, 6142 University Ave., Chicago, Ill.

MANAGERS AND OPERATORS.—Why do you bother with binding tape in making your special slides when you can secure six pairs of Slide Clips for one dollar? Lasting a life time. Money back if they fail to do the work. HANDY SLIDE CLIP CO., Meriden, Conn.

SIMPLEX MACHINE.—Complete, used 3 weeks, $290. Edison model "D" helical gears, latest cut, used 2 weeks, $145. Power's No. 6 complete with new head $150. Power's No. 5 new equipment, rebuilt head complete, $55. Edison Exhibition, $60. Would consider trading machines for first class camera outfits. STELZER BROS., 417 Broadway, Lincoln, Ill.

FOR SALE.—Power's 5 machine, A-1 condition; parts of traveling outfit. HECKEL, 1483 Gates Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

FILMS WANTED.

WANTED.—To buy single and multiple reel subjects. Must be in strictly first class condition and all with paper, positively no junk wanted. Western, Indian and sensational subjects preferred. INDEPENDENT FILM & SUPPLY CO., Plaza Theatre Bldg., San Antonio, Texas.

NAPOLEON.—Any paper or film on this subject wanted. ELDEN SMALL, 82 Congress St., E. Detroit, Mich.

FILMS FOR SALE OR RENT.

We HAVE—A large quantity of fine films for sale at average price of five dollars per reel. Will ship C. O. D. with right of examination on receipt of express agent's guarantee to pay all express charges or on receipt of cash. State quantity wanted and we will make best possible selection for your approval. NORTH AMERICAN FILM CORP., West Depot St., Knoxville, Tenn.

ATTENTION!—Traveling showman, 300 reels film for sale, and moving picture machines, at a bargain. WESTERN FILM BROKERS, 37 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

FILM SERVICE.—At low rental price of all the leading makes. INDEPENDENT FILM EXCHANGE, 37 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

FEATURE FILMS FOR SALE OR RENT.—Luna Feature Film Co., Room 1212, 145 W. 45th St., phone 4637 Bryant, selling or renting twenty new features. Two, three and four reels just imported from Italy—Special. The Bandit NICOLA MORRA in 4 reels, and TANGO FEVER, great 3 reel comedy, also four electric fans for sale.

FOR SALE.—Nearly brand new, six three-reels, three four-reel and one two-reel feature, big lobby display for most of them, also paper, only subjects of its kind in this country, can be used anywhere. Here is the greatest proposition ever offered, shipped anywhere subject express office examination, if charges guaranteed. Address BOX 264, Bay City, Texas.

FOR SALE AT A BARGAIN.—Four-reel feature, "Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst" (the famous militant leader in "Eighty Million Women Want?" Just condition with Texas, Oklahoma, Arizona and New Mexico State Rights, ones, threes and six sheets, lithographs, photographs, etc. Price $350. Campaigns are now being waged by women everywhere in the interest of "Votes for Women." All live exhibitors will want to book this great film. WYNDHAM ROBERTSON CO., 1016 Preston Ave., Houston, Texas.

WILL SACRIFICE.—The Passion Play in fine condition. First check for $40 takes it. NATIONAL SALES CO., Jancbew, W. Va

CAMERAS FOR SALE.

PROFESSIONAL MOVING PICTURE CAMERAS.—Two sizes. Tripods, Zeiss-Tessar 50 m. lenses, $150, $225. Special cameras to order. Repairing all makes. R. W. PITTMAN, 50 West St., New York City.

TWO PROFESSIONAL.—Used moving picture cameras for sale cheap. Also new ones. RAY, 326 5th Ave., N. Y. City.

FOR SALE.—Pittman professional camera with 2 lenses. Power's No. 5 projector. Rewinder and miscellaneous articles. WILLIAM OLSEN, 239 78th St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

MISCELLANEOUS.

FILMS AND MOVING PICTURE MACHINES.—For anything else in that line. WESTERN FILM BROKERS, 37 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

MOVING PICTURE PHOTOGRAPHY.—Practical instruction by experienced cameramen. Instruction by mail also. RAY, 326 5th Ave., N. Y. City.

COMPLETE ARCHITECTURAL PLANS.—For convertible motion picture theater. Closed structure in winter, open air roofless auditorium in summer. Prices $50. HOMER JOSEPH DODGE, 615 Fairmont St., Washington, D. C.

SOMETHING NEW.—Hear the Great Sousa and his famous band by wireless. Only thing of this kind in the world. Live ones get busy. SPECIAL FEATURE CO., 288 Market St., Newark, N. J.

SAVOY HOTEL.—Dayton, Ohio. Reserve room now for Moving Picture Men's Convention, newest hotel in city. Absolutely fireproof. Hot and cold running water in all rooms. Flawless service and cuisine. Rates $1.50 and up.

Baptiste pays ardent court to Flora, and Mrs. Peppercorn eager to exhibit the Count, sails for home. Doe announces he will build a theater for his protege, and cables his architects in New York to start building a theater at once, and have it ready for him when he arrives. All records for theater building are broken by Doe, and when he reaches New York he announces the opening night. Pansy is billed as the main attraction, and Doe assures her of success. Mrs. Peppercorn, Flora and Baptiste occupy a box, but Peppercorn eludes Mrs. Peppercorn and escorts Fluffy Flash, a show girl. The Billionaire Theater is opened with pomp and ceremony, Tim Rafferty as head usher is kept busy straightening out arguments with his fists. Mrs. Peppercorn creates a scene when she sees Peppercorn with Fluffy and pulls him out by the ear. Doe's troubles begin when the company refuses to work with a non-union actor. The audience becomes impatient and threatens Doe if he does not open the show. Doe, flabbergasted, announces to the audience that he will continue the performance, and play the leading part himself. He is wildly applauded and with the aid of volunteers, the performance is continued. Doe introduces his latest discovery, Pansy, but she proves a failure, and when a new moon effect he has invented refuses to work, Doe and Pansy are left singing to an audience of two, Rafferty and Ping. Doe, disgusted with his new venture, concludes the performance by inviting Rafferty and Ping to accompany him to the minister's. Doe again becomes a philanthropist, gives his theater away to a newsboy and marries his "star."

THE TREASURE OF ABDAR RAHMAN (Pathe).—Abdar Rahman, returning from a raid upon a neighboring tribe, brings with him, Romeika, the daughter of its sheik. She is introduced into his harem but repulses all his advances till messengers from her father brings a ransom by which the freedom of the girl is effected. In leaving the palace Romeika's rescuers give warning of the intention of her father to return and capture the jewels left in ransom. Fearing the vengeance of his enemy, Abdar buries his treasure and writes in code its secret resting place. The code is in the form a Koran box which he places, as he thinks, in a safe place. His action is seen, however, by a faithless servant. Not long afterwards Romeika's people assail the palace, capture its inmates and kill Abdar, but are thwarted in their search for the treasure by the faithless servant who obtained the code and departs with it. In his flight, over the barren wastes, in his efforts to reach a haven from which to return and secure the treasure as his own the exhausted fugitive sees the returning horde. In his vain efforts to secure a position of vantage he falls from a cliff and the box is lodged in the rocks below.

Three hundred years later at the time Morrocco is occupied by the French, a native woman, in recovering a stray goat, discovers a strange-looking box on the hillside. It is taken to her tent and later sold to an army officer, who, upon opening it, finds a faded manuscript, the writing of which he is unable to understand. A translation is made by a native merchant in the market place, who dexterously deciphers its real meaning and cunningly goes to unearth the treasure for himself. The translation given to his patron appears at first to be a meaningless combination of words, but he later discovers its real meaning and immediately goes in search of the jewels which have been so long buried. By the time he has overcome the contending obstacles and reaches the place of the buried treasure the thief has succeeded in getting a long way on his way. A chase is instituted after the fleeing man which at times grows close, but his trial is afterwards lost. In the meantime, the fugitive tries to hide the treasure in a desolate place. He is prevented from carrying out his purpose by the presence of lions who frighten him away. In the haste for safety the box is left on the desert, where the lions stand guard over the strange object.

'NEATH THE LION'S PAW (Melies—Three Parts)—The drama opens in an engineer's office when business is about to close for the day. Hans, the spy, who wishes to obtain possession of the documents, plans to kidnap under false pretenses Frances Dagmar, the typist, who holds the keys of the safe where the plans are stored. She is led to take a ride in an auto; she is bound and gagged and thrown into the woods. Fortunately, she recovers quicker than the plotters thought, and races to the nearest telephone to give to the engineer an account of her experience. The message is received just after the burglary has been committed, and the thief is seen escaping by means of climbing a roof. His retreat is cut off, with the exception of one means of escape, and that is, by jumping on to the telegraph wires that run across the street, landing on the roof of the adjoining property, and thereby effecting his escape. This is a nerve-wrecking incident for one who is expecting the wires to break and let him down at any minute, but he successfully escapes. It is expected that he would take a train and leave the city immediately, so the engineer and his typist decide to take this train, hoping that they may see him. To avoid creating suspicion, the typist is disguised as a man. They quickly find that they are on the very same train as the thief himself, and make preparations to hold him up at the point of the revolver. Unfortunately for them, the thief sees them in earnest conversation and suspects their intention. Divesting himself rapidly of his overcoat, he lays in wait for the attack, wrestling the revolver from the engineer. They have an extremely excitable and fierce struggle on the rear of the train, where ultimately the engineer is thrown clean off the boards onto the railway siding. The typist, who has witnessed the struggle, runs up to the rescue. The thief seeing her with the revolver and about to shoot climbs up into the top of the train, where he is followed by the woman. Just at the moment when she reaches the top of the carriage, she loses the revolver. The thief, quick to realize his opportunity, rushes at her, and they have a fierce struggle on top of the train, which is still going at full speed.

After biting, kicking and wrestling, he is able to throw the woman off the top of the train. The thief escapes and advises his employers of his success and his experience. Realizing the still greater danger now from the dicovery of the theft, they decide to get rid of the woman at all costs. Knowing that she is due to keep an appointment at a place adjoining a building used for the storage of lions, they fix ropes to the cage doors and threadle same up to the roof. Having locked the door and made sure that the woman could not escape, they climb onto the roof of the building, pull up the ropes and thus free a number of wild lions, which bound out into the room and confront the typist. She is terror-stricken for some time and escapes into another room, but discovering a prong used by the lion-keepers, she is enabled to drive back the lions out of the room, and after a desperate struggle closes the door after them. While this is going on she fails to see one lion that escapes into the anteroom. Thinking herself free, she swoons away. While in this state, the lion that she had not counted upon, bounds into the room by smashing the door and immediately attacks her. She is mauled for some few seconds before she recovers. Then a fierce struggle takes place, and only in the nick of time does the engineer come upon the spot and shoot the lion.

FILM RELEASES OF AMERICA.

THE MASTER OF THE WORLD.—Turrenne, feeling certain that he has discovered the secret of making gold, requests his employer, Carton, to lend him aluminum cylinders to complete his experiments. Carton refuses, telling Turrenne he is mad. Turrenne steals into the laboratory at night and uses the cylinders there, but by accident sets fire to the building. He and his wife escape, but the building is burnt to the ground.

Claire, his wife, seeking among the ruins next morning, recovers two of the cylinders. Turrenne finds the experiment has been successful, and that he has really discovered the secret of making gold. Carton has surmised how the fire arose, and also recovers the two remaining cylinders. He is dumbfounded to discover that they contain gold.

Carton tells Turrenne that unless Turrenne will become his partner and reveal the secret, he will accuse him of arson and have him imprisoned. Turrenne refuses, and is arrested. With the aid of his wife he escapes, swimming the river across the border into the neighboring state. This state is in a great tumult owing to the government being bankrupt. He proves his ability to make gold, and undertakes to pay the country of its trouble. Turrenne does not reveal his secret, but makes the gold and mixes it with sand, which he scatters on an old mine. This sand is then recovered and the gold worked from it, Andrew Turrenne taking 10 per cent. of the profit. He thus keeps possession of his secret.

He declares to the ministers, "The country is saved and my work finished." Alarmed at the prospect of his going away, they incarcerate him in an asylum.

Carton reads that Andrew Turrenne has found gold-bearing land in the adjoining state, but that having saved the country, has become of unsound mind, and is in an asylum, where he constantly repeats to himself: "I am master of the world."

Carton disbelieves Turrenne's insanity and obtains permission of his government to try to release Andrew and bring him over the border again. Disguised as a beggar, Carton manages to enter the asylum grounds and drops a note at Turrenne's feet telling him and his wife to meet him next day and be prepared for flight.

Turrenne, his wife, and Carton escape to a motor launch on the river, and set out. The watchman discovers them with his telescope and informs the authorities. He explodes the loaded mines on the river when the launch approaches. Carton is killed, but Turrenne and his wife make the opposite bank safely. Turrenne and his wife are received by the king and raised to the peerage. He erects a gold factory, with the state as co-partner.

Neighboring states become jealous, and decide to make war, so Turrenne works with superhuman speed to make as much gold as possible. Working at the furnaces wearing an asbestos mask, Turrenne falls victim to a terrible accident. He is brought from the factory and attended by doctors and ministers of state. In delirium he sees the aluminum cylinders swinging round in the flames. This fades away and an image of the Great Napoleon rises in its place, to whom he says: "Thou were master of the world once; now I am." Then he imagines he is standing on a pedestal and showering gold upon the people; then the nations of the world come to do him homage, and a great snake dance is performed for his pleasure. After these things fade, Father Time appears, saying: "Once you were master of the world—now I come to claim you." He awakens, knowing his end is near. He calls to his wife and attempts to put his secret into writing. Too late! He dies carrying the secret to the grave.

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO.

ATLANTIS (Six Parts).—Dr. Fred V. Kammacher, a young physician living a short distance from Berlin, has been disappointed in his bacteriological researches and to add to his mental and physical distress, his wife, Angele, develops symptoms of brain derangement. The couple are the fond parents of three children and when Dr. Rasmussen, the family physician advises that Angele be taken to a sanitorium, Kammacher is threatened with a general breakdown. He reluctantly consents to the pleadings of his mother to seek rest away from his home and makes his first sojourn in Berlin. While there he accepts an invitation from an old friend to attend a matinee performance, at which Miss Ingegerd Halstrom, a famous danseuse, appears in her latest creation, "The Dance of the Spider." Kammacher falls under her charm and is introduced by her father after the performance. But he is disillusioned when he finds her bestowing her attention indiscriminately upon the gallants who surround her. He leaves in disgust and upon later receiving ill tidings from home, departs for Southampton, where he engages passage on the liner "Roland," bound for America. He is seeking to forget the troubles that beset him.

Through a curious twist of fate, Ingegerd and her father also have taken passage on the same steamship and Dr. Kammacher, upon the renewal of the acquaintance, finds himself more closely attracted toward the young dancer. Dr. Kammacher is sorely puzzled over the whimsical nature of Ingegerd and during one of his trouble slumbers dreams that he has landed on the island of Atlantis, the mythical realmy which, according to the ancient Greeks, disappeared under the crest of the sea, only to resume its activities on the sands at the bottom of Neptune's domain. Here he meets old friends and is enjoying their greetings when a violent shock arouses him from his slumbers. In a dense fog the "Roland" has struck a hulk and water pours in volumes into her hold. The boiler room is flooded, but the stokers stick bravely to their posts and officers and crew exert every effort to restore calm among the passengers.

Realizing that hope is fast fleeing, the captain orders the life boats lowered and in an instant pandemonium reigns on board the doomed vessel. Scantily clad passengers from the saloon scramble to the upper deck, while the panic stricken emigants in the steerage madly trample each other in their wild frenzy to reach the boats. Fearful of delay, scores plunge into the angry ocean seeking rescue from those in pitching life boats. A watery grave is the fate of hundreds and gradually the "Roland" lists and sinks into the bosom of the relentless ocean. With difficulty, Dr. Kammacher rescues Ingegerd, but her father is among the victims. For many weary hours, filled with mingled hope and despair, the little group huddle together in the life boat, the men taking their turns at the oars. Toward morning the tossing craft is sighted by a cargo steamer bound for New York and Kammacher, Ingegerd and their fellow survivors are taken aboard and start again toward the New World.

Sandy Hook, the Statue of Liberty and the impressive skyline of New York are vividly depicted and finally the steamship pier, where the rescued are beseiged by newspaper reporters anxious to learn the particulars of the sinking of the "Roland." Unthan, one of the survivors, otherwise known as "The Armless Wonder" is the center of a curious group while Dr. Kammacher is taken in charge by Will Snyder, an artist and an old-time friend of the young physician. Fate decrees that Ingegerd at this point drop out of the life of Dr. Kammacher. It is related that she repeats her success as a dancer and in a whirl of gayety soon forgets her fancied attachment for the man who had saved her life.

From the hour of his arrival in America, the sojourn of Dr. Kammacher is varied and filled with innumerable moments of interest. Dr. Schmidt, an old friend, invites him to seek rest in his mountain cabin, standing among the snowdrifts beyond the Canadian border. He accepts, but before leaving pays his farewells to Eva Burns, a young sculptress, whom he had met during one of his rounds of the studies in company with Snyder. Fever overtakes him in his mountain retreat and almost at the same time he receives news of the death of his wife. Miss Burns nurses him back to health. The story does not end at this point and while the finale may be guessed at, the evolving of the details supplies a number of strong and appealing scenes.

BLACHÉ FEATURES

THE YELLOW TRAFFIC (Four parts).—The four-masted schooner "Caroline," a valuable seagoing vessel engaged in a peaceful legitimate trade along the rough coast of New England, is the central point around which this interesting drama revolves. Her owner has been forced by misfortune to borrow money from a wealthy merchant who is the secret head of a band of smugglers engaged in bringing chinamen into the United States by landing them secretly upon a dangerous stretch of the seacoast. The merchant wants the "Caroline" for his illegal traffic, and has also made up his mind to obtain her captain-owner's daughter for his bride. The girl, however, is in love with a stalwart coast guard and is seconded in her dislike for

Our Security Device for Showmen

Security Ticket Chopper.

Have been on display at the Exposition this week. Exhibitors have been unanimously enthusiastic over the efficiency, compactness and business-like appearance of our apparatus—and of its value in creating a showhouse atmosphere.

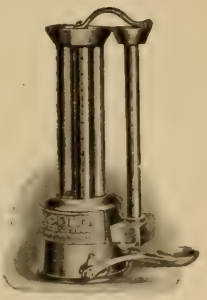
Security Ticket Chopper The successful show of today must have system, and that is what our devices create. The Security Ticket Chopper is a protection that is conceded by every up-to-date Manager. Ours are the original and the ones that are the standard the world over.

Security Ticket Box Where tickets are not to be chopped, the Security Ticket Box is the only right way. Tickets are dropped in by patrons, and cannot be tampered with. Cabinet and glass are the same as chopper. It is equipped with trap door instead of cutters.

OHKAY Check Seller Our check seller delivers a metal ticket or check direct from your Cashier to patron, and same is registered. At the door one of our special check takers can be used, so that none of your employees need touch the admission checks. One filling will hold 1000 checks of one price, and if desired when two prices are in vogue, a separate tube holding 250 checks with register will be attached, delivering a smaller check. This system saves the cost and annoyance of the paper tickets.

Turnstile Another device we are making is this Turnstile, which registers every person who enters. This is used extensively by carnival companies, Exhibitions, Rinks, Dance Halls, etc.

We also can arrange the Turnstile to be used at the entrance of "Movie" shows, so that one person can handle the money, make change and let patrons in and register every admission. This will cut down the expense of one man where two are now used. Our Choppers and Ticket Boxes can be had from any up-to-date Film Exchanges and Supply Houses. Don't let them sell you imitations, though. Get only the best.



OHKAY Check Seller.

Turnstile.

AMUSEMENT SALES CO.

Write for Prices Woodward and Warren Avenues, DETROIT, MICH.

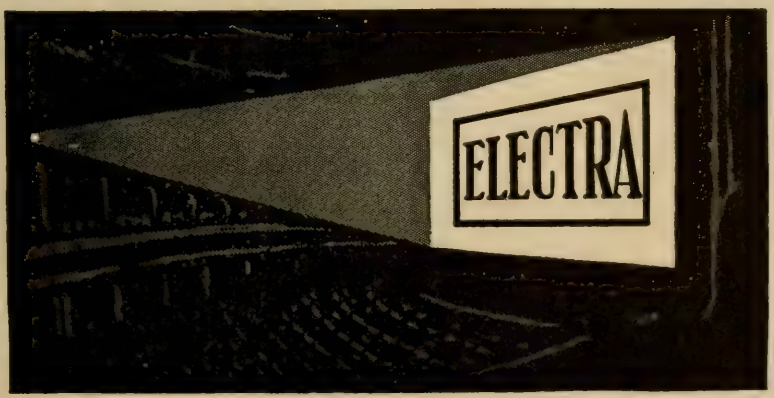
J. H. Hallberg, General Film Company and Atsco, Inc., carry a complete line of our theater devices

"ELECTRA" PINK LABEL CARBONS

A Guarantee of Perfect Projection



Sold by All Leading Supply Houses

HUGO REISINGER

11 Broadway Sole Importer NEW YORK

the merchant by her brother who, besides being the first mate of the "Caroline," has rigged a wireless apparatus upon the vessel and upon the roof of their home, and has taught his sister how to communicate with him while he is at sea.

The merchant succeeds in secreting a number of his desperate band on the hold of the "Caroline" when she sails upon one of her cruises, and thus gains possession of the vessel and places her crew in irons. She is immediately forced into the "yellow traffic" and used to pick up a cargo of chinamen who are packed in barrels and loaded upon her decks. Meanwhile the activities of the merchant, the girl and the coast guard upon the land continued with the government's efforts to stop the operations of the smugglers add double interest to the story which reaches a splendid climax when the brother succeeds in communicating with his sister by wireless, is made to walk the plank; saves 140 feet under water, finally clinging to a rudder chain and reaching shore in time to lead a large force against the smugglers on land; pursues the "Caroline" out to sea and leads an attack upon her ruffian crew, which ends in a handto-hand conflict and a triumph for the guardians of the law.

FAMOUS PLAYERS.

ONE OF OUR GIRLS (Four Parts).—Kate Shipley, an American heiress, crosses the Atlantic to attend the wedding of her little cousin, Julie, in France. Little does she know what Fate holds in store for her when she leaves her Fifth Avenue home for the chateau of the Foublanques. Julie marries the prodigate Comte de Crebillon, though she loves her cousin Henri, and Kate grieves to see her little cousin grow sadder and paler every day through the realization of her grave mistake. A great happiness, however, comes to the American girl, for she is loved by Capt. John Gregory, a dashing British officer no less noble than he is brave and handsome, to whom she is soon betrothed. The Comte de Crebillon conceals a secret in his past, a broken and beautiful woman, who suddenly appears one night at the chateau and confronts him, after which she is never seen alive again. Old Dr. Girodet, the family physician, dislikes the Comte. Hearing a woman's scream on the fatal night, and being told of a mysterious, haggard face that had peered through the window of the chateau, he notices the Comte's nervousness and fear, and begins investigations which end in the finding of the woman's body in the old wishing-well in the garden of the estate. Suicide is the verdict given in the woman's death, and the Comte breathes freely for a time. He is harsh, suspicious and cruel to his girl-wife, and poor little Julie, driven desperate by his treatment and her love for Henri, decides to leave France with her sweetheart cousin. Julie writes Kate she is eloping, and the impulsive and generous American girl goes to Henri's room to save Julie from her folly. There she is discovered by the Comte and her own betrothed, Capt. Gregory. To shield her cousin from the Comte's fury, Kate conceals Julie's presence in Henri's room, and takes the awful situation upon her own shoulders, at the risk of her good name and her fiance's faith and love. The development of the play thrillingly portrays a series of dramatic situations that culminate in the triumph of Kate over the insulting Comte, and the revelation of his mysterious and sinful past, which sets Julie free to marry Henri. Kate is made doubly happy by her gallant captain's faith through all her trying experiences, and "one of our girls" at last weds one of England's bravest officers.

ECLECTIC.

THE STAIN (Six Parts—June 22).—Stevens, the bank clerk, is ambitious. His great desire is to become a lawyer. He stays at the bank at night to study, but is unable to take a course at college owing to his poverty. He handles immense sums of money every day and is strongly tempted to steal some, but fights off the desire till one evening when a belated customer comes late to the bank with a deposit of several thousand dollars. He sees a way for his ambition to be gratified and takes the money. His wife refuses to go with him, so he deserts her and his small daughter and goes away.

Sometime later we see him in a strange town living under an assumed name. His ambition has been gratified and through the good will of the political boss he has been made a judge. He falls in love with the daughter of his friend, the boss, but is deterred from marriage by the thought of his wife whom he had deserted. In the meantime Mrs. Stevens has become destitude and unable to support her daughter. She takes her daughter to an orphan asylum and releases all claim on her. Mrs. Stevens is unable to obtain work and at last is found unconscious and taken to a hospital. Her hand bag, containing her identification papers, is lost and picked up by another woman who is in the last stages of exhaustion. The woman succumbs to the cold and on being found is thought to be Mrs. Stevens. Her death as Mrs. Stevens is reported to the papers. Judge Harding (formerly Stevens) sees the report of the death and marries the daughter of the boss. The boss decides to run Judge Harding for governor of the state, but his choice is attacked very strongly by a young lawyer, Norris. The boss and Harding try to buy Norris, but finding that he cannot be reached they decide to "frame up" his sweetheart in order to break his determination to prevent the election of Harding. They get her into trouble and Judge Harding is appointed to try the case. He is conducting the case in a very severe manner with a decided feeling against the prisoner. The superintendent of the orphan asylum has followed the course of the little girl's life and comes to the city to see her. She recognizes Mrs. Stevens as the woman who left the child at the orphanage and takes her to see the trial. As Mrs. Stevens enters she recognizes in Judge Harding the man who deserted her so many years ago. While the jury have retired to settle the case Mrs. Stevens accuses Judge Harding. The sudden excitement causes an attack of heart failure just as the jury return with a verdict of "Not Guilty."

UNIVERSITY FILM CO.

THE COUNTERFEIT (Two Parts).—The opening scenes show two young men leaving a mining claim and engaging an old Indian servant. Robert Morton, one of the men, receives a letter from his uncle's attorneys informing him that Colonel Morton, the uncle, is anxious to meet him in New York that he may become better acquainted with his heir. Wilson, the other man, learns of Morton's good fortune and succeeds in intoxicating the Indian, and while in that condition bribes the redman to kill Morton, so that he (Wilson) might go East as the heir to Col. Morton. Just at the time for the fatal shot the Indian becomes conscience stricken and refuses to pull the trigger. Wild with rage, Wilson kills the Indian.

Morton accuses Wilson of treachery and after a heated discussion Wilson pretends to depart, but instead climbs a cliff and loosens a boulder which he shoves over the cliff. It strikes and injures Morton. Wilson returns to the cabin, feeling sure his path is clear, and with Morton's letter safely in his possession, departs to meet Col. Morton. But young Morton is not dead. A miner revives him, but his mind remains a blank.

In the meantime Wilson presents himself to Col. Morton, who never suspects the imposition. He is warmly welcomed into the colonel's home and shortly becomes engaged to Grace Cameron, the colonel's niece. During this time Morton, under the name of Carl Chandler, works his way to New York by playing upon his violin and on one occasion plays at a reception attended by Wilson and Miss Cameron. Morton's playing charms the colonel's niece and she engages him to teach her the violin. The lessons result in a growing infatuation for each other which Wilson discovers and ends by having Morton banished from the house; but neither Morton nor Wilson recognize each other's identity as Morton now wears a beard. Wilson, not satisfied with having Morton dismissed from the house, calls at Morton's rooms and after a stormy interview shows Morton a newspaper announcement of the approaching wedding. Angry words follow and Wilson strikes Morton on the head and leaves the room. The blow brings back Morton's reasoning power. He hurries to the home of Miss Cameron and arrives just in time to prevent the wedding.

SAWYER'S FEATURES.

THE LIGHTNING CONDUCTOR (Six Parts).—Molly Randolph, a wealthy American girl in London with her aunt, invests in a motor car. She uses the last of her allowance to pay for it, and wires her father to send her more funds, which he does. Molly engages a chauffeur and, with her aunt, starts on a tour from London through southern Europe. Her first mishap occurs when a few miles from London and from then on the automobile breaks down at frequent intervals, during one of these breakdowns, the Hon. John Winston happens along in his car, and is mistaken for a chauffeur by Molly. He does not correct the impression.

After a bad breakdown, Molly's chauffeur decamps with a five hundred franc note, which Molly had given him to pay for a new part of the machine. Winston, posing as "Brown," the chauffeur, takes the other's place, and the rest of the tour is replete with funny incidents and complications owing to Winston's deception. The trip continues from London through Paris, thence to Blois, where Tallyrand, an adventurous Frenchman, with a high power motor car, appears and makes love to Molly. He is repulsed, and takes revenge by blowing up Molly's auto. In a struggle with "Brown" he is thrown into a duck pond and finally driven away. "Brown" then offers the use of his car, the four proceeds through Pau to Nimes, where the vast amphitheater is visited, and a modern moving picture theater is shown in the center of the old amphitheater. Here, Jimmy Payne, an American from Orange, N. J., appears. He is an old friend of Molly's and has been a suitor for her hand. Claiming to be an expert chauffeur, Jimmy induces Molly to allow him to replace "Brown" in the driver's seat. In a spirit of bravado, he crosses the railroad track, narrowly escaping having the car and its occupants smashed to pieces by the South Express, the Twentieth Century Limited of France. A little later, Jimmy is unable to apply his brakes in time and bumps into a peasant's cart. The peasant, who is only slightly injured, demands five hundred francs, refusing fifty francs offered him to repair the damage. He becomes abusive, and gathering other peasants and road venders about him, threatens the motor party with bodily harm. "Brown," rising to the occasion as always, opens the muffler, and the gattling, gun-like reports startle the attacking party and in the confusion the motorists escape.

The peasant reports the occurrence to the nearest Gendarme, and a motor cycle officer starts after the automobile. He is steadily gaining on the party when the auto is turned into a courtyard, and the Gendarme passes on. Then the motorists continue their journey. Jimmy's career as a chauffeur comes to an abrupt end when, after imbibing too many cocktails, he smashes the steering gear of the car by running into a stone wall on an Alpine road.

"Brown" and Molly, on their way back to town to secure assistance, are set upon by a band of Apaches in an inn where they have stopped to inquire the way to town. "Brown" is thrown through a window and down a hillside. Molly, having escaped from the inn, shows a growing affection for her "chauffeur," when she finds him unconscious at the bottom of the hill. He secures the assistance of two Gendarmes. They return to the inn and capture the whole band of desperadoes. Molly, in gratitude, invites "Brown" to dine with her. He accepts the invitation, but on purchasing some flowers for her, finds he has run short of funds and pawns his watch at the government pawnshop. The situation is further complicated when Jimmy finds "Brown's" pawnticket, and decides that "Brown" is a chauffeur who has killed his master and pawned his jewelry. He cables Molly's father to sail from New York immediately, and notifies Winston's mother that Winston has been murdered by his chauffeur, at the same time securing a warrant for the arrest of "Brown." Then ensues a motor chase through the Alps, with Jimmy and the police on "Brown's" heels all the time.

"Brown" is finally arrested and is brought before his mother and Molly's father, as the supposed murderer of Winston. Of course, he is instantly recognized and the laugh is on Jimmy. Molly forgives "Brown" for his deception and ultimately becomes Lady Winston.

NELL GWYNNE (Four Parts).—At the openinz of the story, Nell Gwynne, a popular English actress, is seen as an orange girl selling her goods in and around the old Drury Theater. While she is bantering, Lady Olivia Vernon, the ward of Lord Jeffreys, Chief Justice of England, appeals to Nell for a hiding place. Lady Olivia is being pursued by her guardian and his soldiers and Lord Jeffreys is trying to force Lady Olivia to marry a wealthy lord. By quickness of wit, Nell secures a hiding place for Lady Olivia and later directs Lord Fairfax, Lady Olivia's lover, to the hiding place. While the soldiers are searching for the young couple, Nell distracts their attention by her powers of mimicry.

Nell has been endeavoring to secure a part in one of the productions at the Drury Lane Theater, but has been unable to secure an opportunity to show her ability. In desperation she had assumed the role of the orange girl, hoping in this way to find occasion to demonstrate her histrionic ability to the manager of that theater. On the occasion of the illness of one of the principal characters in a production, Nell secures an opportunity to appear in the part. She makes an instantaneous hit, and from then on her success is assured. Lord Jeffreys tries to force Lady Olivia to marry the wealthy Lord Rochester, but Nell Gywnn repeatedly outwits the chief justice. Fairfax, Lady Olivia's lover, is finally captured by Lord Jeffreys and thrown into prison. Lord Jeffreys has trumped up charges against Fairfax, and by trickery has made King Charles believe them.

Nell seizes an opportunity to disguise herself as Lord Jeffreys, and to issue orders which help release Fairfax. Nell's final appeal to the King saves her young lover, and he is set free to join his sweetheart. Lord Jeffreys, for his trickery, is dismissed by the King. Nell continues on her rollicking way, and is the idol of the country. Her final good deed is the presentation of a wonderful hospital to the nation. Although she is now the favorite of the King, Nell does not forget her old friend.

THE BUSHRANGER'S BRIDE (Three Parts).—Edgar Dalmore, an impulsive youth, quarrels with his father, and in the heat of anger is disowned. Edgar's cousin, Vincent Lennox, is hard pressed for money, owing to his gambling proclivities. With aid of his friend, John Sterling, he beats Edgar's father into insensibility, robs the safe and accuses Edgar of having committed the crime. The father dies, and Edgar is sentenced to prison for life.

At the end of six months, Edgar escapes from prison. As an escaped convict, he is welcomed into the Hellville band of bushrangers, made their captain, and called "Captain Midnight." He leads his band on several daring adventures, including an attack on and robbery of the government gold coach. After a thrilling chase by the bandits, the escort of the coach are overpowered and the chest of gold stolen.

The mounted police chase Edgar and his band, and Edgar is separated from the bushrangers. Edgar meets his sweetheart, Thelma, who prevails upon him to renounce his bushranger connections.

Elsa Harling, who is in love with Edgar, but whose love is not returned, sees Edgar with his sweetheart. She decides to turn Edgar over to the police and lays a plan for his capture. Edgar visits her at her father's cabin in the forest. The police surround the cabin. Elsa relents at the last moment, and helps Edgar to escape by cutting a hole in the back of the hut, thus eluding the police. Another exciting chase follows, during which Edgar has to swim across a river.

HEPWORTH'S, LONDON, PRESENT

A THROW OF THE DICE

A POWERFUL DRAMA OF INDUSTRIAL STRIFE WITH ITS ATTENDANT HARDSHIPS AND DEPRIVATIONS

TWO PARTS

THE TURNER FILMS, LTD., PRESENT

A SINGLE REEL FUNMAKER

CREATURES OF HABIT

FEATURING MISS FLORENCE TURNER
"GREAT IS THE POWER OF HABIT"

HEPWORTH COMEDY

FAIR GAME

THE SQUIRE'S OFFER OF REWARD FOR RIDDING HIS FARM OF RABBITS BRINGS ABOUT MANY COMICAL SCENES

SPECIAL PUBLICITY MATTER

FLORENCE TURNER COMEDY

FLOTILLA, THE FLIRT

A ROARING, LAUGHING COMEDY FEATURING MISS FLORENCE TURNER

ANYTHING FROM A SPLIT REEL COMEDY TO A SEVEN REEL FEATURE

"THE HOME OF COMEDY PRODUCTIONS"

HEPWORTH AMERICAN FILM CORPORATION

110-112 W. 40th ST. A. BLINKHORN, Pres. NEW YORK CITY

EXCELSIOR

FEATURE FILM CO., INC.

Announce The Release of Their First Production

"THE TOLL OF MAMMON"

A Forcible Masterpiece in Four Parts

Written and Directed by HARRY HANDWORTH (Late Pathé Head Director)
Featuring OCTAVIA HANDWORTH (Late Pathé Star)

Supported by GORDON DE MAINE, TOM TEMPEST, WILLIAM A. WILLIAMS (Late Pathé Leading Man) and Many Other Screen Favorites

A Thrilling Story based upon Realistic Life. Dealing with a vital question of the present, revealing a moral which appeals to every individual and vividly portrayed. Excellent photography and full of action.

Elaborate Advertising Matter, consisting of 2 ones, 2 threes and 9 sheet Pictorial Lithos—12 styles 11 x 14, 4 styles 22 x 28—artistically colored Photos. Picturesque Heralds, Slides and Cuts.

State Right Buyers!
Releases Every Three Weeks

Now is the time to secure the Excelsior Brand of Features for your territory.
Write! Wire! Phone!

EXECUTIVE OFFICE
110 WEST 40TH ST., NEW YORK.
SUIT 1002 - PHONE, BRYANT 8059
ARTHUR ROSENBACH, Sales Mgr.

STUDIO
LAKE PLACID
N.Y.

Elsa overhears Vincent Lennox and his friend Sterling quarreling about the division of the money they have stolen after murdering Edgar's father. Her presence is discovered. She is seized by Lennox and Sterling, and tied to a tree. Lennox bargains with one of the bushrangers to do away with Elsa. Edgar, in his flight from the police, discovers Elsa tied to the tree, rescues her and in a thrilling scene he and Elsa overcome the two bushrangers and escape.

Elsa notifies the police of the guilt of Lennox and Sterling, and the police start on the trail of the criminals. Edgar decides to cross the border and to live an honest life. He marries Thelma, and as they are coming out of the church they are seized by Lennox and Sterling and their followers, but Elsa arrives with the police in time to save Edgar and his wife.

The stolen notes are found on Lennox, and he and Sterling are arrested for the murder. Through Elsa's noble sacrifice, Edgar is free to join his bride.

THE QUEEN OF THE SMUGGLERS (Four Parts).—The story opens with a May festival, during which Margaret Carrington is crowned Queen of the May. The rival lovers, a lieutenant in the army and a smuggler chief, meet Margaret, and she is compelled to choose between them. She chooses Morgan, the smuggler chief, and in a battle between the soldiers and the smugglers she persuades the lieutenant to let Morgan go free.

The lieutenant resigns his commission and leaves for Australia. The soldiers are close on the track of the smugglers. A traitor in the smuggler band sends a false message to Margaret and signs the note "Morgan." In this note Margaret is told to come to a certain rendezvous. She steals a horse for this purpose, and is captured. Little seven-year-old Marjorie, in a thrilling horseback ride across country, carries a note to Morgan. Morgan goes to Margaret's assistance, rescues her, and she goes with Morgan to join the smugglers.

Among the picturesque scenes along the coasts, arrangements are made for the marriage of Morgan and Margaret. Before the priest can pronounce the final words the soldiers enter the smugglers' cave, and there is a pitched battle between the smugglers and the soldiers. Morgan is killed, Margaret is captured and sentenced to death. Sentence is afterward commuted to the convict colony in Australia.

Six months later we see Margaret in Australia as matron of the children's hospital. Here she meets the former applicant for her hand, the lieutenant, who is now an officer in the government service. Through his influence Margaret is pardoned, and finally becomes the lieutenant's bride.

APEX.

BROTHER AGAINST BROTHER (Four Parts).—Old Potowski, scion of a lineage of princes, lives with his family, and is a man who loves his country above everything and devotes himself with passionate fervor to his patriotic sentiments. He tries to implant in his sons the same views, and finds in his older son, Ivan, a true adherent love of his native country and hate against the neighboring country.

On the other side of the border between the two Slavonian countries lives the peasant, Sumi with his wife and daughter Katjuscha. The sons of Potowski, Ivan and Gregori, become acquainted with Katjuscha, who often comes across the border, and they are charmed with her. Katjuscha flirts with both of the brothers, but loves only the younger, Gregori, who is more to her liking. She is often frightened by the hot, ungovernable temperament of Ivan.

Gregori resolves to get the permission of his father for a union with Katjuscha, but receives to his and Sumi's great grief a rough refusal from Potowski. "Never," says the old man, "shall I give my consent to the marriage between my son and the daughter of the country which is our sworn irreconcilable enemy." But Gregori, who does not understand this passionate hate for the neighboring country, leaves his home and marries, with the permission of Sumi, Katjuscha, and establishes a new home there.

Two years are gone. The already long expected war between the two neighboring countries breaks out. Ivan gets ready for the war. But first he writes a letter to his brother Gregori, who lives in the enemy's country, to fight for "home and hearth," and to forget all grudges for the sake of the native country.

Old Potowski also cannot bear the thought that his son should in these times belong to a hostile country and even perhaps should enlist under its banners. He overcomes his pride, steals over the border and sees Gregori, who lives with Sumi. With eloquent words he describes to him the political situation and conjures the son to listen to the voice of the native country which calls her son to its defences. Gregori fights a hard and bitter battle with himself between love of his native land and love for his wife and family.

As he cannot bear the thought to fight against the friends and relations of his wife and his child, he remains, and refuses to follow his father. The old man gets incensed, raises his hand, and in greatest bitterness he curses his son who forsakes his native country when it calls. During a forced recruiting he narrowly escapes through the presence of mind of his wife.

The picture now leads us into the war where death rages over the battlefield and the thunder of cannon unite with the groaning and moaning of the wounded.

Gregori, who manages for a long time to remain neutral, cannot escape his fate. One fine day he is seized by a patrol and compelled to show the roads. It is just near the place where Ivan and his regiment are encamped.

The patrol is discovered and must flee head over heels. But Gregori is taken prisoner, led before the chief of the regiment, and without further ceremonies sentenced to death. Ivan comes out from the tent, and now the brothers face each other. Ivan shudders with what impends: To be forced to kill his own brother. But the martial laws are inexorable. He is commanded to execute the sentence of death, and he must obey. As the bullets of the soldiers kill his brother, he feels the curse of war. The thought of having murdered his brother lays heavily upon his conscience; repentence and horror take hold of him with terrible force, and in wild despair he throws himself over the dead. He sees and hears nothing that goes on around him; he notices neither that the enemy suddenly rushes up. His arms relax at once; his heart is pierced by a bullet, he falls backward beside his brother.

When Katjuscha finally arrives upon the battlefield, the fighting had ceased; she finds the two brothers lying side by side, and hears with terror the self-accusation which the dying Ivan stammers forth. Her grief and pain cannot be expressed. When the day dawns she is still lying upon the hill, where friend and enemy are lying in eternal rest.

WARNER'S FEATURES.

TWILIGHT (Three Parts).—Two rival railroad corporations determine to push their lines through the Canadian Northwest regardless of expense. Creel and Locke are the rivals in charge of the engineering work. Creel is in love with the daughter of the railroad president for whom he is working, but he is strongly moved by the beauty of the Canadian halfbreed girl who came to the camp to sell scarfs and mittens.

Locke, being an unprincipled man, detains Twilight in his camp against her consent. There is continual fighting between the men of the rival construction camp, and Locke vows to get Creel. Twilight waits for an opportunity to escape and makes her way to Creel's camp pursued by a gang of men with torches.

Alicia Jordan and her father visit Creel's camp. When Alicia discovers Twilight in Creel's tent, she immediately concludes he has been unfaithful to her and she greets him coldly. The halfbreed girl seeing how things are drifting, leaves Creel's camp and is recaptured by Locke's men. Twilight is just in time to overhear a plot to take Creel's life, and by risking her own life she saves him from a horrible death. Touched by the girl's loyalty and beauty, Creel forgets the call of civilization and takes the halfbreed girl to himself to live in peace in the great North Woods.

A DOUBLE REWARD.—Detective Strong reads that a reward of $5,000 is offered by a reputable firm for information leading to the arrest of a clever gang of counterfeiters, and he plans to win the reward. Unknown to him, he is aided by a poor flower girl, whose stepfather is a member of the gang. The little flower girl warns Strong of his peril, and gives him the instructions of how to find the coiners' den. Inside the den he is overpowered and left to a horrible death; but escapes with the aid of the flower girl.

After a series of exciting adventures, during which Strong is forced to deal brutally with the woman who directs the operations of the counterfeiters, he rounds up the gang and collects the reward of $5,000. In the meantime, the loyalty of the faithful flower girl and her many sacrifices to save him from bodily harm has completely endeared her to Strong. The closing scenes of this remarkable story show that Strong has arrived at a perfect understanding with the flower girl, and that he has won a reward greater than any measured in dollars and cents.

CHILDREN OF THE WEST.—Thieving Indians led by a wily old chief who cares not for treaties nor peace pacts, lure the settler and his daughter to the front of their home with trinkets while other Indians drive off the horses from the enclosure. They make good their escape, taking refuge in the hills. The settler sets out to organize a posse to recapture his stolen horses.

At the little village an election is in progress, and it has drawn most of the men from their homes for the day. The Indians, seeing their opportunity, plan a more daring raid and succeed in capturing the little daughter of one of the settlers. In the Indian's camp the child is befriended by the chief's daughter, who contrives to escape with the child. Mounting her pony she bravely rides to town to spread the alarm. Meantime, the Indians, bent upon revenge, have discovered that the chief's daughter is responsible for the child's escape. They surround the hut in which she has taken refuge and fire it. The child leads the settlers back to the scene of the raid just in time to save the life of her strange Indian girl playmate.

LICENSED FILM STORES

(Continued from page 1728)

GEORGE KLEINE.

HIS SYMPHONY (Colo—Special—Two Parts—June 30.—The beautiful young Princess Louise of Duxbaria, one of the principalities of southern Europe, loses her father and comes to live with her uncle, the ruler of the country, in his mediaeval castle of Sonnenschloss. There she meets Conrad Werner, a young composer, who has been the college chum of her cousin, Prince Henry, and a romantic love affair follows.

Soon afterward, however, Countess de Berne, a fascinating Parisienne, visits the Duxbarian court and Werner falls victim to her siren charms. He follows her to Paris, leaving Louise heartbroken, and it is not long until the engagement of the composer and the countess is announced. To please her uncle the princess consents to become the bride of Prince Henry and thus heiress to the throne, but at the state dinner given in connection with the betrothal ceremony, she collapses and the marriage is of necessity postponed.

Meanwhile Werner has been driven to desperation by the flirtations of the countess and one of them finally involves him in an affair of honor with one of the most expert swordsmen on the continent. He is seriously wounded, but with recovery from the wound comes also recovery from the effects of the countess' wiles. He then realizes that he loves only the pretty princess of the south. And he makes the journey back to his native land.

The old ruler of Duxbaria has died and Henry is now seated upon the throne. Realizing that his beautiful cousin can never bring herself to return his love, he releases her from her promise. One evening she is sitting at the piano thrumming the strains of Werner's most beautiful symphony. In the mirror opposite she suddenly sees his face, and turning about finds him kneeling at her feet. And a moment later she is in his arms.

A MIDNIGHT GUEST (Cines—Special—Two parts —June 23).—George Lemont, recently divorced, has been given the custody of his little son and, thoroughly embittered against his former wife, refuses to allow her even to see the boy. Desperate, the woman at last decides upon a daring stroke and employs "Gentleman Joe," a notorious character of the underworld, to gain possession of her child for her.

By means of a "fake" rescue, Joe gains the confidence of Lemont and the entree to his home. The abduction of the little fellow is, therefore, an easy matter, but once the lad is in his hands, Joe plans to extort from either the father or mother a larger sum than the latter has paid him. He notifies her that "the price has gone up."

Lemont employs a corps of shrewd detectives who seek the child without success, and at last the mother, her heart torn with grief and remorse, determines to find her son herself. Disguised, she visits the cheap cabarets and dance halls frequented by Joe and finally learns that the boy is held prisoner at the "Half Moon" cafe. She notifies the police, fearing Joe, suspecting her as a spy, follows.

Satisfying himself that she has learned his secret and notified the authorities, he hurries back to the "Half Moon" and succeeds in getting away with the lad just before the raiders arrive. An exciting chase follows. Joe, seeing that he is about to be taken, throws the boy from a high bridge into the river below just before a shot from a policeman's revolver ends the chase. The child is rescued, and in their joy over his safety the father and mother are reunited.

FLA. GA. ALA. MISS. LA.
APEX FEATURE SERVICE
315 RHODES BUILDING
ATLANTA, GA.
TENN. N. C. S. C. VA.

INTERNATIONAL 500-MILE AUTO RACE

SOLD

STATE RIGHTS TO MANY STATES, BUT HAVE SOME GOOD TERRITORY STILL OPEN.

If you don't want your state, write for first run in your city.

INDIANAPOLIS-CALCIUM LIGHT CO.
114-116 SO. CAPITOL AVENUE, INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

THE CENTAUR FILM COMPANY

The Oldest Independent Film Manufacturer

Has the largest commercial plant in America, the most up-to-date equipment, and an organization second to none.

Printing and developing in any quantity. Quality guaranteed. Prices interesting.

CENTAUR FILM CO.

Bayonne, N. J.

E. M. WILBAND, President — H. T. OLIVER, Vice-Pres. and Gen'l Mgr. — J. F. CROWE, Treasurer — T. J. PAYNE, Secretary

BIOSCOPE

Wish to Announce That They Have Some Open Territory on

"EVANGELINE"

LONGFELLOW'S IMMORTAL POEM

5 Reels

Also to be Released May 15th and Exhibited at Your Request on That Date

"MARINER'S COMPASS"

3 Part Powerful Sea-Coast Drama

"IN THE ENEMY'S POWER"

3 Part Powerful Mexican War Drama

To be Released June 1st

"SAVED FROM HIMSELF"

A Dramatic Episode of the Northwest in 3 Parts

We Print All American Prints in New York. For Immediate Delivery

THE CANADIAN BIOSCOPE CO., Limited, HALIFAX, N. S.

INDEX

TO CONTENTS.

"ACROSS THE ATLANTIC" (Imp).....1668
ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS.....1679
ADLER, JACOB P.....1706
"ACTRESS" REDEMPTION, THE" (Features Ideal).....1704

BIG DOINGS PROMISED AT DAYTON.....1699
BRISCOE, MISS LOTTIE.....1671
BRITISH NOTES.....1677

CALENDAR OF LICENSED RELEASES.....1718
CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES...1720
CHICAGO LETTER.....1670
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Licensed).....1688
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Independent)...1689
CONVENTION AND EXPOSITION OF THE INTERNATIONAL ASSOCIATION.....1662

DOINGS AT LOS ANGELES.....1676

EXPOSITION ATTRACTS CROWDS.....1695
EXHIBITORS' NEWS.....1711
"FABLE OF THE BRASH DRUMMER AND THE NECTARINE" (Essanay).....1666
FACTS AND COMMENTS.....1639
FEATURE FILM STORIES.....1742
FORSBERG, EDWIN.....1677

GISH, LILLIAN.....1702

HACKETT'S STRONG ARGUMENT FOR PICTURES.....1701
HER INFINITE VARIETY.....1660
HAS CAPITALIZED HIS WASTE MATERIAL.1701

INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES.....1730
INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES.....1752
INQUIRIES.....1682

"JUNGLE, THE" (All Star).....1675

"KANGAROO, THE" (World Film Corp.).....1669

"LEAVES OF MEMORY" (Eclectic).....1665
LICENSED FILM STORIES.....1722
LICENSED RELEASE DATES.....1754
"LION'S BRIDE, THE" (Eclectic).....1670
LICHTMAN, AL, LEAVES FAMOUS PLAYERS.1704
"LUNATICS, THE" (Leading Players).....1703

MANUFACTURERS' ADVANCE NOTES.....1705
"MICHAEL STROGOFF" (Popular Plays and Players).....1669
"MOLLY, THE DRUMMER BOY" (Edison)..1674
MOVING PICTURE EDUCATOR.....1672

NEW EXHIBITOR, THE.....1661
NEW YORK CONVENTION PEACEFUL.....1699
NOTES OF THE TRADE.....1707

OBSERVATIONS BY MAN ABOUT TOWN....168
"ONE OF OUR GIRLS" (Famous Players)...1667

PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT, THE.....1681
PIERROT, THE PRODIGAL.....1703
POOR PICTURE LEADERS A CRIME.....1710
PROJECTION DEPARTMENT.....1683

SHUBERTS AND WORLD FILM IN BIG DEAL.....1700
"STAIN, THE" (Eclectic).....1668
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Licensed).....1722
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Independent)....1730
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Features).....1742

"VIOLIN OF M'SIEUR, THE" (Vitagraph)..1673

"WRATH OF THE GODS, THE" (N. Y. M. P. Co.).....1665

TO ADVERTISERS.

CARBON IMPORTERS.
KIEWERT, CHARLES L.....1756
REISINGER, HUGO.....1745

ELECTRICAL & MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT.
AMUSEMENT SALES CO.....1745
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO.....1730
BELL & HOWELL.....1760
CALEHUFF SUPPLY CO.....1751
DETROIT ENGINE WORKS.....1759
FOOS GAS ENGINE CO.....1760
FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC CO.....1759
HALLBERG, J. H.....1724
HOKE, GEORGE M., SUPPLY CO.....1734
KIMBLE ELECTRIC CO.....1757
MOORE-HUBBLE CO.....1760
PICTURE THEATER EQUIPMENT CO.....1751
SMITH, L. C. & CO.....1730
SPRAGUE ELECTRIC WORKS.....1757
STRELINGER, CHARLES A. & CO.....1761
TYPHOON FAN CO.....1759
WESTINGHOUSE ELECTRIC CO.....1734

MISCELLANEOUS FEATURE FILMS
ALL STAR FEATURE CORPORATION.....1641
APEX FILM CO.....1741
ARCTIC FILM CO.....1725
BLACHE FEATURES.....1738-39
BLINKHORN, ALBERT.....1747
CANADIAN BIOSCOPE CO.....1749
CELEBRATED PLAYERS' FILM CO.....1731-1758
CHICAGO FEATURE FILM CO.....1730
CHILD PLAYERS OF AMERICA.....1735
CONTINENTAL FEATURE FILM CO.....1652
ECLECTIC FILM CO.....Insert
ECLIPSE-URBAN.....1647
EXCELSIOR FEATURE FILM CO.....1747
FAMOUS PLAYERS' FILM CO.....1634-35
FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO.....1740
GENERAL FEATURE FILM CO.....1736
GREAT PLAYER'S FILM CO.....1726
HEPWORTH-AMERICAN CO.....1747
LAMBS' ALL STAR GAMBOL.....1636
LASKY, JESSE L. FEATURE PLAY CO.....1645
LEADING PLAYERS' FILM CO.....1649
MEXICAN WAR FEATURE FILM CO.....1648
OZ MANUFACTURING CO.....1646
POPULAR PLAYS & PLAYERS', INC.....1640
SAWYER, A. H., INC.....1637-38-39
SUPERIOR FILM MANUFACTURING CO.....1729
UNIVERSITY FILM CO.....1737
WARNER'S FEATURES, INC.....1727
WORLD FILM CORPORATION.....1650-51

FILM BROKERS.
WESTERN FILM BROKERS.....1734

FILM EXCHANGES.
APEX FEATURE SERVICE.....1748
BRADENBURGH, GEORGE W.....1759
COSMOS FEATURE FILM CO.....1760
ECONOMY FILM CO.....1736
FULTON, E. E.....1759
GREATER NEW YORK FILM RENTAL CO.....1754
LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE.....1738
NORTHERN FEATURE FILM EXCHANGE.....1759
STANDARD FILM CO.....1730

FIREPROOF APPARATUS.
JOHNS-MANVILLE, H. W., CO.....1757

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING CO.....1753
GAUMONT CO.....1632
MAJESTIC MOTION PICTURE CO.....1762
MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION.....1635
NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CORP.....1642-43
THANHOUSER FILM CORPORATION.....1626
UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING CO.1628-29

LENS MANUFACTURERS.
BAUSCH & LOMB OPTICAL CO.....1755

LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS.
BIOGRAPH COMPANY.....1721
EDISON, THOMAS A.....1635
ESSANAY FILM MANUFACTURING CO.....1627
KALEM CO.....1654-58
KLEINE, GEORGE.....1633
LUBIN FILM MANUFACTURING CO.....1656
MELIES, GASTON, FILM CO.....1644
PATHE FRERES.....1630-31
SELIG POLYSCOPE CO.....1743
VITAGRAPH CO. OF AMERICA.....1657

MISCELLANEOUS.
BARIE, WILLIAM, JR.....1738
BOTANICAL DECORATING CO.....1751
CENTAUR FILM CO.....1749
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS.....1743
CORCORAN, A. J.....1736
EASTMAN KODAK CO.....1755
FEALY, MAUDE.....1742
FIFTY-FIFTY CO.....1759-1761-1734
GENERAL SPECIALTY CO.....1759
GRAVER, G.....1734
GRAU, ROBERT.....1735
GUNBY BROTHERS.....1738
HOUGH EMERSON.....1758
INDIANAPOLIS CALCIUM LIGHT CO.....1749
INDUSTRIAL MOVING PICTURE CO.....1760
KRAUS MANUFACTURING CO.....1755
NATIONAL MOVING PICTURE CO.....1761
NATIONAL TICKET CO.....1752
NATIOAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.....1751
RAW FILM SUPPLY CO.....1728
RUSSELL, FRANK E.....1734
SMALLWOOD FILM CORPORATION.....1761
STANDARD MOTION PICTURE CO.....1761
STERLING CAMERA CO.....1728
TAKITO OGAWA CO.....1736
THEATER BROKERAGE EXCHANGE.....1761
TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO.....1760

MOTION PICTURE CAMERA MANUFACTURERS.
SCHNEIDER, EBERHARD.....1761

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
AMERICAN PHOTOPLAYER & SALES CO....1730
DEAGAN, J. C.....1761
HUME, T. D.....1730
SEEBURG, J. P., PIANO CO.....1757
SINN, CLARENCE.....1761

OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN SEATING CO.....1761
ANDREWS, A. H., CO.....1761
HARDESTY MANUFACTURING CO.....1761
STEEL FURNITURE CO.....1761
WISCONSIN SEATING CO.....1761

POSTERS AND FRAMES.
AMERICAN SLIDE AND POSTER CO.....1718
NEWMAN MANUFACTURING CO.....1736
THEATER SPECIALTY CO.....1730

PROJECTION MACHINE MANUFACTURERS.
ENTERPRISE OPT. MFG. CO.....1710
PHANTOSCOPE MANUFACTURING CO.....1756
POWERS, NICHOLAS.....1764
PRECISION MACHINE CO.....1723
VICTOR ANIMATOGRAPH CO.....1733

PROJECTION SCREEN MANUFACTURERS.
ATSCO, INC.....1709
DAY & NIGHT SCREEN CO.....1757
GENTER, J. H., CO.....1760

SONG AND ADVERTISING SLIDES.
ERKER BROTHERS.....1759
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.....1760
VITASLIDE CO.....1757

THEATRICAL ARCHITECTS.
DECORATORS' SUPPLY CO.....1759

COOLING VENTILATION HEATING

"TYPHOON BLOW-IN SYSTEM" has revolutionized the ventilating problem. You get in front of a desk fan to keep cool, not in back. Apply this common sense and blow the air in.

Don't waste money experimenting with exhaust fans.

The TYPHOON MULTIBLADE BLOWER will force air right through ordinary exhaust fans. Reversed, the air can be exhausted as well.

Our Catalogue W tells how to keep cool in summer and warm in winter.

TYPHOON FAN CO. NEW YORK CITY 1544 BROADWAY

Before You Order Anything

Distributors for the Power's Simplex Motiograph and Edison Machines

in the Motion Picture Line, call, write or wire, and let us figure on your requirements. We carry a Complete Line of Theatre Supplies and can make prompt shipments.

LAST:—Prices are reasonable, not being a specialty shop.

We Have IT
When You Want IT

We Equip Motion Picture Theatres Completely

PICTURE THEATRE EQUIPMENT CO.

21 East 14th Street - - - NEW YORK CITY

The Largest Motion Picture Supply House in America

Money! Money!! Money!!!

an Attractive Comedy—also

"Mother and Son"

(A Dramatic Playlet Now Booking)

See LOUISE M. MARION'S

New Patriotic and Other Novelties With Beautiful Illustrations Which Crowd the Houses.

GREAT DRAWING CARD FOR THEATRES JUST OPENING

(Miss) LOUISE M. MARION, 466 W. 23d St., N.Y.

CALEHUFF SUPPLY COMPANY

(INCORPORATED)

Jobbers for Powers, Edison, Motiograph and Simplex

LARGEST LEADING SUPPLY HOUSE IN AMERICA

Mercury Arc Rectifier	Wagner Converters
Flame Arc Lamps	Brass and Wood Frames
Automatic Ticket Registers	Ticket Choppers
Exit Signs	Abestos State Booths
Slide Ink	Ft. Wayne Compensarcs
Carrying Cases	Fire Extinguishers
Tickets	Fire Boxes
Condensers	Carbons
Pianos	Cement
Chairs	Trap Drum Effects

MIRROR SCREENS

PROMPT SHIPMENTS BACKED BY A SOLID GUARANTEE

A Few Slightly Used Machines

N. W. corner 13th and Race Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

BEAUTIFY YOUR THEATER WITH FLORAL DECORATIONS

It gives artistic Atmosphere. It produces Charm. It gives an appearance of Culture—enhances Beauty—delights your Patrons—produces Tone and Class. It is a profitable-patronage building Investment. We have every imaginable floral effect and botanical production of America and Europe.

Beautiful Colored Catalogue Mailed Free to You

We Specialize on Floral Parades and Summer Specialties

BOTANICAL DECORATING CO.

504 South Fifth Avenue CHICAGO

READ THIS: We quote absolutely the lowest prices ever offered on reliable goods.

EYE COMFORT Lighting System

So necessary to the success of every Motion Picture Theatre that we engineer 60 Theatres a month. This is a free service to Motion Picture Theatre Managers.

Distance Screen to Rear of Auditorium.....
Ceiling Height.....
Width of House.....
Height Under Balcony.....
Distance Rear Auditorium to Front of Balcony.....
Name .....

NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.

CHICAGO—229 W. Jackson Blvd. NEW YORK—6 E. 39th St.

INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES

AMERICAN.

June 8—The Oath of Fierre (2 parts—Dr.)....
June 10—Sparrow of the Circus (Drama).....
June 15—Jim (2 parts—Drama).....
June 17—The Unmasking (Drama) .....
June 22—The Painted Lady's Child (Two parts—Drama) .....
June 24—Blue Knot, King of Polo (Drama)..
June 29—The Little House in the Valley (Two parts—Drama) .....
July 1—Mother Love (Drama).....
July 3—Mein Lieber Katrina Catches a Convict (Comedy) .....

BEAUTY.

June 2—Drifting Hearts (Drama).....
June 9—Nancy's Husband (Drama) .....
June 16—The Dream Ship (Drama).....
June 23—The Tale of the Tailor (Drama)....

"101" BISON.

June 13—The Isle of Abandoned Hope (2 parts—Drama) .....
June 20—The Forbidden Room (Three parts—Drama) .....
June 27—The Old Cobbler (Two parts—Western Drama) .....

BRONCHO.

June 10—A Tragedy of the Orient (Two parts—Drama) .....
June 17—The Hour of Reckoning (Two parts—Drama) .....
June 24—Desert Thieves (Two parts—Drama)..

CRYSTAL.

June 7—(No Release This Day).....
June 9—His Lucky Day (Comedy).....
June 16—Boxes and Boxers (Comedy).....
—Foolish Lovers (Comedy).....
June 23—In Wrong (Comedy).....

DOMINO.

June 4—The Latent Spark (2 parts—Drama)..
June 11—A Relic of Old Japan (Two parts—Dr.)
June 18—In the Southern Hills (Two parts—Drama) .....
June 25—A Frontier Mother (Two parts—Dr.)..

ECLAIR.

June 10—Wife (2 parts—Drama).....
June 14—Aunty's Money Bag (Comedy-Drama)..
June 17—The Mask of Affliction (Two parts—Western—Drama) .....
June 21—The Blunderer's Mark (Western—Dr.)
June 24—Dead Men's Tales (Three parts—Western—Drama) .....
June 28—Prince Willy (Comedy).....
—Nutty and His Father (Comedy).....

FRONTIER.

May 30—Brother for Brother (Drama).....
June 4—The Girl Next Door (Drama).....
June 14—His Dress Rehearsal (Drama) .....
June 21—The Gun Men of Plumas (Dr.).....
June 28—On the Verge (Drama).....

GOLD SEAL.

June 9—Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery—(Series No. 9—Two parts—Drama)..
June 16—Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery (Series No. 10—Two parts—Drama)
June 23—Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery (Series No. 11—Two parts—Drama)

IMP.

June 15—The Baited Trap (Two parts—Dr.)..
June 18—The Fatal Step (Drama).....
June 22—Papa's Darling (Comedy).....
June 25—The Skull (Two parts—Drama).....

JOKER.

June 10—Mike Searches For His Long Lost Brother (Comedy) .....
June 13—The Cure (Comedy).....
June 17—The Fatal Letter (Comedy).....
June 20—A Quiet Day at Murphy's (Comedy)..
June 24—Willy Walrus, Detective.....
June 27—Love and Electricity (Comedy).....

KAY-BEE.

May 29—The Embezzler (Two parts—Drama).
June 5—Tennessee (2 parts—Drama).....
June 12—From Out the Dregs (Two parts—Dr.)
June 19—The Voice at the Phone (Part 1—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 26—The Voice at the Telephone (Part 2—Two parts) .....

KOMIC.

May 31—An Exciting Courtship (Comedy)....
June 7—The Last Drink of Whiskey (Com.)..
June 14—Hubby to the Rescue (Comedy).....
June 21—The Deceiver (Comedy).....
June 28—The Wild Girl (Comedy).....

KEYSTONE.

May 21—When Ruben Fooled the Bandits (Comedy) .....
May 28—Our Large Birds (Educational).....
—Acres of Alfalfa (Educational).....
May 25—Fatal Flirtation (Comedy).....
May 28—The Alarm (2 parts—Comedy).....
May 30—(No Release This Day).....
June 1—The Fatal Mallet (Comedy).....

LUX.

May 1—Only an Iceman (Comedy).....
May 8—Jim's Mother-in-law (Comedy).....
—In Good Company (Comedy).....
May 15—The Girl in the Auto (Comedy).....
May 22—Just Neighbors (Comedy).....
May 29—Sweethearts (Comedy).....
—Venice (Scenic).....
June 5—In Love with a Suffragette (Comedy).
June 12—A Family Feud (Comedy).....
—View of the Alps (Scenic).....
June 19—The Newlyweds (Comedy).....
June 26—A Day's Outing (Comedy).....
—The Telephone Operator (Comedy).....

MAJESTIC.

June 14—The Rebellion of Kitty Bell (Two parts—Drama) .....
June 16—Their First Acquaintance (Dr.).....
June 21—The Severed Thong (Two parts—Dr.)
June 23—The Burden (Drama).....
June 26—The Idiot (Drama).....
June 28—The Tavern of Tragedy (Two parts—Drama) .....

NESTOR.

June 10—A Wife On a Wager (Drama).....
June 12—Sophie of the Films (Comedy Series No. 2) .....
June 17—'Cross the Mexican Line (West.—Dr.)
June 19—Sophie of the Films (Series No. 3—Comedy) .....
June 24—The Den of Thieves (Drama).....
June 26—Sophie of the Films (Series No. 4—Comedy) .....

POWERS.

June 5—Heart Strings (Drama).....
June 8—The Undertow (Drama).....
June 12—The Masked Rider (Drama).....
June 19—The Brand of Cain (Drama).....
June 26—The Love Victorious (Two parts—Dr.)

PRINCESS.

June 5—His Enemy (Drama).....
June 12—The Toy Shop (Drama).....
June 19—The Little Senorita (Drama).....
June 26—Professor Smith (Comedy).....

RELIANCE.

June 12—Dan Morgan's Way (Drama).....
June 13—The Horse Wrangler (Two parts—Drama) .....
June 15—Our Mutual Girl, No. 22.....
June 17—The Peach Brand (Dr.).....
June 20—The Stolen Code (Two parts—Drama).
June 22—Our Mutual Girl, No. 23 (News)....
June 24—Izzy's Night Out (Drama).....
June 27—The Broken Barrier (Two parts—Dr.)

REX.

June 11—The Awakening (Drama).....
June 14—The Pursuit of Hate (Drama).....
June 18—The Law Unto Himself (Two parts—Drama) .....
June 21—The Boob Detective (Comedy).....
June 25—The Woman in Black (Drama).....
June 28—Lost By a Hair (Comedy).....

ROYAL.

June 6—Tango Troubles (Comedy).....
June 13—Handle with Care (Comedy).....
June 19—Such a Business (Comedy).....
—The Busy Man (Comedy).....
June 27—A Hasty Exit (Comedy).....

STERLING.

June 15—Kids (Comedy).....
June 18—A Jealous Husband (Comedy).....
June 22—The Flirt (Comedy).....
June 25—The Crash (Comedy).....

THANHOUSER.

June 7—The Scrumb Lady (Comedy).....
June 9—Rivalry (Two parts—Drama).....
June 14—The Girl Across the Hall (Drama)...
June 16—Remorse (Two parts—Dr.).....
June 19—The Man Without Fear (Dr.).....
June 21—The Outlaw's Nemesis (Com.-Dr.).....
June 23—For Her Child (Two parts—Drama)..
June 28—The Widow's Mite (Comedy).....

UNIVERSAL IKE.

June 9—Universal Ike Is Kept From Being An Actor (Comedy) .....
June 16—Universal Ike, Jr., Bearly Won Her (Comedy) .....
June 23—Universal Ike, Jr., in a Case On the Doctor (Comedy) .....

VICTOR.

June 8—Uncle Sam In Mexico (Top. and Edu.)
June 12—Enmeshed By Fate (2 parts—Drama)..
June 15—The Sandhill Lovers (Western—Dr.)..
June 19—A Singular Cynic (Two parts—Com.)
June 22—The Silent Witness (Two parts—Dr.)
June 26—The Slavey's Romance (Drama).....

FEATURES.

HEPWORTH AMERICAN FILM CORPORATION.

May 7—The Mistress of the Air (Deer Brand) (3 parts) .....
May 11—The Murdoch Trial (Turner Films, Ltd.) (4 parts) .....
—The Heart of Midlothian (Hepworth's) (5 parts) .....
May 18—The Capture of a Sea Elephant and Hunting Wild Game in the South Pacific Islands (Blinkhorn's Natural History Travels) (5 parts).....

UNIVERSAL SPECIAL FEATURES.

Jan.—Absinthe (4 parts—Drama).....
Feb. —Merchant of Venice (4 parts—Drama)....
March —Won in the Clouds—(3 parts—Drama).
March —Washington at Valley Forge (4 parts—Drama) .....
April —The Spy (4 parts—Drama).....
April—Samson (6 parts—Drama).....

CRITERION FEATURES.

Feb. 11—The Trap (3 parts—Drama).....
Feb. 28—The Desert's Sting (3 parts—Drama).

KENNEDY FEATURES, INC.

Jan. 21—The Bride of Lammermoor (3 parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 4—Mary Magdalene (3 parts—Drama)...
Feb. 18—Jess (4 parts—Drama).....
March 4—Elsie Venner (3 parts—Drama).....
March 18—Charlotte Corday (4 parts—Drama).

ROLL TICKETS

PRICES

Five Thousand - -	$1.25
Ten Thousand - -	$2.50
Twenty Thousand - -	$4.50
Twenty-five Thousand -	$5.50
Fifty Thousand - -	$6.50
One Hundred Thousand -	$8.00

Your own special Ticket, any printing, any colors, accurately numbered; every roll guaranteed. Coupon Tickets for Prize Drawings, 5,000, $2.50. Stock Tickets, 6c per 1,000. Prompt shipments. Cash with the order. Get the samples. Send diagram for Reserved Seat Coupon Tickets, serial or dated.

NATIONAL TICKET CO.
SHAMOKIN, PA.

SEE AMERICANS FIRST

FLYING "A" FEATURE FILMS

"THE PAINTED LADY'S CHILD"

A Tense Two Part Drama Depicting Agonies of a Broken Heart.
Featuring WM. GARWOOD and VIVIAN RICH.
Under direction of Sydney Ayres.

One, Three and Six Sheet Lithographs, Photos, Slides and Heralds

Release Monday, June 22nd, 1914

"AMERICAN BEAUTY"

"THE TALE OF A TAILOR"

A most ludicrous chronicle of a jealous husband's trials and tribulations.

FEATURING

MARGARITA FISCHER and HARRY POLLARD

Release Tuesday, June 23rd, 1914

"BLUE KNOT, KING OF POLO"

A Topical Headliner. Featuring ED COXEN and WINIFRED GREENWOOD, also showing Elmer Bosoeke and his famous polo pony under direction of Thos. Ricketts.

Release Wednesday, June 24th, 1914

AMERICAN FILM MFG. CO.

CHICAGO

LICENSED RELEASE DATES

RELEASE DAYS.

Monday—Biograph, Edison, Kalem, Pathe, Selig, Vitagraph.

Tuesday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Geo. Kleine, Pathe, Lubin, Melies, Selig, Vitagraph.

Wednesday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Melies, Selig, Pathe, Vitagraph.

Thursday—Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Melies, Selig, Vitagraph.

Friday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Selig, Lubin, Vitagraph.

Saturday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

BIOGRAPH.

June 4—The Idiot (Drama).....
June 6—Captain Kidd, the Bold (Comedy).....
June 6—In the Nick of Time (Comedy).....
June 8—The Ethics of the Profession (Drama)
June 11—A Jonah (Drama).....
June 13—The Opal's Curse (Drama).....
June 15—The Prize Employer (Comedy).....
—Brown's Bachelor Supper (Comedy)..
June 18—Her Neighbors Next Door (Drama)..
June 20—By the Old Dead Tree (Drama).....

EDISON.

June 9—The Voice of Silence (Drama).....
June 10—Andy Goes a-Pirating—Seventh of the Andy Series (Comedy) .....
June 12—A Warning From the Past (Special—2 parts—Drama).....
June 13—A Terror of the Night—Ninth of the Active Life of Dolly of the Dailies series (Drama) .....
June 15—The Adventure of the Missing Legacy (Sixth of Octavius Amateur Detective series—Comedy) .....
June 16—The Gap (Sixth of "The Man Who Disappeared" series—Drama) .....
June 17—A Modern Samson (Comedy).....
—On the Steps (Comedy).....
June 19—The Hand of Horror (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 20—In the Days of Slavery (Drama).....
June 22—The Basket Habit (Comedy).....
June 23—A Foolish Agreement (Drama).....
June 24—The Mysterious Package (Comedy)..
—On the Ice (a demonstration of fancy skating at Wengen, Switzerland—Sports) .....
June 26—The Man in the Street (Special—Three parts—Drama) .....
June 27—Dolly Plays Detective (Tenth of the Dolly of the Dailies—Drama).....

ESSANAY.

June 6—Broncho Billy's Duty (Drama).....
June 9—Jane (Comedy) .....
June 10—This Is the Life (Comedy).....
June 11—The Snakeville Volunteer (Comedy)...
June 12—The Song in the Dark (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
June 16—The Little "He and She" (Com.-Dr.)
June 17—The Fable of the Brash Drummer and the Nectarine (Comedy).....
June 18—The Wooing of Sophie (Western Com.)
June 19—Finger Prints (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 20—Broncho Billy—Outlaw (Drama).....
June 23—The Countess (Drama).....
June 24—The Epidemic (Comedy).....
June 25—Sophie Finds a Hero (Comedy) ..
June 26—The Chasm (Special—Two parts—Dr.)
June 27—Broncho Billy's Jealousy (Drama)..

KALEM.

June 6—The Hour of Danger (Drama).....
June 8—Nina o the Theater—First of the Alice Joyce Series (Spec.—2 parts—Dr.).
June 10—The Quicksands (Spec.—2 parts—Dr.)
June 12—The Box Car Bride (Comedy).....
June 13—The Squaw's Revenge (Drama).....
June 15—Mrs. Peyton's Pearls (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 16—The Missing Jewels (Drama).....
June 17—Home Run Baker's Double (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 19—The Wages of Sin (Comedy).....
—Military Tattoo at Aldershot, England (Topical) .....
June 20—Brought to Justice (Drama).....
June 22—The Show Girl's Glove (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
June 23—The Conductor's Courtship (Comedy-Drama) .....
June 24—Through the Flames (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 26—An Elopement in Rome (Comedy).....
—Labor Demonstration in Hyde Park, London (Topical) .....
June 27—The Gypsy Gambler (Drama).....

GEORGE KLEINE.

May 12—The Toreador's Romance (Cines—Special—2 parts—Drama).....?
May 19—Mystery of the Fast Mail (Special—Eclipse—2 parts—Drama) .....
May 26—The Cigarette Maker of Seville (Cines Spec.—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 2—Trapped By Wireless (Eclipse—Two parts—Special—Drama) .....
June 9—The Trap-Door Clue (Celio—Special—2 parts—Drama).....
June 16—One Woman's Way (Cines—Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
June 23—A Midnight Guest (Cines Special—Two parts—Drama) .....

LUBIN.

June 3—Kiss Me Good Night (Special—2 parts Comedy) .....
June 4—A Girl of the Cafs (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
June 5—Blotted Out (Drama).....
June 6—Fire! Fire! (Comedy).....
—The Female Cop (Comedy).....
June 9—The Pie Eaters (Comedy).....
June 9—He Wore a Wig (Comedy).....
June 10—The Changeling (Spec.—2 parts—Dr.).
June 11—The Lure of the Pit (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
June 12—Claim Number Three (Drama).....
June 13—He Changed His Mind (Comedy).....
June 13—A Bargain Automobile (Comedy).....
June 16—The Shell Comb Industry (Ind.).....
—Good Cider (Comedy).....
June 17—The Struggle Everlasting (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 18—The House of Darkness (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 19—The Parent Strain (Drama).....
June 20—Getting Solid With Pa (Comedy)...
—Long May It Wave (Comedy).....
June 23—Mice Nursery (Comedy).....
—Brown's Big Butler (Comedy).....
June 24—The Greater Treasure (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 25—The Candidate for Mayor (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 26—A Practical Demonstration (Drama)..
June 27—Who's Boss (Comedy).....
—His Sudden Recovery (Comedy).....

MELIES.

June 9—By Taxi to Fortune (Comedy).....
—Midday or Midnight? (Comedy).....
June 10—The Love Story of Her Youth (Drama)
June 11—His Uncle's Deception (Comedy) .....
—Quits (Special—Two parts—Drama)..
June 13—The Mummy (Special—Two parts—Dr.)
June 16—On the Beach (Comedy).....
June 17—At the Mercy of the Waves (Drama).
June 18—Hidden Death (Spec.—Two parts—Dr.)
His Dream Fulfilled (Comedy).....
—Everybody's Doing It (Comedy).....

PATHE.

June 1—The Joking Bricklayers (Comedy)....
—Monaco (Architecture).....
—When Dreams Come True (Drama)...
June 2—Dogs of War (Drama).....
June 3—Pathe's Weekly, No. 39 (News).....
June 6—The Lost Heir (Special—2 parts—Dr.)
June 8—Woof! Watch Whiffles (Comedy)...
—Picturesque Scandinavia (Travel)....
June 9—The Poison of Serpents (Educa.)....
—River Travel in Indo-China (Travel)..
June 10—Pathe's Weekly, No. 40—1914 (News)
June 15—Whiffles, the Spotter (Comedy).....
—Brittany, France (Travel).....
June 16—Simple Experiments in Electricity (Educational) .....
—Through the Bosphorus, Turkey (Travel)
June 17—Pathe's Weekly, No. 41—1914 (News)
June 22—Max the Magician (Comedy).....
Historic St. Cloud (Educational)...
June 23—Glacier National Park in Winter (Sc.)
June 27—The Mormot (Educational).....
June 24—Pathe's Weekly, No. 42—1914 (News)
June 29—Visit to Paris (Travel).....
—Rapids and Water Falls of New Zealand (Scenic) .....
June 30—A French Village in Senegal, West Africa (Scenic) .....
—Venomous Serpents (Educational).....
July 1—Pathe's Weekly, No. 43—1914 (News)

SELIG.

May 29—Second Childhood (Comedy).....
May 30—The Girl Behind the Barrier.....
June 1—The Adventures of Kathlyn—No. 12
—The King's Will (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 1—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 27 (News) .....
June 2—The Sheep Runners (Drama).....
June 3—The Runnmage Sale (Drama).....
June 4—The Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. No. 28 (News).....
June 5—Willie's Haircut (Comedy).....
—His First Ride (Comedy).....
June 6—Rose o' My Heart (Drama).....
June 8—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 29..
June 8—Judge Dunn's Decision (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
June 9—Eugenics At Bar "U" Ranch (Com.).
June 10—The Doctor's Mistake (Drama).....
June 11—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 30..
June 12—Bombarded (Comedy) .....
June 12—Doe Yak's Zoo (Picture Cartoon).....
June 13—When the Night Call Came (Drama)..
June 15—The Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 13—
The Court of Death (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 15—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 31 (News) .....
June 16—How Lone Wolf Died (Drama).....
June 17—Castles in the Air (Drama).....
June 18—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 32 (News) .....
June 19—Peter's Relations (Comedy).....
—Chicken (Comedy) .....
June 20—The Girl at His Side (Drama).....
June 22—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 33 (News) .....
June 22—Me An' Bill (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 23—The Servant Question Out West (Com.)
—Doe Yak and the Limited Train (Com.)
June 24—Somebody's Sister (Drama).....
June 25—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 34 (News) .....
June 26—The Captain's Chair (Drama).....
June 27—The Right to Happiness (Drama).....

VITAGRAPH.

May 27—The Boys of the I. O. U. (Com.-Dr.).
May 28—Hunger Knows No Law (Drama)....
May 29—Mr. Bunnyhug Buys a Hat For His Bride (Comedy) .....
May 30—The Mystery of the Hidden House (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 1—Miss Raffles (Comedy-Drama).....
June 2—The Last Will (Special—2 parts—Dr.)
June 3—Wanted, a House (Comedy).....
June 4—A False Move (Comedy).....
June 5—The Maid from Sweden (Comedy)....
June 6—Too Many Husbands (Special—2 parts Comedy) .....
June 8—Eve's Daughter (Drama).....
June 9—The Right of Way (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
June 10—The Widow of Red Rock (Comedy)....
June 11—The Power to Forgive (Drama).....
June 12—The Accomplished Mrs. Thompson (Comedy) .....
June 13—Our Fairy Play (Spec.—2 parts—Com.)
June 15—The Crime of Cain (Drama).....
June 16—A Wayward Daughter (Special—Two parts—Comedy-Drama) .....
June 17—The Ladies' War (Comedy).....
June 18—Only a Sister (Drama).....
June 19—The Persistent Mr. Prince (Comedy).
June 20—Father's Flirtation (Special—Two parts—Comedy) .....
June 22—Maria's Sacrifice (Drama).....
June 23—The Passing of Diana (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 24—The "Bear" Facts (Comedy).....
June 25—Happy-Go-Lucky (Comedy-Drama)....
June 26—The Old Maid's Baby (Comedy).....
June 27—His Wife and His Work (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....

Greater New York Film Rental Company
All Specials Supplied. Main Office: 126-132 West 46th Street, Depot: 116-118 East 14th Street, New York
Licensed Film Supplied to Licensed Exhibitors Write or Call for Particulars

THE TITLES OF YOUR FILMS

may attract the passer-by, but the week-in and week-out patron is the result of perfectly projected pictures.

Bausch and Lomb
Projection Lenses

insure the best pictures, clear, sharp, and accurate —the kind that keep the crowds coming your way.

Exacting operators all over the country make Bausch & Lomb objectives and condensers their choice. Equip your machine with these lenses and be repaid by increased profits.

The Edison and Nicholas Power Machines are regularly equipped with our lenses.

Write for our free booklet. It is of interest and value to owners and operators.

Bausch & Lomb Optical Co.
566 ST. PAUL STREET ROCHESTER, N. Y.

OUR NEW CATALOGUE

contains pictures and descriptions of sixteen different specialties that will benefit THE BOX OFFICE. It will be greatly to the advantage of every house manager to have one of these books at his elbow.

Our Big Lobby Pictures of the Stars Draw Crowds of Admiring Fans

Semi-Photo Post Cards, $3.00 per thousand; formerly sold for $4.00. Over 400 different players.

Hand Colored Post Cards
For the better class of Souvenirs, 60 of the most popular players, all factions, $10.00 per thousand

Photo Post Cards
For hand coloring. NOTE: The Public buy cards from stationers and color them. It's a new fad— 60 Popular Players $5.00 per thousand.

PHOTOGRAPHS, SIZE 8 x 10, of all the prominent players, Association and Independent, 400 different names, 30 cents each.
LARGE PICTURE, semi-photo, glazed finish, size 11 x 14, $1 per doz.; 43 prominent players.
LARGE PICTURES, HAND COLORED, size 11 x 14, Prominent Association players, $2.00 for set of 12.
Photographs for lobby display of the two and three reel features of all of the Mutual multiple reels—set of 6, $1.00. Always ready 10 days ahead of release.
Special 22 x 28 Association and Mutual Hand Colored Pictures of 23 Favorites
75 Cents Each. Framed $2.50 Each

KRAUS MFG. CO. 14 East 17th St., New York
Send for Catalogue of over 400 players and samples free. Write us, giving details of your dull nights, and we will send you a remedy.

Film Quality

Quality in the film—quality from a technical photographic standpoint is as important to the Exhibitor as is interest in the story that the film tells.

There's one film that's recognized the world over as the standard of quality—that is always used by those whose effort it is to give the Exhibitors the very best goods and the very best service—Eastman film.

And it is identifiable. Look for "Eastman" on the perforated margin.

EASTMAN KODAK COMPANY
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

READY EARLY IN AUGUST

The Theatre of Science

By ROBERT GRAU

A Volume dealing with the Evolution, Growth and Trend of

MOVING PICTURES

in public entertaining.

500 Pages of Text 400 Illustrations
Frontispiece Bound de luxe

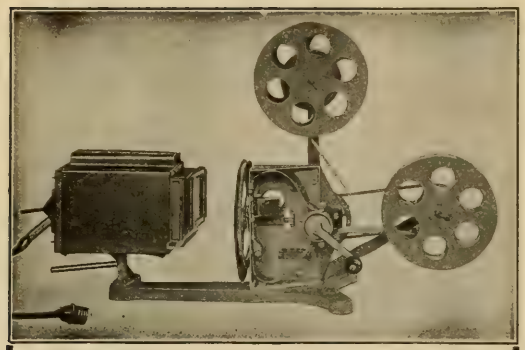
Each volume autographed and numbered and sent to any part of the world free of all carriage charges.

Price, $5.00 Per Volume

ADDRESS

ROBERT GRAU
53 Elm Avenue Mt. Vernon, N. Y.



THE PHANTOSCOPE
THE PHANTOSCOPE

We want you to remember the name; it stands for satisfaction in small motion picture projection machines. When you think of motion pictures for the home, school or office, think Phantoscope. When you buy a motion picture projector for home, school or office, buy the Phantoscope. It is a machine which gives a large, brilliant picture, and is so simple and easily operated as to be remarkable. The motor-driven machine is a delight and the whole machine is one which not only reflects credit on its designer but is the only machine which has ever received recognition from a scientific body.

The Price is $100

Phantoscope Mfg. Co.
Bond Building, Washington, D. C.

THE BRIGHT
WHITE
LIGHT

(CALCIUM EFFECT)
so Desirable for Moving Picture Projections
is ONLY produced with

BIO CARBONS

They Are
"The Carbons You Want"

Charles L. Kiewert Co.

NEW YORK	MILWAUKEE	SAN FRANCISCO
165 Greenwich St.	114 Huron St.	143 Second St.

QUALITY WINS!

THE ORDERS PLACED DURING THE FIRST THREE DAYS OF THE EXPOSITION FOR THE

"THE PEERLESS" – DAY AND NIGHT SCREEN – "THE PIONEER"

HAVE EXCEEDED IN NUMBER THE ORDERS RECEIVED DURING THE SEVEN PRECEDING MONTHS

NOTHING SUCCEEDS LIKE SUCCESS!

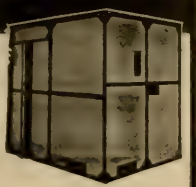
IMITATORS WILL BE VIGOROUSLY PROSECUTED

DAY AND NIGHT SCREENS, INC., 291 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

BRANCH OFFICES AND DISTRIBUTING CENTERS AT

PHILADELPHIA, NEW ORLEANS, ATLANTA, EL PASO, MEMPHIS, KANSAS CITY, DES MOINES, SAN FRANCISCO, LOS ANGELES, SEATTLE, PARIS, BERLIN, LONDON

J-M Transite Asbestos Wood Booths



Absolutely fireproof. Prevent noise of machine from disturbing audience. Cannot become electrically charged or grounded. J-M Booths conform to all the requirements of state and municipal regulations, insurance authorities and inspection departments wherever ordinances compel the use of a fire-proof booth.

Furnished in portable and permanent types. Write our nearest Branch for "J-M Theatre Necessities" Booklet.

H. W. JOHNS-MANVILLE CO.

Albany	Cincinnati	Kansas City	New Orleans	San Francisco
Baltimore	Cleveland	Los Angeles	New York	Seattle
Boston	Dallas	Louisville	Omaha	St. Louis
Buffalo	Detroit	Milwaukee	Philadelphia	Syracuse
Chicago	Indianapolis	Minneapolis	Pittsburgh

MR. MOVIE-OWNER:

Better ventilation for your house—at less cost to you. Do you want it?

KIMBLE

Alternating-Current Ventilating

FANS

Reversible. Silent running. Variable speed. Reduce operating cost in proportion to speed reduction. No other fans offer you such advantages. Investigate. Write for the Red Catalogue.

Kimble Electric Co.,
633 North Western Avenue,
Chicago, Illinois.

VITASLIDE

Each mail brings us word of praise for the "Vitaslide." Exhibitors say their audiences are delighted, and advertisers report gratifying returns. Let us tell you the names of some of the large corporations using "Vitaslides."

VITASLIDE COMPANY
GEO. BRECK, Manager,
70 Turk Street . San Francisco, Cal.

NO COMPLAINTS OF FOUL AIR WHERE

SPRAGUE ELECTRIC OZONATORS

Are In Use

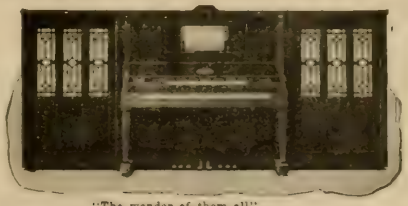
COMBINATION OZONATOR and ELECTRIC FAN

Send for Bulletin No. 49000

SPRAGUE ELECTRIC WORKS
OF GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY
Main Office, 527-531 W. 34th Street
New York, N. Y.
Branch Offices in Principal Cities.

SEEBURG "MOTION PICTURE PLAYER"

It has solved one of the Big Problems of the Moving Picture Business.



"The wonder of them all"

Played either manually or automatically, it produces real music for the pictures.

Get Complete Information on it by Addressing

J. P. SEEBURG PIANO CO., Manufacturers, 209 S. STATE STREET, Republic Building, CHICAGO, ILL.

SOMETHING SPECIAL

OUR STATES

ILLINOIS
WISCONSIN
OHIO
IOWA
INDIANA
KENTUCKY
NEBRASKA

¶IF YOU ARE IN ANY OF THESE STATES AND DID NOT RECEIVE OUR BULLETIN OF "SPECIAL SUMMER PRICES" YOU'RE NOT ON OUR LIST AND HAVE MISSED SOMETHING—GET ON! ADDRESS

CELEBRATED PLAYERS FILM COMPANY

Leaders in Filmdom's Progress

Schiller Building 64 West Randolph Street, Chicago

EMERSON HOUGH IS FREE!

There having been much misunderstanding and confusion regarding the photo-play rights of certain of my novels, this will advise the public that I have now extinguished every claim of whatsoever nature, real or imaginary, actual or alleged, against my photo-play rights, and can give absolutely clear and uncontested title to same. No person has any legal or contingent interest in the said photo-play rights, nor has any person any authority to represent me, except my authorized literary agent

The above affects the following of my novels:

"The Mississippi Bubble," "Heart's Desire," "The Purchase Price," "The Way of a Man," "The Law of the Land," "The Girl at the Half-way House," "John Rawn," "The Lady and the Pirate," as well as all my short fiction. The novel "Fifty-Four or Fight" has within the current month been placed under contract for production.

Very respectfully,

EMERSON HOUGH

2042 Continental and Commercial Nat'l Bank Bldg., Chicago, Illinois

COMPENSARC

That's the device that saves Moving Picture men two-thirds on their electric light bills, and yet gives better light. Did you see our ad last week? Well, don't look it up. Just write for our

Booklet 15018

FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS
OF GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY
1402 Broadway
FORT WAYNE INDIANA
733

Indirect Lights, Poster Frames and Exit Lights

Moving Picture Theatres

No. 62—12" Diam.....$4.00
No. 61—15" Diam..... 6.00
No. 52—20" Diam..... 8.00

Solid Brass. White Enam. Reflector. Wired, Ready to Attach.

Other Styles.
CIRCULAR

General Specialty Co.
409-11 Morgan Street, St. Louis, Mo.

DO YOU USE GAS?
TANKS OR PORTABLE
The "Guil Pastil"
DOUBLES YOUR LIGHT
"FULCO" Pastil Adapter
PRICE, $1.00 Each
Makes Pastil fit any burner.
See "Moving Picture World," June 13, letter from George Kraus, page 1539.
E. E. Fulton Co. 152 W. Lake St. CHICAGO
Sole American Distributors for GUIL PASTIL

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES

86 WALTON STREET ATLANTA, GA.

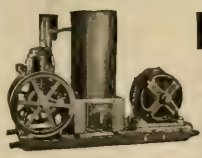
Northern Feature Film Exchange
Suite 405, Schiller Building, Chicago
Phone Central 6229

Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere
Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs.

THE DECORATORS SUPPLY CO.
Archer Ave. and Lee St. CHICAGO, ILL.



MOVING PICTURE ELECTRIC LIGHT PLANT

Used and highly endorsed by the United States Army. Biggest Sensation in the Moving Picture World. Can be operated by a boy 10 years old. One customer writes: "Plant running like a top and delivering the 'juice' right along every day for our moving picture house. Costs us about one-tenth as much as public service. Also pumps water to all our buildings, 2,000 gallons per day."

Write today for Bulletin 101. It is a mighty interesting booklet.

(163) DETROIT ENGINE WORKS, Dept. 102, DETROIT, MICH., U. S. A.

The EXHIBITOR SAYS

Complete Equipment
for The MOTION PICTURE THEATRE
Send for Complete Catalogue
608 OLIVE ST ERKER'S ST LOUIS, MO

G. W. BRADENBURGH, 802 Vine St PHILADELPHIA., PA.

FEATURE FILMS FOR SALE

NAME	Length	Make	Adv.	Price
EXPIATION	2000	Eclair	1-3-6	$30
WHEN PARIS LOVES	3000	Pathe	1-3-6	50
DRIVEN FROM HOME	2300	Atlas	1-3-6	45
OLIVER TWIST	4000	Hepworth	1-3-6	75
SILVER BLAZE	2000	Eclair	1-3-6	30
PLOT AND COUNTERPLOT	3000	Cines	1-3-6	45
MIDNIGHT EXPRESS	3000	Atlas	1-3-6	60
BLAZING THE TRAIL	2000	Bison	1-3	35
THE DEATH KNELL	3000	Itala	1-3-6	125
THE SHADOW OF EVIL	2000	Itala	1-3-6	75
BRANDED FOR LIFE	2000	Itala	1-3-6	75
THE DREAD OF DOOM	3000	Itala	1-3-6	125
A BROKER'S SACRIFICE	3000	Roma	1-3-6	100
A DARE DEVIL RESCUE (Rodman Law)	3000	Blaché	1-3-6	125
SPANISH BLOOD	4000	Special	1-3-6	125
FIGHT FOR THE GREAT BLACK DIAMOND	3000	Messter	1-3-6	200
THE IRON MAN	3000	Urban	1-3-6	100
WANTED BY THE POLICE	3000	Mittenthal styles	1-3-6	175
TRAILING THE COUNTERFEITERS	2900	B. & C.	1-3-6	150
GREATER LOVE	2000	Itala	1-3-6	60
GORKI, DEMON DETECTIVE	3000	Dania	1-3-6	60

One thousand reels. First-class condition, with posters, at ten dollars per reel. Commercials, without posters, three and five dollars per reel. Write for list.

Thrift Thrives Thrice—While Waste Wants Watching

We can prove to your entire satisfaction that we can save one-third of your running expenses. Won't you let us show you?

Then again, why buy an inferior product? Why experiment? Install the most talked of screen in the world—the screen that is in use in over 7000 theatres the world over—the screen that can be washed with soap and water; the screen—the only screen—that will give you perfect projection, regardless of how close or angle your seats are placed; the screen that movies were projected upon—at Booth 310—within the full glare of the intense illumination of Cooper-Hewitt and that big nitrogen lamp shown at the Convention during the Exhibition. No shadow box was needed.

That screen was the talk of the Convention. That screen in Theatre No. 4 and the screen used by the Pathescope Company was

MIRROROIDE

The only screen that gave you the evidence of your own eyes. Above all, no shadow box was required.

Get our large free samples.

Surely, seeing is believing.

Yes, we showed movies on the main floor, and MIRROROIDE was put to a test no other screen could stand.

THE J. H. CENTER CO., Inc., Newburgh, N. Y.

DEVELOPING and PRINTING

carefully done for professionals and amateurs.
The largest factory in the world devoted exclusively to
Manufacturing Commercial Moving Pictures
Prices and factory description sent at your request
INDUSTRIAL MOVING PICTURE CO.
Watterson R. Rothacker, Gen. Mgr.
223-233 West Erie Street, Chicago

THE INDUCTOR-COMPENSATOR

An Alternating Current Transformer for Motion Picture Arc Lamps
Every claim made for superior merit, high efficiency and current saving qualities has been proven by over five years' constant service.
Nearly 2,000 INDUCTOR COMPENSATORS now in use.

PRICE:

110 Volts, 60 Cycles.....$50.00
220 Volts, 60 Cycles..... 50.00

Prices for special transformers to control other voltage and cycles quoted on application. Order from your exchange or from
BELL & HOWELL COMPANY, Designers and Manufacturers
917 West Illinois Street :: :: :: Chicago, Illinois

NO SATURATOR · NO ETHER · NO OXONE
NO EXPENSIVE CHEMICALS
EXHIBITORS BEST FRIEND
NEVER FAILS BRIGHTEST
OZO-CARBI MOVING PICTURE LIGHT
1/3 Brighter THAN CALCIUM AT HALF THE COST
GREATEST LIGHT OF THE AGE
A SCIENTIFIC FACT
OLD LIGHTS IN EXCHANGE
MOORE-HUBBELL & CO. 714 MASONIC TEMPLE · CHICAGO

Moving Picture Theatre Mailing Lists For Sale

20,192, covering United States and Canada, price $40.00, or $3.50 per thousand for such states as you want.
670 Film Exchanges, U. S.....$3.50
70 Manufacturers and Studios, U. S..... 1.00
34 Moving Picture Machine Mfrs. and Dealers..... 1.00
231 Film Exchanges, Foreign Countries..... 3.00
320 Moving Picture Theatres, Foreign Countries..... 3.00
Ask us for full particulars.

TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO.
166 West Adams Street, Chicago
Established 1880

TO THE TRADE:— New York, May 26, 1914.

The dispute between the Lewis Pennant Features and Messrs. Klaw & Erlanger with reference to the right to the use of the title WOMAN AGAINST WOMAN in connection with the Lewis Pennant Features photoplay known as WOMAN AGAINST WOMAN or RESCUED IN THE CLOUDS has been mutually settled to the satisfaction of both contending parties.

It is agreed that the Lewis Pennant Feature be known under its present companion title of RESCUED IN THE CLOUDS so as not to confuse it with that of the Klaw & Erlanger release known as WOMAN AGAINST WOMAN.

The Lewis Pennant release as originally produced, with the exceptions above noted, will continue to be used. Both Klaw & Erlanger and the Lewis Pennant Features are extremely pleased with the mutual satisfactory settlement of these differences. COSMOS FEATURE FILM CORP., 126 West 46th St., New York.

PUT in your own lighting plant and pay for it with your Central Station bills. A Foos generating set will produce current for less than 3 cents per kilowatt, and is more reliable than service from a Central Station.

Ask for Bulletin 98.

Foos Gas Engine Co.
Springfield, Ohio.

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and anyone can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact, they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of $3.50 we will send, by parcel post, prepaid and insured, the following:

24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address:

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.
1733 West 9th St. Brooklyn, N. Y.

FOR OPERA CHAIRS WRITE

SAVE HALF

$ FIFTY-FIFTY % COMPANY $

SAVE HALF

86 WALTON STREET ATLANTA, GA.

The Strelinger catalogue of

BRUSH ELECTRIC LIGHTING SETS

tells why direct current is very much better than alternating current for moving picture shows. Send for it.

THE CHAS. A. STRELINGER CO.,
Box MP-2, Detroit, Mich., U. S. A.

CAMERA MEN OF PROVEN ABILITY

furnished for all occasions. We send our men to any quarter of the globe.

Special lighting equipment suitable for making interior scenes under any and all conditions rented with competent electricians by the day, week or month.

We make educational, dramatic or industrial pictures to order.

SMALLWOOD FILM CORPORATION
"Specialists in Industrial Motion Pictures"
949 Broadway, New York City

ORCHESTRA MUSIC
FOR MOVING PICTURES

The Orpheum Collection of dramatic and descriptive music for Piano and seven orchestra parts. Piano can be used alone. In two series:

No. 1 and No. 2

Piano, 58 cts. each. Both series, $1.15. Violin, 40 cts. each; both 75 cts. Cello-&-Bass same price as violin. Flute 35 cts. each. Both series, 65 cts. Clarinet, Cornet and Trombone same price as Flute. Drums, 30 cts. each. Both series, 55 cts.

Send for free sample page and further discounts. 3d series ready for piano only; 58 cts.

CLARENCE E. SINN
1561 SEDGWICK ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

WE BUY, SELL and RENT
moving picture machines, films and chairs
THEATRE BROKERAGE EXCHANGE
440 S. Dearborn Chicago, Ill

FILM MAKING OUTFITS

for Professional Film Work, for the Manufacturer, Traveler, Explorer, Scientist and Private. The well-known fool-proof Junior Camera, 200 feet capacity; Tripods, Tilts, Printers, Developing Outfits, Projectors, Lenses, Polishers, Measurers, Menders, Winders. Special Film Work. Quick, reliable repair.

Establ. 20 years. Largest Inst. in U. S.

EBERHARD SCHNEIDER
219 Second Ave. New York

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES
ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. NO. 31

The A. H. Andrews Co.
115-117 So. Wabash Ave.
Chicago, Ill.
Branches in all Leading Cities
New York Office
1472 Broadway, Long Acre Bldg
Seattle Office
508-10-12 First Ave., So.
San Francisco Office, 782 Mission St

Largest Stock and Quick Deliveries on

Motion Picture Seating

Pleasing Designs. Reasonable Prices
Write for Illustrated Books

V-2 Veneer Seating. V-3, Upholstered Seating.
Send floor sketch for Free Seating Plan

American Seating Company
"Public Seating Exclusively"
14 E. Jackson Blvd., Chicago 18 E. 32nd St., New York
BOSTON PHILADELPHIA PITTSBURGH

The "Standardized" Theatre Chairs

Do you want a life-saving chair?
Do you want a space-saving chair?
Do you want a sanitary chair?
Do you want a scientifically built, double standard chair?

We operate the largest exclusive theatre chair factory in the world, AND SELL DIRECT TO YOU. WRITE US

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio

GO INTO THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS

MAKE MONEY FAST! BE YOUR OWN BOSS!
$30 TO $50 PER NIGHT CLEAR
No Experience Needed
We furnish you with machine, film, curtain and complete outfit ready to go to work with ON OUR EASY PAYMENT PLAN.
Write Now for Our Large FREE Catalogue.
NATIONAL MOVING PICTURE CO.
Dept. M. P., Ellsworth Building Chicago

STEEL OR IRON STANDARDS

AGENCIES:
H. S. Analey, 1476 B'way, Long Acre Bldg., New York City.
Telephone 5619 Bryant.
California Seating Co. 720 South Hill Street, Los Angeles, Cal.
H. A. Johnson Seating Co., 1214½ 3d Ave., Seattle, Wash.

Steel Standards will not break

The Wisconsin Seating Company
New London, Wisconsin, U.S.A

DEAGAN MUSICAL ELECTRIC BELLS

Played from Piano Keyboard

WRITE FOR CATALOG "F"

J. C. DEAGAN
DEAGAN BUILDING
1770 Berteau Ave.
Chicago, Ill.

Non-Breakable and Sanitary STEEL and CAST IRON

HIGH Quality

LOW Price

Opera Chairs

Immediate shipment on many styles; Second Hand Chairs; out-of-door seating. Send measurements for FREE SEATING PLAN. Mention this paper.

STEEL FURNITURE CO.
Grand Rapids, Mich.; New York, 150 Fifth Ave.; Pittsburgh, 318 Bissell Blk.; Boston, 60 Pearl St.

THE MAJESTIC MOTION PICTURE COMPANY

Offers for Release June 21

A SUPERIOR TWO-PART FEATURE

The Severed Thong

MARY ALDEN
Who Appears in Majestic Releases and "Griffith" Specials

A picture that will commend itself for artistic beauty and reverent treatment, having, at the same time, a remarkable series of moments of intense suspense, introducing MARY ALDEN, GEORGE SEIGMANN and DARK CLOUD.

KOMIC FARCES RELEASED EVERY SUNDAY

are produced under Majestic management, directed by a comedy director long identified with Mr. Griffith's comedy productions.

SUNDAY, JUNE 21—THE DECEIVER

THE MAJESTIC GUIDE FOR EXHIBITORS

(In which we endeavor to tell the truth about all Majestic releases)

THE REBELLION OF KITTY BELLE two reels, release date, Sunday, June 14. A picture that you can feature and that will make good, presenting LILLIAN GISH and ROBERT HARRON in an adaptation of a famous GEORGE PATTULLO short story.

THEIR FIRST ACQUAINTANCE, one reel, release date, Tuesday, June 16. A thrilling, interesting and well presented melodrama with DOROTHY GISH and ROBERT HARRON.

THE SEVERED THONG, two reels, release date, Sunday, June 21. It will hold spectators in genuine suspense and will please by its reverent sentiment.

THE BURDEN, one reel, release date, Tuesday, June 23. "Fair to middling," but not exceptional.

D. W. GRIFFITH supervises the production of all Majestic releases

MAJESTIC MOTION PICTURE CO.

Studio, 4500 Sunset Blvd., Los Angeles, Cal.

Business Offices, 29 Union Sq., West, New York, N. Y.

Selig

"ME AN' BILL"

"ME AN' BILL"

An unusual and poetic play, showing the life and love of father and son through three generations, with the daughters and mothers to match. How the two pairs of chums begin life and progress to silvered age—make a series of wonderfully picturesque and interesting human documents.

IN TWO REELS. RELEASED JUNE 22nd

June 23rd—"The Servant Question Out West"

In this great Land of the Free the servant problem is always puzzling. Out West it had peculiarities by reason of the rushing matrimonial market.

On the same reel with

"Doc Yak and the Limited Train"

in which the goat-man makes a flyer for fun.

June 24th—"Somebody's Sister"

Young people from the country meet the trials of a great city and finally flee from them to find greater happiness at home. An interesting play with a fine moral.

June 26th—"The Captain's Chair"

An old sailor-man, envied for his wealth, bestows it where it does the most good. A clever visualization of striking contrasts. For Selig's. Funny. Friday.

June 27th—"The Right to Happiness"

How a girl, raised amid criminal environment, rises superior to it and shows nobler womanhood—is the drift of this surprising and gripping drama.

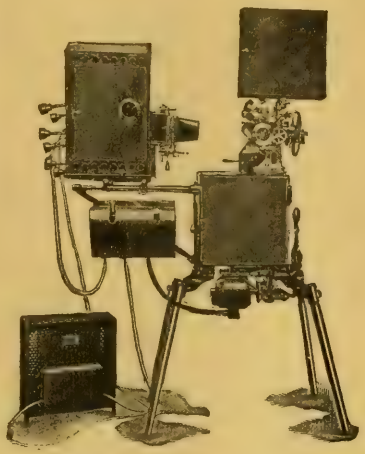
THE HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL

follows the Mexican War closely and pictures the big events the world over. Released MONDAYS AND THURSDAYS.

N. B. SELIG'S posters have combined charms of attractive drawing and beautiful color. Get the line! One-sheets on all releases; three and sixes on multiple reels.

THE SELIG POLYSCOPE COMPANY

CHICAGO



IT is a significant fact that the largest space occupied by any one Company at the Second International Exposition of the Motion Picture Art is devoted to the interesting and vital branch of the motion picture industry, THE PROJECTION, as exemplified by the highly developed and efficient projecting machines manufactured by the largest producers of this class of machinery in the world.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

Manufacturers of Power's Cameragraph No. 6 A

NINETY GOLD STREET · NEW YORK CITY

Vol. 20. No. 13 June 27. 1914 Price 10 Cents

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Scene from "The Weaker Strain" (Reliance).

Post Office Box 226
Madison Square Station

NEW YORK

17 Madison Avenue
Telephone Madison Square 3510

Sidney Bracy as the Butler in "The Million Dollar Mystery"

Florence LaBadie as the heroine in "The Million Dollar Mystery"

We've Done It!

We promised exhibitors the most costly —the greatest motion picture attraction ever brought out—

We promised greater crowds than ever were seen at the theatres—

We promised a 46-reel serial production that would be the finest piece of motion picture photography ever presented—

We promised to promote this stupendous production by the biggest advertising campaign ever given over to one motion picture production

We promised exhibitors packed houses and bigger box office receipts—

We've done it!

THE MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY

Story by Harold MacGrath Scenario by Lloyd Lonergan

Thanhouser's Million Dollar Motion Picture Production

We've done exactly as promised. The first 2-reel episode of the Million Dollar Mystery was released last Monday, June 22. PACKED HOUSES EVERYWHERE is the result. Undoubtedly this gigantic serial production is the greatest attraction ever offered to theatres. The story by Harold MacGrath starts in nearly 200 of the leading newspapers Sunday, June 28th. The second 2-reel episode will be released next Monday, June 29th. 2-reel episodes will be released once each week. You may still be able to make booking arrangements if you act QUICKLY. Get in touch with a representative of the Syndicate Film Corporation at once. The Million Dollar Mystery is an independent release and may be obtained regardless of the regular program being used.

Remember $10,000.00 in cash will be paid for the best 100-word solution of this startling mystery

SYNDICATE FILM CORPORATION

7 W. 23rd St., New York — 166 W. Washington St., Chicago

or Syndicate Film Corporation representative at any Mutual Exchange in the United States and Canada.

THANHOUSER FILM CORPORATION, New Rochelle, N.Y.

Head European Office: Thanhouser Films, Ltd., London, W. C., England

Thanhouser releases will continue to be features of the Mutual Program.

The Thanhouser Three-A-Week

Tuesday, June 23rd, "For Her Child." A drama of modern home-life depicted with remarkable realism by Irving Cummings, Ethle Jewett, Helen Badgley (Thanhouser Kidlet) and Tom Aiken.

Sunday, June 28th, "The Widow's Mite." A story of romance in which Helen Badgley, the "Thanhouser Kidlet," plays the title role. The cast also includes the Thanhouser Twins (Marion and Madeline Fairbanks), Carey L. Hastings, Mrs. Fairbanks, Mayre Hall and Nolan Gane.

Thanhouser

Essanay

Superlative and Aristocratic Features

NIGHT HAWKS

Essanay's

Thrilling Melodrama

in two Acts

Featuring

Francis X. Bushman

RELEASED TUESDAY, JULY 7th. "A NIGHT WITH A MILLION"
A thrilling adventure of a clerk that is exciting in the extreme, adapted from the Munsey Magazines.

RELEASED WEDNESDAY, JULY 8th.
"A BOARDING HOUSE SCRAMBLE"
A comedy riot concerning the love of two star boarders.

RELEASED THURSDAY, JULY 9th. "SLIPPERY SLIM—DIPLOMAT"
A Western comedy sensation featuring Victor Potel, Margaret Joslin and Harry Todd.

RELEASED FRIDAY, JULY 10th. "NIGHT HAWKS" (In Two Acts as Above)

RELEASED SATURDAY, JULY 11th. "BRONCHO BILLY AND THE SHERIFF" A thrilling Western drama with G. M. ANDERSON.

LOOK AHEAD,

If you are giving your theatre any serious THOUGHT it is time to that some other theatre will contract for the Universal program

VICTOR

"A TWENTIETH CENTURY PIRATE" (One Reel).
Released, Monday, June 29th.

J. Warren Kerrigan gives a vivid impression of how an up-to-date pirate would act. An ideal comedy-drama featuring an ideal screen star.

"HER RAGGED KNIGHT" (Two Reels).
Released, Friday, July 3rd.

The hoydenish antics of a young girl makes life miserable for a spinster, and finally win over her guardian. Florence Lawrence at her best in this sprightly comedy.

JOKER

"BESS THE DETECTRESS; or TICK, TICK, TICK" (One Reel).
Released, Wednesday, July 1st.

In which Bessie Pinkerton Holmes, ex-chorus girl, detects anything and everything. She even manages to evade detecting the rent.

"CAPTAIN KID'S PRICELESS TREASURE" (One Reel).
Released, Saturday, July 4th.

A burlesque comedy that provides no end of merriment. A thousand laughs in a thousand feet. Count 'em.

POWERS

"PEARL OF THE SEA" (One Reel).
Released, Friday, July 3rd.

No tigers or lions eating up the leading lady. No forgeries nor murders nor villains thrown over the cliffs, but just a drama, with a punch that might have happened next door.

IMP

"ADVENTURES OF A GIRL REPORTER" (Two Reels).
Released, Monday, June 29th.

A gripping plot, plenty of action and a thrilling wind-up. Of course the love interest is there. It's a play that "gets over"—a story with a new twist.

"THE ONE BEST BET" (One Reel).
Released, Thursday, July 2nd.

In this pleasing comedy King Baggot presents some highly entertaining situations that will delight you.

ECLAIR

"SNOWDRIFT" (Two Reels).
Released, Wednesday, July 1st.

You'll get a half hour of solid enjoyment out of this emotional drama. It has a tragic touch at the finish which can't fail to bring a tear. Some unusually picturesque settings showing a tremendous snowstorm.

"THE GREATEST OF THESE" (One Reel).
Released, Sunday, July 5th.

A kind-hearted old man becomes a fiend when his daughter elopes. His better nature asserts itself through the plaintive appeal of a child.

101 BISON

"THE HOPES OF BLIND ALLEY" (Three Reels).
Released, Saturday, July 4th.

A simple and tremendous story that carries a message from the poor to those who live more fortunately. It's a masterpiece of rare quality.

GOLD SEAL

"LUCILLE LOVE, THE GIRL OF MYSTERY" (Series No. 12). (Two Reels).
Released, Tuesday, June 30th.

Loubeque again succeeds in getting the papers from Lucille and forcibly takes her to his Mexican ranch. Her escape from the villain's clutches will set your nerves tingling with excitement.

UNIVERSAL FILM MANU

1600 BROADWAY CARL LAEMMLE, LARGEST FILM MANUFACTURING

MR. EXHIBITOR!

turn your thought into action. Another day's delay may mean and your chance will be gone forever. CARL LAEMMLE

STERLING

"IT'S A BOY" (One Reel).
Released, Monday, June 29th.

Every time you see the name Sterling coupled with a juvenile comedy you can gamble it's a one hundred percent box office magnet proof.

"THE CRASH" (One Reel).
Released, Thursday, July 2nd.

Without a question of doubt it's one of the biggest and most spectacular comedy productions ever attempted. In addition to other big features you will see a terrific explosion, the blowing up of a house and barn, a real auto going over a cliff and a motorcycle smashing on top of the auto.

REX

"THE HOUSE DISCORDANT" (Two Reels).
Released, Thursday, July 2nd.

A heart-throbbing drama in which the green-eyed monster, jealousy, plays an important part, but is flouted as this highly emotional play draws to a close.

"ON THE RIO GRANDE" (One Reel).
Released, Sunday, July 5th.

Anna Little, Herbert Rawlinson, interpret a living—a gripping story of frontier life. Duty conquers love when the sheriff kills his sweetheart's father.

FRONTIER

"THE BROKEN BARRIERS" (One Reel).
Released, Sunday, July 5th.

You will enjoy the excitement and the suspense as this thrilling story of the West is unfolded.

NESTOR

"THE LOST ARROW" (One Reel).

Released, Wednesday, July 1st.

An enchanting interpretation of an Indian Folk-lore tale, featuring Eva Fay.

"THOSE COLLEGE DAYS" (One Reel).
Released, Friday, July 3rd.

A merry little story cleverly staged in the midst of college life. The frivolous antics of the girls and the pranks of the boys will amuse you.

UNIVERSAL IKE

"UNIVERSAL IKE, JR., AND THE VAMPIRE" (One Reel).

Released, Tuesday, June 30th.

Fifteen minutes of highly diverting comedy. The type of picture that the kiddies will like and the old folks enjoy.

CRYSTAL

"THE GIRL IN PANTS" —&— "HER NEW HAT" (One Reel).

Released, Tuesday, June 30th.

A galaxy of talent in these two snappy comedies—look at them. Vivian Prescott, Charlie De Forrest and Pearl White. A split-comedy that will please everybody.

ANIMATED WEEKLY No. 121

Released, Wednesday, July 1st.

Pick out the scene made in your town and let everyone know about it. It will bring in a few dimes you didn't expect. Up to the minute views of events which happened all over the world, one of them from your town. Be sure to demand every release from your exchange.

FACTURING COMPANY

President

CONCERN IN THE UNIVERSE

NEW YORK, N.Y.

The Crash
Ford Sterling
SPECTACULAR COMEDY
RELEASED
JULY 2ND 1914
Most Spectacular
Comedy Ever Made
Without a question of doubt "The Crash" is the biggest—most spectacular comedy production ever attempted.
It shows in addition to other big features a terrific explosion; blowing up a house and barn.
The main feature is a real auto going over the cliffs, showing the automobile tumbling down the mountainside and crashing at the bottom of the cliff.
Immediately afterwards a motorcycle is madly chasing the automobile and ends up by landing in the middle of the automobile wreckage at the bottom of the cliff.
Start right in now to boost this money getter.
UNIVERSAL FILM MFG. CO.
1600 BROADWAY N.Y. CITY.

EXHIBITORS, BOOK THIS FEATURE!

G. M. ANDERSON

IN

"The Good-For-Nothing"

IN FOUR ACTS

This is positively the most elaborate comedy-drama ever produced by our western company. The story pictures the life of a good-for-nothing son who made a failure of everything he tackled in the east. He finally settles in the west, and through a kind act, inherits a wealthy estate. It shows G. M. Anderson, both as a man of a large eastern metropolis, and as a man of the far and unsettled west.

Released only on June 8th and already dozens of letters have been received from exhibitors congratulating us upon this successful feature.

Book through the Feature Department of the General Film Company.

Essanay Film Manufacturing Company

521 First National Bank Building, Chicago

Factory and Studios, 1333 Argyle St., Chicago, Ill.

[BRANCH OFFICES IN LONDON PARIS BERLIN BARCELONA

Book These Features

THE CURSE OF GREED
IN
5 PARTS
ABOUNDING
IN TRYING ORDEALS

THE THUMB PRINT
IN
4 PARTS
A THRILLING
DETECTIVE DRAMA

'NEATH THE LION'S PAW
IN
3 PARTS
THE GREATEST ANIMAL
DRAMA EVER ATTEMPTED
FOR FILM PORTRAYAL

Released Through the General Film Co.

Make It Your Business to See Our

American Comedies

Released Every Tuesday

Beginning with June 30th

BEING PART OF OUR REGULAR FIVE A WEEK RELEASES

Singles
Tuesday, COMEDY
Wednesday, DRAMA
Thursday, COMEDY

Multiples
Thursday, DRAMA
Saturday,
COMEDY or DRAMA

MELIES G FILMS

JESSE L. LASKY

PRESENTS

THE MAGNIFICENT ROMANTIC STORY
WITH A BIG HEART INTEREST

THE ONLY SON

By WINCHELL SMITH, Author of Brewster's Millions, Etc.

WITH THE ORIGINAL STAR

THOS. W. ROSS

IN THE ROLE HE CREATED AND MADE POPULAR

The New York Star said: "The best event at the exposition was 'The Only Son.'"

Louis Reeves Harrison said: "It is the best Lasky has done."

The New York Telegraph said: "Everyone connected with 'The Only Son' deserves credit."

Mark Vance, of Variety, said: "Just the kind of picture I like."

Mabel Condon said: "I think 'The Only Son' a great picture."

PERFECT CONTINUITY OF SUCCESSES WITHOUT A BREAK

IN PREPARATION

MAX FIGMAN and LOLITA ROBERTSON

IN THE COMEDY CLASSIC

"THE MAN ON THE BOX"

BOOK NOW—THERE'S A DISTRIBUTOR IN EVERY STATE

JESSE L. LASKY FEATURE PLAY COMPANY

LONG ACRE THEATRE W. 48TH STREET

JESSE L. LASKY, PRESIDENT — N. Y. C. — SAMUEL GOLDFISH, TREAS. & GEN'L MANAGER

CECIL B DEMILLE
DIRECTOR GENERAL

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

Coming: Mary Pickford in "The Eagle's Mate."

DANIEL FROHMAN Presents

The Renowned Motion Picture Star

CARLYLE BLACKWELL

In a Melodramatic Farce of Romance, Thrills and Laughter

CARLYLE BLACKWELL AS "MORSON"

"THE PITFIRE"

By Edward Peple
Author of "The Prince Chap" and "A Pair of Sixes"

A Tale of Love, Adventure and Daring, which Grips Young and Old with its Delightful and Irresistible Appeal In Motion Pictures.

An exciting blending of action, comedy and sentiment. An amusing and amazing story.

IN FOUR REELS—RELEASED JUNE 20TH.

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

FAMOUS PLAYERS

EXECUTIVE OFFICES
213-229 W. 26th STREET
NEW YORK

Coming:
Jane Grey
in "The Little Gray Lady."

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

A tale teeming with the joyousness of youth and its daring achievements, and the triumph of a strong arm and a brave heart.

MORSON FINDS A SEAMAN'S DUTIES NOT WHOLLY UNPLEASANT

ON WATCH - FOR THE CROOKS

"THE SPITFIRE"

"THE SPITFIRE"

ORMOND OVERHEARS THE STORY OF THE JEWELS

FILM COMPANY

ADOLPH ZUKOR, President

DANIEL FROHMAN, Managing Director EDWIN S. PORTER, Technical Director

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

Coming Coming

"THE RAGGED EARL"

With ANDREW MACK

A thrilling, romantic, melodrama with action and heart interest

NOW READY

"MICHAEL STROGOFF"

With JACOB P. ADLER

Unanimously endorsed by the critics and the trade as a great production.

IN PREPARATION

"THE GREAT DIVIDE"

Henry Miller's and Margaret Anglin's recent spectacular stage success.

Striking paper, heralds, photos, slides, etc., with all productions.

POPULAR PLAYS & PLAYERS, Inc.

HARRY J. COHEN, General Manager

1600 Broadway New York City Mecca Building

Phone, Bryant 4016

ALL STAR FEATURE CORPORATION

Offers

THE FILM OF SENSATIONS

Upton Sinclair

A subject replete with startling situations, vividly depicting the awful scenes which prompted the author's writing of the story which startled the world

THE JUNGLE

in

5 Tremendous Soul-Stirring Acts 5

Featuring the eminent character actor,

George Nash

Former star of "The Gamblers" and "Officer 666,"

And a superior cast of All Star Broadway Favorites, including

Gail Kane

By UPTON SINCLAIR

COMING

LEW DOCKSTADER

In a Big 5-Act Play of Civil War Days,

"DAN"

By Hal Reid

with

Gail Kane and Lois Meredith

THEN

Ethel Barrymore

IN "THE NIGHTINGALE"

AUGUSTUS THOMAS

BOOK OF OUR DISTRIBUTORS

ALL-STAR-FEATURE-CORPORATION

HARRY R. RAVER, PRESIDENT

EXECUTIVE OFFICES
220 W. 42nd ST., NEW YORK

AUGUSTUS THOMAS, DIRECTOR GENERAL OF PRODUCTIONS

EXCLUSIVE AGENTS IN PRINCIPAL CITIES OF THE WORLD

WORLD'S LARGEST
SAWYER INC.
FILM MART
1600 BROADWAY-NEW YORK

THE MILLION DOLLAR FEATURE

ALL LAMBS' STAR GAMBOL

IN 3 PARTS

A FEATURE COMPOSED OF MORE HIGH SALARIED STARS AND CELEBRITIES THAN WERE EVER BEFORE ASSEMBLED IN ANY ONE PICTURE

DEVELOPED AND PRINTED BY LUBIN

TAKEN UNDER PERSONAL DIRECTION OF EDWARD ABELES and BURTON HOLMES

EXHIBITORS Get into quick communication with SAWYER. Wire or write immediately and if your State has not been sold SAWYER will book you direct.

The feature bang-up to the very minute.
A smashing three reel story with Uncle Sam's Boys right in the limelight.

"SAVED BY THE BOYS IN BLUE"

Full of action from the flag fall to the finish! Excitement for everybody! Thrills by the score! Punch after punch! The pièce de resistance for any programme.

"WHITE DOVE'S SACRIFICE"

A beautiful drama of western life rich in love, pathos and action. See the grizzly bear pursue the heroine up a tree only to be laid low by the unerring aim of the "White Chief," in itself a hair-raising incident that will capture the most blasé audience.

EXHIBITORS Get into quick communication with SAWYER. Wire or write immediatly and if your State is not sold SAWYER will book you direct.

WORLD'S LARGEST

SAWYER INC.

FILM MART

1600 BROADWAY-NEW YORK

WILLIAM ELLIOTT

PRESENTS

DUSTIN FARNUM

IN "The Lightning Conductor"

The First Big Feature to Carry a Laugh Through Six Great Reels.

Picturized by Walter Hale.

Pronounced by Press and Public the Film beyond compare.

EXHIBITORS

Write or wire us at once, and if your state has not been sold, we will book you direct.

NOW READY

THE BATTLE OF VERA CRUZ

IN TWO PARTS, NOW READY

Taken on the spot during the fiercest fighting, amid a hail of bullets, and showing "our boys" taking the city of Vera Cruz by assault.

THE ONLY MOVING PICTURE EVER TAKEN OF AN ACTUAL BATTLE

$10,000 Sawyer, Inc., stands ready to donate $10,000 to any charity if there is a single faked scene in any foot of the picture

EXHIBITORS Get into quick communication with Sawyer. Wire or write us immediately and if your state is not sold, Sawyer will book you direct.

WORLD'S LARGEST

SAWYER INC.

FILM MART
1600 BROADWAY-NEW YORK

MR. EXHIBITOR BOOK DIRECT WITH SAWYER!!

DUSTIN FARNUM
in
THE LIGHTNING CONDUCTOR
6 Parts
The Topnotch Feature of all Feature Films

SIR HENRY IRVING'S
Greatest Success
THE BELLS
4 Parts

THE BATTLE OF VERA CRUZ
2 Parts
The first picture ever taken of a real battle.

THE CONVICT HERO
3 Parts
A thrilling photoplay of the life of Rufus Dawes.

THE QUEEN OF THE SMUGGLERS
4 Parts
A melodrama founded on fact.

THE MYSTERY OF THE HANSOM CAB
3 Parts
A real thriller that tickles the palate.

A. BALDWIN-SLOAN
AND GRACE FIELD
in the latest modern SOCIETY DANCES

Bear in Mind
If your State is not sold Sawyer will book you direct.

Hook Up with Sawyer. Become enrolled as a Sawyer Exhibitor—which means that Sawyer will book you direct, and

Save Profits
for you by eliminating the middle man

It Means
once a Sawyer Exhibitor always a Sawyer Exhibitor. Sawyer will do business with you direct, and the profit of the State Right Buyer goes to you.

LAMBS
ALL STAR
GAMBOL
3 Parts
The Million Dollar Feature.

NELL GWYNNE
5 Parts
With the Great Emotional Actress, Nellie Stuart, as "Nell."

SAVED by the BOYS in BLUE
3 Parts
A rattling good feature right up to the minute.

WHITE DOVE'S SACRIFICE
3 Parts
A corking Western story with new situations.

THE BUSHRANGER'S BRIDE
3 Parts
A story of wild life in Australia.

NEVER TOO LATE TO MEND
4 Parts
A glorious photodrama of every day life.

JOSEPH
AND HIS COAT OF MANY COLORS.
6 Parts
The Best Biblical Feature ever produced.

GET ON THE BAND WAGON! NOW!

You can get any one of Sawyer's Features, and at prices that you have never paid before—Quality considered. Youcan have Sawyer's "Big Time" Features, or Sawyer's "Small Time" Features—prices accordingly.

Griffith's Latest Masterpiece

EVERY exhibitor knows D. W. Griffith—or what is more important, knows the pulling power of motion pictures produced by him.

The public, too, knows Griffith—the Belasco of the Movies.

In his latest achievement—the first Griffith release since he joined forces with the Mutual Film Corporation—Mr. Griffith has united the entire Majestic and Reliance Companies.

No motion picture has ever been produced in which appear so many well known stars as in

HOME SWEET HOME

IN SIX REELS

The cast embraces the following well known players:

James Kirkwood	John Dillon	Blanche Sweet	Mary Alden
Henry Walthall	Earle Foxe	Mae Marsh	Fay Tincher
Robert Harron	Courtenay Foote	Lillian Gish	Teddy Sampson
Donald Crisp	Jack Pickford	Dorothy Gish	Mrs. Crowell
Ralph Lewis	Spottiswoode Aitken	Irene Hunt	W. E. Lawrence
Owen Moore	George Seigmann	Miriam Cooper	F. A. Turner
Edward Dillon			W. H. Long

now being released by the Continental Feature Film Corp.

29 UNION SQUARE, NEW YORK and all MUTUAL EXCHANGES

Other pulling Continental features are:

"The Battle of Gettysburg"	5 reels	"Ruy Blas"	3 reels	"The Floor Above"	4 reels
"Joseph in the Land of Egypt"	4 reels	"Legend of Provence"	4 reels	"The Battle of the Sexes"	5 reels
"The Great Leap"	4 reels	"Sapho"	6 reels	"The Dishonored Medal"	4 reels
"Gangsters"	4 reels	"Seeing South America with Colonel Roosevelt"	3 reels	"The Mountain Rat"	4 reels
"Frou Frou"	4 reels	"Robin Hood"	4 reels	"Dope"	6 reels
"Moths"	4 reels	"Zu Zu, The Band Leader"	2 reels	"Cardinal Richelieu's Ward"	4 reels

We're making an unusual big five-reel Feature of FRANK BAUM'S whimsical tale of Love and Adventure

The Patchwork Girl of Oz

which will introduce to America the idol of the French people,

COUDERC—"L'ETOILE GROTESQUE," late of the Follies Bergere, Paris, and imported especially to personate the quaint Patchwork Girl. On the same screen you will see

VIOLET MACMILLAN, the "Daintiest Darling of them all," as "OJO"

FRED WOODWARD, the King of all Animal Personators, and a lot of good people worthy to associate with these stars.

Think of this, too:

LOU GOTTSCHALK is composing Original Music to fit every scene, and the score goes with the film.

J. FARRELL MACDONALD is directing the production with all the skill gained from years of experience in staging big pictures.

"JIM" CROSBY, the Wizard of the Camera, is doing some wonderful things in the way of effects and illusions.

And we're making this picture in our own new Studio, which is admitted to be the finest in California.

WELL, IF DREAMS COME TRUE, YOU KNOW THE ANSWER.

The Oz Film Manufacturing Company

Santa Monica Boulevard, Gower to Lodi Streets

Los Angeles, California

FILMS

The Livest Rental List in America

The below list represents the best that Europe offers. Each is carefully selected with an eye to its box office possibilities. Stories unusual in theme, dramatically told, photographed and staged by Europe's greatest technical experts, we believe them to have no rivals in Picturedom!

They are Exclusive—and can be booked on a rental basis that will appeal to you!

"THE CLUB OF THE BLACK MASK"	THREE REELS	(Celio)
"A MAZE OF MYSTERY"	FOUR REELS	(Cines)
"THE BLACK CIRCLE"	THREE REELS	(Celio)
"THE BLACK THREAD"	THREE REELS	(Cines)
"THE LAND OF PROMISE"	THREE REELS	(Celio)
"LIFE'S BITTER DREGS"	FOUR REELS	(Celio)
"THE BANKER'S WIFE"	THREE REELS	(Cines)
"AN AFRICAN DIAMOND CONSPIRACY"	FOUR REELS	(Cines)

YOU CAN ALSO BOOK

THOSE MAGNIFICENT GEORGE KLEINE ATTRACTIONS WHOSE RECORDS ARE THE REGISTER OF THE GREATEST SUCCESSES IN THE HISTORY OF MOTION PHOTOGRAPHY.

"QUO VADIS?"	EIGHT PARTS	(Cines)
"THE LAST DAYS OF POMPEII"	SIX PARTS	(Photo Drama Co.)
"ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA"	EIGHT PARTS	(Cines)
"BETWEEN SAVAGE AND TIGER"	SIX PARTS	(Cines)
"FOR NAPOLEON AND FRANCE"	SIX PARTS	(Cines)

ANY OR ALL OF THE ABOVE ATTRACTIONS MAY BE BOOKED THROUGH THE FOLLOWING BRANCH OFFICES. GET IN TOUCH WITH THEM!

ATLANTA, GA.
43 Moore Bldg.,
10 Auburn Ave.

BOSTON, MASS.
521 Colonial Bldg.

BUFFALO, N. Y.
c/o Majestic Theatre

DALLAS, TEXAS
238 Saner Bldg.,
1312½ Commerce St.

DENVER, COLO.
405 Railroad Bldg.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.
210 Temple Court Bldg.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
407 Monadnock Bldg.

PITTSBURGH, PA.
509 Lyceum Theatre Bldg.

SEATTLE, WASH.
213 Orpheum Theatre Bldg.
3rd Ave. & Madison St.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.
4821 Vermont Ave.

TORONTO, ONT., CAN.
Telephone Bldg., 76 Adelaide St.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
226 W. 42nd Street

KLEINE - CINES

"A MIDNIGHT GUEST"

(In Two Parts)
(Copyright, 1914, by George Kleine)

For Release Tuesday, June 23rd, 1914

A tale of Paris high life—Of fashionable drawing rooms and Apache Dens—
A thrilling, powerful story of mother-love.

RELEASED THROUGH THE GENERAL FILM COMPANY.
1, 3 and 6 sheets with this subject.

GEORGE KLEINE

166 N. State St., Chicago, Ill. 226 West 42nd St., New York, N. Y.

"Best Productions of the Season"

After seeing two of Warner's Features produced at the big Motion Picture Exposition in New York, an alert exhibitor from the Pacific Coast returned to his hotel and dictated the following letter:

Hotel Imperial
Broadway 31st and 32nd Streets
New York
Copeland Townsend Manager

Hotel Imperial
Robert Stafford
Proprietor
Cable Address "Imperial"
Telephone 6100 Madison

New York June 15, 1914.

Mr. P. A. Powers,
c/o Warner's Features, Inc.,
130 West 46th Street,
New York City.

Dear Sir:-

I had the pleasure of seeing at the Convention Hall last week, your two productions of six reels each, entitled, "The Light Unseen" and "Mother Love." These are as near perfect as any I have ever seen. The photography is away above the average, and the acting first-class.

In my opinion, these are among the best, if not the best productions of the season.

Will you kindly notify me when the above subjects will be released in Los Angeles, Cal., as I wish my patrons to have the opportunity, as I have had, of seeing these great productions. I tried to meet you, but failed in my attempt. Will you kindly address your answer to me, and I will be under many obligations.

Truly yours,

A. P. Fitzgerald

3511 Central Ave.
Los Angeles, Cal.

He knows his audiences. He knows what appeals to them. He picks Warner's Features as having that appeal. He sees the result in his box office receipts. Investigate. Write your nearest Warner exchange for full information.

WARNER'S FEATURES, Inc.

130 West 46th St., New York City

THE DEVIL'S EYE

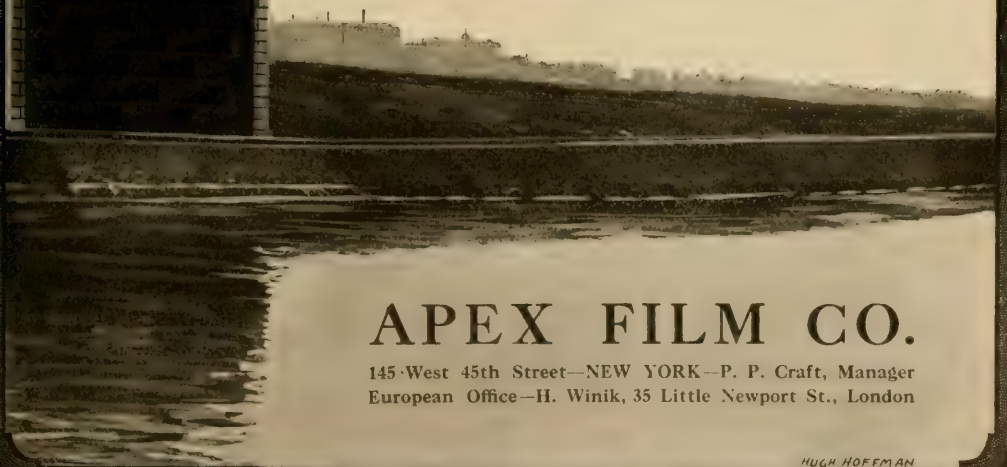
IN 4 PARTS

THE LIMIT OF SENSATION

A STUNNING SERIES OF MIRACULOUS ESCAPES AND DEEDS OF DARING BY DAUNTLESS DETECTIVES IN SEARCH OF THE GREAT DIAMOND NAMED THE DEVIL'S EYE. A PICTURE FOR SATIATED PATRONS.

A FINE LIST OF NEW FEATURES

THE DAREDEVIL DETECTIVE—Hayes, of course—4 Parts
THE SECRET SEVEN—A Weird Detective Tale—4 Parts
THE MIDNIGHT MARRIAGE—With Walter Howard—4 Parts
BROTHER AGAINST BROTHER—A Russian Drama—4 Parts
AN ALPINE TRAGEDY—A Drama of the Snows—5 Parts



APEX FILM CO.

145 West 45th Street—NEW YORK—P. P. Craft, Manager
European Office—H. Winik, 35 Little Newport St., London

HUGH HOFFMAN

ANNOUNCEMENT EXTRAORDINARY

TOM NASH AND BIG OTTO

As producing specialists in, and perfectors of Wild Animal Feature Photoplays, Desire to express their Sincere Appreciation of the unstinted praise and great popularity which has always been accorded their efforts and achievements in the past. They also take this opportunity to announce that for the purpose of manufacturing the

GREATEST WILD ANIMAL PICTURES EVER PRODUCED

they have resigned from the Selig Co., have combined their interests, and will hereafter concentrate their every energy toward the manufacture of highly sensational, spectacular, "Money-Getting" Wild Animal Features to be known to the trade as the

BIG OTTO BRAND

These wonderful productions are, even now, being manufactured in their own mammoth Studios and Zoo which covers some forty acres in a beautiful suburb of Los Angeles, California.

The MYSTERIOUS MAN of the JUNGLE

is the title of this new company's first release. In four wonderful reels—A Feature of Features—Most assuredly it will pack your theatre to the doors. Watch for further announcements.

NASH MOTION PICTURE CO.

Executive Offices, Garland Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal.
Studios and Zoo, Beardstown, Los Angeles, Cal.

New York Representative, Stanley H. Twist,
Inter Ocean Sales Co., 110 West 40th Street
Telephone Bryant 5667

NASH

The Proof of the Pudding Is in the Eating Thereof

Within five hours after announcement of release the following territories were sold: Six New England States, New York State, North Dakota, South Dakota, Wisconsin, Minnesota, New Jersey and Michigan, Eastern Penn., Delaware, Maryland, and D.C.

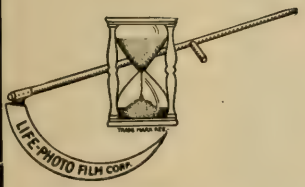
THE GREYHOUND

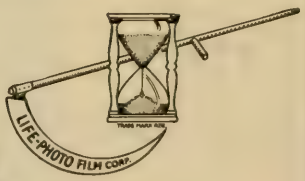
By PAUL ARMSTRONG and WILSON MIZNER

Five Parts

A STUPENDOUS DEEP SEA DRAMA

A dramatic production that is the acme of perfection from every conceivable standpoint.





The Early Bird Catches the Worm

STATE RIGHTS BUYERS—Wire territory interested in and we will wire our terms.

Artistic Lithos, Lobby Displays
Heralds, Slides and Film Cards

THE BANKER'S DAUGHTER

5 Parts

By BRONSON HOWARD

The following territory only unsold: Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, and Canada.

LIFE PHOTO FILM CORPORATION

Executive Offices
220 West 42nd St., New York

Studio and Laboratories
102-104 West 101st St., New York

WE PRODUCE ADAPTATIONS FROM THE LEGITIMATE STAGE ONLY

A Real Feature That Will Please Your Patrons

THE CHRISTIAN

Vitagraph-Liebler production of Hall Caine's superb love story, which just closed a most successful engagement at the Harris Theater, New York City, is now offered for booking. No theater too large, none too small.

The Christian is one feature that holds the attention from start to finish, and has been pronounced by all to be the best picture ever produced in America.

A STUPENDOUS PRODUCTION IN 500 SCENES

MORE THAN 3,000 PEOPLE

THE PINNACLE OF PERFECTION IN MOTION PICTURES

NEW YORK MASSACHUSETTS

ALL STAR CAST OF VITAGRAPH PLAYERS FEATURING MISS EDITH STOREY AND MR. EARLE WILLIAMS

A COMPELLING DRAMA AS GOOD AS THE GREAT PLAY

CONNECTICUT RHODE ISLAND

The Christian is not a religious play as the name might suggest but an intensely interesting love story full of dramatic situations

WHAT THE NEW YORK CITY PAPERS SAY:

"Unquestioned success".....Mail
"Graphically pictured".....Herald
"Most notable motion picture".....Tribune
"Forcibly presented photo-play".....Press
"Most elaborate photo-drama ever made".....Telegraph
"The Christian is a wonderful achievement".....Globe
"Biggest and most wonderful picture ever seen".....Journal
"The Christian never appeared to better advantage".....Journal of Commerce
"It is a masterpiece, a wonderful production".....Staats-Zeitung
"The Christian in pictures is a real treat".....Brooklyn Citizen
"More entertaining than the original dramatization".....Standard Union
"Assumes a dignity not often attained by a film play".....Brooklyn Eagle

Immediate Action is Imperative—Write—Wire—Phone

E. W. LYNCH ENTERPRISES

531-532 Slater Bldg., Worcester, Mass.
Phone 589 Park

110 West 40th Street, New York, N.Y.
Phone 1562 Bryant

Next Release

READY FOR SHIPMENT
ABOUT JUNE 30

An Aerial Revenge

In Three Parts

With the Famous Itala Co. of Popular Players

STATE RIGHTS SELLING
For All Regular Issues

LIMITED TERRITORY OPEN FOR RECENT PAST RELEASES

Tracked Across the Desert
Lost in Darkness
Convict No. 113
A Buried Secret

COMING SOON

ANOTHER GREATER TIGRIS THE PEER OF MYSTIFIERS

Itala Film Company of America

Candler Building HARRY R. RAVER, Director-General New York City

A GIGANTIC COMBINATION has been formed between the

WORLD FILM CORPORATION

and the

SHUBERT FEATURE FILM CORPORATION

For the manufacture and marketing of all the past and future productions of Messrs. Shubert, William A. Brady, Charles E. Blaney, Owen Davis, Cecil Spooner and the McEnnery Syndicate of New York and London.

An amalgamation that will give every exhibitor the finest special films ever placed on the market.

Look at This List from the Shubert Enterprises

AMERICA
N. Y. Hippodrome Spectacle

"The Lure"
"Going Some"
"The Whirlwind"
"The Midnight Sons"
"Taps"
"The Wishing Ring"
"The Return of Eve"
"The White Hen"
"The Ringmaster"
"The Watcher"
"The Comet"
"Mexicana"
"The Pied Piper"
"Step by Step"
"The Mimic World"
"The Emerald Isle"
"The Tourists"
"Speed"
"Just One of the Boys"
"The Belle of Brittany"
"The Mouse Trap"
"The Lady's Maid"
"The Yankee Mandarin"
"Nearly a Hero"
"The Master of the House"
"Girls"
"Lulu's Husbands"
"Marcelle"
"The Orchid"

THE WHIP
Drury Lane and Manhattan Opera House Success

"The Vampire"
"Havana"
"Billy"
"The Great John Ganton"
"The Royal Chief"
"The Family"
"The Runaways"
"Keeping Up Appearances"
"The Motor Girl"
"The Revellers"
"The Press Agent"
"The Blue Moon"
"Mr. Hamlet of Broadway"
"The Summer Widowers"
"The Prince of Bohemia"
"Mme. Troubadour"
"The Girl of Holland"
"The Girl Behind the Counter"
"The Flower Girl"
"The Girl and the Wizard"
"The Blue Mouse"
"Lady Teazle"
"The Bachelor"
"The Girl from Dixie"
"The Lottery Man"
"Anna Karenina"
"Happyland"
"The Road to Yesterday"
"The Beauty Spot"
"A Chinese Honeymoon"

JOAN SAWYER
From the Winter Garden

"The Truants
"The Earl and the Girl"
"Fantana"
"The King of Cadonia"
"A Son of the People"
"Mlle. Mischief"
"The Girl and the Drummer"
"About Town"
"The Witching Hour"
"The Girl and the Kaiser"
"The Gay White Way"
"A Modern Marriage"
"The Golden Widow"
"The Social Whirl"
"Old Dutch"

WM. A. BRADY PICTURE PLAYS, Inc.

"Way Down East"
"Little Miss Brown"
"Ready Money"
"The Man Who Stood Still"
"A Ward of France"
"The Naked Truth"
"The Irish Arab"
"The Pit"
"Baby Mine"
"Thou Shalt Not"
"The Cub"

"Over Night"
"Abigail"
"The Naval Cadet"
"The Shepherd King"
"The Man from the West"
"A Gentleman of Leisure"
"The Face in the Moonlight"
"The Lady from Oklahoma"
"Just to Get Married"
"Bought and Paid For"
"The Manicure Girl"
"The Man of the Hour"

"The Dollar Mark"
"Carnival"
"The Master Key"
"Just Like John"
"In a Big City"
"The Bottom of the Sea"
"The Bondman"
"Mother"
"A Woman's Way"
"As Ye Sow"
"Divorcons"
"Mlle. Fifi"

"Little Women"
"Old Glory"
"Gentleman Jack"
"The Point of View"
"An Old New Yorker"
"The Clemenceau Case"
"The Balkan Princess"
"Under the Polar Star"
"Around New York in 80 Minutes"
"Hindle Wakes"
"The Secret Warrant"
"The King's Game"

"Marriage a la Mode"
"After Dark"
"She"
"Monbars"
"The Sorrows of Satan"
"The Drone"
"A Lady of Long Ago"
"A Gentleman from Mississippi"
"The Painted Woman"
"The Woman of It"
"A Daughter of the Tenements"
"The Dagger and the Cross"

Charles E. Blaney Feature Films — Cecil Spooner Features

"Little Church Around the Corner"
"The Price She Paid"
"The Dancer and the King"

"His Terrible Secret"
"The Boy Behind the Gun"
"The Female Detective"

"For His Brother's Name"
"The Fortune Hunter"
"Across the Pacific"

"Fortune of Betty"
"The Boy Detective"
"One Day"

"Trapped by Wireless"
"Sold for Money"
"The Sporting Deacon"

"Home Ties"
"A Fight for Millions"

World Film Corporation's Present Productions

"Last Days of Pompeii"
"In Search of the Castaways"
"Protea"
"The Kangaroo"

"Joan of Arc"
"Triumph of an Emperor"
"The Master Criminal"
"What the Gods Decree"

"The Romance of an Outcast"
"The Outlaw Reforms"
"The Two Sergeants"
"Sapho"

"The Conspiracy"
"The Golden Cross"
"Father John"
"The Heart of a Police Officer"

"The Stars and Stripes in Mexico"
"The World, the Flesh and the Devil"
"The Lights o' London"
"The Great Stroke"

NOW READY FOR BOOKING

AMERICA
The Big New York Hippodrome Spectacle

THE DANCER and THE KING
Featuring Cecil Spooner

THE GENTLEMAN FROM MISSISSIPPI
Featuring Tom Wise

THE LURE

ACROSS THE PACIFIC
LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY
THE DOLLAR MARK
THE RAINEY PICTURES [New Set]

Enough of this list completed to give an exhibitor one every week for a year. Why worry? Make your bookings for the whole year and let us do the rest. These well known plays are demanded by the public and will break all previous box-office records. WIRE US DIRECT YOUR CHOICE AND BEAT YOUR OPPOSITION TO IT. You can't go wrong. No time to lose.

Branch offices in every principal city of the United States and Canada

WORLD FILM CORPORATION, Home Office, 130 W. 46th St., N. Y. City

NEW YORK DAILIES Concede
Thos. H. Ince's Six Part Masterpiece

The Volcano of Sakura-Jima in action.

THE WRATH OF THE GODS
or THE DESTRUCTION OF SAKURA-JIMA
THE MOST GORGEOUS AND SPECTACULAR PHOTO-PLAY EVER PRODUCED

Notes from New York Newspapers.

The Wrath of the Gods is to moving pictures what "Madame Butterfly" and "The Darling of the Gods" were to drama and opera.

New York American, June 9th.

Miss Tsura Aoki plays the leading role in this great drama with grace and ease that rivals the work shown by American motion picture stars.

New York Press, June 9th.

There is a great picture at the Strand this week—"The Wrath of the Gods."

Geo. H. Smith, The Globe, June 11th.

It is the best picture of the year.

Brooklyn Daily Eagle, June 7th.

The scenes with the exploding volcano in the background are terrifying. The other masterful scenes are the typhoon striking the sailing ship, the wreck, and the breaking of the storm about the hut of the girl's father.

The Evening Sun, June 9th.

See Trade Papers for a Full Review Released Through Mutual and Continental Exchanges

New York Motion Picture Corp.
Longacre Building, 42nd St. and Broadway, New York

KAY-BEE

KAY-BEE FEATURES

Second Part: The Voice at the Telephone; 2 Parts; Friday, June 26th
The Heart of a Crook " July 3rd

THOS. H. INCE, Director-General

KAY-BEE

DOMINO

DOMINO WINNERS

A Frontier Mother; 2 Parts; Thursday, June 25th
His Hour of Manhood " " " July 2nd

THOS. H. INCE, Director-General

DOMINO

BRONCHO

BRONCHO HEADLINERS

Desert Thieves; 2 Parts; Wednesday, June 24th
Shorty Gets in Trouble " " " July 1st

THOS. H. INCE, Director-General

BRONCHO

KEYSTONE

KEYSTONE COMEDIES

Three comedies a week
Monday, Wednesday and Saturday release days
MACK SENNETT, Director-General

KEYSTONE COMEDIES

KEYSTONE

Photos 8 by 10 Photos of players mentioned below can be had by sending to the Publicity Dept. 15 cents for one; 50 cents for sets of four; $1.00 for sets of eight.

MACK SENNETT
MABEL NORMAND
CHARLES CHAPLIN
ROSCOE ARBUCKLE
HARRY G. KEENAN
"BARNEY" SHERRY
RICHARD STANTON

THOS. H. INCE
GRETCHEN LEDERER
MARGARET THOMPSON
TSURU AOKI
ROY LAIDLAW
CLARA WILLIAMS
JAY HUNT
JOHN KELLER

MILDRED HARRIS
"SHORTY" HAMILTON
CHARLES RAY
WALTER BELASCO
FRANK BORZAGE
THOS. CHATTERTON
LEONA HUTTON
WILLIAM EHFE
RHEA MITCHELL

A set of 8 by 10 Photos of Keystone Mabel, in four different poses, 50 cents

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CORP.
LONG ACRE BLDG., 42nd STREET and BROADWAY, NEW YORK

MORE VALUE for LESS MONEY THAN EVER BEFORE

¶ WHEN ONE MAIL BRINGS IN OVER 700 INQUIRIES, IT IS EVIDENT THAT SOMETHING HAS BROKEN LOOSE, AND THAT IS WHAT ONE MAIL BROUGHT TO

THE PATHÉ DAILY NEWS

¶ From all parts of the North American Continent Came This Mighty Avalanche of Letters and Postcards From Exhibitors Who Know REAL VALUE When They See It. We Received 1979 Inquiries in One Week!

¶ One Incident Alone Proves the Value of This Red-Hot Motion Picture Newspaper. The Great News Sensation of the Decoration Day Press Was the Terrible Disaster of the Empress of Ireland. On Monday, Pictures of the Survivors and Scenes Connected With the Catastrophe Were Being Shown in THE PATHÉ DAILY NEWS!

WHY SHOW OLD NEWS WHEN YOU CAN RUN THESE VIVID PICTURES OF LIVE EVENTS ONLY a FEW HOURS AFTER the ACTUAL HAPPENING?

REMEMBER, BY MAIL EACH DAY DIRECT!

WRITE AT ONCE FOR FULL DETAILS, ADDRESSING

THE PATHÉ DAILY NEWS

1 CONGRESS ST., JERSEY CITY

EDISON

FACE TO FACE

A Drama by Richard Washburn Child—in "Story of the Man Who Disappeared." Produced in collaboration with the Popular Magazine.*

Following the exciting attempt to stop Earle's train, the four partners land the new Court House contract. Carter attempts to block this by a bill in the Legislature. He in turn is accused of bribery and, after exciting incidents, is found out by a clever ruse. It is a thrilling drama. Released Tuesday, July 7th.

COMING MULTIPLE REELS

The Shattered Tree
Drama. Friday, July 3rd.

In the Shadow of Disgrace
Drama. Friday, July 10th.

COMING SINGLE REELS

Back to the Simple Life
Comedy. Wednesday, July 1st.

Her Spanish Cousins
Comedy. Monday, July 6th.

Molly the Drummer Boy
Drama. Saturday, July 4th.

Andy Has a Toothache
Eighth "Andy" Comedy. Wednesday, July 8th.

*One sheets. One and three sheets. One, three and six sheet posters by the Morgan Lithograph Co.

TRADE MARK
Thomas A Edison

Thomas A. Edison, Inc.
275 Lakeside Ave., Orange, N. J.
Makers of the Edison Kinetoscope Model "D."

LUBIN

LUBIN MASTERPIECES

To be released soon through General Film Masterpiece Service

"The Wolf" 5 Reels By Eugene Walter

"The House Next Door" 5 Reels By J. Hartley Manners

"The Eagle's Nest" 5 Reels With Edwin Arden in the cast
Broadway's most popular and successful Actor

"The Fortune Hunter" 5 Reels By Winchell Smith

"The Candidate for Mayor," 2 Reels., Thurs, June 25th

Five Releases Each Week

"NICE NURSEY" } Split Reel
"BROWNS' BIG BUTLER" } Comedy
Tues., June 23rd

"THE GREATER TREASURE"
2 Reel Drama—Wed., June 24th

"THE CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR"
2 Reel Drama—Thurs., June 25th

"A PRACTICAL DEMONSTRATION"
Drama—Friday, June 26th

"WHO'S BOSS" } Comedy Split Reel
"HIS SUDDEN RECOVERY" }
Sat., June 27th

A Comedy Every Tuesday and Saturday	A Drama Every Friday	A TWO-REEL FEATURE Every Wednesday and Thursday

LUBIN'S BEAUTIFUL POSTERS

By Our Own Staff of Artists. One and Three Sheets with Single and Split Reels. One, Three and Six Sheets with all Multiple Reels.

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Philadelphia, Pa.

Chicago Office - - - - 154 West Lake Street

VITAGRAPH

"MARIA'S SACRIFICE" Drama Monday, June 22

His suspicions of his wife lead him to attempt murder. Her faithfulness is proven by her testimony, which saves him from punishment. WILLIAM HUMPHREY, EULALIE JENSEN, S. RANKIN DREW and WILLIAM V. RANOUS are the principals.

"THE PASSING OF DIANA" Two Part Drama Tuesday, June 23

She loves one man and marries another. In jealous rage, she motors over a high cliff with the other man's wife. Diana is killed; the other woman is saved. DOROTHY KELLY and JAMES MORRISON in the leads.

"THE BEAR FACTS" Comedy Wednesday, June 24

"Sonny Jim" reads about the story of "The Three Bears." He starts out to find them and sure enough he does. He makes friends with them. His father and mother are frightened, but Sonny is perfectly happy. BOBBY CONNELLY has the lead.

"HAPPY-GO-LUCKY" Comedy-Drama Thursday June 25

Everybody falls in love with her. Her happy disposition and high sense of honor wins the hearts of a young man and his mother. They will not let her leave them. CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG, EARLE WILLIAMS and ROSE TAPLEY are the leads.

"THE OLD MAID'S BABY" VITA-LAUGH Comedy Friday, June 26

Bunny likes Flora, but has no use for her "baby." A very funny chain of incidents leads to their engagement. The "baby" is glad of it. JOHN BUNNY and FLORA FINCH make a happy couple.

"HIS WIFE AND HIS WORK" Two Part Drama Saturday, June 27

Married to a woman seeing things from a different view-point, she makes his life a Hell. With mind broadened, she returns to cheer and encourage him. ALFRED D. VOSBURGH, MYRTLE GONZALEZ, ANNE SCHAEFER and GEORGE HOLT are the cast.

SIX A WEEK

"THE REFORMATION OF THE GANG"
Drama .....MONDAY, JUNE 29

"THE POOR FOLKS' BOY"
Two Part Drama.....TUESDAY, JUNE 30

"THE CIRCUS AND THE BOY"
Sonny Jim Comedy.....WEDNESDAY, JULY 1

"TWO STEPCHILDREN"
Drama .....THURSDAY, JULY 2

"A TRAIN OF INCIDENTS"
Comedy .....FRIDAY, JULY 3

"THE TOLL"
Two Part Drama.....SATURDAY, JULY 4

VITAGRAPH ONE, THREE AND SIX SHEET POSTERS.

THE VITAGRAPH CO. OF AMERICA, E. 15th St. and Locust Ave., Brooklyn, N.Y.

BROADWAY STAR FEATURES

Produced by the VITAGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA

RELEASED AND GOING STRONG

5-PART VITAGRAPH CLASSIC
A MILLION BID

3-PART COMEDY DE LUXE
GOODNESS GRACIOUS

6-PART VITAGRAPH MASTERPIECE
MR. BARNES of N. Y.

3-PART LAUGHING SPEED COMEDY
LOVE, LUCK AND GASOLENE

STATE RIGHTS The Christian TWO STATES LEFT

ATTENTION!

The Picture You Have Been Waiting for Has Been

RELEASED

The 6-Part Sensation, Fresh from Its Triumph at the Vitagraph Theatre, New York City

CAPTAIN ALVAREZ

THE MOST THRILLING PHOTO-DRAMA OF THE PAST DECADE

A Story of Love and Adventure in a War Setting

FOR TERMS AND PARTICULARS APPLY GENERAL FILM COMPANY'S SPECIAL SERVICE

By Arrangement with Broadway Star Features Co.

State Rights THE CHRISTIAN Few States Left

Address 116 Nassau Street, New York City

Five Releases Each Week

THE WEAKLING

A Two-Part Drama. The third feature of the Alice Joyce Series. The awful struggle between the brothers in the storm, and Litt's superb sacrifice to save the life of Nancy's father, will hold observers tense. This story complete in itself. Released Monday, July 6th. Business-bringing 1, 3 and 6-sheets.

KAINTUCKY BILL

Elected Sheriff in jest, "the worst moonshiner in the State" breaks up moonshining. How he does it will hold attention from first scene to last. Released Tuesday, July 7th. Striking 1 and 3-Sheet Posters.

RUBE THE INTERLOPER

What happens to this "Peeping Tom," who gets gay with two chorus girls, will keep your patrons in a roar.

(On the same reel.)

IN OLD ENGLAND

The game of Rugby between Ireland and Scotland, and the Southern Counties cross-country run, two of the interesting events. Released Friday, July 10th.

A STRING OF PEARLS

A Two-Part detective story featuring Helen Holmes. No chase could be more exciting than that in which the police race their machine through crowded streets in an effort to capture a desperate jewel thief. Released Wednesday, July 8th. Attractive 1, 3 and 6- Sheets.

LAME DOG'S TREACHERY

The deadly knife duel between Lame Dog and Two Feathers, and Atahka's ruse to save her lover, two of the absorbing scenes. Released Saturday, July 11th. Superb 1 and 3-Sheets.

"The Beast"—Produced at the Exposition held at the Grand Central Palace, New York, is one of Kalem's Tuesday Single-Reel releases. Further particulars concerning this great One-Reel Tuesday Issue will reach you shortly.

KALEM COMPANY, 235-9 West 23rd St., NEW YORK

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX — EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

J. P. Chalmers, Founder.
Published Weekly by the
CHALMERS PUBLISHING COMPANY
17 MADISON AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY.
(Telephone, 3510 Madison Square.)

J. P. Chalmers, Sr.....President
E. J. Chalmers .....Secretary and Treasurer
John Wylie .....Vice-President and General Manager
The office of the company is the address of the officers.
WESTERN OFFICE—Suite 917-919 Schiller Building, 64 West Randolph St., Chicago, Ill. Telephone, Central 5099.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and Philippine Islands ..... 3.00 per year
Canada ..... 3.50 per year
Foreign Countries (Postpaid)..... 4.00 per year

ADVERTISING RATES.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING—no display—three cents per word; minimum charge, 50c.
DISPLAY ADVERTISING RATES made known on application.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

All changes of address should give both old and new addresses in full and clearly written.

NOTE.—Address all correspondence, remittances and subscriptions to MOVING PICTURE WORLD, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square Station, New York, and not to individuals.

(The index for this issue will be found on page 1890)

Entered at the General Post Office, New York City, as Second Class Matter.

Saturday, June 27, 1914.

Facts and Comments

WHAT CAN BE DONE to rid the exhibiting profession of men who solicit half-grown girls to "come in and see the only white slave film on the avenue." A fine or even imprisonment is no more than condign punishment, but neither fine nor imprisonment will efface the stigma which such creatures leave on the good name of the industry. We wish the organized exhibitors would find some means of keeping such a person out of the exhibitors' ranks. It seems to us that the best way to deal with offenders of this kind from the standpoint of society is to revoke their license and make them thereafter ineligible for connection with any motion picture enterprise.

* * *

A CLERGYMAN from Racine, Wis., writing of the supply of educational pictures, complains that the ministers in the smaller cities have great difficulty getting a sufficient number of suitable pictures. He says that the rural clergymen have to depend "largely upon the theater exchanges, and this source is absolutely inadequate." We would recommend to all seekers after educational films to get in communication with the educational departments of the leading film manufacturers, some of whom have hundreds of subjects, before they register any more complaints as to the inadequacy of the supply of educational films.

* * *

SPEAKING of the Smith-Hughes Bill in Congress, our esteemed contemporary, The Evening Sun, remarks "that nothing could be more undesirable." The paper goes on to say that "censorship of this kind is intolerable, and never has been successful anywhere. Apart altogether from the fallibility on the part of the censors there is something absurd in the suggestion that everything must be reduced to the requirements of children." The last sentence is especially well worth pondering. The problem of the admission of children into the motion picture theaters is a very long way from being solved. All efforts made in our country to deal with the problem have failed to solve it. The subject is worthy of the best thought in the industry, and THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD proposes to offer certain suggestions in the near future, and we hope that our readers will aid with suggestions born of practical experience.

* * *

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD more than a year ago predicted the time when, following the custom in the British market, the producer and renter would show his films to the exhibitor before asking him to book them. We are gradually coming to this commendable habit. High-class exhibitors who depend on the quality of their program for larger prices of admission cannot afford to book features on any information but that of their own judgment. The more progressive among the renters and producers are careful to make the screen examination as much like a real performance as possible. Big theaters have been rented and special music provided at these screen examinations. The real worth of a picture on the screen can only be told when the best methods of presentation are used.

* * *

THE REMARKABLE INCREASE in the average price of admission charged by the motion picture theaters in this city has come about in such a gradual way that it has escaped general attention. The number of even the smaller theaters which now charge fifteen cents has increased steadily. The exhibitor is no longer afraid to charge adequately for what he knows is a fine program. Quality is responsible for this pleasing change. In many sections of the East, we are sorry to say, the nickel is still the prevailing price, but the reign of quality must eventually affect the industry in every part of the country.

* * *

AMONG THE MOST INTERESTING addresses made at the recent convention in this city was one delivered by a practical and experienced film man on the subject of posters. We are tending toward the rational and the sensible in posters. The hysterical cry for bloody paper which a short time ago seemed to affect men who were perfectly normal on all other subjects, seems to have been subsided. There ought be life and a touch of the sensational in posters, but we do not want posters apparently designed to advertise an university of crime in all its branches. The producers have learned by this time that the sensation hunting in posters may easily be overdone. Another feature of the poster phase is this: The men making paper want to make it appear indispensable to the success of a film, and for this reason they are fond of exaggeration in theme and color.

The Single Reel

By W. Stephen Bush

ONE of the great problems in the moving picture field to-day is the future of the single reel. A controversy has begun to rage around the subject. Like most controversies it has brought but little light and obscured rather than illumined the various aspects of the question. We are too apt to be influenced by our interests in viewing the future of the single reel. There is one section in the industry which looks upon the single reel with positive affection approaching almost idolatry. In this section are represented both certain producers and certain exhibitors. The big early fortunes in the industry have been made in the days of single-reel dominance. The unit of a thousand feet was adapted in the early period of our industry. It was eminently suitable to the producer, whose first concern was to supply novelty and variety. Novelty was still one of the chief charms and one of the greatest titles to popularity of the motion picture as late as 1910 and 1911. A huge and most cleverly contrived commercial machinery was built upon the basis of the perpetual reign of the single reel. The single reel was very acceptable to the exchange man. If he could only get enough of them he could supply any number of exhibitors. He could keep competitors away from each other, though two or even three of them had their theaters in the same town. The exhibitor liked the single reel because it gave him an elastic program. He could increase or decrease the numbers on his program just exactly to meet the changing needs of his theater; the one thousand feet unit was decidedly handy. We all know that in the early days there was but little system in the arrangement of the program. "Cutting the show" was common. The theaters were small and the crowds seeking admission were large. The problem of getting the first crowd out as expeditiously as possible and making room for the throng waiting in the lobby was about the severest problem confronting the very early exhibitor. The single reel put a premium on the new picture. It appealed to the exhibitor as the most available weapon for crushing his competitor. There was a time when "single reel" and "first-run" were almost convertible terms. One man took the "first run Biograph" and the other man took the "first run Kalem and Edison" and joyously felt that he was digging the "other fellow's" grave. The "first-run" craze, of which there are signs even at this day, would never have grown to its last alarming proportions if the single reel production had not supplied such tempting materials. The demand for quantity was still the loudest cry in the industry three short years ago. In 1908 and 1909 and even in 1910 almost every producer increased his output of single reels. Go back to the files of The Moving Picture World of those years and you will find its columns full of enthusiastic announcements of a new release by the Blank Film Company to be distributed on Tuesdays or Thursdays or Saturdays. At that time producers only answered a very apparent need in straining their facilities to the utmost to assure quantity.

Nor can it be denied that in 1908 and 1909 there was a distinct improvement in the quality of the average single reel despite the threatened overproduction. With all due respect for the later magnificent developments along higher lines it must be admitted that many of the old-time single reels showed great art in condensation. Padding was almost unknown. There was a steady supply of good and original comedy. Of course, much of this excellence of the single reel was due to the fact that the producers were still working on virgin soil. Popular fiction, the classics, and indeed the whole range of literature, was open to all who cared to take.

How, then, has the decadence of the single reel come about? In the first place, the producers not only answered the original demand but as time went on burdened the market far beyond the limits of a genuine public demand. Overproduction came with all its attendant evils, of which the lowering of quality is easily the worst. At the very time the public began to weary of the eternal cowboy and the chase and the cheap melodrama and the stereotyped film generally, the producers worked overtime to supply the very things waning in public favor and esteem. The result was inevitable. A new factor appeared. This was the feature containing more than a thousand feet. Singularly enough, some of the specialists in single reels were among the first to put out multiple-reel features. Unfortunately they met with no enthusiastic response from their exhibitors and exchanges. The question of price proved a great obstacle to this first development of the multiple-reel feature. Besides the exhibitors, or at least a vast majority of them, were still wedded to the single reel. The single reel they knew how to handle, single reels had furnished them with their daily bread and something to spare; they naturally dreaded any innovation, and were more than willing to continue in the old path. Then the average seating capacity of the old-fashioned motion picture theater militated against multiple-reel features. The public, however, had had its taste of big features, some of them produced on a grand scale and revealing the vast adn hitherto undreamed-of possibilities of the kinematograph as the greatest medium of visualization in the world's history. There was no resisting this demand for the new form of motion-picture entertainment. In the summer of 1911 the first great multiple feature came over from Italy—"Dante's Inferno." It was discovered in a very practical and profitable way that the public was ready for such features and quite willing to pay the price. Then it was that the rising tide of features set in, and it is still rising. Now the big theaters began to open their doors to the hitherto doubted or despised picture, and now the most important men in the theatrical world began to realize that a new art had come into being and that they must live and progress with it and utilize the opportunities it held out. From this moment dates the predominance of the multiple-reel feature in the industry. The men who furnished the staple of the industry, i. e., the single reel, took up a position of hostility to this new departure, and in this attitude they were supported by the exhibitor with a small house. It was not generally realized that the country and the industry were large enough to afford room for the old style and for the new, and that what looked like a danger of disintegration was in reality nothing more than a problem for adjustment to new conditions and broader lines of endeavor. I propose to show in my next article how this adjustment may be expected to work out to the immense benefit of the entire industry.

A HELP IN THE DAY'S WORK.

Editor Moving Picture World.

Dear Sir: Inclosed please find $3 for the renewal of my subscription to The Moving Picture World, which expires June 30th. The magazine has been a great help to me in my work. The Comments on the Films are of great value to one who cares for advance information.

Respectfully yours,

Prop., Keith and Crystal Theaters.

A Language of Enchantment

By Louis Reeves Harrison

SHAKESPEARE spoke through his most characteristic creation, cynical Prince of Denmark, and analyzed the play as a chemist resolves a substance into its elements. We may care little or nothing for what he said, and it may not apply to drama of to-day, but his critical remarks have been a final proof to many that the Great Bard spoke from knowledge that was complete. He had sounded all the depths of play-making in his time—who has done it in this glorious age of ours, this age of scientific penetration and achievement?

This is a remarkable age. Science enables us to look into the human frame and study organic workings by means of a light comparable to that of truth, so faithfully does it show us what exists, and the knowledge thus brought to us is transforming our ideals quite as well as our methods of living. Liars we may be, and hypocrites, too, but deep in our hearts is an unchanging love of truth. We are ever, ever, searching for what shall transform us and the conditions under which we live to what shall approximate our finest ideals. Nearly all that has been and has been believed in is passing away, "like the baseless fabric of this vision," that we may reach a better self-knowledge and form some conception of the purpose in our evolution.

The great mass learns slowly because it takes a long time for a fine thought or a valuable fact to reach millions scattered over the earth, but a new means of distributing thought and fact and ideals has come into existence, a language of enchantment. We but vaguely understand what a wondrous medium has been placed in our hands for development and splendid use, and we are, on that account, appropriating it for commercial rather than artistic purposes, a necessary preliminary to arouse interest in its scientific improvement, though far removed from its ultimate grand purpose.

At this stage of its evolution, at a time when we are inclined to dispense with servile imitation in its product, it may be out of place to quote the Great Bard, but as students of all that bears on this evolution, interested in its upbuilding by rational methods, we may turn ear to what he has said through Hamlet's musings, more especially the Prince of Denmark's greetings to the players he persuaded to re-enact the tragedy of his father's death. Hamlet, turning every possible occasion to account in his purpose to avenge his father's murder by subtle means, addresses the players with a direct earnestness that came from the depths of his complex nature.

"Suit the action to the word," he instructs them, "the word to the action; with this special observance, that you o'erstep not the modesty of nature; for anything so overdone is far from the purpose of playing, whose end is to hold the mirror up to nature. Now this overdone, though it make the unskillful laugh, cannot but make the judicious grieve—the censure of the which one must o'erweigh a whole theater of others." Such is the spirit and closely the word of his instructions. He continues, "O, there be players that I have seen play, and heard others praise, who have so strutted and bellowed that I have thought some of nature's journeymen had made men and not made them well, they imitated humanity so abominably."

We are most graciously spared what Hamlet would have said if he could have seen some of the moving pictures that "imitate humanity so abominably." With a million people writing photoplays which are little more than publications of incompetence, with hundreds of directors deriving their inspiration from the wrong side of the footlights, with dozens of producers attempting to show moving picture audiences what a stage play is like, our visualizations, even some of the best of them, "o'erstep the modesty of nature," though this overdone is far from the purpose of screen presentation. Instead of imitating nature, most of them are busily occupied with imitating one another.

"Work that is a mere echoing has no value," says one of the most brilliant of modern art critics. The necessity of making money in the easiest possible way, irrespective of the enduring qualities of individual effort of those inwardly moved to express something worth while on the screen, seems to be the only compelling influence at work at present. Get the money, get all there is, get it quick, by fair means or foul, is the Judas Iscariot motive behind irresponsible production and ignominious business methods. There is no other formula for making screen visualizations that meet intelligent people on their own ground than that of responding to their ideas and ideals. It is our common misfortune that "some of nature's journeymen" have in this new art "made men and not made them well"—they "imitate humanity so abominably."

We are very proud of our accomplishments in science—we feel that we participate to a degree in all that is being accomplished by men who achieve for the common good. We dream of still greater things to be done for humanity's sake, yet we have at hand a language of enchantment which can be made to hold millions enthralled by its charm, and so cast a spell over the human mind that it lies with us to convey what is small and mean, or what is great and ennobling to those fascinated minds. Which are we really doing?

After all, what do scientific developments in production and exposition, stories, plots, scenes, authors, directors, actors, count for if there is neither amusement nor significance in what is being shown on the screen. Is there amusement or significance in a very large proportion of photoplays now exhibited? Ask the exhibitor. How does he know? All the members of his audience do not regard the low price of admission as an excuse for a low grade of entertainment, and some of them express great disapprobation.

There is only one reason why people should grow tired of screen portrayals that are scientifically monotonous, and that is that they are artistically imitative or otherwise wearisome. They are repeating over and over again what has already been shown on the screen or the stage, instead of presenting something new, varied, interesting and attractive. I have personally seen a half dozen repetitions of one story, with a change of name and a few other weak modifications.

It may be profitable commercially at present to save a few dollars on the creative end of screen portrayals, but it is already a nuisance to go out of one's way to watch something that is expected to give variety and change, only to witness iteration and reiteration of motive and action. It is a nuisance to the spectator, and it is becoming an appreciable source of loss to every exhibitor who has expressed himself to me frankly on the subject. The commercial end of it for him is seriously disregarded when the natural desires of his audience are disregarded. Even those people who scorn ethical considerations long to get at eternal truths and are deeply affected by screen presentations that are truly artistic; for this art is beyond any code of morals, in itself beautiful, immortal, the exponent of limitless variety, truly a language of enchantment.

The Only Son

A Four-Reel Lasky Feature, With Thomas W. Ross in the Lead Role. Best Lasky Release So Far.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

CAST.

Thomas Brainard, Sr.	James Blackwell
Thomas Brainard, Jr.	Thos. W. Ross
Mrs. Brainard	Jane Darwell
Gertrude Brainard	Merta Carpenter
Henry Tompkins	M. MacMillan
Chas. Lester	John P. Wild
Collins	Fred Starr
Detective	Milton Brown

PROBABLY the best of the Lasky releases, "Their Only Son," has a deeper significance than the others and is closer to the human heart, especially in the big sympathetic chord it strikes in compassion for the erring. The strong note is not thrust into prominence, but the quiet lesson conveyed is more impressive on that account. It is true art to keep ethical considerations in the background, weaving them imperceptibly into a story apparently devised for no other purpose than its first and foremost one, that of entertainment.

Scene from "The Only Son" (Lasky).

Interest is enlisted at the outset in a young inventor and his wife, whose shoulder-to-shoulder struggle to build home and means of future happiness for their two children is sweetly natural, admirably suited to methods of screen portrayal, and not without thrilling exhibitions of true heroism. Side by side they fight their way to established place, in full faith that wealth means happiness, happily unaware of the character changes it brings about in those who sense its power for the first time. Lofty success brings satisfaction to the man alone and sorely strains the tie that has bound his brave companion.

Twenty years later, when he is at the zenith of his power, a railroad magnate, when their children are grown, the man remains true in his affections, but those affections have become side issues, his tremendous undertakings engrossing the large part of his attention. The wife falls and her error is discovered when her lover is murdered by someone he has wronged in the past. On his body is found a compromising letter from the magnate's wife, and it becomes a dangerous weapon in the hands of an unscrupulous detective. Exposure, due to his machinations, causes the magnate to renounce the mother of his children, and she leaves him with "their only son," the daughter remaining with her father. Mr. James Blackwell, in the role of the inventor and magnate, easily carries off all honors, and plays a part of consistent dignity to the end.

"The only son," impersonated by Thomas Ross—one feels like calling him "Tommy"—is the natural result of careless education and indulgence on the part of newly-rich parents. Work of all kinds disagrees with him as long as he is under the thrall of his father's wealth, and his conduct is that of a weakling until his innate manhood leaps into flame at the indignities put upon his erring mother. She is not faultless, but she has given the best of her life to those she loved and has only fallen through the cravings of an intense nature.

The only son grows to manhood overnight. He converts all his available securities into cash, makes a business deal with a husky Westerner named Tompkins. "Tompkins of Colorado" takes his mother with him and exhibits much of the pluck and business genius of his father in building his future from the ground up. He is a chip of the old block as a fighter and proves it when circumstances bring him into collision with men who seek to obtain control of his business, none other than his father's agents.

Scene from "The Only Son" (Lasky).

It is now a clash between father and son with some melodramatic incidents, and an ultimate happy result. Tommy Ross is a wonder, and he would have been more of a wonder if the cameraman had confined his scenes to backlights. As it is, Ross injects a delightful element of comedy of the wholesome kind into the play and does it with nice discrimination. The photodrama, in purpose, structure and quality of interpretation measures higher than any previous Lasky feature, which is saying a great deal.

"A Highwayman's Honor."

The Mecca Feature Film Company Offers a Typically English Drama of the Late Georgian Period; in Five Parts.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

THIS feature represents a practical effort on the part of the late Sir Hubert Von Herkomer to start a new school of kinematography. Sir Hubert was a gifted and clever artist, but he underestimated the importance of practical experience. His production as a whole is acceptable. He selected a powerful subject. The choice of the outdoor settings shows excellent taste. The indoor settings are singularly artistic and true to the period of the story. Indeed the historic proprieties and probabilities have been most carefully observed—with one exception. The photograph in the locket is a plain anachronism, though it will probtbly be noticed but by a few. It was no mean task to create the genuine atmosphere of the England of the last Georges, but this has been done in a most convincing manner. The photography of the interiors leaves nothing to be desired, but the contrary is true of the outdoor work. It seems to me as if some of the best opportunities had been spoiled by taking the pictures against the sun and in many scenes there is an haze.

The story is typically English, strongly flavored with melodrama, but quite gripping at times. The final climax is particularly strong. I must find fault with what I may be permitted to call the dramatic tempo of the play. It moves at times too fast, as, for instance, in the last few scenes, when a more gradual working out of the striking situation would have probably been far more effective. At other times it might move rapidly with great advantage to dramatic strength.

All the actors and actresses had pleasing personalities from Sir Hubert down. They were all earnest in their work, but they lacked camera experience. The picture is rich in scenic effects. One of the pretty things is the fox-hunt, which is quite realistic. The hedges and lawns of rural England are shown in charming profusion and will be admired wherever seen.

The hold-ups though they form a logical part of the plot itself might have been portrayed with less detail and less realism. This and the undue length of some of the scenes may easily be remedied.

Across the Burning Trestle.

Edison Adaptation from "In Christmas Canyon." Written by Francis Lynde and Directed by Richard R. Ridgely.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

CAST.

Tom ..... Yale Benner
Doris ..... Mabel Trunelle
Jake Mills ..... Herbert Pryor
Superintendent ..... Bigelow Cooper

A STORY of thrilling incidents built around the adventures of a plucky girl, "Across the Burning Trestle" will add variety and interest to a program of short plays. It illustrates the persistency of chance in the course of many lives and the adaptability of human character to unsought surroundings under pressure of necessity. The plucky girl in this case is Doris, impersonated by Mabel Trunelle in the serious and sincere manner that has made her acting so dependable and so consistently good. The role of heroine in melodrama is not one of great character-opportunity, but she invariably rises above the play of incident in which she participates and lifts it to a higher plane by her intelligent and comprehensive grasp of whatever she is called upon to interpret.

Scene from "Across the Burning Trestle" (Kalem).

Doris learns telegraphy from an expert and marries her teacher. When he is prostrated by poor health and forced to rest at an expensive sanitarium, costly enough to be designated as "sanatorium," she seeks an opportunity to work near him, and is obliged to lie for the privilege of earning her living. The Division Superintendent of the railway, at whose office she first obtains employment, insists that his telegraph operators must be unmarried, and Doris accommodates him by removing her wedding ring and posing to suit his requirements. Her attention to business enlists confidence, and she is given full charge of a small and remote station near a deep ravine and bridge. Jake Mills, the man she relieves, is dismissed for drunkenness, and he decides to remain in the neighborhood for the purpose of revenging himself on the superintendent who discharged him, and his successor at the same time.

Scene from "Across the Burning Trestle" (Kalem).

Meanwhile, during the period that Jake is developing his scheme, the husband of Doris reappears, and she takes him to a little home she has prepared in the woods, where he may fully recover his health. Jake chances to see Doris in company with her husband and concludes that her conduct, inasmuch as she is supposed to be unmarried, is that of a rather loose character. He visits the station while in his cups and becomes offensively familiar. The resistance of Doris kindles his anger, and when he learns that the Superintendent is expected on the next train, he decides to attempt wholesale destruction by setting fire to the bridge.

The rest of the story is told in the title—it is one of those titles that placard the plot and rob plays of any natural element of suspense. Doris fights her way across the burning trestle, flags the train, faints on the track, and is picked up by the Superintendent and the train crew. She recovers and guides them across the ravine, effects the arrest of the villainous Jake and reaps a rich reward for her courage, in spite of the little lie she told.

Big Fire at Lubin Plant.

Explosion Wrecks Film Storage Vault Causing Damage of Between $500,000 and $1,000,000—No Interruption in Business.

AN EXPLOSION, thought to have been caused by spontaneous combustion, destroyed the large film storage vault of the Lubin Film Manufacturing Company, at Twentieth Street and Indiana Avenue, Philadelphia, Saturday, June 13th, injuring a number of people and causing a property loss which is variously estimated between $500,000 and $1,000,000.

One of the injured is an Italian boy for whom little hope of recovery is entertained. The escape of scores of others who were near the vault when the explosion came with only minor injuries is regarded as miraculous.

The following telegram received by The Moving Picture World Tuesday morning will answer the inevitable inquiries as to what effect the disaster will have upon the Lubin program:

> Moving Picture World,
> 17 Madison Avenue,
> New York City.
>
> Through our good fortune in having as great facilities as we have, we will not have a single day's interruption in our deliveries. Have increased our number of companies and with the well-known fighting spirit of Lubin behind us, it will not be many days before we are back on top again with films that will be better than ever.

The explosion came about 10 o'clock in the morning without the slightest warning. No one was in the vault at the time, and that it was tightly closed up is given as the reason for the force of the let-go which was sufficient to blow out an entire wall of brick and concrete eighteen inches thick.

Bricks and mortar were blown in every direction and a string of two-story houses on the same street were badly damaged, some of them being practically destroyed. Rolls of burning film were showered everywhere and many of the adjoining frame buildings were set on fire. It was fire that injured the Italian boy who is not expected to recover; he was playing in the street near the vault at the time of the explosion and his clothes were ignited by a roll of film.

About 500 people, including a number of actors and actresses, were at work in adjoining Lubin buildings at the time of the explosion and a panic was narrowly averted. Some of the girls who hurried from the buildings fainted because of the excitement and had to be taken into houses nearby for medical attention. Heroic action on the part of a number of the male employees resulted in saving a lot of valuable property which was threatened. Harry Meyers, one of the Lubin men, saw the little Italian boy as he fell in the street with his clothing ablaze and prevented the youngster's certain death by beating out the flames in the boy's clothes and carrying him to safety.

Early reports of the explosion included an estimate of the damage done made by Ira Lowrey, general manager of the Lubin company, who said:

"Some of the films which were destroyed had never been put on the market; others cannot be reproduced or duplicated. Our loss on films will be at least $500,000, and on the vault building about $5,000 more. The only explanation we can give for the explosion and fire is that sun, coming through one of the windows, so heated one of the tin cylinders holding a film that it exploded, setting the others off."

Included in the damage done by the explosion, of course, must be the damage sustained by the property holders in the locality whose houses were either wrecked by the force of the explosion or burned by the resulting flames. Of these houses, sixteen were almost wholly destroyed and a score of others were damaged.

Closing Days of the Convention.

International Motion Picture Association Decides to Send a Committee of Seven to the National League's Convention in Dayton, with Full Authority to Talk Amalgamation— Proceedings of the Last Three Days.

By George Blaisdell.

THE convention of the International Motion Picture Association came to a close on Saturday noon. The sessions, which had been held in the Grand Central Palace, were in conjunction with the Second International Exposition of Motion Picture art. The latter came to an end on Saturday evening, the occasion being enlivened by the visit of a large delegation from the Screen Club, which, headed by a band, paraded fromits clubrooms to the hall, returning over the same route at 1045. Much usiness was transacted during the week, but the event of importance was the selection of seven delegates to go to Dayton to meet a lke commttee of the Exhbtors' League of America in an effort to effect a reconciliation between the two organizations. There seemed to be confidence among the leaders of the association that an amalgamation would result.

THURSDAY—Morning Session.

THE entire session on Thursday morning was given over to an address by F. J. Rembusch, of Indiana, and to the answering of questions directed by various delegates to the speaker of the morning. Mr. Rembusch's talk in its early stages was devoted to highly technical subjects connected with projection from the screen end. Mainly, however, his address was most informing and very interesting. He spoke at length on the importance of the exhibitor understanding reflected and diffused light.

"One of the things an exhibitor runs into," said Mr. Rembusch, "is the fadeaway. Fadeaway is a very natural thing, but it is not understood because manufacturers of screens and their salesmen are sometimes disinclined to be entirely frank. The truth might as well be told, and can be understood very readily. It is hardly possible that you can make every seat in your house alike. Some seats receive more illumination than others.

"Light can be distributed just as you can distribute anything else. This fadeaway is the thing we want to tell the truth about. The trouble with the whole moving picture business is that people don't always tell the truth. There is something about the industry that leads people to exaggerate. An exhibitor may be in this business two weeks and you can't tell him anything. There is just as much to know about the science of projection as there is about medicine. It is a wonderfully deep science. Here we are up against this proposition also: We have no authority anywhere who can tell what is really the best scientifically.

"Many exhibitors go to some place to see a picture with the idea of examining the equipment. Now in equipment there are thousands of equations to be considered. There are no two picture theaters alike, so that when anybody asks you to look at a picture and see what a motor generator does, for instance, he is wrong. What you want to know is what will it do in your house. You will never get anywhere until you get it out of your head that you can go into a house and tell about the equipment. The trouble with the exhibitor is that he has been lied to so much that he does not believe anybody. You should not only have architects of buildings, but architects of projection—some place, some where, somebody who can tell you how to get the best results with a certain amount of money.

"The trouble is that you don't give the people enough picture light. A perfect film, a perfect screen and a lot of light will make a perfect picture. We have got to get more light to the retina of the eye. The film will become more transparent. Superimpose no other light over the screen light, which is your whole show, the very life of your show. You ought to protect that light as you would protect your box office. Sometimes the expenditure of a nickel for a bit of curtain will improve your picture 50 per cent.—just by protecting your screen. The moving picture industry has done wonders and beautified the outside of the houses. Let us get to the heart of it and beautify the inside.

"When you get a large screen and a short throw you are out of the optical limit," said Mr. Rembusch in answer to a question. "Get a long throw whenever you can."

THURSDAY—Afternoon Session.

The first speaker at the afternoon session was F. H. Richardson of the projection department of the Moving Picture World. Mr. Richardson called attention in opening to the fact that it was the first time in the history of the industry that a representative of the operating room had been honored by an invitation to address a body of exhibitors on the subject of projection. He said further that it afforded him genuine pleasure to meet the exhibitors and extend in this way the personal acquaintances he had formed in the last few years. Mr. Richardson's address was printed in full in the World last week.

A delegate attempted to read some resolutions which it was inferred might be an invitation to hold the next convention in San Francisco. Vice-president Tugwell opposed the reading of them until such time as the convention might take up the subject of selecting a city for the holding of next year's session.

The following was submitted by Mr. Sachter, of Pennsylvania, as a substitute for a resolution offered by Secretary Rosenthal:

Whereas, Adverse State and National legislation is continually being introduced, legislation that has a tendency to hamper the developments of the trade; and

Whereas, Such attempted legislation can best be defeated by united and concerted action on the part of all branches of the industry; and

Whereas, The motion picture industry has noy reached a stage where it is essential for harmonious and united action of all the branches of the industry; therefore be it

Resolved, That the International Moving Picture Association recommend the establishment of a Trade Board where film manufacturers, exchange men, exhibitors and all the allied branches of the trade can be represented for the purpose of protecting the industry as a whole; and be it further

Resolved, That the incoming executive officers be hereby instructed to enlist the different elements for the establishment of such Trade Board.

Some Exhibitors Shy of Board of Trade Idea.

There seemed to be a fear on the part of some of the delegates that in the proposed board there would be danger of submerging the identity and importance of the exhibitors' organization. Mr. Smith, of New York, was inclined to favor the resolution, but was fearful. Mr. Herrington said he was ready to fight anything in any form of legislation or trade action that would tend to weaken the influence of the exhibitors' association. He went into the history of organizations in the film industry, which seemed to tend toward establishing the fact that the exhibitor was not the one who came out on top in such affiliations. Mr. Herrington expressed the opinion that the exhibitor had no reason to fear his ability to cope with the representatives of any other branch of the trade, and avowed his belief that in brains the exhibitor was the equal of any other part of the motion picture industry. "There is a time when the manufacturer needs the exhibitor," he said. "There is a time when the exhibitor needs the aid of the manufacturer. That time is when there is adverse legislation started. At that time our interests are identical. At that time we should fight together. I ask you to give this resolution due consideration. Don't attempt to pass it to-day."

Mr. Hollander favored the deferrence of the question of affiliation until the exhibitors' organization was on a sound basis, until such time as all States were organized. "Keep the manufacturers away from us, and stand alone. When it comes down to danger from threatening legislation and we need cooperation, let us then appoint a committee to confer with the manufacturers, but don't go to work and force to run a hurdle race the baby creeping on the floor. We are hardly on our feet, and yet ye are trying to start a new organization."

Mr. Bullock told of the advantages such an organization would have been to the trade at the time the Ohio exhibitors were fighting the censorship law. "When we tried to repeal that law the question of funds came up," said Mr. Bullock. "When we sent out an appeal, do you know what happened? Not a single exchange, manufacturer, or accessory man responded. If there had been a board of trade before which we could have laid our troubles we would have got quick action."

There had been two or three attempts on the part of some of the delegates to get an adjournment. The day was hot, and there was to be an early start for a moonlight sail on the Hudson. It looked as if the adjourners were going to get away with it. Mr. Gilosky, of Minnesota, took the floor. "We came down here fourteen hundred miles to do some business," he said. "You know it takes us time to get back home, and there is also here one at least who has to travel as far away as the Pacific Coast. For those who live near here it is different. A great many of us are going to start on Saturday. We feel that if you have any work to do you should stay right here and do it to-day, not defer it until to-morrow."

The session did not adjourn; in fact, it was 5:30 before that action was taken. Instead they gave the floor to a professional organizer who talked for many, many minutes. Mr. Rembusch then presented a resolution the contents of which he had outlined in impromptu remarks made the day before. "It is not going to hurt us," he said, "but there is a possibility of it benefiting us a great deal." It was adopted unanimously, without debate. Here it is:

Whereas, The motion picture industry is now recognized as an art of the highest order, and as no art or literature is ever measured by the foot or by the mile, it being absurd and ridiculous to supply productions and films by lineal measure.

Therefore Be It Resolved, That the Moving Picture Exhibitors, in convention, express their disapproval of this manner of producing films, and request that hereafter manufacturers shall endeavor to make the length of film only consistent with what it takes to produce artistic and complete film stories and not by lineal measure; and be it further

Resolved, That if it is too inconvenient for commercial purposes to produce films of these various lengths at the present time, the manufacturers shall at least as a beginning reduce the unit to 500 feet, so that we may receive films in units of 500 feet, 1,000, 1,500, etc., and over, and in this way improve the artistic quality to a great advantage for the exhibitor and the industry as a whole, and by this step greatly increase the interest and enjoyment to the public of the moving picture exhibition by making the film story complete with the addition of no superfluous matter, and by retaining on the other hand such matter as it is necessary to fully complete the film story.

Mr. Herrington, speaking to the resolution referring to exchangemen and manufacturers owning theaters, talked at length on conditions in Pittsburg, where, he said, the various exchanges were subject to one managerial influence; where large houses were being built, to the detriment of the smaller exhibitor, and where the pick of the first runs went to favored theaters. He asked for the appointment of a committee to take up the subject with the various controlling groups here in New York, which he described as the logical center of the industry.

Minnesota Wants to be Shown.

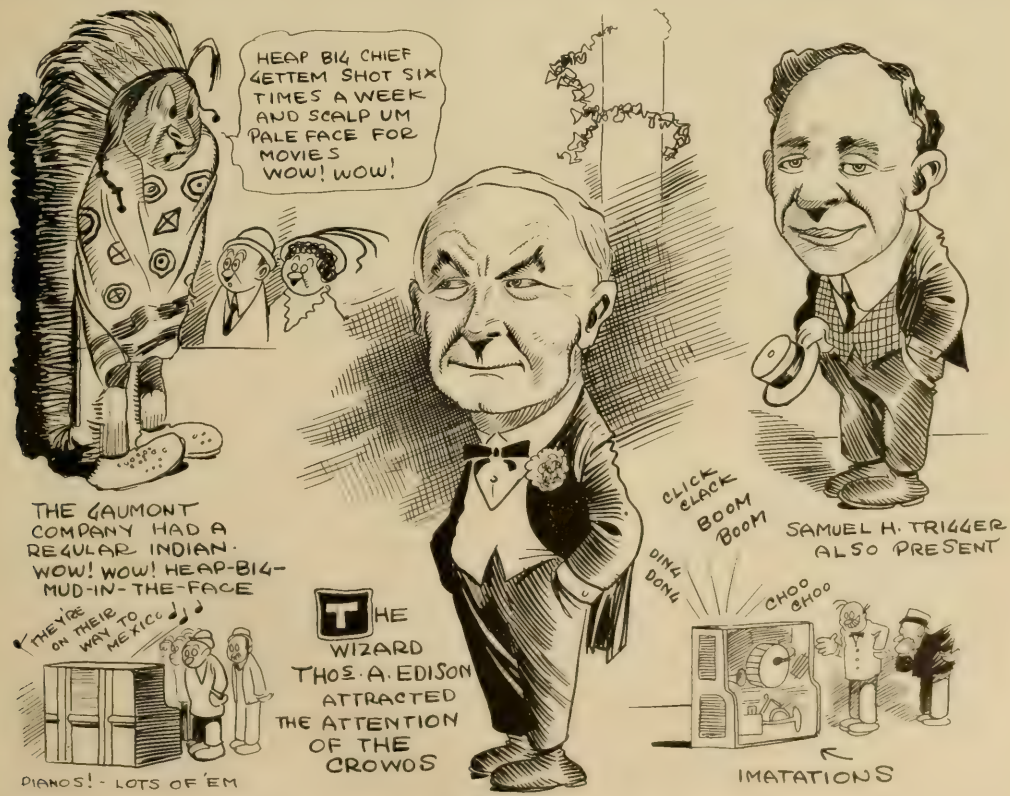
Mr. Gilosky described the situation in Minnesota as regards the exhibitors' organization. He said the men out there had been invited to join the national organization, but had decided to wait until they saw what happened in New York in regard to organizing the different States of the country. He asked point blank for information as to the intentions of the officers and inquired in what way the various States are brought together. "How are you going to organize to get all the different States to join you?" he persisted.

Mr. Bullock, chairman of the committee on resolutions, stated there had been two resolutions presented, but they had not yet been disposed of. President Phillips, in replying, claimed that at this convention there were four times as many delegates as there were in New York last year. "It is no criterion that there are so few here to-day," he said. "That is probably due to the fact that the weather is very warm, that many of them came a long distance, that it is getting toward the end of the week, and many of them want to see the great city. I want to say for the officers you will find that the International Motion Picture Association is going to do more for you in one year than the league has done since its organization. We are here deliberating in New York to-day for the purpose of organizing more solidly than we are now, and we appeal to you gentlemen to assist us in advancing this organization. I assure you that your officers for the ensuing year, whoever they may be, will conduct your business properly."

Mr. Denton, of New Jersey, expressed the opinion that the present convention would go down in motion picture history as the best yet held. He advocated the printing of the full report of the sessions in the form of a year book for the convenience and benefit of the exhibitors of the country. He said that his State will be in line before many days, and guaranteed that prior to the next convention it would show an organization second to none.

"We are holding a convention out in our State on June 24, delayed purposely until after this one," said Mr. Van Dusee of Minnesota, "so that we might hear what you were going to do next year. We withdrew from the league. We want to know what this organization is doing. How many States can we depend on? We have got to know what the International Association is going to do for the exhibitor."

"What our course may be in regard to the national organization is being held in abeyance," said Secretary Rosenthal. "It is the earnest wish of every officer of the international organization that all the exhibitors get together in one solid organization,



HEAP BIG CHIEF GETTEM SHOT SIX TIMES A WEEK AND SCALP UM PALE FACE FOR MOVIES WOW! WOW!
THE GAUMONT COMPANY HAD A REGULAR INDIAN. WOW! WOW! HEAP-BIG-MUD-IN-THE-FACE
THEY'RE ON THEIR WAY TO MEXICO
PIANOS! - LOTS OF 'EM
THE WIZARD THOS. A. EDISON ATTRACTED THE ATTENTION OF THE CROWDS
CLICK CLACK BOOM BOOM
DING DONG
CHOO CHOO
IMATATIONS
SAMUEL H. TRIGGER ALSO PRESENT

Impressions of the Convention by Cartoonist Thornton Fischer.

and—we are waiting to hear the news from Dayton. Personally I feel that we will receive good news from Dayton, for the men who have stuck to the Exhibitors' League throughout the past year will have the foresight and wisdom to elect a new president of that organization. It will be a very short time before there will be a solid organization of exhibitors in this country. We have worked along these lines. Efforts have been made to get uninstructed delegates. There is absolutely no reason why the exhibitors should have two organizations, and there is no reason why one man or one object should be allowed to stand in the way. No one man in this organization will stand in the way of a full understanding."

Pennsylvania Working to Unite

There was fire in the eye of Vice-president Tugwell, but a delegate from Pennsylvania got the floor. He said he was present with an exhibitor companion, and that the two would be at Dayton. He regretted that in his State the east and the west were divided, but earnest work was being done to unite the two bodies. "That," he said, "is why we are here to-day. We have the interests of the motion picture industry at heart. Pennsylvania will work along lines of the international association, although we are not members now. We want a solid organization, a national organization."

Mr. Tugwell here announced that if Secretary Rosenthal was inclined to bend the knee to the national association the two would part right there. Mr. Tugwell was much het up. "This organization is big enough not to have to ask any other organization to permit it to come in," enthusiastically added Mr. Denton. "We are setting our faces toward the rising, not the setting sun."

"I was present when the league was born," said Mr. Rembusch by way of suggesting to those who might not know him that he had knowledge of the subject he was discussing. "Our trouble has been that we have not got together in the right spirit. We have been narrow, been fighting, have been destructive instead of constructive in our work. I want to answer the Judge in this way. We ought not to give in, but we need some way to express ourselves that will point out we want all the exhibitors with us. I don't know how it shall be done. Advancement in the world to-day is not due to fighting, but to mediation. There is no issue between the exhibitors but one man. When he is eliminated we can have a big organization again. We must have a national organization. I have analyzed our trouble—it is a one-man trouble. We can have a big brotherhood with mediation. In appointing a committee to go to Dayton we will not dishonor ourselves."

"At a meeting of the executive board in Chicago a committee was appointed to meet a committee from the league," said President Phillips, "with the object of trying to effect a combination between the two. We wanted to make it a solid organization. We never heard from the other side."

Mr. Bullock advocated the appointment of an organizer. Mr. Herrington called attention to the fact that there are many exhibitors outside of both organizations. "We have got to do what other organizations do," he said; 'we have got to divide the wheat from the chaff—separate the good from the bad. If there is anything in the Exhibitors' League of America or the Motion Picture Association that stands for censorship we can't buckle up. What we want to get rid of is that element that is clamoring for censorship."

It was voted to appoint a committee, to meet after the convention adjourns, to receive applications for membership from the various States and Territories, Canada and the Dominion.

"Let us flood the Dayton convention with these applications for membership," added Mr. Herrington. "Let us tell them that we want all of them that are good."

FRIDAY—Morning Session.

It was 10:50 o'clock when the delegates were called to order by President Phillips. For the first time many of the delegates discarded their coats, and there was plenty of justification for it. Considerable business was transacted during the morning. The resolution favoring a Board of Trade, introduced the day before, was taken up and passed. President Phillips and his executive associates were re-elected without opposition. In spite of Vice-President Tugwell's left-handed nomination of Los Angeles as one of the cities to be considered for the holding of next year's convention, the delegates decided on New York City. The date of the convention for 1915 was left to the judgment of the Executive Board of the association. There was a momentary stir in the morning when George W. Wiley, Secretary of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, entered the hall and was escorted to the platform, where he remained during the rest of the session in conversation with the officers and listening to the discussions. There was a sprinkle of applause as Mr. Wiley passed up the aisle to the platform.

Mr. Rembusch said that he could not see anything wrong and he could see a lot of good in a trade organization. "Where do we stand to lose anything by taking in the other branches of the trade?" he said. "For over three years I have been working with exhibitors' organizations, and we have accomplished nothing but talk. We will have a chance to do something with the aid of the allied trades. It is going to appeal to the exhibitors everywhere."

"This resolution calls for board of trade independent of this organization," said Mr. Tugwell. "It is based on a combination with us of exchange men, manufacturers and accessory men, to do everything that can be done for the uplifting of the business. It does not take them into this organization, but provides for another association in the trade."

The next order of business was as to the best method of combining the exhibitors into one organization and financing it. On a motion of Mr. Rembusch the entire matter was left to the executive board.

Mr. Furniss moved a rising vote of thanks to the committees on resolutions and grievances for their splendid work, especially singling out Sam Bullock. It was unanimously passed.

Mr. Furniss also moved a vote of thanks to the manufacturers for their contribution to the success of the exposition. It was likewise unanimously passed.

Mr. Gilosky moved a vote of thanks to the exhibitors of New York for their splendid work in the convention and exposition. Mr. Tugwell offered an amendment to the effect that the thanks of the association also be extended to Sam Trigger. It was passed by a rising vote.

President Phillips Is Re-elected.

A motion of Mr. Sachter that the entire board be re-elected was declared out of order, and the convention proceeded to take up the offices separately. Mr. Phillips was re-elected without opposition. The president was given an ovation. "I certainly appreciate this splendid reception," said Mr. Phillips, in response to demands for a speech. "I didn't expect it. I didn't think I had so many friends among the exhibitors. I certainly thank you from the very depths of my heart."

"Next year we will have a roll-call and all the States will be well represented," said Vice-President Tugwell, following his election upon the nomination of Mr. Trigger. "I promise you that I will do all that an old man can."

Secretary Harold W. Rosenthal was elected by acclamation. "It is the hardest thing in the world for a secretary to be re-elected, because in trying to do things for his organization he naturally must do a great many things that are displeasing. I certainly would not be human if I did not appreciate the splendid re-election you have given me to-day."

William Sweeney was elected treasurer. Mr. Sweeney was called upon for a speech. He is a man of few words, and he had been all the week a good listener—but what he does say he says rapidly. "There is not much for me to say," said Mr. Sweeney, "except that I feel highly honored. I also want to say that so far as my election is concerned, this association will always get the best support I can give it."

There was a feeling among some of the delegates that the convention should elect an executive board, but it was explained that according to the constitution this body was selected by the board members of the various States. In the discussion Mr. Gilosky said that when Minnesota selected a man for the national board it would be Thomas Furniss, who had done a lot of work for the State and national organizations. Mr. Sweeney suggested that the delegates from the various States get together during the noon recess and make their selections for the national board.

Mr. Tugwell was the first recognized to speak when the convention reached the nomination of cities for holding the next convention. He said he had received a telegram from Los Angeles, offering a convention hall and committee rooms free. Mr. Tugwell said there were many things to be taken into consideration in selecting a convention city. "There is a vast stretch of country between here and the Pacific," he said. "You cannot come out there and be away from your business for less than three weeks and maybe four. If we can build a permanent exposition and take it under the charge of the State of New York or of the executive committee of this organization, we can have more money, ten to one, by holding it here." While placing Los Angeles in nomination, he agreed that "if you choose New York you will please me exceedingly."

Charles Hatfield, a delegate to the convention, who is also field secretary of the Bureau of Conventions and Societies for the exposition in San Francisco next year, moved that the president be authorized to appoint a committee of five to confer with committees of other branches of the industry, with the view of holding a congress in connection with the exposition at San Francisco in 1915. The motion was passed after much discussion.

Mr. Trigger advocated holding the exposition and convention in some other city next year. He referred to the work entailed in preparing for such affairs, which, he said, involved four or five months' time and usually had to be done by a very few men. He said that so far as he was concerned he had just as soon go to Los Angeles, but he agreed that New York was the center and that in the California city or in Chicago, as much could not be accomplished as in New York. He said that the committee in New York had been on the job for months, from 9 in the morning until 6 at night, at which time it was necessary for them to begin their own day's work. He declared that the committee had worked without compensation. "You will find it mighty hard to get exhibitors to do that work every summer," he concluded.

New York was unanimously chosen as the city for next year's exposition and convention.

On motion of Mr. Gilosky it was decided to instruct the national committee to appoint a manager to handle all de-

(Continued on page 1831)

AH HA! ALSO AMONG THE MERRY THRONG PRESIDENT CHAS. H. PHILLIPS OF THE INT'L MOTION PICTURE ASS'N GANG WAY!
THE MINUTE SOME CELEBRITY BLEW IN SIGHT
OUT O' ME WAY!
LOOK OUT!
LET ME BY!
W. J. SWEENEY WAS IN OUR MIDST YA BET!
OH DEAR MR. BUSHMAN!
MAYBE I CAN GET IT ALL HOME IN SEVEN TRIPS
AH, MR. BUSHMAN, AUTOGRAPH THIS CARD!
SIGN YOUR NAME
SMILE ON ME ONCE AND I CAN DIE HAPPY!
GEMINETLY! I SIGNED MY NAME 4,675,941 TIMES DURING THE EXPOSITION
MOVING PICTURE OF A VISITOR "PACKING" A LOAD OF EXPOSITION LITERATURE
A BUNCH OF MOVIE STARS WE KNOW, WILL BE TROUBLED WITH WRITER'S CRAMP FOR SIX WEEKS TO COME
FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN WAS SURROUNDED BY AN ADMIRING GROUP
GEE, IF IT AIN'T ALICE!
GOLLY, THERE'S SWEET ALICE JOYCE
ALICE JOYCE WAS PROMINENT AMONG THE GREAT
OH, YES!
FIRST YOU TURN THE DO-DAD AND LOWER THE JIM CRACK AND YOU HAVE IT. IT'S VERY SIMPLE.
CAMERA EXHIBIT
THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD
SOME MAGAZINE
EVERYBODY GRABBED A COPY OF THE MAGAZINE

Further Observations and Reckonings taken by Cartoonist Fischer at the time. . .

"Manon Lescaut."

The Playgoers' Film Company Presents at the Republic Theater, Mme. Lina Cavalieri in Abbe Prevost's Immortal Love Story, in Four Parts.

Reviewed by H. W. De Long.

CAST:

Manon ..... Lina Cavalieri
Chevalier Des Grieux ..... Lucien Muratore
Fifine, Manon's maid ..... Dorothy Arthur
Count de Bretigny ..... W. L. Abingdon
Abbe Tiberge ..... Charles Hammond
Lescaut, Manon's brother, a guardsman .. Frank H. Westerton
Rochfort, Governor of Louisiana ..... Henry Weaver
Synnelet, his nephew ..... Frank Hardy
Edouarde, his aide ..... H. L. Winslow
Governor of St. Lazare ..... Walter Cecil

THE SCENES of the piece are portrayed in a lavish manner and the attention to details and historical correctness are manifested throughout. Lina Cavalieri portrayed the part of the faithful girl with all the finesse that has made her world famous. Lucien Muratore is at all times convincing and the supporting cast is quite up to the standard set by the principals.

The photography is adequate in every respect and the whole ensemble evidences that a master-hand directed.

Lina Cavalieri and Lucien Muratore in "Manon Lescaut."

The story opens at Manon's humble home in the country. She has a fanatically religious father who insists that she shall enter a convent. She complies, but on the way meets the Chevalier Des Grieux, a scion of a fine family. It is a case of love at first sight. He persuades her to flee with him to Paris.

The Count de Bretigny occupies an adjoining residence. He meets Manon and, attracted, makes her acquaintance. Failing in his attempts to separate her from Des Grieux he writes his father, Des Grieux, an old friend in Picardy, who objects to his son's choice and sends his elder brother to Paris, who takes Des Grieux away by force. The Count then bribes Manon's maid to inform her mistress that Des Grieux has deserted her. Alone in Paris without friends or money she is compelled to accept the protection of the scheming Count. The Chevalier, believing that Manon no longer cares for him, is persuaded by Abbe Tiberge to become an Abbe. He goes to Paris to study at St. Sulpice; but Manon is still unforgotten and he cherishes her memory.

Through the now repentant maid Manon discovers the trick by which she was separated from her lover and leaves the house and visits the Chevalier at St. Sulpice, where she induces him to fly with her. Manon's unprincipled brother is employed by the Count to bring Manon back to him. Ruffians in his employ attempt to carry out this plan, but the Chevalier frustrates them and after a furious street combat escapes. Manon, however, is kidnapped and taken to the house of the Count from where her lover rescues her after a struggle with the perfidious Count. Through financial straits Des Grieux attempts to redeem himself by gambling. The Count accuses him of cheating, and both he and Manon are thrown into separate prisons from which they escape with the assistance of Lescaut, Manon's brother, who is killed, and Manon recaptured.

Eventually she is transported to America. Des Grieux smuggles himself as a stowaway on board the same ship; discovered, he explains to the captain why he is there, who kindly favors him, and in the new world the Governor of Louisiana, then a French province, consents to their union. While a priest is performing the ceremony of marriage the Governor's nephew, who has become infatuated with Manon, pleads with his uncle to forbid the union. The Chevalier meets the Govenor's nephew, and in a dual mortally wounds him, then flees with Manon to the forest where, exhausted, she expires and is buried by her lover, who dies on her grave.

Church People in Picture Field.

The Rev. William Carter Heads New Corporation Which Will Make Religious and Educational Films—Will Send Company to Holy Land.

AN ANNOUNCEMENT made in the New York Times of Saturday morning will be of particular interest to moving picture people throughout the country who have been following the proceedings at the recently held convention of the International Moving Picture Association at Grand Central Palace. The announcement is to the effect that there has been organized by the Rev. William Carter, well known among moving picture men, the Church and School Social Service Corporation for the purpose of providing moving pictures of a religious and educational nature for use of churches, schools, social settlements, and other similar institutions.

Mr. Carter is a member of the National Board of Censorship in New York City and is also associated with the International Peace Forum. Because of his interest in moving pictures he was invited to address the recently held convention at Grand Central Palace on the subject of "The Church and the Moving Picture Theater." In his address, it is recalled, he emphasized the necessity of moving picture manufacturers turning out such religious and educational subjects as would meet the requirements of churches, schools, social settlements, etc., mho have been convinced of the usefulness of moving pictures in the work which they are striving to accomplish. As a specific instance of the need of such films, Mr. Carter said that only a couple of weeks ago he had interviewed Miss Jane Addams, of Hull House, Chicago, who had told him that that, at the Hull House, after a year's trial of presenting religious and educational pictures, successfully conducted insofar as ethical results were concerned and at a slight financial profit, it had been found necessary to abandon the plan for the reason that no more films of the required class could be obtained. Addressing the moving picture men, and calling their attention to the great field which existed for educational and religious subjects, the Rev. Mr. Carter said: "You men will have to make these pictures; if you do not, we'll make them ourselves."

That the Church and School Social Service Corporation has been formed is an indication that Mr. Carter was basing his promise, or threat, upon fact.

The new company has been organized with Mr. Carter as president, the Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst as vice-president, S. S. McClure as secretary, and Henry Clews as treasurer. An advisory board has been appointed, its members including prominent churchmen and educators in New York City and throughout the country.

It is explained by the president of the company that while the primary object of the new corporation is to use moving pictures as an important factor in religious and educational work, the matter has not been taken up without complete investigation of the commercial possibilities of the proposition—in other words, the promoters of the company have convinced themselves that they cannot only do a vast amount of good, but can make the company self supporting. "There is nothing visionary about the plan," Mr. Carter said; "we feel that there is a great demand for the kind of pictures which we intend to provide and, with the thought of perpetuating the activities of our corporation, we have arranged to handle it in a thoroughly business-like way."

A practical moving picture man who is now employed as assistant general manager of one of the large film exchanges has been engaged as general manager of the new corporation and will join it within the next few weeks. Temporary offices have been established with the International Peace Forum, in which Mr. Carter is also interested, at 18 East Forty-first Street.

The first pictures made by the corporation will come from the Holy Land, and negotiations are already under way for the sending of a company of operators to the scene of the early Bible stories. The preparation of these early releases is expected to require many months, and in the meantime, with the idea of creating a market for the kind of pictures which the corporation intends to handle, the corporation will at once begin the assembling of a library of films by purchase of such subjects as are available from the products of commercial companies already in the field. These purchased subjects will be used for the first year and after that time there will be ready for addition to the library pictures which have been especially made by the company.

In addition to taking pictures, the new corporation also plans to enter the exhibiting field, but, because a distribution more complete than could possibly be secured in this way is required, the subjects will be rented to such exhibitors, whether represented by churches, schools, social settlements, or moving picture theater men, as find it profitable to use them.

The Rev. Carter has spent the past three months in investigating conditions throughout the country with the idea of ascertaining just haw great a demand for religious and educational pictures reall exists and it is because of the results of this investigation that the new company has been formed. It is aid that many inquiries have already been received for the kind of service which the corporation plans to supply, inquiries coming from social settlements and churches throughout the country, among the latter being one of the most prominent churches in New York City, where it is desired to use a program of carefully selected moving pictures in place of the regular Sunday evening service each week.

Echoes of the Exposition.

By F. H. Richardson.

IN CONJUNCTION with the Exhibitors' Convention recently held in the Grand Central Palace, New York City, there was a varied display of equipment by manufacturers and dealers who cater to the various branches of the moving picture industry.

Some of the machine manufacturers were represented and had on exhibition their latest models of projectors, with all the up-to-date improvements and accessories.

Perhaps the one biggest minor improvement in operating-room equipment displayed was the L. C. Smith rewinder. Readers of the department will perhaps remember that something more than a year ago I described the then L. C. Smith rewinder, and pronounced it to be the best thing on the market, which it was at that time. Since then, however, Mr. Smith has been busy and has been busy to some purpose, too. He has produced a device which, it seems to me, might be called a rewinder de luxe. The rewinder is second in importance only to the projector itself, since, through lack of a proper take-up tension equalizer and improper rewinding, at least four-fifths of the damage to film is done.

Mr. Smith's new rewinder seems to take care of everything it would be possible for a rewinder to take care of Without any removing, or changing of gears or anything else, it may be used as either a motor-driven or hand rewinder. By this I mean that simply pressing the crank in slightly causes it to engage with the gearing and, at the same time, release the motor; therefore, the operator can rewind one reel, or a portion of a reel by motor, turn off the current and instantly rewind slowly by hand in order to locate a defect in the film. The reels are entirely inclosed in a small metal casing, the top and half of the side of which pulls down toward the operator, thus opening the magazine and forming a table. The film may pass directly from one reel to the other, or it may be brought up over two rollers, one at each end of the top, where about eighteen inches of the film will be exposed, and will pass over a smooth metal table in ideal position for the making of repairs. The tension is so arranged that it may be instantly released, or entirely eliminated; also, it may be set, and is normally so set that the tension on the film that is being rewound is constant. The magazine, by a very simple attachment, is opened by the foot of the operator, but the instant he moves his foot it recloses by means of a spring. Mr. Smith has just perfected this rewinder, and the department will no doubt be furnished with illustrations and detailed description of it soon, whereupon we will add to this description as may seem necessary or advisable. Mr. Smith is to be complimented on having supplied a very necessary improvement to operating-room equipment, and one which should reduce the damage to film to a considerable degree.

The Ernemann-Photo-Kino-Works were represented by their Imperator Projector, and their cameras, perforators, rewinders, home projectors and film printers were on exhibition, but all this, or at least that portion of it which concerns the operator, has already been described in detail, and since that time there have been no changes made in the Imperator projector. The Ernemann-Photo-Kino-Works have removed from their old office at 114 Fifth Avenue to new and commodious quarters at 163 West 46th Street.

The Day and Night Screen Company had their wares on exhibition and were proudly projecting a four-foot picture, in the broad, open light of the day, and refusing nary a sale which came their way, so 'tis said.

The Pathescope people were making movies with their Home Projector right beside the booth of the Day and Night Screen Co., and the combined exhibition was constantly surrounded by a crowd of interested exhibitors and others.

The Nicholas Power Company was there with bells on, of course. Leave it to them! They had six booths turned into one, and therein four of their latest types of machines were on exhibition, together with some detached mechanisms, and a dissolving stereopticon. One interesting feature of this exhibit was the comparison of the Number Six intermittent movement with the regular geneva movement, the same being on an enlarged scale. Also, a very clever arrangement for testing the comparative strain on the sprocket holes as between the Number Six geneva movement and the regular star and cam type. At one end of the exhibit the benign countenance of Nicholas Power himself smiled down on the assembled multitude.

At a prominent corner, with a large arc lamp illuminating its exhibit, the Atsco, Inc., held forth, though, much to my surprise, they were not making an exhibit of the Gold Fibre Screen. Why, deponent sayeth not. But they were, nevertheless, talking it both by word of mouth and sign language. In the Atsco booth one of the new Cameron projection machines was on exhibition. This projector is but just now ready for the market, and will be described in detail in these columns within a short time.

The H. W. Johns-Manville Company had one of their asbestos operating-rooms, in miniature, on exhibition, and that miniature room gave me a laugh, because it was about four feet wide by five feet long by five feet high—exactly the size some exhibitors would like to place in their theaters. The Johns-Manville Company has offended in the past through the narrow observation ports with which they have equipped their operating-rooms, but they have agreed to remedy this defect in the future, and if they do so their room will have the unqualified endorsement of the Projection Department, since they are mechanically well made, and combine lightness in weight with other most excellent qualities.

The Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company had a display of their latest Motiograph projector machine and parts. Those in charge of the Chicago machine were kept busy demonstrating its good points, and the Motiograph attracted, as usual, considerable attention. Next door to the Enterprise Company the Picture Theater Equipment Company displayed their wares, including various makes of projectors. "Everything for the picture theater except the film" is their slogan, and about everything necessary was displayed in their well-stocked corner booth.

Frank Rembusch was there with his hair in three distinct braids, his pockets full of sample mirror screens, and, of course, he had one (not a sample, but a screen) on exhibition So thoroughly mirrorized has friend Rembusch become that the unkind ones say he sleeps in front of a mirror, takes his breakfast off one in the morning, and lines his pockets with the silver (made) off them. However, I admire a man who keeps plugging away on one straight line and who refrains from being switched over on side issues, and Rembusch has certainly done all of that. So anxious is he that exhibitors shall put in a mirror, if not one of the screen variety, that he gave away several thousand small mirrors at the convention—with his advertisement on the back, of course.

Just far enough from the Mirror Screen booth, so each would not hear the other boosting for his rival's goods, was that occupied by J. H. Genter, of Mirroroide fame. At the moment of our first call the booth was in charge of the better half of friend Genter"s family, who immediately rushed up and sold the editor four and a half screens before he could say how-de-do and head off the flow of mirroroide conversation. Realizing that unless we made our escape quickly we would be bankrupt, we succeeded in dodging around the corner and saving sufficient money to pay carfare home. Brother Genter filmly believes that the mirroroide screen is the best on earth. If you don't believe this, ask him about it.

Upstairs were four moving picture theaters running full blast, demonstrating various screen surfaces and projectors, and displaying the excellence of various makes of film.

One thing in connection with the display is peculiarly of interest in that it points the tendency to rapidly develop a new field. I refer to the home projector. At the convention display were a surprising number of these machines which is evidence that inventors are rapidly turning their attention to the development of a miniature machine to meet the rapidly growing demand of the office, factory and home.

From a machine and equipment point of view, the display made at the convention was disappointing in that but comparatively few firms made anything like a complete showing of their goods, while some manufacturers and many large dealers made none at all.

Exhibitors Entertained at the Biltmore.

Augustus Thomas Is Toastmaster at a Banquet Notable for Its Speeches Even More Than Its Excellent Menu.

By George Blaisdell.

THE exhibitors attending the convention of the International Motion Picture Association were entertained on Friday evening at a banquet in the Hotel Biltmore. The occasion was made possible by the subscriptions of many concerns prominent in the trade. Although the day had been unusually warm, the spacious hall on the nineteenth floor of the great hotel was perfectly comfortable. It had been announced that the hour for sitting down was to be 7:30 o'clock, but it was nearer 9 o'clock before the command to fall to was given. At that time there must have been about 450 diners who surveyed the speakers' table. There they saw these men, who afterward addressed them: Rich G. Hollaman, president of the Grand Central Palace Exposition Company and consulting expert of the Second International Exposition of the Motion Picture Art; Augustus Thomas, who was introduced as the king of toastmasters, and who proved his right to the title to the eminent satisfaction and enjoyment of every one present; Daniel Frohman, distinguished theatrical producer, who through his keenness of vision and courage of conviction added to his fame by being the first of his contemporaries to enter the picture field; J. C. Graham, general manager of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company; Jesse Lasky, successful in vaudeville and even more so in pictures; "Bill Kalem" Wright, vice-president of the Kalem Company; Upton Sinclair, author; S. L. Rothapfel, manager of the Strand Theater; J. Stuart Blackton, of the Vitagraph Company, and John Bunny, who on his feet addressing an audience adds to his popularity as a comedian.

It was an imposing array, the like of which had never before been gathered at a motion picture function. It was in keeping with the settings. The dinner was staged in a hall that may be said to be the last word in hotel magnificence—high ceilinged; bronze walled, dotted with great mirrors reflecting the lights from many candles; wide and doubly long, affording ample room for the many diners. The speaking began about 10:45 and lasted until midnight, and there was never a dull moment. The serious passages were lightened by many anecdotes of a humorous tinge, and of these Mr. Thomas, Mr. Blackton and Mr. Bunny contributed a lot.

Rich G. Hollaman was the first speaker. "In my experience in trade expositions I never met a more hardworking, conscientious committee than the one selected by the motion picture men to run this exposition," said Mr. Hollaman. "From Mr. Trigger down, the members of this committee deserve the greatest credit for having made the success that they have of this Second International Exposition of the Motion Picture Art." The speaker congratulated the delegates for the position they had taken against Federal censorship, saying the action would tend to clear up some of the troubles recently stirred up in Washington. He concluded by introducing Augustus Thomas as toastmaster, as the king of toastmasters.

"Ladies and gentlemen," began Mr. Thomas, amid hearty applause, "it is a great honor to be any kind of a toastmaster here tonight. It is a distinction to be introduced so ably as I have just been introduced to you by the International Exposition's president. He made only one mistake—and that was to introduce me as the king of toastmasters. I asked him to say as the emperor. (Laughter.) I am going to exercise my power as emperor by making it easy for the empire.

Picture Men Are Dealing With an Art.

"You may felicitate yourselves upon the fact that you not only are engaged in an art, a new art, but still an art, with all the power and responsibility of an art. The purpose of an art is to appeal to the emotions. All that has lived of any country that shines on the pages of history is its art. Nothing survives of a people except its art, because its art is the medium whereby it speaks to another generation, to another people, not through their intelligence, but through their emotions. The motion picture industry on its face is an art, because it addresses the emotions, different emotions, if you will—emotions of risibility and ridicule, emotions of fear and horror, emotions of tenderness and pathos—but it is all the same an art. Indifferently as some may have gone into it, for the possibility of gain as some may have taken it up, we cannot escape the responsibility nor the fact that we are engaged in handling an art."

In introducing Daniel Frohman, Mr. Thomas referred to him as "a man whose name has been associated with the most dignified honor, with the most dignified plays; a man whose name thirty years ago some of you as children read upon the best showbills of the country, and who from that time until now has stood for the best that has been known on the stage. When that man came into the motion picture game it took upon itself the recognized dignity that it has thereafter had."

Mr. Frohman was suffering from a cold and his voice was not in condition for talking, but he could not ignore the cordial welcome that followed Mr. Thomas' announcement of his name. "Mr. Thomas told me a few moments ago that he would call upon me first," began the veteran director, "and added that when I got through the speaking would begin. (Laughter.) Whether he knew I was afflicted with a cold or whether he was conscious of my limitations as an orator I don't know. The exposition has been very pleasant for me. It has given me an opportunity to meet men with whom I have been associated for the past twenty-five years, some of whom I had never met and who told me they had played in my companies formerly and now with the films. It is wonderful that so many delegates are enabled to come to New York with their wives and have a chance to enjoy themselves. Some of the delegates think there might be two expositions, one in the summer to which they might bring their wives and one in the winter so that the men might come alone and attend to business.

Theater Will Never Be Closed, Says Mr. Frohman.

"What is interesting to me in the motion picture industry is the fact that plays can be made so luminous and comprehensive and that they can be clear to the human mind. Even Shakespeare can be made clear. Shakespeare was first of all a dramatist; he happened to be a poet, but that didn't stop him from being a great dramatist. In filming the works of Shakespeare we will be able to reach the uttermost hamlets of the country. I don't mean to say that in extending the influence of the motion picture we are going to destroy dramatic literature. The theater will never be closed. We cannot separate the actor from his art.

"First of all, audiences want stories, but want them well done. Great actors succeed not because they are great actors, but because they have great vehicles. In the early days of the American drama, men like Lawrence Barrett brought out popular plays so that they could create a clientele. In other words, an actor in order to become great must first make himself popular. So that as long as these men continue in this work we shall continue to solidify and standardize what Mr. Thomas calls an art, and in that way we shall be able to extend on that line with the film. While we may not replace the theater it will become an important ally. It is significant that we have had some of the greatest dramatic successes since the moving pictures have become popular. I mean by that the good play will always draw. It is only the mediocre play that will always draw the people away from the stage production to that of the screen."

The Picture Reveals the Soul of the Actor.

Mr. Thomas alluded to the fact brought out in conversation at the speakers' table that in the theater only those in front could see the face of the actor as the director had seen it, but that in a picture house all of the people in the auditorium could see it as the director saw it. He said it struck him as a very potent reason for the secret hold of the motion picture. He spoke of his interest in hearing Mr. Graham say that he believed the "close-up" to be an important factor, as it multiplied the diameter of the face of the actor ten or twenty times, so that every person could see the soul of the player. "I began to get acquainted with Mr. Graham, of the Universal Company," continued Mr. Thomas, "and saw to what source the success of that organization is partly due."

Mr. Graham, on behalf of Mr. Laemmle, extended to the exhibitors best wishes for another prosperous year. The speaker was heartily applauded when he suggested that: "Just because there are twenty reels of films made every day it is no reason why you should try to push those twenty reels through your theater every day." Mr. Graham declared himself as opposed to the showing by exhibitors of more than five reels a day. He also referred to the action of the convention in the matter of the proposed board of trade, saying it was a "move in the right direction and in line with other great industries that have succeeded."

Jesse Lasky confided to the exhibitors that it was his debut as an after-dinner speaker. It may be said here it seemed in every way a success. Mr. Lasky said he had studied the motion picture business from a new angle—from the point of view of a vaudeville man. He said it could not be denied that vaudeville was on the decline, although that had been only a contributing cause to his interest in pictures. One of the principal reasons had been that the management of different houses had not always given a producer proper support. The motion picture business seemed to promise a very prosperous future for all, he added, and concluded: "I intend to give every minute of my time in the future to producing pictures, to the neglect of vaudeville. This is because I have received such good support from the exhibitors."

American Pictures Teach Democracy.

"Bill Kalem" Wright was the next speaker. "From Europe American pictures are very much in demand," said Mr. Wright.

(Continued on page 1832)

BANQUET OF THE INTERNATIONAL MOTION PICTURE ASSOCIATION AT THE BILTMORE HOTEL, NEW YORK CITY, FRIDAY, JUNE 12th, IN HONOR OF THE VISITING DELEGATES AND TO THE TRADE IN GENERAL.

At the speakers' table, from left to right, are John Bunny, Vitagraph Company; J. Stuart Blackton, Secretary Vitagraph Company; Samuel H. Trigger, President State and local branches I. M. P. A.; Stanner E. V. Taylor, Upton Sinclair, J. C. Graham, general manager Universal Film Manufacturing Company; Jesse L. Lasky, President Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company; Augustus Thomas, director-general All Star Feature Corporation (toastmaster); Rich G. Hollaman, President Eden Musee and Trades Exposition Company; Daniel Frohman, managing director Famous Players Company; S. L. Rothapfel, manager Strand Theater, New York; E. V. Winters, William Wright, Vice-President Kalem Company; Alderman Bowles, and James G. Wallace, ex-License Commissioner.

CHICAGO LETTER

BY JAS. S. McQUADE

(This week's installment by G. P. von Harleman.)

ONE after another of the big so-called legitimate theaters in Chicago are joining the ranks of the "Movies." Really, I should not say "Movies," though I admit the word is mighty handy to use, but somehow, it has a rather cheap sound, which I hate to associate with any high-class moving (please, not motion), picture presentation. As I was saying, a number of our big houses are going in for the pictures, and the two latest acquisitions, this week, are the Palace Music Hall and the Illinois Theater.

Both of these houses closed the week ending June 14th; the Palace with a good season of vaudeville, and the Illinois with a successful run of "The Queen of the Movies." It might be mentioned that the Illinois Theater is considered by many the elite theater in Chicago. At any rate, it is a $2.00 house, and pictures have never been shown there before. On Thursday, June 18th, the Itala Film Co., of Turin, Italy through Harry R. Raver, American representative, and Werba and Luescher, business directors, will present, at the Illinois Theater, their stupendous twelve-reel production, "Cabiria."

Readers of The Moving Picture World know that this photoplay was written and produced by the great Italian poet and dramatist, Gabriele d'Annunzio, at a cost of approximately $200,000. A symphony orchestra of 40 pieces and a grand opera chorus of 30 voices will render specially arranged music, under the direction of Joseph Carl Breil, the well-known composer of the incidental music to the popular play, "The Climax."

By special invitation, an advance exhibition will be given Wednesday night, to a select audience of representative people of Chicago, including Mayor Carter H. Harrison; the Italian consul; members of the Federation of Women's Clubs, members of the various university faculties, and representatives of the press. The picture will, no doubt, run all summer. Admission will be 25 cents to $1.00.

The other house going over to pictures this week, is the Palace Music Hall. Lyman H. Howe, the well-known "big time" exhibitor, will present his "Travel Festival." The feature of the current presentation is "The Construction of the Panama Canal." The program also includes a trip to Yellowstone Park, a day at the Paris Zoo, salmon fishing in British Columbia, tunny fishing in Sicily, and last, but not least, a ride on the runaway train. Performances will be given twice daily, admission being 15 to 50 cents.

"The Christian" begins its second week at the Olympic. The Vitagraph-Liebler production of Hall Caine's famous novel seems to have made a profound impression, and is playing to capacity. The picture is well presented, and appropriate music rendered by a Wurlitzer photoplayer. J. H. Flanagan, of the Consolidated Motion Picture Corporation, the lessees of the picture and the theater, is very much satisfied with business, and expects to keep on the production for the summer.

Another big house to go to pictures is the Orchestra Hall. Lubliner & Trinz, theater brokers, have secured a three months' lease on this big theater, and will put on pictures about July 1st. The feature has not been decided upon as yet, but it will probably be "The Escape."

"The Spoilers" enters its third month at the Studebaker, and is doing an enormous business. It will be prolonged for at least three weeks more. This picture will be put outside of the loop for the first time this week, and presented at the Wilson Avenue Theater, another of Jones, Linick & Schaefer's houses.

"Neptune's Daughter" is doing nicely at the Fine Arts Theater, and at the Ziegfeld, another of Alfred Hamburger's "legitimate" picture houses, "Home, Sweet Home" will be presented this week. "A Million Bid" and "Goodness Gracious" enter the third and last week at the La Salle, after which the management will change from feature programs to regular Mutual service, at 10 cents straight admission. The "Drug Terror" has found its way to the Crown.

This about finishes my little review of the "pictorial" situation of the Chicago theaters. It might also be mentioned that four big theaters are closed for the season. They are: American Music Hall, Blackstone Theater, Columbia Theater, Little Theater and the Princess Theater.

A. H. Andrews Dies After Long Illness.

A. H. Andrews, president of the A. H. Andrews Company, of Chicago, manufacturers of school furniture and theater seating, died June 10th, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Arthur T. Holbrook, in Milwaukee, Wis., after a long and severe illness. Mr. Andrews was born in New Britain, Conn., in 1837 and came to Chicago at the age of 18. Eight years later he went into business for himself, and opened a store on State Street, near Adams, where he sold school supplies. His business grew rapidly. A factory was established on the West Side, and branch offices opened in many cities.

There is scarcely a school boy or girl in this country who has not sat at an Andrews' desk, or, when at the blackboard, used an Andrews' dustless eraser, or traced out his location on the earth by means of the Andrews' globe. Mr. Andrews was married in 1872 to Ella Matson, the daughter of N. Matson, the jeweler, whose business was purchased by Spaulding & Co.

"Adult Only" Theater Ordinance Introduced in City Council.

An ordinance was introduced in the city council Monday night, June 15th, by Alderman Ellis Geiger, after consultation with Major M. L. C. Funkhouser, second deputy superintendent and head of the censorship bureau. They agreed it might solve a problem which comes up whenever a permit is asked for a picture that might teach a moral lesson to adults, but injure the child mind. Practically all the "white slave" films come in this category.

Major Funkhouser has issued special permits for some of these pictures on condition that minors be excluded from houses where they are shown, but as there is no ordinance provision now for such a permit, the condition has not been any stronger than a "gentlemen's agreement."

The Geiger ordinance authorizes the issuance of two kinds of permits, one for general exhibition and the other for presentation of a picture to audiences consisting entirely of persons 18 years old or older. It does not provide for a classification of houses, but that, it is expected, would develop after the plan is put into operation.

The present rule of the censors is to inspect all pictures "through the eyes of a child." This, in addition to barring a large number of films completely, leads to what manufacturers sometimes charge is extreme severity in ordering "cut-outs." Under the proposed system a film owner could present it for inspection for a permit of either class, so that one that would have to be trimmed for a "general" permit could be saved for an "adults only" permit.

It is believed the result of the issuance of a large number of this sort of licenses would lead the owners of some of the downtown playhouses to present pictures for adults exclusively and bar children from their doors at all times. Some managers believe such a house would be a paying proposition.

"We know Major Funkhouser has been criticised for refusing to permit the general presentation of 'The Scarlet Letter,'" said Alderman Geiger, "but any one will admit that it might injure the morals of a child. There was no question of the excellence of the picture and no objection to its being shown to grown people, and there are a large number of pictures of that sort. The ordinance will be considered by the judiciary committee next Tuesday, and the 'movie' people can appear at that time to discuss it.

To Teach History in Public Schools by the Aid of Moving Pictures.

To change the school system of teaching history will be the general business of the convention of the Daughters of the Revolution which opens Tuesday in Minneapolis. The movement is headed by Mrs. Nathaniel Keay, of Philadelphia, who passed through Chicago last night with about fifty other delegates from New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Connecticut and West Virginia.

"We're going to try to have the moving picture system put through in the grammar grades," said Mrs. Keay.

"The child's education in American history is being neglected. The child does not take up the study of American history until it gets into the fourth or fifth grade, and then gets only a smattering. When a boy or girl goes to high school, which is usually after he or she has completed the eighth grade, Greek and Roman history are taken up at once. And then comes the study of other nations' histories, with the exception of our own nation."

What Happened to the Chicago Delegates?

Nobody seemed to know and nobody could tell me if they ever got back from the big doings and big times in the big city. Even the young lady who answers the telephone at the headquarters of the "International" was at perfect loss as to the whereabouts of the wandering delegates.

Not being discouraged by such a little thing, I called up Bill Sweeney's hotel, Tuesday morning, to find out if they possibly could tell me what happened to the treasurer of the International. Well, well, if I didn't get Bill Sweeney right away on the wire and everything was fine. "We had a glorious time and most of us came back on the Pennsylvania yesterday, 5:15. We had two special cars of Illinois and Wisconsin delegates."

M. Attens, of Fresno, Answered by F. Lawrance.

F. Lawrance, formerly connected with Turner & Dahnken, of San Francisco, and recently manager of the Fresno Photo Theater in Fresno, called at the New York office in relation to an article which appeared in the Chicago Letter, in the issue of April 11th, to which M. Attens, owner of the Wigwam Theater, Fresno, declared exceptions.

Mr. Lawrance stands upon his previous statement, which he avers is correct in every detail, with the exception that the Wigwam, a small house catering to the foreign element and running eight and nine reels for a nickel, is operated by Mr. Attens and should not have been included on the list of high-class houses owned by Turner & Dahnken.

Chicago Film Brevities.

S. S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Mfg. Co., left for New York, Sunday, June 14th, with the 20th Century Limited, to sail on the Olympic, June 20th, for Europe. Mr. Hutchinson expects to visit all the principal cities on the Continent, and will not be back before the latter part of September. He is accompanied by Mrs. Hutchinson and their two boys.

* * *

William Hershberg, president of the General Feature Film Co., has just returned to this city from an extensive trip in Europe, visiting most of the principal cities in England, Germany, France and Italy. While abroad, Mr. Hershberg studied film conditions in general and procured several thousand feet of comedies and a number of multiple reel features for his concern. These will be released through their offices in the Mallers Building. Mr. Hirshberg found conditions very flourishing, and promises some interesting surprises for the feature trade in this territory.

* * *

The G. & G. Film Co., of this city, has acquired "The Littlest Rebel" from the Photoplay Production Co. and "Should a Woman Tell?" an Apex special, for Illinois and Wisconsin. Aaron Gollos, president of the company, has been in New York for the past week, buying and contracting for features for his company.

* * *

F. H. McMillan formerly manager of the Chicago office of the World Film Corporation, is now acting as special representative for the General Feature Film Co., of this city.

* * *

By special arrangements with Mr. Jack Gleason, a private presentation of the Giants-White Sox World's Tour in moving pictures, was given before an enthusiastic audience of ball players and their admirers, at Fulton's exhibition room, on Monday evening, June 15th. There were about 150 present, among whom were Louis Comiskey, Lou Houseman, Nate Lewis and Charlie White. Jimmy Callahan and the famous "Callahan Kids" were also present, together with a representative body of members of the White Sox and Athletics baseball clubs. A great deal of enjoyment and interest was expressed throughout the exhibition. The six reels of pictures are being released by the Eclectic Film Company through their branch offices.

* * *

R. E. Bradford, manager of the Chicago branch of the Mutual Film Corporation, made a flying trip to Marion and Fort Wayne, Ind., last week. Mr. Bradford closed several deals in the interest of his firm.

* * *

Alfred Hamburger has entered into a contract with the Consolidated Feature Film Corporation for an extended run of their latest feature, "Wrath of the Gods." Mr. Hamburger expects to place this feature either in the Ziegfeld or the Fine Arts Theater, after the run of the Mutual Griffith production, "Home, Sweet Home."

* * *

The Reel Fellows will meet Friday, June 19th, at 7:00 P. M., at the Ad Fellows' Club on the 15th floor of the Advertising Building.

* * *

Beginning July 13th, the Essanay Film Mfg. Co. will release six pictures a week, instead of five. The extra reel will be on Monday, and one of their popular slap-stick comedies

* * *

The Selig Polyscope Company is getting out a new line of elaborate posters for "The Spoilers." They are made by the Goes Printing Company, and furnished in three styles of one sheets, three styles of three sheets, three styles of eight sheets and two styles of sixteen and twenty-four sheets.

* * *

The proceeds of the Studebaker Theater of June 11th, were donated to the free ice fund of the Record-Herald.

* * *

C. C. Cunningham, manager and owner of the 20th Century Theater, Gary, Ind., paid a visit to The World offices last week. The 20th Century opened May 30th, with the Vitagraph production, "A Million Bid." The seating capacity is 550, admission 10 cents.

Potter Writes for Ramo.

Paul M. Potter, famous for his world-wide reputation due to his many successes, especially his dramatization of "Trilby," has made a contract with Ramo Films, Inc., to furnish them with script dramatizations of twenty-four of his biggest and most successful plays to be picturized as Ramo Features.

Mr. Potter was for many years the foreign (London and Paris) correspondent for the New York Herald. His first play was "The Chonans," produced by the late Madame Modjeska at the Union Square Theater, New York City. He followed this with "The City Directory," written for Russell's Comedians (which was played by them for five years), including William Collier, Charles Reed, May and Flo Irwin, Dan Daly, May Yohe, Mack, Martinette, and many well-known actors were also in the cast—likewise marking the theatrical beginning of the famous Dave Warfield.

Paul M. Potter.

Mr. Potter dramatized "Trilby" for the late A. M. Palmer. Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree produced it with great success at the Haymarket Theater, London, England. William A. Brady presented it throughout the United States, Canada and Australia. In every European city, as well as in India and South Africa, different managers have presented this play. This drama has paid more than half a million dollars in author's royalties. "The Conquerors" Mr. Potter wrote next for Charles Frohman. This played for more than a year by the Empire Theater Stock Company, which included Viola Allen, William Faversham, Sir George Alexander and many other celebrated performers.

At the present writing Mr. Potter has already closed the manuscript for this successful play in the hands of the Ramo Company, which is now being produced under the careful guidance of Director Will S. Davis. This production will follow "The Conquerors" in motion photography as a Ramo feature in five reels. In Mr Potter's list of more than sixty plays all the famous players of America have appeared. Mr Potter served his apprenticeship under the late Augustin Daly and represented the American drama at the last Paris Exposition.

"THE ONLY SON" AT THE STRAND.

The bill at the Strand Theater for the week of June 15th included "The Only Son," with Thomas W. Ross in the title role; The Strand Topical Review, and a new Keystone comedy.

Film "The Beast" at Exposition

Miss Alice Joyce, Tom Moore, and Other Kalem Favorites Give Interesting Demonstration at Grand Central Palace Show—Release Scheduled for July 21.

"THE BEAST," Kalem single-reeler completed Wednesday evening, June 10, in the model studio at the Second International Exposition of the Moving Picture Art, has been announced for release July 21. Visitors to the convention who saw the concluding scenes made will be interested in seeing the picture in the theaters throughout the country and in observing that it is well up to the high standard of excellence which has been set by the producing company.

Alice Joyce.

The staging of scenes for "the movies" in the model studio had been announced as one of the most interesting demonstrations to be made at the exposition and that the forecast was warranted was made apparent when the Kalem company began work with as many of the evening's visitors to the exposition as could secure a place crowded about the little enclosure.

In preparation for the work at the exposition, the Kalem company had brought one of their big companies, including Miss Alice Joyce and Tom Moore, back from Jacksonville, Fla., a week in advance of the time they would otherwise have come. The scenario for "The Beast," the picture chosen for the demonstration, had been especially prepared from a manuscript submitted as a three-reel subject and rewritten in such a manner that it was crowded full of intense action. All but eleven scenes of the picture mere made during the week just preceding the convention, most of them in the Kalem studios in New York and the remainder in well-chosen outdoor locations. The strongest of the interior scenes were left for the work at the exposition.

Kalem employees took the required scenery and properties to the exposition hall and had everything in readiness for the evening of the demonstration. Beginning at 6:45 Wednesday evening, June 10th, the eleven scenes necessary to finish the picture were made, the company finishing work shortly after 10 o'clock. The negative was developed that evening, printed, dried, assembled, and a trial projection made the following day, and on Friday afternoon and evening the picture was on view in each of the four model theaters at the big show.

Tom Moore.

Only those who saw the Kalem players work in the exposition studio will be able to pick out the scenes which were made there, as the results secured during the demonstration were equally as good as could have been secured any place else. Quite naturally, the same scenery which had been used in previous scenes at the Kalem studio in New York were used at the exposition studio.

Exposition visitors who saw the work done were treated to everything that usually happens during the making of a picture—and then some. Tom Moore, who played the title role, and Kenean Buel, who directed the picture and played an important part in it, received slight injuries when a curtain pole, which was pulled down during the action of the piece, struck them. Mr. Moore's head was cut so badly that he bled profusely for more than an hour and Mr. Buel is still carrying a lump just back of his right ear as a souvenir of the event.

Marguerite Courtot.

"The Beast" is intensely dramatic. In it Miss Joyce is the daughter of a lawyer who embezzles money belonging to a wealthy client, and is only saved from the prosecution when the daughter consents to marry the man who has her father in his power. Tom Moore, "the beast" of the title, is the man who drives the hard bargain with the lawyer's daughter and later treats her most shamefully when a latent appetite for liquor overpowers him. The big scenes of the photoplay are when Miss Joyce and Mr. Moore, in their respective characters, come home from a reception at which the husband has become so badly intoxicated that he keels over in an alcoholic stupor soon after reaching the library in his own residence. The wife leaves him in disgust and retires to her boudoir. The butler (played by Director Buel) and his sweetheart, a maid, have been surprised in the library while drinking their master's wine and have just had time to hide behind a pair of portieres before the entrance of the wife and her drunken husband. Soon after the wife has left her husband lying on the floor he regains consciousness and, in attempting to arise, pulls down the portieres back of which the butler and the maid are hiding. The husband attacks the butler as an eavesdropper and in the scuffle the butler fells the husband with a blow from a whiskey bottle, killing him. The wife is accused of the crime and is saved when the maid, made jealous by the butler who has repulsed her, tells the true story of the crime at the trial in court.

Some of the scenes before the big climax and all that have to do with the climax itself were made before the big crowds at the exposition.

The arrangement of the studio at the exposition made it impossible for many to witness the work on the stage at a given time, and three times during the evening the Kalem people very wisely interrupted their work in order that ones who had not been fortunate enough to get places from which they could see the first time might have better luck the next time. During the intermissions Miss Joyce, Mr. Moore, and other of the Kalem favorites held informal receptions at the Kalem booth, which thereupon became the point of greatest interest at the exposition.

MANDELBAUM RETIRES FROM WORLD FILM CORP.

Mr. E. Mandelbaum has sold his interest in the World Film Corporation and will devote some of his time and energy in the producing end of the business. There are a number of new branches in the film industry, which Mr. Mandelbaum has under consideration, and it is predicted when these mature something new and novel will be shown the trade. Mr. Mandelbaum will make his headquarters for some time to come at the office of the World Film Corporation, No. 130 West 46th Street.

ICE PLANT AT UNIVERSAL RANCH.

A modern ten-ton ice machine has been installed under the direction of John M. Nickolaus, head of the laboratory department of the Universal West Coast plant. The new machine will furnish properly cooled air and water to the laboratory department while the studios are at Hollywood.

When the entire plant is removed to the Universal's new ranch, the Los Angeles River will furnish water of proper temperature. Then the big machine will make ice for the entire plant, including laboratory, drinking fountains and cafe.

ATSCO HAS LUXURIOUS PROJECTION ROOM.

One of the most unique projection rooms has just been opened by Atsco, Inc., in connection with their New York offices at No. 218 West Forty-second Street. The room is intended primarily for the use of film producers, but will also be used to display the Radium Gold Fibre Screen, manufactured by Atsco, Inc., and the various projection accessories handled by the concern.

Moving Picture Educator

"IN THE PALACE OF THE KING."

THROUGHOUT all ages, to reach the "Palace of the King" has always been the highest attainable honor for man or man's work. Not that the stamp or standard of inherited royalty was in itself of particular commendation, but rather that the attainment of kingliness was the highest point among men; such an attainment being significant of merit, honor and success. That the moving-picture has become a part of the routine which marks the formality of kingly households is not surprising, not in the capacity of an entertainer, but as a means of recording, instructing and entertaining only in the highest possible degree. The number of royal patrons is constantly increasing, several having provided themselves with private and regally appointed theaters in which their favorite pictures may be produced for the benefit of their guests. King George of England after seeing "Quo Vadis?" at the Albert Hall, in London, gave instructions for a miniature theater to be constructed in Buckingham Palace. In making this addition the King and Queen profess to have studied the best interests of the royal children, because of the educational value of the kinematograph. The Emperor of Germany has also announced himself as a picture enthusiast. He has had a picture theater fitted up in the palace at Potsdam; the class of pictures in which his majesty chiefly delights are those depicting current events, especially those in which he himself, or any members of his court may appear. Some time ago the Kaiser published a volume entitled "The Kaiser on Film," the book containing reproductions from different films showing the Kaiser in his various activities. The moving picture has driven away all previous objections to the constant annoyance of the omnipresent cameraman; now he is always welcome and his work is now more desired than previously it was shunned. The deservedly famous "Carmen Sylva," Queen of Roumania, in addition to having her own theater, has a company dramatizing her own novels in picture form. Sultans of the East are following in close order; pictures of the Indian Durbar were responsible for awakening a keen interest among those potentates who are doing everything they can to get the best value the moving picture can give them. King Alphonso, of Spain, uses the moving picture perhaps more thoroughly than anyone. When absent from home he sends back reels depicting his daily doings even more in detail than one would ordinarily describe in a letter, so that every day Queen Ena and the royal children are able to follow their absent husband and father in his travels, receptions, and important functions.

Queen Ena is one of those picture enthusiasts who believes that the time is not far distant, when current events will be pictured even more rapidly than at present, looking for the time when pictures will be transmitted by telegraph; no doubt this may not be an impossible thing ere long

Another Branch of the Human Family Now Filmed.

James Barnes, naturalist and moving picture hunter with camera rather than gun, who has been camera-exploring in Africa for the American Museum of Natural History, got back recently by the White Star liner "Olympic" with twenty-one thousand feet of film. Mr. Barnes and his party traveled about five thousand miles, traversing Africa from West to East. Leaving the jungle at the Congo, they went over the old trail of Stanley and Livingston, meeting old chief Lobo, one of the Stanley guides.

With the camera they caught groups of the Pigmy tribes of Du Chailou in "the country of the dwarfs." They found them a shy lot, and it took several weeks for Mr. Barnes to get well enough acquainted with them to induce them to pose for the moving picture. Later some of the little fellows became guides to the expedition.

Mr. Barnes found cannibalism still in vogue among the wildest tribes, some going even so far as to eat their own dead. Mr. Barnes left his partner on the long journey, Cherry Kearton, in England, to develop the pictures. They will be shown in conjunction with lectures at the American Museum of Natural History and other similar institutions here and abroad.

A Good Legacy.

At this season of the year when graduation exercises are so common in all parts of the school world, it is always a part of the graduates' farewell to will to their successors—often in fun—something whereby they may be remembered. We have, however, an example of great worth in the high school of Winona, where the seniors are preparing to leave behind them a moving picture equipment for the desirable purpose of ranking their school with the most progressive schools of the country, founded upon the belief that the cause of education is enhanced by the use of kinematographic aids. May not the publication of this wise act serve the two-fold purpose of encouraging others to do likewise besides emphasizing the fact that the moving pictures are being increasingly appreciated?

The New York Exposition.

The moving picture exposition held this last week in the Central Palace was visited by the writer of this page for the sole purpose of looking for whatever might be of advantage to the "Educator." The most conspicuous advance was found in the increased number of machines adapted to home and classroom work. Not only are there more good projecting machines now on the market, but each seems to be with added proofs of its efficiency. There is without doubt a great field here for development; home, school and church must be well provided for; nowhere in the realm of moving pictures is the future so great as where the smaller apparatus will be required. Of these now exhibited much may be said in praise, more especially for home and classroom work; for the church and school auditorium it is a question if they will not prove too small, in the larger rooms a picture cannot afford to be less than eight or ten feet in diameter. May the smaller machines have a deservedly educational and commercial success. The next advance is in the "daylight screens." It would seem impossible to exaggerate the value of these screens; the darkened room was always a hindrance if not a drawback to the teaching picture, and the use of these screens will rank as only second in importance to the picture machine itself. The exposition generally seemed to total a general advance in high class work in every branch; scientific and artistic growth is most noticeable, together with an added dignity. The moving picture is increasing in every way.

Another Clerical Endorsement.

Thanks to the most famous pictures, they have done much to disarm the power of the earlier critics if not also turning them to great friendliness. A number of Milwaukee clergymen were recently entertained by a view of the film "Les Miserables." Afterward the Rev. W. T. Dorward, of the Tabernacle Church, said of it:

"The picture teaches us a great lesson. I am glad that I have seen it, and I shall tell my friends to go also. From the time that the priest forgave Jean for the theft of his silverware, Valjean came to his real awakening. He found himself then; the Bishop showed him the true way, and from that time on he was a better man. It is easy for one to follow the story of the picture even though he has not read the book. Those who have not read the book will read it after having seen the picture. It cannot fail to do the community good to have such a picture visited." This clerical endorsement is not repeated only for the comment on the picture, but for the opinion that such pictures "are a benefit to the community." It is becoming very interesting to note that wherever the pictures have an educational aspect they are not only immediately endorsed, but they overthrow all previous criticism and make friends of the former critics.

Bankers' Endorsements.

The American Bankers' Association are using the educational picture to encourage thrift among the American people. A film has been produced under their supervision entitled the "Reward of Thrift." It was shown recently at a meeting of bankers and attracted much favorable attention. The film is the property of the producing company, and when released this fall will be let out through regular commercial channels.

Doings at Los Angeles

THE FIRST COMPANY to make use of picturesque Bear Valley is the Lasky Feature Company, and they left June 8 for that beautiful secluded mountain region to do some of the Hudson Bay country scenes in "The Conjurer's House" which was picturized from the book by Stewart Edward White, who will, by the way, be present at the making of these scenes, and will lead his energy to Cecil de Mille who will produce this well known story. The valley is an ideal spot, but has not been used during the winter on account of the snow and ice. Several beautiful lakes are there, and together with the mountains and big trees, make an ideal location for the settings of the far north.

* * *

In a letter received this week from Hettie Gray Baker who writes all the scripts for the Bosworth company, she tells in a nut shell what that organization is doing: "We are building a new, concrete studio, at the corner of Council street and Occidental boulevard, and hope to be in by the middle of next month. The laboratory will be done sooner than that." The new grounds are large and will be covered with buildings. Much has already been done, and the new studios for this flourishing concern will be about the best on this coast. The Smalleys have signed with this company and will start producing features on August first.

* * *

Nearly everyone at the Mutual studios is talking about the "Izzy" series which is being put on by Arthur Mackley in Hollywood. In the latest film, the inimitable comedian is supposed not to touch spirits. He is accused by wifey-to-be, and a long string of exciting incidents follows in which the poor boy is tabulated with a hobo who is a regular fighter.

* * *

Several small improvements are being made at the Vitagraph, but not much enlarging has to be done, as the studio is large enough for four companies, and only two are working at the present time.

* * *

The Balboa company employs over a hundred people, and nearly all of them live in Long Beach near the studios. The weekly pay roll totals over $3,000. Edwin August is busy these days doing features as are the other makers of the popular new films.

* * *

Little Le Roy Lederer, the five and one-half year old son of Otto and Gretchen Lederer who play leading and character parts with the Broncho company, was the main attraction at the Ocean Park dancing pavilion when the Santa Monica Military Academy held its commencement exercises in the large hall. The little military gentleman gave an exhibition drill, a manual of arms, having command of the entire school. He is America's youngest uniform soldier, and is holder of the bronze medal. We were standing at one side of the big floor, and a lady near did not have a seat, when Otto, puffed up with fatherly pride, offered her his chair which was accepted. The man who fathered the school was standing near and thinking Otto was going to leave, asked him to wait, as one of the most interesting events of the evening was about to be pulled off. It is needless to tell the finish. Congratulations followed.

* * *

Charles Giblyn has just finished a secret service story in which a real military officer played a part. He was Capt. R. A. Ford, of Bat. A., and recently returned from the tumultuous border. He was formerly a Captain in the regular army, and Giblyn's picture has been praised for its true military atmosphere which was put in by Ford. Edna Maison was the leading woman, playing the part of the secret service detective.

* * *

The Oz Film company at Hollywood is nearly ready to start work, as their fine new studio is fast nearly completion. The grounds are one block long and half a block deep, facing on the street railroad. The place is connected with all public utilities, and is one of the most down to the minute on the coast. Joseph F. Macdonald will start directing a large company soon.

* * *

Marc E. Jones is directing! He writes his own scripts for Lubin, and together with Paul M. Powell, this company is busy now. Wilbert Melville has supervision over the western plant. Jones is "some" busy man and between his new job of producing, writing scenarios, and attending to the Photoplay Authors League, is not looking for pleasure seeking trips.

* * *

Most of the Biograph players will leave for the East on the 15th of this month. They are like the birds, always changing locations with the oncoming seasons. Los Angeles will be sorry to lose them.

* * *

George Nicholls, formerly of Keystone, has come over to the Ford Sterling plant and will start directing next week. He begins on a novel and original comedy in which a motor car goes over a high precipice, followed by a man on a motorcycle. Fred Balshofer purchased the two gasoline wagons to be wrecked in the picture. A new trick in photography is promised which will be a real heart throbber. The girl is pursued. The heavy chases. The cops ride fractious bronchos and can't catch the "villun." That is the summary.

* * *

Gradually the Universal forces are being transferred to the fine new ranch, and the old plants are being transplanted to new fields. The whole place will soon be moved, and a finer location was never before seen. Already the cowboys and small wild animals have been moved as have the domestic pets and working horses. The houses have also been moved.

* * *

"Thru the Flames," a coming Universal release will show how Herbert Rawlinson makes use of his daily training. In the picture he carried William Worthington down through the flames for 75 feet. Bill weighs only 194 pounds. Imagine "Rawly" after the rescue!

* * *

David Kirkland has been added to the Sterling company, making four directors in all including Robert Thornby, George Nichols, and Ford. Thornby specializes in child plays, and Little Billie Jacobs is getting to be quite a wonder under the diffusers. Fred Balshofer, who does the business work of the company, and who purchased the beautiful album of 100 picture players at the Photoplayers' ball, takes much pride in showing his $500 auction purchase. The big calf leather covered book surely is a beauty, and beside being interesting and ornamental, is a dictionary of western players which is quite handy.

* * *

George Larkin is playing the lead of the Dollar in "The Nimble Dollar" which is a story of the nation wide movement to make the coins nimble. In his early theatrical career, George was with a circus as acrobat, and in this picture he does some stunts that make them all sit up and open their eyes. His costume is great, having one dollar on the back and two in the front. It is fringed with gold, and trimmed in yellow lace. Glooms and Joys are here, and all in all the picture seems to be sure of making a good release. Everyone at the Universal studio joshes George about his $3.00 suit.

* * *

Pauline Bush, of Universal fame, has just returned from a well earned, and well spent vacation, looking bigger and brighter than ever. She took on twenty pounds while away on the six weeks' trip into the country, but is glad to return.

* * *

Bob Leonard broke exposure records when he re-made one reel for some of the burned releases. He turned out a one thousand foot picture in nine hours straight working time. Speed is accounted for here by the fact that every technical point, usually taking hours to work out, was overcome by the knowledge received while doing the original picture. It was one of his best films at that. CLARKE IRVINE.

"THE LITTLE HOUSE IN THE VALLEY."

A two-part "Flying A" subject put out under the direction of Thomas Ricketts. It is made up principally of exterior scenes showing the gorgeousness of the California forests. Replete with thrilling incidents of frontier life, depicting the daring depredations of Mexican brigands. The detail is carried out to a finish and displays the master hand of the producer.

Ed. Coxen and Winifred Greenwood play leads with Geo. Field taking the part of the Mexican leader. Other prominent "Flying A" stars have excellent opportunity to display their histrionic ability. Interest is retained througout by the intensity of the plot and the thrills that follow one another in rapid fire order. The subject will be released on June 20th.

LONGEST PROJECTION IN THE WORLD.

What is supposed to be the longest projection in the world for motion pictures will be that at the motion picture show in conjunction with Marcus Loew's spectacular entertainment at Ebbett's Field, Brooklyn, which opened Saturday night. The camera is placed in the grand stand and the curtain is near second base, over 250 feet away, yet the projection is perfect. Two curtains and two sets of pictures may be used later so all the crowd can see.

Music for the Picture

Conducted by CLARENCE E. SINN

A Few Rules.

MISS FLORENCE L. CURRIER, Gem Theater, Barton, Vt., sends the following:

In a little leisure time I made an analysis of just how I play for pictures and what rules I observed, and as you were good enough to say my former letter was of interest to you and your readers I though perhaps a more definite form of the subject might be of still more interest:

1. Study your advance program and read a synopsis of the picture to be shown that day. A synopsis of practically all pictures may be found in The Moving Picture World, and this method is essential if you want to make a success of your playing.

2. Make your musical selections always subordinate to the picture. Remember, your audience came to see photoplays—not to listen to a concert.

3. Use many of the popular songs and selections, but be careful they do not detract from the picture. Farce and slapstick comedy will offer an excellent opportunity to use the popular rags and one-steps.

4. Remember, the management employs you to play—therefore, don't talk to any one in the audience at any time during the show, and carefully watch the changes in the scenes or your music will mar an otherwise perfect photoplay.

5. You have some excuse for not getting the cues right the first run of the picture. After that you have absolutely none, and if you have carefully read the synopsis you will not be likely to make any serious errors.

6. Memorize much of the old music—old love songs, national airs, Spanish dances and love songs, Indian dances, war songs, battle hymns, etc., but do not neglect to keep a folio of these on the piano at all times for reference.

7. Between reels you can play popular songs and one-steps, but be careful lest your audience take them up and get noisy; be ready to change quickly in this case, as many patrons will leave the theater if they find you are playing to the noisy element.

8. Learn the screen characters, and you will find you can play to their portrayals, versatile artists though they be.

9. Spend at least one dollar a week for popular music. We sell ours after playing it for a week or two, and lose practically nothing, but a manager who is not willing to buy you good music and much of it can never make his house the success that he might otherwise. Don't get mad over it; just talk to him in a business way and show him the real facts. If he isn't interested he will not be in the motion picture business very long and you would best be looking up another position.

10. Remember that the smaller the house the more critical your audience. Many small towns can show the larger cities much in the manner of making the photoplay interesting. Don't labor under the delusion that in a small town anything will get over. "Position" is the right word; don't think about your playing as a "job."

Miss Currier's suggestions have the right ring to them. I know several places where "Rule No. 4" would apply particularly well. As to buying music, I don't know how her system works in the smaller towns. In the cities musicians generally have to supply their own music.

"Ragging" the Features.

Several weeks ago a manager who was about to turn a theater into a picture house for the summer told me he was looking for a "crackerjack" ragtime piano player. He said he intended to show the big pictures like "Les Miserables," "Last Days of Pompeii," etc., and wanted a first rate piano player who must be a good "ragtime" player. Now to my certain knowledge the man had not a picture theater in that locality before, and I have reason to believe the majority of his expected patrons do not insist that "music" of that kind shall preponderate. As it turned out, he engaged a pianist who wouldn't "rag" everything, and he did not put in the big photoplays he expected to, though he is showing a good grade of pictures. But it just goes to show that sometimes the exhibitor—or at any rate, some exhibitors—still have the idea that the music must all be of the "popular, up-to-date, gingery" variety, regardless of what their pictures may be.

A gentleman said to me recently, "If some of these managers could hear the comments made by people in the audience about their music they would surely take some measures toward bettering it." He further said that there were half a dozen picture theaters in his neighborhood, that he patronized two or three of them each week and managed to attend all of them in turn; that he knew many people who passed by some of the theaters because of their noisy silly music and gave their patronage to other houses for the sole reason that the music was less noisy, though it was still silly. It was at this point he made the remark quoted above. I ventured to suggest that if the manager wanted another kind of music he could have it by asking, and my friend retorted, "Then, if they must have that kind of racket, why don't they install electric pianos? The 'nickel-in-the-slot' machines can be controlled by an electric switch in the box office or the operator's room; the result will be the same and the cost much less in the long run. In either event these fellows will soon be wondering why people are losing their interest in pictures. I have personal knowledge of some who are getting tired of the disconcerting noise that passes for picture-music. I haven't lost my liking for pictures," he continued, "but it gets on my nerves to be constantly reminded of popular song stuff when I am trying to be interested in a picture. I don't mind it in comedies, but it is hard to keep your attention on a good dramatic picture when a piano or xylophone or something else is slamming away at a popular song. If I knew a house that showed good pictures without any music at all I'd walk a mile every day to attend it; and if I knew of one showing good pictures with the right kind of music, I'd walk further and pay more. There is one house in my neighborhood which is not so bad as the others and it is getting the money. They have an organ and piano. The pianist plays 'rags' on the piano (invariably 'rags' or popular songs) and 'Pilgrims' chorus' and music of that caliber on the organ for the next picture. It doesn't make any difference what the pictures are about—when she sits at the organ she plays slow music, and at the piano, lively music. If she would watch her pictures and give us something that wouldn't attract our attention to the music we could the better enjoy the pictures. And that is what I mean by saying I wish they would give us good music—cut out the noise—play something in the same order or style with the picture—something that doesn't clash and make it hard to follow the thread of the story."

I cannot give this in the gentleman's own language, but the above is the substance of his remarks boiled down. He said enough to fill a page like this as soon as he learned that I was interested in the subject. He is a refined and educated person, lives in a part of the city which had no theaters until lately, is a recent convert to moving pictures, and prophesies that within a few years the photoplay must be given with saner music, or no music at all, else the more intelligent people who have been attracted to it will soon lose interest in it, go somewhere else and the picture business become a trivial form of entertainment for the trivial minded.

I don't know how much of a prophet he is, but I went to see Selig's "The Baby Spy" the other night, and the orchestra consisted of xylophone and piano. Whether the xylophonist played drums also I cannot say, as I did not hear anything but his xylophone, which never stopped. They played popular stuff mostly and to put it mildly, they did not help the pictures any.

I certainly hope never to see the day when exhibitors will install electric pianos in their theaters, but most of the smaller houses in Chicago might as well have them now so far as the quality and appropriateness of their music is concerned.

Of Course it Looks Good.

Am in receipt of an article by E. A. Ahern clipped from the Billboard on the subject of music for the pictures. The article contains many good points and suggestions. I have to say this—why shouldn't I? Most of it has appeared at various times in the Moving Picture World during the past three years, and it look as good to me now as it did then.

OBSERVATIONS

BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN

DEFLECTIONS of the week following the close of the International Motion Picture Association's second convention have brought to the surface many impressions that are worthy of serious thought on the part of the people interested in the great business with which the association is connected. The convention and exposition met all the expectations of the most sanguine promoters. All the arrangements were well prepared and carried out to a nicety, and there was an almost complete absence of criticism on any part of the program. So pronounced was the success of the affair one would suppose that no room was left for suggestions towards improvements in future conventions of the association. Yet there are some who feel that the enthusiasm attending the event just closed led to some oversights.

* * *

One of the most prominent and influential men in the motion picture business who remained in this city a few days after the close of the convention was one of the people who thought there had been some omissions. "To my mind," said he, "the gatherings were even more successful than those of the preceding year and they should be productive of an immense advantage for all connected with the business. The discussions before the conventions were able and wholesome. They seemed to cover every detail bearing upon a united and harmonious future for the exhibitors, exchanges and manufacturers and the formation of plans calculated to best serve the public. But one comment I have to make is that many of the delegates, particularly those who came from distant points, did not seem to attach sufficient importance to the sessions. I am inclined to believe they felt the week was fixed by the association for an expedition of pleasure. The result was that the burden of carrying out the business of the convention was shouldered by few people in proportion to the number of exhibitors who were expected to participate in the sessions. Therefore, it is not surprising that some things were left undone."

* * *

"One of the oversights was the failure of the convention to take more definite action in re-uniting all the exhibitors. The subject was touched upon in some of the addresses, but it seems to me action in that direction should have been embodied in the form of strict resolutions. All engaged in the various branches of the business agree that the best way to promote its interest is to have hearty coöperation existing between exhibitors, exchanges and manufacturers. The first step towards this end is to have united coöperation between the exhibitors themselves, otherwise there can be no genuine coöperation. The exhibitors must be in a position to say 'We come to you united and want you to unite with us.'"

* * *

"Another comment I have in mind refers to the resolutions adopted by the convention on the multiple reel question. I do not think the convention went far enough in directing that copies of the resolutions be sent to the manufacturers. Better and quicker results would follow if the convention had appointed a committee to present the resolutions and arrange for a conference between that committee and representatives of the manufacturers and exchanges."

* * *

"While the resolution was under discussion in the convention one of the delegates stated that he and others visited manufacturers and the latter stated they were coming down to two reels, with possibly three reels, once a month; that they are losing money on the multiple reel question. From the remarks I inferred that the manufacturers would welcome the action. I have talked with manufacturers on the subject, and it is for that reason I say the matter cannot be satisfactorily adjusted by mere resolution. There are many phases involved which can only be intelligently handled by a joint conference.

* * *

"One of the delegates said during discussion of the matter, 'We started in business with one-reel pictures; then came the two-reel; and then the three-reel, and so on.' That is the point on which a hitch will arise when the manufacturers take up the resolution. If manufacturers furnishing regularly a one and two-reel service are to confine themselves to such service at regular prices and discontinue multiple reels at extra cost it will mean that they are to retire from the feature field."

"Now let us see what one of the representatives of the manufacturers with whom I talked on the subject had to say about it: 'It may not be known that the multiple reel was not, after all, so much a creation of the manufacturer in order to get more money, as it was the result of demand on the part of exhibitors and their patrons. In earlier days when the manufacturers tried to squeeze a standard work into one reel letters poured in from many quarters saying it was a pity the story had not been made in two or more reel form, as the condensation spoiled a very excellent subject. This was an incentive to the manufacturers to enlarge their plants, increase the capacity of the various departments and increase investments in costumes, props, scenic effects, etc., to bring its productions to the standard the exhibitors and their patrons required. The plants of to-day speak for themselves. Their size and equipment would not have been required for the one, two, or even three-reel service; but the multiple service could not have been handled with anything less. The success of that service was what brought into the field the multiplicity of feature film companies that are in it to-day."

* * *

"'Now what is to be the situation if the manufacturers who brought up the business to what it is to-day fall back to the one, two, or three-reel service? What demand is to be made upon the producers, state rights people and agencies who do not furnish regular one and two-reel service, but confine themselves to the feature end of the game? Are the pioneers who blazed the trail to success to fall back and leave that field to those who have been in it but a year or two? Manufacturers of films cannot afford to have differences with the exhibitors, because they, after all, constitute the market for the productions. But when the exhibitor asks the manufacturer to do something for him he should be prepared to do something for the manufacturer. It is unfortunate that many exhibitors have not the opportunity or means to provide themselves with houses to justify a continuance of the multiple service; but that does not seem to afford a logical reason for a demand that certain manufacturers limit their productions to that line of business and eliminate themselves from the feature line.'"

* * *

"The feature business will eventually adjust itself to the satisfaction of the exhibitors, even if nothing should result from the convention's resolution. The statement made by a delegate to the convention that the people are getting tired and sick of features is quite true to an extent. They really are not tired of features of merit. The market has become glutted with inferior stuff that is being peddled from house to house. In some instances, good features have suffered from padding and, necessarily, the resultant monotony has had the same effect upon audiences as inferiority. It is well known in the trade that for these reasons there is bound to be a slump in the producing and rental end of the business, and it is not far off. When it does come there will be a big reduction in the number of multiples and other features. It will be the advent of the long-predicted day of survival of the fittest."

* * *

"So you see," said the well-known picture man who was giving his impressions of the convention, "when you take all sides of the multiple question, it cannot be disposed of by mere resolution. To be plain on the matter, some of the manufacturers feel that after the multiples are wiped out and the exhibitors have the productions restricted to one or two-reel subjects at regular prices, the money saved on the multiples can be devoted to feature nights. They are wary and have coupled with the abolition of the multiple idea that part of the grievance committee's report which embraced these two questions: Why are exhibitors compelled to pay for service on days when film is not used? If compelled to pay, why are not exhibitors given privilege to use all the said reels at a later date without extra charge? For my own satisfaction, I repeated the questions to an exchange man and he was quite frank with his reply. He said the chief reason was that some people who have become exhibitors remain awake all night figuring how they can put something over on the exchange the next day. They are not dishonest. It's an irresistible impulse to be crafty, like the fellows who split rentals with their neighbors. The exchanges fear that if allowed to do as the report states it would practically mean a license to use films when they pleased and the substitution of peddled features."

* * *

"The film business is a great game and the phases in it are kaleidoscopic to the highest degree. The only chance to get near to the point of general satisfaction is the formulation of some plan of coöperation by all concerned."

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Honest Advertising.

SOMETIMES we wonder why it is that there are so many good managers in the small towns. In the theatrical end the "opry house" manager is a joke and not always a good one, but there are more good hustlers in the little towns than there are in the cities, possibly because a man in a two to five thousand town must be a hustler to keep on being a manager. But it is not altogether hustle they display. They have business management.

We have spoken before of L. J. Scott, of the Gem Theater, Warrensburg, Mo., but his latest issue is again worthy of notice. He has what might be termed an educational page in his little five by seven four-pager, and a recent issue deals with advertising. This is what he has to say:

WHAD'Y MEAN, HONEST ADVERTISING?

The term "Advertising" may be divided into several classifications. For instance, there is direct and indirect advertising, consistent and "wild cat" advertising, and, lastly, honest and dishonest advertising.

Of the first group, the management of this Theater aims to furnish some of each kind for the benefit of itself and its patrons. For the benefit of its patrons? Certainly; why not? There is absolutely no way to ascertain the returns from the issuance of this paper. Nevertheless, we are endeavoring to furnish those interested with the latest news of the motion picture business in general and this Theater in particular. Our direct advertisements consist of newspaper notices and heralds.

How does this benefit you?

In just this way:

If we have a program which will please you, we want you to know it. Should it be one which you will not enjoy we want to know that, too.

Better by far that you stay at home than that you attend and be disappointed.

"Wildcatting" is the term applied to the method used to inveigle you into spending your money by means of sensationalism of some sort. A man very recently asked me to run a film which he was carrying through the country. Upon my asking as to its merits he said, "What difference does that make? I've got posters and photographs to make a swell front." And there you have "wildcatting." We did not show the film.

There is no necessity for me to differentiate between honest and dishonest advertising.

Let me impress once more this fact: Direct and indirect advertising done consistently and honestly works for your benefit and ours.

That is our aim.

There are other things than "swell posters" that make a good "flash front," and too many managers who accept too literally the familiar Barnum proposition that the public likes to be humbugged. But Barnum himself probably would have explained that the public does not like to be swindled. When he advertised a cherry colored cat without explaining that he was thinking of black and not red cherries, he at least gave the public a laugh that put them in good humor and gave them their money's worth; but the man who by inference promises a good show and gives a bad one, assuredly does not hand out a laugh, but just a plain swindle.

Keeping Faith.

The fake showman who hustles through a territory and gets out of town before indignation rises to a concerted retaliation can afford to take chances, but the man who has a permanent investment must keep faith if he would keep on doing business, and the more he does in a modest way to make his patrons realize that he is keeping faith with them, the better are his chances of success. He cannot—or rather should not—blatantly advertise that he is the most truthful of all men. He cannot brag about his honesty, but he can, as Mr. Scott has done, explain his policy and leave the reader to judge whether or not he follows it.

There are too many men going around the country with fake offerings. They have plenty of paper and other material, and if the film only lived up to the promises made, there could be a cleanup, but in spite of the fact that a good film costs little more than a poor one, this type of traveler would not carry a good film if it were to be had at the same price. He has a peculiar mental kink that makes it impossible for him to appreciate square dealing and he would rather cheat a man out of a dollar than to earn five honestly with the same amount of effort. And he makes the small manager a partner in his swindling enterprise and does his getaway and presently the manager, who has to stay behind, notices a falling business and tells himself that advertising does not pay. He was never more wrong. Advertising has paid. The trouble is that he has advertised himself a liar and a swindler, not intentionally, not perhaps even with the intent to swindle, but through an ignorant failure to realize the duty he owes his patrons. If he got sand in his sugar at the price of all good sugar he would indignantly withdraw his trade from the swindling grocer, but he cannot realize that the over advertised subject is as much a swindle as sanded sugar. He has kept faith with his patrons no more faithfully than the dishonest grocer, and is entitled to no more loyal support.

But—

But this does not mean that you should go to the other extreme and persistently advertise that this and that and the other subject is poor. If you give a good average show it is not necessary to advertise that this Gumph is not up to standard and that the Gollywop two-reeler is sixty per cent. padding. It is up to you to try and give a good, average show if you would keep a good, average patronage, but the subject you do not care for may be liked by a majority of your patrons. It is merely that it is safer to under rather than to overvalue your run of reels and unsafe to make too extravagant promises. And it is fatal to fool with features that are clearly fakes.

Just after the Titanic disaster there was circulated a reel made up of all sorts of clips. A dozen or more old subjects were run in with a few feet of English commercial stuff made aboard the steamer at her launching. It was a fake and most of the managers who ran it knew in advance it was a fake, yet many used it and made a few extra dollars on the day and lost a lot more in the business they might have had from the patrons who subsequently avoided the house.

Take a pride in keeping faith with your patrons and you'll take a pride in the growth of your bank account. If you heavily advertise a feature, and when it arrives you find that you have been stung—as sometimes will happen—put a sign out over the box office that you find that the feature does not measure up to the mark, that it is not going to live up to all you have said about it. If you have made an extra price for the day, have the nerve to cut back to your regular admission. You may lose money, but you'll get it back later on when you do have something you do not have to apologize for.

Confidence.

There is not a great commercial success that is not built on confidence. We pay seven dollars for a hat that for a time looks precisely like one we can get for three, but six months later the three dollar hat looks very different and the seven dollar hat looks about as it did when it was new. There is not much difference in manufacturing cost between the good and the poor hat, certainly not a sufficiently marked difference to warrant more than double the charge, but the extra charge to the customer carries the assurance that the hat will stand up under wear. There are lots of towns where you could show to crowded houses for ten cents and watch the five cent houses starve to death, because the double charge would be backed by your assurance that there will be a better show, not twice as good as the other, perhaps, but an average good show and not an in-and-out run of entertainment. Not all picture lovers, even in the small towns, regard the additional nickel as more important than their comfort and entertainment, but back up a well selected program with good projection and good music. Good music does not mean an elaborate program of orchestral selections. It means supplying the proper musical accompaniment to the varying moods flashed on the screen, and that is why an organist who can follow the pictures is to be preferred to an orchestra that cannot. When you start in to make a specialty of an orchestra that can merely play pieces of music, book your pictures to fit the music, but if the pictures are your chief attraction make the musicians follow the pictures or get out on the street, and put a pianist in. It's irritating to watch the angel child go to heaven accompanied by a duel between the xylophone attachment on a patent organ and the electric chimes. These both have their place, but their place is not in the death chamber. That is no way to win the confidence of your patrons if you advertise an unsurpassed orchestra. Make people feel that in every department of management you are competent and well qualified, and you can put that confidence into the bank in the shape of increased receipts. You could not make ten dollars a night with the sort of program Lyman Howe offers, and yet look what he gets for the pictures just because he knows how to make them great. Look where Rothapfel started and where he is. You can do it. Why not?

Cheap and Good.

It took James C. Quinn, of Los Angeles, to put it in a nutshell. He writes:

> Not meaning this for merely a boquet—I wonder how many theater managers ever stop to realize that the Moving Picture World is one of the best and most important, and at the same time, the cheapest salaried employee they have. For the princely wage of ten cents a week they are employing, and have working for them everyday in the week (and nights too) the most progressive minds in the motion picture business, including the managers of hundreds of other theaters all over the country. How many months, or years, would it take them to gain the knowledge, by actual experience, which is contained in a few issues of the World? I think a lot of them would still be sprinkling sawdust on the floor.

It never quite hit you that way, did it?

You could not afford to hire a man to stay in New York and tell you about the new films that you are going to have presently. You can hire several critics for only part of ten cents a week. You could not get the part time services of an advertising specialist for less than $25 a week, but the service is yours for another part of that same ten cents, not one specialist, but the specialist of every company with which you do business. It is not alone this department that should give you hints. Every advertisement has ripe, well considered lines that you can use in your house stuff, not only that, either. You can get good lines from the advertisements of the films you do not run that can be worked over for the films you do use.

If you had to pay the salaries of all the specialists who give you their best for ten cents a week, it would cost you close to ten thousand dollars.

Mr. Quinn did not take his pen in hand just to talk about that. His reason for writing was to talk about door knob specials, and he seems to trace back of the present run of this idea. He says:

> We used the Door-knob Special about two and a half years ago when we took pictures of the Darrow trial, and when I saw the first mention of it a few issues back, I immediately began, with commendable human oneriness, to "wolf" that we were being robbed of the glory and credit of same. However, I did not say it loud enough for anyone to hear it, and when I began to think real hard about it I remembered that the idea had been presented to us by our distributor who said he had used it with good results some fifteen or twenty years previous while in charge of a big eastern piano house.
>
> Come to think of it, didn't they use something like that on St. Bartholomew's Eve? Seems to me I read about that in one of G. A. Henty's masterpieces.

Mr. Quinn, who is conducting an all around supply house in Los Angeles, and who advertises that he and his brother, C. J., have the only concern in the United States that can supply English-Spanish features, has been asked to come in frequently, and we hope that he will accept the invitation and become a regular.

With a String.

Paris, a new St. Louis airdome, comes forward with something new in the shape of a "conditional pass," good for use only on rainy nights. The scheme may be a good one, but it does not seem so at first glance. There is a certain suggestion of stinginess in this willingness to admit only in case of rain. Here's the way it probably sounds to most persons:

"We've got a new park and we want you to come out and look it over; but we can't waste a perfectly good five-cent admission on you. Wait until it rains and there won't be many people out there and you can come in free, because then it won't cost us anything." That's what the line "This pass is good only on rainy nights" means.

But suppose it had been phrased this way:

> Performances are given in Paris every night. There is full protection from the weather on inclement nights. We want to prove this to you. Retain this pass, present it the first rainy night and see for yourself.

It means precisely the same thing so far as the management is concerned, but now, instead of being a grudging permit to come around some night when room is a drug on the market, there is the suggestion that they would be glad to let you in free any night, only they are so anxious to prove the rainy weather proposition that they want you to wait for rain.

There is always more than one way of killing a cat, and the axe on the head scheme is not always the best.

By the same token this extract from a circular does not read well:

> We Show ONLY MOVING PICTURES
> Vaudeville, Hamfats and Amateur Stock and Music.
> Companies cannot practice at the expense of our Patrons.

St. Louis used to be, and probably still is a good summer town, which means that there are plenty of open air attractions. This advertisement is meant to fight the opposition, but somehow it does not sound inviting. It is couched in theatrical argot and it does not strike home. Instead suppose this were run:

> We cater to persons of refinement who are not interested in cheap vaudeville and poor dramatic offerings. We offer the finished playing of the great actors of the screen and do not detract from the excellence of their efforts through the presence of indifferent features.

We like better these lines:

> Come to Morganford Road and Juniata Street and > SEE PARIS BY NIGHT
>
> It has been often said and truthfully told "that if you see PARIS you have seen the World."
>
> We therefore have located PARIS in your neighborhood, to make it convenient for you to VISIT PARIS every night, in other words to see the World without leaving St. Louis for a minute.

A Catalogue Scheme.

J. L. Frazier, of the Lowell Theater, Lowell, Arizona, sends a letter and sample cards that are self-explanatory. They require no particular comment. Here they are:

> Enclosed you will find two cards with which I am working up a nice mailing list and find it is getting a lot of new money as well as making a great many warm friends. I have had so many inquiries as to when a certain player would appear on the screen in my house again, or what had become of so & so, this gave me the idea which I have enclosed and it has proven a great success. Only one player to the card, in this way I can file them under their respective names and whenever I am exhibiting a photoplay featuring anyone, I simply refer to my files and notify all those addresses under this player's name and for good mention I notify many others. On the reverse side of the player request card I have given a partial list of many popular players. I am now getting out a weekly folder and will send you a sample copy as soon as they are off the press. Smith-Brooks, of Denver, are doing the cover, while the body will be printed here at home. I believe this will be very nifty, at least I am trying to make it so, and ask you to give me your severest criticism on same when a copy reaches you.
>
> You no doubt will wonder why I have three towns listed on the address side of the request card. While there are three enumerated they are all one, and known as the "Warren District." When speaking of the Warren District or Bisbee, it is very common to say it is four miles long and sixty feet wide; however, it is not quite as bad as that. We have several little villages or settlements in this camp with three postoffices, located at Bisbee, with a substation at Lowell and another office at Warren, and in addition we have Jiggerville, Bakerville, Tin Town, South Bisbee, Upper Lowell, Johnson Addition and the Windwood Addition. You can now readily see why I have had the three postoffices placed on my cards, and it enables me to compile a most correct mailing list, with no waste.

LOWELL THEATER
POPULAR PLAYER'S REQUEST CARD

Manager Lowell Theater:

You will please notify me when you are to exhibit photoplays featuring

Mary Fuller

Fill in the name of your favorite actor or actress on above line

Name Mrs. John Doe
Write your name plainly

Address 3104 Blue 478
P. O. Box number or telephone number

Bisbee, Ariz.
Lowell, Bisbee or Warren

Note—Name only one player on each card. You can secure as many cards as you desire at the box office.
(List of Photoplay Stars on Reverse Side) (over)

It affords me great pleasure to be able to present for your approval at the LOWELL THEATER on Thursday and Friday, June 4th and 5th.

"THE CABARET DANCER"

a two Reel masterpiece, featuring Alice Joyce and Tom Moore. A picture of unusual quality.

Having carefully read both the manufacturer's synopsis and the critic's criticisms of this picture, I can safely recommend it as being one you will thoroughly enjoy.

SPECIAL MUSICAL PROGRAM BY OUR CHALLENGE ORCHESTRA
E. DAWKINS, DIRECTOR

June 2, _____

J. D. FRAZIER,
Manager Lowell Theater

Mark Three.

The Palace Theater, Milledgeville, Ga., which uses the unique Daily News, frequently mentioned, has celebrated its third anniversary with an issue printed on both sides of the paper. Just before that they got out a "war extra" announcing the occupation of Vera Cruz. A war extra edition of a house program is something distinctly new, but the News is unique in many other ways.

Thanks and Please.

J. Stuart Christal, of the Christal Theater, Winslow, Ariz., sends a letter mailed to his patrons when he changed from the Gem to the Front street, a larger and better house. It is neatly printed in brown on a cream paper and briefly thanks the recipient for his past patronage, announces the removal and encloses a ticket for the new house.

Somehow that "thanks for past patronage" gets under the skin far deeper than the mere announcement of a new house. The recipient feels that he is an old friend of the management whether he was ever in the house or not, and feels in duty bound to go to the new one, anyhow. A little tact goes a long way sometimes. And the free ticket doesn't hurt any and it is seldom that the holder comes alone.

Sticks to It.

The Majestic theater, Bloomfield, Iowa, is getting out a house sheet and as C. F. Leach is running the Mutual program he does not waste most of his space on the other companies. Three solid pages talk about the films and the players that are coming to that house. The fourth is the program page and here some improvement might be made my more definitely marking off the different days. A little light rule work (not above one point) would make quite a difference. As the program takes the entire page it will not be necessary to box it in, but merely to provide some light rule the width of the page and break the program into dated sections. In spite of the small size of the sheet it amply covers the ground for a small body type is used and everything confined to the matter in hand.

If You Are Going to Build.

If you are planning to build, get the February supplement to the Brickbuilder, published by Rogers and Manson Co., Boston, Mass. This is a section devoted to the best plans in a recent competition for a picture theater to be built of terra cotta. Most of the plans are rather ornate, but there is a lot of information to be had from a study of the designs.

A Note to You.

Dear Reader:

Where is that picture of your airdome you were going to send in? The one with the advertising schemes on it.

THE PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Make Goods.

WE HAVE never been very strong for the book adaptation and we are less so now that we have adapted a dozen stories than we were before, but we recognize the advertising value of a big name and can understand why, for a time, the name of a well-known writer is worth money to the manufacturer. About 18 years ago we witnessed the vaudeville debut of Charles Dickson and Lillian Burkhart, and after it was over we held an inquest with a few other dramatic writers. It was agreed that the sketch was bright and pleasing, but not worth the $250 that it was understood that they were paid. That was a lot of money in those days when the Keith houses were notable because they would not use an opening act that was not worth at least $35 if a single turn or $70 if there were two in the act.

A couple of weeks later John Mason and Marion Manola and Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Drew came along and the price was up to $350. After that came the deluge and not all of the well-known players made good, and the regular vaudeville actors, who were not getting $350 referred politely to the newcomers as "gold bricks" and "four-flushers," and in other terms of similar import and they put ten or twenty-five dollars on their own salaries and got it. They were needed to make good for the gold bricks.

It's pretty much the same in photoplay. The fiction writers are taking the bread of honest toil out of our mouths, perhaps, but they hand it back thickly spread with butter and jam. Something was needed to loosen the makers of film from the tradition that $25 was enough to pay for a story. The man who paid $1,000 for the story that made good on the billboard and advertising pages rather than on the screen got a wider perspective of the whole business and became willing to pay $50 to the little fellow who made good on the screen. After a while the book title will cease to have an inflated value, and in the meantime it has raised and is raising the price for the regular author, so let's be patient. We can remember the time when all four of the Four Cohans were holding out for $125 a week and only two shows instead of three, and they were a year getting it. They would be cheap at $5,000 now. We can remember when $25 was the top price for scripts, where now $50 is an average good price, and $100 a reel not uncommon. Keep on making good and some day you'll thank the big novelist for putting you into the hundred dollar class.

It's only a couple of years ago that $250 for a book right would have staggered most manufacturing companies. We know of one instance where $2,000 has been bid with $3,000 asked. This is not for a reel, of course, but the right to a series, each story being paid for in addition, but when a manufacturer gets used to listening to prices like that, our little fifties and hundreds don't sound so terribly big as in the days when editors got on the carpet every time they paid more than twenty dollars a reel.

Saynotso.

Here is a chap who puts four copies of this paper on the stand in a small town and thinks he has raised the circulation four copies. Unless those four copies are sold, we lose the cost of printing the other three that do not sell. As Potash and Perlmutter, or either, would say, "Fooey on such a kindness." Now let's listen. He writes:

> From time to time, articles appear in your department on plagiarism and I often have wondered just how closely this word can be defined. In its most strict sense, about everything written and produced might come under this head, but I can not understand why we little fellows who are trying to write producable scripts—and note that I mean producable, not saleable—should continually cry, that our themes have been stolen.
>
> Personally it has been a great satisfaction to me to find that I had tried to write something, which I later found had been already produced, and the nearer my plot and its development has come to the original, the greater the satisfaction, because it has shown me that I was at least on the right track, therefore I file away that particular script in the "also ran" till, and feeling that my plagiarism has been wholly unintentional, I am inclined to brag a little to myself.
>
> Without advice of counsel, I refuse to answer how many of the produceable ones I have written, but I am going to write one.
>
> In January, I found that there was such a magazine as the Moving Picture World, I am not a regular subscriber, for the reason that I have gone you one better than that: I succeeded in having our news agency put four copies of it in the rack each week, whereby I get mine and actually increase your circulation by four instead of one.

There is nothing new under the sun. We grant you that. The tight dresses the ladies wear to our undoing are merely a hark back to the Babylonish days. All right. But the ladies of the Babylon days did not have silk socks to show. It's a new combination. Selah! Also Allah be praised!

We wrote a story this morning. The start is the same old thing. The finish is the same old thing again, but this start and this finish in combination make a new story and one that will be laughed at. (Note—We mean it to be a comedy.)

Jim Jones, down at the corner grocery asks why a hen crosses the street. The answer is that it is because she wants to get on the other side. That Jim is a plagiarist. He heard that in some minstrel show. At another corner grocery (or perhaps one in the middle of the block,) Sam Smith wants to know the answer to the same question, but he explains that a lady is throwing stones at a dog across the street and the lady chicken wants to be where she is safe. That is not so terribly clever, perhaps, but it is not what Sam heard at the minstrels. That is the difference between plagiarism and improvements.

Any man who can bring an absolutely new story, new in every respect and particular, can have half what we can sell it for, and we'll pay off the mortgage with the other half and buy an automobile with what is left. There is no such thing as a story brand new in every minor factor. There is such a thing as a story that is a new combination.

We are not ashamed to admit that we do not know how to write an absolutely original story. If we did know we would not tell it here, anyhow; we would hug it to our breast and be afraid then that someone would see it, but it is possible to ring in changes. There are twenty-six letters in the English language and they can be made to form hundreds of thousands of words. It is the same way with factors. There are few elemental factors, but there is practically no limit to the combinations. Any combination already used and known to you to have been used is plagiarism. Any combination of factors used by you and by another unknown to you is an unfortunate accident. Any new combination is a success.

Here's an example: John loves Mildred. Jane suggests that he makes love to her to make Mildred jealous. He does and wins Mildred. That's been done. It's been done lots more than one time. Now switch it. John makes love to Jane. He makes Sarah interested because Sarah hates Jane. She cuts in and wins John because she hates Jane. That has not been done yet. If you are wise you'll not do it now because a lot are certain to take this tip and wise editors will not buy the combination knowing from experience that a lot of stories will follow this suggestion. The introduction of Sarah is novel. John winning Mildred through Jane's aid is old. John falling in love with Jane through her suggestion that she will help him to win Mildred is old. The third party feature is new.

There is a fourth and fifth and sixth and seventh development to this. Any one of the new ideas is not plagiarism. Any use of any one of these three is.

But this writer has a more important message. He glories in the fact that if his story is like some existing story, where his conscience is innocent of plagiarism, he has at least written a story even if it is a story that someone has written before him. To a certain extent he is right. At least write a story, even if it is an old story, and it argues that it is a story. But 990 out of every 1000 don't write stories. They think they write stories, but the Post Office Department would not circulate our opinion of what those stories really are.

We had a pupil in here the other day. She didn't know what a plot was. She wrote. If it sounded good she thought it was a story. She could not tell whether it was a story or not because she did not know. She did not know what a story was. She could not tell the difference between merely a lot of incident and a lot of incident that belonged to a plot. As long as she provided enough action to run twenty or more minutes, she thought she had written a story. Some had plots and some had no plots. She could not tell the difference. It made no difference whether she plagiarized or not. Her story was marked with the sign of death and it curled up and died.

First learn what a story is. Then learn what the old stories are. Then learn how to take the old factors and effect a new combination. Then learn to sell. If you have something to sell, you can sell any new combination.

You won't have to worry about plagiarism, but it is better to write a story that has been written before than a story that no one with common sense would write and to this extent our correspondent has some excuse for inflating his chest when he is told his story has been done before. At least he knows he has done something. He has not "flivvered" again. The next step is to learn not to plagiarize and then there will be another one of us.

Technicalities.

A correspondent offers the suggestion that we run a series of short articles on the various technical terms, and asks, as a starter, how to produce an apparition as opposed to a vision or dissolve; in simpler phrase how to suddenly confront a character with some other character or object instead of the slow process of dissolving in.

This is something so seldom used, and so still more seldom used by outside authors that it has not before been asked for. It should be, at all times, sparingly used, but we will suppose this situation.

Jim has killed his cousin Henry to gain control of Henry's fortune. One more life lies in the way—Henry's mother—and she, too, must be killed before Jim can possess himself of the estate. Jim starts for the mother's room. In a flash the bleeding corpse of Henry stands in the way and Jim, conscience stricken, rushes out to accomplish his own destruction. It follows here that the sudden apparition is more dramatically effective than the slow dissolve, and more in accordance with the spirit of the scene.

This effect is obtained by stopping the camera and introducing the spectre. Then the camera is turned again and now the spectre is a part of the scene. It is written thus:

> 22—Library—Jim on—takes dagger from drawer—goes to bedroom—stop camera—introduce Henry standing before door—Jim staggers back—points at figure—retreats to other side of room—stop camera—remove Henry—Jim looks—does not see Henry—gains courage—again rushes to door—stop camera—introduce Henry as before—Jim staggers back—rushes from room—stop camera—remove Henry—Mother appears in doorway in dressing-gown—looks curiously about—sees no one—reenters room.

This is not "stop camera" work as generally accepted, for this means the stoppage of the camera after every exposure, but by writing in "stop camera" the idea is clearly conveyed to the director that the figure of Henry is to be caused to appear in the space of one frame and not in two or three feet as with a dissolve.

This is one of the very few instances where the use of a technical explanation is necessary. On the other hand we saw the other day a comedy that bristled with ("accelerated action") which means that the camera is turned very slowly that great speed may be developed or that a special gear is used, taking but four pictures where sixteen exposures would ordinarily be made. This was a favorite trick some years ago, but now it is the last resort of the unimaginative and John William Kellette further cheered the author of the script by explaining that at the Thanhouser studio the other day he overheard C. J. Hite order the remaking of a scene done with the four-in-one on the grounds that Thanhouser was not going to resort to such time-worn devices.

Where a director needs to slightly retard the turning to get quick action, he knows enough to do it without being told, and it will not help you any to try to tell him.

Perspective.

Please take this page and hold it so close to your eyes that your nose touches the paper. Thank you! You couldn't see a thing, could you? Don't get your ideas so close that you lose the perspective. Get back a little and get the proper values. If you are in love with Grace Jones or Harry Smith, as the case may be, do not write about your love, because you are so close to the center of things that you have no perspective. Everything interests you and all is a rose-colored haze. But you can stand apart and watch the love affair of Sue Smith and Paul Black without undue enthusiasm, and so you can get the true values of their love affair and write it correctly.

In other words do not put yourself and your immediate friends into your stories or your stories will have false values. Now and then an editor will get a string of stories, in all of which the hero is a brave young engineer or a dashing naval lieutenant or something like that, or perhaps a lot of stuff where the girl always throws the good young man down and marries the rich young scamp and lives unhappily ever after. Then the editor knows that his author is an engineer or wants to join the navy or just had his fresh young heart sadly jolted, and, whatever it may be, the stories are worthless because the facts are out of perspective and distorted.

Don't stand too close to your story or you'll step on your own feet.

Paper Sizes.

Funny how questions seem to run in bunches. Lately there have been several letters asking if it is not permissible to use other than 8½ by 11 paper, or why it is not permissible to use other sizes, and from the tone of some of the letters the authors seem to think that a cruel wrong is being done them because they are not permitted to use any size paper they desire. Now there is no civil or moral law requiring the use of paper of a certain size or quality or color. There is absolutely nothing in the statutes made and enacted to prevent any citizen of this free and independent country form writing his stories on stock ticker tape. He can use foolscap or the backs of postage stamps just as he pleases. He can write with a blue lead pencil on green paper and tie it with a red ribbon if he wants to and still keep free of jail or the insane asylum. No one is trying to impose any hardship on the helpless author. He can write his brain kiddies on white velvet in gold paint if he wants to and make faces at every policeman he meets. He may loudly declaim his entire freedom from the bondage of 8½ by 11 paper and there will be none to say him nay.

The only reason that the use of paper of that size is advocated is that this is the regular size cut, the handiest to obtain and therefore the one most generally used. There is a paper cut 8 by 10½ inches, but this is not the standard letter size and to the man who handles hundreds of scripts the size seems stingy. One nervous fiction editor simply will not read stories on the skimpy size and it seems a little unusual even to the cooler heads, it is not the regular size and there is the unconscious, but none the less potent suggestion that the story is not a regular story.

Foolscap is the almost certain sign of the novice. Paper punched at the side suggests the school loose leaf notebook and therefore the school girl or boy, who is apt to be a novice, but a white twenty-pound bond suggests the regular author and therefore the "regular" story and this is why no departure from the advice to use that size is advised. There is no reason why paper of any size may not be used except that any departure from the usual custom is apt to hurt the chances of a sale. That ought to be an important consideration.

They're the Ones.

In speaking of the self-styled incompetent critics Harry Solomonssky writes: "The money they got from me did not make much difference, but I am thinking of the poor fellow who cannot afford it."

That's just the point. They are the ones who most frequently need help because they have gone into the work because they need the money; not because they are well fitted to succeed. They feel that with a little help they will succeed and so they scrape and save and then not only get no help, but are put further back through false advice and equally false encouragement. Of course the man who cannot write should not write, but how can he be supposed to know he cannot succeed when he has ten dollars' worth of letters telling him that he can?

Ideas.

Lately a correspondent sent a clipping from the home paper to give us some ideas. He marked two items from the local column. These are what he marked:

> United States Marshal W. C. Hildreth was shot and fatally wounded in Coffee County while trying to arrest a man named Sanders, charged with being a Ku-Klux. Sanders fled after the shooting.
>
> * * *
>
> A mine planted by guerillas along the N. & C. track was exploded early Sunday morning five miles south of Tullahoma, being touched off by a stray horse before the train came along. The train ran into the excavation left after the explosion and three soldiers were hurt.

Both of these could be worked into plots, but the war story would have a very limited appeal and the other would be too full of violence. They both gain whatever strength they possess through strenuosity.

But the same clipping says that the local Internal Revenue officer issued a statement relative to the payment of the income tax. That sounds like a rather dry statement. But suppose that we have the man trying to collect a thousand dollars that has been due him for more than a year. He uses all sorts of arguments and scares his man into deciding to pay. The payment is made just as the Revenue man is looking over the statement that shows he is five hundred dollars on the safe side. The payment makes him liable to taxation, to the huge delight of the hounded debtor.

Allan Pinkerton in a suit was awarded $1,580 for the services of his agency in spotting dishonest conductors. This suggests the spotter and the railroad conductor, who both love the same girl. The conductor gets her and the spotter seeks revenge by falsely reporting his rival for dishonesty. There are several developments of the heart interest here in this bare report of a judicial decision, the case having gone into court.

The correspondent picked out the two ideas with the ready-made punch, and mostly the ready-made punch is the crime punch. The wise plot hunter will seek to put the punch into some seemingly uninteresting story and so, as a rule, get something more novel.

Now let's take one of the marked paragraphs. There is nothing very humorous in a railroad accident, but that hole in the ground suggests a pit dug by one man as a trap for his rival that the pit digger may take the girl both love to the picnic. It happens that the prospective victim does not take that path, but some young giant does and has to stay in the pit until the boys get back from the picnic, or perhaps he is helped out and discovers who dug the pit. He goes to the picnic and musses up the suitor.

Take the other paragraph. Some empty-headed yokel wants to be given credit for desperate deeds. He poses as a member of the Ku-Klux. The Sheriff takes him at his word and arrests him. There is a laugh as well as a dead man in that paragraph.

It's all in the way you look at the stuff. If you are trained to think the right sort of plots, you do not have to trust to crime to pull your story through. Don't look at the item. Look back of it.

Telling the Audience.

One thing that puzzles the novice—and not always the novice alone—is when to let the audience into a secret and when to keep it as a surprise. Shall the audience know that the heroine of "East Lynne," for example, is Madame Vine, the governess, or shall it be told that Mme. Vine really is the errant wife?

In our own practise we hold that the audience must be told, but we clearly understand that it is a rule with so many exceptions that it is not a rule at all. The sole question is simply "Which will be the most effective?" Take "East Lynne." Mme. Vine, the governess, weeping over the dying child, is not so pathetic a figure as the mother who longs to confess her relationship and receive not the caress of affection, but the kiss of motherlove. Therefore the audience should know that this is the errant mother and not merely the governess.

On the other hand take a farce. Jim loves Sadie and wants to elope with her. As he waits by the automobile he gets a note that she can't very well elope with him that afternoon because she just married his father. In this case the punch is the sudden surprise at the turn of the situation. If we showed earlier in the play that both father and son wished to marry the girl we should have to work for a different comedy effect and get the humor out of the rivalry between the two men. Instead of this we lead the audience to suppose that paternal objection is based on some other reason and the note comes as a big laugh.

As a rule the anticipation is more potent than the surprise and the elucidation of the story early prevents the need of cumbering explanations at the close when the action should be moving at its highest speed. See which will help you most to get laughs or effects as the case may be, and do whichever seems best, but study it out.

It's ——

Are you writing war stuff? So are lots and lots of others. Now is the time to write spanking good dramas of a different sort because there are so few being written.

A Choice.

Would you rather sell your first script and get so puffed up you'll never sell another, or sell forty out of your third fifty?

The Crying Need.

What we want is a school that will guarantee you'll sell scripts; not merely one that guarantees to buy your first script, no matter how poor it may be.

A Definition.

Originality is not another name for insanity. Even original ideas must be producible to be salable.

It All Depends.

Don't always blame the editor for poor stories. You don't see what he buys, but what the director makes out of it.

Technique of the Photoplay

(Second Edition)

By EPES W. SARGENT

Not a line reprinted from the first edition, but an entirely new and exhaustive treatise of the Photoplay in its every aspect, together with a dictionary of technical terms and several sample scripts.

One hundred and seventy-six pages of actual text.

Special chapters on Developing the "Punch," Condensing the Script, Writing the Synopsis, Multiple Reel Stories, Talking Pictures, Copyrights, etc.

In cloth, two dollars. Full leather, three dollars.

By mail postpaid. Add ten cents if registration is desired.

☞ Address all Orders to

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

17 Madison Avenue - New York City

Projection Department

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

Question No. 38.

BEST answer will be published, and the names of others sending in replies of excellence will appear in the Roll of Honor. Permission to use the contributor's name must accompany each answer, otherwise only the name of the city will be used. Theater managers looking for high-class men will do well to watch the Roll of Honor.

Suppose you have direct current, and d.c. fan and machine motors. The current supply is changed to a.c. Would it be practical to run your motors temporarily on a.c.? If you think it would, tell us how you would do it. Suppose you have 110 volt supply, and it is changed to 110 or vice versa, what would you do about your motors?

Roll of Honor on Question No. 32.

The Roll of Honor is shorter this week than it has ever been before. I expected this question to be a sticker, and was to some extent surprised that there were even as many correct replies as there were. It consists of Jos. H. M. Smith, Forth Worth, Texas; W. S. James, Camden, New Jersey; Harry T. Dobson, Toronto, Canada, and John Mason, Toronto, Canada. I have selected two replies; both of them are somewhat lengthy, but they each cover the question in a way which justifies its use. They are by W. S. James and Harry T. Dobson. Frank Willard, Jr., Marshalltown, Iowa, sent in an excellent reply, but it came too late to be considered for publication.

Answer to Question No. 32.

By W. S. James, Camden, N. J.

The Question:

What is the difference between the synchronous motor and the induction motor? What is the difference between the differentially and the accumlatively-wound motor, and what is the difference in their windings? Illustrate by sketches. Tell what you know about the repulsion type of motor; the series motor. How may their speed be controlled electrically?

The Answer:

In a synchronous motor the rotor runs in step with the cycles of the power current, while in the induction motor the rotor lags behind—in other words is pulled along by the field. Probably this is not as clear as it might be, so I will give a brief explanation of the electrical action. I will presume the reader to understand that alternating current starts from zero and runs to maximum, and back again to zero in one direction, and then the same thing takes place in the opposite direction, throughout the entire circuit. The third time it is at zero completes one cycle of single phase current.

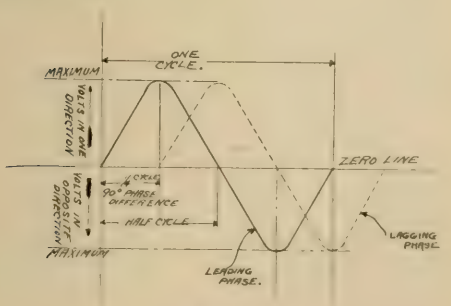

Fig. 1.

I have illustrated this action in Fig. 1. This figure represents two phase current. The other phases will be found illustrated on pages 9 to 11 of the Handbook. Figure 2 shows the field coils of a motor by the windings, numbers 1, 2, 3, and 4. If there were a direct current passing through the coils in the direction of the arrows the coils would then create two distinct magnetic fields; one vertical and the other horizontal. A compass placed within the action of these fields would assume the position of the large arrow. Now consider ac. passing through each of these coils simultaneously. When the current is flowing as per the arrows the magnetic field would be the same as though it were d.c., but, since the current reverses its direction, the magnetic poles would also reverse, and if a compass be placed in this field, which, by the way, is called a pulsating field, it would vibrate in proportion to the cycles per second of the supply, this being caused by the reversal of the magnetic field. The reason the compass needle does not revolve is that the action is so rapid that the needle cannot get far enough in one direction before it is acted upon by the reversal of the magnetic field and is pulled back again. In order that the compass needle revolve it would be necessary to create a rotating, instead of a pulsating field. The rotating field is created by two or more coils suitably placed and supplied with a.c. differing in phase. The phase difference may either be in the line supply or may be made by "splitting the phase." First I will treat with the difference of phase as being in the supply. By the difference in phase I mean that one current is at its maximum a certain period of time, later or in advance of the other.

Referring to Fig. 2 we will assume the coils 1 and 2 carry the leading, and coils 3 and 4 the lagging phase, at the same time. If the current is following the direction of the arrows, and we apply the rule of the right hand, we will find that there is a rotating magnetic field, revolving at a uniform rate directly proportionate to the frequency of the current.

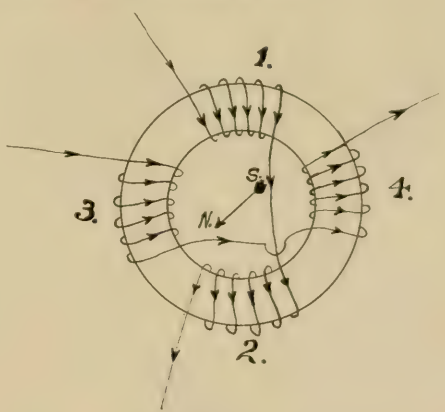

Fig. 2.

The reason for this is that the magnetic field caused by coils 3 and 4 grow weaker, owing to the current decreasing value while at the same time the current in 1 and 2 is increasing in strength proportionately. Owing to this, the two fields act upon each other at right angles, the net result being a rotating field having its position at any distance in between the two fields. (Don't quite get you there. Do you mean position of the center of the rotating field? Ed.) Its position is directly proportionate to the strength of the two magnetic fields. It will be readily seen from this that at the beginning the field produced by coils 3 and 4 is vertical and the field produced by 1 and 2 is horizontal. Now consider the current as being advanced one fourth of a cycle; the magnetic field of coils 3 and 4 then becomes horizontal, and the field of 1 and 2 vertical. Coils 1 and 2 were at their maximum in the first position and at their maximum in the second. It will be seen from this that the magnetic field has been advanced one-fourth of a revolution, at a speed proportionate to the time taken for the current to travel the one-fourth cycle variation. This movement is not instantaneous, but uniform. An examination of Figure 1 will show how gradually the change takes place. When one set of coils is producing its maximum magnetic field, which then gradually decreases, the other coils is at zero, which then gradually increases to maximum, both varying at the same rate. The resultant revolving field is constantly moving from the weakening field and toward the strengthening one, that is to say, it moves another one-quarter revolution during the next quarter cycle of current variation. The remaining operations are gone through until there is one complete cycle, which will give us one complete revolution of the revolving field. A compass needle will constantly rotate if placed in this field. If a piece of iron be revolved in a strong magnetic field, and e.m.f. will be induced in the iron. This e.m.f. will produce currents in the iron which circulate through it and cause heating, and these currents oppose the current which causes them. The effect would be the same if the field revolved around the iron. The rotor of an a.c. induction motor is the iron, and as it is free to revolve, and as the field of the motor revolves it carries the rotor around with it. The speed of the motor depends upon the number of pairs of poles and the frequency (cycles per second) of the supply. This explains the electrical action as concisely as I can put it.

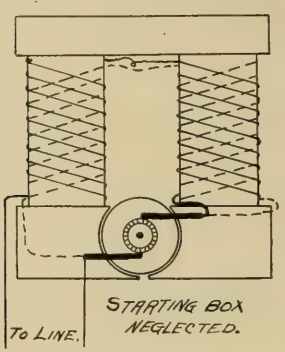

Fig. 3.

I stated earlier in my answer that the single phase motor would not be self starting. Some of you may say: "Well, we have single phase fan motors which start themselves." In answer to this: I have shown that a single phase will produce a pulsating field, and to make a motor self starting we must change to a rotating field, or to a field which will have the same action as a rotating field.

Now suppose we insert a resistance in series with the lead connected to coils 1 and 2, Fig. 2, and a reactance in the lead to 3 and 4. This will give us a displaced e.m.f. in the coils. Owing to the reactance the current in 3 and 4 will lag behind the current in coils 1 and 2, which latter only have the resistance in series with them. This is called "splitting the phase." The resistance and reactance can be found in the base of fan motors. In motors of slightly larger size the resistance and reactance is automatically cut out when the motor comes up to speed, the same being accomplished by means of brushes which work by centrifugal force. The synchronous motor, which is not intended to start under load, is generally brought up to speed by some outside power before being connected to the line. The general construction is that of a separately excited alternator, and as a clear explanation of the action would take up the whole department, I will not attempt to give it. Anyhow, the operator is not likely to come into contact with it in his every day work. I believe I have explained enough of the differences to enable him to distinguish between the synchronous motor and the induction type. The differentially and accumulatively wound motors are both compound wound. In the differentially wound machines the shunt coils are so wound that they oppose the series coils in their magnetizing effect. The advantage of this type lies in the fact that if the windings be correct the speed of the motor will be constant within reasonable variations of loads.

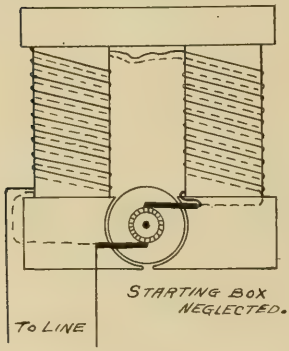

Fig. 4.

If the series coils should be too strong the machine would run faster at full load than at no load, and this would probably cause sparking at the brushes. The accumulatively wound motor, illustrated in Fig. 4, has its shunt and series coils so wound that they assist each other. When a compound wound motor is connected thus it has the maximum starting power for a given size and current. In the repulsion motors the windings of the field coils generate an e.m.f. in the armature windings, but this e.m.f. creates a current which in turn causes a magnetic armature reactance in opposition to the magnetic field. This type of motor should be very easily identified, as there are no connections to the brushes. The brushes simply short circuit the armature windings so as to create the greatest e.m.f. at the proper position to the field poles. The speed of these motors is controlled by brush shifting, the speed depending upon the position upon which the armature coils become short circuited with relation to the magnetic field. The series motor is the same in general construction as the series generator. As this machine and its connections has already been fully explained in the department, further comment is not necessary. The speed may be controlled either by brush shifting, or by inserting resistance in series with the power current.

It seems to me as though this is a very clear and lucid explanation of the electrical action of the types of motors described. I do not believe I ever saw a better one. I am, however, giving brother Dobson's also, because of the excellent scheme he has adopted for showing the differences.

Answer by Harry I. Dobson, Toronto, Canada.

There are a very great number of points in which the synchronous motor differs from the induction motor, and to go into all these details would take up so much space that I will try to show the difference between the two motors in the form of a convenient table.

	Synchronous Motor.	Induction Motor.
	Auxiliary Apparatus Required.
(1)	A starting motor, or, if self-starting some form of resistance and transformer.	(1) A two?way main switch with auto-tronsformer wiving a low e.m.f. for starting, any distance from motor.
(2)	An exciter, driven by the motor or otherwise, with circuts to switchboard and motor.	(2) No exciter needed.
(3)	Rheostat for exciter and motor.	(3) No field rheostats are needed.
(4)	Instrument for showing when field current is properly adjusted.	(4) No instruments are needed.
(5)	Main switch and exciter switches.	(5) No exciter switches are needed.
(6)	Often a friction clutch is required.	(6) No friction clutch; motor starts its own load.
	Construction.
	Synchronous.	Induction.
(1)	Filed windings with many turns. Liable to accident from "field discharge" if exciting current is suddenly broken, or from high e.m.f. by induction from the armature if the field circuit is open.	(1) Secondary: short circuited.
(2)	Collection rings and brushes.	(2) No moving contacts on "squirrel cage" secondary.
	Normal Starting.
(1)	Motor is brought up to speed without load, if starting motor is used, the main motor must be brought to proper speed and "synchronized"; if self-starting the starting devices must be cut out of circuit at the proper time.	(1) Throw switch to starting and then to running position.
(2)	The exciter is made ready for delivering proper current and the motor field must be excited; adjustment is made until instruments give proper indication.	(2) There is no exciter. (The motor is magnetized by lagging current from the generator).
(3)	Load is thrown on by friction clutch or some other means.	(3) Motor starts its own load.
	Speed.
	Synchronous.	Induction.
(1)	The motor has a single definite speed; at other speeds its torque is very small, and the current is very large.	(1) The motor can be designed for a practically constant speed with a large torque at lower speeds, or for several definite speeds by changing the number of poles, or for variable speed, for cranes, elevators and such.

SUMMARY.

(1) The motor is an "active" element in the system; it acts as a generator in impressing its own wave form, its e.m.f. and its fluctuations upon the circuit; these fluctuations may be caused by an intermittent load.	(1) The motor is a "passive" element in the system; it attends to its own work and does not try to run the system.
(2) The motor is a sensitive element in the system; its successful operation is dependent upon a proper relation between the design of the motor itself and of other machines in the system. Its successful operation also depends upon the proper adjustment and freedom from speed fluctuation in generators and other motors; it is liable to sudden variations from normal conditions, such as a sudden overload, a sudden increase of generator speed, or a momentary fall of its e.m.f.	(2) The motor is not sensitive to the differences in the design of other machines which operate on the same system.
(3) The motor requires skill and care on the part of the attendant for starting, for readjusting and for keeping the various brushes and auxiliary apparatus in condition.	(3) No experience and electrical skill are needed of the attendant, and there is little to get out of order either through carelessness or design.
(4) The power factor is under the care of the operator, and the current my be made either leading or lagging; instruments are necessary that the proper adjustments may be made.	(4) The motor has a definite power factor, depending upon the load; the out-of-phase current does not vary greatly at different loads. The changing load has very little effect upon the drop in voltage, and in regular service there is little chance that the motor will disturb the e.m.f. of the circuit.
(5) The motor and its operation are complex and there are a great number of possibilities of accident.	(5) Motor and its operation are simple and reliable.

From the preceding table it is easy to see the difference in the two motors and which is the best to use. The differentially wound motor is a shunt-wound motor with the addition of a coil of large wire, on the field, connected with the armature in such a way as to oppose the magnetizing effect of the shunt winding and weaken the field, thus causing the motor to speed up when the load is increased, as an offset to the slowing down effect of load. It was formerly used for obtaining very constant speed, but it has been found that a plain shunt-wound is sufficiently constant for nearly all cases. The differential motor, if overloaded, has the great disadvantage that the opposing field coil ("series") becomes so great as to kill the field magnetism, and instead of increasing or keeping up its speed the armature solws down or stops, and is likely to burn out, whereas a plain shunt motor can increase its power for a minute or so when overloaded, and will probably throw off the belt or carry the load till the latter drops back to normal. The repulsion type of motor is not a very satisfactory proposition, but is the best means of making a self-starting single phase induction motor, that is to say, a motor which is so arranged that it can act as a repulsion motor while starting, and by changing certain inside connections can be altered into an induction motor when it reaches full speed. One type of repulsion motor has a four-pole stator winding, the iron stator core is much like an ordinary induction motor core, viz: in the form of a laminated ring closely surrounding the armature, and stolled in its face. The armature is the ordinary direct current drum type, with a disc commutator having radial commutator bars. Four short circuited brushes (depend on number of poles) are pressed against the commutator face. At starting the stator winding is connected to the single phase supply mains, and the machine starts as a repulsion motor. Inside the armature are two governor weights which are thrown outward, at a certain speed; these governors push a copper bar into contact with the commutator, which completely short-circuits the armature winding. At the same time a barrel shaped affair is pushed endwise by the governor weights; this barrel carries the copper bar which short-circuits the armature winding, and when pushed far enough lifts the brushes from the commutator. The series motor is used a great deal on electric railway cars, and on fans, pumps, elevators, and hoists. The series wound motor on a constant potential circuit does not have the same constant field strength, and so does not run at a constant speed like a shunt motor. The fields of a series motor are sometimes "over wound," that is to say, wound so they will have their full strength with one-half, or even one-third of the normal current. The object is to secure a nearly constant speed with varying loads, and to allow the motor to run at high efficiency when drawing small currents, and to prevent sparking at high or heavy loads. The speed of motor "induction" may be controlled by (a) inserting a variable resistance in the rotor circuit; (b) cutting down the voltage applied to the stator by the use of a compensator or some type of auto-transformer.

From Santa Barbara.

Edward L. Marvin, Santa Barbara, California, writes:

> Not having seen anything from Santa Barbara, am writing to let you know that we are on the map. The population is 7,000, and there are four picture theaters. I send $2.50 for the Handbook. Am using two Edison's Model B with a G. E. mercury arc rectifier; 73-foot throw and a 17-foot 6-inch picture. I have trouble with my shutter. Am using a three-winger, but get a very bad flicker. I increased the width of the flicker blades by means of black paper; made them about ¼ of an inch wider. It removed some of the flicker, though not all. Could you make any suggestion? By increasing the width of the flicker blades more than ¼ of an inch I cut too much light.

In the first place, friend Marvin, while you doubtless are aware of that fact, still I will say that if you are using a metallic surface, or other semi-reflecting type of screen, and a powerful light, say 40 or 45 amperes you would have some flicker, in any event, when the machine is run at 60 or less, though at 60 it should not be measurably objectionable. I would refer you to pages 219 to 223 of the Hankbook where the whole theory of the shutter is set forth. Especially read the second paragraph, page 221, beginning with the words, "The width of the wide blade." After reading this paragraph just bear in mind the fact that the ideal shutter—that is to say, the shutter which will produce the least possible amount of flicker—is one in which all three of the blades are of equal width and all three of the light openings are of equal width with each other and with the blades. This condition is only possible, however, with the rather fast type of intermittent movement, and in a machine where the shutter shaft gear connects with tolerable directness to the intermittent, because if there are many intermediate gears there will be so much lost motion that when the shutter blade is brought down to the ideal width, travel ghost will be present. As the matter now lies the only thing for you to do is to cut out a shutter of pasteboard, using your present shutter for a pattern. Then take out the shutter blade now in use and substitute the pasteboard model. You will then trim off, say ⅛ of an inch from each side of the main blade, and add an equal mount to each side and each one of the flicker blades and continue doing this until travel ghost appears, whereupon you will have passed a little beyond the limit of possibilities, but will be very close to the best condition you can get with your present lenses and the type of intermittent you are using. You may in this way be able to make considerable improvement—and you may not. After you get your pasteboard pattern to its final form you can then change the regular shutter to conform to it and replace the same in the machine. You will, of course, understand that when travel ghost shows up you must then again widen the main blade just a little, until it disappears.

Editor in Error.

Mr. E. J. Wall, Professor of Photography, Syracuse University, Syracuse, New York, writes:

> With reference to your answer to P. W. McCord, page 819, May 9th issue, it entirely depends upon the shape of the prism whether it disperses white light or not. There are at least a dozen prisms which will not do so, and by their aid it is possible to send an image to and from any place. It would be possible, for instance, to place an arc in front of the objective and yet obtain a perfect image on the screen behind the arc, although the usual size lamphouse be used. To the best of my recollection the first use of a prism was by Lumiere in 1895, and there have been scores of patents thereon since.

I replied to friend McCord's query without first having given the matter due thought. I was and am very well aware of the fact that prisms are, and have been used for purposes of this kind, since I witnessed the performance of a dissolving stereopticon invented by Eberhard Schneider, New York City, in which only one lamp was used, the illuminant for the upper lens being supplied by means of light reflected through prisms. Brother Wall did perfectly right in calling me down. But, nevertheless, I will still stick by my statement that the chances are something like a thousand to one the scheme brother McCord has in view would not be commercially practical.

An Argument.

From Shelbyville, Indiana, comes a letter signed "Shelbyville Operators," which reads as follows:

> In order to settle some pretty hot arguments we apply to the projection department for an authoritative answer to the following: Suppose two pictures of equal size are to be projected, but the throw in one case being, say, 50 feet and the other, say, 100 feet. Which one of these pictures would have the most vibration, unsteady movement or jump, always supposing that the same machine and the same film were used in both cases?

What the Shelbyville boys are really getting at is, what effect the length of throw will have on any movement there might be in the picture. Or to put it another way: suppose the picture be projected on a screen 50 feet from the machine, and then the screen be moved back to twice that distance, and another lens used to give the same size picture, what change would there be in the movement of the picture? What effect would this have on any jump or vibration the picture might have?

There are two distinct propositions involved, in this matter, as you will clearly see if you will stop and study the thing for a minute. There would be no difference whatever in any jump or movement which might be due to imperfect film perforations, or to imperfect or worn geneva movement, or too loose tension springs. On the other hand, the lengthening of the throw would have the effect of very largely increasing any movement which might be due to a movement of the mechanism as a whole. By this latter I mean, a movement due, for instance, to vibration of the operating room floor in such manner that the mechanism would have a rocking motion, or a loose lens, or the mechanism itself loose on the stand. In these cases we must treat the light ray as a lever, with the objective lens as the fulcrum. In order to get at what I mean just loosen your mechanism slightly, and, with the light projected to the screen, move the top of the mechanism backward and forward a little and see what happens to the light ray. The same thing would occur if the objective lens was loose and rocked up and down, and the same thing would happen if the operating room floor were loose, except that if the vibration was such that the whole mechanism moved squarely up and down, then you would only get the effect on the screen of the actual movement, which might be only 1/16 of an inch. If, however, the floor vibration was such that the rear legs of the machine moved up and down ⅛ or an inch, and the front legs only moved 1/16 of an inch the movement on the screen at 100 feet, would be very much greater than it would be at 50. I think you will readily grasp this idea without any further statement, and understand this does not apply to a movement which is entirely within the mechanism itself.

The Editor's Trip.

The editor recently straddled his gasoline steed and pointed its nose towards New Haven. The first stop was made at Bridgeport, Conn., where he remained that night, visiting the Lyric, Empire and Bijou theaters. The Lyric Theater, on Main Street, is an excellent house managed by W. H. Isham. It seats 1,600 people, has a large and very nice lobby and a spacious balcony. The prices are ten and fifteen cents, but during the summer these prices were reduced to five and ten cents. Mr. Isham uses first run pictures and feature films. The chief operator is C. Monroe Isham, and his assistant is Roy M. Bayles. The projection was really excellent; the light was brilliant and very well handled, and the picture was remarkably steady. The operating room is well ventilated, and, while small, is large enough to get along with fairly well. But it has the little, narrow, entirely inadequate observation ports. How long will it take managers and operators to understand that there is no sense in making an observation port 4 or 5 inches wide? and how long is it going to take managers to learn that a narrow port makes the work of the operator much more difficult and has the direct tendency to produce shadows on the screen? No observation port should be less than eight inches wide, and ten would be much better. The machines used in this house are Simplex. Mr. Isham impresses one as an up-to-date manager.

The Empire Theater is also on Main Street, but quite a distance from the Lyric. It seats 1,100, admission five and ten cents. Walter Betts has just taken the management of this house, and I would humbly suggest that his first purchase ought to be a barrel of soap and a case of scrubbing brushes. The Empire certainly needs an application of soap and water, or at least its stairways do. The operating room is totally inadequate; it is a little crowded up "coop," absolutely unfit for the purpose for which it was intended. The chief operator is Irving Laon, assisted by Theodore Kane. The projectors are two Power's Six, one of which is equipped with an old style lamp house and lamp. Brothers Laon and Kane are giving as good results as could be expected under the circumstances.

I went up to the Bijou Theater and handed the manager my card, but whether he thought I was there to commit burglary or merely plain arson I do not know. At any rate, after he had looked at the card for about three minutes and examined it top, bottom, sides and corners without saying a word, I concluded if I waited for him to wake up it would be past my bed time, so I did not see anything of the Bijou.

At New Haven I got a very agreeable surprise. It is true the boys all knew I was in town, and whether that had any effect or not I cannot say, but the fact remains that in every theater I visited projection was very good; the light was brilliant, well handled and the speed not excessive.

The Globe Theater in Chappel Street is managed by M. J. Slepack; it seats 766 and is unique in that this entire seating capacity is on one floor, the same being 27 x 200 feet. The operating room was reached by devious processes, ways that are dark, and tricks are vain. First we went upstairs, then squeezed through a little door and found ourselves on the roof of the theater under the blue vault of heaven. After a somewhat lengthy promenade we descended through a narrow door and found ourselves in the operating room, and, much to my surprise, I discovered that Jack Housman, chief operator, and F. C. Ferrell, assistant, were projecting a fairly good 19-foot picture at 42 feet, and that is some performance. The projectors are Power's Six—two of them. The picture was not very sharp at the edges, but still it was passable. It is the first time I have ever seen that large a picture projected at so short a distance with anything like acceptable results.

The Life Theater is managed by Phillip Wittstem, owner, and projection is in charge of Harry Blum. The operating room is very small, but it has good, large ports, therefore I will overlook the rest of it. The light was good, and the results on the screen excellent.

The Garden Theater, owned and managed by Frederick M. Hill and C. K. Kazanjian, is somewhat removed from the center of the city, but it is a very pretty house, the interior being of the rustic order. The operating room is of good size, but it has the offensively narrow observation ports, though Mr. Hill assured me he would remove that defect at once. Projection is in charge of John Genderenalik. Current is supplied the Power's Six A and Power's Six projectors through G. E. mercury arc rectifier. The results on the machine are good, and, although the picture was not particularly brilliant, still it was well lighted, and light was well handled. Mr. Hill is having a little scrap with the New Haven Local, which I hope will soon be settled. After a very careful investigation and hearing both sides I am compelled to say that friend Hill is himself mostly at fault. I believe the New Haven Local will meet him half way in a settlement, so why not get together?

I also visited the Bijou Theater, but unfortunately my notes were lost. The house is a vaudeville motion picture combination in charge of an able manager. Projection is in charge of the president of the New Haven Local No. 273. I did not see the projection as the acts were on at the time of my visit, but I understand it is very good.

By invitation of the New Haven Exhibitors' Association I attended their meeting and I gave them a good talking to along the lines of better salaries for operators. Also I laid stress upon the importance of having adequate observation ports, larger operating rooms, and up-to-date equipment, to the end that the operator be enabled to put high class results on the screen. Several of the managers spoke afterwards, agreeing that a great deal of the success of a house lay in the hands of the operator, and that it was advisable to have high class men in the operating room; also they agreed with me that high class men could not be secured at inadequate salaries. I found the New Haven exhibitors to be reasonable men, who apparently were willing to meet the operator half way, or at least that is the way they talked to me.

In the evening I attended a special meeting of the New Haven Motion Picture Machine Operators' Local No. 273, called by reason of the editor's presence in the city. I there met the officers and members of the local and a very pleasant time was had until two in the morning. In speaking to the local I tried to impress upon its members the fact that while I am a firm believer in the organization of the men, still I do not believe in a man joining the union and then depending entirely upon its strength to better his position without any effort on his part to improve himself and keep up with the times. Brother Charles Schneider, the Springfield supply man, was present. He has just returned from abroad and has something up his sleeve which may cause quite a sensation in the very near future. It is quite possible that he will make another brief trip to Germany soon.

I remained in Springfield, Massachusetts, only a few hours, and beyond having a pleasant chat with brother Clark, secretary of the Springfield local, I did not do anything.

At 7 p.m., after traveling almost one hundred and fifty miles, part of the way over mountains, from New Haven where the start was made at 9:15 a.m. (three hours and fifteen minutes spent in Springfield), my gray gasoline steed poked its nose into Pittsfield, Massachusetts, skidded gracefully on the wet asphalt in front of the New American Hotel, and came to rest on its side. It had had a strenuous day climbing through the mountains. When the brake was not smoking through friction on the down side the engine was barking loud enough to be heard a mile away as it climbed the up side. The poor thing was tired (rubber ones, of course), so seeing a hotel it lay down to remind us that it is not good policy to ride a willing horse to death. I had Mrs. R. along with me and together with a heavy grip it made almost five hundred pounds that go-devil had snaked through the mountains that day. Pittsfield is surely a beautiful city; 30,000 call it home, and they are amused by six moving picture theaters. But the editor was too weary to visit more than one of them—the Majestic, managed by a most genial gentleman, James Sullivan. The house seats 1,200, runs four reels and three acts of vaudeville—pretty good acts, too—all for the sum of ten cents. Benjamin Johnson, of the Springfield local, projects a very good picture, everything considered. The screen was quite dirty, and the machine a very old Power's Six, with an old antiquated "Six" lamp. Naturally, the results while not strictly high class—they could not well be—were nevertheless a credit to brother Johnson when conditions are taken into consideration. Mr. Sullivan reported fair business and says two more houses are in contemplation for his city.

At Troy I did not visit any theaters, though I understand projection there is very good. While in Troy I go-deviled over to Schenectady by invitation of Messrs. Russell and MacClellan, of the Mercury Arc Rectifier sales department, of the General Electric Works. I expected to see a large plant, but was amazed at the reality. It is not a plant. It is a young city with a street at least half a mile long lined on both sides by huge machine shops, factories, and store rooms. Messrs. Russell and MacClellan showed me through the plant briefly, and I hope soon to return and take time to go through it completely for it is an amazing sight. The wire cable making machines are in themselves worth many miles of travel to see, and the machine shop where the turbine engines are made is simply gigantic, both in the size of the building and the machinery therein contained. I could only spare a couple of hours, but I am sure one could spend days in this plant and find something interesting every moment of the time.

At Albany I was entertained at the home of brother La Grow, whom I found to be not only a most agreeable gentleman and an excellent operator, but also a man who studies his business—in short, a man of brains. At the theater where friend La Grow is employed, in Pine Hills, Albany, managed by Mr. Suckno, brother La Grow is producing a very good 12 foot 6 inch picture with 40 amperes a.c. It is really a very good picture, though the addition of 20 more amperes would have been a big improvement, but, nevertheless, he is really getting a good picture with 40 amperes a.c. and that is some performance, let me tell you. Mrs. La Grow is an accomplished pianist, and for many years brother La Grow and his charming frau traveled with companies, he acting as operator and she as pianist.

At Newburgh, New York, I only visited one house, the new "Royal," on Broadway, managed by George Martin. The house has just opened. The projection is in charge of K. Brown, who operates a Power's Six-A machine and is producing really excellent results. The theater has large seating capacity, and there is one peculiar feature about it well worthy of mention. The Royal has the curtain at the street end, so that the person coming in faces the audience, the operating room being at the back of the theater; and here comes the funny part: the back of the Royal butts against the stage of a vaudeville theater next door owned by the same company. The officials would not allow the operating room to be inside the Royal because it was in a factory building, but they allowed the installation of the operating room on the other side of the wall, on the stage of a vaudeville house—as queer a proposition as I ever encountered. They would not allow an operating room under a factory, but they would allow it on a stage, where there is more or less inflammable scenery, usually more. Verily the ways of our law makers are past understanding.

Powdered Glass.

August Lemmett, Cocoa, Florida, writes:

> Have received valuable information from the department and the Handbook. I recently tried a stunt of my own. Sprinkled powdered glass on my alabastine-coated screen while the coating was still wet and after it was dry coated it with a thin coating of alabastine, and I think it is an improvement.

I think, brother Lemmett, that the improvement is largely imagination. Any benefit you might derive from powdered glass would be nullified by the fact that, according to your own statement, the glass is coated over with alabastine. You would have stood more show of getting a real benefit by sprinkling the glass on the wet alabastine and let it go at that. However, I do not think the plan is of much value. You see I have to view matters from a practical standpoint, and I cannot say a scheme is good just because you would like me to say it. I would like to tell every one that their pet propositions are fine, but if I did that the department would not amount to much.

On Acoustics.

Victor A. Welman, Seattle, Washington, writes:

Answering E. A. Nelson, Duluth, on acoustics, that gentleman does not give sufficient data upon which to base a recommendation for the correction of his trouble, but if he will communicate with the H. W. Johns-Manville Company, 201 Clybourne Street, Milwaukee, Wis., supplying full and complete data, he will be told the cause of his trouble and how to correct it. Every branch of the Johns-Manville company has an expert in acoustics on its staff, paid to handle just such work as this. A few years ago Professor Sabine, of Harvard, published a series of articles in an architectural magazine, giving the results of many years of research on this subject. In these articles he demonstrated, beyond any question of a doubt, that wires have no effect, either good or bad, on the acoustics of a room. The above named company use Professor Sabine's findings as a basis for their work.

Answering Harry T. Dobson, Toronto, Canada, page 818, May 9th issue, inquiring about the placing of resistance on the negative wire of d.c. current (I want to call the attention of all readers to a little blunder all of them make. I used to call it "d.c. current" myself, until I looked at it one day and realized that there was no good reason for saying "direct current current."—Ed.). Might we not take another lesson from our old friend "Water Analogy"? Considering a water motor, the output of the motor depends upon the difference in pressure of the water in the intake and that in the outlet or tailrace. We may regulate the motor by putting a valve in the intake to reduce the pressure, leaving the outlet pressure the same, or we may accomplish the same result by putting a valve in the outlet and increasing the back pressure thereby reducing the difference in pressure between the intake and the outlet. The working of the arc is analogous. The voltage of the arc is the difference of potential or pressure between the top carbon and the bottom, and we may lower this difference either by stopping back the pressure on the upper carbon by resistance, or by backing up the pressure at the lower carbon with resistance on that side. The above may be of some value, but here is some talk that won't be, though I hope you will let me get it off my chest. First, on the subject of optics: referring to, "In Error," page 817, May 9th issue, you, yourself are in error in saying that the correction of the keystone effect is an optical impossibility. In the case mentioned it was very likely taken care of in the manner suggested, but there is nothing in optics or mechanics which would prevent the correction of this condition. If you ask me how I would do it, I won't tell you, for I have no opportunity or facilities for testing the theoretical solution of the difficulty, and this brings me to the question of projection optics in general. I cannot, for the life of me, understand how a business can grow to the proportions the motion picture industry has during the past fifteen years without even its elementary problems having been solved. (Shake, old man, neither can I. And there are those who object to the promulgation of knowledge, when, as you say, even the most elementary problems have as yet been scarcely touched.—Ed.). It is ridiculous to say that the only way to find the proper pair of condensers for a certain objective, throw and size of picture is to try out a number of combinations. (Right, brother, perfectly correct, and I know that I am doing the ridiculous but—Umph! Show me a better way.—Ed.). I do not believe there is a practical question in projection optics which could not be reduced to rules in a very short time by some graduate student of optics, if given the facilities possessed by any large manufacturer. Yet fifteen years of motion pictures, not to mention the other many years of stereopticon work that preceded it, has not brought a solution to light. Are the problems of the microscope guessed at, or are the problems of the camera and the telescope solved by rule of thumb? And now one other thing. From time to time you pass along the answering of some technical question to the readers. You have a world of technical information scattered around your own little city, and your magazine has a lot of prestige, so why cannot you give or get the answers yourself? If a Seattle man asks a question it takes a week for the letter to reach you, three weeks or more to be printed, and a week for the answer to come, and if you refer the matter to the readers then it takes even longer, and then neither you nor the readers have the assurance that the answer is authoritative. This is not a personal complaint, but merely a suggestion. Now this last page is, of course, not intended for publication, since it contains no information, and would not have been written if I had not gotten started in suggesting the answers to the two questions.

Well, brother, it is going to be published anyway, because it is mighty good "dope." You are, of course, perfectly right in your view with regard to my referring matters to the readers. This is done sometimes for one reason and sometimes for another. In the first place let me say to you, brother Welman, that, during the past five years of my connection with the Moving Picture World, I have consistently tried to manage my department for the best interest of all concerned, and one of my main objects is to get operators to study. And I am not going to get them to study by giving the answers offhand to everything that comes in. More than that, sometimes things bob up the answer to which I do not know, and I also do not know where to get the answer either, simple as it may seem to you. New York is an enormously large city, and while you may think I can get the answer to almost anything on the face of the earth in Gotham, still, often it is mighty hard to dig up one, due largely to the hugeness of things in this town. I have had matters which it was necessary to take up with very large and independent manufacturing corporations, and it is a fact that it has more than once taken me from two to three hours to discover the only man who could answer that particular question, only in the end to find that he would not answer in an intelligent manner, due, unquestionably and entirely to the fact that he was of the dog-in-the-manger type. He was afraid that some one else would learn something that he himself knew. I may add to this by saying that I have repeatedly taken matters up with lens manufacturers, only to find that, while their replies are invariably courteous, the amount of real knowledge contained in them could usually be compared to the quantity of salt contained in a gallon of sea water. As a matter of fact, a couple of years ago, I made a trip to Rochester, nearly four hundred miles there and back, to consult with the scientific department of a certain large lens manufacturer with regard to the condenser problem, and when I got there I discovered (sounds ridiculous, but it is a fact nevertheless) that they absolutely did not know any more about it than I did, or if they did they had their knowledge buried far down in the ground, and sealed in with one hundred feet of cement.

It sounds easy, brother, and your complaint looks very reasonable, but if you could see things from this end and could know the number of things the editor of this department is called upon to do, and the things he is called upon to decide and pass upon, you would wonder how he gets by with it all as well as he does. This is not boasting, but just a statement of fact. I will give you an example of my day's work on this the 18th day of May in the year of our Lord, 1914. First I rode my motorcycle down town (eight miles) and up to 23rd street to get my mail, and then back to my office on Nassau Street, a total of about fourteen miles. It would have taken me much longer on a street car. I am now putting in a couple of hours cleaning up the mail and dictating. Then I must go up to 42nd Street to the Pathescope office where I am reviewing a home projector for that distinguished corporation. From there I must go to a theater in East 29th Street and Flatbush Avenue, Brooklyn, and then back over to 40th Street in New York, to look at and report upon a film renovating-fireproofing propostion. Then I must go down to Rector Street and see an attorney with regard to some patent matters which have been sent in to me by an exhibitor in St. Louis, Mo., with the request that I attend to the matter for him—a mere trifle of several hours work altogether. And I guess by that time I will eat supper whether I am hungry or not. After supper I shall put in at least an hour and a half reading and correcting proof and little other trifles like that, and then there'll be "nothing to do until tomorrow," but tomorrow will be a repetition of today. In closing I want to say that I appreciate your letter, and I appreciate it highly too. It is exceedingly well written, and, moreover, your questions and your conclusions are pertinent, though you have fallen somewhat into error due to a lack of knowledge of conditions at this end of the line. I trust, friend Welman, that we shall have your cooperation as well as the co-operation of your colleagues in Seattle, because we need that kind of correspondents in the department. And Seattle is to be congratulated that it has men who can write that particular kind of a letter, though you have not told me whether you are an operator or not—I presume you are. As to the resistance—if your view is right why don't you get a heavier shock when the resistance is on the negative—explain that, can you?

From Greenville, Texas.

J. W. Rose, Greenville, Texas, writes:

When in doubt I always go to the "Old Reliable," so here I am again. Am going to paint my operating room and am in doubt as between dark green or black. If I use black shall I use black paint or lamp black? Am pulling about 35 amperes from 110 volt line through a mercury arc rectifier, and for some cause it makes a loud humming sound which can be heard very plainly in the auditorium when everything is quiet. It does not seem to affect the light, it is just the noise which bothers me. I have ordered an ammeter, and a voltmeter, but they have not yet arrived. And now I will try to explain to brother Quinn why the operators are in the I. A. T. S. E. instead of the I. B. E. W., which I think will answer his questions as to why the I. B. E. W. is always trying to make trouble for the operators, though I do not know if you will approve of anything like this in the department. Local 304 (I. B. E. W.) has an agreement signed eight hours a day at a $20.00 scale.

My own personal preference for the operating room walls and ceiling is a black slate paint which can be bought already mixed, or you can get a very good effect by mixing lamp black with about one half boiled linseed oil and one half lamp black. My reason for this is that I do not want any light at all in the operating room when the machine is running. Too much light in the operating room is the reason for a great deal of faulty projection, though many operators do not realize that fact. Of course, dark green would accomplish almost the same purpose, but I would use a good deal of turpentine so as to have a flat color without any gloss. With regards to the projector you mentioned it has been tested and is not recommended by this department. As to the I. A. T. S. E.-I. B. E. W. controversy I do not care to go into that matter very deeply in the department. The great bulk of operators are now in the I. A. T. S. E., and if any change is made I would prefer to see an operators international launched rather than a change of affiliation. Anyhow you merely said you would explain—without doing it. As to the rectifier, perhaps its transformer is too close to sheet metal on walls or floor.

Operators Are you perfectly satisfied with the results you get on the screen?

The new second edition of the

MOTION PICTURE HANDBOOK FOR MANAGERS AND OPERATORS.

By F. H. Richardson

420 Pages Illustrated

$2.50 Each Postage Paid

will be the standard textbook on the subject for many years.

Address all orders and remittances to

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

Comments on the Films

Licensed

THE VOICE OF SILENCE (Edison), June 9.—This is an unusual and gripping picture with a plot that contains the elements of originality. Many interesting developments concerning wireless telegraphy in scenes located on Cliff Island, where the big wireless station towers loom almost into the clouds. The heroine is a deaf and dumb girl, but favored with remarkable beauty of form and feature. Love is the main element of the theme and the girl assists her lover, the wireless operator, in the capture of a band of criminals and she wins, not only a financial but a dearer reward—that of love. A splendid number which will be enjoyed.

JANE (Essanay), June 9.—This offering is by Mary Roberts Rineheart. Jane is a turbulent young creature spoiled by over indulgences. She is tamed by a redheaded superintendent with a dominating personality, employed in the hospital of which her father is director. An interesting offering.

EUGENICS AT BAR "U" RANCH (Selig), June 9.—Martha, an old maid, who has made a study of "Eugenics," encroaches on a Western ranch for the purpose of discovering a perfect mate. She loses her book on Eugenics, which is found by the cowboys. The comedy is created by the various injuries and inflictions they assume to escape her and the subsequent information that Martha is wealthy. Gabe, the handsomest of the lot, succeeds in winning her. A very laughable offering.

MIDDAY OR MIDNIGHT (Melies), June 9.—On the same reel with "By Taxi to Fortune." Winky Willie is the cause of all the trouble. The cook induces him to write a letter for her to her sweetheart informing him that she will meet him at midnight; Winky writes midday. Imagine the results.

BY TAXI TO FORTUNE (Melies), June 9.—On the same reel with "Midday or Midnight." This picture is not hilariously funny nor is it extraordinarily entertaining.

THE PIE EATERS (Lubin), June 9.—On the same reel with "He Wore a Wig." A ridiculously rough and tumble farce, depicting a fight among the police force of Hotelsville over a pie eating contest.

HE WORE A WIG (Lubin), June 9.—On the same reel with "The Pie Eaters." A complicated comedy episode which is full of laughs. The plot hinges on the fact that an old major wears a wig which is stolen from him. The finale is very funny and receives great laughter. A real comedy offering which is well made in every respect.

THE WIDOW OF RED ROCK (Vitagraph), June 10.—Breezy and brisk, this farce made 'em laugh. It was directed by Wally Van, who also plays the widow in one of the cleverest female impersonations yet. It must have been funnier to those who didn't realize that he was a man and had the surprise sprung on them at the close. Elizabeth Carpenter is the author. It makes a good number.

THE DOCTOR'S MISTAKE (Selig), June 10.—Doctor's maid changes the position of bottles on his table and he thinks that he has sent poison to his sweetheart. Her mother has died of heart failure and he sees the crape. He becomes a hobo wanderer, but meets the girl later in the usual way—saving her from a burglar—and finds that he was mistaken. It is not a convincing story and the acting, though fairly competent, doesn't make up wholly for this shortcoming. The script is by Malcolm Douglas and Oscar Eagle put it on. The photography is fair.

ANDY GOES A-PIRATING (Edison), June 10.—Not so good as the usual Andy comedy. It is full of counter suggestions that hamper it in its fun making. That police boat with its gattling gun failed to convince and besides didn't go well with the backgrounds near some great city. Then it is hard to make such a police disturbance comical with so trivial a cause. Otherwise it is the same as usual and the same writer and director are responsible as for other offerings of this series.

THIS IS LIFE (Essanay), June 10.—They were father and son and had come to town to a Farmer's Convention. It wouldn't have cost the old man so much if they hadn't met a couple of girls who had lived in the home town. The picture distinctly amused the audience, but would have been even funnier if the farmer's wife hadn't come to town to hunt them up; because it would have been much more real. It would have lost that scene where she chases them around the restaurant; but it would have gained much more in the enhanced home-coming that had to end it anyway. The acting is quite in keeping and it makes a very good offering; but not for Sunday-schools.

THE POWER TO FORGIVE (Vitagraph), June 11.—A Western offering in which two women, played by Anne Schaefer and Myrtle Gonzales, are in love with a gambler. Papita lures him away from Anne and entices him to steal. Later she stabs him, though not fatally. There did not seem to be anything of extraordinary interest in this, but it holds the attention.

A JONAH (Biograph), June 11.—The story of an unlucky young man, photographed in a pleasing manner. He is visited with all manner of misfortunes, the last one pictured being the arrival of twins. This takes a slight idea and gets considerable amusement out of it.

HIS UNCLE'S DECEPTION (Melies), June 11.—The uncle pretends to be dead and comes to his nephew in the guise of an old servant. He thus learns intimately all about the young man's affairs. This makes quite a pleasing reel of a light, well-pictured sort.

CLAIM NUMBER THREE (Lubin), June 12.—The fore part of this film is ordinary in settings and incident, showing the death of the miner on the desert. In later years his son wreaks a terrible vengeance on the man who was responsible for his death. The psychological punishment, which caused the villain's death, was, if anything, a little too grewsome.

THE ACCOMPLISHED MRS. THOMPSON (Vitagraph), June 12.—A comedy number in which the married man's aunt employs a housekeeper who does entirely too much entertaining to suit the wife. Cissy Fitzgerald is the gay housekeeper. The story has a humorous idea in it, but is hardly strong enough as it works out.

BOMBARDED (Selig), June 12.—A half reel comedy number, in which the young lovers rig up a cocoanut bomb to frighten the old man with. This is too much of a matter-of-fact order and does not become very amusing.

DOC YAK'S ZOO (Selig), June 12.—More of Sidney Smith's clever animated drawings, in which Doc Yak plants a Mexican bean with sad results of a revolutionary character. On same reel with above.

THE BOX CAR BRIDE (Kalem), June 12.—The railroad president's son weds his father's stenographer. Their auto breaks down and they are forced to steal a ride in a box car, for which they are arrested. This makes a comedy situation of about average interest, being perhaps a little too drawn out in development for the best results.

THE SNAKEVILLE VOLUNTEER (Essanay), June 12.—A burlesque number of about ordinary interest, in which Slim decides to go and fight the Mexicans. He and his companions finally wind up their career by climbing a tree, from which Sophie routes them. The close was weak.

A BARGAIN AUTOMOBILE (Lubin), June 12.—The Lubin comedy police force are prominent in this split-reel subject of the slam-bang variety and these burlesquers of the peace officers in a small town can always be depended upon to excite merriment.

HE CHANGED HIS MIND (Lubin), June 13.—The proverbial failing of policemen to spoon with every nurse maid they meet has provided the basis for a thoroughly legitimate comedy plot in this release on the same reel with "A Bargain Automobile." A frame-up to make the chief of police flirt while on duty just after he has prohibited his men from flirting is the principle incident. The photography is excellent.

THE OPAL'S CURSE (Biograph), June 13.—Based upon the popular superstition that opals are unlucky, this story has been well worked out and will hold interest on any program. There is a cleverly devised surprise in the plot properly placed all along toward the finish which makes a splendid impression. A burglar, detectives and the police, and a pair of lovers are the characters, making a combination that is always popular on the photoplay screen.

WHEN THE NIGHT CALL CAME (Selig), June 13.—It is really something of a feat to find a happy ending for the situation that brings this picture. The crook heroine has married the hero to rob him and has helped her gang trap him and has even handed his money over to them in a satchel; but she relents and saves him and the money, and he forgives her. It is not a strong production; it has been written poorly and there are anti-climaxes in it. W. E. Wing is the author and Edward Le Saint produced it.

THE TERROR OF THE NIGHT (Edison), June 13.—The ninth of the "Dolly" series by Acton Davies and put on by Walter Edwin. It is a ghost story; but these nocturnal creatures are notoriously "thin" to make pictures of and this picture is not quite so interesting as the others of this series have been. It is a fair offering; only it needed a more carefully imaginative handling to fill it out with human stuff and get it over. The acting and photography are acceptable.

THE SQUAW'S REVENGE (Kalem), June 13.—Indian story. The squaw's husband wants to keep peace with the white men and gets into a discussion with the leader of the war party. There is a struggle and he is killed. The victor is going to claim the squaw when he gets home again, so she runs away and warns the whites. Afterward she lives with them. It is all old style. One sees a running to the front of the camera whenever a point is to be made or a message told. The photography is only fair.

BRONCHO BILLY AND THE MINE SHARK (Essanay), June 13.—A well-made and interesting picture, as good an offering as any single-reeler on to-day's list. These Essanay stories are of late apt to be good offerings and seem to be going well with audiences.

THE PRIZE EMPLOYER (Biograph), June 15.—A laughable, breezy farce with a new idea. It is well put on by producer and his players and makes a good offering.

BROWN'S BACHELOR SUPPER (Biograph), June 15.—On the same reel with the foregoing is this, also a farce, not quite so original, but with plenty of laughable situations. The housekeeper leaves her baby with Brown, who has invited some friends to enjoy a bachelor supper with him. The baby is put out with the girl across the hall, but there is trouble at the wrong time and an embarrassing situation comes of it.

THE ADVENTURE OF THE MISSING LEGACY (Edison), June 15.—We can not count this as interesting as the last number of this series. It is rather dry and not up to the Edison standard in many respects. The players and cameraman have done pretty well. Frederic A. Kummer is the author and Charles M. Seay put it on.

HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL (June 15).—A very interesting offering.

THE CRIME OF CAIN (Vitagraph), June 15.—There have been no gems among to-day's pictures and this offering, a good way below Vitagraph standard, passes with the rest. But the story is weak. The players did their parts well enough. The photography is not clear. Mrs. Tom Coleman is the author and Theodore Marston produced it.

Licensed Specials

THE TRAP DOOR CLUE (Celio), June 9.—A double-reel melodrama which contains a superfluity of grips and punches which cannot fail to satisfy any spectator who is given to the intense. A subterranean rendezvous which is the headquarters of a notorious band is protected by a series of trap-doors and pitfalls so numerous that it causes one to wonder how the hero ever escapes alive, but he does and succeeds in capturing the gang, also the leader's foster daughter, whom he marries. This is a gripping picture and will please.

THE RIGHT OF WAY (Vitagraph), June 9.—A two-reel picturepIay that is full of intrique and intense interest. Many complications occur. An unscrupulous financier determines to get the right of way for a railroad which is being put through. He has little conscience in his operations and disregards the welfare of all others in his transactions. Eventually he is forced to buy the right of way at an equitable price. A very good and well produced picture.

THE CHANGELING (Lubin), June 10.—There is no doubt that this two-part offering interested. The story's general tone is healthy; but it deals with morbid things and is unpleasant; there are too many mad people in it. For instance, the doctor is the most dangerous lunatic of all and he is intended to be sane. In order to make good in his early practice, this doctor had substituted for the dead baby of healthy parents the new-born child of a half wit. The boy grows up and falls in love with the doctor's daughter. The doctor takes him for a ride and times it so that the automobile will be struck by a passing train—the auto is really smashed by a car and it is made to look as though the two men were still in it, a truly sensational ending. The staging, including sets and photography, is most commendable. Lawrence McCloskey is the author and it was put on by George Terwilliger.

THE QUICKSANDS (Kalem), June 10.—In backgrounds that will pass very well for the Philippines, this two-reel story is melodramatic and not very convincing. It has many good points beside the wild and tangled forest in which it was taken. The situation where the lieutenant, who has been left by his jealous captain to die in quicksands and who, escaping from the Filipinos who had rescued him from the sands and held him in captivity, finds the captain wandering mad in the wild and forgives him, is both new and interesting. The acting is not at all times strong and in the handling there is a good deal of conventional and palpably unreal work. Besides, the quicksands seem rather sticky and hard to get down into. Yet there are enough fine moments (the Filipino village, the handling of the American soldiers, and some of the love making) to give the offering plenty of interest. The photography is fair.

QUITS (Melies), June 11.—A two-reel offering, which we fear will strike the average observer as tedious in development and trite in plot. The father of the child, whose life was saved by the famous surgeon, shows his gratitude by allowing his blood to be transfused into the veins of the surgeon when the latter's life is despaired of. That is the plot in a nutshell, and it is unfortunate in the fact that almost every situation has been shown before in various offerings.

THE LURE OF THE PIT (Lubin), June 11.—A two-reel story, in which a young man sets out to reform Wall Street. He winds up by becoming one of the worst of speculators and his young wife finally aids in "breaking" him, so that he will come to his senses. This has an agreeable cast and tells a consistent story, but gets a very slow development. Many of the situations also impress the observer as being of a familiar order.

THE SONG IN THE DARK (Essanay), June 12.—A two-reel number, written by Maibelle Heikes Justice. This contains genuine pathos, something hard to achieve either in fiction or on the screen. It should have been made a little plainer that the bird had been blinded to make it sing; one not aware of this cruel practice would have some difficulty knowing what was wrong. Gerda Holmes plays the part of the girl very effectively and the scene at the last where she herself sings in her blindness is very touching. This is an unusual story in theme and treatment.

A WARNING FROM THE PAST (Edison), June 12.—In the first part of this two-reel number the scene where the dead lover is brought in and laid on the green sofa is very effective, Mabel Trunelle and Herbert Prior appearing. Such situations require very delicate handling. In later years the girl, also played by Miss Trunelle, receives a warning note from the folds of the old sofa and saves her lover from going on an ill-fated airship. The subject of premonitions always carries a touch of the grewsome with it, but this particular story is worked out in quite a pleasing manner.

OUR FAIRY PLAY (Vitagraph), June 13.—Hughie Mack, James Lackaye, and Miss Josie Sadler, by reason of individual merit as makers of mirth, will save this two-reeler in most houses. The story is loosely constructed and the comedy situations which have been planned by the scenario writer are not always funny. Mack's "mugging" and other purely individual bits from members of the cast, rather than the general idea of the picture, the production, or the photography, are to be commended.

MRS. PAYTON'S PEARLS (Kalem), June 15.—A two-part picture that slowly explains a mystery. It has enough of the story quality to keep one watching the screen with interest, but gives a very improbable account of why a certain youth refuses to tell the police how it came that he was found lying on his bedroom floor with a severe gash in his head. It is not skilfully produced. Where the action, already transpired, hooks on to the later action is not at once clear and this brings a temporary confusion. The acting is only so so; but the camera work is excellent.

THE ADVENTURES OF KATHLYN (Selig), June 15.—That villain, Umbalah, is at length where he belongs, serving a life sentence on the tread mill, and Queen Kathlyn has risen in her dignity on the throne and decreed the happy ending. The Kathlyn series is done and will now take its place with other complete pictures. The quality has been maintained remarkably even to these last two reels and has won laurels aplenty all over the country.

Independent

DAN MORGAN'S WAY (Reliance), June 12.—A story told by unusually well produced scenes, but failing to get over strongly through the inherent weakness of its plot which is thin and undramatic. The heroine might perhaps have saved it in the last cabin scene, when she finds Jim hiding the body, by strong acting. Dan Morgan (Fred Kelsey), her lover, has little to do except stand at one side. The Indian (John Eberts) is made effective by good acting and by the imaginative way the role is handled by the director. The two mining partners are all that could be desired. There are many separate things, such as a struggle in which one partner is accidentally killed, that get over well. The photography is clear and the scene-choosing is commendably fresh.

THE TOY SHOP (Princess), June 12.—The situation which starts this love story is unconvincing. But it develops into a pretty romance with good "pipe dream" quality. It is not very significant, but will be acceptable, for the staging, acting and photography are of excellent quality. The author is Philip Lonergan.

MABEL'S BUSY DAY (Keystone), June 13.—In this comedy the usual strenuous work of the Keystone artists, headed by Mabel Normand and Charles Chaplin, almost makes the screen on which it is thrown visibly, wobble. The scenes are located in the enclosure of a race course and Mabel is peddling hot-dog sandwiches. Chaplin is a butter-in and mixes things up generally—hot dog is his favorite fruit and he bankrupts Mabel's business. An exciting auto race lends to the picture; it is worth seeing.

HANDLE WITH CARE (Royal), June 13.—There is plenty of good stuff in this rough and tumble farce to make it go well. The principal idea—the peculiar immunity of a man who is supposed to have drunken nitro-glycerine and is being protected by the police from being jarred by anybody—has been used and even more felicitously by another company in a farce; but it is still very funny and will make laughter again. Some of its funny clown work is comical and some is "worked to death" by repetition. A very fair offering.

HUBBY TO THE RESCUE (Komic), June 14.—A farce with good slap-stick stuff and a comical farce idea behind it. It was produced by Edward Dillon. Some of its business is too rough for pleasure and one is left with a strong longing to see that waiter get "his" for kicking the poor, comical man who hadn't done any harm but amuse us by his innocent insoucinace expression. If he had really deserved to get kicked, it would have been another matter. The gallery will like it and it will make a fair offering for the average.

HIS DRESS REHEARSAL (Frontier), June 14.—This is an ordinary Western release, not quite up to the average in photography. The newest feature is where the hero impersonates the sheriff, but this would have been stronger if his plan had been allowed to succeed.

OUR MUTUAL GIRL, NO. 22 (Reliance), June 15.—The story still keeps interesting and the heroine is still unfound, though Sir Conan Doyle has been asked for advice on the best way of seeking her. Burns, the great detective, seems also to have given advice on this point. Among others of the great personages of New York, Miss Bean, Miss Reed and Mme. Yorska are introduced. It is making an excellent and popular offering.

A GAMBLING RUBE (Keystone), June 15.—A comedy that receives almost continuous laughter. The plot is broken several times in the course of development by the rough and tumble action and it is a wonder that it ever escaped to fulfill its mission—the same might be said as regards the actors. The poker game is a wonder, both above and underneath the table.

THE DREAM SHIP (Beauty), June 16.—A visualization of Eugene Field's poem in which Harry Pollard plays the part of Jeune Coeur, a friendless lad. He is ably supported by Margarita Fischer, Joseph Harris, Frank Cooley and Fred Gamble. The theme of the plot deals with the land of dreams. This picture is beautifully produced as regards photography and is especially pleasing to the female element and children.

THEIR FIRST ACQUAINTANCE (Majestic), June 16.—A comedy that is full of thrills, written by George Hennessey. Dorothy Gish, Robert Harron, J. A. Turner and Miriam Cooper are the leading participants, and being directed by a master-hand, make of this offering one which stands out cameo-like. While it is considerably melodramatic, it is not offensively so. The acting and photography are both admirable.

UNIVERSAL IKE, JR., "BEARLY" WON HER (Universal Ike), June 16.—The presence of three live and mischievous bears in this film story will make it a huge success with children. The bears do some really comical stunts and will amuse not only juveniles, but grownups as well. A good animal feature.

GLIMPSES OF THE ALPS OF SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA (Universal Ike), June 16.—This, on same reel with above, gives some interesting mountain views in the neighborhood of San Diego.

THE PEACH BRAND (Reliance), June 17.—This is a love story which is interesting and splendidly visualized. A handsome girl is used as a model by an artist for a label, which gets stuck on a fruit can; it passed muster and was put in general circulation. Eventually the hero of the story purchases a can and recognizes the features of an old sweetheart emblazoned on the gaudy label. He investigates and saves her from the villainous artist. Francelia Billington, Eugene Pallette and Sam De Grasse have the leading parts. The acting and photography are first-class.

THE UNMASKING (American), June 17.—A weak man's friend keeps him from jilting a worthy girl for a light-o-love whom he "unmasks." The average spectator will think that the man is the one who is to be unmasked; he plainly needs it. This obscuring of the picture's object is brought about by the fact that the picture keeps the wrong woman in the center of the stage and we are not even sure that she is evil until she is unmasked. At the end we pity the "right" girl because she isn't jilted by the worthless man. It is not a really strong picture, although competently staged and well photographed.

THE FATAL STEP (Imp), June 18.—Not a strong offering. It has a kind of suspense toward the end, though it fails to convince and is or has been made rather dispiriting. It introduces a man to us and lets us get in sympathy with him, then it proves him a coward and worse. Then it makes the newcomer, the virtual interloper, the hero. Both of these steps are unwise in any thoroughly commercial offering like this. If a man has a real story to tell, his picture's humanity won't suffer through his breaking away from the old formulas.

A MISSING BRIDE (Keystone), June 18.—A rather more complicated plot obtains in this Keystone number than is usual; of course, it is burlesque in tone and action. The characters are all well sustained regardless of the seemingly dangerous stunts which they are called upon to accomplish. It is good for numerous laughs.

THE MAN WITHOUT FEAR (Thanhouser), June 19.—This picture-play, featuring Mignon Anderson, contains many scenes of intensified interest. The photography is particularly clear. The direction has been attended to carefully in all details. Miss Anderson is ably supported, and the whole combines to make this a most satisfactory screen offering.

THE BOOL DETECTIVE (Rex), June 21.—This features Robert Leonard as a country youth who goes to the city and plays detective. He comes to the aid of the girl reporter at a crucial moment. This is not very new or exciting, but it is well handled and will entertain.

THE GUNMEN OF PLUMAS (Frontier), June 21.—The rival candidate for sheriff, fearing he will lose both office and girl, hires some gunmen to aid his cause. The hero makes a running fight from atop the stage and the girl goes to the rescue on a motorcycle. Nothing very new, but full of action.

THE BLUNDERER'S MARK (Eclair), June 21.—A photoplay from a short story written by Eugene Manlove Rhoades. R. Stanley plays the part of The Kid, whose hopeless love for the girl leads him to heroic action. A real cattle roundup and some other bangup Western scenic effects help to make this a memorable offering. There is a strong touch of pathos at the close. This is an excellent Western offering.

THE OUTLAW'S NEMESIS (Thanhouser), June 21.—Mixture of comedy and serious "Western" stuff; but it is not convincing. Thanhouser is so strong on refined Eastern comedies and dramas that it seems a pity for them to make this sort of stuff. We don't dare call it a success, in spite of the fact that there is a good laugh or two in it. Photographs seem poor.

THE SILENT WITNESS (Victor), June 22.—A ranch story featuring J. Warren Kerrigan and Vera Sisson. The fore part is quite ordinary, but later developments in the plot prove very interesting. Kerrigan photographs the foreman and his pals changing the cattle brands. This is a good Western number, though many of the incidents have been used before.

THE FLIRT (Sterling), June 22.—This is a number enacted principally by children. Two couples come to grief in their love affairs. Not enough plot to hold the interest very strongly. The chief action occurs at the last when they all get into the water, followed by the police force. Only fairly entertaining.

IN WRONG (Powers), June 23.—Two with matrimonial intentions who have corresponded and are to meet, each with a flower find themselves mixed across with, on one hand, Hawkshaw, carrying the same flower and, on the other the Queen of the Anarchists, also flower decked whom Hawkshaw wants to meet. There is plenty of action in it, not wholly new, but action none the less, and there are many who will find amusement in it and laughter.

WILLIE WALRUS, DETECTIVE (Joker), June 24.—This number, by William Wolbert, features the author as a country constable. An old cow named Dollie proves to be the criminal. The rube detective is funny, but the plot itself is only fairly amusing.

DESERT THIEVES (Broncho), June 24.—An utter lack of anything pleasing or elevating in the story is noticeable in this two-reel Western release. The action is vicious. Even the good photography and novel effect presented in representation of a sand storm on the desert will not make the picture as successful as a production so pretentious as this ought to be.

A JEALOUS HUSBAND (Sterling), June 25.—This farce has the peculiar qualities found in Ford Sterling's pictures. He himself in this offering is very comical and will provoke much laughter. The plot or scheme is of the slightest; but the business is not allowed to drag and there is a constant changing of the same situation that often takes on very amusing phases. It is a good offering of rough and tumble stuff and will be welcomed by audiences.

A FRONTIER MOTHER (Domino), June 25.—Unusually beautiful Western scenes reproduced with photography which is practically perfect and a wealth of action that is sensational in the extreme will make this two-reeler win its way. The story told is an involved one—so involved, indeed, that one is well satisfied to lose it early and devote his attention to genuine admiration of the strikingly effective distance views.

SOPHIE OF THE FILMS—Series No. 4 (Nestor), June 26.—This is the last number of this series and gives some burlesque warfare on the Mexican border line. The story interest is not maintained very strongly, though the fighting scenes are good. Sophie decides after her adventures to return to the laundry. This series began and ended a little weakly, the two intermediate reels being the best.

LOVE AND ELECTRICITY (Joker), June 27.—A Max Asher number, in which Max becomes entangled in the electric wires while the house is being decorated. The situations are highly amusing, with, of course, the usual slap stick flavor. This company is here seen at its best.

Independent Specials

THE HORSE WRANGLER (Majestic), June 13.—The title of this two-part offering is not easily understood. The story is a bit "suggestive." No wives are to be allowed on the round up, not even the wife of the foreman. She dresses as a man and her husband gives her a job with the bunch. The bad man of the outfit finds out her secret, but doesn't know who she is. In a fairly dramatic second reel, he waits his chance; but she hits him with the loaded end of a quirt and kills him. In order to escape the penalty, she has to tell her story and then the killed man is shown to be one "wanted" by the sheriff. The photography and scenes are full of interest.

THE REBELLION OF KITTY BELLE (Majestic), June 14.—Kitty, of this two-part picture, is a young wife; the role is played by Lillian Gish and Robert Harron plays her husband, he's a farmer and bashful for a husband. In fact, the whole situation (it takes all of the first reel) is most improbable. We have never seen a picture so filled with wholly pretty scenes tell so unlikely a story. Yet the second reel becomes, in a way, dramatic; at least, it tells an understandable story. Even in the first reel there are moments of great truth and humanity, such scenes, for example, as the young husband's going away with his uncertain leave-taking are nothing less than great. Then there is plenty of quality in the second reel and it has a sensational, red-heart-of-humanity ending. That last scene of all rises to real poetry. The author is Christie Cabanne. Beautiful photography helps it.

JIM (American), June 15.—A two-reel psychological drama, the plot of which contains intrigue, revenge, jealousy, shame, etc. Ed Coxen, George Field, Winifred Greenwood and John Steppling rendered the leading parts in an acceptable manner. This offering while beautiful in theme and photography, lacks in convincing heart interest to the spectator. It will please those of a sentimental nature.

THE PERILS OF PAULINE (Eclectic), June 15.—Two new reels continue the perilous adventures of Pauline and leave her walled up in a cave out West. The photography is thick, but the action through this latest installment is of the same quality as in that which preceded it. The girl is rescued from a fiercely burning house and has now been captured by the villain's hired band of rough cowboys. It is rather crude when compared with the best pictures; but seems to find a following.

REMORSE (Thanhouser), June 16.—A two-reel preachment. It gives the life story of a Salvation Army leader who wants to prove that even the worst sinner can be saved. The story is not new (it is just the kind of story such a man would tell) and it is a bit dry and lacking in suspense for a two-reel offering. Then it condones divorce, a circumstance that will spoil it for many who would have given it unqualified support as a useful picture. It is well staged and the photography is clear.

THE MASK OF AFFLICTION (Eclair), June 17.—A two-reel number, enacted by a capable French company. The scenic effects are very good and the photography pleasing. The story itself is not a very pleasant one and has a tendency to melodrama in places. The scenes in the mine, including the explosion, fire and flood, were finely staged and very realistic. The love interest was somewhat marred by the injury to the hero's face, which necessitated his wearing a bandage entirely around his head. He recovers, however, at the end and saves the girl from her designing guardian.

A SINGULAR CYNIC (Victor), June 19.—Two reels of farce and most of it amusing. It can not be said to really strike fire, except at moments; but it is light, airy, with a good deal of good fun which is cleverly spread out. We commend it as a bit above the average. The backgrounds are in a pretty seaside summer resort.

THE FORBIDDEN ROOM (Edison 101), June 20.—A three-part number, written by Bess Meredith and produced by Allan Dwan. This is an exceptionally strong story with a slightly morbid tinge. It will bring shudders to many sensitive observers; yet at the same time it is a well-constructed and powerful offering. Pauline Bush doubles in the part of the insane murderess and her illegitimate daughter, her performance being a noteworthy one. Murdock MacQuarrie makes a good showing as the girl's uncle. This is horrible, in the same way that Poe's stories are horrible, and audiences that enjoy a strong admixture of the weird and terrible will find this greatly to their liking.

LUCILLE LOVE—Series No. 11 (Gold Seal), June 23.—Lucille's adventures on the Mexican ranch occupy most of this number. The fighting scenes between the Mexican and United States soldiers were well staged. Lucille's dash in the auto was sensational. The number closes with her still in Hugo's clutches, this time in his city house again.

DEAD MEN'S TALES (Eclair), June 24.—A two-reel story of the Arizona desert, possessing some of the stern tragedy found in many tales from this country and pictured in a straightforward, convincing manner. Fred Hearne gave a strong presentation of the villainous wretch who robbed the man who befriended him in an hour of need. J. W. Johnston appeared in the latter part. There is a certain lack of logic in some of the scenes, but on the whole the story is well constructed.

THE LOVE VICTORIOUS (Powers), June 26.—A three-reel number, written by Bess Merredyth and produced by Wilfred Lucas. Cleo Madison appears as the woman of the allegory. It shows her fight between good and evil from early womanhood. Vanity, Flattery, Lust, Vice and other characters appear in appropriate makeup. May E. Benson plays the Mother Heart. Persons who have never seen an allegory of this type will enjoy this very much, as it is well photographed and contains many interesting scenes. To others it will seem somewhat familiar in spots. It makes quite a strong offering of the kind.

THE OLD COBBLER (101 Bison), June 27.—A two-reel offering by Seymour Hastings, with M. J. MacQuarrie, Agnes Vernon and Lon Chaney in the cast. The work of Mr. MacQuarrie as the old cobbler with a religious bent is unusually good. He works wonders with the character of the gambler, who repays the kindness by saving the old fellow's wild son from imprisonment after he has turned holdup. This makes a good Western offering and has the merit of exceptional character work.

A SIGHT UNSEEN (Marion Leonard Films).—A six-reel number, written and produced by Stanley E. V. Taylor, and featuring Miss Leonard. The quality of plot in this production does not seem to justify six reels. It tells a good running narrative, but not once does it rise to anything like dramatic heights. The girl marries the rich pawnbroker to get money for her artist lover. The pawnbroker dies and his son forces her to wed him; this scene lacks conviction. Later the son is supposed to be killed and she marries the artist. Trouble ensues, but a happy ending is achieved. This does not give us Miss Leonard at her best, though the story will no doubt prove acceptable with some audiences.

Continued from page 1807

tails of future expositions, thereby relieving the New York exhibitors. The date for the next convention was left to the selection of the executive committee.

Mr. Bullock moved that hereafter the annual exposition be held under the auspices of the International Motion Picture Association. It was passed.

FRIDAY—Afternoon Session.

The big news of the convention broke when Samuel Trigger very quietly offered a resolution providing for the appointment of a committee of five to go to Dayton. The committee was to meet a similar number from the National League and was to be given full power to act. There seemed to be a feeling that peace was in sight. There was hardly any discussion prior to the unanimous adoption of the resolution. In the selection of the committee it was found advisable to increase the number to seven. William Wright, of the Kalem Company, addressed the delegates. An effort was made to locate Secretary Wiley, of the Exhibitors' League, but the sergeant-at-arms, after a diligent search of the exposition floor, reported that he was unable to find him. There was manifest a desire on the part of the delegates that Mr. Wiley address the convention. Mr. Wiley was present at the banquet in the Biltmore in the evening. John F. Skerrett, general manager of the Nicholas Power Company, expressed for Mr. Power his regret at being unable to attend the banquet. After Mr. Skerrett retired it was announced that Mr. Power had sent a check sufficiently large to purchase quite a number of tickets to the dinner. Late in the afternoon there was a determined fight on the part of Mr. Herrington to reconsider and change the action taken by the convention on the censorship question, but it failed.

The afternoon session opened at 2:45. There was a lively talk on the evils of the country store, and various delegates told of the lengths to which some exhibitors had gone in the distribution of live stock and garden truck. It was decided that wherever possible the local officers invoke the law against those exhibitors who could be reached. It was announced that the Ohio delegates had chosen Sam Bullock as their member of the national board. The convention selected Mr. Rembusch as the member for Indiana.

Mr. Trigger then introduced the following resolutions:

Whereas, A breach occurred a year ago in the combined organization of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League; and

Whereas, Two separate and distinct organizations have existed since that time to the detriment of the whole; and

Whereas, The manufacturers, distributors and exchanges have been both inconvenienced financially and otherwise; and

Whereas, It is the voice of at least nine-tenths of the exhibitors of the whole United States and Canada that we amalgamate and form one large and strong body; therefore,

Be It Resolved, That a committee of five from this association be elected to meet a committee of the same number from the National League with full power to act, and that plans be formulated to bring about a peaceful amalgamation and co-operation of the whole of the exhibitors at large.

Mr. Trigger said he had yet to meet one manufacturer or exchangeman who had not asked when the exhibitors were going to get together. So, also, in the communications he received from all over the country there were voiced the same sentiments. He asked that the convention select the committee as soon as the motion was passed—there seemed to be no doubt in the mind of any one present that it would pass, and it happened very promptly.

Mr. Trigger was unanimously elected chairman of the committee on motion of Mr. Van Dusee. Thomas Furniss and Sam Bullock were chosen in rapid succession. Then Messrs. Rembusch, Herrington and Sweeney were nominated, and it was discovered there was one more than necessary, and also that Mr. Tugwell had not been named. So it was decided to increase the committee to seven.

Interests of Exhibitor and Manufacturer Identical.

William Wright, vice-president of the Kalem Company, was introduced to the delegates. "I suppose in your discussions almost every subject of interest has been covered," said "Bill Kalem," "but there has been one item we have all overlooked. That is the question of co-operation between the exhibitor and the manufacturer. Our interests are identical. It is all right to have the exchange. You have got to have a medium to take the films from the manufacturer to distribute. It seems to me that those who should have a paramount interest in co-operation are the exhibitors and the manufacturers. Without the exhibitor the manufacturers could not exist, and if they did it would be in a very small way. That is exemplified in France to-day, where the exhibitor buys from one or two concerns. These own and control the large theaters there, and other films are practically unknown. In the United States conditions are entirely different. We started differently. The immense amount of business that has been reached here has been due to the wide start of the motion picture theater. Now, the business here could be improved and improved tremendously by co-operation between the exhibitor and the manufacturer. Now, of the greatest importance to us would be constructive criticism—that is what we want. If the manufacturer put out a picture on any line that appeals to your patrons you should advise him of that fact, and he can guide himself accordingly. If a picture sometimes goes out that does not meet with the approval of the patrons of a picture show the manufacturer should be told in such a way that he can profit thereby, and be enabled to so improve his product that it will meet with the approbation of the exhibitor. By these means, by this co-operation, there will be built up more and better business for the exhibitor. Write to your manufacturer direct. I am sure that every manufacturer will welcome constructive criticism from his customers, and his customers are the moving picture theater proprietors."

Mr. Bullock presented the following: "Resolved, That it be the sense of this convention that all organizers acting under the supervision of the national executive officers shall be persons not connected in any capacity with this association. Provided, however, that this shall not apply to local bodies who may be organizing in their various localities." Mr. Herrington moved an amendment that no organizer shall be connected with any other business. This was passed.

It was decided that any business remaining in the hands of the grievance committee be turned over to the executive board.

SATURDAY.

There was a small attendance in convention hall this morning, as most of the delegates were convinced that the business of the association had been practically finished the afternoon before. Mr. Tugwell offered a resolution that a committee be appointed to obtain statistics of the motion picture industry for the benefit of the trade at large. Mr. Denton believed it would be a good plan to have the proceedings of the convention incorporated in a year book. The matter was laid over.

It was decided to appoint a committee of five to draft a new constitution and bylaws, to be presented to the next convention.

There was considerable informal talk among the delegates, but no business was transacted, before the delegates adjourned sine die.

SCREEN CLUB MAKES BROADWAY SIT UP.

Headed by a band, the Screen Club marched to the Grand Central Palace on Saturday evening, June 13. The Screeners left the clubhouse in Forty-seventh Street at 8 o'clock and paraded through Broadway to Forty-second Street, to Lexington Avenue. On arriving at the exposition the marchers formed in twos and made several circuits of the hall. About 10:45 the members of the club retraced their steps of the early evening. At the clubhouse there was dancing and a jollification, generally. Along the route, actors and non-actors alike were given a warm greeting by the throngs.

IMP COMPANY ALSO MAKE SCENES.

Under the general supervision of Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Corporation, and the direction of Herbert Brenon, members of the Imp company made two scenes in the model studio Thursday evening, June 11. Miss Ethel Grandin, Rupert Henley, William E. Shay, and Alexander Gaden were among the players.

The scenes were intended for use in a release called "The Clew" and were both made in the same set, approximately 200 feet of film being exposed. Other scenes are now being made in the company's studios in New York. That portion of the picture made at the exposition was shown in one of the model theaters Saturday, June 13.

NEW FEATURE EXCHANGE IN NORTHWEST.

It will be of interest to Northwestern exhibitors to know that a new feature film exchange has been opened in Minneapolis. H. A. Sherman, formerly treasurer of the Minneapolis Exhibitors' League, is manager. They will handle high grade feature films exclusively, opening with "The Banker's Daughter" and the "Greyhound" in five reels each. These are productions of Bronson Howard, America's great dramatic author. Bookings can now be made through the Sherman Feature Company, Temple Court Building, Minneapolis.

FAMOUS PLAYERS PRESENT PAUL McALLISTER.

The Famous Players' Film Company will present as its release of July 20th the popular American actor, Paul McAllister, in the tensely thrilling drama of love versus the law, "The Scales of Justice," by John Reinhart.

Continued from page 1810

"When we first began to ship abroad we found everybody wanted our Indian and western pictures, but the demand waned after awhile. The people in Europe began to look seriously at our dramas. To-day we are teaching American democracy to the monarchies of the world. The better the film we make the greater our credit with the exhibitor the world over. Every day we are now producing the greatest in our art, for, as the toastmaster aptly expressed it, it is art. On the stage the actor has the advantage of different intonations and all the stage accessories, but the picture actor must talk through the soul. When you see a picture, if you think the producer is missing the mark tell him so. Give him good, honest criticism. It is notable that not a man has spoken here this evening except with the view of the ideal. It has been unexpected in its unanimity."

Mr. Thomas then introduced Upton Sinclair. Mr. Sinclair's appearance was probably due to the fact that his story of "The Jungle" has just been reproduced for the screen by the All Star Company, with the author in the supporting cast. "I am new to the moving picture world," said Mr. Sinclair. "All these voices are new to me. I have been listening to the telling of wonder tales of the development of this industry which has turned so rapidly into an art. The only thing I want to say to you is in the days of prosperity—I am going to appeal to you not to forget your humble and lowly origin. When you come to deal in billions don't forget the people you have left behind you. The moving picture is a democratic art. It is an art which appeals to the people and it must portray the people's life. It will be false to its highest principles if it fails to voice the people's feelings and to answer to the people's needs and to appeal to the people's hope for a happier and better future than the people have in this world at present.

"It is a sad thing about life that as we move along into prosperity we are apt to forget the source of the struggles that we had in business. Here in this gorgeous dining-room, amid this scene of splendor, you may possibly even want to forget that there is so much misery and suffering as there is in America. I just came back two weeks ago from Colorado, where I saw such scenes of misery the like of which you hardly believe can be found in America. I now say to you, appeal to the people in your art and I appeal to you to remember all the needs of the people, the millions of voices that are crying for deliverance. The theater is a very expensive art; it costs a great deal to see a play. Plays are a great deal limited by what the two-dollar audience is interested in. The five, ten and fifteen cent houses should remember the needs of our time. Keep the motion picture democratic."

It was a gray speech, and it had settled over the throng of diners with the chill of mist blown off a field of ice. It was the only jarring note on an otherwise perfect evening. Mr. Thomas reflected the depression when he assured Mr. Sinclair that from the motion picture side wherever there is misery discovered a man will be there with the camera.

Importance of Selecting a Program.

S. L. Rothapfel, the manager of the Strand Theater, told some reminiscences of his earlier days in picture theaters. His first show, he said, was in a little Pennsylvania town. In behind a bar-room he placed the 250 undertaker's chairs he had loaned. Even in the beginning, Mr. Rothapfel displayed originality. He told of showing a film descriptive of a flower parade in a Southern California town. In the picture were masses of roses. The new manager sprinkled on an electric fan some rose perfumery. Just as the roses appeared on the screen he turned on the fan. The diners smiled as Mr. Rothapfel told of an elderly lady, a regular patron, enthusiastically informing him after the show that the roses were so real she almost smelled them. Mr. Rothapfel said that he spent 60 per cent. of his time in selecting his program and the rest of his time in putting that program on.

Mr. Thomas called attention to the fact that where the previous speaker had begun with the undertaker's chairs, he had, thirty years before, begun with the undertakers. "I notice just as keenly as he does the presence of the sponges and the dust," he said. Mr. Thomas then spoke of his long familiarity with a name a knowledge of which had come to him at first through the quality of canvases produced by its owner. He referred to his own recent entrance into the motion picture field and of being impressed by the quality of the pictures produced by the company of which this same man was a part. There was a burst of applause when Mr. Thomas added: "I have never met Mr. Blackton, but I am told that he is at the table, and I am sure this company would like to hear from him."

Mr. Blackton was in high good humor. He entertained the gathering with many tales of his own experiences, all of them amusing, and those in which the Vitagraph man seemed to be at a disadvantage were if anything the more enjoyed by the exhibitors. Mr. Blackton had just come from the Exposition. "I strolled around in the Vitagraph booth, hoping some one would notice me," he said; "nobody did. They pointed out Earle Williams and Lillian Walker and all the others, but for poor me nothing whatsoever. I strolled over in front of the Famous Players, hoping, you know, to attract attention, when one girl said to another: 'Look! Do you know who that is? That's Richard Mansfield!' (Laughter.) 'Go on,' said her companion, 'he's been dead twenty years.' 'Go on, yourself,' said the first; 'he don't look like no dead one.' Then I felt amply rewarded.

"I tell Mr. Thomas for his satisfaction, I didn't know he was here. That is one of the disadvantages of being only a manufacturer.

The Picture the Greatest of Allied Arts.

"Some of the speakers have mentioned the word art in connection with the motion picture. Some said it was going to be an art. Some even allowed it really was. I don't think any one of them can have taken the motion picture seriously enough if this is what they think about it. I maintain that the picture is not only an art, but the greatest of the allied arts. The motion picture improves the others, by the inventions and science of the world. Without the science of the world we could not have motion pictures. Without inventions we could not have the machines that project them, and without all the other arts combined we could not have a perfect motion picture. When we began to make motion pictures many years ago there was very little art in them. We made pictures of the sea waves, of the trains. People used to say, 'Look at the smoke blow. Isn't it wonderful?' It was not until we began to put together stories and plays and weave them into a story that the onward march of this wonderful industry commenced. When we dig into the science of that greatest of all arts, literature, the basic principle of all motion picture work, I think you will agree that the motion picture is the greatest of all the allied arts.

"What the manufacturer wants to know, and the most vital and important thing to us, is what the exhibitor wants. Because knowing that, it is our business to give it to you, and it is very difficult to find that out. We send out letters and we send out representatives to call on the exhibitor. We get reports that the exhibitors want nothing more than two-reel pictures and that he is against the multiples of four, five and six. Perfectly right if that is what suits his clientele. If an exhibitor is anxious to turn out his people as fast as he can it is perfectly right that he should. There are in the same cities houses showing five and six reel productions where managers require the services of officers to keep people in line when they are buying tickets, so it is very difficult for the manufacturer to know what is wanted, especially by the enlightened exhibitor.

"There are so many things I would like to say to you it would take the rest of the evening. I am going to say one thing more—about the Vitagraph Company. I was asked to speak for the manufacturers, but I can't do that, for the manufacturers have different ideas; they make different kinds of films. The exhibitor is like a man owning an automobile. You have everything except the gasoline, and we manufacturers supply the gasoline. Now there are many kinds of gasoline, from seventy-two to fifty-seven varieties. It rests mith you what kind of gasoline runs your automobile.

"Now about the manufacturers in the exhibition business. This is a splendid time to tell you how the company stands in this matter. For the Vitagraph Theater we pay a yearly rental of $60,000. If at the end of the year our books will balance we'll make no complaint. We find through the General Film Company that every feature put on at the Vitagraph Theater has drawn bigger houses by reason of the impetus it received through being shown at that house.

Boycott the Bad Films, Advises Mr. Blackton.

"Now a little bird has told me that some one in the convention has said something about boycotting those manufacturers who go into the exhibition business. Might I suggest that if you are going to do any boycotting that you turn your attention to the bad films and boycott them?—these plays where the boycott should go? But, really, I am getting very serious, and that won't do. I want to tell you what one woman wrote to our genial friend John (and Mr. Blackton turned to Mr. Bunny at his side). 'Dear Mr. Bunny,' she said; 'is that your natural face, or is it a joke?' John tells it himself, so it is all right," added Mr. Blackton reassuringly.

Mr. Bunny's face wore his most grieved comedy expression. "But I was going to tell it myself," he said.

There were bursts of laughter all over the hall when Mr. Blackton resumed. "I'll tell you what John wrote to the lady in repy," he said. "'Yes, it is my natural face, and I assure you it is no joke.'"

"The reason Mr. Blackton didn't know I was here," suggested Mr. Thomas as Mr. Blackton sat down, "is that he was over at the Exposition trying to convince two girls that he was still alive. There is a time in life when it doesn't do for a man to be too ambitious."

John Bunny Is Serious For a Few Moments.

"It was my intention earlier in the evening to try to entertain you a few moments with the recital of a number of experiences

I have encountered in my short time in this moving picture game-industry-art," said John Bunny. "As I look at this assemblage of charming ladies and intelligent gentlemen and everything that goes with it I am tempted to wax very, very serious. I would like to congratulate the Exhibitors' Association upon their achievements for the year. We have grown, gentlemen, tremendously. I would then congratulate you upon the advance you have made in your theaters. A year ago there was no Strand, no Vitagraph, no New York, no Knickerbocker. I might go on with quite a number of other names of houses showing moving pictures, but these I have mentioned and others are showing them splendidly. In other words, the moving picture has landed on Broadway; and I feel confident it is to stay."

Mr. Bunny told of his efforts a short three years ago to induce the Lambs to have a picture taken of one of their gambols. In spite of the ample gratuity and the sentimental value to the Lambs of having a record made of some of their more famous members, the offer was declined. Mr. Bunny referred to the picture taken by the Lambs this year as indicative of the change of attitude on the part of the more prominent stage players toward the picture. Mr. Bunny ended his remarks with a number of amusing anecdotes, most fitly closing an evening that for deep pleasure and great profit will long be remembered by every person present.

"Duty"

Quite New, Fresh and Dramatic, the Eclair-Universal Two-Part Offering, "Duty," Makes a Desirable Release.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

LEAVING "big" productions out of account for the time, one can still find room for pride and enthusiasm over any two-reel picture that provides a good story and develops it on the screen in an artistic and human way, and more so when the picture is made in America and deals with American life. The Eclair-Universal picture, "Duty," can be truthfully said to do all this. It deals, more properly speaking, with life in any country, for its theme is deep enough to get below national peculiarities and be clearly understood by spectators everywhere. Indeed, it gets its best value from this very thing, its purpose being to picture how it often happens that external peculiarities hide the true worth of a man or woman until some incident dramatically reveals a courage and a character unsuspected. Youth has its charm and joyous freshness that surround it like a perfume, and worldly splendor is flattered by its golden crown, but the true dignity of man is always inside of him. It is this inherent dignity alone that gives meaning to the perplexing thing we call life. A heavenly light inside of us, it can shine around the humblest hammer and anvil like an aureole more impressive than the grandest march that ever passed through a kingdom's coronation abbey. Could a picture have a higher theme? Having such a theme, could a writer or producer fail of his best to make the work human, truthful and convincing? Of course, we are all human as well as divine and our best work is apt to be touched with some lack that now and again keeps it from being perfect. There is little in this picture's development for which fairminded spectators will not make sympathetic allowance.

Scene from "Duty" (Eclair Universal).

The center of the picture is a young woman, played by Della Adair, the wife of an earnest-minded, elderly doctor, played by Alec Francis. He doesn't neglect her; but could hardly be expected to be, like her, an ardent devotee of the new dances—maxixe, tango and the like. It is shown that the doctor is a kindly, sane-minded man who gives his best science to helping the patients who need his services. It is also shown that among his wife's younger friends is an artist, quite a society man, who needs money. She is an heiress in her own right and he loves money, so he pays her court. All is done in a natural way. To tell the truth, this particular situation is played, in most pictures one sees, in a way to insure the failure of the man's scheme; it is a situation often made ridiculous. Not so here. Good manners, graceful acting and restraint are noticeable all through. M. Artand, its producer, is to be congratulated on his careful workmanship.

The artist has been painting her picture and has at length persuaded her that she will be happier with him. She has written a note agreeing to go with him. That evening a child is brought into the doctor's office choking with the croup. The doctor has just loaned his last tube of serum to an associate. The only thing to save the child's life is for the physician to draw the clotted mucous from the boy's throat—a situation that is new (in pictures) and strong with possibility and, in this place, very dramatic. He tells his wife, whom he finds with her cloak and hat on, just what he is compelled to do and its danger to him. She tries to dissuade him; but it is his duty and he accomplishes it safely.

The change in the wife's feeling on account of it is truthful and logical, a bit more so that her going to the studio of the artist to tell him of the change. That he should change from pleas to threats is also truthful, and we can not deny the possibility in his telling her that unless she comes to him he will blow his brains out before her, although the use of the gun in this way has been seen many times. In the struggle when she tries to get it from him, it falls in the open grate fire and presently goes off, badly wounding the man. He lies on the floor. His housekeeper comes. Without the wife's knowing it, a doctor is sent for and her husband comes. He needs a paper to write his prescription and her note to the artist is on the table. He reads it; yet, when she tells him the truth, believes and forgives her. Here the picture properly ends; but there are a few feet of still happpier ending, conventional and improbable. The photography throughout, like the general staging, is excellent.

Willis L. Robards

HE SIGNS his checks "Willis L. Robards," but out in Santa Paula, Cal., where the Frontier studio is located everybody knows him as just plain Bill. Besides being the director of the Frontier dramatic company, he has also been playing his own character leads, and in addition is the author of a good many scenarios.

Mr. Robards has gained further fame in that he is known as one of the speediest directors in the game, and on more than one occasion has produced three single-reel pictures in one week, which is going some.

Willis L. Robards.

It has been about twenty years since Willis L. Robards began his stage career. As a member of the famous Benton Juvenile Opera Company, singing the principal baritone roles, he made his first bow to the footlights. Entering dramatic work he was featured as "O. K. Hopper" in "The Lightning Rod Agent" for three years. Then for four years he starred at the head of his own company. It was while he was a member of the Hudson Stock Company in New York that he received his first temptations from the movies. This was when the motion picture business was still in its swaddling clothes. So he joined the original Nestor company, and at the expiration of a year was given the directorship of the second company. Shortly after this he put on the "Mutt and Jeff" series. Since that time Mr. Robards has seen service under the Melies, Lubin and Eastern Universal brands. At the present time he is directing a large production at St. Louis for the St. Louis Motion Picture Company, upon the completion of which he will return to the California studio.

Decision in Powers-Laemmle Suit

Appellate Division Reverses Ruling of the Lower Court and Sends the Case Back for Trial.

THE Appellate Division of the Supreme Court on June 12 handed down a decision in the matter of P. A. Powers against the Universal Film Manufacturing Company and Carl Laemmle. The five justices, George L. Ingraham, Chester B. McLaughlin, Frank C. Laughlin, John Proctor Clarke and Francis M. Scott, unanimously reverse the lower court and send the case back for trial. The issue is the ownership of stock formerly in the possession of David Horsley, on which P. A. Powers claims he held an option to purchase and which he maintains he executed within the terms of the instrument. Mr. Laemmle also claims that he purchased the stock. Practically the only question at stake is the ownership of the 1,540 shares of common stock and 1,250 of preferred formerly controlled by Mr. Horsley. It is said that no money is involved, as in the event of the courts deciding that Mr. Powers is the owner of the stock the money paid by Mr. Laemmle to Mr. Horsley will be returned. Mr. Powers sued for the transfer of the stock on the books of the Universal Company, which transfer the Universal had refused to make. The decision covers about 1,700 words.

The opinion is by Justice McLaughlin. "In determining whether a cause of action is set forth," says the Justice, "the complaint is to be liberally construed, and if there are any facts alleged which justify a recovery, then it ought not to have been dismissed. Nor should the plaintiff be turned out of cause because he has asked too much, too little, or the wrong relief. Applying these rules to the facts pleaded I think there is only one cause of action stated and it is against the Universal Film Manufacturing Company.

"If these allegations of the complaint are true, then the plaintiff is the holder of a certificate representing 1,540 shares and is legally entitled to have the corporation deliver to him certificates in the form requested. He is also the holder of a certificate representing 1,250 shares preferred which stand on the books of the corporation in the name of Horsley, and Horsley has executed a power of attorney directing the corporation to transfer the same to the plaintiff. The corporation having refused to make the transfer the plaintiff is entitled to the aid of the court in compelling it to do so.

"It is also alleged that the defendant Laemmle is president of the corporation, controls its management and claims to own the same stock by virtue of an assignment from Horsley. The fact that this claim is made does not justify the corporation in refusing to make the transfer to plaintiff or justify the plaintiff in making Laemmle a party defendant. It may be that the corporation, before making the transfer, would have the right to implead Laemmle for the purpose of having the court determine to which party the transfer should be made, but that question is not now before us. All that is necessary here to determine is that the facts set forth in the complaint state a good cause of action against the corporation to compel it to transfer to the plaintiff the stock mentioned and that a cause of action is not stated against Laemmle.

"It follows, therefore, that so much of the order appealed from as denied plaintiff's motion for judgment against the Universal Film Manufacturing Company is reversed, with $10 costs, with leave to the defendant corporation to withdraw the demurrer and to answer to the terms hereinafter stated; that the order appealed from granting Laemmle motion for judgment against the plaintiff is affirmed with $10 costs and disbursements, with leave to the plaintiff to serve an amended complaint on payment of such costs, and that the order appealed from granting the Universal Film Manufacturing Company's motion for judgment against the plaintiff is reversed with $10 costs and disbursements, and the motion denied with $10 costs with leave to the corporation to withdraw its demurrer and answer on payment of such costs."

The substance of the decision is that Mr. Powers has the right to present his case against the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, and that the case as against Mr. Laemmle is dismissed.

SECRETARY WILEY IN NEW YORK.

George H. Wiley, of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, and managing director of the Dayton Exposition, spent last week in New York looking over the ground. He made a number of contracts for space and is enthusiastic over the outlook for the convention and exposition at Dayton.

MAX STEARN CALLS.

Max Stearn, proprietor of the Majestic Theater, Columbus, Ohio, called at the office of The Moving Picture World last week while on a visit to New York. Mr. Stearn is one of the oldest exhibitors in Ohio and his new house is one of the finest in that State.

Vitagraph Theatre Changes Bill

A Good Straight Picture Program, With the Moving "Violin of M'sieur" One of its Big Factors.

THE program at the Vitagraph Theater was changed on Monday, June 15. The first picture shown was the regular release of the day, "The Crime of Cain." Next came the Broadway Star Feature, "The Violin of M'sieur," a two-part fantasy written by William Addison Lathrop, the winner of the third prize of the Sun-Vitagraph contest. Etienne Girardot has the role of Pere Gerome, an old violinist with a daughter, Yvonne. Clara Kimball Young is the charming daughter. James Young, who directs the picture, also plays the sweetheart. The story is a simple one, but, nevertheless, contains unusual strength. It is finely acted and artistically staged. One of the principals is Shep, the collie, who has the name of Napoleon. He figures prominently in one scene along toward the middle of the play which up to that time constitutes the big situation. The ending of the picture on Monday evening was marked by spontaneous and prolonged applause on the part of the house. It was an unusual tribute to author, players and director—and of course to the company.

For the entertainment of the audience, there was repeated the one-reel comedy release of June 12, "The Accomplished Mrs. Thompson." Cissy Fitz-Gerald, with her marvelous eyes, made fun for everybody. "Mr. Bingles' Melodrama" added to the hilarity. This is a Broadway Star Feature in three parts, in which James Lackaye has his old role of Mr. Bingles. William Humphrey is the Author and Hughie Mack the Villain. William Shea must have been reminded of early Vitagraph days, for while he does not approach his record of sixteen parts in one story he is cast for six—and plays 'em just like Bill Shea. Flora Finch is seen as a maiden barely sixteen, but her real name is supposed to be Flossy Hamm. Kate Price is Mrs. Flivver, Josie Sadler is Mrs. Panhard, and Rose Tapley is Gladys Gwynne. Harry Northrup is unrecognizable in his makeup of a Leading Man. It's a great cast. The comedy is written by Charles Brown, and directed by George D. Baker.

The final picture on the bill is a three-part Broadway Star Feature, "Shadows of the Past." Ralph Ince directs the production, which is written by Marguerite Bertsch. The cast is composed of E. K. Lincoln, Harry T. Morey, Rose E. Tapley, L. Rogers Lytton, Julia Swayne Gordon and Anita Stewart. The story is a strong one of intrigue, of the successful fight on the part of three who have suffered imprisonment to pursue the straight path, and of the death of the conspirators in a shocking automobile accident when the machine is struck by a locomotive. Of course there could not have been any one in the machine at the time, for we plainly see it smashed to flinders. There was a large and most appreciative house.

HARRY REICHENBACH IS WATCHED.

During Exposition week Harry Reichenbach, publicity manager for the Jesse Lasky plays, was an extremely busy man. He found time, however, to give first aid to the exposition's entertainment committee on several occasions. Among these were securing the talent and arranging the order of entertainment for the show on the New York Roof on Wednesday evening. On Thursday he was told that for the banquet on Friday evening no speakers had been secured, and it was put up to him to see that the diners were properly entertained. How ably he filled the bill, in spite of the short time at his command, every one who was so fortunate as to attend that function will bear witness. So also will those who read the speeches delivered on that most pleasant occasion. At 7 o'clock on Friday evening, Mr. Reichenbach was given the list of those who would attend the dinner and instructed to go ahead and arrange the seating order. He did that, too. On Saturday afternoon, Aaron A. Corn, on behalf of the entertainment committee of the exposition, presented Mr. Reichenbach with a handsome gold watch. Mr. Reichenbach is happy. Furthermore, being a union press agent, as he says, he will be able to quit work every day promptly at 6 o'clock without being reprimanded by the walking delegate.

PLAUT RETURNS FROM EUROPE.

I. S. Plaut, of the I. S. P. Co., which has become well-known among state right buyers, has just returned from Europe. Mr. Plaut left here on the sixteenth of May, and on his arrival in London, went right to work selecting features suited to the needs of buyers here. In the short time he spent in England, he succeeded in acquiring a number of features, which he will at once get ready for buyers. Besides the number of films he purchased while there, Mr. Plaut was successful in making arrangements to have whatever features he desired sent over from time to time, so that state right buyers can figure on the I. S. P. Co. for features regularly.

Pleads N. Y. Exhibitors' Cause.

Attorney Tobias A. Keppler, Counsel for M. P. E. L. of A., New York City, Takes Up Grievances with Mayor and Commissioner of Licenses.

MOVING picture exhibitors in Greater New York who have been confronted with the necessity of renewing their licenses for the ensuing year, during the past couple of weeks, have been complaining not a little of the drastic rulings which are being made by the Department of Licenses. Attorney Tobias A. Keppler, counsel for the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, New York City Local No. 1, issued the following statement explaining the situation a few days ago:

"As counsel for the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, New York City Local No. 1, I appeared before the License Commissioner at his office on June 12. Some time ago I took up with Mayor Mitchell the fact that the motion picture ordinance, when passed, was a compromise, because certain interests did all they could to block a fair ordinance for the picture exhibitors of the city, and that the provision apparently prohibiting standees was a gross injustice to the small exhibitors who had invested their money relying on the existing law, and that the activity of the public departments in prohibiting standees made it impossible to operate these small places for the reason that such a theater, when completely filled, has taken in less than fifteen dollars. When the place gets to be about three-quarters full, the exhibitor fears to permit other persons to enter, for while the usher is seeking a seat for a patron, he may be charged with having standees. This is equally true where a number of people come in who want to sit together and the usher may spend a few moments to try to find seats for them, or where a manager, desiring to promote the comfort of his patrons, asks newcomers to wait until a picture is completely run, so as not to interfere with the pleasure of those seated watching the picture.

"It was pointed out that the hazard is not of fire, but a panic hazard, and that ten, fifteen, or even twenty per cent. of the seating capacity of a small house would in no way impair the safety of the audience where there is adequate space behind seats and adequate exit space. This would enable a man running a small house to permit persons to enter his theater so that seats could be found for them as they were going in and out constantly, instead of having the exhibitor afraid to permit them to enter his door, for fear of paying a penalty amounting to sixty-three dollars, of being convicted criminally, and also having his license taken away. The law as it now stands does a great deal of harm and accomplishes absolutely no good. It is unnecessary and has ruined many exhibitors. No less than thirty-two houses were closed in the Bronx for this reason within a short time past.

"It is not because there is not sufficient business, but because the severe view taken by the authorities makes it impossible to take in enough money to pay operating expenses, bearing in mind that the bulk of the business is done between eight and nine o'clock in the evening. The exhibitors are as anxious to promote the safety of the patrons as any one. They have no desire to have standees that will prejudice the safety of their audiences, but it is persecutory to deprive them of a small number of standees, and the matter should be regulated according to the seating capacity, space behind seats, aisle space and exit space, and studied by experts, so as to properly protect the public.

"These views were presented by me to the Mayor a short time ago and he very promptly took the matter up and referred it to the License Commissioner, who also promptly arranged for an audience. The committee were delighted with the reception given them by the new commissioner, Mr. Bell, who is very courteous and attentive, and he seemed to be very fair, and we hope for justice at his hands. He stated he wanted to investigate the matter and would report to the Mayor in the near future. A number of additional matters were developed in the conversation I had with Deputy Commissioner Rosenthal, who especially has charge of motion pictures.

"A great many exhibitors have complained bitterly that when they wanted to have their licenses renewed they were compelled to close down their places pending expensive alterations, so that they have lost a valuable good will that took many years to build up. Commissioner Rosenthal assured me that if any exhibitor wants to find out if his place is in condition that his license may be renewed, he may request an inspection without waiting for the license to expire, so that whatever must be done will be outlined to him and thus the alterations may be made and the exhibitor will not have to have his place closed pending the issuance of a new license. This will also interest exhibitors buying picture shows who will in that way avoid the necessity of having their places closed immediately after buying them. No doubt the exhibitors of the city will be glad to avail themselves of this opportunity. Further action is to be taken shortly by our association relative to standees. We hope that this condition, which has driven many men out of business and may drive many more out, will soon be greatly modified."

To Jail for Allowing "Standees."

Louis Cassman, of 129 Rivington Street, was sentenced to twenty days in the Tombs and to pay a fine of $100, June 17, in Special Sessions on complaint of James T. Horan, a fireman, who charged that Cassman had admitted to his moving picture theater at 134 Essex Street more than twice the number of persons allowed under his license. Horan said that he found 416 persons in the theater. In the balcony there were 130 spectators where there should have been only 22.

The fireman testified that he asked Cassman to reduce the audience, but that the theater manager failed to do so. Cassman had been convicted previously of the same offense, so the Justices imposed a jail sentence in addition to the fine.

GOOD PROGRAM AT TORONTO.

First Canadian Exposition, June 20-27, Gives Every Promise of Being Big Success—Special Railroad Rates.

NOT a few of the moving picture tradesmen who had exhibits at the Grand Central Palace during the Second International Exposition of the Moving Picture Art have arranged to show their wares at the first exposition at Toronto, Canada, June 20-27, held in conjunction with the Third Annual Convention of the Ontario Exhibitors' League.

G. Gordon McGarry.

G. Gordon McGarry, manager of the Toronto Exposition, in attendance at the big show in New York, announced the following tentative program for the Canadian affair: Saturday, June 20, 2:30 P. M. to 10:30 P. M., Children's Day; Saturday, June 20, 8:20 P. M. Official Opening, attended by Mayor Hocken; Monday, June 22, 10 A. M., Address of Welcome to Delegates by W. K. Hill, President of the Ontario Moving Picture Association; Convention sessions Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, each day from 10 A. M. until 12:30 P. M.; Exposition open daily from 10 A. M. until 10:30 P. M.

Among the subjects for discussion before the convention will be the following: "Censorship," "The School and the Film," "The Church and the Film," "Legislation and Taxation," "The Poster Question," "The Manufacturer and the Exhibitor," "The Exchange and the Exhibitor," "The Press and the Film," "Control of Programs," "Projection," "Dominion Organization," "International Affiliation" and "Advertising."

The Ad Club's Convention is also being held in Toronto from June 20 to June 27, and special railroad rates from all over the country have been provided, making it possible for moving picture men to make the journey to the Canadian city at a minimum of expense.

AD-FILMS TO BE DISCUSSED AT TORONTO.

Advertising moving picture films are to receive attention, for the first time, before the Associated Advertising Clubs of America at the Toronto Convention, June 20-27. Arthur N. Smallwood, of the Smallwood Film Corporation, is scheduled to deliver an address on "The Use of Motion Pictures in Advertising and Selling." C. M. Lemperley, advertising manager of the Sherwin-Williams Company, will show the ad-film of his company, and Edwin L. Barker, of the International Harvester Company, will exhibit an industrial film made under his direction.

Michigan Convention.

Fourth Annual Gathering of the M. P. E. L. State Branch at Detroit—National Secretary Wiley Present—Closes with Banquet.

THE fourth annual convention of the Michigan State Branch No. 4, Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, took place in the city of Detroit, June 9th, 10th and 11th, headquarters being at the Hotel Tuller where all meetings were held. The convention itself was a success, the discussions being of live topics that proved both interesting and instructive. The only thing lacking was attendance; there should have been more exhibitors present, there being few outside of Detroit. Nevertheless, what was lacking in numbers was made up in the quality of the men who did come. Throughout the three days there was unbounded enthusiasm, and the spirit of good-fellowship and the desire to co-operate with one another was never more prevalent. In addition to the business sessions, there were a number of entertainment features, so that from every standpoint (excepting attendance) the convention was a huge success. Those who did not come will be the losers, as they missed the opportunity to hear some fine talks that would have been a direct benefit to them.

The first meeting took place Tuesday afternoon, June 9th, with President Peter J. Jeup, of Detroit, in charge. He gave a few words of welcome, spoke of the purpose of the meeting, outlined the program and appointed a number of committees. The rest of the day the members spent getting better acquainted with one another.

On Wednesday morning, June 10th, at 11 A. M., the real business session took place. President Jeup gave his annual address, which was right to the point. He appealed to the members to take a greater interest in the organization, saying that an organization was absolutely necessary for the protection of the motion picture business in Michigan. "We must band together for mutual protection. If we do not look after ourselves no one else will. Vital questions are coming up every day, which, in one way or another, affect the motion picture industry, and it is up to us to either oppose or favor them as we think best. We cannot accomplish anything as individuals. What chance would one man have to go before a council of twenty-four men or to the legislature at Lansing where several hundreds of men are debating a question which might injure the motion picture business if passed? But let every exhibitor in the state be represented there, and their sentiments would count for something. The Michigan Branch, No. 4, of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, has accomplished more than any similar branch in the country, but we must not stand still; we must go ahead, we must progress, and we must keep thinking of ways and means to improve our association. We must put ourselves on a higher plane. So I want to ask that during the coming year every member present take a greater interest in association affairs and also try to induce others to do the same. We also want more members and I would urge that everybody here appoint himself a committee of one to bring in at least one or two new names for membership during the next six months." Mr. Jeup made a few remarks on censorship, saying that it was the opinion of most of the members that state and local censorship was unnecessary and that they were willing to abide by the judgment of the National Board of Censorship.

Resolutions condemning federal, state and local censorship of motion pictures were presented and unanimously adopted. The resolution also called upon exhibitors to work for non-censorship. As a result of this, the delegates from the Michigan State Branch No. 4, who go to the national convention at Dayton in July, will be opposed to any form of censorship aside from that of the national board.

Then followed a very spirited address by George H. Wiley, national secretary, who surely did get the closest attention of every member in the hall. It was a talk that will long be remembered by everyone present, as it gave them many things to think about seriously. He paid a great compliment to the Michigan Branch of the National League for what it had done during the few years it was organized, and added that he considered it the most aggressive branch of the entire twenty-seven which comprised the national association. He explained all about the coming Dayton Convention, and urged every member from Michigan to be there, as he was expecting the largest attendance in the line of exhibitors that has ever turned out at a similar affair. Mr. Wiley stated there were 18,000 men in the moving picture industry, representing $300,000,000. "Unless the motion picture men get together in the future on a stronger basis and try to form into a concrete body, something is going to happen. The industry needs coöperation and needs it badly. Members must cast aside petty jealousies and work for the good of the entire motion picture business."

After an executive session lasting a half hour, the meeting adjourned until 3 o'clock, when there was an automobile ride around the city for the members and their ladies. The trip comprised two hours and the visitors were shown all the points of interest.

The last business session took place Thursday morning, June 11th, and was the best of all. The question of whether entertainment features interfered with business at conventions and the cutting down the number of days from three to two were brought up and thoroughly discussed, pro and con. A motion was finally made and adopted to eliminate all entertainment at future conventions and to make it two instead of three days.

Then came the election of officers for the ensuing year, which resulted as follows: President, Peter M. Jeup (re-elected); first vice-president, J. J. Rieder, of Jackson; second vice-president, August Kleist, Pontiac; third vice-president, A. J. Moeller, of Howell; secretary, C. M. Orth, Detroit (re-elected), and treasurer, H. F. Fowser, of Lansing (re-elected).

The following delegates were elected to represent the association at the national convention in Dayton: August Kleist, Pontiac; C. M. Orth, Detroit; Ben Cohen, Detroit; F. R. Rumler, Detroit; H. F. Fowser, Lansing; J. A. Ritter and Otto C. Seestedt. Alternates elected were: J. C. Green, J. J. Rieder, S. Ackerman, George Thatcher, W. S. McLaren, J. R. Dennison and Howard O. Pierce.

Lansing was selected for the next convention upon the invitation of H. F. Fowser, of that city. The dates will be June 8th and 9th.

Under the head of "Welfare," the president called upon some of the members for a few words. The first to be called was Mr. Wiley, national secretary. He said that it was a mistake to solicit convention funds from supply and film companies, and that he hoped to see the day when this would be entirely eliminated. He said that 75 per cent. of the complaints against film exchanges were unjust. Among other things, Mr. Wiley said: "The big fellow should recognize the little fellow; both need each other; the city and country exhibitor should work together.

Group at the Annual Convention, Michigan State Branch No. 4, M. P. E. L. of A.

"Come to Dayton whether you are a delegate or not; it will be the cheapest money you ever spent to make a trip there. I hope some day to see a uniform admission price of 10 cents to motion picture houses. You can just as well get 10 cents if you will just educate the public that way and do it properly. In the first place, you must keep your place clean, sanitary, inviting-looking and have the proper management. Give your patrons 'class' and you will not have any trouble with the price. Put in better films; uplift the surroundings in every way you can; see that your employes are courteous, and watch every part of your house. By getting the extra nickel you will be able to better satisfy your patrons, as you can give them better films and better service, and will be making more money. Don't forget that the film man is your friend and not your enemy, so don't be continually 'knocking him.' He wants you to succeed because it means greater success for him. In other words, be real men, get better acquainted, become better friends, meet as often as you can, coöperate with each other and everything will come your way. Don't lose heart because some little thing happens to go wrong. Remember there is no road that hasn't a few stumbling blocks. And, in concluding, let me say once again—Come to Dayton in July."

George W. Trendle, of the Casino Amusement Company, Detroit, said that the most important matter to-day in the motion picture business was that of screen and projection. "Three-fourths of the theaters do not protect their pictures properly and naturally are not able to get the best results. Many exhibitors have excellent attractions, but the pictures do not show up just on account of poor projection."

W. A. Ruscoe, of Saginaw, said he was in favor of a ten-cent admission price and hoped to see it in vogue in the near future.

H. O. Pierce, manager of the Liberty, and Charles Ward, manager of the Detroit Branch of the Mutual Film Exchange, made remarks.

Before adjourning, President Jeup thanked the officers and various committees for their efforts in the past year, and asked for the same coöperation from the newly-elected officers during the ensuing year.

The convention came to an end with an elaborate banquet tendered on the Tuller Hotel Roof Garden at 8 P. M., at which 100 members, with their ladies, were present.

After the serving of the various courses, speeches were made by George Weeks, manager of the Universal Film Exchange at Detroit; George Trendle, of the Casino Amusement Company; Harry Brackett, of the General Film Exchange at Detroit; Harry Goldberg, manager of the Casino Feature Film Company, and Lester Potter, official censor. Mr. Weeks and Mr. Trendle told a few stories. Mr. Brackett spoke on the value of organization. Mr. Goldberg delivered a fine address in which he stated that the exhibitors were gradually sacrificing quantity for quality and giving their patrons a better grade of films. He urged coöperation between exhibitors and the film exchanges. He spoke of the value of good feature films as an aid to inducing new patronages, as well as making it possible to secure a higher admission price. Mr. Potter talked on censorship, saying that there should be censorship of some sort, particularly in the larger cities.

"L'Aiglon" Arrives in United States.

Ten-Reel Feature, Which Achieved Worldwide Publicity Through Temperamental Tilt, Made By Eclair Company.

There has just been received at the Eclair Company's offices in the Leavitt Building, West 46th Street, a copy of the ten-reel feature photoplay, "L'Aiglon" which has won worldwide advertisement because of the temperamental clashes its production has caused between Edmond Rostand, distinguished French author, and the divine Sarah Bernhardt. In preparation for the release of the picture in the United States some weeks hence, the requirements of the copyright laws have already been met at Washington, D. C.

Only those connected with the Eclair offices in New York have seen "L'Aiglon," but so unanimous are they in their opinions that it must be believed that the feature is one of the most pretentious which has ever been prepared for the moving picture screen.

It will be remembered that when it was announced that Rostand's "L'Aiglon" was to be filmed, Mme. Bernhardt entered determined protest, contending that here at least was one work of literary and dramatic art to which the camera and silent actors could not do justice—and this despite that Bernhardt has herself "played for the movies" in many of the biggest things in her repertoire. Mme. Bernhardt's interest in "L'Aiglon" resulted from the fact that she had used it on the dramatic stage. The most recent cable news on the subject printed in American papers told how Rostand had surrendered to Bernhardt all of his royalty rights in the play and that Bernhardt had thereupon announced that she could not think of accepting royalties and would immediately withdraw all objections she had made.

At the Eclair offices in New York it is said that the controversy between the two highly temperamental artists has been satisfactorily adjusted and that the production of "L'Aiglon" has been made without the sacrifice of any of the warm friendship which has so long existed between the author and the actress.

The American release date for the big feature has not yet been announced, pending arrangements which are being completed in Paris to have the release made simultaneously in all parts of the world.

COSTELLO WINS CONTESTS ABROAD.

The far reaching popularity of our American photoplay stars has been again demonstrated in two popularity contests held abroad, in both of which Maurice Costello, star of the Vitagraph Company, was returned the winner.

In the contest held by "Pictures and Picture Goers," of London, Costello won by an overwhelming majority, with Miss Florence Turner second. The other contest, held in Australasia, resulted in the Vitagraph Star receiving almost as big a majority.

In speaking of these contests, Costello says the first intimation he had that they were being conducted was when he was notified that he was the winner, and that this notification took the form of a beautiful letter which he prizes even more highly than the trophy itself

Taken at Detroit, where the convention was held June 9-10-11.

"Kronstadt"

A Splendid Production, Adapted by Max Pemberton from His Celebrated Novel and Produced by the Gaumont Company.

Reviewed by Harry W. De Long.

THE SCENES are located at Kronstadt. This fortress is a guard to the capital of Russia, and has always defied the wiles of the spy, yet its secrets are pierced by a frail girl, who unwilling lends herself to this most despicable work; stress of circumstances forcing her to surrender her scruples to the unpalatable task of "spying out the land." Left an orphan with no means of subsistence, with Dick, her invalid brother to support, Marian finds the burden too heavy; so, when a relative offers what appears to her untold wealth and the means of saving the life of her little brother, she succumbs to the tempting offer thus placed before her. This relation is a member of the International Secret Service. He places her in the household of General Stefanovitch, deputy governor of the fortress of Kronstadt, as English governess for the general's two daughters. Marian quickly becomes a favorite with everyone, except Colonel Bonzo, chief of staff, who looks upon her with suspicion, and she fails to make any impression upon him. This is not the case with Captain Paul Zassulic, who succumbs to the charms of the English girl. After a few weeks the attachment becomes mutual. Paul is an ardent yachtsman and takes Marian and her charges on the "Esmeralda" to explore Battery No. 3. This and similar excursions give Marian opportunities. She cannot, however, control her love for Paul and when he proposes she consents, although recognizing her engagement is to a man whose country she is betraying. Marian receives a secret letter, which informs her that her hated task will soon be terminated. The same mail informs General Stefanovitch that there must be a spy at Kronstadt, as sketches of the forts have fallen into the hands of the enemy. Colonel Bonzo determines to trap the spy. Marian has discovered that the documents which she is to secure are in a secret drawer in his bureau. The room is always locked, except when he is in the room, then the key is left in the lock outside; thus it is an easy matter to purloin it. On finding the key missing, he explains to Colonel Bonza that he must have mislaid it. The latter having a duplicate is able to secure the door. Marian, after her charges have retired, without much difficulty finds what she is anxious to obtain. She had not, however, reckoned with Colonel Bonzo's cunning, who hands Paul the key, and sends him on a trivial pretext to the study. Paul discovers that the spy is no other than his beloved Marian. She tells him the reasons for the undertaking. Paul conceals the document, entirely disarming suspicion by recounting how he caught Marian searching the room. He is commanded to take her on board the "Esmeralda" and conduct her to the dungeon on the Island of St. Paul. On boarding the yacht, the escort is ordered to remain in the boat to be towed behind. The rope is severed and the yacht steams away at full speed. The "Esmeralda" is so swift that she gets out of the zone of danger. Marian and Paul arrive in Paris. One night Paul is overpowered and dragged to the offices of the secret service. Marian calls in the services of a detective, Robert Stevens. Meanwhile, Paul, imprisoned, discovers means of communicating with Marian, who, aided by the detective, concocts a scheme to rescue him. She writes a letter, stating that unless a free pardon is granted to Paul within an hour, the plans will be in the hands of the enemy. This is delivered by Stevens, Marian waiting outside with a number of detectives. Colonel Bonzo, who has arrived in Paris to take charge of the culprits and smuggle them back to Russia, apparently agrees to Marian's terms. Always prone to treachery, when he gets the plans into his possession he gives a signal to his men to seize Marian, but the detective, who has taken precaution, is too quick for him. With his whistle to his lips, he points out the guard to the colonel, who fearing disclosures capitulates. Marian and her lover reunited, hasten at once to England, where they are greeted by the little invalid brother now restored to health.

Scene from "Kronstadt" (Gaumont).

Scene from "Kronstadt" (Gaumont).

Superior acting, directing and photography are manifested in this picture production.

"Very Much Alive"

New Fred Mace Comedy Is Splendidly Received at Regent Theater—and Justly So.

Reviewed by Randall M. White.

PRESENTED by the University Film Company, Fred Mace comedies are again appearing on the screens in the east. Mace himself sailed for Europe a couple of weeks ago for the purpose of making a number of pictures for the international market.

"Very Much Alive," one of the recently made Mace comedies, which has just been released, was shown at the Regent Photoplay Corporation's Regent Theater, 116th Street and Seventh Avenue, among the added attractions Tuesday, June 16, and the popularity of the big Eddie Foy comedian was once more attested by the fact that hearty applause followed the presentation of the picture at each performance during the day.

The picture is introduced with a pleasing trick of the camera which brings Mace's smiling and grimacing face from a speck in the far background up to heroic size on the screen in a quick flash just before the title is shown and the action of the farce begins. While this bit of technique is to be commended, it must also be said that the manner in which titles and leaders are presented throughout the picture is ineffective and calls for improvement.

"Very Much Alive" shows Mace as a jealous suitor who sends a hurry-up call for a couple of cadaverous-looking undertakers a few minutes before he starts out to kill his rival. A comedy police force, who are disclosed at their station house while engaged in using a sewing machine and other feminine devices, are also introduced with splendid effect. There is enough plot to keep the happenings strung together and a laugh every half minute is the average.

LONG NEW YORK RUN FOR "THE CHRISTIAN."

E. W. Lynch Enterprises report a very successful run for six weeks at the Harris Theater, New York City, of the well known Vitagraph production, "The Christian." This company controls the rights for New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island and expects to do a large business in the best houses throughout this territory, as the production is one of the big things in moving pictures and has met with the highest praise from the New York City papers.

Celebrated Players Film Co., Chicago

ABOUT six months ago, the Celebrated Players Film Company started out under Alfred Hamburger, in a single room that measured 10 by 18 feet. Barely had the young infant gotten cozily settled in Room 808, Schiller Bldg., when its extraordinary energy compelled a change of quarters. The cradle had grown too small.

There being no available space large enough on the eighth floor of the Schiller Building to accommodate the needs of the young enterprise, a suite of offices was selected on the ninth floor, three times as large as the quarters vacated.

General Offices, Celebrated Players Film Co.

The new quarters seemed large enough to take care of its growth for a reasonably indefinite period, but that period also was very short—exactly four and one-half months. On the first of May last, it moved once more. Now it occupies the entire eighth floor front of the Schiller Building, directly over the Garrick Theater, with a floor space of 2,395 square feet.

These various movings were not prompted by the mere ambition to be largely quartered, but where demanded by the phenomenal growth of the business. This last statement is fully justified by the fact that the Celebrated Players Film Company now operates in seven states,-and controls in that territory about 50 photoplay subjects.

Poster Department, the Celebrated Players Film Co.

Coincident with the latest expansion of the business, the Celebrated Players Film Company secured as general manager Felix F. Feist, a young man of wide experience and fine ability. Under his management the company has become widely known and its business largely increased.

On entering Room 800 of the Schiller Building, the visitor finds himself in the large general reception room and executive office, with busy stenographers, switchboard operator, and filing clerks. His name and business being ascertained, he is taken into the office of the general manager, Mr. Feist, who usually escorts him on a tour of inspection. This includes a view of the large fireproof vault room, wherein are stored valuable films costing many thousands of dollars, the poster room, the inspection room, and the receiving and shipping room for films. For the convenience of customers, this last room is located near the elevator and has its own entrance.

Near the poster room is the publicity room, where James Ryan Haydon presides. From this department Mr. Haydon furnishes valuable film news service to the newspapers in various towns, where films of the Celebrated Players Film Company are shown. This service is offered free to exhibitors.

Returning to the general office, the visitor may enter the luxurious private office of the president, Alfred Hamburger, from which a door leads into the private office of E. D. Hopson, general manager of the Alfred Hamburger Theatrical Enterprises and of the Alfred Theater Company, both of which corporations are controlled and presided over by Mr. Hamburger. Mr. Hopson is a young man of exceptional managerial ability, and he has contributed largely to the expansion and success which the Hamburger Enterprises are now enjoying. Adjoining Mr. Hopson's office are the auditing and bookkeeping departments. Leading from the office of the auditor, a doorway opens into the booking department of the New York and Western Booking Association, also controlled by Mr. Hamburger, which books all the vaudeville acts for several dozen local playhouses. This department is managed by Harry Beaumont, extensively known both as actor and theater manager, whose acquaintance with performers extends from ocean to ocean. From Mr. Beaumont's office the visitor passes through a large reception room into the outer room, where the performers await an interview for their acts.

New Home of the Melies Brand

The new home of the Melies "G" brand, an illustration of which appears in this column, is a distinct discovery, according to Joseph Levering, who is at the head of the Melies producing company. The property is in Flushing-on-the-Bay, and stands at the top of a hill between Flushing and College Point. The lot consists of ten acres, a portion of which is rocky headland, making a sheer drop of fifty feet into the Bay, while only one hundred feet away the grass slopes gently down to a beautiful sandy beach.

The new Melies studio has served a number of purposes in the past, at one time having been used as a sanitarium and early in its career as the home of one of the wealthiest and most prominent families in the vicinity of New York. For many years, the house had been believed by the superstitious to be "haunted," due to the fact that tradition reports it to have been used in the distant past as a slave-trading headquarters. The Melies folks have been finding all sorts of secret underground passages leading from the property down to the water front and into deep dungeons and other queer and unusual rooms. Many of the windows are barred, and on the water front side the property has every appearance of a Mexican estate, while the opposite side of the house is in the form of a splendid old time mansion.

The New Melies Studio at Flushing, L. I., N. Y.

An open-air stage has been erected on this property and the company surrounding Mr. Levering and Miss Marian Swayne has been actively at work for the past few weeks preparing [illegible] Yorktown [illegible] At the conclusion of the studio on the Grand [illegible] in Flushing [illegible] will be produce the Melies "G" [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] have now [illegible] the General Film Company.

SAWYER COMPANY ACTIVE.

This week's bulletin from Sawyer, Inc., shows that they are already handling fourteen features with eight more booked for releases during the next four weeks. These features are the productions of several different companies.

In an interview, Mr. Sawyer, president of the company, said: "We have given a great deal of consideration to the feature film market. We find that the conditions are very uncertain and that state rights buyers are not paying the high prices that they formerly did. While this company has only been in operation about a month, we have ready for the market fourteen features and, by the first of July, will be ready to offer not less than forty-five good features from three to six reels each. Bearing in mind the fact that the middleman or the state rights buyer has had to have considerable profit on his investment, we have decided that in case we do not receive what we consider a fair price for the selling of state rights for any of our features, we will offer our films direct to the exhibitor. We have started booking our films on this basis.

"Mr. Rudolph, vice-president and general manager of the Sawyer Company, has just returned from a flying trip through the Middle West. On this trip he arranged to open several distributing offices for this company. The first office will be in Chicago, with others to follow in large cities.

"With the large variety of features we have on hand and with our new productions, we will be as well equipped for subjects as any of the distributing offices now in operation. We are already booking a number of our patriotic subjects, such as 'Saved by the Boys in Blue' and 'In the Mexican's Power,' for the Fourth of July. We have been informed on several occasions that the exhibitors would not pay prices that would enable the state rights buyers to live. We have disproved this statement to our satisfaction, as during the first week we have attempted to book films we have been receiving as high prices as were ever paid for feature films rental.

"In addition to handling the output of other manufacturers, it is our intention to start producing within the next few weeks. We are already organizing companies—in fact, have made our first picture, which is along original lines. Now that we have decided to enter the booking field it is our intention to furnish to the exhibitor his complete program, giving him a diversified program consisting of a feature and single reel subjects.

"Our new tabloid company will provide two one-reel comedies per week. With their one-reel comedies which we are arranging to market we will be able to give the exhibitor many chances of providing his entire program at one place. As you know, at the present time, the exhibitor running feature films must go to other exchanges to secure the balance of his program.

"We are giving special attention to our lithographing and other advertising matter, employing a high priced artist to make all sketches for our lithographing. At the present time we have several men on the road booking our pictures, and the returns from them are very gratifying. We have just closed an interesting contract whereby we are to book a series of interesting pictures of the king and queen of Bulgaria. This picture is to be taken at Sofia, their majesties specially posing for it. As the queen is planning to visit this country in the early Fall, we feel that this picture will be tremendously interesting to the public. The series will be four or five reels in length and will show many incidents connected with the royal household which have heretofore been absolutely unknown to the general public."

DALY-BRUNETTE.

At Fort Lee, N. J., June 17, William Robert Daly, the extremely popular actor and director was married to Miss Freda Samuels, professionally known as Fritzi Brunette. Mr. Leo Delaney, until recently with the Vitagraph Company, acted as best man; the bride was attended by Mrs. Frederick Watson. The wedding was private, only a few friends and relatives being present. Those who know Mr. Daly as a loyal Bostonian will observe a remarkable coincidence in the fact that his wedding took place on Bunker Hill day, which makes it a day of double importance. Mr. Daly and Miss Brunette met while with the Universal Film Company, she working as leading woman under his direction. After a brief honeymoon trip Mr. and Mrs. Daly will return to active work before the camera.

SARGENT RETURNS FROM FLORIDA.

If a wire received at press time from Jacksonville is correct, the redoubtable Epes W. Sargent will have walked down the gangplank of an ocean-going vessel at its New York wharfage by the time this notice is read. Mr. Sargent has been sojourning in Jacksonville with one of the big Lubin companies by way of getting a line on their requirements and limitations in the scenario line.

ELAINE STERNE, SUN-VITAGRAPH WINNER.

ELAINE STERNE, who has captured the thousand-dollar photoplay prize offered by the Evening Sun and the Vitagraph Company, before the very eyes of older and more experienced writers, deserves a word or two of credit for her success. She is very young and full of enthusiasm, but she has very positive views about the technique of writing. She has been complimented time and again for the "underlying thoughts" in her dramas—the real message that she endeavors to send her audience. "I am so afraid that my plays may not grip people," she confesses, "that I cannot take enough trouble to make them seem vivid and true to life. It is often such a little thing—a little action that counts: a hand relaxed—suddenly, tensely clenched—a smile half formed remaining frozen on a woman's face." You see she takes her work seriously. She has been able to appreciate the bigger things in motion picture writing and to attract unusual attention by the skill with which she has portrayed life on the screen.

Elaine Sterne.

Fac-simile of check paid Miss Elaine Sterne, winner of first prize in the Vitagraph-Sun Scenario Contest.

Andrew Mack Joins Ranks

ANDREW MACK, the favorite interpreter of devil-may-care Irish roles on the speaking stage, will soon be seen in motion pictures through the medium of his famous success, "The Ragged Earl," which is now being produced as a feature on a lavish scale by Popular Plays and Players, Inc.

Andrew Mack.

Mr. Mack has held great popularity in this country and wherever the English language is spoken, for many years, through his ability to charm and entertain. He was born in Boston, Mass., and when a lad sang soprano solos in the parish church, and was in great demand for concerts and entertainments. At the age of twenty-four, Mr. Mack attracted the attention of John Stetson, the old-time manager, who engaged him for a year and presented him to the patrons of the famous old Howard Athenaeum. After that Mack joined Thatcher's & Ryan's Minstrels. He then engaged in dramatic work where he soon achieved a high reputation. He appeared successfully in "The Ivy Leaf," "The Fairies' Well," "My Aunt Bridget," "A Jolly Surprise" and "Killarney." He next starred in Marcus Moriarty's "Irish Loyalty" and afterwards joined "A Country Sport.' He next starred in W. J. Scanlon's play, "Myles Aroon," and after that starred under the management of Rich & Harris.

Edison Stars in Comedy Skit at Grand Central Palace Exposition.

Top Row—(Left to Right)—Barry O'Moore, Charles Ogle, Marc Maebermont, William Wadsworth, Benjamin Wilson. Bottom Row—(Left to Right)—Miriam Nesbitt, Mary Fuller, Gertrude McCoy, Andy Clark

MISS ALMA GLUCK A BRIDE.

Miss Alma Gluck, grand opera diva, who made many friends among the moving picture people of the United States when she participated in the opening ceremonies at the Second Annual International Exposition of the Moving Picture Art at Grand Central Palace, June 8, was married a few days ago to Zimbalist, the Russian violinist.

A. T. S. & C. R. CO. EXHIBIT WAS CONVINCING.

Samuel Bowman, president of the Automatic Ticket Selling and Cash Register Company, announced a few days ago that the company's exhibit at the Second International Exposition of the Moving Picture Art at Grand Central Palace had been the means of effecting a number of sales. Among the orders received was one from the Itala Film Company for expert.

The A. T. S. & C. R. Co. have been asked to provide a machine for use in the box office at the Dayton convention next month, at which the company will also have booth space.

CLAIRE WHITNEY WINS CUP.

BEAUTIFUL Claire Whitney and Arthur Bachrach, of the Blaché Studios, carried away the dancing honors at the Exhibitors' Exposition at Grand Central Palace, on Tuesday, June 9th, and were presented with a large silver cup by King Baggot, who headed the dignified judges of the contest. Miss Whitney was a clever stage dancer before entering the realm of motion picture stars and, although she has appeared in nothing but the most serious dramas for several years, her interpretation of the tantalizing tango showed her to be as much at home on the waxed floor as she is before the camera.

Claire Whitney, Solax-Blache.

She has successfully entered a number of contests for dancers held in New York ball rooms and her trophies of the "one, two, three—dip" maneuvers make a handsome collection.

A publicity agent conceived the idea of her dancing at the exhibition with James J. Corbett, with whom she will appear in the Blaché picture production of "The Burglar and the Lady," but "Gentleman Jim" confessed that he was not as handy with his feet as with his hands, and the plan fell by the wayside.

The photograph of Miss Whitney is that of an oil painting of herself presented by her admirers of her acting art.

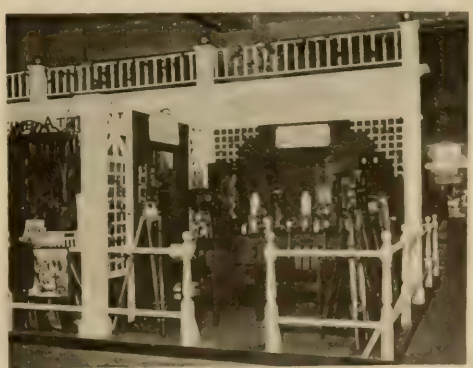
AGFA NON-FLAM ADMITTED TO U. S. MAILS.

The United States Postoffice Department has just informed the Raw Film Supply Company, No. 15 East Twenty-sixth Street, New York City, that tests which have been made of their product, Agfa non-flam film, have resulted in permission being granted to ship Agfa through the United States mails; the ordinary celluloid film cannot be shipped through the mails. That Agfa has been given passports through Uncle Sam's postoffices supports the company's claims that it is non-explosive and non-inflammable.

Agfa, made abroad, is just being introduced in this country and was shown at the recently held International Exposition of the Moving Picture Art at Grand Central Palace.

GET YOUR COPY IN EARLY.

All extra copy for the special number of the Moving Picture World must be in the New York office on or before Thursday, June 25.



G. Gennert Booth at Grand Central Palace Moving Picture Exposition.

Manufacturers Advance Notes

"THE CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR" (Lubin).

The title hardly gives a fair idea of the strength of this drama. It is a powerful story of the lives of a pair of twins born in Virginia, left orphans and adopted by excellent foster parents, one of whom lives in the far west. Years pass and the boy of the old east goes to see his brother who is running for Mayor of Los Angeles and much opposed by the gambling fraternity; at the crucial moment he is kidnapped and stowed away in an opium joint until after election. The brother of the east takes his place in the campaign and is elected. A love tangle eventuates but is cleverly unraveled by the sweet woman of the situation. The play is written by William M. Ritchey and produced at the Lubin Los Angeles Studio. Miss Velma Whitman and L. C. Shumway are able leaders of the cast.

Scene from "The Candidate for Mayor" (Lubin).

NESTOR COMEDY COMPANY GOES TO THE FRONT.

Al. E. Christie and his Nestor (Universal) comedy company are at the front—camped near the United States military headquarters on the international boundary line at Tia Juana and producing comedies as rapidly as the weather and Uncle Sam will permit.

Al. E. Christie and Lee Moran on Mexican Border.

Mr. Christie writes that both the United States military authorities and the Mexican Federal authorities have treated him royally, despite the fact that the soldiers on both sides of the boundary line are under the severest military discipline.

Mr. Christie's first war zone comedy, entitled, "When Eddie Went to the Front," not only shows United States and Mexican soldiers in the background, but was actually taken on the Mexican side of the line with the consent of the Federal commander. It is a rip-snorting war comedy of the Neston brand, featuring such actors as Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran, Victoria Forde, Stella Adams and Harry Battenbury.

"THE MAN ON THE BOX" (Lasky).

The next release of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company will be their first in which two legitimate stars participate. Max Figman and his talented wife, Lolita Robertson, are now appearing in their first moving picture effort, "The Man On the Box," in which Mr. Figman made such signal success a few years ago.

Max Figman first came into prominence as an actor twelve years ago, but was not starred until four years later when he made his first appearance in the play in which he is now being picturized. During the season of 1912 Figman and Miss Robertson appeared in "The Truth Wagon" at Daly's Theater and last year they were both members of the all-star cast of "Fine Feathers," with Robert Edeson, Wilton Lackaye and Rose Coghlan.

Scene from "The Man on the Box" (Lasky).

"The Man On the Box" is being made at the Lasky studio, Hollywood, California. Cecil B. De Mille and Oscar Apfel, aided by Wilfred Buckland, are directing. It will be released early in July. Perhaps early enough to be shown at the Dayton, Ohio convention.

PAINTS BLACHÉ PLAYERS AS DICKENS' CHARACTERS.

Herbert Blaché and Tom Terriss, who are collaborating in the production of "The Chimes," by Charles Dickens, have insisted upon interpretations of Dickens' famous characters that are as nearly perfect as the art of make-up and acting can produce them. Mr. Terriss, who has made a specialty for many years of Dickens' works, and is well known throughout the theatrical world for his remarkable characterization of "Old Scrooge" in "A Christmas Carol," has surrounded himself by a company of English actors who are thoroughly familiar with the great author's character drawings and has thus succeeded in maintaining the Dickens atmosphere in "The Chimes" to a remarkable degree of perfection.

Mr. Blaché has taken advantage of this fact to prepare a most unusual collection of paintings for use in connection with the advertising of the photodrama in the theaters, where it will be presented as a special attraction. Each of the characters in turn spent several days posing for Heilliger, the noted water color artist who made beautiful large paintings, to be used for reproductions and as a special lobby display.

A CHINESE DRAMA MADE IN AMERICA.

"The Chinese Lily" is being produced by Rice & Einstein, Berkeley, Cal., under direction of Arthur W. Rice. The sets, costumes and action portray the everyday life and characteristics of the present-day Chinese on the Pacific Coast. The cast is all Chinese, carefully selected to fit each part without make-up. An entirely new phase of Chinese life is presented, without the usual odiferous opium and obnoxious white slave scenes. To be released soon as a special four-part feature.

"THE HOUSE DISCORDANT" (Rex).

If a man past the prime of life marries a girl much younger, there must come a time when that man becomes conscious of his burden of years, his wrinkles and sallow complexion alongside the vim and freshness of his wife. If another man, nearer his wife's age, is friendly with his wife, the green passion must find a place in his heart. Then what is the husband to do? Is he to suffer in silence or is he to fight?

Scene from "The House Discordant" (Rex).

In this play, written by Robert Leonard who also enacts the leading male role, a big, interesting situation is disclosed, Mr. Leonard has brought the problem near home—it is the husband-father's own son who is the victim of his jealousy. For a time the rich man believed his young wife loved him for himself alone. But then, there was his son—his stepmother seemed to find much pleasure in his society. Surely, it was a trying situation all around, and certainly it is engrossing to observe the development on the screen — and amusing when the final surprise is sprung.

Hazel Buckham plays the role of the young wife. Alan Forrest is seen as the son. The play is in two reels and will be released July 2nd.

WORLD FILM CORP. HAS POLO PICTURES.

Moving pictures of the first of the international polo matches, which are just now attracting the attention of the entire civilized world while the matches are on at Meadowbrook, L. I., were taken by the World Film Corporation and are now being distributed as a special feature through that concern's offices in the United States and Canada. The World people, through their treasurer, Mr. Bush, who is a member of the American Polo Association, secured the exclusive rights to operate moving picture cameras on the playing field during the progress of the matches.

The pictures of the first game, won by the English team, were handled expeditiously and were shown for the first time in the World Company's projection room, Monday, June 15. On Tuesday they were shown again for prospective purchasers who were anxious to show them in some of the important New York theaters.

The pictures of the first game, as taken, measured approximately 5,000 feet, but, for commercial use, they have been cut to approximately 3,500 feet. It is said that the cameramen have done exceptionally well in catching practically everything of importance that was to be seen the day of the opening game when 35,000 people, including an unusual representation of the wealth and aristocracy of the United States and England, were in attendance. The play was particularly exciting and the pictures are replete with interesting scenes.

LASKY'S FIREPROOF VAULT.

In connection with the new studios the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company contemplate building in the East shortly, there will be a fireproof, explosion-proof, negative vault.

The vault will be composed of small separate vaults within, each negative being in a separate and distinct enclosure, which will have an outlet to the open air. A cooling plant will keep the air at fifty degrees Fahrenheit permanently.

The separate vaults will be so constructed that if one were to be affected by combustion or fire the damage will be confined to the one vault only, in that the individual outlets will carry off the gases and combustible air, so that even in the event of a fire, which is almost impossible, but one negative vault will be affected.

"THE HOPES OF BLIND ALLEY" (101 Bison).

In giving this play to the exhibitor the Universal lays no claims that it possesses a big, smashing plot or any sensational incidents; but the picture will effect a sensation, nevertheless. It does not contain any particular situation, but, on the other hand, it portrays a condition in the life of our big cities that is all too frequently seen by those who take the trouble to look. The author, the director and the actors in this drama have taken some of God's creatures with just their human passions and goodness and evilness, intensified perhaps by constant living under the shadow of poverty and dirt and woven them into a simple, but tremendous story that carries a message to those who live more fortunately.

Scene from "The Hopes of Blind Alley" (101 Bison).

Murdock MacQuarre gives supreme interpretation in this play. Assuming the role of Jeane Basee, a maker of statuettes, a grand old man who is everybody's friend in the little colony of people who live in the blind alley of the big city, he has visualized for the spectator a character who tingles with warm sympathies, who searches out and appeals to your finest sentiments.

In "The Hopes of Blind Alley," Miss Pauline Bush also does an important role that speaks highly for her personal charm and clever ability as an actress. Supporting these two artists, Mr. MacQuarrie and Miss Bush, is a cast of splendid players, everyone thoroughly tuned to the part he or she is played. It is in three reels and will be released July 4th.

NEWMAN'S NEW PORTABLE BRASS TICKET BOOTH.

The Newman Manufacturing Company, with factories in Cincinnati, New York and Chicago, have put on the market the very latest thing in the way of a portable brass ticket booth and poster display. It is made up of brass moulding all around, with electric lights at the top. A brass grill and brass money shelf in the front makes the brass ticket booth exceedingly neat and attractive in appearance. Poster compartments are provided on the sides and back of the booth and also a one-sheet poster compartment underneath the money shelf in the front. Thus, it is not only a brass ticket booth, but serves another purpose in the way of making an attractive display of three-sheet posters with very good effect. The booth is portable and can be moved about in the lobby to any desired position, and an added feature is the fact that the sides can be collapsed and the booth be moved over to the wall or out of the way at any desired time. It is made very strong and substantial, and was quite an attraction at the New York Grand Central Show.

PURCHASES NEW EQUIPMENT.

Rolland D. Lemmon, proprietor and manager of the Constantine Opera House, Constantine, Mich., has purchased the latest model Simplex machine and a Mirroroide screen. Mr. Lemmon has an eighty-four foot throw, and projects a picture 10½ by 14½ feet. The house opened on May 27, and has been doing a good business since then.

NEW THEATER FOR NEWBERRY, MICH.

Charles Ellison, formerly of New York City, has opened a moving picture theater in Newberry, Mich., which is known as the Dreamland. Business is good.

"THE SCALES OF JUSTICE" (Famous Players).

Mr. McAllister, the latest recruit of the Famous Players Film Company, is admirably suited, both physically and temperamentally, to the role of Robert Darrow, the earnest and conscientious young district attorney, in "The Scales of Justice," tortured by his conflict between his duty to the state on the one hand, and his love for the woman whom he must prosecute for murder, on the other. The story of this powerful play centers about Darrow, a young attorney, practising in a metropolitan law office, who, falling in love with a beautiful young widow, Edith Dexter, follows her to her little suburban home-town, where he soons wins the trust and confidence of the towns-people, and is elected District Attorney. But his first big case after his election is a terrible one. Edith's grandfather, a wealthy old man, is mysteriously murdered, after a quarrel with her, and circumstances point to Edith his heir, as the murderess. In spite of Darrow's great love and faith in her, proof after proof appears to condemn her as utterly guilty, and in his temptation to suppress certain evidence against the woman he loves, and of which evidence he is sole possessor, he is torn by the contending forces of justice and mercy, and the climax is reached when he is forced personally to conduct the public prosecution of his fiancee. How love conquers a lie and is stronger than death, is thrillingly developed in a tremendous court-room scene that brings one of the biggest, and, in spite of the circumstances, happiest endings ever shown in a screen dramatization.

Mr. McAllister has won laurels in a series of metropolitan engagements as leading man with Mrs. Leslie Carter and Miss Viola Allen, and also in his excellent characterization of the artist in Mr. Stevens' production of "The Devil."

Notes of the Trade

THERE can be fun at a fire the same as anywhere else, and Mack Sennett has found it and will soon show it to the public in "The Alarm," a forthcoming Keystone Mutual Movie. The fun comes because of the rivalry between a country police force and the fire department, and the unusual means the firemen adopt to put out a blaze. Incidentally there is a runaway in which a fire engine goes over a bluff.

* * *

"The Banker's Daughter," in five parts, by the Photo Film Corporation, has been sold in every State except Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland and District of Columbia. Edward M. Roskam, now in Europe, has received offers for the negatives of both subjects for England and the Continent.

* * *

A party of New York motion picture people who will attend the big convention of motion picture exhibitors at Dayton, Ohio, July 6 to 11, include Daniel Frohman of the Famous Players, Harry L. Reichenbach of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, Harry J. Cohen of the Popular Plays and Players, Al. Lichtman of the new Lichtman enterprise, George Krause of the Krause Manufacturing Company, Arch. MacArthur of the Moving Picture World, William Barry of the Nicholas Power Company, Sam Spedon of the Vitagraph, Frederick Stine and others. A special car on the Pennsylvania Railroad will be used for the round trip. The party will be housed at the Algonquin Hotel there and will return via Niagara Falls.

* * *

Jack London's story under the title, "To Kill a Man," was dramatized by Frank A. Cooley, assistant director of the "Beauty" company and presented by himself and Mrs. Cooley at the Potter Theater, Santa Barbara, recently, on the occasion of the Flying "A" Baseball Club's Vaudeville.

* * *

In a "Beauty" newspaper story under the title of "Via the Fire-Escape," Harry Pollard has produced a thrilling newspaper story with Margarita Fischer cast as reporter. The subject is replete with striking situations.

* * *

Jesse L. Lasky will leave for Los Angeles again July 18, for a short visit to his studios there. In all likelihood David Belasco will accompany him, as will also Richard Walton Tully and Charles Richman, who was recently signed by the Lasky concern to do a picture.

* * *

In addition to marketing films, Sawyer, Inc., have started a new branch which might be classified as a commercial line. They have arranged with owners of leading theaters in ten different cities to make motion pictures of prominent scenes and people in each of the cities in which these theaters are located, the theater contracting for the pictures and showing them the following week.

* * *

"The Talk of the Tailor" is a refined comedy in which Harry Pollard plays the titular role. As a "Beauty" subject it maintains the standard of refined comedy. Excellent photographic quality and the splendid work of Margarita Fischer makes this a very attractive feature.

* * *

In "The Little House of the Valley," a Beauty release, the surveyor, Ed Coxen, meets with George Field, the leader of a band of Mexican brigands, in a fierce hand to hand encounter. Coxen vanquishes Field by throwing him over a cliff. The scene is very effective.

* * *

Robert Edeson and thirty-five players, accompanied by Stuart Edward White, have gone to Moose Factory, Canada, for the picturizing of "The Call of the North."

* * *

Sawyer, Inc., are issuing a weekly bulletin which is very concise and practical. They are advertising bookings direct to the exhibitor as well as State rights. This weekly bulletin shows fourteen new features ready for State rights and booking, with eight releases promised for the month of July.

* * *

James Oliver Curwood, a writer of remarkable versatility, who has furnished the Selig Polyscope Company with many scenarios, advanced a new one for production last week in "The Richest Girl in the World"—a unique little comedy, in that it requires two leading men and two leading ladies. In the latter capacity, Miss Adrienne Kroell and Miss Renee Kelly officiated —types of the brunette and blond order.

* * *

Many distinguished persons appear in the adventures of Our Mutual Girl. In each case before the noted person is shown an announcement is made on the screen. The public is assured that in each case the actual person has been photographed and in no case does an actor or actress impersonate the person named. Among those who have already been photographed with Our Mutual Girl are Andrew Carnegie, District Attorney Whitman of New York, Billie Burke, Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch, Mrs. Inez Milholland-Boissevain, Walter Damrosch, John J. McGraw, Rev. Thomas Dixon, Mr. and Mrs. August Belmont, Mme. Luisa Tetrazzini, Jimmy Britt, and Ysaye, the celebrated violinist.

* * *

In "The Little House in the Valley," by the Flying "A" company, anent the Mexican situation, no attempt is made to produce battle scenes, but the Mexican brigands figure prominently. Winifred Greenwood plays the lead and is supported by Ed Coxen, George Field, Wm. Bertram. It is a two-reel production.

* * *

Samuel Goldfish reports excellent results for the Lasky features throughout the European market.

* * *

Mr. Rudolph, vice-president and general manager of Sawyer, Inc., has just returned from a flying trip during which he arranged for several branch offices for Sawyer, Inc. The first of these will be in Chicago, to be followed by Boston, St. Louis and other large cities. Sawyer films will be booked direct from these branches in territories where the State rights have not been sold.

* * *

Miss Marie Dressler is appearing under Mack Sennett's direction in a gigantic Keystone comedy that will surpass all previous efforts of the organization at fun-making. Her methods are original and her expressive face makes her particularly effective as a silent fun-maker. No expense has been spared in preparing for the production.

* * *

The second American brand of the Heine-Katrina series, featuring George Field and Ida Lewis, is scheduled for release Friday, July 3rd. The first of the series entitled "Mein Lieber Katrina," was complete in itself, but the second subject furnishes an excellent sequel. Commendable work is done by both Mr. Field and Miss Lewis.

* * *

W. H. Bomb, formerly representative of the Syndicate Film Corporation in the New Orleans territory, has been succeeded by M. W. Lawrence.

* * *

"The Battle of Vera Cruz" is the only motion picture of the actual scenes of the fighting in the city of Vera Cruz and was taken under great difficulty by Edwin F. Weigle, staff photographer of the Chicago Tribune. This picture was shown for four weeks in the Jones-Limick and Schaefer theaters in Chicago and is now being booked in the Eastern States by Sawyer, Inc.

* * *

Albert Siegler, war cameraman for the Animated Weekly of the Universal, who for the last two months has been cruising along the West Coast of Mexico on board the U. S. Cruiser South Dakota, has returned to the Hollywood studios of the Universal Company with a vivid story of his experiences in Southern waters.

* * *

The Noted Plays Film Exchange, of 1482 Broadway, New York City, has purchased from the Life Photo Film Corporation the exclusive rights for the State of New York on their five part feature release, "The Greyhound." Mr. Rothapfel, the manager of the Strand Theater in New York, booked the production for one week, commencing June 21st.

* * *

James M. Sheldon, president of the Syndicate Film Corporation, has returned from the South bringing fine reports of the activity among exhibitors to book and boost "The Million Dollar Mystery."

* * *

Several sensational stunts are promised in the first comedy produced by George Nicholls, who recently joined the Sterling to take out a third company. For nine months past Mr. Nicholls has been a popular director of the Keystone. The comedy which he is just finishing and to be released on the Universal program, June 25th, is "The Crash." While it is in one reel, it is said that there is enough action, money spent and sensational incidents to make it worth two reels. An automobile, followed by a motorcycle, dashing over a cliff and crashing to pieces at the bottom and a tremendous explosion which destroys a house and barn are among the features.

* * *

Pauline Bush is back at work in the Hollywood, Cal., Universal studios after a rest of six weeks. The charming little star, who will play with Murdock MacQuarrie in the Nestor company and in feature productions, really rested during her vacation. The results were twenty extra pounds of becomingness and the confusion of the little star's wardrobe.

* * *

The Life Photo Film Corporation, which has just released its five-part, deep sea drama, "The Greyhound," by Paul Armstrong and Wilson Mizner, report an unprecedented demand for this feature.

* * *

The Men's Club of the Granville Presbyterian Church, Chicago, recently visited the American Film Company laboratories and inspected every department. When the visit was over the members of the club knew more about making motion pictures than they had ever hoped to know. During the tour of inspection several Flying "A" and "Beauty" films were shown in the projection room and the excellence of the photography and the beauties of the scenery shown were loudly praised.

* * *

Liebler & Co. having been sustained in their injunction to use the name of "Joseph and His Brethren" in the film production of that name, the name of the picture has been changed to "Joseph and his Coat of Many Colors." The subject is in six reels and is very beautiful. The leading man is John Sainpoles, who is well known as a dramatic actor. Sawyer, Inc., are selling State rights and booking the picture, which has met with success wherever shown.

* * *

Mr. Robert Grey, a new member of the Vitagraph Western company, but a well-known juvenile on the coast, played opposite Miss Novak, and gained everyone's sympathy in "An Innocent Delilah." He interpreted the part of the young Westerner with a great deal of intelligence.

* * *

An unusual scene will be shown in "Blue Knot, King of Polo," a Flying "A" drama which will be released June 24. Exciting moments in a game of polo will be shown, the game being an essential part of the development of the plot.

* * *

Burland's Theater, 163rd Street and Prospect Avenue, the Bronx, has purchased two Radium Gold Fibre screens from the Atsco, Inc., No. 218 W. 42nd Street. Other theaters which have recently installed these screens are the Phoenix Theater, 350 E. 81st Street; the Grand Unique Theater, and Fulmer's Montauk Arcade Theater, Brooklyn.

* * *

At the Strand Theater the photoplay will be Paul Armstrong and Wilson Mizner's deep sea drama, "The Greyhound," which had a long run as a play at the Astor Theater in New York and the Studebaker Theater in Chicago.

leads, is now at Duck Island, off the coast of Connecticut, where a number of dramas and comedies are being produced in the open. A feature part of which will be in one of the pictures, which recently took place, was a twelve-hour launch trip during which Miss Lawrence cooked the meals for her companions on an oil stove.

* * *

Arthur N. Smallwood will address the Tenth Annual Convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America at Toronto, Canada, June 22nd, on the uses of motion pictures in advertising and selling. Mr. Smallwood will use a Power's Cameragraph, Six A, to project motion pictures, which his concern has made, of many commercial enterprises.

* * *

Henry W. Savage, through his attorney, A. C. Thomas, started proceedings on Thursday, June 11th, against several moving picture exhibitors in Ohio who were said to be showing a film of "Madame X," notwithstanding prohibitory court decisions. This latest move on the part of Mr. Savage, though his attorney, is of especial interest to the moving picture fraternity, inasmuch as it carries an attempt to punish the exhibitors by jail sentences as well as by fines.

* * *

A picture that is finding much favor among exhibitors, especially in New York, is the one reel film made by Sawyer, Inc., showing A. Baldwin Sloane and Grace Field teaching the latest dances.

* * *

Headed by Alexander Gaden, Ruth Donnelly and Dorothy Phillips, the Imp company, under the direction of Frank Crane, S. P. D. (Soft Pedal Director), have just returned from Twin Island, where they have been spending the last two weeks producing a two-reel melodrama, "The Lady of the Island." One of the features of the play is a cleverly trained dog.

* * *

"Breezy" Reaves Eason has been in pictures for about one year with the Flying "A." He acquired his theatrical experience on the coast in various stock companies, vaudeville, cabarets, etc.

* * *

In our issue of May 21st inst., we published the cast of the Lubin comedy picture, "He Said He Could Act," and in doing so mentioned that Bill Bowers played one of the stage hands, with Ray McKee. This was a mistake, the name should have been Ben Walker.

* * *

The plant of Thomas A. Edison, Inc., at Orange, N. J., and the moving picture studio in the Bronx will be closed on Thursday, June 25th, for the purpose of having the 5,000 employees become closer allied and united into one large family with the great inventor as the father. The various forces will congregate at Olympic Park in Newark, where many athletic events will take place. Mr. Edison will act as starter and award a handsome prize to the winner of each event.

* * *

Mrs. Frank Crane, wife of Director Frank Crane, of the Universal, is in the St. Elizabeth Hospital, New York, where she has just undergone a major operation. Mrs. Crane has been seen on the screen on numerous occasions, though she is not by profession an actress. Frank reports that she is doing well under the circumstances.

* * *

Two Power's Six A motion picture machines have been installed at Ebbett's Ball Park, Brooklyn, by the Marcus Loew Circuit.

* * *

Joseph Carl Breil, the composer who wrote the delightful incidental music of "The Climax," has been selected to conduct the large orchestra engaged at the Illinois Theater, Chicago, during the engagement of the second presentation of d'Annunzio's "Cabiria," which opened June 18.

* * *

Will S. Rising, the dean of moving picture actors and producers, has allied himself for several large features with Wilbur Collier Hudson, whose masterful touch was seen in "Hearts of Oak."

* * *

John Bunny, of the Vitagraph players, enjoyed the distinction of being one of the five speakers at the Centennial celebration of the Mt. Pleasant Military Academy at Ossining, N. Y. The other four speakers of the occasion were Rear Admiral Sigsbee, Rear Admiral Peary, discoverer of the North Pole; Edward Markham, and George Curtis.

* * *

"Nature's Touch," a Flying "A" release, is a psychological drama of sociological development. Vivian Rich plays the lead and Wm. Garwood plays opposite.

* * *

It is estimated by some that the largest business in the history of the New York Strand Theater was the record attained by Jesse L. Lasky's release, "The Only Son," which began a week's engagement at that house June 14.

* * *

A comedy play with the principals of the various Edison series in the cast was produced for the benefit of the public on Friday night of Exposition week at Grand Central Palace. As each scene was taken the negative film was given to a special messenger who hurried to a plant nearby where all arrangements had been made for developing. Within one hour after the last scene was taken the fully developed print was shown on the screen at the Palace to those who had witnessed the performance on the stage.

* * *

Peter Lang, after a three months' vacation, is back at the Lubin studio.

* * *

Hunter Bennett, who has been on the road [illegible] with the World Film Corporation, is now located at the main office as assistant to the general manager, Lewis J. Selznick. His duties and record in organizing outof-town offices are the [illegible] which have brought Mr. Bennett to this position of responsibility.

* * *

Owing to the great favor that [illegible] has found at the Studebaker Theater, Chicago, the engagement has been prolonged three weeks to July 4th.

* * *

As Ben Wilson stood at the Fashion [illegible] and autographed postal cards, Andy Clark registered each signature. When the last man closed on Saturday night the register said [illegible] times. Ben is now applying himself in order to be released at earlier stamp.

* * *

A Lubin company, Percy Winter, director, is temporarily located at Point Pleasant, N. J. The object being comedy pictures.

* * *

Since the combination between the World Film Corporation and the Shubert interests, a booking department has been formed at the offices of the corporation, 130 West 46th Street, under the supervision of J. H. Simmons, formerly of the Shubert Feature Film booking company.

* * *

The Variety Feature Film Company, of which Charles Peters is manager, have sold New York State for the four reel feature, "The Slaughter," to the Auditorium Amusement Corporation.

* * *

C. Jay Williams, the Edison director, is very fond of his dog "Gyp," so much so that he has trained it to play the principal role in a comedy of the Wood B. Wedd series, "Love Me, Love My Dog."

* * *

"Northern Lights," now being produced by the Life Photo Film Corporation, is rapidly nearing completion. Edgar Lewis, the director, left for Montana and Wyoming recently, and arrangements have been completed for the loan to the company, to take part in the production of one thousand Indians and fifteen hundred government soldiers.

* * *

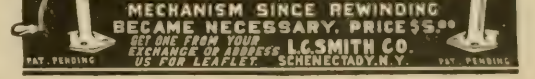
The World Film Corporation, which took the Polo pictures, has succeeded in getting some startling views of this interesting international event. The film is now being shown throughout the country.

* * *

During his forthcoming visit to Paris, William A. Brady will superintend the beginning of the moving picture version of Louis Joseph Vance's novel, "The Lone Wolf."

* * *

The William A. Brady Picture Plays Corporation now has six photoplays in readiness, but will not release any of them until September, awaiting the passing of the off season.



Moving Picture Theatre Mailing Lists For Sale

20,192, covering United States and Canada, price $40.00, or $3.50 per thousand for such states as you want.

670 Film Exchanges, U. S. $3.50
70 Manufacturers and Studios, U. S. 1.00
34 Moving Picture Machine Mfrs. and Dealers 1.00
231 Film Exchanges, Foreign Countries 3.00
320 Moving Picture Theatres, Foreign Countries 3.00

Ask us for full particulars.

TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO.

166 West Adams Street, Chicago

Established 1880

THE TIME — THE PLACE AND THE GOODS!

THE RECENT EXPOSITION FURNISHED THE OPPORTUNITY — AND WE FURNISHED THE GOODS — FROM NOW ON EXHIBITORS WILL DEMAND

QUALITY — EFFICIENCY — DURABILITY — ECONOMY

BECAUSE THEIR PATRONS WILL DEMAND IT -- AND BECAUSE THEY DISCOVERED THEY WILL FIND IT IN

"THE PEERLESS" — DAY AND NIGHT SCREEN — "THE PIONEER"

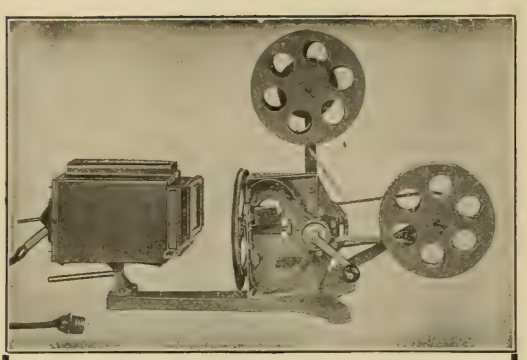
WRITE FOR CATALOGUE — ARRANGE FOR TEST

DAY AND NIGHT SCREENS, INC., 291 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

BRANCH OFFICES AND DISTRIBUTING CENTERS AT

PHILADELPHIA, NEW ORLEANS, ATLANTA, EL PASO, MEMPHIS, KANSAS CITY, DES MOINES, SAN FRANCISCO, LOS ANGELES, SEATTLE, PARIS, BERLIN, LONDON



THE PHANTOSCOPE

"What counts isn't what you pay—but what you get for what you pay."

Watch our ad next week for an Extraordinary Announcement of far-reaching importance.

Phantoscope Mfg. Co.
Bond Building, Washington, D. C.

THE BRIGHT WHITE LIGHT

(CALCIUM EFFECT)
so Desirable for
Moving Picture Projections
is ONLY produced with

BIO CARBONS

They Are
"The Carbons You Want"

Charles L. Kiewert Co.

NEW YORK 165 Greenwich St. · MILWAUKEE 114 Huron St. · SAN FRANCISCO 143 Second St.

Exhibitors News

Interesting Information Concerning Moving Picture Men Gathered By Moving Picture World Correspondents Everywhere.

KENTUCKY.

BUSINESS with Louisville exhibitors has been fairly good during the past ten days, though little difficulty has been experienced in seating the attending crowds. The weather has been so extremely warm that the regular patrons go to the parks or airdomes and the down-town theaters are naturally not overcrowded.

Manager S. B. Kramer, of Warner's Feature Film Company, Indianapolis, Ind., was recently in Louisville making some changes in the local office. J. J. Hebert has been transferred to the Indianapolis office, and Fred Sheldon, formerly with the Kinemacolor Company, is now manager. The offices have been changed to two rooms on the other side of the Courier-Journal Building in order to get better elevator service.

The Walnut Street Amusement Company, Louisville, has quit operating the big automatic orchestra until the opening of the fall season. At present an admission of only five cents is charged and as the house is not doing a very large business it is not considered necessary to go to the expense of operating the big organ. An electric piano is furnishing the necessary music at present.

The Crescent Airdome, Louisville, which recently opened under the management of H. R. Whiteside, is operating six nights a week only, and is catering strictly to the high class people in its neighborhood. The residents in this district objected to pictures being exhibited on Sunday, and to vaudeville turns. Only first class pictures will be shown at the theater, and the management will do everything in its power to fulfill its patrons' requests.

James Malcolm, is a new recruit at the office of the Warner Feature Film Company's Louisville branch, and will represent the company on the road in Kentucky and Tennessee.

E. W. Clay, who formerly was manager of the Westonian Theater, Louisville, has taken charge of the theater again and is coming along nicely. The new management shortly discovered that last year's success was in a large measure due to Mr. Clay's efforts, and arrangements were made for his services at once.

Manager Louis J. Dittmar, of the Majestic Amusement Company, Louisville, has purchased a new Overland Roadster, to replace the Maxwell car which he has had in service for the past three years. Business at the Majestic has held up fairly well in spite of the season.

The Broadway Amusement Company of Louisville is making arrangements to close its house at Shelby and Broadway, that city, in about two weeks. Arrangements have been completed for the building of a new $50,000 theater on the present site. The new theater, it is expected, will be ready for business about October 1. The old house was the most successful small house ever operated in Louisville, it is said.

Manager George Steurle, of the Broadway Amusement Company, Louisville, is making arrangements to give up the dry goods business in which he has been interested for many years, and will give his entire time to his motion picture interests, which are large.

The attraction at B. F. Keith's theater during the past week was the nine-reel Selig production of "The Spoilers," which made such a tremendous hit at the theater about three weeks ago. Louisville movie patrons were so pleased with the pictures that it was impossible to accommodate the crowds along toward the end of the first week that the pictures were shown and the film was called back.

The National theater has discontinued vaudeville for the summer and is now showing only motion pictures. The first week of the change saw very fair crowds at the big theater, which is said to be cooler than any other house in town. This condition is brought about by the ventilating and washed air system, one of the features of the house. The program will be changed semi-weekly.

G. D. CRAIN, JR.

CINCINNATI

DESPITE favoring weather, considering the season, a number of Cincinnati exhibitors have been heard to complain lately that business is far from what it should be. After an unusually hot period during a good part of May, rains gave relief from the heat, and since that time the weather has been pleasant, so that patrons cannot complain on this score. A leading exhibitor points out, however, that the slump in attendance noted at many of the theaters is probably due to the business depression which exists in Cincinnati as in a good many other cities just now, and which is especially acute in a number of trades here by reason of the prolonged carpenters' strike, which has thrown many men out of work. As this exhibitor says, the amusement item in the household budget is usually the first to be cut down when things are slow, and this is doubtless largely accountable for the poor business referred to. As there is now good prospect of the strike ending shortly, however, and there is a large amount of work ahead, this condition is not expected to last long, and summer business with the photoplay houses is therefore expected to be fully up to the average.

The moving picture men were on the job at the opening day's races at Latonia, the beautiful Kentucky track just across the river from Cincinnati, and pictures were secured of the big crowd which attended the sport, as well as of the thrilling finish in the Inaugural Handicap and other races. These will be shown around the city with other pictures under the title of "Cincinnati in Motion," which have become very popular with audiences, ranking with good features in drawing power.

The Bijou, the Fountain Square house in which I. Lipson is interested, A. Lipson being the manager, has just received a thorough spring cleaning, the front and lobby being redecorated completely, while the interior was thoroughly renovated and cleaned, making it all that could be desired in freshness and airiness for the crowds which patronize it in all kinds of weather. Mr. Lipson, who manages the Family, the popular house on Vine street, and also the Grand, reports that business is holding up well at all three houses, considering the poor business which some of the theaters are experiencing, the excellence of his locations having a great deal to do with this fact.

"The Port of Missing Men," with Arnold Daly, the celebrated actor, in the leading role, drew splendidly last week at the Lubin, where it was exhibited for the first time in Cincinnati. The Lubin is using the regular theatrical billboards as well as other advertsing mediums, including the newspapers and car-cards, to give publicity to its attractions, and this policy is proving its value in the crowds which attend the performances at this leading Cincinnati house.

Oakley, a suburb of Cincinnati, is to have the largest airdome in or around the city, according to plans which have been prepared by the Oakley Building & Theater Co., which has purchased from the Oakley Park Co., the property at the intersection of Madison Road, Markbreit and Isabella avenues for this purpose. The airdome is to be conducted in connection with the Park theater, which is owned by the same company, the principal owners being James B. Carrigan, formerly of St. Louis, who has recently become prominent in the photoplay business in Cincinnati, and E. R. Gorbold, of Price Hill. The airdome will have a striking exterior, finish work similar to that used on exposition buildings being planned to secure decorative effects, and 1,000 lamps will be used for its illumination, besides four arc lights. The property in question has a frontage of 186 feet on Madison road, 225 on the east side, 186 feet along Markbreit avenue and is 52 feet across the west end. The house will have a large seating capacity. Other details will be available later.

The quarters of the General Film Company in Cincinnati were moved last week from the building at Seventh and Walnut streets to a handsome new structure at Opera Place and Elm street, which was built for the exclusive use of the company, and which is said to be the handsomest building used for film exchange purposes west of New York. The offices of the company are on the ground floor of the building, the rest of the space being used for various purposes connected with its work. Manager Frank Smith is highly pleased with his new quarters, and when everything is straightened out believes that it will be possible to handle business to much better advantages than in the former offices.

A. Klotz, formerly special representative of the World's Film Corporation, and well known to exhibitors in Cincinnati and the surrounding territory, is now acting in a similar capacity with the Edeltli organization. Mr. Klotz has been in the business for seven years.

The Eclectic production of "Esther," based on the Bible story which is familiar to most people, received a peculiarly gratifying indorsement last week, when it was shown on Sunday evening at the Seventh Day Adventist Church in Walnut Hills, one of the most aristocratic suburbs of Cincinnati. The vividness with which the film portrays the dramatic scenes of events related in the old story is calculated to impress it firmly on those who see it, and the church authorities did not question its educational value for this reason, considering it better to offer this counter attraction to the other shows, which might not show strictly religious subjects, than to risk a more ordinary form of offering for Sunday evening. A large attendance turned out for this unusual Sunday evening service, which was successful.

"Classmates" drew well during the first half of last week at the Gayety, the production of the play in picture form by Klaw & Erlanger benefiting, as do most dramatic productions, by the great number of scenes, especially out-doors, which are possible with the film. Those scenes at West Point, showing the cadets at drill and in camp, were especially well received.

The return engagement of the great Ames film play, "Quo Vadis," which showed at the Grand last week, continued the unusual success of this wonder of all big features, showing other that many people have still not seen it and desired to avail themselves of the opportunity, or that hundreds of those who had taken it an formerly wanted to see it again. Manager I. Lipson reports that the receipts during the entire week were entirely satisfactory, especially during the latter half of the week when popular prices prevailed.

"Ten Nights in a Barroom," was seen at the Wonderland last week, the production being by the Photo Drama Company. The feature consists of five reels, and large audiences turned out to see the production.

The extent to which motion pictures of the activities of various organizations, business and social, are becoming a recognized part of their outings and doings of all sorts, is indicated by the fact that the officers of the Three Scarabs Temple, a Cincinnati social organization, made arrangements in advance of their own initiative to have pictures taken, to the extent of 1,000 feet of film, of the outing held on Saturday afternoon of last week at Likwe Park. Pictures were taken of the organization in session groups of various members, the big dinner of fried chicken and catfish, which is always a feature of the sessions, and other incidents, as well as individual pictures of prominent members. It has been customary for a number of years to show at the meetings stereopticon slides made from photographs of deceased members, but hereafter the films of motion pictures will be used for this purpose.

Eleven houses in Dayton, O., have made arrangements to show the new feature to be produced by the Thanhouser Company, "The Million-Dollar Mystery," according to Special Representative Floyd Lewis, who has been working in this territory for a short time. Mr. Lewis reports corresponding success in all of the cities and towns which he has visited on behalf of the new serial, indicating a remarkable interest on the part of exhibitors in good features of this sort, as well as confidence in the company's ability to maintain the high standards set by its pictures in this new effort.

While a town is occasionally heard of where exhibitors complain that there are too many of them in business for profit, a place which is a trifle booming for and asking for a picture house is something of a novelty in Kelly's Island, a lake town in the northern part of the State, is in this same class, and it is not likely that it will be permitted to go long unsatisfied. It is said for it that it contains 1400 permanent inhabitants with scores hundred more in the shape of summer guests during the vacation season, and there is not a single picture house in or near the town. These facts constitute an opportunity worth the attention of some exhibitor who is looking for a location, and the indications are that such a man would be met with open arms at Kelly's Island.

The numerous things which find people an in spite of their attention, were shown by moving pictures at a lecture given by Charles F. Campbell, executive secretary of the Ohio Commission for the Blind, given at Springfield, O., recently on "Prevention of Blindness." The lecture was given in connection with the State health exhibit being shown there. Among the activities of blind people, as shown by the pictures, were skating, rowing, swimming, and other athletic diversions, as well as a number of employments of a more sedate nature, which are suitable for the blind to engage good stead.

The Pabst Amusement Company has been incorporated at Springfield, O., with a capital stock of $1,000, by Charles Settes, Ralph Kretzer and Fred Hil. The company will operate a motion picture house.

The Lyceum Theater Amusement Co., recently organized in Toledo, O., by Abe Shapiro, Joseph Weipner, Jr., Glen Anders, C. S. Sinclair and Daisy Allen, will construct a cataloguing photoplay house during the present summer which will probably be ready for occupancy well before the opening of the fall season. The capital stock of the company is $25,000.

CASEY.

MISSOURI.

DESPITE extremely hot weather, Kansas City exhibitors apparently have felt no unfavorable effects as far as attendance is concerned. The exodus of vacation seekers has not yet begun, and the added drama therefore is attracting as many patrons as during the winter. Some loss of business is expected during July and August, as many local residents will depart for their annual periods of recuperation. In the meantime however box office receipts are pleasingly large.

There will be no minister on the censor board recently appointed by Mayor Henry L. Jost to act as a court of appeals on protested films. Rev. George H. Combs, pastor of a Kansas City church, originally was appointed, but announced that he was unable to serve. Mayor Jost replaced him by Judge H. C. McDougall, a former city councilor. The other two members of the board are Trigg A. Lone, a fire insurance agent, and Battle McCardle, an attorney.

An ordinance passed at Pittsburg, Kan., on June 3 created a board of public welfare, and abolished the old board of theater censors. The new body is required to pass on all moving pictures shown in Pittsburg and to either approve or disapprove them.

Leo Moret and G. W. Sherman have opened an airdome at Breckenridge, Mo.

The Trio theater, at Galt, has closed down and residents of that town will be without animated pictures until the Rusk Auditorium opens late in June.

Work has begun on a new theater at Albany, Judge R. L. Rigner being the builder. The house will be equipped for both motion pictures and "legitimate," and will open about September 1, according to present plans.

Asa Morton has begun work on the construction of a new theater building at Clarksdale. The house will be 25 by 80 feet and will be opened in August. Motion pictures will be used exclusively.

A new airdome at Houston, was put into commission last week by Gaylord V. Elliott recently.

Exhibitors of various Missouri and Kansas towns are co-operating in a good many instances with the local newspapers in securing publicity. The amusement men in many cases have cuts made of celebrities of the moving picture field and supply them to the local papers without charge. The editor, as a rule, is glad to get hold of some cuts to liven up his paper, and the arrangement has proved mutually profitable. The owners of the "Photoplay," at Nevada, for instance, provided three cuts in a single issue of the paper recently.

The latest entrant to exhibitors' circles in Kansas City is J. C. Lane, who expects to erect a $10,000 theater at Fortieth and Main streets. Carl Boller is the architect for the house. The plans have been completed and the contract will be awarded in the near future.

H. B. Lappe, president of the Standard Amusement Company, left for New York recently to gain new ideas as to the renovating of the Willis Wood theater which the Standard leased recently for a period of ten years. Mr. Lappe was accompanied by Frank Jackson and Fred McIlvain, Kansas City architects who will draw the plans for the alterations. About $25,000 will be spent in modernizing the old theater, at one time the proudest boasted by Kansas City. A fact not generally known is that the Willis Wood theater is connected with the Baltimore Hotel, which is diagonally across the street, by an underground passage, in order that patrons may reach the hostelry without difficulty in inclement weather.

C. S. Edwards, who recently left the Kansas City branch of the General Film Company to assume the management of the new Eclectic exchange, is rapidly whipping his staff into shape. C. S. Edwards, Jr., credit man at the General branch, has joined the Eclectic, and will have charge of the Pathe interests, including both the daily news and the weekly. Two experienced road men have been secured and will travel in Western Missouri, Northern Oklahoma and Arkansas and all of Kansas. The offices of the branch in the Ozark building at Eleventh and Main streets are about ready for occupancy. The front half of the second floor will be utilized. Handsome fixtures and the arrangement of the offices for expeditious and expert service are features.

C. D. Struble, assistant manager of the Kansas City branch of the General Film Company for some time, has been made manager, the appointment effective at once. Mr. Struble has been with the General for several years in various capacities, and while one of the youngest film men in Kansas City holding such a responsible position, is well fitted for the place. J. E. Willis, district manager of the General, with headquarters at Chicago, left for the Windy City recently after spending a week at the branch.

MURRAY.

SAN FRANCISCO.

THE Board of Public Works has granted a building permit to Oloff Carlson for the erection of a one-story moving picture theater on the south side of Cortland avenue, near Ellsworth street, the structure to cost $3,000. The location is in the Bernal Heights district, a rapidly growing section of the city.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Herman, of this city, are making a trip to New York and other eastern points and expect to be absent from California for three months. Mr. Herman represents the American Phototplay Company, of San Francisco and Berkeley.

A permit has been granted by the Board of Police Commissioners to Simon Varnagen for a picture theater to be operated at 1635 Ellis street.

The Larkin Theater at 816 Larkin street was opened on June 6 by Joy B. Rothschild under auspicious conditions, the Famous Players production "Clothes" being the first one shown. The program for the first week in addition to this feature included "The Redemption of David Corson," "Hearts Adrift," and "Love Everlasting." This theater is a very handsome one of fireproof construction, and is located in a district that was a very prominent one before the great fire of 1906 and which is now growing very rapidly.

The patrons of Grauman's Imperial apparently cannot get enough of Mary Pickford and the management has arranged for a Mary Pickford Anniversary Week in June when four of the greatest successes played at this house will be repeated. The management is advertising this event strongly on the billboards and by sending a splendid double of Mary through the streets in costume. She has been creating a sensation this week by appearing with a wolf hound, the counterpart of the animal seen in "Hearts Adrift."

The Portola Theater has been showing "The Stranglers of Paris" this week, having secured the exclusive rights for the presentation of this picture in San Francisco. This will be followed by "The Spoilers," which is credited with having brought $7,000 into the box office of the Hippodrome at Los Angeles during a single week recently.

The Acme Theater on Stockton street, near Broadway, has adopted the policy of showing posters only on the stage that the films are exhibited, the opinion being expressed by Mr. Marks that advertising in advance is often confusing to patrons.

The Pacific Coast Feature Film Company, which opened offices recently in the Hollingsworth Building, Los Angeles, has been showing its feature "Life in Joliet Penitentiary" during the past week at the Empire Theater on Market street, San Francisco, the price of admission being 10 cents.

The extensive increase in the business of the California Film Exchange, of this city, has led to the purchase of ten additional reels weekly.

The Universal feature "Samson" has just completed a successful week's run at the Broadway Theater, Oakland, inaugurating the change from vaudeville to moving pictures, and is now being shown at the Princess, San Francisco.

Lucius J. Henderson is no longer filling a position as director for the California Motion Picture Corporation, this position having been taken over for the time being, at least, by William Nigh, of Arthur Payne, of the California Motion Picture Corporation, is back from his trip to Mexican waters with about twelve thousand feet of negative. Actthe scenario department ing upon the advice of the United States naval authorities the work that was originally mapped out has been abandoned until conditions are more settled, but the yacht Iola has been left there with a crew and cameraman aboard.

A delegation of business men from Susanville was in town recently to interest moving picture people in taking pictures of Mount Lassen where a volcano is in active eruption.

The Pageant Film Company, recently incorporated at San Francisco, is arranging to have moving pictures taken illustrating in pageantry the growth of this city.

The California Motion Picture Corporation has recently had completed for use at its San Rafael studio a convertible auto truck with a capacity of thirty persons. The body can be changed at will for carrying scenery and supplies.

M. E. Cory, of the Sunset Motion Picture Company, is making a trip to San Diego in connection with the concession that is to be let for taking moving pictures at the exposition to be held there next year.

E. M. Asher, manager of the Progressive Film Producing Company, has completed arrangements with Silas Christofferson, the aviator, for sending a cameraman and moving picture outfit with the latter on an air trip from San Francisco to Seattle in a specially constructed aeroplane. The cameraman selected has had considerable newspaper experience and will carry a small typewriter with him to use en route.

Ernest Bru, formerly connected with Simmond's Features, San Francisco, has returned to this city from a trip to Buenos Ayres, where he spent some time attempting to introduce American made films into the South American market.

Byron Park, for some time connected with the local office of the Pacific Mutual Film Corporation, has left on a trip to Atlanta, Ga.

Ben S. Cohen, representing the Film Syndicate, is on the coast arranging for the release of the "Million Dollar Mystery" and will shortly return to San Francisco from Los Angeles to arrange for a publicity campaign.

F. G. Hyde, of the Liberty Theater, Lindsay, Cal., was in town this week on a business trip. He states that business in the central California orange belt is very satisfactory.

Turner & Dahnken have disposed of their theater at Fresno, Cal., and for the present will devote their attention to their other seven houses. This firm conducts one theater in each of the following cities: San Francisco, Oakland, Alameda, Berkeley, Richmond, Sacramento, and San Jose. An additional house is being fitted up at San Francisco and new ones are being erected at Watsonville and Berkeley.

The Capitol Theater, Sacramento and Locust streets, San Francisco, has changed hands.

A. A. Richards, a prominent moving picture man of Modesto, Cal., was in San Francisco recently on business. The outlook in his territory is splendid, the crops being the largest ever grown in that vicinity.

The plans made by manager Frank L. Hudson, of the San Francisco office of the Eclectic Film Company, for installing a fully equipped exhibition room at 67 Turk street have been held up by the municipal authorities. Mr. Hudson planned to install a fireproof booth with automatic shutters and safeguard in every way, but the inspectors demand that the regulations applying to theaters be complied with. The matter will be taken up with the leading officials, and it is believed that the necessary permits will be granted.

W. W. Clark has purchased the Pastime Theater at Berkeley, Cal., from Higgins & Kreig. The theater is at South Berkeley station.

D. S. Markowitz, who recently secured the selling agency in this territory for the Simplex machine, made by the Precision Machine Company, Inc., of New York, has opened offices in the Marsh Strong building, Los Angeles, and is conducting business as the Pacific Coast Motion Picture Supply Company.

The New Hippodrome Theater has been opened at Fresno, Cal., under the management of John Curtiss, this being the first open air motion picture house in the Raisin City. "A Leap of Despair" was the opening feature and this was well received. The services of Mme. Olga Gerster, a pleasing vocalist, have been secured for the entire season. The music is in charge of Ralph H. Aldred, late of New York, with R. Aw Dunn at the drums. The house is located in J street, near Tuolumne, and has a seating capacity of 1,000.

The American Theater Company has been incorporated at Los Angeles with a capital stock of $50,000 by G. Cohen, P. and M. Gururtz.

Claude C. Laval, official photographer for the San Joaquin Valley Counties' Association, recently took pictures in the pea packing plant of the Pacific Pea Packing Company at Oakdale, Cal., and in the grain fields on the West Side. The pictures will be shown at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition in 1915.

Roger Coit, of Oakland, Cal., is having plans drawn by Architect Edward T. Foulkes for a two-story theater to be built in that city, to cost approximately $80,000.

CHURCH.

IN THE MIDDLE WEST

THE City Council of Madison, Wis., has passed its ordinance regulating the construction and operation of moving picture theaters with a view to preventing fire and panic.

The Saxes recently announced that they would try the plan of using as ushers in the Orpheum and Crystal at Milwaukee, girls from the University of Wisconsin who want work in vacation. Dark-haired girls in white duck uniforms will be the color scheme.

A display of multi-colored electric lights and a fountain playing in front of an illuminated green background are decorative features of the Majestic Theater at La Crosse, Wis., which is playing big feature pictures.

Construction of Henry Rockwell's new theater at Darien, Wis., has begun.

The contract has been awarded for the construction of the new opera house at Hortonville, Wis. It will cost about $12,000.

Morgan W. Jopling, of Marquette, Mich., and his associates who plan to erect a string of motion picture theaters in Michigan and Wisconsin have formed the Delft Theater Company, which has filed articles of incorporation with the county clerk at Escanaba, Mich. The other incorporators are Hugh S. Gallup and Alfred O. Jopling. The company is authorized to have a capital stock of $50,000.

A series of weekly band concerts in connection with the moving picture bill at the Princess Theater at Crawfordsville, Ind., has been started.

Fred Hilton, formerly manager of the Orpheum Theater at Mansfield, Ohio, has purchased the interest of J. S. Byers in the Grand Theater and with Frank Beverstock will manage the house. Re-decoration of the lobby and the installation of a new indirect lighting system are among some of the improvements announced. Pictures will be presented.

Manager Charles Franke, of the Airdome at Park avenue and Farnam street, in Omaha, Neb., who opened his theater with regular releases, contemplates running some feature films before the summer is over.

According to the report of the Dayton, Ohio, Playgrounds and Gardens Association there are 919 colored people between the ages of five and twenty-four and 616 between the ages of five and fourteen with but one moving picture show to provide for their entertainment.

Members of the Order of Eagles who recently held a picnic near Hamilton, Ohio, were aware that many persons never had seen a moving picture machine before and arranged that the projection of the pictures should be fully as much of an attraction as the subjects on the screen. The projection was done from a platform in view of the crowd.

A new theater seating 1,500 persons and costing $27,000 will be erected on Court street in Beatrice, Neb., it is reported.

"A Race for a Bride" was the name selected for the industrial story pictures made for the Chamber of Commerce of Jackson, Mich., and shown to big business at the Rex Theater in that city. Attendance was increased by the offer of a local concern to give a prize to the person guessing the nearest correct number of feet of film in the picture. It is planned to show the films in 182 other cities.

Manager Sam M. Young, of the Garden Theater at Terre Haute, Ind., has not made all his plans for booking for the new house, but it is certain that cleanup high class pictures will be seen there. The front of the new house is in white enamel brick, trimmed with chocolate enamel brick.

An inclination of the people toward varied programs instead of an evening of the same story, is given as the reason for the substitution by Manager Brown, of the Lyceum Theater, at Columbus, Ohio, of mixed films instead of the multiple-reel features.

Bert Brinkley, of Cleveland, Ohio, has purchased the Lyric Theater at Sidney, Ohio, from P. F. Sarver.

M. W. Athey and W. J. Collins, of Williamstown, Ohio, are contemplating the erection of a moving picture theater at that place.

Joseph Brokaw, who recently opened a new moving picture theater on the north side of the square at Angola, Ind., gave a benefit for the alumni of a local school.

The Ladies Literary Club, of Wausau, Wis., is devoting much time to securing patronage for high class moving pictures which are shown at the opera house. One of the recent features was "Antony and Cleopatra."

Clifford Cole, who has been manager of the Orpheum Theater at Elkhart, Ind., has gone to Kokomo, Ind., where he will manage the Sipe Theater, which has just been taken over from George Sipe by Allardt Brothers. The house already has entered upon a season of photoplays, but about the middle of August will begin a split week of one-half vaudeville and one-half moving pictures.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

IOWA

ANNOUNCEMENT has been made by the Iowa State Fair Association that a few weeks previous to the opening of the 1911 fall fair, the exposition will be advertised by means of views shown in 200 moving picture theaters in the state.

Dunn & Gabriel will be the firm name under which Chester Dunn and Richard Gabriel will operate a moving picture and vaudeville show at the opera house at Armstrong. They will run two or three nights a week, securing five and ten cents for pictures and ten and fifteen cents for pictures and vaudeville.

J. G. Wiething, who recently sold the Bijou Theater at Toledo, will give only feature pictures at the Wiething. Occasionally he will run vaudeville. A. H. Erickson, formerly in the picture business at Cedar Falls, and Bert Borgan, of Toledo, who purchased the Bijou, have leased the Lichty building as a new home for the Bijou and will move the show about September 1.

F. W. Ponder and G. I. Boller, who have been operating a picture show in the opera house at Griswold for several months, have gone into the real estate business under the name of the Griswold Land Company. Boller has purchased a half interest in the opera house and the firm will have offices in that building.

S. J. Snittjer, of Wellsburg, has succeeded Reisinger & Dreher, who for the last two years managed the Dike Opera House at Dike, and will conduct a picture show.

A stock company has been formed at Ellsworth for the operation of a moving picture show.

The city of West Point has leased ground on the east side of the park to the management of the Electric Theater, who will operate an airdome there this summer.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

IN THE SOUTHWEST.

DR. J. H. EARP was appointed receiver June 2 in the United States District Court at Oklahoma City, Okla., for the Al J. Jennings Film Company as the result of a suit brought by Jennings against Garland Hale, W. R. Crusoe and the film company. Jennings declared that upon representations made to him prior to August 4, 1913, by Hale and Crusoe, he made a thirty-year contract with them whereby they were to have the exclusive rights to his literary works and films. They were unable to furnish the capital promised, he declares. He further alleges that at the incorporation of the Al J. Jennings Film Company with a capital stock of $30,000 he was to have 297 shares at par value of $100 each. He asserts that the stock was drawn to him, but never delivered from the stock book until someone fraudulently endorsed his name to the stock and thereafter marked it canceled and surrendered it. He also alleges that Hale and Crusoe without his authority issued successive twenty-five and sixty shares respectively which belonged to him. He asked the action of the court for new construction of himself and other bonafide stockholders.

The Lyric Airdome at St. Charles, Mo., gave a benefit for the Ladies' Guild of Trinity Episcopal Church.

Superintendent Richards, of the public schools at Ardmore, Okla., has announced that he will advocate the installation of moving pictures and phonographs in the schools of that city.

A natural amphitheater in the White Mountains sixty miles west of Roswell, New Mexico, is being used for a series of meetings at which the gospel and good roads are alternately preached. Moving pictures are being used in connection with both services. The ministers and business men of Roswell are co-operating.

The moving pictures of "The Siege of the Alamo" which were taken at San Antonio, Tex., will be used for educational purposes in the schools of the Lone Star State after they have been shown in the regular manner. The picture which was eight months in preparation, was taken under the direction of H. C. Matthews, formerly with the 101 Ranch Company. Thorough research into historical authorities was made before the scenario was written. Whenever possible the identical historic properties were used. About 2,000 persons were used in the various scenes. The film project is backed by a stock company of prominent Texans. In the fall of 1913 Representative A. P. Rogers, of Decatur, Tex., took charge of the executive and financial end.

Manager John Burgess, of the Livingston Theater at Livingston, Tex., has inaugurated a Saturday matinee for the convenience of the country people. The Livingston has announced that the theater may be used free by all societies and organizations of the town when the picture show is not in operation.

The picture "An Abandoned Honeymoon" taken recently at Port Arthur, Tex., to advertise that city has been shown at Pocahontas, Ark., Paducah, Ky., and in some Illinois cities.

Hugo, Okla., was recently filmed by the Leroy Film Company.

The Queen Animated Weekly, produced for the Queen Theater at Houston, Tex., is attracting much attention from lovers of the local industries. So many children did not get to see the Mardi Gras in its original run that it was repeated by request.

John Todd has sold his moving picture theater at Newkirk, Okla., to J. W. Tresner, of Enid, Okla.

A. L. Ramsey, who has opened the old Orpheum Theater at Sulphur, Okla., will operate the house under the name of the Palace Theater.

The Empress Theater, at Waurika, Okla., has been sold to J. A. Woodam and A. M. VanCleef.

E. D. Perkins will be the manager of the Happy Hour Theater at McKinney, Tex., which was sold by John C. Penn to E. B. Pope, who also operates the Pope Theater.

The Wonderland Moving Picture Theater at Muldrow, Okla., has closed.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

IN THE NORTHWEST.

FOLLOWING the sale of the Empress Theater at Ft. Collins, Colo., Gus and Max Kohn and F. H. Fairchild (the Northern Colorado Amusement Company) will devote their attention to their house at Boulder, Colo., and expect to add other houses in that locality. H. F. Beier and George K. Thompson, who have secured control of the Empress, will operate with the same policy of pictures under the name of the Empress Theater Company.

James M. Piquett, who has purchased the Best Theater at Missoula, Mont., from George W. Carter, has changed the name to the Star Theater.

Instead of erecting a tablet or the usual form of memorial the senior class of the 1913 school at Winona, Minn., proposes that its name shall go down in history as one that was a benefactor, and to aid education by presenting the school with a moving picture machine.

The pictures taken in Boulder, Colo., of the University of Colorado May fete did not turn out well and the Curran Theater had decided not to give the advertised exhibition. Requests were so numerous that they were shown as "three minutes of movies as they shouldn't be" coincidental with the appearance of "Goodness Gracious or Movies as They Shouldn't Be" at the Rex.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

ILLINOIS.

FUNDS derived from the sale of abandoned school buildings in Springfield will be used for the purchase of motion picture and gymnasium equipment. This means of securing these modern adjuncts to education was suggested by the teachers and readily adopted by the school board.

Plans for the location of moving picture theaters in the residence districts of Springfield have been agreed upon by the city council. New houses will have to secure the consent of property owners within a distance of 400 feet in each direction from the proposed site.

Floats in the Memorial Day parades at Dundee were shown at Manager Wendt of the Dundee Opera House, who had the pictures taken.

Joe Bontes has sold his La Salle Theater in the 200 block South Adams street, and the Liberty in the 300 block South Adams street, in Peoria to Charles F. Hathaway, a real estate dealer of that city, who will operate both houses.

The village board at Lena turned down a proposition to open the moving picture theaters to operate on Sunday.

The Centralia Opera House, now and then a picture house at Springfield, is being remodeled at an expenditure of $10,000.

Labor organizations of Bloomington contemplate the erection of a combination lodge hall and theater. Peoriers will be taken from the White House Theater, erected on Washington street in Grand Rapids, Wis., by the union men of that city.

The Peerless Airdome was opened at Tamaroa for a season of pictures.

The airdome at La Salle is again a popular young lady's resort.

The season's bears of the Chicago moving picture operators' team established a game with the Belvidere team for June 21. It was planned to film the game and show the pictures at the Belvidere houses.

Light business has caused a change of policy in the Princess Moving Picture Theater on West State street in Rockford and the house will be operated only on Saturdays and Sundays during the heated season.

Louis Rubens for the last six years prominent in moving picture affairs in Joliet, has added to his holdings in that city by taking a long term lease on the Joliet Theater. This gives him the Crystal, Stairs, the Princess and the Joliet. About $10,000 will be spent on improvements to the latest acquisition, which will not be opened until Labor Day. Dates not filled with drama will be given over to [illegible] films, the latest [illegible] being made with the [illegible].

R. S. Hopper, of Bismarck, has just secured a name for his new theater, which he enjoys the Rialto Theater in that city. Remodeling of the structure has begun.

Fred Sterling, of Rockford, and [illegible] Marcus Heiman and [illegible] have purchased the [illegible] theater at La Salle and Ohio streets in [illegible] Harris, Heiman & Hill, Chicago & Company [illegible] ago.

Fred Reese, of Bloomington, has purchased the Orpheum Theater at Decatur, from George W. Roe.

The Academy Advertising Company, [illegible] New York, with Otis Davis as [illegible] the Playhouse and the Southern Theater. [illegible] tures are the property of the Oak Park Business Men's Association, and will go into the [illegible] of the organization as a part of the association record of the community.

Moving pictures and a concert by the Addler [illegible] Orchestra gave satisfaction at the Hirsch Theater in DeKalb.

Reservoir Park, near Paris, is using moving pictures for a free attraction this year.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

"WHAT Kind of Moving Pictures do You Like?" is the question being asked the public by the Washington Herald in its moving picture page, and a blank is provided for the writing of a reply. The paper states that in this way it is giving its readers an opportunity to tell the moving picture manufacturers just what they want. All answers must be signed and only one will be accepted from each reader. Coupons will be printed each day for thirty days and at the end of that time they will be classified and just what the "movies fans" of Washington want will be determined. The newspaper then will take the matter up direct with the film manufacturers, the local exchanges and the exhibitors of Washington. The blank contains the following classes for which the reader may or may not express a preference: One, two and three-reel comedies; one, two and three-reel dramas; one, two and three-reel special features; educational films; serial pictures; features of three or more reels; weekly news pictures"; as well as "I prefer a show consisting of [illegible] reels of pictures." This scheme seems to have the approval of the exchanges and the exhibitors, and considerable interest is being manifested in it by the general public. At least it is keeping the business in the theatrical advertising line fever, one might say, and the more publicity of this type that can be given, the better. The Herald, according to announcements in the theater, also is playing fair with the exchanges as some are giving alternating matinees to the paper every Thursday, the opening day for the new feature films in this city. In fact, the Herald also has [illegible] [illegible] is receiving the support of [illegible] [illegible].

"Central Park" as the lot that has been picked on to be the airdome site is soon to be opened on Ninth street at Grant Place northwest, near the main entrance of Seventh Street [illegible] The opening one in the downtown district is [illegible] [illegible] thousand persons. The park will be operated by the United Amusement Company. A large orchestra under the leadership of Meyer Davis will be employed.

The Orpheum, the Stanton and Crandall's last week presented films showing the activities of the public schools here, showing especially the work done by the pupils in the summer time. Many of the exercises and [illegible] were shown, as well as the [illegible] of the children at [illegible] and [illegible] The features of the [illegible] were [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

DETROIT

FROM June 7 to the 12th Detroit has been sweltering with the heat. All records for high temperatures were broken. Businessmen all the theaters dropped nearly fifty per cent. However, the weather man has assured us that the temperature is due to drop and that before the end of June we shall be experiencing cool breezes which is sure to be welcome news to those engaged in the moving picture business.

Douglas Dickerson, manager of the Detroit office of the World Film Corporation, returned June 10 from New York City, where he conferred with the home office. Mr. Dickerson is well pleased with the treatment his firm has received in Michigan, and is very optimistic about the future. He states that his company will soon have a few startling announcements to make.

George H. Wiley, managing director of the Dayton Exposition, was in Detroit June 10 and 11 and attended the convention of the Michigan State Branch, No. 4, Motion Picture Exhibitors' League. From here Mr. Wiley went to New York City to attend an important meeting of the officers of the national association, of which he is secretary.

The Rosedale Theater Co., which is building a theater at Woodward and Rosedale avenues, has been incorporated for $50,000, the principal stockholders being William Klatt, Noah A. Rounds Dalton and J. W. Schneider.

Every holiday moving pictures are shown as an entertainment feature for the prison inmates of the Detroit House of Correction. The pictures are selected with care, always the aim of the management of the institution to only show such films as are interesting, instructive and have a moral. Arrangements for putting on the shows and taking care of all details are handled by Peter Jeup, of Detroit, proprietor of the Pastime theater.

The Family theater, facing the Campus, has been completely renovated through every part of the house, the walls have been repainted, the woodwork revarnished and repainted, new draperies added, as well as new carpet, and new electric lights installed on the outside, making the "Family Corner" as light as day. The office of Manager McCarron, formerly in the basement, has been moved to the foyer off the balcony and has windows both on Cadillac Square and the Campus, thus making it very cool during the summer and allowing a splendid view of the activities in the very heart of the city. The cost for these improvements amounted to approximately $7,000, but the theater gives the appearance of being absolutely new. A patron who was there a year ago would hardly recognize it today, except for the location.

Charles Hagedorn and David King have retired from all connection with the Wolverine Feature Film Co., whose officers are in the Equity building. The business will be continued under the management of Messrs. Davey & Schram.

A. Cohen & Sons are having plans drawn for a 1,500 seat theater on Gratiot avenue, on the present site of the Colonial, which they own. The present theater will be used as a lobby for the new house, as ground in the rear has been leased on which the theater proper will be built, thus allowing for a long lobby for sheltering people during the rainy and stormy weather. It is planned to have the enlarged theater seat 1500, the present one having a capacity for only 800. The cost of the new structure will be about $40,000. Work will start during the next sixty days. The Greenwood theater, being erected by the above firm, at Greenwood and Calumet avenues, seating 800, will open about the latter part of July. Ben Cohen does all the "hustling" for the firm.

Harry Goldberg, manager of the Casino Feature Film Co., went to Milwaukee June 15th to arrange the details in connection with the opening of an office there. He will make a trip through the state of Wisconsin and arrange with the various theaters there who have written for the privilege of showing the company's films. He expects to have the Milwaukee office operating by July 1. Mr. Goldberg states that despite the warm weather the rental of feature films, with his company, has increased one-third, although he anticipated that it would drop off that much.

An announcement of more than ordinary interest has just been made by the Ford Motor Company. As is generally known, this concern maintains one of the most complete moving picture plants in the United States, and has made pictures of its entire factory which are shown for the benefit of its agents and those who may be interested. The announcement in question is that the company will start at once to turn out each week a Ford-Detroit Weekly to consist of local events, being similar to the Mutual and Pathe Weeklies. These will be shown first at the Empire theater on Woodward avenue and then given to the other houses that may care to show them. There will be no charge whatever for the films, the Ford Company making the pictures and delivering them absolutely free. The Ford Company was the first to start profit-sharing on a big scale, and si now the first to inaugurate the idea of making pictures of current events and furnishing them gratis to the theaters. It shows conclusively that Henry Ford has recognized the importance of moving pictures for commercial and industrial development. A. J. Gillingham, proprietor of the Empire, has indeed been very fortunate in having secured the first privilege of showing these films.

The publication in a local daily newspaper to the effect that a New York moving picture concern would take pictures of Palestine and other biblical countries and furnish a regular weekly service to churches throughout the country is not looked on with favor by local pastors, who see no reason for such an innovation. Motion pictures have been shown in local churches, but only on special occasions. The idea was expressed, however, by a number of pastors to the Detroit correspondent of the Motion Picture World that it would not be a bad idea to throw open the churches at night with high-class films of subjects that would be interesting and uplifting, charging five or ten cents, and not running the regulation pictures as seen in most picture houses, but rather those mostly along educational lines.

As soon as contracts can be awarded, William Klatt states that construction work will be started on a new moving picture house at Gratiot avenue and Riopelle street. It will have accommodations for 800 persons.

Plans for a one-story brick theater to be erected at West Grand Boulevard and Grand River avenue are being prepared by Architect Richard H. Marr.

An audience which recently filled the Lyric theater on Michigan avenue attentively watched the program though utterly in ignorance of the fact that across the street a building was on fire. Manager Fred Williams, of the theater, was standing beside the open rear door of the house when the building started to blaze. He immediately closed all doors, turned on every fan and none of the patrons were "any the wiser" as to what was going on.

The Strand Theater Co., Inc., has been incorporated for $65,000. The principal stockholders are John H. Kunsky, George W. Trendle and Mary E. Kunsky.

The Alhambra Theater Co., Inc., has also been incorporated for $50,000, the stockholders being the same as in the Strand corporation.

SMITH.

ST. LOUIS.

THE Paradise skydome was opened at Eighteenth and Chestnut streets Sunday, May 24. John Carzin, the oldest exhibitor in point of service in St. Louis, is the proprietor of the new place which he claims to be one of the biggest alfresco theaters in the city. The Paradise seats three thousand, has a four reel program and a vaudeville act for five cents admission. Mr. Carzin is also the owner of the Casino and the Royal, two all-picture theaters in Market street, and when the program at the skydome is interrupted by rain, checks are given which are good at either of the above named places or for the next night's performance at the Paradise.

The Movie, a handsome and well equipped theater, was opened June 5, in Market street near Jefferson avenue, by Wilson and Shaffner as proprietors, and Leroy Martin behind the Simplex machine in the operating room. The Movie has a neat brick and plaster front, an entrance and an exit lobby with the box office between, seats two hundred and fifty persons, has a fine orchestra, gives a four-reel program for five cents admission, and caters to colored patrons.

The St. Louis Times Movie Review, which is issued in connection with the St. Louis Daily Times, is making friends everywhere. Manager Russell T. Edwards says he has the Review booked in thirty theaters. The film is devoted exclusively to local events, and seems to fill a long felt want among theatergoers of St. Louis.

On Saturday, June 5, Mrs. Wilbur Higby, manager of the Marguerite Clark theater, 4026 Olive street, turned her house over to the Pure Milk Fund, an organization fostered by the Post Dispatch to furnish milk to babies during the hot months. A nice sum was realized from the benefit, and Mrs. Higby's accomplished little daughter, Mary Jane Higby, made a bit as one of the performers in the program which consisted of playlets, plays, music, songs and recitations by a number of clever children.

The Columbia theater is showing moving pictures of the Pageant and Masque held in St. Louis the last week in May. Director Willis L. Rohard of the St. Louis Motion Picture Co. made 20,000 feet of film, more than half of which was discarded. The run lasts nearly two hours as it is, and one of the most remarkable sights ever shown on the screen is the panoramic view of the immense audience of a hundred and fifty thousand people. Although all of the scenes are shown as the audience saw them from across the lagoon, there are a great many close up scenes, especially of the important characters, such as La Salle, Laclede, Chouteau, DeSoto, Lafayette, in the pageant, and St. Louis as a child and as a man; Gold, Imagination, and all the other principal figures in the masque. The film is extensively advertised as the largest group of actors ever brought together before the camera on the largest stage in the world. The Columbia charges twenty-five cents admission for the entire lower floor, and ten cents for the balconies.

The readers of the Times have selected Miss Naomi Childers of the Vitagraph Co., as the most popular screen player in St. Louis. The Times first conducted an elimination contest lasting over ten weeks, which narrowed the vote down to ten contestants, after which the final balloting was started. Miss Childers, who spent her childhood in St. Louis, won with 12,063 votes. Mary Pickford was a close second with 11,121, and King Baggot, who is another home town citizen, followed with about ten thousand. The others in the final race were: J. Warren Kerrigan, Francis X. Bushman, Kathlyn Williams, Crane Wilbur, Rosemary Theby, Thomas Santschi, and Anne Shaeffer, the last three named are also St. Louisans. The voting was very spirited. Russell T. Edwards, the moving picture editor of the Times, says his assistants worked like beavers tabulating the ballots during the last few days of the race.

Charles Durbin, proprietor of the Booker T. Washington theater at 23d and Market streets, is having four thousand feet of film made for the St. Louis Motion Picture Company which will depict negro life in St. Louis. The film will show moving pictures of prominent colored citizens, views of large churches, hospitals, high schools, and other institutions devoted to the use of the Afro-American race. Mr. Durbin is a well known and influential colored citizen of St. Louis, and his theater, the Booker T. Washington, is thoroughly up-to-date and modern in every way, seats eight hundred people, has a splendid ventilating system, and renders an excellent program of photoplays and vaudeville.

GIEBLER.

INDIANA.

TO EVERY person inserting a twenty-five cent want ad three times, the South Bend, Ind., News-Times is giving free a ticket to the Orpheum theater.

Quite a little "to do" has been raised in Centerville, Ind., due to the determination of the city council to tax Manager Hulbert of the Hulbert picture show house $25 a year, and the fears of Centerville citizens that they will lose their "movie" house. So wrought up are the citizens that they have started a subscription list to pay for Hulbert's license. The manager says he will leave town first before donating $25 a year to the town treasury. He says he cannot accept the subscriptions of patrons of the house since it is the principle of the thing he is fighting.

L. E. Holwager of the Little Grand theater, Madison, Ind., has purchased of the Switow Amusement Co., of Louisville, Ky., the lease and good will of the Dream theater recently remodeled by the Switow Company. The theater here is one of the handsomest in this part of the country.

Evansville is seeing its own annual field day exhibition on the screen at the Criterion theater. The films were made in May by Charles Randall of the Magnet Film Company. The scenes showing the collapse of the stand where 50 persons were injured has been cut out of these films.

A paper discussing the moral and educational advantages of the motion picture was recently read before an appreciative audience of the Civic Improvement Organization of Michigan City. The speaker impressed her hearers with her facts showing the enormous possibilities for good or bad held out to the picture men.

"The Last Days of Pompeii" crowded the Arcade and the Lyric at Attica recently. Seats were at a premium.

Sam Young is constructing a new and up-to-date airdome in Terre Haute. Young hopes to open the new house this month.

The Terre Haute Grand Opera House will devote one whole week to the exhibition of "The Christian," with eight reel Vitagraph feature.

Improvements at the remodeled Princess, Elkhart, which has just opened with a pleasing program, including a new picture screen, nine electric fans and shortening of the picture throw thirty-five feet.

The high temperature of the last few days has been felt throughout the state by the motion picture men, some of the managers closing their houses temporarily so big was the decrease in attendance. Manager Willard of the Palace, Greensburg, decided to close his place this summer to theatrical attractions and will offer moving pictures as soon as the heat wave passes.

WILLIAM.

NORTHWESTERN NEW YORK.

THE New Lyric Theater, Buffalo, which, according to an announcement of the management, would close for the season, has been reopened with moving pictures.

The Academy Theater, Buffalo, has dropped vaudeville for the summer, exclusively showing moving picture features.

An aviator representing the Buffalo Enquirer flew over that city recently and dropped copies of the paper from his machine. In the paper's were tickets for several prices furnished by local theaters and business houses. Among the prizes were season's passes to Shea's Theater and the new Hippodrome Theater, Buffalo.

G. A. Keating, manager of the Jubilee Theater, Buffalo, has changed the policy of his house. He has reduced his price of admission during the week from 10 cents to 5 cents. He is maintaining the same high standard of shows as heretofore, however. Extra attractions are provided for his Sunday shows, at which the price is ten cents.

E. L. Hyman has been appointed assistant to Harold Edel, manager of the Strand Theater, Buffalo. Mr. Edel has returned from New York, where he has arranged for moving picture features.

Bruce Fowler has been appointed assistant to M. Siotkin, manager of the Olympic Theater, Buffalo. Mr. Fowler was formerly with the Griffin Amusement Co., of Toronto, Ont.

BILLY BISON.

NEW ENGLAND.

EXHIBITORS generally in this section have watched with considerable interest the career of the Eastern Theatres Company. This company was organized mostly by stock sold by the promoters, who used the advertising columns of the newspapers liberally. The stock was first placed on the market about a year and one half ago. Although considerable stock was sold, the corporation recently found itself in financial difficulties, due chiefly to the ill-advised policy of the management, who insisted upon wasting much money on vaudeville used in connection with the moving picture programs. The death of Frederick Elliot, one of the officers of the company, due to suicide, brought things to a climax in the week of June 1, when the directors met, and voted to oust John H. Kimball from the position he held as general manager. Samuel Grant, of the firm of Campbell and Grant, was secured to take up the general management. This move is considered a very wise one, as Mr. Grant is acknowledged to be one of the ablest and most efficient moving picture men in all New England. Mr. Grant reports that very recent financing of his has placed the Eastern Theatres Company in a strong financial position, and that the company has more than sufficient assets to offset any liabilities. The entire system of the company will be reorganized, and the style of shows in the various theaters changed to suit local conditions. Mr. Grant's first move was to close the Majestic Theater, in Keene, N. H., on June 6, and to reopen this house on June 13. The Majestic was painted during the week it was dark, and several other renovations were made. E. L. Campbell, who formerly managed the Majestic, was again placed in charge of this house. The policy of the Majestic has been changed from moving pictures and vaudeville to a straight picture show. The theaters controlled by the Eastern Theaters Company are the Art, Orange, Mass., the Premier, Newburyport, Mass.; the Casco, Portland, Me., and the Majestic, Keene, N. H. If Mr. Grant fails to make a success of this new proposition of his, it will be the first time he has failed since he entered this business some nine years ago. The theaters on this circuit are all free and clear of mortgages, and it is predicted that the company will forge ahead rapidly.

Harry F. Campbell, manager of Warner's Features at Boston, due to increased business, has opened a branch office in Portland, Me., at 515A Congress Street, over which presides William J. Ankerlie. In this way the fast-growing Maine trade will be handled more efficiently and quickly.

Although the Ways and Means Committee opposes it, the "House" on Beacon Hill, Boston, has advanced the bill forbidding the keeping of motion picture machines in schools or public buildings, and providing for inspection and licensing of operators through a legislative stage.

June 15 saw the third week of the Universal's special feature, "Neptune's Daughter," at the Tremont Theater, Boston. Business holds up well, despite the heat.

The Wilcox Theater, Savin Rock, West Haven, Conn., is now doing its usual big summer business. The policy at the Wilcox is feature pictures, changed every two days.

The people in charge of education in Springfield, Mass., are partial to moving pictures, as an aid to instruction, and the Buckingham School there is to be equipped to this end. A fireproof shed is being built in the new school auditorium, where the moving picture machine it to be operated.

Manager B. Streeter, of the Bijou Theater, Greenfield, Mass., finds that his business holds up well, and may remain open all summer. The photodrama "Creation" was featured by Mr. Streeter with unusually good returns, June 8-13.

The Lawler Theater, Greenfield, Mass., operated by the well-known Lawler Brothers, is now playing a policy of vaudeville and pictures. N. J. Lawler attended the meeting of the Eastern Theatre Managers Association in Philadelphia, and was elected a director of that organization.

At the present time the American Feature Film Company, Boston, is the New England distributor of the Lasky film productions, but when the Paramount Picture Corporation begins to release next fall, the Lasky features will be handled in New England by the Famous Players Film Company of New England, Boston. By arrangement, all "Class B" features of the last mentioned concern are to be transferred to L. Mayer, of the American Feature Film Co., who will handle them through this territory. "Class B" features include all multiple reel subjects, but Famous Players or All Star subjects.

On June 9, the Maine State Branch of the Moving Picture Exhibitors' League of America held a meeting at Portland, Me., which was largely attended. At this meeting it was decided to relinquish the charter as a member of the National League, and a committee was formed to immediately reorganize the present organization into one that would be absolutely independent and without affiliation with any state or national body. The move was decided upon only after a most prolonged discussion, after which a shore dinner was served at Mitchell's on the Cape Shore.

At Keith's Theater Boston on the week of June 8, moving pictures were shown of the three elephants presented to the city's zoo by subscription of school children. Other pictures shown here included the Dorchester Day Exercises, the Arlington Celebration and the Country club at Allston, Mass.

HENRY

Advertisers

Will kindly note that all Special Copy intended for the

SPECIAL NUMBER

must be in our New York Office on or before Thursday, June 25. This is our Only Special Number of the Year, and will be more interesting this Year than ever before.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

17 Madison Avenue

New York City

PHILADELPHIA.

M. GOLDSTEIN, manager of the Aurora Theatre, 628 Morris Street, Philadelphia, owing to the hot weather on June 13, closed his theater, and will reopen about the first of September.

The William Penn Theatre, Lancaster and Fairmont Avenues, Philadelphia, on May 30 closed one of the most successful seasons in the history of that playhouse. W. Miller has entrusted the placing of the house in first class condition with the painters and decorators. The house will reopen some time in August.

Six Atlantic City amusement proprietors were fined for running wide open on Sunday, May 31. Their places were tightly closed the following Sunday, and with the piers and the houses of the board walk operating with the "slow pedal" for four official lightning might strike a second time. Sunday at Atlantic City was very quiet as well as being dry.

The Star Theatre, 2023 North Seventeenth Street, has been sold by Harry Weinrich to Elizabeth P. George, subject to a mortgage of $7,500. The structure in which it is located is known as the Hall Building, and has been used for a moving picture theater for some time.

On Monday, June 8, Dr. Samuel G. Dixon, State Health Commissioner in his warning to the public to avoid stuffy theaters and demand pure air, good ventilation and safety in the moving picture theaters, said: "The value of some inexpensive form of amusement is obvious, but there are certain conditions which the purveyor of such entertainments should consider due his patrons and which they should in turn demand. Proper ventilation and cleanliness ought to be given without the asking, and when they are not provided they should be compelled. The crowding of hundred of persons into improved auditoriums that are stuffy, overheated and ill ventilated has no doubt exacted a large list of deaths from pneumonia and other infectious diseases. The public itself holds the remedy in its own hands. Use your influence to aid the health authorities in their efforts to improve housing conditions. If you are a patron of the moving picture shows, observe the proprietor has provided proper ventilation and cleanliness. Avoid the close, ill-smelling or vented atmosphere, lest you pay the exorbitant price of headaches, colds or pneumonia."

Contract was awarded to George Hogg for the erection of a theater at Seventeenth and Atlantic Streets, for the Tioga Realty Company. The theater has a 42-foot entrance and a seating capacity of 2,000. The name has not yet been announced.

With the office of the company at Asbury Park, The United Motion Picture Corporation was incorporated with a capital stock of $200,000 by the Secretary of State on June 8, at Trenton, N. J. The incorporators are James O. Welsh and Frank B. Huston, of New York, and Fred W. Heimann, of Wilkesbarre.

D. Rawlinson, manager of the Belmont Airdome, has announced that it is his intention to open this airdome about July 3. Mr. Rawlinson is the manager of many airdomes in the city and reports business good with the Alfresco.

Partnership was dissolved on June 2 between Abele Hughes and Gerhard Fischer proprietors of the Liberty Feature Film Exchange, with a place of business at 1126 Vine Street, Philadelphia. Mr. Fischer by buying out his former partner now is the sole owner.

Charles Lenz has announced that Youngs' Old Pier will be opened June 22, with a 2,500 seat moving picture house which are to be shown continuously. The pier, which has undergone alterations for the past months, will have been in first-class condition by that time.

The Appollo Theatre, 1247 N. 52d Street, Philadelphia has changed its prices which were formerly five cents for general admission, and ten cents for a reserved seat to ten cents an entire house.

The Amsterdam Film Exchange of this city, which has been considering a new location for the past few months, moved to its new quarters at 1256 Vine Street.

The film manufacturers throughout the state have been requested by the State Department of Labor and Industry to designate a point where the establishment will secure the department's inspector can confer in the matter of safety and sanitary methods in the safeguarding of the employees. It will also be urged that this same person be chosen as an operator, as the place will be more or less specialized to offer suggestions and to perform many duties that will add to the efficiency of the work. Many of the manufacturers are interested in other industries in addition to the photoplay.

Plans are being prepared for the erection of a one-story brick and terra cotta theater 47 x 110 feet to be situated at 249 N. Broad Street, Philadelphia. Architect M. H. Dickinson is making estimates on the structure.

On June 29 an application will be made to the Governor of Pennsylvania by Joseph Merlino, Edward Hagan, James Castello and Antonio Ringold, each of a charter for the Majestic Amusement Company, the object of which is to conduct parks of picture houses for the display of moving pictures.

The Universal Screen Company, Incorporated, Erie, Pa., with a capital stock of $50,000 has applied with the Secretary of State for a charter. The purpose of the corporation is to buy, sell and manufacture screens. Business with the Universal is very good.

CONGDON.

LICENSED FILM STORIES

ESSANAY.

THE DARING YOUNG PERSON (June 30).—James Ward, a prosperous young lawyer, falls in love with a pretty girl he sees passing in a limousine. Later, he meets her quite accidentally and is surprised when she enlists his aid in securing a letter for her from the home of a wealthy broker, that necessitates his burglarizing the place at midnight. Ward agrees and meets with the most startling of adventures in consequence. However, he wins the girl—even with the permission of the man whose home he enters—and is not arrested in the bargain.

THE FABLE OF "THE GOOD FAIRY" (July 1).—Once there was a broad girl who had nothing to do except the two-by-four midget known as her husband, so she decided to help the poor. She thought it was a big help to the lowly and uncultured to see what a real razmataz lady was like, so when she was all hooked up behind, she galloped forth to do things to the poor. When she arrived in the tenement district, all the little tuffies between the switch track and the city dump rallied round the Queen and gave her three hearty cheers. The little dears had been to the movies, and they sure knew how to do honor to a regular sure-enough Queen. When she called on Mrs. McGinnis and told her it was a crime to have children, she sure started something. Mrs. Peacock got wise to the fact that the lower classes were unworthy, so she devoted her time to the latest and most improper dances. In the meantime the McGinnis family increases, while the tuffies became the white hopes of the future.

SOPHIE GETS STUNG (July 2).—The five leading citizens of Snakeville determine to marry Sophie. Each tries to outwit the other and many complications arise that are decidedly humorous. After all the trouble they go through, they are finally disheartened and leave Sophie pining after them. Thus it is that Sophie gets stung.

BRONCHO BILLY'S PUNISHMENT (July 4).—Drink makes a brute of Broncho Billy and he does not realize what he is doing when under its influence. His wife and children are mortally afraid of him when he is in this condition and keep out of his way. At the saloon one day he provokes a quarrel with the one doctor of the town and wounds him with a shot from his gun. Broncho's children playing Indian, get their father's gun and the little girl is shot. The doctor is called but can not come and the little girl dies a victim of her father's craving for the demon rum. Broncho Billy realizes the punishment that has been sent and vows never to touch liquor again.

TRINKETS OF TRAGEDY (Special—Two Parts—July 3).—Frederic de Peyton-Reuter had known riches all his young life, and like his father before him, became an enthusiast over curios. It was while visiting a curio shop that he met the proprietor's niece, Miriam. He had gone there to have an ivory fan repaired. Fangbone, the shrewd Russian proprietor, knew that Frederic was fascinated with his niece, and for that reason delayed repairing the fan. It was a bright brisk afternoon, when Reuter called for the fan in his fifteenth trip—he had learned to love Miriam. Irtski, an enemy of Fangbone and a member of a black hand gang, steals cautiously into the merchant's private office and prints an insignia on the broken fan leaf, which means "death." Reuter, as we said before, called at the shop for his fan and to see the pretty Miriam. There was a shot, and as he turned about he saw the lifeless body of Fangbone falling to the floor. Miriam cried to her lover to leave at once, and when the police entered, they found her sobbing her heart out, over the death of her uncle. The revolver was found at her side and she was accused of the murder. Hyde, the famous detective, is engaged to solve the mystery by Major Alex Monro, Reuter's counsel. The detective gathers all the evidence, arranges a plot and finally captures the real murderer. Miriam is exonerated and Reuter claims her for his own.

KALEM.

THE FLAW IN THE ALIBI (Special—Two Parts—June 29).—Blair, bank cashier, conceives a hatred towards Walter, his assistant. The cashier is heavily in debt. Later, he discovers that Walter and Ruth, his employer's daughter, are in love. Blair, who also loves Ruth, plans to get his rival out of the way. Knowing there will be a large sum of money in Mr. Fielding's private safe the next night, Blair decides to burglarize it and throw suspicion upon Walter. He writes an anonymous letter to the boy, requesting him to be at a certain spot at ten o'clock the following night.

Walter gets the letter the next day and carelessly places it in his desk. Blair abstracts it. That night his victim leaves Ruth shortly before ten o'clock, pleading an important engagement. Blair meanwhile burglarizes the safe. After setting the hands of a large clock in the room at 10, he throws it to the floor. The man makes his escape and arrives at the home of a friend as ten o'clock strikes, thus establishing an alibi. Walter waits at the spot designated in the letter and finally goes home believing himself the victim of a joke.

Because they are the only men who know the combination of the safe, suspicion is directed toward the cashier and his assistant when the burglary is discovered the following morning. The clock indicates the hour of the robbery to Pierce, a detective. Blair readily establishes his whereabouts at ten o'clock, while Walter, unable to prove an alibi, is arrested. Later, Pierce discovers the clock had been tampered with and his suspicion falls upon Blair. The cashier becomes intoxicated and loses the decoy letter. Pierce finds it and becomes convinced of Blair's guilt. Confronting the man in the office, the detective places before him the evidence he has discovered. Terror-stricken, Blair breaks down and confesses.

THE WIRE CHIEF'S REWARD (June 30).—Jack, a wire chief, is betrothed to Helen. The boy sees Vance attempting to flirt with the girl and promptly knocks the scoundrel down. Later, Vance learns that the telephone officials are about to send a large sum of money out of town by special messenger. Securing the aid of Bud Haley, his pal, Vance plans to get possession of the money.

The wire chief is atop of a pole on the outskirts of a village when he sees Vance and Haley leap out of the shrubbery on the side of the road and hold up the approaching messenger. The crooks knock the man unconscious and tumbles him into the road. Leaping into the machine, the men dash away.

Cutting into the line, Jack sends word of what has transpired. Descending to the ground, the wire chief mounts his motorcycle and goes in pursuit of the highwaymen. A short cut brings him ahead of the thieves and he holds them up at the point of a revolver. Securing the money stolen from the messenger, Jack mounts his machine and speeds away. Wild with rage, Vance and Haley give chase.

An auto containing the sheriff and his posse have been sent to the scene of the holdup. Jack meets the men and a trap is arranged for the thieves. A hail of bullets greets Vance and Haley. The men are captured after a desperate pistol duel. In recognition of his work in bringing about the capture of the crooks, Jack is made manager of one of the company's branch offices.

THE FATAL PORTRAIT (Special—Two parts—July 1).—Ralph, engaged to Jane Winthrop, a girl of wealth and position, loses his heart to Liane, his model. Jane discovers the state of affairs and plans to rid herself of her rival.

Ralph finishes a portrait of Liane, which he intends to submit to the Academy. Jane, realizing that the artist intends to break their betrothal, cleverly arranges a denouement which causes Ralph to believe Liane unworthy of his love.

Not content with what she has achieved, Jane, in her jealousy, resolves to destroy the portrait of her rival. She visits Ralph's studio during his absence. Just as the girl is about to slash the portrait, she hears someone coming. Alarmed, she hides behind the canvas. Her fiance enters.

In his bitterness, Ralph seizes a knife and drives it through the portrait, severely wounding Jane. The girl falls to the floor unconscious. The artist is horror-stricken. The janitor, who enters a moment later, sees the man standing over Jane's body with a knife in his hand. The man calls the police. Ralph is arrested.

Jane is taken to the hospital, where her life is despaired of. As a last resort, the surgeons suggest the transfusion of blood. Hearing of this, Liane offers to undergo the operation. Jane's life is saved. Remorse-stricken, the girl confesses. Ralph is freed. To make amends, Jane requests that Liane and Ralph become man and wife.

FLEEING FROM THE FLEAS (July 3).—Brown and Jones, who both love Clementine, are invited to a dance at the girl's home. Both men hire dress suits. While Jones is shaving, his dog hops on the chair containing the dress trousers and industriously searches for fleas.

The fleas get in their fine work while Jones is dancing with Clementine. The girl views his antics with amazement. The suitor finally steals out to the balcony where he removes his trousers in his search for the pests. At the same instant, Brown's trousers descend to the lawn, our into the garden. He sees his rival's trousers drop from the balcony railing and steals them despite Jones' pleas. Donning the trousers, the man returns to the ballroom.

Jones hides in a clothes closet, but is discovered by Clementine's father. The man chases him. The police, summoned, arrive upon the scene mounted on skeleton steeds. Meanwhile, contribution overtakes Brown who squirms and wriggles in an effort to combat the fleas. Jones tumbles into a fountain and is captured. He tells his story. And while the guests laugh, Brown can only scratch.

TROOPING THE COLORS (July 3).—It is England's belief that nowhere can a finer body of troops than the Life Guards be found. With every man at least six feet tall, and superbly accoutered, the Life Guards present a striking appearance.

Upon state occasions, the colors of the various regiments embraced in the Life Guards are trooped amid impressive ceremonies before Buckingham Palace, the royal residence. The spectacle attracts thousands of sightseers. This feature affords a striking series of views of the ceremony.

THE POLITICAL BOSS (July 4).—Tom purchases the Rayville Clarion, a newspaper, from Judge Moore, who is about to run for Mayor. Believing Moore to be a fit candidate, Tom promises him the Clarion's support. Moore owes his candidacy to "Owl" Jackson, a political boss. Nonpareil Jones, a tramp printer whom Tom has befriended, overhears the boss tell one of his henchmen that Moore is to be merely a figurehead. Jackson drops a letter revealing a scheme to loot the city.

Jones picks the letter up and gives it to Tom. Unable to lay the infamous scheme before Moore, who is out of the city, the newspaperman proceeds to hammer the Judge's party. Moore is furious when he learns the Clarion now opposes his candidacy. When Tom, who has fallen in love with Clara, the judge's daughter, calls to see his sweetheart, Moore orders him from the house. Worried by the Clarion's opposition, Jackson determines to destroy Tom's plant. Jones, sleeping in the office, is awakened by the political boss, who is preparing to burn the place. The two fight. Jones is knocked unconscious, after which Jackson sets the building ablaze.

News of the fire brings Tom to the scene. Knowing that Jones sleeps in the plant, the owner dashes into the burning building and rescues Jackson's victim in the nick of time. Jones revives and lays bare Jackson's crime. The boss attempts to flee, but is caught by Tom and locked up. The boy then informs Judge Moore of the plot to loot the city. Convinced that he had been unjust to Tom, Moore begs his forgiveness.

EDISON

THE REVENGEFUL SERVANT GIRL (Seventh of the Wood B. Wedd Series—June 29).—In spite of numerous disappointments, Darby Jenks had not yet given up all hopes of marrying off his friend, Wood B. Wedd. After several terse periods of severe cogitation, he decided that Angela Havens would make Wood B. Wedd the finest sort of a wife. When he broke the news to Wood B., that gentleman was distinctly pleased, Angela suited his own ideas a great deal more than several of Darby's selections. With all the arder of his romantic disposition, Wood B. courted her, and at last, she accepted him.

But he reckoned without Araminta, a poor working girl. Once or twice Wood B. smiled at her and each time, Araminta's heart fluttered with delight.

When Araminta learned that her heart's adored had fallen into the clutches of the designing Angelia, she immediately attempted suicide in eight different ways. Since none of them were particularly effectual, she cast about for some other means of giving expression to her true feelings. The means she finally chose was a sleeping mixture. On the morning of Wood B. Wedd's wedding day, Araminta put the aforesaid sleeping mixture into Wood B. Wedd's coffee.

Shortly afterwards, Wood B. arrived at a sudden conviction that sleep was the most blessed of Nature's gifts. So he slept. The time for the ceremony drew near. Still he slept. Darby Jenks shook him by the shoulder, jumped on his stomach, and treated him generally without consideration, and still he slept. Finally, by means of alarm clocks, gongs, ice water, and severe physical chastisement, Wood B. was partly aroused. As soon as his friends ceased their ministrations, Wood B. returned to his slumbers.

When they finally got him thoroughly aroused, it was the minute of twelve. The wedding was to take place at noon. It means little to say that Wood B. dressed hurriedly, and so rushed to the church. No mere words can express his flight through the obstacles in his path, and when he got there, it was too late, Angela had gone home.

THE MYSTERY OF THE FADELESS TINTS (Eighth of the Chronicles of Cleek Series—June 30).—James Redd was the true cause of Sir Harman Blench's greatness. Redd had discovered a secret preparation which, when added to an ordinary dye, absolutely prevented the pigment from fading out. "Blench's Fadeless Tints" had won a fortune, and a baronetcy for Sir Harmon. In spite of the fact he cheerfully allowed Sir Harmon to realize the major part of the gain from his discovery, James Redd would never tell the secret of the wonderful dye. Sir Harmon tried every means in his power to persuade the old man to divulge it, without success. Finally, he encouraged his daughter, Gladys, to be very nice to Ernest Redd, the old dyer's son, in the hope that she might discover the secret.

When Gladys failed in her attempt, gave up in disgust, and told Ernest that she did not love him at all, that young man shot himself. A letter which he wrote to his father resulted in James Redd resigning from the Blench factory. Without him, "Blench's Fadeless Tints" were a hollow mockery, and to the prayers and threats of Sir Harmon, the old man was more obdurate than ever. Finally his mind was disabled by his grief, and he fled into the country, where he took refuge with the Spencers. Here, after many eccentricities, he prepared his room in an easily odd, and freakish manner. Shortly afterwards he disappeared for two weeks. When he returned, he was apparently deaf and dumb in addition to being violently insane.

Arthur Spencer naturally greatly worries, solicited Cleek's assistance. Cleek listened to the entire story, and taking with him a pair of handcuffs, accompanied the young man to his home.

(Continued on page 1858)

We are the Only Authorized Booking Agents for Brewster's Millions

with EDWARD S. ABELES for Illinois Indiana Wisconsin

The Federal Court Has Said So

Read the Decision of Judge Mayer

Court Enjoins Lasky Company Judge Mayer Holds That Celebrated Players Company Should Have "Brewster's Millions"

LASKY BREACHED THE CONTRACT

In an opinion filed in the Federal Court in the suit brought by the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Film Company against the Celebrated Players Film Company arising out of the action of the Chicago Board of Censors in refusing to grant a permit for the showing of "Brewster's Millions," Judge Mayer held that the plaintiff and not the defendant had breached the contract between the two companies and enjoined the Lasky company from leasing the photo-play to the Famous Players Film Co.

The Court reviewed the terms of the contract entered into by the film companies last January which provided for the release of twelve feature plays at monthly intervals, drawing attention to the fact that the agreement contained a clause stipulating that in the event the Board of Censors refused to grant a permit for the production of any of the plays the defendant would not be obligated to accept it, and the plaintiff might then lease it to some other company.

When the board refused to grant a permit for "Brewster's Millions," the Court held, the plaintiff appeared too hasty, and instead of giving the defendant a reasonable opportunity to secure a rehearing leased the film to the Famous Players Service, a competitor of the defendant in its territory.

"The affidavits are convincing that the Celebrated Players Film Co. was anxious to have this play of 'Brewster's Millions' and did everything that fair-dealing business men would be expected to do."

We are the Only Authorized Booking Agents also for the

Jesse L. Lasky Photoplays

THE SQUAW MAN, THE MASTER MIND, THE ONLY SON,
with Thos. W. Ross; THE MAN ON THE BOX, with Max Figman and Lolita Robertson and the others

Address the Leaders in Filmdom's Progress

Celebrated Players Film Company

Eighth Floor, Schiller Building, CHICAGO

ALFRED HAMBURGER, President FELIX F. FEIST, General Manager

Calendar of Licensed Releases

Current Releases

MONDAY, JUNE 22, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—Song of Sunny Italy (Drama)
EDISON—The Basket Habit (Comedy)
KALEM—The Show Girl's Glove (Special—Two parts—Drama)
PATHE—Max, The Magician (Comedy)
—Historic St. Cloud (Travel)
SELIG—Me An' Bill (Special—Two parts—Drama)
—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 33 (News)
VITAGRAPH—Maria's Sacrifice (Drama)

TUESDAY, JUNE 23, 1914.

CINES—A Midnight Guest (Special—Two parts—Dr.)
EDISON—A Foolish Agreement (Drama)
ESSANAY—The Countess (Drama)
KALEM—The Conductor's Courtship (Comedy-Drama).
LUBIN—Nice Nursey (Comedy)
—Brown's Big Brother (Comedy)
MELIES—A Good Time Spoiled (Comedy)
PATHE—Glacier National Park in Winter (Educational)
—The Marmot (Educational)
SELIG—The Servant Question Out West (Comedy)
—Doc Yak and the Limited Train (Comedy)
VITAGRAPH—The Passing of Diana (Special—Two parts—Drama)

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 24, 1914.

EDISON—The Mysterious Package (Comedy)
—On the Ice (A Demonstration of Fancy Skating at Wengen, Switzerland (Sports)
ESSANAY—The Epidemic (Comedy)
KALEM—Through the Flames (Special—Two parts—Drama)
LUBIN—The Greater Treasure (Special—Two parts—Drama)
MELIES—Mother (Drama)
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly, No. 42, 1914 (News)
SELIG—Somebody's Sister (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—The "Bear" Facts (Comedy)

THURSDAY, JUNE 25, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—The Ragamuffin (Drama)
ESSANAY—Sophie Finds a Hero (Comedy)
LUBIN—The Candidate for Mayor (Special—Two parts—Drama)
MELIES—A Peculiar Inheritance (Comedy)
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 34 (News)
VITAGRAPH—Happy-Go-Lucky (Comedy-Drama)

FRIDAY, JUNE 26, 1914.

EDISON—The Man In the Street (Special—Three parts—Drama)
ESSANAY—The Chasm (Special—Two parts—Drama)
KALEM—An Elopment in Rome (Comedy)
—Labor Demonstration in Hyde Park, London (Topical)
LUBIN—A Practical Demonstration (Drama)
SELIG—The Captain Chair (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—The Old Maid's Baby (Comedy)

SATURDAY, JUNE 27, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—A Spanish Omelet (Comedy)
—Ribbons and Boxing Gloves (Comedy)
EDISON—Dolly Plays Detective (Tenth of the "Dolly of the Dailies" Series)—(Drama)
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy's Jealousy (Drama)
KALEM—The Gypsy Gambler (Drama)
LUBIN—Who's Boss (Comedy)
—His Sudden Recovery (Comedy)
MELIES—A Shadow on the Wall (Special—Two parts—Drama)
SELIG—The Right To Happiness (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—His Wife and His Work (Special—Two parts—Drama)

Advance Releases

MONDAY, JUNE 29, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—The Honor of the Law (Special—Two parts—Drama)
EDISON—The Revengeful Servant Girl (Seventh of the "Wood B. Wedd" Series) (Comedy)
KALEM—The Flaw In the Alibi (Special—Two parts—Drama)
PATHE—Visit to Paris (Travel)
—Rapids and Water Falls of New Zealand (Scenic)
SELIG—The Leopard's Foundling (Special—Two parts Drama)
—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 35 (News)
VITAGRAPH—The Gang (Drama)

TUESDAY, JUNE 30, 1914.

CELIO—The Bondage of Evil (Spec.—Two parts—Dr.)
EDISON—The Mystery of the Fadeless Tints (Eighth of the "Chronicles of Cleek" Series) (Drama)
ESSANAY—The Daring Young Person (Com.-Dr.)
KALEM—The Wire Chief's Reward (Drama)
LUBIN—The Walko Sisters (Comedy)
MELIES—One Suit of Clothes (Comedy)
PATHE—A French Village in Senegal, West Africa (Travel)
—Venomous Serpents (Zoological)
SELIG—Hearts of Men (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—The Poor Folks' Boy (Special—Two parts—Drama)

WEDNESDAY, JULY 1, 1914.

EDISON—Back to the Simple Life (Comedy)
ESSANAY—The Fable of "The Good Fairy" (Comedy)
KALEM—The Fatal Portrait (Special—Two parts—Drama)
LUBIN—The Living Fear (Special—Two parts—Drama)
MELIES—The Monk's Sacrifice (Drama)
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly, No. 43, 1914 (News)
SELIG—The Empty Sleeve (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—The Circus and the Boy (Comedy)

THURSDAY, JULY 2, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—The Goat (Comedy)
—The Firemen's Social (Comedy)
ESSANAY—Sophie Gets Stung (Comedy)
LUBIN—The Shadow of Tragedy (Special—Two parts—Drama)
MELIES—Womanly Curiosity (Comedy)
—The Prescription (Special—Two parts—Dr.)
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 36 (News)
VITAGRAPH—Two Stepchildren (Drama)

FRIDAY, JULY 3, 1914.

EDISON—The Shattered Tree (Special—Two parts—Drama)
ESSANAY—Trinkets of Tragedy (Special—Two parts—Drama)
KALEM—Fleeing from the Fleas (Comedy)
—Trooping the Colors (Topical)
LUBIN—The Doom of Duty (Drama)
SELIG—Making Good with Her Family (Comedy)
—Doc Yak Wishes (Comedy)
VITAGRAPH—A Train of Incidents (Comedy)

SATURDAY, JULY 4, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—The Cracksman's Gratitude (Drama)
EDISON—Molly, the Drummer Boy (Drama)
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy's Punishment (Drama)
KALEM—The Political Boss (Drama)
LUBIN—It's a Shame (Comedy)
—The Kidnapped Bride (Comedy)
MELIES—Hidden Death (Special—Two parts—Drama)
SELIG—The Little Hobo (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—The Toll (Special—Two parts—Drama)

WELCOME, good-nights, etc., in fact every wording in theatre announcement slides, beautifully illustrated and handsomely colored, 35 cents each, 3 for $1 00. Special slides made to order.
AMERICAN SLIDE & POSTER CO., First National Bank Building, CHICAGO

Klaw & Erlanger

PRESENTING

Well-Known Plays in MOTION PICTURES

PRODUCED IN

BIOGRAPH

STUDIOS

ANNOUNCE SEVEN DAYS

IN THREE PARTS

The sensational comedy success which had a record-breaking run of four hundred and two consecutive performances at the Astor Theatre, Broadway, New York

Now scoring international success

THE FATAL WEDDING

IN THREE PARTS

CLASSMATES

IN FOUR PARTS

BILLIONAIRE

IN THREE PARTS

STRONGHEART

IN THREE PARTS

LORD CHUMLEY

IN FOUR PARTS

BOOKED THROUGH GENERAL FILM COMPANY EXCLUSIVELY

Special photographs and two styles of one and three sheet posters and three styles of eight sheet posters available

Calendar of Independent Releases

Universal Film Mfg. Co.

SUNDAY, JUNE 21, 1914.

ECLAIR—The Blunderer's Mark (Western-Drama).....
FRONTIER—The Gun Men of Plumas (Drama).....
REX—The Boob Detective (Comedy).....

MONDAY, JUNE 22, 1914.

IMP—Papa's Darling (Comedy) .....
STERLING—The Flirt (Comedy).....
VICTOR—The Silent Witness (Two parts—Drama)....

TUESDAY, JUNE 23, 1914.

CRYSTAL—In Wrong (Comedy).....
GOLD SEAL—Lucille Love, The Girl of Mystery (Series No. 11) (Two parts—Drama) .....
UNIVERSAL IKE—Universal Ike, Jr., In a Case On the Doctor (Drama) .....

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 24, 1914.

ECLAIR—Dead Men's Tales (Three parts—Western Drama) .....
JOKER—Willy Walrus, Detective (Comedy).....
NESTOR—The Den of Thieves (Drama).....
UNIVERSAL—Animated Weekly, No. 120 (News).....

THURSDAY, JUNE 25, 1914.

IMP—The Skull (Two parts—Drama).....
REX—The Woman in Black (Drama).....
STERLING—A Jealous Husband (Comedy).....

FRIDAY, JUNE 26, 1914.

NESTOR—Sophie of the Films (Series No. 4) (Comedy)
POWERS—The Love Victorious (Two parts—Drama)..
VICTOR—The Slavey's Romance (Drama).....

SATURDAY, JUNE 27, 1914.

"101" BISON—The Old Cobbler (Two parts—Western-Drama) .....
JOKER—Love and Electricity (Comedy) .....

SUNDAY, June 28, 1914.

ECLAIR—Prince Willy (Comedy).....
—Nutty and His Father (Comedy).....
FRONTIER—On the Verge (Drama).....
REX—Lost by a Hair (Comedy).....

MONDAY, June 29, 1914.

IMP—Adventures of a Girl Reporter (Two parts—Drama) .....
STERLING—It's a Boy (Juvenile-Comedy).....
VICTOR—A Twentieth Century Pirate (Comedy-Drama)

TUESDAY, June 30, 1914.

CRYSTAL—The Girl in Pants (Comedy).....
—Her New Hat (Comedy).....
GOLD SEAL—Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery (Series No. 12—Two parts—Drama).....
UNIVERSAL IKE—Universal Ike, Jr., and the Vampire (Comedy) .....

WEDNESDAY, July 1, 1914.

ECLAIR—Snow Drift (Two parts—Drama).....
JOKER—Bess, the Detectress; or, Tick, Tick, Tick (Comedy) .....
NESTOR—The Lost Arrow (Drama).....
UNIVERSAL—Animated Weekly, No. 121 (News).....

THURSDAY, July 2, 1914.

IMP—The One Best Bet (Comedy).....
REX—The House Discordant (Two parts—Drama).....
STERLING—The Crash (Comedy).....

FRIDAY, July 3, 1914.

NESTOR—Those College Days (Comedy).....
POWERS—Pearl of the Sea (Drama).....
VICTOR—(Title Not Yet Announced).

SATURDAY, July 4, 1914.

"101" BISON—The Hopes of Blind Alley (Three parts—Drama) .....
JOKER—Captain Kid's Priceless Treasure (Comedy)...

Mutual Film Corporation

SUNDAY, JUNE 21, 1914.

KOMIC—The Deceiver (Comedy).....
MAJESTIC—The Severed Thong (Two parts—Drama).
THANHOUSER—The Outlaw's Nemesis (Comedy-Drama) .....

MONDAY, JUNE 22, 1914.

AMERICAN—The Painted Lady's Child (Two parts—Drama) .....
KEYSTONE—(Title Not Yet Announced).....
RELIANCE—Our Mutual Girl, No. 23 (News).....

TUESDAY, JUNE 23, 1914.

BEAUTY—The Tale of the Tailor (Comedy) .....
MAJESTIC—The Burden (Drama).....
THANHOUSER—For Her Child (Two parts—Drama).

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 24, 1914.

AMERICAN—Blue Knot, King of Polo (Drama).....
BRONCHO—Desert Thieves (Two parts—Drama)...
RELIANCE—Izzy's Night Out (Drama).....

THURSDAY, JUNE 25, 1914.

DOMINO—Frontier Mother (Two parts—Drama).....
KEYSTONE—(Title Not Yet Announced).....
MUTUAL WEEKLY—Number 78 (News).....

FRIDAY, JUNE 26, 1914.

KAY-BEE—The Voice at the 'Phone (Part Two) (Two parts—Drama) .....
MAJESTIC—The Idiot (Drama) .....
PRINCESS—Professor Snaith (Comedy).....

SATURDAY, JUNE 27, 1914.

KEYSTONE—(Title Not Yet Announced).....
RELIANCE—The Broken Barrier (Two parts—Drama)
ROYAL—A Hasty Exit (Comedy).....

SUNDAY, June 28, 1914.

KOMIC—The Wild Girl (Comedy).....
MAJESTIC—The Tavern of Tragedy (Two parts—Drama) .....
THANHOUSER—The Widow's Mite (Comedy).....

MONDAY, June 29, 1914.

AMERICAN—The Little House in the Valley (Two parts—Drama) .....
KEYSTONE—(Title Not Yet Announced).
RELIANCE—Our Mutual Girl, No. 24 (News).....

TUESDAY, June 30, 1914.

BEAUTY—Via the Fire Escape (Drama).....
MAJESTIC—(Title Not Yet Announced).
THANHOUSER—The Harlow Handicap (Two parts—Drama) .....

WEDNESDAY, July 1, 1914.

AMERICAN—Nature's Touch (Drama).....
BRONCHO—Shorty Gets Into Trouble (Two parts—Comedy) .....
RELIANCE—Izzy, the Detective (Drama).....

THURSDAY, July 2, 1914.

DOMINO—His Hour of Manhood (Two parts—Drama)
KEYSTONE—(Title Not Yet Announced).
MUTUAL WEEKLY—Number 79 (News).....

FRIDAY, July 3, 1914.

AMERICAN—Mein Leiber Katrina Catches a Convict (Comedy) .....
KAY-BEE—The Heart of a Crook (Two parts—Drama)
PRINCESS—The Decoy (Drama).....

SATURDAY, July 4, 1914.

KEYSTONE—(Title Not Yet Announced).
RELIANCE—The Weaker Strain (Two parts—Drama)
ROYAL—Did She Run (Comedy).....

DESIGN plus MATERIAL and WORKMANSHIP

That is what you get when you invest your money in a motion picture machine.

Investigate carefully every detail of a machine before buying it and also ask the opinion of those who have used it.

The design of the Simplex Projector is simple, easily understood, permits of quick adjustments, replacement of parts, threading, and last but not least, absolutely flickerless; rock steady projection.

Better materials cannot be purchased. We import some of them from foreign countries.

The precise workmanship is a revelation to expert machinists and master mechanics who have studied our methods.

Proof of all the above is found in the testimony of our army of well satisfied customers.

You never hear a knock from the man who runs a Simplex. Every Simplex user is a Simplex booster.

Make sure your money is safely invested in a

Simplex

MADE AND GUARANTEED BY

THE PRECISION MACHINE CO. INC.

317 East 34th St. New York

Write to-day for Catalogue A.

(Continued from page 1852)

Standing before the old imbecile, Cleek shook his head in kindly sympathy. Then he suddenly leaned forward, clamped the handcuffs on the lunatic's wrists, and pulling off the false beard and wig, discovered Sir Hermon Blench. Sir Herman, suspecting that Redd had concealed the secret formula somewhere in his room, had kidnapped him, and taken his place in disguise. After the trapped nobleman was removed, Cleek found the formula behind the wall paper, and gave it to Arthur Spencer, to whom old Redd intended it to go.

BACK TO THE SIMPLE LIFE (July 1).—Mr. and Mrs. Van Dyke belonged to that curious group of people known as flat dwellers. They lived in a comfortable little apartment in the outskirts of the city, and were very happy. Unfortunately, they didn't know it. Mrs. Van Dyke had long cherished a desire to live in the country. Her imagination pictured the most charmingly Arcadian scenes wherein she and Van should live lives of angelic ease amid the peaceful clucking of chickens, and the lowing of kine.

One day, overmastered by her desire, she went to a real estate agent, and told him exactly what she wanted in the way of a farm. The real estate agent nearly fainted, but his natural savoir faire came to his rescue and allowed him to brace up sufficiently to assure Mrs. Van Dyke. A few days later, the real estate agent sent word to Mrs. Van Dyke that he had exactly what she wanted. Mrs. Van Dyke was so delighted with the agent's glowing description that she persuaded her husband to rent the place on the spot. They made immediate arrangements for leaving, packed their furniture on an automobile van, and set out for their new home, without ever having seen it.

When they did see it, they had their first real shock. To say that it was not exactly like the agent's description, is extremely mild. It was battered and weatherbeaten, and tumbledown and everything else a self-respecting house should not be. After Van Dyke had fallen through the front porch; after they had wrestled vainly with a stubborn door; after they had suffered from the simple curiosity of their new neighbors; after they had attempted to cook their dinner on a smoking stove; after a night of inconceivable torment; after a two-mile walk for drinking water in the morning after all these things, the Van Dykes arrived at the sudden conclusion that the country was all very well in its way, but—so they went back to their apartment in the quiet, peaceful, city.

THE SHATTERED TREE (Special—2 parts—July 3). As frequently happens in the best regulated families, one of the Norwood boys was a success, and the other a failure. Harry, by strict attention to business, had won his father's respect and esteem. Jack was a spendthrift—a cheerfully idle vagabond who was hail-fellow-well-met with half the men in town, and who was perfectly willing to allow his brother to keep up the family reputation for hard work. Unknown to his father, however, Harry was deeply involved in speculation. A sudden crash in the market threatened to wipe out his margins completely, and put him in desperate need of money. Returning home late one evening, he opened the little wall safe in the drawing-room, and took out a large sum of his father's money. Just as he had put it into his pocket, he heard a noise. Mr. Norwood had been aroused, and was coming down the stairs. Just at that moment, Jack entered—intoxicated. Harry thrust the money upon his dazed brother, and waited. Mr. Norwood came upon them, saw the empty safe, noted Jack's condition and the damning evidence of guilt in his hands. Without a word, he took the money from Jack, and pointed to the door. In order not to break the old man's heart, Jack shouldered the guilt, and went West.

Shortly afterward Harry was taken into the firm. His financial affairs went from bad to worse. At last, he used $50,000 of the firm's money to cover his shortage. The market plunged again, the money was wiped out, and Harry wrote a note to his father and shot himself. The note explained his own guilt and Jack's innocence. Meanwhile Jack had gone West, and done several other things. He had made a rich strike in a gold mine, and had fallen in love with Marjorie Boone, the daughter of his partner. When he learned of his brother's death, and the desperate condition into which the firm had been thrown by Harry's speculations, he immediately set out for the East. When Marjorie playfully accused him of attempting to desert her, Jack told her that his love would last as long as the tree beneath which they were standing.

When Jack went East, an envious rival attempted to poison the girl's heart against him. When the great tree was shattered by lightning in a terrible storm, Marjorie was finally convinced that her lover would never return. When Jack, after setting his father's firm on its feet, came west again Marjorie, crazed with anguish, had wandered away from home. Jack came upon her as she stood on the edge of a great cliff. Then it happened that Marjorie forgot her fears and sorrows and turned back to home and happiness with the man she loved.

MOLLY THE DRUMMER BOY (July 4).—When old Bill Mason left his home to join the Continental army, he left his daughter, Margaret, in the care of Mrs. Lane, a neighbor. Mrs. Lane was something of a shrew, and poor Margaret, who missed her father terribly, soon found her life unbearable. After she had borne Mrs. Lane's tyranny as long as she could, she decided to run away and find her father. With the aid of her playmate, Jack, Margaret procured a suit of boy's clothes and a drum. One afternoon, she put on the clothes, took the drum, and stole silently away. After a long, weary tramp, she at length arrived at a camp of Revolutionary soldiers, and enlisted as a drummer boy. The rough soldiers, disgusted with the effeminate characteristics of their comrade, christened the supposed boy "Molly."

But Molly had a chance to prove her mettle a few weeks after her arrival in camp when Washington, hard pressed by the pursuing British, called for volunteers to remain behind and keep the fires burning while the army stole away. Molly stayed with the men, and beat her drum to give the British the impression that the army was still in camp. Washington's army escaped, and the British, occupying the camp in the early morning, found only dying camp fires. Molly, escaping through the British lines, came across her father on sentry duty. Mason, a weakling and a drunkard, had deserted to the British army. Captain Morley, of the English army, making the rounds, found Mason in conversation with Molly. Fearing treachery, he fired. Mason was killed, but Molly, wounded in the arm, escaped.

The next morning, when she was again attempting to escape through the lines, after a night in the woods, she met Morley a second time. He drew his pistol, but this time Molly was a little quicker, and Morley dropped with a bullet through his heart. After many vicissitudes, Molly at last arrived in the American camp, where she fell into the care of kindly Surgeon Bell. Discovering that his patient was a girl, he had her removed to his mother's home, but not until Molly, wearing her uniform for the last time, had received an honorable discharge and the public thanks of her great chief, Washington. When Molly was perfectly well, the good doctor took her back to her old home, and brought Jack, her old friend, back to live with them.

BIOGRAPH

THE SONG OF SUNNY ITALY (June 22).—In the country of his dreams Tony waited to hear from Camela, little realizing all his letters to her were lost. Cheer came in hearing the song she had sung so often from a window he passed each night. His interest grew in that home. Later, he was able to do a great service for it and found to his surprise his lost Camela.

THE RAGAMUFFIN (June 25).—The old gar-

A Great Chance

I have at a reduction a lot of Power's No. 6A machines furnished for exhibition at the Moving Picture Exposition at Grand Central Palace last week.

These 6A's

can be had complete with or without motor drive and are guaranteed as good as NEW with the regular Power's one year guarantee.

Without motor drive complete

$197

Regular Price $260.00

With 110 volt motor drive complete

$235

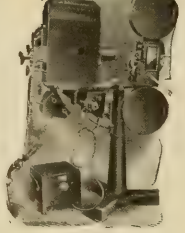
Regular Price $297.50

THESE MACHINES ARE THE LATEST NUMBERS.

Wire your order with remittance

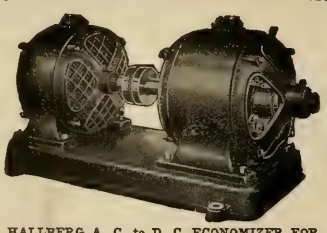
FIRST COME FIRST SERVED

DISTRIBUTOR OF THE CELEBRATED MIRROR SCREEN



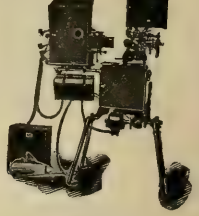
SIMPLEX

Distributor Simplex Machines



HALLBERG A. C. to D. C. ECONOMIZER FOR ONE OR TWO LAMPS.

Distributor Power's 6-A Machines



POWER'S 6A

Factory Selling Headquarters for POWER'S, SIMPLEX, MOTIOGRAPH and EDISON MACHINES, "HALLBERG" STANDARD A. C. ECONOMIZERS, "HALLBERG" D. C. ECONOMIZERS, MERCURY ARC RECTIFIERS, MOVING PICTURE MACHINES and FLAME ARC CARBONS. I EQUIP THEATRES COMPLETELY

Free Circular on all makes of M. P. Machines, but Hallberg's Big Catalogue, 100 pages, costs you 25c. by mail

J. H. HALLBERG "THE HOUSE OF QUALITY" 36 East 23rd Street, New York

Gaumont

ATTENTION!

SHIPPING DATE
JUNE 13th

Gaumont

KRONSTADT

ADAPTED BY MAX PEMBERTON
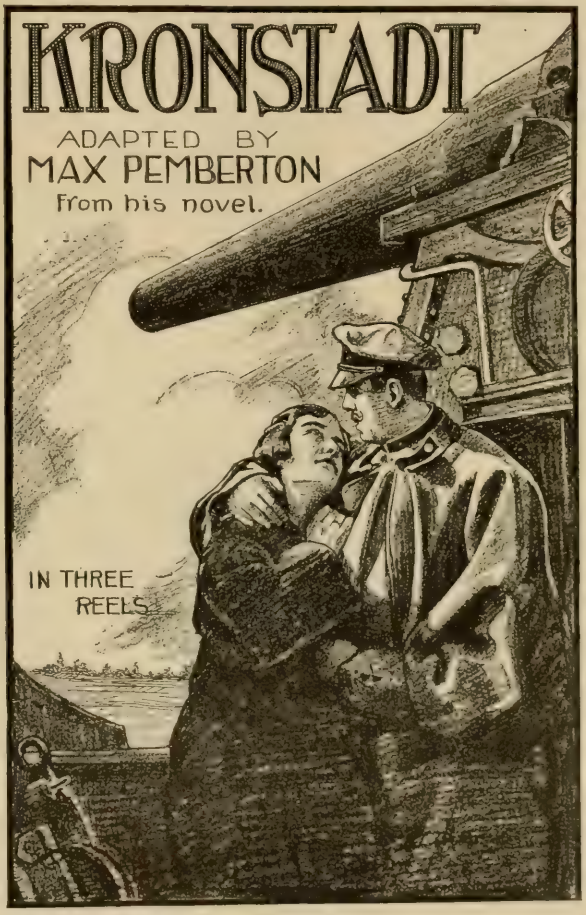
From his novel.



Every Kind of Publicity Matter to Push Trade

Gaumont Co

110 W. 40th St., New York City

EXCEPTIONAL POSTERS

dener was discharged to give place to a younger man. His boy was nicknamed "the Ragamuffin" by the young son of the rich man. But "Ragamuffin" opened all their eyes, saving both his father's honor and the rich man's money and enabling the parents to correct their son before it was too late.

A SPANISH OMELET (June 27).—Barney O'Malley, owner and chef of the Tarantula Cafe, makes Spanish omelets of antique eggs and starts something. He has a daughter, Carmen, who is flirtatious. She has a romantic elopement with dashing young Don Jose, a tabasco Spanish lothario. The incidents following are rapid and ludicrous. Carmen transfers her affections to Don Bullo, a bull fighter, which results in a duel between him and Don Jose, the weapons being long loaves of bread. Barney finds his daughter trying to separate her admirers, and snatches her bald-headed. The surprised duelists embrace and congratulate each other on escaping conjugal relations with one so false as Carmen. Barney lassoes her with her own raven locks and leads her home.

RIBBONS AND BOXING GLOVES (June 27).—Clarence is a ribbon salesman in a department store and is infatuated with Betty, a lovely sales girl in the same store. Clarence has a rival, "Bull" Mulligan, the lightweight champion pugilist. Accompanied by his manager and trainer, "Bull" comes to the store and interrupts Clarence's attempt to win Betty by pushing his face in. He gives Betty a ticket to his benefit and then forces a complimentary on Clarence, advising him to see him knock out all comers. Clarence is so annoyed that he visits Professor Small's boxing academy and takes lessons in the manly art. He acquires a dark optic as the result of his first lesson. The next morning the boys and girls at the store have fun at Clarence's expense. He is excused and again goes to the boxing academy, this time acquiring more knowledge of the game. The night of the benefit Clarence attends, challenges the champion and knocks him out. Betty has a change of heart, rushes out to the stage to embrace him, but is haughtily rejected as Clarence is heartily hailed as the new "champ."

MELIES.

ON THE BEACH (June 16).—Both Leonard and Florence were married and were spending a holiday at the Crystal House. Helen, the wife of Leonard, found it impossible to join her husband on the day he expected her. Her mother had a sharp attack of rheumatism, and her devoted daughter stayed at home to nurse her. Florence's husband, a gentleman on the Corn Exchange, likewise found it impossible to join her. Corn had risen, and he wired that he could not rejoin her until later.

The absence of his wife did not in the least affect Leonard, who had seen Florence, and having discovered the telegram from her husband wired to his wife that he agreed that she should stay home and nurse her mother, to whom they could not show too much care, solicitude and tenderness. On the other hand, Florence was very much annoyed because Harry did not join her, and writes threatening that if he did not come to her immediately she would flirt with a gentleman who at that very moment was throwing tender glances at her. Having dispatched the letter she went down to the beach for a bath, and Leonard later acted the part of the gay cavalier.

He was quite resigned to the situation, but his wife, reading between the lines, realized that he was up to his old tricks, and leaving her mother to get better as best she could, hurried to the seashore, where she saw the two bathing together in the sea. Going to Leonard's bathing box she took his clothes back with her to the hotel. A few minutes later Harry came on the scene, and Florence recognized him on the beach. She hastily left Leonard and ran to her husband's arms. Leonard, concluding that he had had sufficient bathing for the day, came ashore and missed his clothes. Rushing back to the hotel he found a note from his wife telling him to come back to Paris at once, and as the film closes we see him getting what he deserved.

AT THE MERCY OF THE WAVES (June 17).—Skipper John was compelled to discharge Rogers, one of his sailors, for misconduct. Nursing his grievance, Rogers one morning cut adrift one of the skipper's boats for revenge, unaware that the little daughter of the skipper was lying asleep in the bottom of the little craft. Afterward Rogers was as much alarmed as the parents to find that his action, done in the spirit of revenge against the father, had brought, so far as he knew, disaster upon the little girl who was beloved by all. Realizing the extent of his crime he seized a rowboat and went in search of the boat, which he had sent adrift some hours before. He was just in time, for Suzette's position was becoming perilous when he found her and brought her back to her parents. Skipper John was about to give Rogers a well-deserved thrashing when his wife and daughter appealed for mercy, and the man who had brought such a trouble into their lives was pardoned.

PILLS AND PILLS (2 parts—June 20).—Jujube, a chemist, and his wife are impressed by a play on hypnotism which they have seen, and while discussing it with their employees, Jujube receives a note from his chum asking him to attend a gay supper at the Red Lion Cafe. At this point, a timid girl enters the chemist's shop and asks for something to overcome nervousness to enable her to meet an old gentleman who is going to assist her. Jujube in the spirit of a joke gives her sleeping tablets. Upon her leaving the apothecary shop, an old sport comes in for stimulating pills and the chemist gives him some of Dr. Faust's Famous Youth, Courage and Self-Confidence Restorers.

To get away from his wife so that he can attend the supper, Jujube decides to imitate a character in the play who has been hypnotized. He fakes the part and leaves to meet his friend; he is followed by a servant, who in turn informs his wife. As Jujube enters the Red Lion Cafe with his supper companion, he encounters the old sport and the timid girl (each having taken the prescribed pills) his wife, his assistant and cashier. He keeps up his face, refuses to recognize his wife. She believes he has lost his mind and complications of the most humorous kind ensue.

MAUDE FEALY

THANHOUSER FEATURE STAR

Read a few pertinent comments straight from the exhibitor-manager who speaks from the box-office. What the manager wants is a picture with a star that draws. When it is all said and done, a popular star is what the big manufacturer needs to sell his pictures.

SUPERB ACTING

I take the liberty to enclose you a copy of the photos which we recently had made to distribute in the Furby Theatre. Even at the present day you are Winnipeg's favorite actress, but my only regret is that you are not appearing often enough on the screen, as there is a constant demand for pictures in which you are starring.

We are presenting today "The Musician's Daughter." Your acting in this play is superb.

Wishing you success and hoping to see you often on the screen in the near future,

Yours very respectfully,
Mgr. H. A. Morton,
Furby Theatre, Winnipeg, Man.

HE MADE $100 MORE

Whenever I advertise a Maude Fealy picture, I play to capacity business and figure that I have made easily $100 more than I would have done with any ordinary programme. Mgr. Edward J. Rhoad, Crescent Theatre, Eureka, Utah.

MAUDE FEALY FEATURE THANHOUSER RELEASES

King Rene's Daughter	3 Reels
Little Dorrit	2 Reels
Moths (Ouida's Novel)	4 Reels
Frou Frou (Daly's Version)	4 Reels
The Golden Cross	2 Reels
The Woman Pays	3 Reels
The Runaway Princess	3 Reels
The Musician's Daughter	2 Reels
Kathleen, the Irish Rose	2 Reels
Should She Forgive Him?	2 Reels
Pamela Congreve	4 Reels
The Legend of Provence	4 Reels
The Orphan's Romance	2 Reels
The Jewish Maiden's Wrong	2 Reels

A REGULAR RIOT

I want to inform you that all Thanhouser productions you have appeared in have proven the biggest money getters of the season without exception.

You were exceptionally popular here, when connected with the Stock Company, but, to use the slang expression and not paying any undue compliments, you have been "a regular riot" in pictures, so much so that several of the theatres in this city have had special photos printed to give away at the matinees. Your picture, "Kathleen, the Irish Rose," will be played at the Provence on the 14th and 15th, and this will be the biggest two days the theatre will have known, as for the past two weeks the manager has been busy answering 'phone calls regarding the picture.

You can always count on a royal reception whenever you appear in Winnipeg.

J. H. Booth,
Mgr. The Mutual Film Corp. of Canada.

SELIG.

THE SERVANT QUESTION OUT WEST (June 23).—The Briggs family has moved West to a euphonious settlement known as Jaw Bones. There are comparatively few women in that locality, and correspondingly large numbers of men; so that they lose their first hired girl quickly by the marriage route. Not to be put out of business, they import another girl. Soon they lose her and send East for another. History repeats itself over and over again. Cupid is continually robbing them of kitchen help. They finally order through a relative in the East in whom they have confidence, "a plain girl." This does not break their spell of luck very long, for "the plain girl" is greedily snapped up. Then they order "a postively homely girl," but the market of their ill luck keeps steady, and the positively homely girl is fortunate in getting a wealthy husband. Women—short and tall—old and young—are imported, but they are quickly snatched up by the matrimonial aspirants in Jaw Bones. Finally they solve their problem by hiring a Chinaman. Nobody wants him; so they keep him and have good cooking and some fun in the bargain.

SOMEBODYS SISTER (June 24).—The son and daughter of a well-to-do farmer, wearying of loneliness, aspire to locate in a big city. Frank, the son, receives an offer of a position in the city, and his sister, after much persuasion, is allowed to go also, to study art. They settle down in a boarding house and Frank soon becomes infatuated with a resident chorus girl, Nan Mosby, and consequently does not pay much attention to his sister, Edna. She, in turn, meets a wealthy artist, Herbert Knox, and he, impressed by her beauty, requests her to pose for him as a model. She consents, and gradually begins to fall under his influence. Her brother, Frank, is so much engrossed with his own affairs that he has no time to give to her, believing that her innocence and ignorance will be sufficient safeguards. One morning he tucks a note under her door, stating that he will not be home to dinner. A few moments later he receives a letter from his father asking him to return home at once, expressing anxiety over Edna.

That evening the artist invites Edna to dine with him. She consents and they go to a cafe where Knox has arranged a private dining-room. In the adjoining room, Frank and Nan Mosby, are also dining. Knox orders wine, and Edna, ignorant of his intentions, drinks it. He soon becomes very familiar. He persists and she screams out her fears. Frank hears the cry and recognizes his sister's voice. He breaks into the room, and bats Knox between the eyes. The latter staggers to his feet and demands to know by what right Frank interferes with him, and is met by the retort: "She is my sister." The sinister artist looking at Nan, responds: "How about yourself? This girl may be somebody's sister." Frank then realizes the dangerous direction that his sister may have been drifting. He takes his sister and Nan from the cafe, and leaves Nan at the stage door, shaking hands silently. The brother and sister then wire home. An hour later as the father and mother are preparing to retire, their phone rings and they receive the following message: "We are coming home for good." The anxious parents bow their heads in prayer as the picture dims.

THE CAPTAIN'S CHAIR (June 26).—Captain Jeremiah Snaggs, a retired sea captain, loves to sit in his old armchair, with his feet extended on a rough wooden stool, watching the ocean day by day. His nephew, Augustus, thinking that he will inherit the money he believes the captain possesses, induces him to desert his little cottage by the sea, come to the city, and live with them. The Captain, however, will not part with his old armchair and stool, much to the disgust of Augustus and his wife, who consider their finely appointed apartment disfigured with such trash.

One day the Captain observes little Tim Malone trying to sail a crude boat. He fixes up the craft and tells the boy stories about his seafaring adventures. The Captain's stool is a souvenir of one of his bloody encounters in a cannibal isle. One day the Captain has a terrible pain in his back and directs the butler to buy him a porous

Atsco Chats

RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREENS for everybody! You need the Best to get the Money. ATSCO will help you by sending you the Screen and letting it pay for itself. New Screen — New Terms to fit every Pocket-book. Ask ATSCO, Inc., 218 West 42nd Street.

ATSCO Makes Customers— Not Trades.

plaster. When the butler returns, the Captain overhears Augustus say that he hopes the plaster will draw the money out of old tightwad. A short time thereafter, the captain dies and leaves the old armchair to Augustus, and the stool to his boy friend, Tim Malone. Augustus is disgusted, gives the chair to a second-hand man, who in turn sells it to an antique dealer, who transforms it into a "genuine Dutch antique," and re-sells it to Augustus for $250.

Some time afterward, this unworthy reads a newspaper article about Tim finding $5,000 in the leg of the stool that had been bequeathed to him by the old sea captain. Augustus then thinks there must be some treasure in the old armchair and advertises for it. He is besieged by people who bring dilapidated furniture. Finally, the second-hand man puts in an appearance with the original back of the chair, which he sells for $250. Then Augustus finds to his chagrin that his antique is the old Captain's chair. He tears it to pieces, hoping to find money, but only get kindling.

THE RIGHT TO HAPPINESS (June 27).—Kate Morris, born amid an environment of poverty and neglect, has never known real happiness, but in spite of all has maintained a certain dignity that wins the dislike of creatures like Dan Weaver, and others of such coarse fibre. At the age of twenty, she is left alone in the world with a shiftless younger brother, Bob. He associates with Dan Weaver and his gang, and is eventually shot while escaping from a house which they had robbed. He succeeds in dragging himself home, and gives Kate the jewelry he has stolen. This is found in her possession; she is accused, convicted, and then sentenced to two years in prison. While serving time, she learns bookkeeping.

She is hardly out of prison, however, before she is shadowed by the sinister Weaver. In desperation she goes to another city, and secures a position in an office where she wins the love of John Blake. She reciprocates his affection, and when he proposes, fearing that she will lose her only chance for happiness she fails to tell John of her past, believing it is a sealed book. A short time after their marriage, John, who is treasurer of a building loan association, after the meeting takes the funds to his own home. He is trailed by Weaver, who observes the disposition of the money, and recognizes Kate, the wife. John finds that he has forgotten his books at the meeting room, and returns for them. When he leaves the house, Weaver emerges from concealment, rings the bell, and as Kate responds, forces his way into the house. She determines to fight for the money entrusted to her husband, and picks up a revolver. Weaver falls over a chair, and the revolver that he has snatched from Kate, is discharged, killing him. At this moment, John and a passing policeman hear the shot. They rush into the house, the policeman identifies Weaver as a desperate criminal; and in his death Kate's happiness is assured.

HEARTS OF MEN (June 30).—John Gaunt, called "outlaw," not a bad man, a victim of circumstances —is discovered on the edge of a desert, armed with a revolver and a water canteen slung over his shoulder. The placard at the Sheriff's office describes: "John Gaunt, wanted by the law, dead or alive." Justice or injustice, he shows the hunted man in every move. Far out over the desert he sees a man on horseback —recognizing him as Billy Stark, the man hunter. Suddenly the rider in the desert starts, stares; sees the figure in the shadow of the rock and guesses it is Gaunt. The men drift deeper into the desert. Stark leaves his horse and rifle in the shade, and stalks cautiously, revolver in hand. Gaunt fires and runs under cover. Then begins a running fight with both men firing.

Gaunt takes a drink from his canteen and shows he has his last cartridge. In the interim, Stark has been almost overcome by desert thirst. Gaunt wings Stark with a shot in the leg, but the latter is game and covers the former's hiding-place with his gun. Finally Gaunt waves a truce flag, and shouts: "I will trade you a drink for a dozen cartridges." Stark accedes the request. He drains the canteen, and Gaunt, having refilled his belt, the men are about to part, realizing that they have played the game fair. Suddenly Gaunt picks up a picture that Billy has dropped on the sand, and Billy tells him that if he lives she is to be his wife. Gaunt then reaches into his own shirt-pocket and pulls out a photograph. It is the portrait of a sweet-faced woman sitting with a boy and a curly-haired girl at her knees. Both the men stare at the picture, and Gaunt tells Billy it is his wife and babies. These grim, sunburnt sons of the desert who have fought to a truce push their revolvers into their holsters; Gaunt staggers on through the desert carrying the wounded Billie. Finally they see men and horses coming. Gaunt buries himself in a trench and escapes while Billy engages the attention of the men, and they take him away with them. Five years later shows Gaunt in the joy of a new life with his wife and children. A "dissolve" shows Billy Stark telling his own little boy of the escape in the desert. Honors are even for the two brave men.

THE EMPTY SLEEVE (July 1).—Adam Bent, a soldier who lost his arm in the Philippines, has a lovely daughter, Clara, who is much admired by John Ellis, a young collegian. His parents know nothing of this attachment, and the mother, who is a cold and ambitious woman, has arranged a match for her son, and writes telling him of her plan. As he is about to sail for Germany to take a post-graduate course, she tells him the girl of her choice will be a passenger on the same ship. On his graduation, John tells of his love, but his mother is obdurate, and intercepts a letter from Clara in which she tells John that they must be married before he goes abroad.

Clara, while waiting for an answer, frequently sits at her father's knees and to keep him from observing her stress of mind, asks him to recount how he lost his arm. He tells her that it was in rescuing an officer in another regiment, and how, in the confusion, resulting from arrival of a rescue brigade, he lost sight of the officer and never even knew the name of the man whose life he saved at his own sacrifice.

John's mother tells her husband of the state of affairs, and insists that they must make some settlement with Clara. Amos, the husband, does not approve of this, but is overcome as usual, and visits Clara's home on the unpleasant errand. Adam Bent is cutting flowers in his garden, and Clara is alone in the house. When Adam returns with his arms full of roses—he stops in the doorway, and the two men gaze at each other, fixedly. Adam drops the flowers as he raises his arm in salute to the man whose life he saved. He asks Adam for the hand of his daughter in marriage for his son, insisting that it is to take place immediately. On his return Amos gives his son the intercepted letter and he is furious; but Amos tells him that Clara and her father are there. A stormy scene ensues between Amos and his wife, and when she hears of Adam's sacrifice to save her husband's life, she relents. Adam takes up his abode with the man who was the cause of his empty sleeve, and the young people are happy.

MAKING GOOD WITH HER FAMILY (July 3).—Jimmie Stone is in love with a girl who has a large and varied sort of family. She understands their eccentricities better than he does, and suggests that he had better remain at her house and get acquainted with the several limbs of her family tree before he becomes affiliated in matrimony. She warns him it is a necessity to make a bit with her grandfather, as he is the richest of all her relatives, and must be pleased with the match. Jimmie undertakes this task and finds it not only diverting, but difficult. Grandpa is a gay old bird, but when Jimmie tries to entertain him, he gets up and walks away, leaving Jimmie stunned. Ruth's grandmother is another eccentric, equally hard to entertain. Besides, she has a father, a mother, and a sister, the latter being particularly peculiar, as she is "putting it over" Jimmie in embarrassing ways. Additionally, Ruth has an athletic brother, who bangs Jimmie about until he is black and blue and a dissipated brother who insists upon his accompanying him in midnight trips to cabarets, where he proceeds to fill up, the suitor forced to act as a committee of safety to get him home.

The girl acted wisely in advising Jimmie to get acquainted with the family, but he is almost half dead before he does so, and is on the verge of becoming a nervous wreck when he boldly concludes to elope with the girl. He advises the family that they are eloping and are going to live at the North Pole and to come and see them sometime. As he ties the note to the front door and rings the bell, various members of this happy family rush to the windows and shake their fists at the departing pair. The grandfather, however, has secured a front seat on their taxi, and accompanies its rapid movement by playing on a mouth-organ, as they go rushing out of the town on their wedding trip.

THE LITTLE HOBO (July 4).—The little hobo (an orphan girl) falls into charge of an idle loafer, who makes her beg for a living. She resents this, garbs herself like a boy and runs away to become a wanderer. She is discovered at a deserted hobo camp by the telegraph operator, Jimmie Maxwell, of "the lonesomest station on the West Division," and is brought into the station to get warm. The operator is having a lot of trouble with an "extra" which has strikebreakers on board coming from the South. He is interested in the Little Hobo, as she recounts her pitiful story. Following come many scenes in dissolve in the little girl's life, showing the habitations and habits of the lowly.

On the lonely station platform is Big Bill Daly with rough associates, evidently looking for the "extra." As the whistle sounds, the operator in the station tells his little guest that she will have to leave, as it is against orders to have anyone in the office. He opens the door and shows her to the baggage-room, and tells her to stay until the train goes by. He then turns to his instrument. Big Bill Daly enters unobserved, sees the revolver on the operator's table and snatches it. The operator tells him that he is as poor as a church mouse. Big Bill sneers and indicates that it is the train he is after. The operator assures him the train carries no money "only a crowd of strike-breakers." This is satisfactory to Big Bill. Those are the people he is after; indicates that he wants the train to go through without orders. Then begins a struggle between the men. The child in the next room hears the conflict, and taps encouragement to the telegraph operator, who is now bound a prisoner on the floor. While the men who have taken possession of the office are wrangling he whispers to the child: "Run to the water tank and turn on the water." The Little Hobo sneaks

Ready for

Immediate Delivery

"THE KING OF THE BEGGARS"

A powerful drama in 4 parts showing the ragged edges of society. Interesting and sensational.

"THE HUMAN WOLVES"

IN 5 PARTS

The pulsing triumph of the Photoplay Art.

COMING

"The Mysterious Mr. Wu Chung Foo"

IN 4 PARTS

Advertising matter for all of the above: One, three, nine sheets, heralds, slides, colored photos.

Write for further particulars. You'll be pleased, so will we.

FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO.

220 W. 42nd St., New York City

Candler Bldg. Phone Bryant 8486

The Perils of Pauline

If we could only take you round and have you talk to the exhibitors who have been running this great serial you would not hesitate a minute. You would book it as they did and see your box-office receipts increase, too. Pauline has proved to be the biggest money-pulling picture ever put out by any firm. It has created such a stir throughout the country both on account of the newspaper publicity and on account of the intrinsic value of the story, that it has been an enormous money-maker for the exhibitors showing it. Some of the theatres have been requested to issue reserve seat tickets for the days they show Pauline, so that the patrons could be sure in advance that they would get in to see it. There have been many disappointed people who have gone to the theatres and have found such a crowd waiting they could not get in. Do you need any better evidence that it will be a money-maker for you, too?

Pauline Pulls People—
She's A Gold Mine

Giants-White Sox World Tour

You have to hand it to Jack Gleason. The pictures he had taken by the Pathé camera man on the trip around the world are the most interesting travel pictures we have ever seen. Wonderful scenery, historical places and events, comical situations, thrilling adventures, interesting plays, notable men and perfect photography are all shown in such a way that your patrons will vote this picture the greatest they have ever seen. It is a fact that there has never before been an opportunity to get such a wonderful collection of events and place them before the public in one picture. Add to this the fact that every newspaper in the country has run column after column about the trip and you have a combination that is unbeatable. It is a foregone conclusion that this will prove the biggest money-puller you have ever had in your theatre. This is proved by the great number of telegraphic requests we have had for bookings. To get an early run you will have to hurry and place your order with one of the Eclectic branch exchanges or wire the head office direct.

Get It—Show It
Reap A Harvest

THE ECLECTIC FILM COMPANY

110 West 40th Street
New York City

"The Cream of American and European Studios"

The Stain

(6 Parts)

Here is one of the most wonderful dramatic tragedies ever placed on the screen. Made for us by Pathé from a dramatization of the famous novel by Forrest Halsey and Robert H. Davis. The action is intense. The acting is superb. The story is entrancing. The tragic fall of the clerk and the final reckoning when he is faced with the proof of what danger and suffering his action has caused create a situation which calls for the very best artists to depict. These artists are some of the best known in the motion picture world and insure the quality of the picture.

It's Some Picture

The Lion's Bride

(3 Parts)

Did you ever feel the hair on your head slowly rise as you felt there was something going to happen, something which you had no power to avert and which would mean a terrible danger to the participants? Well here you have it. Madame Emmy Destinn, the great operatic Prima Donna, enters a cage containing fourteen lions and sings a selection from one of her songs. While she is singing one of the beasts springs on the piano and is within a few feet of the singer through the song. This is a thriller if there ever has been one.

A Big Feature

ECLECTIC FEATURE FILM EXCHANGES FOR YOUR USE

ATLANTA Rhodes Bldg.	BOSTON 3 Tremont Row	CHICAGO 5 So. Wabash Ave.	DALLAS Andrews Bldg.	LOS ANGELES 114 E. 7th St.	MINNEAPOLIS 4th & Hennepin Sts.
NEW YORK 115 E. 23rd St.	PITTSBURGH 715 Liberty Ave.	SAN FRANCISCO 67 Turk St.	ST. LOUIS 3210 Locust St.	SYRACUSE 214 E. Fayette St.	CINCINNATI 217 E. 5th St.
CLEVELAND 622 Prospect Av., S.E.	PORTLAND 392 Burnside St.	PHILADELPHIA 1235 Vine St.	WASHINGTON 7th & E Sts., N. W.	NEW ORLEANS 910 Gravier St.
SEATTLE 810 Third Ave.	OMAHA 1312 Farnam St.	DENVER Nassau Bldg.	KANSAS CITY 928 Main St.

THE ECLECTIC FILM COMPANY

110 West 40th Street — New York City

"The Cream of American and European Studios"

State Rights for Sale on

MEXICAN WAR Pictures

Made Under

Special Contract with Gen. Villa

WE have purchased from the Mutual Film Corporation the rights for the entire United States on the amazing series of war pictures photographed under fire in Mexico, and now have these for sale on a states right basis.

This wonderful feature consists of seven thrilling reels, including not only hundreds of scenes taken during the battles of Torreon, Chihuahua and other famous Mexican fights, but extra scenes showing the tragic early life of Gen. Villa.

This material has never been shown except at the LYRIC THEATRE in NEW YORK, where it drew enthusiastically crowded houses.

Prints are ready for immediate delivery.
There will be enormous profits made in State Rights.
We are now ready to consider propositions.

MEXICAN WAR FILM CORPORATION

Room 1205 71 West 23rd Street New York

out of the baggage room and carries out the orders. Although the semaphore signals "safety," the fall of water through the windows of the cab alarms Bill, the engineer, and the fireman, and they stop the train. They find their suspicions are correct, rescue the bound telegraph operator and save a wreck. In gratitude to the Little Hobo (finding out that she is a girl), he takes her home and consigns her to the care of his mother.

THE LEOPARD'S FOUNDLING (Special—2 parts—June 29).—The scene opens on the road to Kingsley as Peter Herman and his wife, Anna, are trekking slowly along, she holding the baby in her arms while Balu, their idolized seven-year-old daughter, is on the seat beside her father, holding a line. The little family reach a lone clearing a distance from the roadway, and decide to camp for the night. Away from the dusty veldt, little Balu feels the joy in her young life that demands freedom, so she runs about exploring. Then is flashed in the picture a leopard that has awakened from his long day's napping and is out prowling for prey. Peter starts the camp fire and the mother busies herself about with preparations for the evening meal.

In the meantime, little Balu has wandered farther and farther away, gathering flowers, that leads her into the depths of the forest. The leopard is now between her and the friendly camp fire. The father misses the child and calls, but she is too far away to hear. Balu now shows her own confusion—is evidently lost; but widly wanders on. By the shifting light that comes through a clearing, she sees the mouth of a cave, which welcomes the weary one. The father and mother, thoroughly alarmed, have begun a search, but their knowledge of the locality avails them little. They return to their camp exhausted. In the interim, Balu, thoroughly tired out, enticed by the warmth of the cave, goes in, lies down and falls asleep. It is the leopard's den, but the cubs strangely do not resent her as an intruder. In fact, they lie all about her and her head is pillowed among them. In the morning she awakens and seems to sense danger in the presence of the mother leopard, but the great cat looks at her indifferently and does not attempt to harm her as she pets the kittens. The father and mother in their distant camp have found the child's apron, and conclude that she has been carried away by the wild beasts. They have done all they can; so they sadly break camp and go on.

Fifteen years intervene. Balu, a child of the forest, is now twenty-two years of age. She has been raised with the leopards, and is as wild and resourceful as the big felines themselves. Stanley, a young American, who is hunting in that neighborhood, comes on the scene accompanied by a party of native beaters. Night comes on and it shows the hunters making camp. The next morning they decide to separate, stalk game individually and report to Stanley, their chief. Stanley and his guide, Wamba, then go to another part of the jungle near Balu's cave. He dismounts and tells Wamba to hold his horse. He next goes forward and observes Balu, who is sitting near a pool. She sees him and springs away like a frightened deer. Stanley returns to Wamba and cautiously asks him if he has ever seen or heard of a white woman living in that locality. The latter looks at him in fear and terror, and says: "Yes, she is the Great White Spirit. If she looks upon you, you will die."

On the rock ledge beyond the leopard's cave Balu is seen playing with the leopards, and after a time she tires of the game and goes down to the jungle pool to drink. Bold Stanley has concealed himself in the neighborhood, watching and waiting. Presently his patience is rewarded. Balu comes stealthily to the pool, lies over, drinks deeply and then rolls into the warm shadows and goes to sleep. Stanley, waiting until she is fast asleep, creeps toward her and slips a noose over her feet. His companion, Wamba, is almost paralyzed with fear at this action, but is forced to come in and help hold the struggling goddess, who drops divinity and breaks into savagery when she finds that she is bound. The natives, called upon by Wamba, look upon this act of indiscretion with horror, but they are forced to obey Stanley at the point of his rifle, so they bind the screaming Balu to the back of an elephant and carry her triumphantly back to their camp.

Time passes quickly, and Stanley is now manifesting something more than a curious interest in his captive; in fact, love has come into his lonely life, and the wild girl has quickly become reincarnated with human emotions. He teaches her how to read and write as his hunters scour the country for game. His popularity, however, has not gone apace, and his capture of the White Spirit has prejudiced the natives against him. He is himself captured and threatened with death; in fact, is bound and placed upon the ledge of the leopards' cave. The natives have designed to leave him there helpless, a prey to the savage beasts. Balu comes upon the scene—the natives flee—then the leopards come, but they obey her every behest, and do not harm Stanley.

The upshot of all this is that Stanley and Balu eventually find their way to the coast, and he brings her over seas to his own home where he purposes to make her his wife. A series of comedy scenes follow in which the girl from the wilds of Africa has strange experience getting accustomed to the garments and habits of civilization. Finally things come to a pass, so that the girl wearying of it all, dons her robe of leopard's skins, and paces her lonely room in anger and deep mortification. Stanley finds her there, and observing her pondering the great step, asks her if she will stay with him in the new life, or go back to the jungle. She sees a vision of herself back in the leopards' cave, and declares in favor of the new life—and the scene fades as she drifts into his arms.

ME AN' BILL (Special—2 parts—June 22).—Young Sam, who represents "Me," and young Bill come on the scene, a pair of barefoot boys on their way to school. They stop at the old swinging gate, and there come young Jean and young Kitty, misses of tender years, who are met by the barefoot boys and permitted to carry their luncheons and books as they trudge away down the lane toward the little old red schoolhouse. After school the returning scene repeats, and the youthful gallants part from their little sweethearts with a kiss as the sun sinks low in the West. The scene changes to manhood. The boys, "Me An' Bill," call upon and court the dainty and demure maidens, Kitty and Jean, "standing with reluctant feet—where the brook and river meet." They wander in company down the woody aisles of the forest; they are seen far out on the lake drifting idly in a canoe, then follows the plighting of troth and finally marriage. Then comes the greatest epoch of life, motherhood. Jean bears a son, and Kitty a daughter, marking the beginning of the second generation.

Time flies and the babies grow to manhood, to womanhood. Love buds in their hearts, and their parents look forward to a fresh alliance with fond hope. About this time the beautiful mother, Jean, fades like a delicate flower in the glory of womanhood and dies, and her husband, Sam, now silvered about the ears, is left to walk alone and in the shadow. A cloud no larger than a man's hand brings darkness over the land; the wild drumbeat of war is heard, and brother confronts brother upon the field of battle in the great civil strife of '61. Sam's boy marches away to the battle front under the banner of the Union flag, leaving his sweetheart, Bill's girl thinking proudly of the hour when her soldier lover will return to her in triumph. Alas, Sam never comes back!

The scene changes to the vivid and spirited episodes of war, of conflict and of carnage. Sam, the intrepid soldier, while rushing ammunition forward in the face of the enemy, is slain by a bursting bomb. Then slowly the news drifts back North, and the old men who live from day to day reading their papers with eagerness see that dreadful column, double-leaded, and leading all the rest is Sam's name among the "missing." They know too well what this means. As the old men bow their heads in grief, Kitty comes in, snatches the paper, learns its dreadful import and slips silently away to sob out her grief alone. She goes down to the old mill stream, pushes out in the clumsy flatboat, buries her head in her hands, and then as the craft strikes an eddy it overturns and she is drowned. In the course of time the entire community is enlisted in a search. They find Kitty's body like another Ophelia, at rest amid the watery reeds and rushes. It is now Sam's turn to comfort the bereaved Bill, and he pushes aside his own sorrow to meet this new emergency as only a lifelong friend can. Alone in the world, bravely facing the darkling shadows, the two old friends, leaning the one upon the other, trudge homeward in the gathering gloom of the nightfall.

VITAGRAPH.

This special two-part subject entitled "His Wife and His Work," a synopsis of which is herewith published, has been substituted in place of the special two-part subject named "The Evil Men Do," a story of which was given on page 1723 of last week's issue. The latter subject will be released at a future date. Exhibitors will please note the change.]

HIS WIFE AND HIS WORK (Special—2 parts—June 27).—Worn out by incessant toil in designing an immortal frescoe, Knowles, an artist, decides on a trip to the beach to recuperate. He there

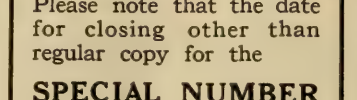
To Advertisers

Please note that the date for closing other than regular copy for the

SPECIAL NUMBER

of The Moving Picture World is Thursday, June 25.

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES



86 WALTON STREET ATLANTA, GA.

FILMS FOR SALE

40 THREE-REEL FEATURES
20 TWO-REEL FEATURES
250 SINGLE REELS
MACHINES AND SUPPLIES
ISIDOR WENIZ FILMS CO., 133 N. Gay St., BALTIMORE, MD.

Good Power's No. 5 Machine, complete, $70.00
Edison, Exhibition Model, all complete, $90.00
200 reels of film, new lot, $4.00 to $5.00
ECONOMY FILM CO.,
105 FOURTH AVE. PITTSBURGH, PA.

We Buy and Sell Second Hand Films and Moving Picture Machines
WESTERN FILM BROKERS
37 So. Wabash Ave. Chicago, Ill.

BEST OF CAMERA MEN
Furnished for all Occasions
CHICAGO FEATURE FILM CO.
4168-22 Lincoln Ave., Chicago, Ill.

PRINTING AND DEVELOPING FILM TITLES
Give us a trial. All work guaranteed.
Prompt service. Prices right.
If there is any event that you want photographed, we can furnish expert camera men.
STANDARD MOTION PICTURE CO.
Telephone, Central 2853, 5 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago

WHEN YOUR PICTURE MACHINE NEEDS REPAIRING
WHY DON'T YOU SEND IT TO US?
We have the best equipped machine shop in the country and can repair any make of machine. Write us and get acquainted.
WE BUY SECOND-HAND MACHINES.
GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO.
76 N. State St. (bet. Lake and Randolph) Chicago, Ill.

POSTER MOUNTING CLOTH
HEADQUARTERS
Our 42-inch poster cloth is recognized as the standard fabric for poster mounting. It is used by the LEADERS.
TURNER-HALSEY COMPANY 62 LEONARD STREET, NEW YORK

ANNOUNCEMENT

The Eleanor Gates Photo-Play Co., Inc.

offers State rights on the four-reel feature

"DOC"

the story of a young physician's love, a baby's peril and the feat of a horse detective, from the famous Saturday Evening Post serial

By Eleanor Gates

author of "The Biography of a Prairie Girl," "The Plow-Woman," "We Are Seven," "The Poor Little Rich Girl" and the celebrated "Cupid the Cow-Punch" stories.

The cast includes SYDNEY SEAWARD, VIVIAN BLACKBURN, HERBERT BOSTWICK, CYRIL CHADWICK, ALFRED GRADY, REGINA RICHARDS, "BABY" GRAU and "DOLLY," the horse.

Staged under the direction of Richard Garrick

In preparation for an early release:

"Soothsaying for Sue"

A three-reel comedy feature.

Address all communications to the company's office

The Eleanor Gates Photo-Play Co., Inc.

2 East Fifty-eighth Street

Studios: Mt. Kisco, N. Y.
'Phone: Mt- Kisco, 205-R

City Office 'Phone
Plaza 7940

rescues a young girl from drowning, continues the acquaintance, and shortly afterward, they are engaged. His design is accepted by the Board, winning the thousand dollar prize and the commission to paint the frescoe. He marries the girl and they depart on their honeymoon.

On their return, Knowles buckles down to his work in carrying out the commission. His wife has no knowledge of art, will not consent to his painting from female models. Driven nearly frantic by her opposition, he suffers a collapse. His wife, greatly alarmed, calls a doctor, who persuades Knowles to carry out his work as he sees fit, regardless of her feelings. On hearing this she flies into a rage and goes to her mother's, who takes her on a European trip. While on their travels, she is surprised to learn all the beautiful statues in the solemn cathedrals and show-places were posed for by living models. Heavily veiled, she then visits the exhibition of her husband's masterpiece, and overcome by the magnificence of his great work, weeps in tribute. With broadened ideas, she returns to him thoroughly repentant, and willing to enter into his labors and the joys which his love will not deny her.

THE GANG (June 29).—In a narrow street in the tenement district of a large city there lives "Toughey O'Brien," twelve years old, the leader of a typical gang of boys. While fighting with another rival gang, Toughey breaks a window in Ikey Ikenstein's pawnshop, is arrested and taken to court. He is released on parole and reports to the Probation Officer each week. The boy gets work at a small grocery store, delivering parcels. Margaret, a settlement worker and the daughter of Judge Wright of the Children's Court, is lured by Red McVane to his room on pretence that his mother is very ill. He locks the door and Toughey, hearing her scream, rescues her from Red's clutches.

A few days later, Red seeing Toughey in Ikey's store, plans with his pals to rob Ikey and at the same time have revenge on Toughey. On his way home from the Probation Officer, Toughey is dragged into Ikey's shop, which has been looted by Red and left there alone with the unconscious and wounded Ikey. Red then tells a policeman of the robbery. The officer finds Toughey in the store and on Ikey's accusation, arrests him, taking Red along as a witness. At his trial next day Judge Wright is very stern. While Red is testifying against Toughey, Margaret enters the courtroom and pointing to Red says, "That's the man who locked me in his room." She tells her story and Toughey accuses Red of the burglary. He is searched, Ikey's store key is found in his possession and Red is pronounced guilty. Toughey is reelased and sent away to Judge Wright's farm. He refuses to go without the gang, so they go along too, where after a few years of the new life Toughey and the gang have changed through kind and intelligent treatment to useful citizens.

THE POOR FOLKS' BOY (Special—Two Parts—June 30).—The great fear that they cannot keep up the interest on the mortgage on their little home and few acres of land, has burdened the Benson for years. Bradley, who holds the mortgage, is a brutal money-grabber and hounds the family continually. The father dies, leaving his widow, Kate and Ben, their son, to keep up the interest. After sacrificing almost every cent they can rake and scrape, the boy returns home one day and finds Bradley has taken his dog. Broken hearted, the lad goes to Bradley, demands his dog back and is brutally refused. That night the boy hears Bradley tell his mother she must apprentice Benny out to him and pay the interest through the boy's work. Kate dares not refuse and Bradley gives her money to bind the bargain. The boy, realizing that a life with Bradley means cruelty and abuse, runs away. In the hills he finds his dog and thinks of his mother striving alone to keep up the interest on the mortgage and decides to go back. Bradley sees him, confronts Mrs. Benson and demands the boy. Awakened at last to the true sense of protective motherhood, Kate seizes a rifle and when he starts for the loft, where Benny is hiding, she convinces the rascal she would shoot him without the slightest compunction. He cringes and she, giving him back his money, orders him out. Kate now thoroughly aroused says: "This time we will run away together," and leaving the old farm to Bradley's greedy clutches, they set off on a new day finds them driving over the hills, bravely facing the possibilities of the future.

THE CIRCUS AND THE BOY (July 1).—While out walking with his Aunt Maria, Sonny Jim, who has been left in her care by his parents, steals over to a crowd of youngsters standing entranced before some circus parade. Auntie abruptly hauls him away from the spot, and determining no evil influence shall enter his life during his stay with her, she puts the quietus on Sonny's hopes of going to the circus. Auntie sends him to town on an errand, but the boy finds the circus has arrived, and he forgets all else. He sees the dwarf and the fat lady about to elope and is given fifty cents not to tell. Auntie gives him a good scolding for forgetting what he was sent after, and Sonny decides to run away and visit the circus without permission. He tells the circus manager what became of his freaks and he decides to pass the boy off as the only tattooed dwarf in captivity. Sonny is hugely delighted with the fake tattooing business and the thought of being the cynosure of all eyes. In the meantime, Mother Dear has arrived to find out how Sonny is getting along. She and Auntie discover a note telling of the boy's whereabouts, and both rush to the circus. Sonny is making a great hit with the crowds, until he proclaims his real identity to some boy friends. This creates quite a commotion and in the excitement, Mother and Auntie rush in, grab Sonny and nearly break up the show. He refuses to have anything to do with Auntie, but is overjoyed to see Mother. At home, the tattoo marks are removed with much scrubbing, and Mother, after lecturing him, forgives Sonny, showing she understands the heart of a boy.

TWO STEPCHILDREN (July 2).—Born with an artistic temperament, Joe Leigh feels keenly the bitterness and drudgery of life on a small farm and longs to get away from it. Jabez, his uncle, who owns the farm, is a hard, matter-of-fact man, utterly out of sympathy with his nephew's ambitions. The boy's only companion is Hazel Hall, whose life is made miserable by a nagging stepmother. Joe falls heir to five hundred dollars, and Jabez tries to induce him to invest the money in the farm. Joe tells him plainly, because of his former treatment, he intends using the money to go to New York to study art. While there, Joe loses his money in a get-rich-quick scheme and, ashamed to write to his uncle, he unsuccessfully tries to make a living by selling his drawings. Home becomes unendurable to Hazel, and she comes to New York in hopes of finding Joe. She obtains work posing as a model for Cecil Grace, a young artist, but he tries to make love to her and she abruptly leaves his employ. The terror of her lonely life in the great city overwhelms her and she despondently steals forth to end it all. By a strange coincidence, Joe, homesick and tired of the struggle, wanders down to the river, where he sees Hazel fling herself into the water. He plunges in and brings the half-unconscious girl to shore. Each learns the story of the other's trials and experiences. Joe's sense of protection is aroused by her helplessness and he goes to work with a purpose. Shortly afterward, an art patron, who has become interested in Joe, gives the young man a start, which enables him to care for Hazel for life.

A TRAIN OF INCIDENTS (July 3).—Betty Browne received word she will inherit a large legacy left her by an uncle, provided she goes to Dead Man's Gulch, Arizona, and marries the son of an old friend, whom she has never even heard of. She imagines him to be a rough cowboy and refuses until her chaperone, Miss Prim, prevails upon her to investigate before deciding. Far from being a Westerner, Billy is an Eastern college chap. He receives the same information as Betty, feels certain she must be an adventuress, but Bunny, his tutor, advises him to see the affair through. By chance, Billy, Bunny, Betty and Miss Prim all take the same train, and after some amusing incidents, the four become well acquainted. The two young people fall in love, as do Bunny and Miss Prim. Bunny claims to be Billy Wells and Miss Prim, Betty Browne. The ensuing tangle convinces Betty she could never marry Billy, as she believes Bunny to be him, while Billy asserts he positively could not love Betty in the person of Miss Prim. The train stops at a station just before reaching Dead Man's Gulch and unknown to each other, the two young people get off, determined to go back East, on the platform coming face to face, and learning each other's real identity, Billy proposes on the spot. Betty accepts him and they make a wild dash for Dead Man's Gulch. On discovering the young couple have disappeared, Bunny and Miss Prim, who have become very good friends, are nearly frantic, but the lost ones turn up safely and there is a gladsome reunion. The coy Miss Prim whispers "Yes" to Bunny's proposal. Betty nestles lovingly in Billy's arms, and soon the two happy couples are speeding back East on a double honeymoon.

THE TOLL (Special—2 parts—July 4).—While traveling in Italy, John Steele, a young American millionaire, is kidnapped by Antonio Perino, and fellow members of the Camorra. They demand an immense ransom, but he defies them. Marta, Antonio's wife, feels sorry for Steele. She is left to guard the prisoner alone and Steele induces her to help him escape. He takes her to America with him to escape the vengeance of the Camorra and the girl secretly falls in love with him. Antonio furiously vows to follow Marta to the ends of the earth if necessary to fulfill his vendetta. He traces them to America and learns Steele has sent Marta to a hotel and then gone to see Elaine, his fiancee, about their recent escape. On his return, Marta tells him she has seen her husband watching the hotel. Steele offers the terrified girl a position as maid in his new home with himself and wife, which she gladly accepts, knowing it means protection from Antonio. Elaine becomes jealous of Marta and misinterpreting a conversation between the two, believes him to be unfaithful. Leaving an explanatory note for him, she sorrowfully goes to her mother's. Steele is nearly frantic and Marta decides to go away at once, despite the danger. Antonio discovers his wife's whereabouts, and stabs her. She retaliates by fatally shooting him. Steele and his father find them and Marta tells Elaine's father everything before she dies. At her request, Steele kisses her farewell. Mr. Forsythe explains all to Elaine, after which she and her husband are reunited in their love, although neither can forget the little Italian girl who saved his life.

LUBIN.

THE WALKO SISTERS (June 30).—The great Walko Sisters, billed like a circus, who in real life are no other than man and wife, walk the ties into the town of Gloucester burdened with luggage and two children. The town is wild for the night which marks the opening of "Crum Hall." Will, his wife and children are directed to the opera house followed by many curious eyes. The country men recognizes Will's wife from the hand bill, but cannot figure out who he is. Will and his wife stand before the three sheet in front of Crum Hall admiring the beautiful poster when Will remembers that he hasn't been shaved for several days. Instructing his wife to wait with the children he hustles back to the group of country men and writes them six passes for the price of a shave.

Will and his wife then locate in an attic, put the children in bed, dispose of their scanty meal and prepare to start for Crum Hall. Elated at their prospects they take a last look at the children sleeping. When Will, attracted by an odd sound, looks toward the window and sees it is pouring rain, their fondest hopes of packing the house as they did in Drift Wood are shattered. In front of the hall the manager constantly rings his bell and yells "Hot Opery Tonight." He is joined by his assistant, who has been papering the town with band bills. Along with the pouring rain comes the crowd, even to a fat woman with eight children who, when she gets inside finds they are so wet she checks them. On the stage Will has fixed it with the stage hand to pull the ropes which lift his wife in their hand balancing act. Everything goes fine until the consumptive stage hand, played out, drops Will's heavy wife on his head, pulling off Will's wig, which turns the applause and cheers of the audience to jeers and hisses. Will scrambles to his feet and tries to continue the act, but the stage hand is all in and without his aid at the other end of the rope Will cannot lift her off the ground. The audience now realizes that the Walko Sisters are not two women but man and woman, and that they are also fakes. They hurl over-ripe eggs and vegetables until Will and his wife are forced to not only leave the stage, but to take their exit from the hall through a back window.

THE LIVING FEAR (Special—2 parts—July 1).—Dr. James Brent, surgeon and psychologist, receives a strange case in the person of Richard Wayne, a young man who, although upright in all other respects, is obsessed with a monomania for appropriating diamonds. Struck by Wayne's appearance, and his unfortunate plight, Brent agrees to study his case. He allows Wayne to remain in his house, acting as his private secretary. After a few days at Brent's home, Wayne forms an attachment for Elsie, Brent's daughter. Elsie is horrified to see Wayne steal a diamond pin from a guest in the home. She follows Wayne to his room and there learns of his mania. Wayne, heartbroken by the realization of where his trouble is leading him, returns the pin and swears to Elsie to fight his strange obsession stronger than ever.

Dr. Brent has always decried the growing extravagance of his wife, whom he dearly loves, and now he holds her to a stated allowance. But the wife, Julia, continues her social ambitions, and gives a magnificent ball which plunges her into debt. At the ball one of her guests, Mrs. Gannon, loses a valuable diamond sunburst. Wayne, coming unexpectedly across the gem, is desperately tempted through his strange fascination. Secretly watching him from another part of the room is Julia. Wayne fights down his temptation and leaves the jewel where he found it. Julia, realizing that Wayne will be blamed if the jewel disappears, confiscates it. She sees a chance to emerge from her debts by pawning the jewel. Brent, when he hears of the jewel's disappearance, immediately suspects Wayne and calls upon him to give it up. Wayne vehemently denies the accusation. Brent, realizing Wayne's love for Elsie, and now believing that he is either a deliberate thief or a helpless monomaniac, commands him to leave the house. Wayne does so, after a heartbreaking farewell with Elsie. He is followed by the private detective at the ball, and next day arrested on suspicion. Julia has pawned the jewel, which is later found at the pawnshop by the detective.

At the same moment, Elsie discovers that her mother was the real thief. While she insists that Julia make a confession to Brent, the detectives are on their way to the house to arrest Julia. Julia finally gathers her nerve together and faces Brent in his study with a full confession. Brent has just received a wire from the National Medical Association electing him president of the organization, and the confession of his wife's dishonesty crushes him completely. Mrs. Gannon, the owner of the jewel, who is indebted to Brent through the saving of her life by his skill, intercedes in Julia's behalf. She prevents Julia's arrest, and finally obtains an understanding and reconciliation between Brent and his wife. Wayne has been released from custody and now, thoroughly cured, through Brent's skill and the realization of Elsie's love, goes to her to ask her to become his wife.

THE SHADOW OF TRAGEDY (Special—2 parts—July 2).—Robert Sterling, while inspecting old books at a club library in a distant city, avails himself of a few idle moments to write a lover-

BIGGEST PICTURE NEWS OF THE DAY

THE Box Office Attraction Company, William Fox, President, has decided upon another broad step in the way of expansion. Besides operating exchanges and booking features in New York City and State, Northern New Jersey and each of the New England States ——

Additional Box Office Attraction Exchanges Will Be Opened At Once In

PHILADELPHIA CLEVELAND DETROIT
PITTSBURGH CINCINNATI WASHINGTON
INDIANAPOLIS and CHICAGO

Exhibitors in all territories of which those cities are the centers of population, will soon be in a position to have the many crowd-drawing, money-getting features that have developed the business and increased the profits of hundreds of exhibitors in the extreme eastern field.

Practical Exchange Managers Wanted

Exchange managers familiar with up-to-date methods who can point to successful careers are invited to correspond with us with the prospect of permanent and lucrative employment. All letters will be treated in strictest confidence, but only those who have established favorable reputations with exhibitors and present employers will receive serious consideration.

The Box Office Attraction Co.

130 West 46th Street : : : New York

WILLIAM FOX, President Biggest Feature House in America Telephone Bryant 7340

like note to his wife. This note he fails to date. The letter is duly addressed to "Mrs. Robert Sterling," sealed and stamped. A few moments later Sterling is stricken with heart-failure, and in his struggle closes one of the books on the letter. In time the book is replaced on a shelf without the letter being discovered.

Twenty years later, Robert Sterling, son of the dead man, brings a bride to the old home. He knows nothing of her history. Robert is of an intensely jealous nature, and his wife's actions arouse suspicions. There appear good reasons to believe that the girl, Mary, is still in communication with an unknown lover, and Robert sets a trap by leaving the house, declaring he will not return until the next day. Mary has made an appointment with the mysterious stranger and is much relieved at her husband's announcement.

Robert's suspicions have become certainties through the reading of the letter written by his father twenty years before, and which fate has now caused to be delivered, and which Robert has opened before observing that it is addressed to "Mrs." and not "Mr." Robert Sterling. Robert secretly returns to the house and follows Mary to the conservatory, where he finds her with a stranger. In a wild rage, Robert attempts to shoot the man, but Mary throws herself between and receives the bullet. Before Robert can fire again, Mary declares the stranger to be her brother, Tom, who had been a scapegrace and black sheep, whom Mary has vainly tried to save from evil ways, and whose existence she had determined to keep secret from her husband. The meeting in the conservatory was arranged that she may give him money to leave the country, he having promised to begin life anew. Robert's mother arrives upon the scene a few moments after Robert fired and now begs her son to be calm, urging that perhaps Mary has told the truth. Robert thrusts the fatal letter into her hands, demanding to know how he can ignore such proof of his wife's guilt. The mother is dumb for a moment then looks more closely at the letter and in amazement recognizes her own husband's handwriting, and calls attention to the fact that the stamp is of an issue used twenty years before. Robert cannot be convinced and is filled with remorse.

Mary's wound proves not fatal, however, and she freely forgives her husband. Tom is assisted to leave the country, he declaring that hereafter his life shall be straight. With the dissipation of the secret which has cast a shadow between them, Robert and Mary feel that before them lie years of happiness.

THE DOOM OF DUTY (July 3).—Capt. Hugh Barker and his troop of U. S. cavalry are camped near the boundary of the United States and Mexico with orders to patrol the border. Capt. Barker has met and fallen in love with Rita Valdez, daughter of Benito Valdez, a Mexican, who lives on the American side. Rita returns the captain's love. Unknown to the cavalry officer, Valdez is engaged in the business of arming recruits for the Mexican insurrectos. A band of recruits are camped in a ravine near the Mexican's house. Valdez receives word to arm his recruits and send them across the border into Mexico. The same day, Capt. Barker gets a communication from his colonel, stating information has been received that recruits for the rebels are being shipped across the border and instructing that this violation of the neutrality law be stopped at all cost.

The next day, Valdez opens cases of rifles and ammunition and arms his recruits. One of the recruits loading his rifle, accidentally discharges the weapon. Capt. Barker hears the shot and sends scouts to investigate. The camp of the recruits is found and the captain prepares his forces for a raid. When he discovers that the cavalry is advancing Valdez tries to make the recruits hide the arms and ammunition. This they refuse to do, declaring they will fight before submitting to arrest. Valdez finally prepares to resist the attack. Troopers on foot attack the camp from the sides. The other troopers, mounted, block the retreat from the mouth of the ravine. The recruits fight desperately for a time and Valdez comes face to face with Capt. Barker. The Mexican, beside himself with passion over the failure of his plans, raises his revolver to shoot the surprised captain. Before he can press the trigger, Valdez is shot by one of Barker's troopers. The recruits surrender, but Valdez manages to escape. The Mexican, terribly wounded, staggers to the door of his house, where he finds Rita waiting. She takes her father into the house, places him on a cot and starts to attend to his wound.

Meanwhile Capt. Barker looks among his prisoners for Valdez. Finding the Mexican missing he goes to the house. Rita receives the captain in the front room and denies that her father has reached home. Valdez, in the next room, separated from the front room only by a canvas curtain, hears the captain's voice. He rises from the cot and staggers to the window. Here his strength gives way, and to save himself from falling he grasps the canvas curtain. In the front room, Capt. Barker is about to leave, accepting Rita's word that her father is not in the house. Valdez's grip on the curtain tears it from its fastenings and he falls into the front room. Barker has Valdez lifted back to the cot. Then it is that Rita pleads with Barker not to arrest her father, really making the situation a test between his love for her and his duty. Barker goes into the rear room with his troopers to carry Valdez a prisoner to the camp, and discovers that Valdez is dead. Barker and his men retire from the house, leaving the girl alone with her grief.

IT'S A SHAME (July 4).—Mike Casey and Gus Schwartz like to play pinochle together, though they scrap all the time they are playing. Mrs. Casey objects to Mike staying out so late, and Mrs. Schwartz is in the same state of mind. They decide to go down to the saloon and beat up their disobedient husbands as they come out. Just before they get there, Mike and Gus have a quarrel that attracts a passing minister and he goes in the saloon to remonstrate.

Mike and Gus are talked into being sorry and they go home sober enough, making their exit through the front door. The minister leaves by the side door and it is he that gets the double blow. The women are horrified and make a quick getaway. Mrs. Casey lands home and starts to take it out on Mike, but he points to the late hour and demands to know where she has been. Now how is she going to tell him she has been beating up a minister? Mike turns the tables on her and chases her to bed, ending with a big laugh for Mike.

THE KIDNAPPED BRIDE (July 4).—Lena Krautheimer and Daniel Cassidy, escorted by Cassidy's brother officers, leave the house for the church, where they are to be married. Emil Schweitzer and Tango Heinze, two of Lena's rejected lovers, are fished out of the river, where they have attempted to commit suicide. After being revived they start for home and on the way meet the wedding party returning from the church. Angered, they plan to kidnap Lena. A fight is started, the officers leave the side of the bridal carriage. Emil and Heinze dash in, throw out the groom and gallop away with the bride. The groom (Cassidy) returns with the officers and all dash off after the kidnappers. Arriving at the minister's, Emil and Heinze have a dispute as to who shall have the bride; they fight. Emil knocks Heinze out and Lena knocks Emil out, just as the rescue party arrive on the scene. Lena faints in the arms of her chosen husband, while the cops give three cheers.

PATHE.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 41, 1914 (June 17).—Washington, D. C.—President Wilson officiates at the unveiling, in Arlington Cemetery, of a monument of soldiers of the Confederacy.

Cantania, Sicily.—Sicily is rocked by an earthquake. Eight towns are wiped out: 500 persons killed.

Quebec, Canada.—Funeral services for members of the Empress of Ireland's crew who perished when she sank are held here.

Omaha, Neb.—Twenty thousand children—Omaha's school population—make merry with drills and games at Fort Omaha.

Quincy, Mass.—The Submarine tender Fulton, newest addition to the Navy is launched here.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—The Latonia track, scene of many a famous race, opens for the season of 1914.

Annapolis, Md.—President Wilson officiates at the commencement exercises at the United States Naval Academy.

New York City, N. Y.—Resolute, Defiance and Vanitie, the three yachts contending for the America's Cup defense, race over the International Course. Resolute wins.

Gosport, England.—Shamrock IV, Sir Thomas Lipton's challenger for the America's Cup as she takes to the water while thousands applaud.

Paris, France.—The latest Paris styles in gowns and wraps for evening wear.

Comic Section.—Business is brisk with the live exhibitors at the Moving Picture Exhibition in New York.

Picture Theatres Projected

Ft. Wayne, Ind.—Sprague Green contemplates building a three-story moving picture theater, with seating capacity of 850.

Berne, Ind.—Solomon Bowsher is planning to open a moving picture theater here some time during the summer.

Terre Haute, Ind.—Hippodrome Amusement Company are planning the erection of a two-story theater and office building, 97 by 139 feet, to cost $100,000.

Mason City, Ia.—L. M. Valcentine, owner of the Unique Theater, is having plans prepared for another theater to be erected in this city in the near future.

Hawarden, Ia.—Mrs. W. A. Nelson, owner of the Electric Theater, is having plans prepared for extensive alterations to her theater. More modern equipments will be installed.

Garden City, Ia.—G. H. Strout and J. C. Tapps have opened a new moving picture theater in this city.

Galesburg, Ill.—Benjamin Huff, Jr., and William Sullivan are having plans prepared for a modern moving picture theater, which will probably be completed before the end of summer.

Steubenville, Ky.—Work on the erection of the Olympic Theater is well under way. The structure will be one of the most modern in this part of the state and will have seating capacity for about 1,000 persons.

Crowley, La.—D. E. Lyons is having plans prepared for an airdome with a seating capacity of about 1,800.

Denton, Md.—Carl A. Parker will shortly erect a moving picture theater at the corner of Main and Fourth streets. It will be modern in all its equipment.

Federalsburg, Md.—Plans are now under way for the erection of a $15,0000 moving picture theater, with a seating capacity of about 1,000.

Baltimore, Md.—Edmonson Amusement Company are having plans prepared for a one-story moving picture theater to cost $15,000.

Hagerstown, Md.—The Maryland Theater Company, care the Potomac Real Estate Company, are having plans prepared for a four-story theater building, 78 by 150 feet.

Detroit, Mich.—C. Howard Crane has completed plans for the erection of a moving picture theater on Greenwood avenue, near Calumet, for A. Cohen & Sons.

Three Rivers, Mich.—Theodore Godchalk is preparing plans and specifications for a modern moving picture theater to be erected here shortly.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—Powers Theater Building Association will remodel their theater lobby.

Duluth, Minn.—Thomas Furniss, manager of the Rex Theater, is having plans prepared for a modern moving picture theater to be erected in this city.

Duluth, Minn.—Col. Thomas Birdy is planning the erection of a moving picture theater, to cost about $35,000.

Luverne, Minn.—Peter Rober & Son have purchased a store property which they will convert into a moving picture theater.

plans prepared for a two-story theater and store building, 44 by 100 feet.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Rea Realty Company, Tribune building, art having

St. Louis, Mo.—Gallinis & Co. are planning the erection of a two-story theater building, 40 by 150 feet.

Bogola, N. J.—Carmalite Fathers are planning the erection of a two-story hall and auditorium, to cost $20,000.

New York, N. Y.—Moving Picture Film Development Co., 69-71 West 90th street, have awarded the contract for alterations to their studio to H. H. Vought & Co., 346 Madison avenue.

New York, N. Y.—Herbert Baer is preparing plans and specifications for the erection of an open-air theater to cost about $10,000 for the Economy Real Property Co.

Zanesville, Ohio.—A. A. Vinsel and Dunzweiler Bros. are having plans prepared for a $20,000 theater building. It will be known as the Imperial Theater.

Tiltonsville, O.—Harry Walker of Dillonvale, O., is planning the erection of a moving picture theatre to cost about $10,000.

Centersburg, Ohio.—Edward Haller is having plans prepared for an airdome which is to be erected shortly.

Sebring, Ohio.—O. H. Sebring is having plans prepared for a two-story brick vaudeville and moving picture theater, 40 by 90 feet, with seating capacity of 400, to cost $10,000.

Portland, Ohio.—Portland Amusement Company, Globe Theater building, are having plans prepared for a two-story theater building, 50 by 100 feet, to cost $25,000.

Apollo, Pa.—Harry Wood has awarded the contract to Alcorn Bros. for the erection of a two-story brick and hollow tile moving picture theater, to cost $8,000.

Hilewood, Pa.—Penn Mary Coal Co. are having plans prepared for a brick moving picture theater, to cost about $9,000.

Harrisburg, Pa.—Isaac Silverman, manager of the Photoplay Theater, is planning the erection of a new moving picture theater here in the near future.

Mt. Washington, Pa.—T. E. Cornelius, House building, Pittsburgh, Pa., is preparing plans for a one-story moving picture theater, 40 by 100 feet, to cost $11,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Adolph Bonnem has sold to John Doyle the moving picture theater at the northeast corner of Pike and Sixth streets, 103 by 75 feet, subject to a mortgage of $13,700.

Ft. Worth, Tex.—E. H. Phillips is preparing plans for a two-story moving picture theater, to cost about $18,000.

Waco, Texas.—The owners of the Hippodrome Theater are expending several thousand dollars on improvements to their present building.

Memphis, Tenn.—Frank Hankel is planning the erection of a new moving picture theater, to cost about $6,000.

Columbia, Tenn.—J. H. Slater and D. W. Boyd contemplate the erection of a moving picture theater for colored people.

Ogden, Utah.—Alhambra Theater Company, Charles Zeimer president, is planning the erection of a commodious moving picture theater here, to cost $150,000.

Ashland, Wis.—Latts Bros. are having plans prepared for a modern moving picture theater, 50 by 133 feet.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

From the West

The All Star Feature Distributors, Inc.

Have just secured the

California State Rights

to the Vitagraph-Liebler Feature Production

"The Christian"

Hall Caine's Famous Book, and All Star Cast of Vitagraph Players

Applications for bookings now being received.

Will open at

PORTOLA THEATRE
San Francisco, Cal.

CLUNE'S AUDITORIUM
Los Angeles, Cal.

We are exclusive distributors of the All Star Productions

COMING

ETHEL BARRYMORE, in a New Play by Augustus Thomas
LEW DOCKSTADER, in "Dan" by Hal Reid
ROBERT CHAMBERS' New Novels
"Shore Acres," etc.

ALL STAR FEATURE DISTRIBUTORS, Inc.

San Francisco 234 Eddy St. | Los Angeles 514 West 8th St. | Seattle 1216 3rd Ave. | Portland 329 Oak St. | Denver Nassau Bldg. | Salt Lake City Judge Bldg.

INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES

UNIVERSAL

CRYSTAL.

THE GIRL IN PANTS (June 30).—Vivian's ma wishes her to marry De Forrest. Vivian prefers Arthur Coldfeet. Charlie calls. Ma entertains him while Vivian is in the garden with Arthur. Later Charlie meets Arthur and slaps his face. They agree to fight a duel. Vivian learns of it and goes to Arthur's room. She looks him in a closet, dons his clothes and goes to the dueling place. She presents a note to the effect that Arthur has been taken sick, and that the bearer will take his place. The duel starts. Charlie runs. She follows him. They race through the woods, each shooting. Vivian runs home. Charlie follows her. He goes into her room. She locks him in. She then tells her mother that there is a man in her room. Meanwhile, Arthur arrives. He captures Charlie. Vivian's mother denounces Charlie. Arthur kicks him out and with mother's permission takes possession of Vivian.

HER NEW HAT (June 30).—Hubby won't buy Pearl a new hat. She is angry. His friends visit him and they indulge in a game of poker. Pearl waxes angry. They hear her coming and hide the cards. She goes to sleep and awakens again at 1:30. She steps downstairs again and sees her husband paying out his last dollar. She goes upstairs and dons his clothes. Hubby holds his first winning hand when she enters, levels a revolver and takes all the money. She then goes up to bed. The next day she buys the new hat. When hubby sees it she explains.

FRONTIER

THE BROKEN BARRIER (July 5).—Dolly's father and mother refuse to accept Arthur for their son-in-law when he is accused of ambushing and killing Charlie, his bitterest enemy. The engagement is abruptly broken. Arthur's guilt appears certain, but for lack of evidence he is freed.

Dolly undertakes to deliver an important order for her father, the manager of a merchandise store. Returning she loses her whip. While trying it she picks up a piece of paper. From his look-out the forest ranger, Joe, discovers a runaway and gives chase. While going at full speed, Joe rescues Dolly from the runaway team.

Joe, who is also a suitor for Dolly's hand, now feels quite certain that he has won her. But when she shows him the piece of paper, Charlie's dying confession which accuses Joe of the crime, he changes his mind. Joe is given five hours' start by Dolly; this for having saved her life. At the expiration of that time she tells her father. The posse follow. Joe tumbles over a high cliff. As for Arthur, Dolly tells him that the barrier is broken.

NESTOR

SOPHIE OF THE FILMS (Series No. 2—June 12)—Although Sophie is a frost as an actress, she has graduated from a bunk dramatic school, and as the general manager of the Uneeda Film Company has designs on her. she is made a leading lady. Eddie, the leading man, is honestly in love with her, but as Sophie's inexperience has ruined every scene thus far taken, the director hates her like poison. The director can't discharge her, so he decides to terrify her into flying the coop.

Sophie is called to venture into a lion's cage after her papier-mache baby. It is most pathetic. It is all completed but the part wherein Sophie goes after the baby. She refuses. The scene is ruined. The director, furious, decides to take one more chance with her. The company goes to the seashore. Sophie is tied to a rock-lashed rock and left there while the rest of the company enacts additional scenes. A fisherman discovers the helpless girl by means of a spy-glass. The director and his company are arrested on a charge of murder.

THE LOST ARROW (July 1).—Lo has forgotten the days of his forefathers. But time was when love was a thing to place on one's altars besides the gods of harvest and rain and all-life, when it was a thing to be purchased with "being," not "having," as to-day. So Hemanova, purifying himself with a seven days' fast, sees a vision of the One Woman and goes in search of her. He finds her, Waupena, daughter of the arrow-maker. Sakuruta also loves the girl and asks for her hand. Meanwhile Hemanova ties wampum to his horse and drives him out into the wilderness, trusting that the gods will guide the animal to the girl.

Waupena finds the horse and her heart tells her that she loves the unknown one. Hemanova arrives in the village; but the old arrowmaker cannot choose between the two suitors for his daughter's hand. He decides on the arrow test. From a high peak he shoots an arrow into the valley below and the lovers hunt for it.

Sakuruta, who has duplicated the arrow, manages to get the girl. A year passes. Hemanova, still faithful, searches for the lost arrow. His sweetheart's horse finds the arrow in a sandbank and brings the arrow to her. She knows the deceit of her husband and goes to the mountaintop. There she meets Hemanova. Sakuruta finds them together the two men fight. Sakuruta is thrown over the cliff and the picture fades with the heroine in her lover's arms.

THOSE COLLEGE DAYS (July 3).—In "Those College Days" we are dropped into the midst of a lively co-ed college life. Jack loves Mary, who naturally returns the emotions, though the dignified professor has forbidden love-making between the co-eds. The janitor tattles and there is trouble. Jack and his mates, deciding to get even with the janitor, lay in wait for him with bricks. Back and forth goes the love-making, tattling and trouble.

The girls in chic bathing suits take their plunge. While the teacher, set to guard them, sleeps, the boys join them in frolic. The janitor finds the boys' clothes and more trouble starts. The boys get away but are told to stay in their rooms. The girls meanwhile have taken the boy's clothes and that night dress up and invade the boys' dormitory for a feast of goodies. They are discovered, again by the janitor, and there is more trouble and fun.

ECLAIR.

SNOWDRIFT (Two Parts—July 1).—While a broken-down, gray-haired old fellow is silently sweeping snow in front of a prominent club, one of the club members decided to take him in to enliven the evening with a story of his life. After taking a drink the old man is induced to tell his life's story. The club scene fades out and the spectator is carried into the wilds of the Great Northwest when snow is on the ground and in the air.

It was thirty years ago. While prospecting in a blinding snowstorm the man lost his way and with the map of a valuable strike clasped tightly in his hand he was buried in the snow. The man has a sweetheart who loves him much and fears for his safety. This girl is loved by Arcon, another miner. On the promise that she will marry him, Arcon starts out with his hunchback to find the missing man. They return with him more dead than alive, but not before stealing the map. The hunchback demands his share while the two men are in an adjoining room. Arcon binds and casts him into a closet and then forces the prospector's sweetheart to go away with him. She leaves a note saying that she loves another.

When the miner recovers, he is told the story by the hunchback and in a frenzy of unbelief, he kills the cripple. Broken in body and with his life wrecked, he is sentenced to life imprisonment. After ten years of hard labor, a pardon comes. He makes his way from camp to camp, playing the piano and singing for a living, always with the purpose in his mind of killing the man who had wrecked his happiness.

As the old man comes to this part of his story, one of the club members who had been most prominent in poking fun at him, starts violently. Turning around, the miner of former days sees standing before him, Arcon, now a prosperous and respected citizen. The shock of the meeting and his fright causes Arcon to be stricken with heart failure; but before he dies he places the hand of his daughter in that of the man whom he had wronged and tells her that the old and dying tramp is the only man her mother ever loved.

THE GREATEST OF THESE (July 5).—Peter, a kind old shoemaker, is the idol of the neighborhood children. Rose, his daughter, is infatuated with a visiting artist named Harmon. Realizing the man's character, Peter forbids his daughter to see him. The fascination is too strong, however, and Rose elopes. Struck by the blow, the old shoemaker's nature hardens until he becomes the fear of the little ones and a creature to be spoken of in whispers. Time progresses and the artist, tiring of Rose, treats her cruelly. She returns to her old home. One of Peter's little friends has been stricken ill and her mother goes to him for money. The better side of his nature is touched and remembering the former days of happiness, he comes to the little girl. Meanwhile the mother has met Rose and brought her to her home. Father and daughter meet and after a moment of suspense, fly to each other's arms.

Margaret, with the help of a plank torn from the sinking boat, manages to regain the barge in an exhausted state. She immediately decides to bring the hated "Black Nissen" to justice and in company with William, proceeds to the Colonel's house with intent to expose him. "Black Nissen" meanwhile has secured the Colonel's consent to his engagement to Ellen. As a dutiful daughter she submits much against her will. At a house party "Black Nissen" is demonstrating the remarkable points of his dynamite motor when Margaret appears on the scene. She widely brushes restraining hands aside and charges "Black Nissen" with a revolver, dashes in anger after Margaret. She reaches the landing stage of the Colonel's house and hides in the motor boat "Black Nissen," failing to see her, also jumps into the boat, intent on escaping.

He starts the motor going but has not gone far before he discovers Margaret's presence. A fierce struggle ensues, and gripping the girl by the throat, he drives the boat at full speed. Midway in the river he forces Margaret into the water, but his attention having been diverted from the engine, his own doom is brought about. There is a sudden burst of flame which envelops him and although he jumps overboard, his injuries have made him too weak to battle against the swift current. His struggles soon cease, and his lifeless body drifts along with the wreckage of his motor boat, while the woman he has sought to make his victim gains the shore, rid forever of the evil influence of "Black Nissen."

POWERS

THE BRAND OF CAIN (June 19).—Moved by anger and a keen sense of having been wronged, a cowpuncher sets out to kill his enemy. In his anger he justifies his act. As a result of a coincidence, he kills his own brother. He becomes a fratricide, a thing to loathe, and he realizes what it is to kill.

On a cattle ranch in the far West, two brothers, Pete and Ned Cullen, work for Thomas Bender, the ranch owner. Ned is the ranch foreman. He is faithful to his trust. Pete was born an enemy to the world. All his passionate longings and feverish objections to the work turns inward and lay waste his rebel soul.

Pete has trouble with Bender and is discharged. He drinks and nurses the venomous sentiments until he decides to kill Thomas Bender. The ranch owner rides a white horse. While riding home from town, Bender's horse goes lame and the owner exchanges mounts with Ned. As the dusk gathers, the two brothers draw near to each other on a lonely stretch of road. Pete, believing that the rider of the white horse is Bender, shoots. He runs up to the mortally injured man to find that he has killed Ned, his younger brother—the one man he had to live for in the world. Ned made no resistance when the cowboys rode up and took him—he just stumble along toward the end which awaits such men.

JOKER

BESS THE DETECTRESS (June 6).—The show busted. Not that shows are especially delicate, but at least they represent an accepted form of female occupation. But the show busted. Bessie left with insufficient funds, pondered upon her future means of existence. John pondered too. John was the stage manager and equally poor.

Bess returned to the ball bedroom. But not before she had read a sign offering $200 reward for the capture of Honey Hall, a crook. Taking her ribbon-trimmed toy revolver, Bess started out to be a detective. The judge appears. His descriptions fits. Hah! And the detective follows him home. His wife objects and Bess goes back once more to the hall bedroom.

John, meanwhile, has been pinched for shooting craps. Into the jail with him is thrown Honey Hall. Both finally escape and the chase begins. Bess has overheard the judge make a suspicious appointment to meet a friend at "the old mill at twelve and don't forget the papers." Hah! More villany. She tracks him down, only to find the old mill a gathering place of feeble old men. But good intentions always bear fruit and some kind and Bess succeeds in aiding John to capture Honey Hall. They get the reward and all is well.

BESSIE THE DETECTRESS IN TICK, TICK, TICK (July 1).—"Tick, Tick, Tick" shows Bessie, ex-cow girl, with an office where, as Bessie Pinkerton Holmes, she detects anything and everything. She even manages to evade detecting the rent. The landlord threatens her with the detection of another office. Bessie reads of bomb outrages in which the police are baffled.

Meantime, Tony ha sgone to work. His wife and son plan to buy him a birthday present. Bessie observes Marie and Angelo on the street. Tony comes by and they hide. Bessie hears the "Tick, tick, tick" of the package under the boy's coat and her suspicions are aroused. Later Bess is thrown out of Tony's flat and she returns to her office to don an Italian disguise.

Tony has received a blackhand letter. He returns home to find Bessie, disguised as an Italian. He captures her after she has snatched up the "tick" box and thrown it down stairs. It hits a policeman. Friend policeman passes it on to the next man. Marie approaches, grabs the box, and throws it upstairs. Following there is a general scramble all around. Bess offers to open the box for ten dollars. The money is forthcoming. She opens the box and finds the clock, the birthday present for Tony. Bess has enough money to pay her week's rent.

CAPTAIN KID'S PRICELESS TREASURE (July 4).—Two lovers, Johnnie and Lucy, desire to wed. Lucy's dad, however, has first to be shown that John has enough worldly goods to be worthy of his daughter's hand. John brings his wealth in a steel-bound chest. The richness of the contents of this chest amazes dad and he gives his eager consent. Just at this time Capt. Kidd puts ashore to raze the town. The first inhabitant Kidd meets is old Hezekiah, the village sot, who to save his skin leads them to John's treasure chest.

Kidd captures Lucy and drags her with the treasure chest to the pirate ship. Here the chest is opened. John comes aboard to rescue Lucy. A bloody battle ensues. All the pirates are slain except Kidd and two of the crew. John and Lucy escape. Kidd and his two survivors put ashore

TRADE MARK

CHILDREN PHOTOPLAYS
FOR CHILDREN BY CHILDREN

TRADE MARK

Absolutely New!!!

Our Introductory Offering is

"KIDS OF THE MOVIES"

UNUSUAL AND UNIQUE

A TWO REEL COMEDY WITH A "WALLOP."

A FEATURE IN ITSELF

ENTIRELY ORIGINAL

THE FIRST PHOTO-PLAY WITHOUT A "SUB-TITLE" JUST IMAGINE!

IT LEAVES AN INDESCRIBABLE, LINGERING FEELING OF JOY AND CONTENT

State Rights For Sale

CHILD PLAYERS CO. OF AMERICA, Inc.

45 WEST 34th STREET
NEW YORK

MARTIN P. KORN
President

TELEPHONES 6270 6271 GREELEY

Our aim is and always will be to produce wholesome, clean and good portrayals of child-life - the kind that charms and amuses one with sweet memories of childhood days. WATCH US!!

COMING:
THE LAND OF THE LOST
STERLING CAMERA & FILM CO., 145 WEST 45th STREET, NEW YORK

with the chest, which they bury. Kidd makes a plan of the spot. His two men then do away with themselves. Kidd becomes poisoned by drinking water and dies in the house of John and Lucy, first secretly hiding the plan wheer the treasure is buried.

Two hundred years later we find the descendants of John and Lucy still occupying the same house. Having a hard run with poverty, they are about to be ousted by the sheriff when, quite by accident, Capt. Kidd's old plan of the burial place of the treasure is found. The shovel brigade concentrates about the spot. Happily the treasure is discovered by the descendants of the original John and Lucy. They need never fear poverty now, for the chest was found to contain "the fruit of hen, the most costly food in the realm of men."

REX.

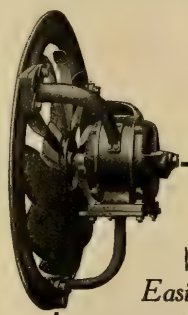
CLOSED GATES (June 7).—The two old aristocrats, upheld in their pride by each other, think themselves not only forgiving but high-minded in caring for their scapegrace son's little daughter. The son may not see his child though he pleads for an hour with her. And the lonely little girl can find no real companionship with the nurse and governess and the two old aristocrats who have long ago forgotten what it meant to play. The child longs to play with the keeper's children in the mud puddles outside the wall. But the gates are closed.

One day she slips out. The old man and his wife discover that she is gone. They find her contaminated by contact with these poor children. They would take her back to the garden's seclusion, but the young father has watched the girl's happiness in the simple things of a free child's life. He recalls his own miserable tradition-bound boyhood, and against the protests of the old aristocrats, he takes his daughter to supper in the keeper's cottage.

But the bolts have been slipped, the gate is turning. The tiny boat recalls a spark of boyhood's joy to the old man. The silk-clad doll draws a bit of memory's sweetness into the old lady's heart. A note of forgiveness and welcomes goes to the man and his child. And the closed gates swing wide.

A LAW UNTO HIMSELF (Two Parts, June 18).—George Chester is found murdered. Detective Bob Steele, sent on the case, examines the body of the deceased and finds in his hand a locket with the picture of a woman. He visits the Italian quarter and there discovers a girl, the counterpart of the picture in the locket. She takes him to her home. The detective meets her father and shows him the locket. The Italian claims it. Steele is about to arrest him when the accused man pleads permission to tell his story. He tells of his courtship of Maria back in Italy, of their marriage, of the coming of George Chester into their life, of his wife's falling in love with the rich American, and of her running away with him, leaving the husband alone with their little girl. He tells of his wife's being deserted by Chester, and of her return home and to her death. He then relates his coming to America, where he earned a livelihood as an organ grinder. Then comes the time when he sees Chester, and of his biding the time until nightfall, when he entered the house through a window, confronted Chester with the locket and accused him of murdering his wife. He tells how they grappled and how he killed Chester. His story finished, the old Italian breaks down and falls over the table, dead. At the climax, Rosa's sweetheart, Pietro, enters the room where his loved one is lying in mute despair. The lover gathers Rosa to his arms with an appealing attitude of proud yet gentle protection. She buries her head in his bosom.

Detective Steele gives Rosa the locket, the only connecting link of evidence, and silently leaves them with their dead. He feels that farther intervention in the decision of the Great Judge would be sacrilege. As he passes down the tenement-house stairs, the picture fades out.



Quiet
Economical
Easily Installed
Operate for years with practically no care.

Westinghouse - Ventura Ventilating Fans

Ideal for Moving Picture Theatres. Inexpensive to operate because of the low current consumption and long life.

Full information on request.

Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co.
East Pittsburgh, Pa.

Northern Feature Film Exchange
Suite 405, Schiller Building, Chicago
Phone Central 6239

Booking now forw
Illinois and Wisconsin

"The Folks From Way Down East"
in 5 Reels

General Feature Film Co.
5 So. Wabash Ave. Chicago, Ill.

ON THE RIO GRAND (July 5).—Dick Harrod is elected sheriff of Mexia County, on the strength of his promises that he will put a stop to Mexican federals running cattle across the border. James Russell is ranch manager for the Cross S Cattle Company. Harrod is in love with his daughter Anna.

Harrod receives a letter signed "A Friend," telling him to watch both fords that night. Russel and Harrod and his men watch the fords but nothing comes of it. Harrod observes Russel conversing with Pedro, a questionable character. His suspicions are aroused. Pedro gives Russel a bag of gold and from thence onward the sheriff watches Russel. He follows him home and watches him hide the money. Harrod then arrests Russel as the leader of the gang. The sheriff's sweetheart, however, pleads for her father. Harrod tells him to get over the border.

The cowboys return. They have captured Pedro and a band of federals. When Pedro discovers that Russel had admitted his guilt and implicated him, he shoots Russel dead and then makes a dash for liberty. The Mexican, however, is shot in his tracks. The new sheriff has done his duty but in his path is the dead body of one of his best friends, his sweetheart's father.

UNIVERSAL

ANIMATED WEEKLY, No. 119 (June 17).—Trying Out Cup Defenders.—"Resolute" outsails "Vanitie" in test races for International contest off Sandy Hook, New York.

St. Louis Commemorative Pageant.—Masque depicting scenes in St. Louis' history from Mound Builders to Civil War, St. Louis, Mo.

Royalty Visits London.—Cheered by multitudes, the King and Queen of Denmark proceed to the Guildhall where they are given rousing welcome, London, England.

Rockefeller Held Up.—Railroad company refuses to allow John D.'s 40-ton rock which is to be carved into a fountain for his estate, to cross bridge connecting his home, Tarrytown, N. Y.

National Swedish Singers Convention.—Societies from all points in America unite in immense demonstration, Minneapolis, Minn.

Scouts Perform for President.—President Poincare of France witnesses interesting exhibition drill given by the boy scouts of Paris, France.

Training Cornell's Crews.—Charles Courtney, ex-champion oarsman and grand old man rowing, gives his crews hard spin on the Hudson, Poughkeepsie, New York.

Cleaning Up Vera Cruz.—Many thousands of guns, revolvers and knives are confiscated from Mexican residents of Vera Cruz by Uncle Sam's soldiers.

Fencing a Popular Pastime with the Officers. ..With the Kiddies in Park.—Seven thousand children of the public school athletic league hold their annual fete in Central Park, New York City.

Mrs. John P. Mitchel, wife of the Mayor of New York.—George Brande, the famous Danish writer. They spy the movie camera.

The Great International Derby.—Many world-famous racers entered for the $20,0000 Canadian Durval Derby, Montreal, Canada.

Cartoons by Hy. Mayer, world-famous cartoonist of Puck.

West Point.

Wilson at Princeton.

VICTOR.

A TWENTIETH CENTURY PIRATE (June 29).—Jack Farrell, rich dilletante and dreamer, is in love with Penelope Summers, an athletic young girl who longs for an ideal man. Jack courts Penelope in the most approved manner, but she rejects him. Following the refusal, Jack throws himself into the pursuit of one of his favorite hobbies, geology. Employing an expert to aid him, he traces back certain branches of his family.

Arriving at a remote age in the annals of the

DEVELOPING and PRINTING
carefully done for professionals and amateurs.
The largest factory in the world devoted exclusively to
Manufacturing Commercial Moving Pictures
Prices and factory description sent at your request
INDUSTRIAL MOVING PICTURE CO.
Watterson R. Rothacker, Gen. Mgr.
223-233 West Erie Street, Chicago

THE INDUCTOR-COMPENSATOR
An Alternating Current Transformer for Motion Picture Arc Lamps
Every claim made for superior merit, high efficiency and current saving qualities has been proven by over five years' constant service.
Nearly 8,000 INDUCTOR COMPENSATORS now in use.
PRICE:
110 Volts, 60 Cycles.....$50.00
220 Volts, 60 Cycles.....50.00
Prices for special transformers to control other voltage and cycles quoted on application. Order from your exchange or from
HELL & HOWELL COMPANY, Designers and Manufacturers
917 West Illinois Street :: :: :: Chicago, Illinois

A WINNER AT THE NEW YORK GRAND CENTRAL SHOW!

COMBINATION PORTABLE BRASS TICKET BOOTH AND POSTER DISPLAYER

PRICE COMPLETE. $150.00 PRICE WITHOUT WIRING, $125.00

The above photographic reproduction shows our latest Portable Brass Ticket Booth. It is made of brass moulding all around with twenty-one electric sockets at the top, with projecting brass cornice moulding to give an ornamental finish. It is furnished complete with a brass grille, with brass money shelf and cash drawer. In the front a one sheet poster compartment is provided and at an additional compartment on either side of it for the insertion of cards or announcements, as will be noticed in the photograph. Three sheet posters are displayed on each side of booth, and in the back various size posters, and in this manner an attractive lobby display can be obtained without losing any valuable space.

This booth is exceedingly attractive and very serviceable. It is made so that the sides can be folded together and the booth moved to the wall or out of the way at any desired time. The brass is lacquered to prevent tarnishing and saves polishing. Can be furnished in brass oxidized, gun metal, statuary bronze, and various other finishes which also do not require polishing, at 10 per cent. extra. The size of the booth: 42 in. wide, 42 in. deep, 86 in. high. If the booth is wanted for summer use only, the three sheet brass poster frames which make up the sides can be detached and used for poster display during the winter. Prices of cheaper or smaller ones on application. Price complete as shown in cut, $150.00 Price complete without electric wiring, $125.00

Write for complete 1914 Catalog, Brass Poster Frames and Rails.

THE NEWMAN MANUFACTURING COMPANY, New York, 101 4th Ave.; Cincinnati, 717 Sycamore St.; Chicago, 108 W. Lake St

Farrel family, the genealogist makes a startling discovery—he finds that Jack's forefather was hanged for piracy. Jack dismisses the genealogist. His family pride is severely wounded. He thinks of himself as the offspring of the desperate buccaneer, and then the big idea that changes his whole outlook on life begins to take shape. That morning he stocks his racing, he gets a plan of the best road to the mountains and then he calls upon Penelope and invites her for a ride. She is loathe to go. Jack insists. She finally consents and despite Penelope's protests they drive far into the hills. When night falls they are in a little town. There the village minister performs the ceremony. Jack vouchsafes an explanation, describing the terrible ancestor from whom he descended and whose blood forced him to take by force that which he could not otherwise gain. Penelope is thrilled and forgives. They return home.

Back in Jack's room the butler enters with a letter from the genealogist telling Jack that his discovery was all wrong—the priate belonged to another family of the same name and in no way connected with his ancestors.

IMP.

THE ADVENTURES OF A GIRL REPORTER (2 parts—June 29).—At the opening of the play it would appear that the famous Moore collection of jewels had been stolen from the home of the wealthy Moore family. Tom Wall, a reporter on the Clarion, is assigned to cover the story. He is refused an interview by Mr. Moore. His suspicions are aroused by Mrs. Moore's attitude and particularly so when he observes Carl Clement, a gentleman crook, entering the Moore home. He reports to his editor and suggests that Ethel, the society reporter, be assigned to the case and that she gain admission to the Moore house in the capacity of a maid.

Ethel has little trouble in securing the position of maid, as one has been recently discharged. She soon discovers that Clement has Mrs. Moore under his influence, that she has lost enormous sums of money to him and to cover this up and keep Clement from informing her husband, she has turned over the jewels to him and pretended that they were stolen. Ethel telephones the facts to Tom. Her conversation is overheard by Clement who succeeds in drawing her from the house on a fake message and capturing her.

With the aid of his gang he takes her to his rooms on the East Side, where he makes her a prisoner. Ethel, after clever maneuvering, manages to escape with thejewels in her possession. She informs the police, who raid the den, arrest the crooks, and apprehend Clement himself at the Moore home to which he has returned.

It is Ethel who brings about the reconcilliation of the Moores. She returns to her desk at the newspaper and gets out her "big story." And Tom—well, he is far from being jealous over her success for, as it is said, love is blind.

ONE BEST BET (July 2).—Jack, who is engaged to be married, is somewhat of a rounder. This is the only objectionable fault he has in the stern eyes of his prospective father-in-law. When the old man finds that Jack has been betting on the races, he forbids him the house. In the meantime, Jack, who has not abandoned his determination to win the girl, plays the races with success. The old man hears of nothing but the races at his club and he threatens to resign. Finally, his curiosity aroused, he visits a poolroom. While he is there, the poolroom is raided. The old man is captured and jailed. Through the influence of Jack, after consent has been given to the marriage, prospective father-in-law is released.

THE BAITED TRAP (2 parts—June 15).—Dennis McShane is driven by poverty to leave his home in old Ireland and seek his fortune in the "land of the free." He leaves behind his father, mother, and sweetheart, Nora. With a heart full of hope, and very little else, he arrives in New York. The first day of his arrival, while walking uptown from the dock, he sees a sign in a saloon, "Porter Wanted." He asks for and is given the job, little knowing that the boss of the place is a notorious character, named Black Louie, a keeper of several dens of vice. His henchmen, Lefty Logan, and Blondy, have informed him that through a raid on one of his places, the inmates have been depleted, and that he must have new ones. Louis is at his wits' end when he chances to see a photograph of Nora, that Denny had pinned on the wall of the storeroom. Learning that it is his sweetheart, and that he will send for her as soon as he has saved enough, Louie plants some money where Denny will find it.

When Denny returns the money to the bartender, he is told that it is Louie's way of making a present. Denny is overjoyed, and sends immediately for Nora. On the day of her arrival, he gets permission to meet her at the dock. Louie and his henchmen follow and accuse him of having stolen the pocketbook that the policeman finds on him. While Louie is at the station house making the charge against him, Blondy and Lefty meet Nora, and under the pretext of taking her to the home of her lover, entice her to one of Louie's houses.

Denny, in the meantime, with the aid of a newsboy, whom he had befriended, succeeds in establishing his innocence. He hurries to the wharf only to find that Nora has already left. The newsboy learns of her whereabouts and informs Denny, who, with the aid of a friendly cop, succeeds in rescuing her from the den of infamy. Louie is finally caught, and with his satellites, is given a long term in prison.

Denny succeeds in getting on the force, and in a few years sends for his father and mother. The last we see of them they are in their own little parlor, celebrating the christening of their first born.

BISON

THE FORBIDDEN ROOM (3 parts—June 20).—Dr. James Gibson's mother on her death-bed makes him promise that he will find his sister, Pauline, and give her a dying mother's blessing. He seeks Pauline out. He finds her with a nameless child in her arms. Shame and sorrow have so preyed upon her that she has become insane. Dr. Gibson takes her and the baby to his home.

A score of years pass. The doctor's niece grows up in ignorance of the conditions of her birth and is led to believe that she is an orphan. Pauline, her mother, is kept confined in a room, the door of which is kept locked, except when attending nurse comes and goes.

The niece is engaged to marry the prosecuting attorney, a rising young man. Dr. Gibson is making a study of hypnotism. John Morris, a wealthy neighbor, is likewise interested in the same subject. To settle a point in an argument on the subject, one night Gibson hypnotizes his niece and pointing to Morris, tells her: "Your worst enemy sits upon that chair. Kill him!" She goes to a table and reaches for a paper knife, but is given a piece of paper instead. With the imaginary weapon in her hand she goes to Morris and goes through with the action of stabbing him.

A short time afterward, Pauline, the insane woman, sees Morris from her window. Dim recollections of the past are recalled. Morris is the man responsible for her ruin. When Gibson learns this all his relations with Morris are broken off.

In the meantime vague ideas are fermenting in

BE UP TO DATE
Install
CORCORAN TANKS
Get No. 6 Price List
A. J. CORCORAN, Inc., 11½ JOHN STREET NEW YORK CITY

"FOTOPLAYER"
the instrument that supplies
MUSIC FOR THE PICTURES
The American Photo Player Sales Co.
Berkeley, California.

SUBSCRIBE FOR
Moving Picture World
DOMESTIC... $3.00
CANADA..... 3.50
FOREIGN.... 4.00

MAKE YOUR OWN CURRENT WITH A
Brush Electric Lighting Set
Send for 125-page catalogue with very complete information about electrical matters.
THE CHAS. A. STRELINGER CO.,
Box MP-2, Detroit, Mich., U. S. A.

German Artists Ensemble
free from 15 Sept. or Oct., 4 men or more, distribution: piano, harmonium, 2 violins, big repertoire for moving picture show, cafe or hotel; having played in first class establishments of Berlin. Guarantee for first class music. Please send offers, stating salary to K. Balke, Guntherstr. 25, Sondershausen (Thuringia), Germany.

FOUR COMEDIES
SPLIT REEL
2000 ft. of film, bright and quick action that every one enjoys
For Prices, Etc., Inquire
PHOTO CINES CO
24 E. 13th St., New York

GET SUPPLIES FROM
50-50 Fifty-Fifty SAVE HALF Fifty-Fifty 50-50
$ FIFTY-FIFTY % COMPANY $
Fifty-Fifty 50-50 SAVE HALF 50-50 Fifty-Fifty
86 WALTON STREET ATLANTA, GA.

DEVELOPING—PRINTING
ANY QUANTITY--QUALITY AND DELIVERY GUARANTEED
STANDARD FILMPRINT CORP.
120 SCHOOL STREET
YONKERS, N. Y.
Tel. 4600 Yonkers
N. Y. OFFICE
Room 1006
TIMES BUILDING
Tel. 7094 Bryant

"Safety First" is assured with "AGFA" Non-Flam Stock

either in the raw or finished state can be shipped through the United States Mails

Superior Photographic Qualities
Long Wearing Base
Non-Peeling Emulsion

Formulae Book, Samples, etc., gratis

Raw Film Supply Co.

SOLE AMERICAN AGENTS

15 East 26th Street New York City

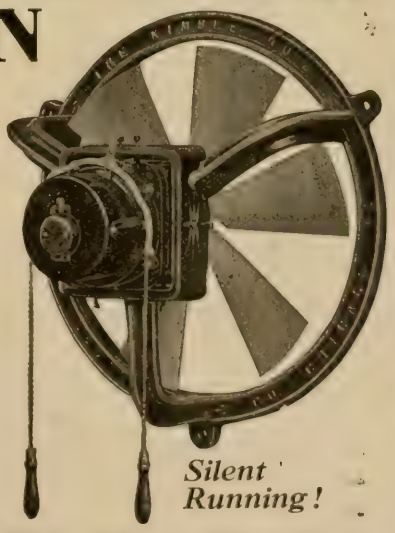
Four Big Reasons Why You Should Ventilate Your House With a KIMBLE FAN

(Alternating-Current)

1. A Kimble Fan is reversible. You can use it to draw in fresh air and then by pulling the chain, reverse it and use it to force out foul air. It gives maximum efficiency in either direction because of the straight blades.
2. A Kimble Fan is variable speed. You can run it fast, slow, or any of the many speeds between. You can suit the amount of air to the number of people in the house, to the time of day, or the season of the year. No other alternating-current fan is variable speed and reversible.
3. A Kimble Fan reduces current consumption (and consequently operating cost) in direct proportion to every speed reduction. No other alternating current fan does this. In this way Kimble Fans make a big saving for their owners.
4. Kimble Fans give the best ventilation at the least cost. They give your house a good name as a "well ventilated movie." You really can't afford not to install one. Write today for our Red Fan Catalog.



Silent Running!

Kimble Electric Co., Fan Specialists, 633 North Western Ave., Chicago

the mind of the crazy woman. One night she escapes from her room and creeping downstairs finds her daughter asleep in a chair. She takes a shawl from the daughter's shoulders and leaves. She finds John Morris and kills him with the same paper knife used in the hypnotic experiment. Returning she finds her daughter still asleep. She strokes her hands and leaves bloodstains upon them, then returns to her room.

Morris is found murdered. Gibson is called and finds his niece's shawl near the dead man. The girl is then located asleep in a chair, and the blood upon her fingers is discovered.

She is arrested and convicted of the murder of John Morris. At last, however, God's charity intervenes. Pauline, the insane woman, is found dead in her room. In her hand she holds a watch which she took. Her daughter's innocence is established.

GOLD SEAL

LUCILLE LOVE, THE GIRL OF MYSTERY (Series No. 9—2 parts—June 9).—After Lucille is abducted from the ocean liner on its arrival at San Francisco, she is hurried to Hugo Loubeque's house by his accomplice. Although Lobeque treats his pretty captive kindly, she is never left unguarded. Again the extreme prowess of Loubeque is impressed upon the unfortunate girl. His house, even, has been specially constructed to trap his victims and deceive the police. Ordinary-appearing staircases sink into secret chambers at his wish. The side walls of rooms contract as it were with dungeons of the Inquisition, and even the floors of rooms move upward and downward, from story to story. Never had a successful outcome of her mission looked more hopeless.

While Lucille is held incommunicado, Captain Clarkson, of the liner, and her friend, is not idle. He locates the house where the girl is held prisoner, and has it surrounded by detectives.

In the meantime Loubeque becomes a victim of his own cleverness. He stumbles into a pitfall of his own making. One of the moving floors comes down upon him by accident and crushes him into unconsciousness. Before he has regained his senses Lucille is in his pocket, and is again in possession of the papers. Fearing the consequences of her act she hides the papers in the baseboard of a wall. When Loubeque awakens he misses the documents, and, although the girl denies all knowledge of them, he knows that only she would take them. His plans are interrupted, however, by the arrival of Captain Clarkson and the police. Loubeque allows them to search every nook and corner of the house. The house was built for just such an emergency, and they do not find uLcille, although they are sure she is there. Shortly afterward Lucille communicates with the detectives. The officers of the law fight their way into the house, and a terrific battle with Loubeque's henchmen follows. Collapsible rooms close in and crush the fighters. Traps open and receive the unwary, and the floors of rooms move from one story to another. In the midst of the fight a rope is dropped to Lucille, and she escaped to the roof. Loubeque is hot on her trail, overcomes the police or slays her rescuers, and the fight continues at a dizzy height over housetops. Lucille at last sees an opening. She climbs down a fire-escape and Loubeque does not follow. He has a better plan.

Lucille finds her way into an office building and rejoices at her freedom. She starts downstairs and meets Loubeque coming up.

"You are too much trouble here," comments Loubeque. "I will take you to my ranch in Mexico."

The words daze Lucille. Her tongue cleaves to the roof of her mouth. Her usual poise and self-possession flee. Ordinarily, she would have sought safety in flight. Now she seems to sense the futility of such a move. Crestfallen and supine, she follows the man of iron will down the stairs and into the street.

MUTUAL FILM CORP.

THANHOUSER.

THE MAN WITHOUT FEAR (June 19).—John Sinclair, banker, discovers that his daughter loves his private secretary, George Travis. He angrily discharges the young man, and does his best to force his daughter to marry a wealthy suitor.

Anarchists plot to take Sinclair's life. Travis accidentally learns that one of the band has been appointed to execute the death sentence, but he is captured by the band before he can warn Sinclair. However, he risks his life in a daring way, and succeeds in escaping from his captors, arriving just in time to save Sinclair's life. The banker realizes the truth and the worth of the "man without fear," and the young man and the girl are soon married.

THE OUTLAW'S NEMESIS (June 21).—Jim Reynolds, the old sheriff of Tucson County, has for months vainly endeavors to capture "Red" Anderson, a noted bandit. George Carter, a young rancher, wishes to marry Grace, the sheriff's daughter, and Reynolds tells him that he cannot marry her unless he captures "Red."

All Carter's efforts are in vain and he seems doomed to failure when his sweetheart takes a hand. Dressed as an Eastern tourist she encounters the bandit in the hills, and succeeds in capturing him. The sheriff, delighted at her success, consents to her marriage to Carter.

PRINCESS.

THE LITTLE SENORITA (June 19).—Hendricks Island, a little place of only a few acres but boasting of very handsome residence, is purchased by a mysterious South American who takes up his residence upon it with his wife and daughter. Senor Carraza is very reserved and no visitors are welcomed at the island.

Tom Maitland, a wealthy young man of the neighborhood, has his curiosity aroused, and, seizing an opportunity, visits the island. He discovers that Dolores Carraza, the daughter, is a pretty girl. He succeeds in meeting her, and soon Tom and the "Little senorita" become fast friends. The friendship soon grows into a stronger tie, but the father refuses to let his daughter marry an "American."

One of Carraza's enemies follows him to America, and Carraza is in great danger until it is averted by the courage of his daughter who swims the river to bring assistance which comes in the person of the despised "Americano," who, by his valor, wins the respect of Carranza and the hand of Dolores.

BEAUTY FILM

VIA THE FIRE ESCAPE (June 30).—Richard Harding, the son of millionaire Harding, is in love with Aneta Bowen, the society reporter for the Morning Post. The elder Harding has matrimonial views for his son. The papers are all anxious to get a personal interview with Mr. Edward Harding. The Morning Post sends Aneta to his hotel for the required interview. She tries several plans to get in touch with him, but without avail. Finally she takes a room directly above his and watching her opportunity, climbs down the fire-escape into his room. At first he is furious, but realizes he is dealing with no ordinary young lady. He grants her an interview. Aneta, being a wise young lady, decides to procure his consent to her engagement with his son. She manages to involve him in several little compromising situations. Finally to extricate himself he gives the requested consent.

AMERICAN.

THE LITTLE HOUSE IN THE VALLEY (Two parts—June 29).—Prentiss, a retired literary man in ill health, has created a garden solitude for himself and his young wife down in a small lonely valley. Fate toward whom Prentiss harbors much bitterness since his health began to fail, now brings a heavier stroke in the form of young David Scott, who is in charge of the preliminary survey of a new railroad, the line of which follows the narrow valley. Just preceding the arrival of David and his crew comes Valdez, a Mexican renegade, with a band of his men. Their eyes fall upon Prentiss' fine pair of horses which are being harnessed in the yard for their master's afternoon drive. Laura's servants desert her and Valdez laughs at her own feeble strength. Prentiss staggers onto the scene and falls in a faint just as David rides into the yard. He holds up the raiders, but Prentiss must be looked after and in the excitement Valdez and his men make their escape. The subsequent appearance of more of the survey party reveal part of the circumstances to Prentiss and David tells him the rest. At once in the helpless invalid's mind hatred takes possession and an almost insane determination to thwart David's plan that means the destruction of this desert solitude.

David leaves the place with his surveyors much disturbed by Prentiss' bitter opposition, but remembers the raid of the Mexicans and writes a note to Laura directing her to call for help to his camp if the outlaws return. Prentiss continues to brood morbidly over how he, with his physical weakness and his loneliness, can block the threatening invasion. Laura tries to conceal her apprehensions of the return of the outlaws from her husband, but is intercepted by him that evening when she goes out to post a messenger who is to ride to the camp on the firm alarm, and Prentiss sees the note and learns her plan. On her return to the house Laura is seized and bound by Valdez and his men, who proceed to the house and find Prentiss alone. The one idea in Prentiss' mind at present hirs upon a desperate plan. He tells Valdez that a man is on his way to the camp. At first murderously angry, Valdez listens to the invalid and agrees to his proposition. Prentiss pours all his money and valuables into the outlaw's hands if the latter will ride by a roundabout route to the camp while the surveyors are on their way to the house and destroy their maps and instruments. Laura has got herself free and overhears the interview and as the outlaws return to their horses in the rear of the house she takes to the road and starts for the camp on foot. She intercepts David and his rescue party and they lay a trap for Valdez. The outlaws are defeated and the booty recovered. In the meantime Prentiss has recovered consciousness and undergoes a complete lapse of memory. He sees the signs of disorder and robbery and knows that something terrible has happened. Death hastens to claim him, but before he breathes his last, David enters with Laura. Prentiss sees his lost property recovered. But seeing David, the cause of his intense hatred and passion knows no bounds and he succumbs to meet its awful weight. David promises to remain near the house of mourning, and goes forth into the night to think of the future.

NATURE'S TOUCH (July 1).—A poor woman dies and leaves a young girl in the care of a vicious family with a crew of ill bred children in the household. The care of the children combined with the drudgery which is forced upon the poor girl instils a hatred in her heart for children, and she grows to loathe all children with an unreasoning hatred. As time goes on the old hag who is the mother of the children, heaps so many abuses on Clara's head she begins to fear that in a moment of intense rage she will kill one of the children.

After an extremely revolting abuse on the part of a young son in the household, and half starved, the young girl takes a suit of the boy's clothing and runs away, making her escape like a hobo riding the brake beams. She goes to a country where but recently a young widower left with a motherless babe has taken up his abode with an old mountaineer couple. The old lady becomes so enchanted with the child, and the young widower finds so much peace and contentment in the hill country, that he buys a home in the woods.

Clara dressed as a boy applies to the mountaineers' house for food. The old man sets her to chopping wood and she faints at her task. Richard Stone, the young widower, discovers her fainted and in picking her up her hat falls off and her hair falls down and he discovers her to be a girl. The girl tells her story of abuse and finds a sympathetic home.

In the course of time Stone and Clara marry and a little stranger is expected. Clara develops the peculiar hatred for Stone's little girl, and he with perfect understanding takes his little girl to the mountaineer's wife. Stone on hearing from the doctor that he is a father, rushes to the mountaineers' home and take his little girl back to his wife. Clara, the new mother, is transformed into a new woman and takes Stone's little girl, "Billie," into her arms with a world of affection and tenderness and a happy household is established through Mother Love.

MEIN LIEBER KATRINA CATCHES A CONVICT (July 3).—Heine wants to attend the Cornville Masquerade Ball as a convict, but Katrina, his wife, kicks up such a row that he promises not to go. At the first opportunity, however, Heine sneaks from the restaurant, and hiking to a quiet spot in the woods, starts donning his convict "make-up." Katrina misses Heine and sets out for the ball with a large club. The boys are having a grand time with the girls and especially the village constable, who has stolen a march on Heine, and arrives at the ball dressed as a convict. Reaching the hall, Katrina mistakes the constable for Heine and is about to murder the poor devil when the constable removes his mask and arrests her. Katrina begs off, however, and deciding to remain at the ball, accepts the constable as an escort.

Meanwhile, in the woods, Heine has donned the convict "make-up" and is about to start for the ball, when a small boy sees him and informs a party of hunters that a desperate convict is at large. Heine is furiously pursued by the hunters, whom he imagines are a band of villainous cut-throats. Making a frantic dash for liberty, Heine dashes into the restaurant and causes a panic. The hunters arrive in pursuit and Heine dives through a window. After a desperate chase, the hunters are about to capture the supposed convict, when Heine dashes into the ballroom and hides under a table. The hunters follow him and mistaking the other convict for Heine, they seize upon the village constable and drag him out of the hall. The constable soon proves worthy of his star, however, and turning the tables on the hunters, he marches them off to jail. Heine comes out from under the table and to his horror bumps into Katrina. Off comes his mask and what happens to Heine is sufficient. At the conclusion Katrina is once more seated in state at the cash register and poor miserable Heine is back on the job as a waiter.

MAJESTIC

THE SEVERED THONG (Two parts—June 21).—Margaret MacDonald was fearless. She lived in the pioneer days when a woman had to be ready, at a moment's notice, to defend her life and the lives of her children. Her courage asserted itself that stormy night when she gave shelter and food to Dark Cloud, the Sioux. She soon forgot the incident—but the Indian remembered. One morning in 1820, James MacDonald went to the settlement for supplies, leaving the wife alone with the baby. She was busying herself about the premises, when She spied a strange Indian creeping toward the cabin. She ran to the house, hid the baby and barred the door. Then, putting teh flint-lock muzzle to the loop-hole, she fired.

Eagle Eye had seen the gun barrel, and dodged the bullet. The second time, he leaped as if hit and fell over, feigning dead. As he had expected, Margaret came out to examine the body. She was about to put another bullet into him, when Eagle Eye sprang up, bounding aside. The next instant he had seized and bound her. Helpless, horror-struck, she watched him set fire to the cabin where her baby was hidden. Then, deaf to her agonized pleadings, he dragged her away. They were threading the trail, deeper and deeper into the forest, when a bullet sang past them. Dark Cloud had discerned the Black Foot, of the tribe of his enemies, and had recognized his captive. Binding Margaret to a tree, Eagle Eye answered shot with

HEPWORTH'S, LONDON, PRESENT

THE CRY OF THE CAPTIVE

A villainous relative compels a girl to aid him in his nefarious schemes. A young man who has fallen in love with her, saves her, and the villain meets his just deserts

TWO PARTS

THE TURNER FILMS, LTD., PRESENT

CREATURES OF HABIT

A SINGLE REEL COMEDY FEATURING FLORENCE TURNER

The Above Productions Have Been Sold to the Following Exchanges

Anima Film Rental Co.	Anima Photoplay Library	Anima Photoplay Library	A. B. C. Photoplays
110-112 West 40th Street	1325 Vine Street	1523 Hurt Bldg., Exchange Pl.	526 Columbia Bldg.
New York, N. Y.	Philadelphia, Pa.	Atlanta, Ga.	108 Prospect Ave., Cleveland, O.

A POWERFUL TWO PART DRAMA

A THROW OF THE DICE

A Vivid Portrayal of Industrial Strife

HEPWORTH SINGLE REEL COMEDY

FAIR GAME

FLORENCE TURNER SINGLE REEL COMEDY

FLOTILLA, THE FLIRT

SINGLE AND SPLIT REEL COMEDIES AND DRAMAS RELEASED WEEKLY

HEPWORTH AMERICAN FILM CORPORATION

110-112 WEST 40th STREET A. BLINKHORN, Pres. NEW YORK CITY

ECLIPSE-URBAN FILM COMPANY PRESENTS

THE FIRST OF THE BARNET PARKER SERIES OF DETECTIVE DRAMAS

THE MYSTERY OF GREEN PARK

AFTER THE FAMOUS NOVEL BY ARNOLD GALOPIN
AN UNUSUALLY INTERESTING AND ABSORBING PHOTOPLAY
TWO PARTS

TWO PART DRAMA

THE BIRD OF PREY

The Story of a Daring Robbery and a Thrilling Pursuit and Capture

The Above Productions Have Been Sold to the Following Exchanges

Anima Film Rental Co.	Anima Photoplay Library	Anima Photoplay Library	A. B. C. Photoplays
110-112 West 40th Street	1325 Vine Street	1523 Hurt Bldg., Exchange Pl.	526 Columbia Bldg.
New York, N. Y.	Philadelphia, Pa.	Atlanta, Ga.	108 Prospect Ave., Cleveland, O.

SPLIT REEL COMEDY

SAMMY'S UMBRELLA

ONE BIG SCREAM

SPLIT REEL COMEDY

DUPIN GETS THE BIRD

FUN FROM FIRST TO FINISH

TWO ATTRACTIVE SPLIT REEL COMEDIES

PETER'S EVIL SPIRIT SAMMY AND THE SLIT SKIRT

ECLIPSE-URBAN FILM COMPANY

110-112 WEST 40th STREET NEW YORK CITY

shot. Exultant that Dark Cloud's missles all passed beyond him, he failed to apprehend the target of his enemy's aim. The burning bullets were cutting the buffalo thong which held Margaret prisoner. Suddenly, a steady flash blinded the Indian's eyes, and he reeled over with a knife in his breast.

Margaret staggered back from the dying savage, and fled. Guided by Dark Cloud's haloos, she reached the clearing. The friendly Indian rushed before her into the flaming cabin—and reappeared with the baby, unharmed, in his arms.

THE TAVERN OF TRAGEDY (June 28).—Maximillo Corto, a Mexican crook, keeps a tavern on the Mexican border and has a daughter whom he abuses and who has to do all the hard work around the place. One day, Bob Jamison, really an American spy in the service, comes to the inn and stops over night. He falls in love with the daughter of the innkeeper. She is infatuated with him, as he is the first human being who has ever been kind to her. He goes away but promises to return.

While he is away a large reward is offered for his capture, dead or alive. The innkeeper tells the messenger of the news that if Bob ever comes back, he will put him into room 7 and hold him. The daughter overhears this, and when Bob returns, unable to warn him, she changes the number on the door of room seven to that of six. When Bob is sent up to his room by Corto, he goes in what he thinks is seven but the daughter afterwards shifts the door numbers back to their original positions. Corto decides to kill Bob in his sleep and steals upstairs. The girl ties a note of warning on a weighted cord and flings it from her open window into his room. He reads it and escapes through the window.

Corto slips into Room 7 in the dark, with knife upraised. A shaft of moonlight discloses his daughter. He then knows that he has been tricked and slips off to six. Bob rides beneath the girl's open window—she jumps into his arms and they ride away together and escape Corto's vengeance.

RELIANCE

THE STOLEN CODE (June 20).
MAN OF MYSTERY A SUICIDE.

Left-handed victim shoots himself in Cheapside lodgings .... The morning papers were full of it. But in all London there were two persons only who knew the inside facts of the strange tragedy—and that was a story none of the papers got.

The evening before, in London, a woman confronted Stepan Petritsky, secret spy of the Czar, in his room. She had been his accomplice for two years. She was the intense, Slavonic type, oddly silent save in moments of strong emotion, with a half savage imagination, and a great beauty which made her one of the most valuable instruments of the Petersburg detective service. She was passionately demanding of the spy the copy of their partnership agreement and he stood, revolver in hand, guarding the papers which she was well aware were concealed upon his person.

Suddenly she laid hands on him. There was a struggle, a sharp report, the body of the spy collapsed. The woman heard footsteps on the stairs, and hastily thrusting the revolver in the dead man's hand, she hid herself in the wardrobe. There she leaned, half fainting, listening with pounding heart to hurried steps and voices in the room. One of the two men left presently, and the door of her hiding place was swung open.

Irina Levin sprang into the room with a smothered cry, seizing the hand of her discoverer. He was a well-known diplomatic agent of the English government.

"The code!" she gasped. "I came to steal it back for you. My heart has been—Ah, it has tortured me!—"

She broke off, turned pale and held up a discolored wrist.

"He threatened me—I wrested the gun from him—it was all over in the next moment." Her eyes flashed. "See, I took pains—they will think he shot himself."

The Englishman nodded slowly. He had noticed at first glance that the revolver had been hurriedly placed in the man's left hand, while the fingers of the right were stained with ink. He handed the woman a card.

"Go there. Get a good sleep—and do not worry. Tomorrow early I will come to you."

He took her hand. And she sank her head, with its crown of glossy black braids, on her breast. Then below their breaths they swore to partnership.

Irina glided from the room. The diplomatic agent emptied the Russian's clothes. Then he cleaned the stain from the dead man's right hand and inked the fingers clutching the revolver—That was how the officers found the "man of mystery."

OUR MUTUAL GIRL (No. 24—June 29).—They were all sitting on the broad veranda of John Travers' country house, looking out over the rhododendron garden, brilliant with bloom. Margaret was the magnetic center of the group. Mrs. Knickerbocker watched her fondly. There was quite a little color in the dear child's cheeks. Margaret's aunt exchanged grateful glances with Miss Morris, the nurse, and Madge Travers nodded brightly and sympathetically to Mrs. Knickerbocker. Dunbar and Travers sat by with relieved faces.

"If it wouldn't tire you too much, my dear," said Mrs. Knickerbocker, addressing her niece, "won't you tell us the whole story from the very beginning?"

"Why, yes. But Mr. Travers will have to help me out." Margaret laughed, casting a teasing glance at the young millionaire. "You see, from the time he ran me down to when they brought me upstairs, I did not know a thing that was happening to me."

They told everything between them. And what, such a short while before had seemed so serious, now appeared a most amusing story. When the recital was finished, Margaret forgave Travers before them all. And Dunbar came in for hearty congratulations from everybody, though it was evident that Margaret's beaming smile of gratitude was the thanks he prized most.

When Mrs. Knickerbocker and her niece were left alone, the older woman remarked that the girl's face had lost its animation.

"You are tired, child. We shouldn't have kept you talking so long," she said.

"Oh, no, it did me good. But perhaps I am a little weary. Someway, I feel so blue, auntie dear."

Mrs. Knickerbocker drew the phone toward her and called up the doctor. When the big man came, he merely glanced over his patient keenly and said, "A hearty laugh is the best medicine."

That evening Mrs. Knickerbocker motored back to town. She wrote a note and addressing it, sent her butler with it. The missive read, "Mrs. Knickerbocker asks a favor of a distinguished humorist." In a short time the car returned, and James ushered into the drawing-room Irvin S. Cobb. It was arranged that Mr. Cobb should drive out to Travers' country place with Mrs. Knickerbocker the following day. When Our Mutual Girl found herself sitting beside the famous humorist, listening to one of his funniest stories, the doleful look vanished from her features. She burst into her old, clear, rippling laugh, throwing back her pretty head in an abandonment of mirth. And from that hour to this, the improvement in her health and spirits has been simply miraculous.

BRONCHO

SHORTY GETS IN TROUBLE (2 parts—July 1).—The boys of Simms' ranch play a joke on Shorty by putting a stale egg at his place for breakfast. Shorty gets angry and throws the egg at the cook, who dodges, and the egg hits Simms in the face. This starts an argument and Shorty is "fired." Shorty bundles has few clothes, mounts his horse and rides away. He sees a notice offering $500 reward for the capture, dead or alive, of a bandit known as the "Desert Rat." Shorty sees the "Desert Rat" holding up the stage and plans to capture him, but instead he is wounded by the bandit. One of the passengers who had shot at the bandit, tells the sheriff that he has hit the man and that they can trail him by the blood stains. They find the trail and follow Shorty to the bandit's cabin, where he has taken refuge. He is arrested, found guilty and sentenced to be hanged, but is saved by the bandit's wife, who persuaded her husband to make a written confession before he died.

DOMINO.

HIS HOUR OF MANHOOD (2 parts—July 2).—Anne Larson, tired of the brutality of her husband, Pete Larson, decides to leave him. She goes back to her father. Her father dies and she starts south again. She runs short of provisions while on her way, and is in a very weakened condition when Jim Dawson, a young hunter, rescues her. He takes her to his home, and his mother cares for her until she recovers.

Jim falls in love with Anne and proposes marriage. She accepts his offer, believing her husband dead. A stranger comes up to their home and asks for something to eat. Jim takes him in. Anne recognizes him as her husband. Larson promises to keep silent if she supplies him with all the money he needs. This she promises to do. One day while intoxicated Pete Larson has a row that ends in a tragedy. He escapes from the posse and seeks shelter in Jim Dawson's home. The posse comes there to hunt for him. He again escapes them, but later is caught and killed.

KOMIC

HUBBY TO THE RESCUE (June 14).—Jane Mersey got to the point where she had to have a little fun or die. John, her husband, always was too busy to take her anywhere; so when an agreeable young man, whom she chanced to meet at the home of a mutual friend asked her to lunch with him next day, she accepted with alacrity. She did not quite catch Jerry Harcourt's name on introduction, and he was equally vague as to the identity of his new acquaintance. However, this was one of the cases where ignorance is bliss. Jane and Jerry met incognito, and had enjoyed a sumptuous meal.

When the waiter slid his cheque to him, Harcourt discovered that he had left all his cash in his other clothes at home. Concealing his agitation from the lady, he rushed to the phone. Calling up his old acquaintance, John Mersey, he told him that he must have five dollars right off the bat. Mersey, always a friend in need, promised to run right around to the cafe with the sum. When John arrived, and saw for himself, he changed his mind. He dragged Jane away, and Jerry was left to be plundered of watch and raiment by the restaurant keeper.

THE DECEIVER (June 21).—Simon Jenks, always out of cash, falls in love with Bridgeen, an enterprising cook.

"Sure and when you'll be having a nice, tidy sum in the bank one of these days," says she. "I'll think about it, maybe."

Jenks is naturally opposed to work. He put on some old togs and a pair of blue goggles, placards himself with "Help the Blind," and succeeded in collecting quite a bit of change. Meanwhile Clancy, his rival, is cutting out Jenks with the cook. The latter sees Clancy calling on Bridgeen off his beat, and gives the police the tip. The cop is caught, degraded and transferred to a lonely part of town where saloons are not. Bridgeen turns him down. Jenks marries the cook. She refuses to work any more, and Jenks is forced to sham blind man again. He avoids the neighborhood where he is already known to the police, and in picking an unfamiliar quarter of the town, gets into Clancy's precinct. His ex-rival recognizes him, beats him up and hauls him in. Jenks has to send for his wife to get out of jail, and is sentenced by Bridgeen to work for a living the rest of his days.

ROYAL

THE BUSY MAN (June 20).—Squire Higgs was the busiest man in Dogs' Corners. He was fire department, minister, doctor, constable, postmaster—everything, in fact, in way of a public official.

One hot day, returning from sundry duties, he was summoned to stop a street fight. He put on his police hat, but had scarcely arrived upon the scene when the fire bells began to clang. Tearing back to the office, he hastily exchanged police hat for fire helmet and rushed to the burning property. But no sooner was he getting the flames under control than he was pulled off the job to prevent the fighters murdering each other. A lightning change of hats saw the squire separating the bloodthirsty combatants, when the fire broke out afresh. The helmet back in vogue, he was handling the conflagration heroically when he was attacked by a love-sick young man who insisted that he perform his marriage ceremony on the spot. Back to the office flew the first citizen of Dogs' Corners, hustled into his clerical hat and was about to pronounce the matrimonial blessing, when the town arrived in a body to drag him back to the fire. The love-sick young man and his bride went, too, clinging onto the squire's coat tails. Higgs put the bridegroom in the bucket brigade, swashed out the fire, called in the erstwhile fighters to stand as witnesses, married the young couple, and collected his fee.

SUCH A BUSINESS (June 20).—Ike Levy, hatter, finds business dull. He is raving up and down in front of his store, when two Irishmen get into an argument across the street and one of them throws a brick. Ike is hit in the back, which doesn't improve his temper, until he is seized by a bright idea. He calls his son, Sammy, and arming him with the brick sends him up the street to break some gentleman's hat. The scheme works. A tall silk hat is sacrificed, and the owner hurries to Ike's shop to buy a new one. Sammy doubles his ammunition, with a brick in either hand, proceeds far and wide to demolish headgear and to drive the trade into the parental establishment.

There is such a thing as choosing one's victims sagaciously. When Sammy, who is not an infallible marksman, bricks a celebrated pugilist in the chest, his little game abruptly comes to a close. The prizefighter rounds him up in Ike's shop and by the time he gets through with the place, the hatter has decided that honesty is the best policy.

MUTUAL WEEKLY.

MUTUAL WEEKLY NO. 76 (June 11).—The Autoped.—Boston man shows new machine within the reach of everybody.

Joans of Arc Anniversary.—Celebrations of birthday of French Saint is held at Orleans.

A Feminine Flight.—Miss Ruth Law makes perilous trip on Staten Island in a new Bi-plane.

A Quick Drop.—A new parachute is tride out on Aviation Grounds in Vienna.

Shakuntala.—Second annual performance of Hindu Drama is given on Mount Tamalpais, Calif.

Railroad Cars Without Wheels.—German inventor produces mechanism of peculiar type.

Harvard Ver susCornell.—Latter bests Boston crew in boat races on the Charles River.

The Ulster Volunteers.—West Belfast Anti-Home Rule Regiment looks like the real thing.

A Peculiar Fire.—Flames partially destroy Portland, Oregon's steel bridge.

An Entire Town Destroyed by Fire.—Lebam, Washington is wiped out with a loss of $4,000,000.

July Releases

When days grow hot and box office receipts sort o' cold, any one of these features will remove the chill and "fill the till"—try one and see!

"BREWSTER'S MILLIONS" Five Part Comedy

"THE BANKER'S DAUGHTER" Five Part Drama

"SEALED ORDERS" The "Real" One—Seven Parts

"NEPTUNE'S DAUGHTER" Eight Parts

ALL POPULAR AND HIGH GRADE

Celebrated Players Film Company

LEADERS IN FILMDOM'S PROGRESS

64 W. RANDOLPH ST. Schiller Building CHICAGO, ILL.

MECCA

STATE RIGHT BUYERS, SEND

For

SOUVENIR BOOKLET

On

A HIGHWAYMAN'S HONOR

IN 5 PARTS

The Picture With a Hundred Thrills

SHOWN TO THE ROYALTY OF EUROPE AND APPLAUDED BY KING GEORGE OF ENGLAND

ONE OF THE MOST ARTISTIC AND SENSATIONAL PICTURES EVER PRODUCED

Main Parts Acted by SIR HUBERT VON HERKOMER AND LONDON'S MOST POPULAR ACTORS AND ACTRESSES

Mecca Feature Film Co., Inc,

126 W. 46th Street, New York, N. Y.

Exclusive Owners for U. S. and Canada

Boston Boys in Annual Outing.—5000 High School pupils enjoy day on Boston Common.

Red Men Visit New York.—Great Northern Railroad brings band of Original Americans to Manhattan.

Troops Four into Texas.—Government concentrating enormous forces on Northern Mexican border.

MUTUAL WEEKLY, No. 77 (June 18).—Trio of American Cup Defenders.—"Defiance," "Resolute," and "Vanitie" have first trial over International Race Course off Sandy Hook.

Naval Cadets Graduate.—154 Midshipmen receive diplomas from President Wilson at Annapolis.

Future Generals of the Army Receive their Diplomas at West Point.

Submarine Tender "Fulton."—First of its kind in Uncle Sam's Navy, is launched at Quincy, Mass.

U. S. Consul, J. R. Silliman, long held prisoner by Huerta, is returned to Vera Cruz after suffering many indignities.

Japanese Cruisers, "Azama" and "Azuma," arrive in San Pedro Harbor.

How They Build Good Roads in California.—20 tons of dynamite used to remove mountain to clear a highway between Santa Anna and Riverside.

Monument to the Confederate Dead is unveiled at Arlington Cemetery, Washington, D. C.

Children of New England present three elephants to the city of Boston.

His Majesty Christian X of Denmark and his Queen, Alexandrine, visit Paris, France.

The Sultan of Turkey open Parliament at Constantinople.

FEATURE FILM STORIES

FILM RELEASES OF AMERICA.

THE TIGER COUNTESS.—Countess Mary, who is subject to sudden whims, sometimes of a sinsister and violent character, look with favorable eyes upon John, her coachman. His bravery in rescuing horses from the burning stable ignited by a cigarette carelessly thrown aside by the Countess, leads her to quite ignore distinctions of class and show her attachment to John, much to his embarrassment, for he loves Lucy, the Countess's maid. On the way to the railroad station to meet arriving guests, the Countess presses upon the reluctant John her cigarette case which he stuffs into his pocket.

Baron Winfield, one of the guests, is fascinated by the maid and markedly evinces it. His stolen kiss is hotly resented by the girl and by John who, entering during the course, lays hands on him roughly. At the hunt on the following day the Countess commands John to ride by her side in attendance. Riding off with him apart from the other hunters she feigns illness. John lifts her from the saddle. He is startled the next moment to find the Countess's arms around his neck and a fervent kiss upon his lips. Baron Winfield's gun is discharged accidentally and he is badly wounded. The Countess accuses John of shooting him out of revenge for kissing Lucy.

Ten years imprisonment is John's sentence. Lucy is accused of stealing the cigarette case which she found after John had put it in a drawer. John learns of Lucy's disgrace. Seizing an opportunity to escape he takes to the country where he meets Lucy. John hides in his mother's home and evades efforts of the police to find him.

The Countess, her wild passions finding no one upon whom to vent her malicious temper, one day goes too far in her maltreatment of her pet cats. Biting one of them in a frenzy, the feline turns upon her and claws her fatally. Upon her deathbed she confesses to her vindictive charge against John, leaving him free to love Lucy in liberty.

BROADWAY STAR FEATURES, Inc.

WIFE WANTED (Two parts).—The action develops around Henry, a young man whose Uncle Joe insists that the youngster shall marry and settle down. The young man is engaged to a charming young lady, and, believing their marriage is imminent, the uncle is advised that his nephew has been married two months, so that the uncle's financial promise may be realized, Henry being desperately hard pressed for money. When Henry explains the situation to his fiancee, she readily consents to an elopement, because her father forbids an immediate marriage, and she sets 7:30 p. m. that night as the most convenient time. The uncle, overjoyed at the good news, wires that he may be expected any time, and is soon on his way to make the acquaintance of the new member of the family.

Uncle Joe arrives unexpectedly and complications follow rapidly. Henry has to have a wife in a hurry. His friend, Billy, and his wife, are to help in the elopement and Henry conceives the idea of passing Billy's wife off as his own little helpmate. After considerable argument, Billy is induced to lend his wife for an hour or two and is, himself, relegated to the position of butler. Uncle Joe is finally admitted and introduced. To make sure the newlyweds really love each other, Uncle Joe insists that they kiss before he gives Henry a check for the amount promised. This enrages Billy and he makes it uncomfortable for Uncle Joe in more ways than most butlers ever conceived.

In the meantime, Henry's fiancee becoming anxious, as it is long past 7:30 p. m., phones his apartments. Uncle Joe answers the phone and surprises her with the announcement that Henry has a wife. Incensed at her lover's supposed duplicity, she immediately proceeds to investigate. She arrives on the scene and interrupts what she supposes to be a happy family party. Henry tries to explain, but she will not listen. She returns home and tells her father that Henry has jilted her. Father starts after the culprit with a gun. He arrives with blood in his eye and Henry, seeing that he is getting in too deep for comfort, explains everything. Uncle Joe favors the girl Henry has picked out to be his life's partner and all ends happily.

CAPTAIN ALVAREZ (Six parts).—Robert Wainwright, arriving in the Argentine Republic to look after his father's business, finds himself in a hotbed of revolution. Stopping at the home of Don Arana, foreign minister to Rosas, the tyrant, he meets and falls in love with Bonita, Don Arana's niece. Bonita favors the rebels and through Wainwright's love for her, wins him to their cause. He communicates with General Urguiza, the rebel leader, but the messenger is intercepted by Tirzo, Rosas' spy. As Tirzo also aspires to the hand of Bonita, he schemes to get Wainwright out of the way, and insinuatingly sugests that he leave the country at once.

Wainwright arranges for passage on the first ship leaving for the north, but contrives to escape, after the vessel leaves port. He returns to Don Arana's house, meets Bonita and acquaints her with his plan to join the rebels. She makes him a present of Mephisto, a wonderful horse, and suggests he change his name to Alvarez. Wainwright, now a rebel under the name of Captain Alvarez, so distinguishes himself that he becomes the scourge of the Federals. He is commissioned by General Urguiza to get in communication with Don Arana, who is secretly in sympathy with the rebels, and arrange for the capture of a convoy of a million in currency dispatched to the Federal forces.

Captain Alvarez and Don Arana are arranging for the delivery of the convoy when the house is surrounded by the Federals through the work of Tirzo. Captain Alvarez is captured and led off a prisoner. Tirzo remains and promises Bonita to save Alvarez's life is she will marry him. She is about to consent when word comes that the prisoner has escaped. Alvarez returns to Bonita's home, fearful that harm has befallen her, and promises to return again at midnight to make sure of her further safety.

Alvarez returns to his command, and captures the million in currency and is on his way to keep his midnight appointment with his sweetheart, when he hears Tirzo plotting with a band of gypsies to kidnap Bonita. Alvarez arrives at Don Arana's first; waits for Tirzo, who comes alone, and in a fight kills the spy whose body is carried off by the gypsies. A band of Federals intercept them, recognize Tirzo, and rush to Don Arana's house, where they capture Alvarez, and he is to be shot at sunrise. In the meantime the Federals are defeated and Rosas, the tyrant, flees for his life. Alvarez, by a trick, induces the Federals guarding him, to flee. The rebel forces arrive opportunely, and all ends happily in a picture emblematic of the birth of a new republic.

FEATURES IDEAL.

THE ACTRESS' REDEMPTION (Four parts).—While Charles is making love to the actress, Evelyn, his old parents at home are fondly believing their only son is devoting himself diligently to his studies. Evelyn, enraptured by her friend's necklace, begs Charles to buy her one. That night he writes a letter to his parents asking for more money to devote to his studies. Charles' mother has saved up a little money of her own, and once more helps her son. With the money his mother sends him, Charles procures the much-coveted necklace, but owes the dealer a balance of some thousand francs. The balance of the money not forthcoming quickly, the jeweler threatens drastic measures. Evelyn has heard all, and decides to terminate her friendship with Charles. Desperate, he appeals to his father, but in vain.

Gorsip, a notorious usurer, sees in Charles a new victim, and tells him it will be necessary for him to sign a draft in his father's name. Charles, frantic at the thought of losing Evelyn, yields to the usurer's subtle suggestion. At a mask ball Charles sees Evelyn again. Amidst the gaieties and smiles of Evelyn, Charles forgets the crime he has committed. Gorsip comes to collect the money on the forged draft. In the meantime Charles receives a letter from his heartbroken father, telling him about the forged draft, and that he had to sell the home of his ancestors in order to save the honor of the family. Charles then writes a letter to Evelyn, telling her that his love for her has caused him to commit this crime. His father is ruined, and he is going away to try to redeem his foolish mistakes.

Charles' parents have left the home where they have spent many happy years. Evelyn becomes sanguine, and she determines to right the great wrong she has committed against Charles' parents. She plans to rent the house which once belonged to them, and which now belongs to Gorsip. The inhabitants of the village do not take kindly to the newcomer. Charles' father, homesick, takes advantage of the darkness to go to see the beloved home once more. The old man recognizes Evelyn as the one who has caused his son's downfall and curses her. By this time Evelyn notices that Gorsip has fallen in love with her and wishes to marry her. He will give her as a dowry a deed to the house in which she is now living. He signs his name to the document, but immediately becomes suspicious of the motives of Evelyn and tries to recover the paper, but Evelyn succeeds in hiding the precious document in one of the books in the library. Gorsip meditates his vengeance. He bribes the gardener to allow him to enter the house and search for the deed. Evelyn demands to know what he is doing in her house.

During this period Charles has returned to his home, having succeeded in business, and begs his father to pardon him, telling him he has suffered greatly. Evelyn has made up her mind to take the deed to Charles' parents, and Gorsip, maddened by the thought that he is about to lose his precious document, uses his revolver. He wounds Evelyn, but she succeeds in running away and reaching the house in which Charles' parents now live. The would-be murderer is conducted to prison and Charles' parents are touched by Evelyn's act of bravery and redemption and forgive her.

WARNER'S FEATURES.

MOTHER LOVE.—A young girl is a talented violinist, and wins a scholarship in a school of music. In the village is a banker who is a deacon of a church of whom everybody is afraid. He convinces the father of the girl that music is leading her astray, and declares that the only way to save her is to make her his wife. The father falls dead at the wedding. A year later a child is born. The young wife leads a life of sorrow and abuse. The husband takes her violin away from her and refuses her girl friends permission to come and see her. When she rebels, he drives her out of the house.

She goes to the city and makes a name for herself as a musician. Her husband, chagrined at her success, tries to worry her. He sends a box of crepe intimating that their baby is dead. Being unable to stand the strain, she hurries home. He refuses her any information but takes her to the cemetery where there is a freshly made grave and makes her believe her child is buried there. Friends intercede in her behalf and she finds her child is alive and well.

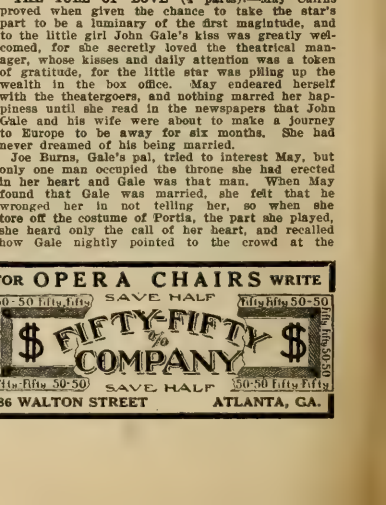
The banker and deacon is a hypocrite. The climax of the picture is his denunciation in church by his wife. She is aided and her charges are proved by his housekeeper who, up until the last minute, had been a staunch supporter. The picture ends with him fainting on the steps before the congregation.

BRINGING IN THE LAW (Three parts).—Jilted by his sweetheart, Bob Fordyce, a Texas cowboy, leaves home and goes farther West. In San Miguel he gets into an argument with one of the followers of the Cibelo Kid a notorious outlaw, who draws his gun and cold bloodedly shoots him. When his mother and brother, Clay, hear of his death, the latter vows to avenge it, and, going to San Miguel, he also is wounded in an altercation with the Kid. He takes refuge at Doc. Booth's ranch, and in order to make old man Booth give him up, the Kid captures Freda, his only daughters, and takes her to the outlaws' mountain stronghold, and there keeps her prisoner. The scenes are, by the way, very fine indeed.

GARRISON FILM CO.

THE TOLL OF LOVE (4 parts).—May Cairns proved when given the chance to take the star's part to be a luminary of the first magintude, and to the little girl John Gale's kiss was greatly welcomed, for she secretly loved the theatrical manager, whose kisses and daily attention was a token of gratitude, for the little star was piling up the wealth in the box office. May endeared herself with the theatergoers, and nothing marred her happiness until she read in the newspapers that John Gale and his wife were about to make a journey to Europe to be away for six months. She had never dreamed of his being married.

Joe Burns, Gale's pal, tried to interest May, but only one man occupied the throne she had erected in her heart and Gale was that man. When May found that Gale was married, she felt that he wronged her in not telling her, so when she tore off the costume of Portia, the part she played, she heard only the call of her heart, and recalled how Gale nightly pointed to the crowd at the



THE ALBUQUERQUE FILM CO., Inc.

FEATURING

MISS DOT FARLEY

Direction of G. P. HAMILTON

RELEASING THROUGH

Warner's Features, Inc.

Two most sensational master productions

"THE LUST OF THE RED MAN"

the best Western story ever produced

"THE PRICE OF CRIME"

a beautiful story of pathos combining sensationalism and bigness that will make splendid photoplay history.

Coming Productions :

"RESERVED SHOT" and "WHEN WOMEN LOVE"

Mammoth Productions

Western Studio, 406 Court St., Los Angeles, Cal.

If your pocket-book could talk it would recommend

MIRROROIDE

The Screen of No Regrets

The exhibitor who practices economy and wants quality, and durability as well as perfect results —invests his money wisely in Mirroroide, universally conceded the world's best projection surface—he knows it has stood the test of time—tests that no other screen on earth could stand—he knows it is waterproof and unaffected by the elements. Over 7400 Mirroroide users know we have done the hard thinking, the experimenting, the blood sweating for them as we have for you. We know Mirroroide will serve you as to your every requirement best of all and at the lowest cost.

Don't forget Mirroroide service and guarantee. Mirroroide is made in 3 tints—Silver White—Silver Flesh—Pale Gold—2 grades, A, medium—B, Extra Heavy Matte.

Our factories are running day and night owing to the fact that we demonstrated Mirroroide at the recent convention in a way that gave every exhibitor the evidence of his own eyes.

Large Demonstration Samples Free. Let Us Show You

THE J. H. GENTER CO., Inc., NEWBURGH, N. Y.

Agencies in all Principal Cities

Get a trial sample of Mirroroide Ready Mixed, Heat-Resisting, Metalized, Glass Bronzes 20 cents postpaid

box office as he helped her out of his automobile and said, "All because of you, dear, and all for me." She became obsessed with a desire to go away somewhere to forget, so she quit the company. She felt a snapping in her heart. She realized her future was dead. Then Joe came back into her life. She visited the cafe where she and Gale had passed so many happy hours. Soon her purse became empty. Some of her old stage pals replenished it. Antonio was particularly helpful but the gaunt figure of want began to look up large. She had to let her maid go. Joe took her out to dine, when he heard that the little girl was leading the life of a butterfly. A silhouette of May and another kissing held away the hand that poised above the door knob, and Joe read failure through the shadow from the lamp's glare.

Then the Gales returned. May was dining with Antonio as Jack and Mrs. Gale entered. May saw only Jack. Love overpowered her—her senses fled, and, coatless she wandered to the street. A policeman thus found her and took her to the police station. The prison bars, against which she beat her frail body in an attempt to cry out against injustice, appalled her. She longed for the path that was straight. Her past life floated before her in panoramic mockery, and she was beckoning a victim of despair when Mrs. Gale interested herself in uplift work. She became interested in the little star, and unknown to each other they planned a future. Mrs. Gale took her home with her. Jack was away with a road company and she learned to love her angel of mercy. Gale returned. May was heartbroken when she found herself in the home of the man who had wronged her. She wanted to protect the little wife that had become so dear to her, and at night planned to go quietly away.

Gale had the same thought until he could get May away with a road show, and they came together in the drawing-room. Jack was taking away a bag of money. May didn't need any, but when Mrs. Gale awakened by the sobs of the little star and she found she and her husband together, doubt began to creep into her mind. May took it all in at a glance. Insisting that Jack play his part and remain with the woman he swore to love, she took the bag of money to cast suspicion upon herself. The wife believed her to be a thief and set the police onto her trail; but they didn't find her, although the trail led to the water's edge. They recovered the money, but decreasing ripples told a dramatic story to what end the little star had gone to protect the sanctity of the home of the woman she had learned to love.

ECLIPSE-URBAN.

THE BIRD OF PREY (2 parts).—Lawson is a banker and two of his clerks, Will Deeds and Joe Harvey, are in love with his daughter, Eva. Deeds proposes and is accepted, but in spite of the rivalry between the two young men, Joe Harvey still remains a faithful friend to Deeds. A few days later Deeds gets an opportunity to take a wax impress of the safe key and has a duplicate made. He then persuades Eva to see him late that evening and tells her that he must disguise himself to leave the house so that people will not talk. Instead of going directly away, however, Deeds goes into the office and steals some money and papers. Joe Harvey, who lives opposite, sees a bearded stranger leave the house, and next day, on discovery of the theft, describes him to Mr. Lawson. Eva, hearing Joe's story, is suspicious, and begs Deeds to come and tell her that he is not a thief. In his usual disguise, Deeds comes again to the bank that night. Joe follows him in. Deeds confesses to Eva and promises to return the loot if she will come for them herself next day at the docks, where he has it hidden. She consents and Deeds leaves her. In the passage he meets Joe, who springs at him, but Deeds is a powerful man and overpowers Joe, forcing him into a room, and locking the door, escapes. Joe opens a window in the room and springs onto the slender top branch of a tree and is soon on the track of the bearded thief. He follows him to an attic and is dumbfounded to recognize Deeds. Deeds declares that he is sorry and will do all in his power to undo the damage done. He promises to return the money to Joe if he will come to the docks the next day. Joe agrees. In the meanwhile Deeds arranges for a tugboat with Captain Mayne. Eva arrives at the docks and goes out to the tug in a boat. Joe Harvey arrives at the docks shortly afterward, but becomes suspicious and refuses to go in the boat. In a moment he is seized and carried by force, but on the way out to the tug knocks one of the crew into the water. This sailor is later rescued by a police boat, and forced to confess. Another tug is soon in pursuit of Deeds. Eva and Joe are locked in a cabin. Shots piercing the wooden partition apprise Joe that a boat is in pursuit. Deeds takes Eva on the deck and ties her to the stren of the boat, making it impossible to risk shooting again. Joe is successful in breaking out of the cabin, and seeing that the rescue party are helpless to give aid, he climbs over the side of the boat and entangles the rope in the propellor. The other boat steams alongside and Deeds and his accomplices are captured. Eva is released from her awful position, and finds loving shelter in the strong arms of Joe Harvey.

THE MYSTERY OF GREEN PARK (2 parts).—It is night. In the garden of a magnificent villa appears a mysterious visitor. He climbs over the wall and enters a waiting motor car; he is heavily masked. Next day the papers are full of the latest sensation. Mr. Vgo Chancer, a rich landowner, has been assassinated in his villa, Green Park. The police being unable to throw any light on the affair, the noted detective is called upon to investigate the case. He is playing bridge at the house of a friend, who is a millionaire named Crawford, when the note is brought to him summoning his aid, and his host promptly offers him the loan of his motor car to go out to the villa. The detective can find no trace of a wound upon the murdered man, and nothing appears to have been disturbed. In searching through a desk Barnet-Parker finds a receipt for £500 in bank notes which has been changed into sovereigns by Fronsin, a money changer, and in a drawer he finds in a bag a quantity of sovereigns which are counterfeit. Finding trace of sand upon the carpet, Barnet-Parker concludes that Chancer was sandbagged and the tracks of the sand lead him to the garden gate, across the pavement, and then abruptly cease.

A clearly defined track of a motor tire of somewhat unusual pattern is plainly imprinted in the mud, but to Parker's astonishment he finds that it tallies exactly with that on Crawford's car, but which has not been driven right up to the gate. Baffled by this coincidence, Barnet-Parker scraped acquaintance with Sims, Crawford's chauffeur, who is washing the car down in the yard of the house. Parker has divested himself in an old suit and pulled a cap over his eyes and easily persuades Sims to talk to him by offering to help him in his work. He finds out that only Crawford himself uses the car and after a good deal of conversation, accompanies Sims to his room over the stable, where he learns that Crawford has a weak heart and is afraid of syncope, and insists that Sims every night should come to the passage outside his room, in which he has caused a window to be placed, through which the man has to look at his master to make sure he is sleeping peacefully and record his visit at the same time on a time chart. Now Sims has told Barnet-Parker all this because he wants a night off, and thinks he can easily persuade this new friend to punch the clock for him. The detective agrees, but as soon as the chauffeur has taken his departure, he follows him to make sure that he is really only out for the pleasure. Seeing him meet his girl and take her to a music hall, Barnet-Parker returns to Crawford's house and examines the time charts, finding that these show that Crawford was at home on the night of the crime.

Abandoning this clue, Barnet-Parker determines to follow up that of the counterfeit coins, and repairs to the offices of Mr. Fronsin, the money-changer. Here he discovers that it was Chancer's habit to have a small cross stamped on all gold coins, of which he required a quantity each week, and thus Barnet-Parker discovers that these counterfeit coins must have been substituted for the marked gold by the thief, giving the incentive for the crime. Leaving word with the chief of police of his discovery, and asking him to detain anyone passing sovereigns marked in this manner, the detective returns home, where he received a visit from Crawford, who invites him to dinner that night at a gaming club, so that they may play cards afterward. Now Parker is still very much inclined to believe that Crawford has been mixed up in the Green Park murder.

When they are seated at the tables, Parker is horrified to discover that his wallet has been stolen, in which he has placed a very large sum of money in notes. Unwilling to spoil the party, he borrows £10 from Crawford, who gives it to him in sovereigns, one of which is marked with a small cross, which is immediately noticed by Barnet-Parker. His suspicions again thoroughly aroused, on the following night Barnet-Parker breaks into Crawford's house to make a search. Curiously enough, before he has made an entrance the millionaire comes quickly out of the house, and hurries away without seeing the detective who has hidden behind the railings. This makes things a good deal easier for Barnet-Parker, who is accompanied by his assistant. When they arrive at the window outside Crawford's room and raise the blind, they discover that to all intents and appearances he is in bed, peacefully sleeping. This, of course, managed by a cleverly made dummy. Searching through his desk Barnet-Parker finds his own pocketbook, also several bags of marked sovereigns which must have been stolen from Green Park Villa. Hiding the dummy under the bed, Barnet-Parker takes its place, his assistant getting into a wardrobe, and when at daybreak Crawford returns, he is confronted with the evidences of his guilt and makes a full confession, to the triumph of Barnet-Parker.

HEPWORTH-AMERICAN.

THE CRY OF THE CAPTIVE (2 parts).—Austin Temple meets Zorah Vibart, a beautiful girl, who lived all her life in a little cottage in the woods with her invalid mother, Hannah Vibart. Zorah's mother dies and leaves a letter to her brother-in-law, Thornly Vibart, begging him to take care of the girl. Now Thornly is a gentleman and card-sharper, and he decides to accept this strange legacy, forcing Zorah to be of use to him in his profession. One day a friend brings Austin Temple with him, having previously held forth on the great beauty of the strange young girl whom he has discovered. When Temple is introduced to Zorah, the poor girl tells him of the shameful life she has been forced into leading. Temple threatens to expose Thornly if he does not allow Zorah to go free and marry him. Having no other alternative, much against his will, Thornly is forced to consent. A burglary which he has planned fails ignominiously, and one of the gang betrays Thornly, who is arrested. Thornly is sentenced to a long term of imprisonment, leaving the lovers free to start a new life together.

A THROW OF THE DICE (2 parts —His intemperate habits cause Buck Evans to be discharged from John Henderson's coal mine, at which he was employed. In a very short time, he arouses the sympathy of his fellow-workers to such a degree over his dismissal that a general strike is declared. The men refuse to return to work unless Buck Evans is reinstated. Repeated efforts on the part of the mine foreman, Mark Grimsby, to induce the owner of the mine to reinstate Evans and end the strike, prove unavailing and conditions among the works become critical. The foreman makes a final appeal to Henderson, who offers to settle the controversy by a throw of the dice. Fate decrees that the strike shall continue and the foreman gives up, having done all in his power to bring the contending factions to an agreement. The baby boy of Buck Evans dies as a result of his father being unable to provide sufficiently for him. Driven mad with grief, Buck Evans' wife steals Henderson's baby, which occupies the one soft spot in his heart, and conceals it. She then returns and after telling Henderson, how, as the result of his game of dice, her own baby died, she declares that she will now play him for the life of his child. The die is cast and the woman wins. She rushes off to slaughter her enemy's child. Henderson follows and comes upon her with his baby just after her better nature had prevailed upon her to spare the youngster and she returns it to its father. Buck Evans, who still continues drinking, falls down a steep railway embankment and is killed. The way is thus cleared for a happy settlement of affairs. The men return to work, while Mrs. Evans is installed as foster-mother to the child, whom she once sought to injure, but now has grown to love.

POPULAR PLAYS AND PLAYERS, INC.

MICHAEL STROGOFF (5 parts).—The Czar of all the Russians was holding a great court fete when General Kissoff quietly told him that the Tartars under Feofar-Khan were in active rebellion commanded by Ivan Ogareff. The Czar needed a fearless, faithful courier, a man with a frame of iron to carry a dispatch through hostile territory to Irkutsk, where his brother, the Grand Duke, at whom the insurrection would first be aimed, was stationed. So Michael Strogoff was selected as best fitted for the dangerous mission.

Strogoff set out bearing passports made out to him under the name of Nicholas Korpanoff. On board the boat in his guise of a simple trader Michael Strogoff met a beautiful young girl, Nadia Fedorova, who was going to join her father, Wassili Fedorova, a political exile at Irkutsk. At Perm, Strogoff and Nadia continued their journey as quickly as possible by carriage. Michael and Nadia were separated when they were attacked by Tartars and Nadia was captured. Later Strogoff was captured and again met Nadia and also his mother. When his mother spoke, Michael was obliged to disown her, lest his identity become known. He escaped from the Tartars, only to be recaptured.

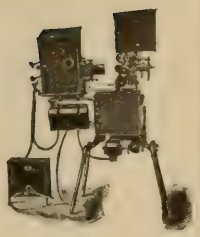
At the big Tartar camp, the forces under Feofar-Khan and those under Ivan Ogareff joined each other. Through Sangaree, Ogareff learned that Marfa Strogoff was among the captives and determined to torture her to make her disclose the identity of her son. As Michael Strogoff saw the knout descend on his mother's back, he disclosed his identity. Seizing the knout, he struck Ogareff across the face. The Tartars made a triumphal entry into Tomsk, where a big festival was held. At this festival Ogareff took Strogoff before Feofar-Khan. At his orders, Michael Strogoff was blinded by having a hot sabre passed close to the eye ball.

Michael and Nadia escaped, the girl serving as eyes for the blind man. They struggled along, enduring horrible hardships. At Lake Baikal they met some refugees who were planning to float by raft down the Angara to Irkutsk. Soon they found the river choked by ice. The stream was coated with oil from natural petroleum beds. This the Tartars fired. Michael and Nadia escaped over the ice cakes. Ivan Ogareff going to the Grand Duke atat Irkutsk, he posed as Michael Strogoff, the messenger from the Czar, and delivered the official message. Then he plotted to deliver up Irkutsk to the Tartars. He fired the oil-covered river.

As the blaze started, Nadia entered Ogareff's room. She and Michael Strogoff had reached Irkutsk in the confusion and were searching the palace for the Grand Duke. The traitor knew that his hope of safety lay in killing her. He drew his sword when Michael Strogoff entered. Ogareff thought to make quick work of the blind man armed only with a long Siberian knife, but was surprised to find that Michael Strogoff could see. Soon Strogoff dispatched his worst enemy.

When In Doubt

About Obtaining Your Machines, Supplies, etc.



Distributors For

POWERS
SIMPLEX
EDISON
MOTIOGRAPH
MACHINES

Get It From A Strong Dealer

You Receive Value For Your Money When You Purchase Anything From The

WE EQUIP MOTION PICTURE THEATRES COMPLETELY

Picture Theatre Equipment Co.

21 East 14th Street New York

The largest Motion Picture Supply House in America

Six Reels—6,500 Feet. Make two 3 Reel or three 2 Reel Features. Lecture, Press matter, Lobby display, Lantern Slides. Attractive Litho Paper 24 Sheets, 6, 3 & 1 sheets.

This Feature A Sure Money Maker

Capt. F. E. Kleinschmidts'

ARCTIC HUNT

Native and Animal Life in the North

Salmon Fishing off Alaska Coast, Polar Bear, Seal, Walrus, Reindeer, Caribou, Brown Bear, Millions of Birds

ARCTIC FILM CO.

Suite 1209—220 West 42nd St., New York

Phone, Bryant 3559

When the irons had passed before Strogoff's eyes, his tears had saved him and the optic nerves were only temporarily paralyzed. He had hidden the fact that he could see until such time came for his supreme revenge. Nadia was reunited with her father, who had been pardoned for organizing a band of the exiles to defend Irkutsk. The brave girl and Michael Strogoff were wedded. The dauntless courier to the Czar was later rewarded by the cross of St. George, a decoration from his Emperor.

MECCA FEATURE FILM CO.

A HIGHWAYMAN'S HONOR (5 parts).—Alice, the daughter of old Squire Standish, is secretly loved by Dick Poynings, her father's steward. During a run with fox hounds, Alice's horse bolts, and but for Dick, who stops the runaway on the edge of a precipice, she would have been killed. Sir Philip Standish, the squire's nephew, the suitor he (the squire) intends for Alice, also witnesses the affair, but is unable to help. Dick's heroism is soon rewarded, for Alice confesses her love, and gives him her portrait in a locket.

Encouraged by this, Dick boldly approaches the squire, but is dismissed with insults. Dick elopes with Alice to the cottage of an old nurse. The father sends his son, Rupert, and Sir Philip in pursuit. They track down the lovers, now married, and in the duel that follows Dick accidentally kills young Rupert. He is arrested and condemned for murder. Full of resource, however, he manages, after a tremendous struggle, to escape from the prison to the open country, where in his exhaustion he is befriended by a notorious highwayman, "Black Dick." Soon after chance brings them together again. The robber, mortally wounded, dies in Dick's arms, who then changes clothes with the corpse. Dick takes to the road as "Black Dick," thus enabling himself to "earn" enough to help Alice and her child, who believe him to be dead.

Years pass. The child, now a young girl, has a suitor, Cornet Lovelace, of His Majesty's Dragoons. Meanwhile the exploits of the supposed "Black Dick" have caused a reward of 1,000 guineas to be offered for his capture. It further happens that Joan, the daughter of Dick, riding in the coach of her uncle, a bishop, the only one of Alice's relations who have not abandoned her, is thus found by Dick, who stops the coach and makes the occupants surrender their valuables. Among these is the locket that her mother once gave to him. Overcome by this discovery, Dick pursues the coach and reaches it just in time to aid the travelers who have been set upon by footpads. Having completed this, Dick returns home with the bishop, to whom he tells the nature of his life. The bishop promises him help.

Some time later Joan and Alice, returning home by coach, stop at the Chequers Inn, to which place also comes Dick, closely pursued by Lovelace and his Dragoons. Dick is hidden by the friendly landlord behind a secret panel, but emerges from his concealment, to come face to face with his wife and daughter. He is thus found by Lovelace, to whom Dick surrenders himself. The young officer, though torn with conflicting feelings, is true to his duty, and is sorrowfully giving orders for Dick's removal, when the door opens and the old bishop rushes in with a pardon.

PLAYGOERS FILM CO.

MANON LESCAUT.—The story opens in the country home of Manon and her brother, who have been brought up by a religious father. The father insists that Manon shall enter a convent for life. He compels her to go. But on the way, stopping at an inn at Amisne, she meets the Chevalier Des Grieux. It is a case of love at first sight between them. Manon and Des Grieux escape the vigilance of her traveling companions and flee to Paris.

The Baron De Bretigny, a rich nobleman, occupies a residence adjoining their home in Paris. He sees the lovely Manon and, attracted by her beauty, makes her acquaintance. Failing in his attempts to separate her from Des Grieux, the Baron finally writes to Des Grieux's father, an old friend of his in Picardy. The father, objecting to his son's choice, sends his elder brother and two servants to Paris, who takes Des Grieux away by force. The Baron bribes Manon's maid, who tells her mistress that Des Grieux has deserted her, and, as he does not return, the heartbroken girl believes he has left her forever.

Alone in Paris without friends or money she is finally compelled to accept the protection of the scheming Baron. Meantime the Chevalier, believing that Manon no longer cares for him, is persuaded by his faithful friend, Abbe Tiberge, to renounce the world and become an abbe. He goes to Paris and begins his studies at St. Sulpice. But Manon is still the unforgotten object of his affections.

Through the false maid Manon discovers the trick by which the Baron separated her from her lover. She leaves the Baron's house and visits the Chevalier at St. Sulpice, where, after a pathetic and emotional scene she induces him to go with her. Manon's brother, Lescaut, a dissolute and unprincipled guardsman in the army of King Louis XV, is hired by the Baron to attack the Chevalier and bring Manon back to him. Ruffians engaged by Lescaut carry out this plan. But after a furious street combat the Chevalier escapes. Manon, however, is taken to the Baron's house and kept prisoner. Here the Chevalier follows her and alone and unaided rescues her after a struggle with the perfidious Baron.

The lovers leave Paris and establish themselves in a suburban villa, where Lescaut comes and convinces them that he had no part in the plot. Their financial circumstances go from bad to worse. Des Grieux finds himself beset by creditors and is finally persuaded by his false friend, Lescaut, to gamble at a fashionable club in Paris. The Baron is present, induces the Chevalier to play with him and accuses him of cheating at cards. Manon interferes, but both are arrested and thrown into separate prisons. The Chevalier escapes from St. Lazare after wounding a guard and compelling the prison governor to open the doors for him.

Meantime Lescaut has quarreled with the Baron and decides to help the Chevalier rescue Manon from the Magdalen. This is accomplished, and disguised in boy's clothes, Manon escapes in a coach with the Chevalier, driven by Lescaut. The prison guards start in pursuit. The coach is wrecked in an accident, Lescaut is killed and Manon recaptured. Taken back to prison she is sentenced to be transported to America, to the French province of Louisiana, as was the custom of that period. Chained to a number of unfortunate women prisoners Manon is taken to Havre. Des Grieux follows, seeking for some means of saving her, but finding none he smuggles himself as a stowaway on board the ship, which carries his beloved to far-away New Orleans.

In the new world Manon and the Chevalier are kindly treated by the Louisiana Governor. But when the Governor's nephew becomes infatuated with Manon the Governor decides to separate them on his nephew's account. The Chevalier fights a duel with the nephew, then escapes with Manon to the forests, where she dies.

CHARIOT FILM CO.

THE SENSATION OF THE AGE.—The day that Dr. Hall's lighting patents are issued he learns that his pretended friend, Schatte, has received patents on the same device. Dr. Hall attends Schatte's demonstration and learns that his ideas have been stolen. Schatte sells his patents to the electrical combine and gets a large advance. Dunn, Hall's assistant, has been stealing his employer's secrets to Schatte. Dr. Hall discharges all his assistants, not knowing which one betrayed him, and advertises for a new one. Mrs. Hall after pleading with her husband is allowed to become the assistant and while working with her husband in the laboratory she is blinded by escaping current. She becomes totally blind. Dr. Hall, later, while conferring with his financial backers, telephones his wife, and while doing so conceives the idea of constructing a seeing telephone or "tele-photophone." Schatte tries to get a further advance from the head of the electrical combine, on his stolen invention he has sold and is told that he cannot get more money until he invents something epochal. He is shown the clipping describing Dr. Hall's "tele-photophone." Dunn demands more money from Schatte and Schatte has Dunn arrested for blackmail. Dunn, convicted and sent to prison, exposes Schatte in the court room and Schatte is later expelled from the electrical academy for his trickery. Dr. Hall is perfecting the "tele-photophone" and wires are strung between his villa and laboratory for the first public demonstration. He telephones home to his wife and can see his wife and children through the "tele-photophone." Schatte by crooked means gains control of the electrical combine and attacks Hall through the press.

Dunn escapes from prison by a daredevil feat and makes for Dr. Hall's home. Schatte intent that Hall's demonstration must fail tampers with the wires. The guests arrive for the demonstration. An electrical storm comes up. Dunn makes for the Hall home and Schatte on top of the telegraph pole attempts to cut the wires. Mrs. Hall becomes frightened at the storm and while she and her children sit huddled in the front room of their home the children see Dunn peering through the glass door. Mrs. Hall telephones her husband and a realistic demonstration is seen of the tele-photophone.

Dr. Hall over the telephone sees Dunn trying to gain entrance to his home. Just then lightning strikes the wires, hurls Schatte from the telegraph pole, killing him, strikes dead Dunn on the front porch of the inventor's home and the current running into Dr. Hall's laboratory stuns the inventor. Dr. Hall recovers, however, and later gives his tele-photophone, the sensation of the age, to the world.

SCHILLER FILM CO.

THE EVILS OF DIVORCE.—Martha and Bob are lovers. While picking wild roses along the country road Bob proposes. Martha kisses him and runs home. Bob follows and obtains the consent of Martha's mother to their marriage. After several years Bob is a successful attorney and his fortune enables him to buy a new home for his wife and child. In a case of his he secures a divorce for one of his clients, a Mrs. Stanley, who is an adventuress. Bob introduces her to his wife, and she becomes a friend of the family. She tries to win Bob, whom she loves. Circumstances are such that they are left alone a great deal, and one evening when Martha is unable to attend the opera because of the illness of their child. Mrs. Stanley and Bob go without her. They drink champagne, and it is Bob's first deception.

At a dinner some time later, Mrs. Stanley teaches Martha's child to swear and drink; and the friendship of the two women is broken. Bob takes the part of Mrs. Stanley and in order to save their child, Martha leaves home. Bob employs a detective to follow his wife and kidnap the child. In this object he is successful. Upon discovering the loss of her child, Martha becomes despondent and pawns her jewelry so that she may return and plead with her husband to give her the boy. This he refuses to do and informs her that he will secure a divorce, if possible, and give the child to Mrs. Stanley to raise. Martha is almost crazed with fear, and secures an attorney who gives her very little hope.

Court convenes. The testimony is now in. The pleas have been made and because Martha left her husband the judge grants him a divorce and the custody of the child. This is more than Martha can stand, and knowing that this decision means the ruination of her only child, she sacrifices her reputation, and swears that her ex-husband is not the father of the child. Martha faints. The ex-husband swears the opposite, but the words of Martha had its desired effect. The judge changes his decision and returns the child to his mother. Bob and Mrs. Stanley are married and continue to live the fast life that Mrs. Stanley has been used to. On the other hand Martha and the boy, also named Bob, are struggling to live. Bob is now selling newspapers to help his mother, while his former father has lost his practice and has now become a drunkard.

Time passes and Bob has become a young attorney, resembling his father. The former Mrs. Stanley pays the penalty of her adventurous life during one of her joy rides when she is dashed to death over a high cliff while in her machine. Previous to this Bob had left his second wife and cares for nothing but drink. During one of his drunken spells he is seen lying in the gutter. He is arrested and thrown into jail. The son has fallen in love and before proposing to his sweetheart tells all to his mother. The mother is finally compelled to explain to him that he is living under an assumed name. This only makes Bob's love deeper and truer and with this thought he proposes marriage to the girl he loves. The next day in the police court many drunkards are up for trial and when the name of Robert Walters is announced, Bob realizes that it is his father. He immediately asks the judge if he can pay the fine. The judge acquiesces and Bob takes his father home. When the father realizes that he is face to face with the woman who once bore his name and whom he had deceived, he starts to withdraw when Martha calls him back and says, "I forgive you because you are the father of my child." In the meantime Bob, Jr., rushes to his sweetheart's home just as the reconciliation takes place.

GENERAL FILM CO.

WOMAN AGAINST WOMAN (Three parts—Biograph K. & E.).—Bessie Barton and John Tressider are sweethearts. Rachel Westwood, a friend of Bessie, is in love with John and jealous of his attentions to Bessie. John escorts Bessie to a dance and Rachel upbraids him. He shows plainly his love for Bessie and Rachel vows to be revenged. Bessie's father is killed and her sister, Miriam, and she are compelled to work. Rachel tells them about the fine opportunities in the city and urges the Barton girls to accompany her. Rachel, instead of going to work, spends her time with George Crooke, a man about town.

Rachel introduces Bessie and Miriam to Crooke and his friend, Gilbert Craven, who invite them to take an automobile ride, but they refuse. Bessie and Miriam find employment. Rachel, eager to be revenged, tries to lead Bessie astray and invites her to a show. Bessie has to work that night and Miriam consents to go. Rachel writes to Crooke asking him to meet her after the show and to bring Craven for Miriam. Rachel and Miriam meet Crooke and Craven and they invite the girls to supper. Miriam protests, but Rachel persuades her to stay. Rachel plies Miriam with drink and leaves her alone with Craven. Bessie is frightened when Rachel returns without Miriam and implores her to tell her where Miriam is. Rachel sneeringly tells her she left Miriam with Craven. Miriam returns home later and confesses all to Bessie. Bessie demands an explanation from Rachel, but Rachel refuses to answer. Bessie throws Rachel out of the room and when the landlady learns what Rachel has done she orders her to leave.

Bessie sends for Craven and tells him he must marry her sister. He refuses his name, but offers his money. Bessie resents the insult and tells him she can care for her sister alone. Crooke, Craven, Rachel and a few of their friends go horseback riding. Craven is thrown from his horse and seriously injured. Bessie and Miriam happen on the scene and meet Rachel. Craven is carried to a clergy house nearby and when he hears Rachel tell Crooke that Bessie and Miriam are outside, he indicates he would like to speak to Miriam. Craven

Above All THE AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLING & CASH REGISTER

SUPREMACY

Comparisons again prove the absolute superiority of the

AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLING AND CASH REGISTER

Its rapidity, simplicity and accuracy make it the Standard Ticket Selling Machine the World over, wherever tickets are sold.

Over 2000 machines now in use.

Endorsed by the owners of the largest Moving Picture Houses from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from Canada to the Gulf.

If you want to increase your profits and systematize your Business, write for illustrated and descriptive catalogue.

It contains valuable information which will help you to increased success.

AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLING AND CASH REGISTER CO.

1476 Broadway, New York Third National Bank Building, St. Louis, Mo.

EXCELSIOR FEATURE FILM CO., INC.

Announce The Release of Their First Production

"THE TOLL OF MAMMON"

A Forcible Masterpiece in Four Parts

Written and Directed by HARRY HANDWORTH (Late Pathé Head Director)
Featuring OCTAVIA HANDWORTH (Late Pathé Star)

Supported by GORDON DE MAINE, TOM TEMPEST, WILLIAM A. WILLIAMS (Late Pathé Leading Man) and Many Other Screen Favorites

A Thrilling Story based upon Realistic Life. Dealing with a vital question of the present, revealing a moral which appeals to every individual and vividly portrayed. Excellent photography and full of action.

Elaborate Advertising Matter, consisting of 2 ones, 2 threes and 9 sheet Pictorial Lithos—12 styles 11 x 14, 4 styles 22 x 28—artistically colored Photos. Picturesque Heralds, Slides and Cuts.

State Right Buyers!
Releases Every Three Weeks

Now is the time to secure the Excelsior Brand of Features for your territory.
Write! Wire! Phone!

EXECUTIVE OFFICE
110 WEST 40TH ST., NEW YORK.
SUIT 1002 - PHONE, BRYANT 8059
ARTHUR ROSENBACH, Sales Mgr.

STUDIO
LAKE PLACID
N.Y.

gets Miriam's forgiveness and marries her before he dies. Miriam becomes a mother and Bessie assumes the care and responsibility of the child. Later Miriam meets Henry Chesterton, a wealthy bachelor, who falls in love with her. Miriam implores Bessie to keep her secret and Bessie tells Chesterton the baby is hers. Bessie is taken ill and the doctor orders rest. She returns home. Miriam places her baby in the care of Mrs. Crone, a nurse near her mother's home, and Bessie promises to look after it secretly. With mother's care and John's love, Bessie is restored to health and marries John.

Miriam marries Chesterton and writes Bessie that she cannot go to see the baby any more, because it would mean her ruin if Chesterton knew. Bessie calls on Mrs. Crone to see the baby and is seen by Rachel. Curious to know what Bessie is doing at Crone's, Rachel peers in at the window and sees the baby. John meets Rachel and is amazed when she remarks about Bessie having a fine baby. He denies it and she tells him his wife is a hypocrite. Rachel leads John to Crone's cottage and the evidence is all against Bessie. Rachel tries to console him, but he angrily pushes her away. Bessie's mother is puzzled at John's actions when he returns home and when Bessie enters and tries to kiss him, he stops her and asks her where she has been. Bessie tells him she has been to the village, but he becomes enraged and tells her she lies, adding "There is a child at Crone's that calls you mother." Bessie is horrified and tries to explain, but John will not listen. He leaves the house in a rage and surprises his friends by taking his first drink of liquor. Bessie thinks of her promise to Miriam and when questioned by her mother, who has guessed the truth, Bessie confesses and tells her mother the story of Miriam's misfortune. John, drunk and miserable, meets Rachel, who taunts him. John grabs Rachel and is about to strike her when Crooke interferes. Rachel jumps between John and Crooke and Crooke shoots her.

Mrs. Barton determines to see Miriam and have her set Bessie right with John. Miriam is overcome with grief when informed that John believes the baby to be Bessie's. Miriam determines to tell the truth and leaves with her mother. John is ashamed and overcome when Miriam confesses she is the guilty one and implores Bessie's forgiveness. John and Bessie adopt Miriam's baby and it brings sunshine into the Tressider household.

SEVEN DAYS (Biograph and K & E—Three Parts)—In the opening scene Bella Wilson is shown waiting impatiently for her husband, Jim, who is late as usual in returning home to dinner, he having tarried with his friends, Dallas Brown and Tom Harbison. On his arrival home, Bella takes him to task, causing a quarrel which results in Bella leaving the house. At the end of a month Jim is notified that Bella has been granted a divorce in Reno. He is very blue when he receives the news, and his friends, Mr. and Mrs. Dallas Brown, Tom Harbison and Kit McNair, try to cheer him up. Tom and Kit are in love with each other. Tom jokes about the divorcé, which Jim resents. Kit takes Jim's part, which leads to a quarrel between her and Tom. He leaves in a rage, and on returning to his home resolves to go abroad for a year.

A year later Jim gives a dinner on the anniversary of his divorce. Jim is informed by Charlotte, the cook, that Talka, his Jap butler, is ill, and when Jim goes to the butler's room a burglar enters. On Jim's return the burglar, to avoid being detected, hides behind a screen. The Jap is removed to the hospital. Charlotte informs her sweetheart, Flannigan, the cop, of this. The other servants believing Talka has the smallpox, prepare to leave the house. Charlotte departs with them. Flannigan remains in the kitchen to finish his smoke. Jim wants Kit to marry him, but she asks him to wait. Anne has been studying spiritualism and is convinced she is a wonderful medium. Her belief is augmented by two or three cocktails. Jim receives a telegram from his Aunt Selina advising him that she is coming to see him. Jim is afraid that if his Aunt finds that he is divorced from Bella she will cut him out of her will. He explains this to his friends and asks Anne to pose as his wife during his Aunt's short stay. Anne refuses, but Kit volunteers to play the part. Jim with help of his friends prepares for Aunt Selina's arrival. They remove such things in the room as might meet with her disapproval, throwing them over the screen where the burglar is concealed, much to his discomfiture. Aunt Selina arrives and Kit is introduced as Jim's wife. Bella, Jim's divorced wife, having regretted her hasty action, calls under pretense of seeing Charlotte, the cook. She meets Anne, who sends her to the kitchen. The burglar accidentally moves the screen, which causes Anne to believe more firmly than ever in her power as a medium. Tom arrives and meets Kit, who is presented to him as Jim's wife. The Board of Health, having diagnosed Talka's illness as smallpox, order the house quarantined and forbid any of the occupants to leave.

Guards are placed outside the house to enforce the qaurantine. Bella, desirous of keeing her presence in the house unknown to Jim, spends the night in the kitchen. Early the next morning Aunt Selina wakens Jim and Kit, reminding them of their duties under the circumstances. When Kit goes to the kitchen she discovers Bella, who explains that she is there to see the cook. To prevent Jim seeing her, Bella hides in the cellar and accidentally falls into the coal bin. Jim discovers her and she explains her presence to him also as being the result of a call on the cook. The burglar, who is roaming all over the house, gets into Anne's bedroom by mistake and in crawling under the bed he accidentally pulls the coverlet off her and retreats from the room on hands and knees, taking the coverlet with him. Anne, who is only half awake, is still further convinced by this incident of the presence of spirits in the house. Dail finds Aunt Selina's bottle of Pomona, apatent medicine of which she is very fond, and samples it. He leaves it where the burglar finds it and carries it off. Aunt Selina misses the bottle and has the whole house searching for it. This necessitates the burglar making quick changes in his hiding places and in doing so he makes considerable noise which Anne tries to convince Flannigan is spirit manifestations. Bella is introduced to Aunt Selina and a friend of the cook's. Aunt Selina decides that in the absence of servants, each must do their share of the housework, and they draw lots. Kit draws "Cook"; Anne, "Butler"; Dal, "Laundress"; Jim, "Scullery Maid and Chambermaid"; Harbison, "Assistant Cook and Plumber"; Flannigan, "Ladies' Maid"; Selina, "Barber"; and Bella, "Furnace." Bella and Tom start building a furnace fire. Bella believes Jim is still in love with her, and to arouse her jealousy she persuades Tom to pretend they are engaged, which he does much to the annoyance of Jim and Kit, who are making a vain attempt to prepare breakfast. FlannigaLn, always on the alert, hears the burglar again and tries to discover the source of the noise. He is unsuccessful as the burglar hides in the dumbwaiter and as Flannigan runs upstairs he lowers himself in the dumbwaiter, and when Flannigan rushes downstairs he pulls himself up. Dal outlines to the others a plan of escape from the house which is frustrated by the guards. Aunt Selina is discovered missing and they all hope she has escaped, but much to their disgust she is captured by the guards and returned to the house through the window.

The seventh day of the quarantine finds all the occupants of the Wilson house, with the exception of Aunt Selina, in an extremely nervous and upset condition. To add to their discomfitures they have all been forcibly vaccinated with the exception of the burglar, whose presence in the house has not been discovered. Flannigan's food is appropriated by the burglar when his back is turned. Aunt Selina compels Flannigan to scrub the roof and Bella to dress her hair. The bottle of Pomona is again removed by the burglar, and this time Flannigan is punished for stealing it. Bella and Tom keep up their pretense of being engaged and complain that the quarantine prevents their being married. Dal suggests they be married by telephone. Tom, frightened at this idea, tells Dal the 'phone is broken. Dal endeavors to repair it, but Tom prevents him by throwing it down the chimney, where the burglar is at the moment concealed. Anne discovers the 'phone is missing and hearing the burglar sneeze, believes the spirits are in attendance. She drops the clothes line down the chimney and commands the spirits to give her a sign. She is delighted on pulling the rope up to find the missing 'phone which the burglar has tied on the line. Kit attempts to cut the 'phone wire to prevent Tom from marrying Bella. She is discovered by Tom, who is amazed to see the 'phone, as he tells Kit he threw it down the chimney. Kit explains to Tom that she is not Jim's wife and they embrace. Aunt Selina finds them in each others' arms and is horrified as she naturally believes Kit is her nephew's wife. Jim also wishing to prevent Bella from marrying Tom, tries his hand at putting the telephone out of business. Bella discovers him, which leads to explanations, and they are discovered embracing by Aunt Selina, who refuses to listen to them. The presence of the burglar is discovered, and through him Aunt Selina learns the true state of affairs. The Board of Health announced that the Jap has not had the smallpox after all, and the quarantine is lifted. Jim and Bella are forgiven by Aunt Selina and all are happy, including the burglar, who makes his escape. Thus were seven days passed in the house of James Wilson.

LORD CHUMLEY (Biograph & K. E.—Four Parts).—Gasper La Sage and Blink Blunk, his tool, serve their prison term and are released. La Sage, masquerading as a gentleman, plans a robbery, resulting in Blink Blunk being caught. Several years elapse and La Sage goes to England in search of more victims. Lieut. Hugh Butterworth invites his chum, Lord Chumley, to spend the season at his home. Chumley meets Eleanor, Hugh's sister, and Jessie, his sweetheart. Lady Adeline (Hugh's aunt) is taken with Lord Chumley and sets her cap to win him. Chumley falls in love with Eleanor, but receives no encouragement from her as she considers him a fortune hunter. La Sage meets Hugh at the Club and invites him to his room (which is a veritable gambling parlor). Hugh loses heavily and La Sage, seeing in him an easy victim, forces a loan upon him. Hugh weakens and becomes tighter in the grasp of La Sage. At the barracks a collection of £1,000 is taken up for the widow and orphan of McGregor. Hugh contributes liberally, and the money is intrusted to him to give to Mrs. McGregor. Hugh meets La Sage and confides the importance of his mission. La Sage persuades Hugh to drop in for a little game and later drugs and robs him of £800. When Hugh awakens he hurries to Mrs. McGregor's and is startled to find only £200. He returns to La Sage's and is horror-stricken when told he lost the money at cards. Mrs. McGregor sends him a letter of thanks acknowledging the £200. In desperation Hugh appeals to La Sage, who, anxious to gain possession of the letter, promises to try and raise the money.

The day before Hugh leaves with his regiment, La Sage threatens to expose the letter to Hugh's Colonel unless Hugh helps him to marry his sister Eleanor. Hugh confides his troubles to Chumley, telling him the conditions La Sage has made. Chumley feels certain that Hugh was drugged and robbed. Blink Blunk demands money from La Sage for going to prison for five years for him. Chumley overhears conversation. While La Sage is trying to raise some money, Chumley promises Blink Blunk freedom and money if he will tell what he knows of La Sage's history. Blink Blunk shows Murder-de-pris prison mark on chest and swears La Sage has similar mark. Chumley warns La Sage not to show letter to Hugh's Colonel or he will expose him. They have a violent quarrel and are separated by Hugh's father. Chumley pretends he is under influence of liquor and is ordered to leave house. Chumley assures Hugh he will raise the money and urges him not to worry. Chumley sells his effects and takes cheap lodgings in order to raise money. He secures a room in Mrs. McGregor's home—unaware that she is the widow he is looking for—having lost the address. Jessie is puzzled to see him coming from such humble lodgings. He asks her to keep his address confidential, but she tells Lady Adeline. La Sage poisons Eleanor's mind against Chumley by telling her that he is responsible for Hugh's trouble regarding the McGregor money. Chumley is astonished when Meg anuonnces Lady Adeline. Just as she is making desperate advances, Hugh's father calls. Lady Adeline hides in the fireplace. Butterworth is worried on account of Hugh being reported missing. Chumley apologizes for his previous behavior and is forgiven. He explains his present humble conditions as being the result of gambling. Meanwhile Meg has been cleaning the chimney, and when Lady Adeline appears she is covered with soot.

The regiments are reported to disembark, but no names are available. Eleanor reproaches Chumley for inducing her brother to gamble away Mrs. McGregor's money, and announces her engagement to La Sage. Chumley pleads with her not to marry him, that he is a scoundrel, but to no avail. The troops arrive and they are all thankful when they see Hugh among them. Meg waves to Hugh, saying that he is the man who brought them the regiment money. Chumley is astounded to learn this and takes package from his desk which is the £800 he has saved) and gives it to Mrs. McGregor, receiving a receipt in full from her for the £1,000. He swears all to secrecy and explains a scheme to defeat La Sage's villainy. Zavier, a detective, takes charge of the case, and Blink Blunk, who is anxious for revenge, agrees to help with his evidence and arrangements are made to deport La Sage as a crook. A ball is given in honor of the home-coming troops, and La Sage insists upon Eleanor marrying him at once. Hugh declares that she shall not marry him. La Sage is defiant and tells them that while they may prove him a crook it will not prevent him from disgracing Hugh by showing letter to Colonel Pemroke. Eleanor agrees to become his wife to save her brother. Chumley tells Hugh not to worry as he has a plan that will fix La Sage. Hugh explains all to Eleanor and she asks Chumley to forgive her. Chumley tells her of his love, and La Sage, seeing them embrace, demands satisfaction. He is furious when Hugh produces the letter from Mrs. McGregor acknowledging receipt of £1,000. La Sage demands an explanation of the original letter stating the amount as £200. Meg explains by saying that the £200 was a wedding gift to her from Lieut. Butterworth which her mother acknowledged. La Sage makes accusations again Hugh to

FLA. GA. ALA. MISS. LA.
APEX
FEATURE SERVICE
315 RHODES BUILDING
ATLANTA, GA.
TENN. N. C. S. C. VA.

State Right Buyers, Do You Want a Gold Mine?

If So, Get in Touch For This Big Moneymaker

This picture features Martha Russell, the well known actress and former Essanay star. It depicts the "Evils of Divorce," which is now the most talked of question in the country. This feature needs no publicity, as every newspaper and preacher throughout the United States are now dealing with the Divorce ? ? ? ? ? ? ? ? ? ? ? ? ? ?

We are spending no fortune in advertising this picture, but will put the money into it, which will be one of our merits.

Watch for our future releases which will be the talk of the Movie World

SCHILLER FILM COMPANY, SCHILLER BUILDING CHICAGO, ILL.

the Colonel which Chumley strongly denies, ending in Chumley and La Sage having a violent quarrel. Chumley tears open La Sage's shirt, showing fleur-de-lis prison band. La Sage is still defiant until he discovers Zavier, when he is only too glad to leave the country. Chumley briefly tells the guests how he got rid of La Sage and Butterworth is deeply grateful that his daughter has escaped marrying such a scoundrel. He takes pleasure in announcing the engagement of his daughter to Chumley and Jessie to his son Hugh.

STRONGHEART (Biagraph & K. & E.—Three Parts).—Frank Nelson and his sister Dorothy are on a hunting trip. Soangataha—"Strongheart," a Chief's son, saves Frank from drowning. Frank and Dorothy are deeply grateful to him for his kindness. Strongheart is so impressed with Frank's tales of the East that he decides to return with them to acquire the wisdom of the white man for the benefit of his race. When Strongheart reaches his destination he gives Dorothy a string of beads and a knife to Frank as a parting gift. Later Strongheart is a star on the Columbia College eleven and a great favorite with the boys. They are all enthusiastic over their big Football game which they are training. Ralph Thorne is in love with Dorothy Nelson, who treats him with indifference. Dorothy favors Dick Livingston, her brother's chum, and Thorne, insane with jealousy, plans to disgrace Dick by getting him intoxicated and persuading him to gamble. Dick yields to the temptation and loses heavily. Thorne makes him a proposition to loan him $3,000. Dick consents and bets the entire amount on Columbia, thereby hoping to get out of the debt. Thorne exchanges his list of signals for Dick's and sends them to the opposing team. Billy Saunders makes love to Molly, Dick Livingston's sister. As a proof of his love she asks him to give her something he has sworn never to part with. He gives her the Football signals (which are in Thorne's handwriting) and warns her of their importance.

Dick is very devoted to Dorothy, but she gives him no encouragement for she realizes that she has fallen in love with Strongheart and leads him to hope she cares for him by giving him a rose. The signals are received by the opposing team, who are too honorable to take advantage of the stolen information. Their manager, Farley, decides to take the matter up with Buckley, the manager of the Columbia team. Thorne suggests that perhaps you can tell who sent the signals by the handwriting. Strongheart recognizes Dick's handwriting and refuses to show the signals till after the game. In trying to shield Dick, Strongheart allows himself to be suspected of having sent the signals and is not allowed to play the closing half of the game. Under the promise of secrecy, Strongheart allows Billy to see the signals. Billy believing that Molly has double-crossed him. Dorothy and Molly, unaware of what has transpired, are astonished at not seeing Strongheart in the game. Strongheart is frantic with excitement when Columbia wins the second half. Mrs. Nelson gives a dance in honor of the winning team. Billy accuses Molly of sending the signals to the opposing team. She denies this and gives the signals she has to Strongheart. They are astonished to find them in Thorne's handwriting.

Thorne attempts to make love to Dorothy, but she repulses him. He leaves her and meets Billy, who asks him to send a telegram—merely a scheme to compare his handwriting with the signals in Strongheart's possession. Strongheart is convinced that Dorothy cares for him, and asks her to be his wife. Dorothy tells him of her love for him and tells him to come the following day for her answer. Frank enters just as they are in a fond embrace. Strongheart tells Frank that he loves Dorothy and wants to marry her. Frank upraids him for daring to love a white girl and orders him out of the house. The following day a banquet is given to the football team. Billy begs Molly to forgive him for ever having doubted her. She finally relents and when he asks her to marry him she consents. Dick treats Strongheart coldly until he learns that the signals sent to the opposing team were in his own handwriting. He is overcome and apologizes to Strongheart. The members of the team hold a meeting for the purpose of discovering the guilty man. Dick is unable to explain how his signals were sent. Strongheart is called next and he accuses Thorne of having sent Dick's list to the other team and produces Thorne's own copy which Billy has given to Molly. Thorne realizes that he is caught and confesses his guilt. Thorne leaves in disgrace. Strongheart cannot be urged to join the Boys' dinner, saying that he has been taught that he is not one of them. He prepares to leave for home and Dorothy tells him of her great love and that she is ready to go away with him. Black Eagle arrives with the news of the death of Strongheart's father. He tells Strongheart of the great need his people have for him and forces Strongheart to realize that Dorothy could not live the life of his people. Strongheart struggles between love and duty. Dorothy entreats him to take her with him. He begs her to leave him while he has the courage to do what is right and despite her pleadings he decides to follow the path of duty and return to his people. He kisses her a sad farewell and is led away by Black Eagle.

IN DEFIANCE OF THE LAW (Three Parts—Selig).—Billy McVeigh, a member of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police, runs amuck another person of this service undeserving of its uniform, named Nome. The latter becomes his sworn enemy and is alert for a chance to "get even." A mysterious murder is committed in the forest far to the north of the barracks, and Scottie Deane is reported to have committed same. Billy and Nome are selected to make the arrest, and the instructions are that Billy take the trail in one direction and Nome in another, the two converging later on. So they leave headquarters—the two enemies on their long, lonely and perilous mission.

Some time later, as Billy battles his way through a snowstorm, he meets a young woman urging along a dog team almost exhausted. On the sled is a long box like a rude coffin. His inquiries elicit from her the story that she is taking the body of her dead brother to the settlement. The warm-hearted Billy, deeply moved, decides to accompany her, and they camp for the night. He sets up a tent for her and one for himself. During the night she slips into his tent, takes his rifle, goes to the apparent coffin, opens it, and liberates a live man, her husband, Scottie Deane—the man wanted. Scottie, however, is not a criminal, as he slew the other man in self-defense. Scottie's wife, Isobel, in extenuation, puts a note in Billy's tent explaining this, asking forgiveness for her seeming ingratitude and asking him not to follow them for her sake.

Nome and another constable, Carter, happen across Billy's camp the next morning. Billy seeing his enemy, instinctively reaches for his gun, and then realizes that it is gone. Nome grows suspicious, and begins to question Billy concerning the two tents. Billy then tells the latter that a half-breed spent the night with him, but Nome, still suspicious, investigates the second tent and confronts Billy with some strands of golden hair from Isobel's head. Billy takes it from him, and makes as if to throw it in the fire, but really keeps it as a sacred souvenir. Nome and Carter laugh at his inability to explain away the hair, and tell Billy that after they have rested they intend to trail his "half-breed." They then retire to the second tent. Billy now realize that the only way to save Isobel, with whom he is deeply smitten, is to rush on ahead and arrest Scottie himself. He appropriates the sleeping policeman's gun and sets out on his snowshoes to overtake the fugitives. He is a skilled trailer, and he soon overtakes Scottie and Isobel in their camp and overpowers the former. Isobel turns furiously on Billy. At this moment Nome and Carter appear. Nome denounces Billy, coarsely accuses the girl most unjustly, and a stand-off fight ensues, in which Carter and Nome are driven off. Billy then explains to Isobel why he arrested Scottie, liberates his prisoner and bids them good-bye. When Nome's report reaches headquarters, Billy is dismissed from service and he become a hunter in the solitudes.

Scottie and his wife return to the wilds. He goes to a distant place to get their little daughter, who was placed in charge of a French family when they made their original flight. While he is there, the house is attacked by Indians, and all the whites are on the verge of being wiped out when Billy comes to the rescue. He finds Scottie dying, but Billy recognizes him as he enters the room, and he places his little girl (Isobel) into Billy's keeping, begging him to restore her to her mother (of that dear name) in the far forest home. Billy regards this trust as sacred, and they make the long trip to find the mother down with the smallpox, and deserted even by her Indian servants. He gets help from a missionary, and Billy having obeyed the request of the dying man, resumes his wanderings. Some months later he receives a letter from the missionary, telling him that the mother and child were saved. Learning that little Isobel is in Montreal, and seized with a longing to see her again, he goes to the big city, finds the little girl and meets the mother once again. Eventually both the Isobels—mother and daughter—become the members of his own family.

APEX.

AN ALPINE TRAGEDY (Five Parts).—After a severe storm in the Alps a party of guides discover a deserted infant lying in the snow. They carry the child to a peasant woman who agrees to bring it up with a crown little son. The only clue to the baby's identity is a gold locket engraved with a regal monogram, and it is not until twenty years later that the truth is discovered. Then Ivan, Grand Duke of Slavonia, learns that the girl is his own niece who was reported lost in a snowstorm, and he sends Count Thurnia to bring her back to Slavonia. The girl, Clarissa, has married Boris, the son of her rescuer, and learning that the Duke wishes her to abandon her humble husband, she refuses to go with Count Thurnia. Whilst Thurnia is in the cottage Clarissa's husband returns home, and the woman, not wishing him to know of her high birth, hides the Count in an attic. Boris enters with a stranger who he has saved from the snow, and the unknown reveals himself as Captain Gergius, a Slavonian officer who is carrying dispatches through Slavonia being at war with Greria. Boris promises to help the Captain and lends him a suit of clothes. Then they leave the cottage door together. Count Thurnia who has overheard their plans decides on a treacherous plan to remove Boris from his path. He hastens to the camp of the Grerian Army near and betrays Boris to the soldiers of Greria. There is an exciting chase through the snow, and Captan Sergius, exhausted, gives the dispatches to Boris to deliver. Boris escapes, but Sergius is captured and executed, although because of his dress and the fact that he carries no papers, the soldiers believe him to be a peasant. Thurnia returns to Clarissa and tells her that her husband has been killed, and the woman, for the sake of her child, agrees to accept the Grand Duke's offer. She becomes a member of her uncle's household, but although surrounded by every luxury, is always unhappy. Thurnia, who is badly in need of money, presses her to marry him, and when she persists in her refusal, engages a desperado to kidnap Clarissa's child. He then tells Clarissa that unless she allows him to announce their engagement she will never see her child again. Meanwhile, Boris, after many adventures, returns to his mountain home to find it deserted. He tries in vain to trace his wife, and, broken-hearted, obtains employment as a boatman on a river in Slavonia. By a turn of fate Boris is able to save his own child from the hands of Thurnia's hireling, and there follows a happy reunion between husband and wife. Count Thurnia takes his own life, and the clouds that had settled over Boris and Clarissa are dispelled forever in the sunshine of happiness.

GAUMONT.

BLACK NISSEN, THE HUMAN BEAST (Three Parts).—"Black Nissen" is one of the "boys" of a Western mining camp. He is known as "Black Nissen" because of his surly and disagreeable character. As usual, when pay day arrives he has nothing coming to him, as his bad habits keep him constantly in debt. The rest of the boys, enriched by the dollars handed to them by their chief, make off for the saloon to gamble and make merry. "Black Nissen" cannot join them as he is absolutely broke. While slouching away, an attractive woman, named Margaret, crosses his path. She is under his influence and he forces her to give up all the money in her possession. He saunters off to the saloon to be with the rest. At the table a heated argument comes up and guns are quickly drawn. "Black Nissen" recognizing discretion as the better part of valor, beats a hasty retreat.

Still faced with the need for money, he plans to rob the chief, whom he has seen hide some cans in a box beneath the bed of his cabin. He awaits a favorable opportunity, and then forces Margaret, his unwilling slave, to climb through the cabin window to secure the box. The chief, with his Chinese servant, returns just at this moment and captures Margaret. Because she is a woman, the rough justice meted out to the thief in the West is tempered by mercy. She is set upon a horse and expelled from camp. From fear of "Black Nissen," Margaret keeps her actions secret and does not expose the bully. When the hubbub is quieted down, "Black Nissen" endeavors to rob the chief himself.

With the stolen plans he goes to Europe, and by constant study succeedes in perfecting the dynamite motor which is destined to revolutionize motor boat propulsion. He carries off a valuable trophy at a big regatta, winning at the same time large sums in wages. Subsequently he ingratiates himself in the favor of Col. von Wentheim, President of the Motor Boat Club, and immediately lays siege to the affections of his charming daughter Ellen. One day while out sailing with Ellen, a sudden squall overturns their yacht, and the pair are soon struggling for life in the water. "Black Nissen" swims ashore and gives the alarm. A search party is organized, but they find no trace of the girl. Ellen is rescued, however, by William, son of an old barger. His sweetheart is a charming girl, who happens to be none other than Margaret. This being one of those coincidences which everyday life reveals as stranger than fiction.

Margaret discovers that a reward of $5,000 is offered by von Wentheim for news of his daughter, and is fortunate enough to be the lucky recipient of same. After giving the colonel the information he desires, to her surprise she finds that "Black Nissen" is commissioned to bring Ellen home. Under the name of Evinrude, he has outwardly acquired the semblance of a gentleman, but his innate brutality is once again betrayed. Incensed by Margaret's slow progress with the oars, he strikes her viciously. Reaching the barge and finding no one on deck, in a fit of rage he thrusts an oar through the bottom of the tiny craft and with a push of the foot sends the rapidly foundering boat adrift. Ellen, much against her will, returns home under the escort of "Black Nissen."

SUBSCRIBE FOR THE
Moving Picture World
Oldest, most reliable trade paper, covering every department. Has the largest direct circulation. The recognized representative paper of the industry.
Domestic $3.00 per Year
Canada $3.50 per Year
Foreign $4.00 per Year

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

Classified Advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted :: :: :: ::

SITUATIONS WANTED.

EXPERIENCED.—Union operator desires position anywhere. Mass. license. References. RALPH THACHER, 35 Mason St., Beverly, Mass.

C. LOUNDS.—Who has had charge of the positive department and dark rooms of the Kinemacolor Co. is now open for similar position. Apply 17 7th Ave., Whitestone, L. I.

AT LIBERTY.—A No. 1 drummer, sight reader, carries complete outfit for motion pictures. Address C. M., care of Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

SALESMAN.—With strong following on entire Pacific Coast desires to connect with reputable house. Address SALESMAN, care of Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

WHO WANTS ME.—I have $1,000 and more to invest with services in any moving picture proposition. I have 10 years' experience as operator and manager in theaters and road shows. Am single, strictly sober and responsible, not afraid of work; will go anywhere. Will buy or lease picture theater or travel with good feature film proposition. Can furnish new machine and cash bonds if required. Will work on salary, percentage or partnership. Write me. BOX 165, Crawford, Neb.

MANAGER AT LIBERTY.—For the first time in twelve years. Can show successful records of the past and furnish the best of references as to my ability and honesty. Want an opening where a man will have a chance to show what he can do, as I have the capacity to do big things. Sober and reliable at all times. J. W. WILLIAMS, 4636 W. Lexington St., Chicago, Ill.

PIANO PLAYER.—Que pictures, every scene. Large library of music. Best reference. EMMA OAKLY, Gen. Del., Regina, Sask., Can.

CAMERAMAN.—At present engaged, wishes to make change for the better. High class man for both studio or commercial photography. Reliable references, with or without camera. Address PHOTOPLAY, care of Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

AT LIBERTY.—Expert cameraman with outfit. Understands about laboratory work. CAMERAMAN, 520 West 184th St., N. Y. City.

HELP WANTED.

AGENTS WANTED.—For atlas work, map work and Mexican War map. Unusual opportunities for intelligent men with ability to sell. Write for particulars. RAND, McNALLY & CO., Dept. B, Chicago, Ill.

WANTED.—Experienced negative girls. Steady employment. MANUFACTURER, care of Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

THEATERS WANTED.

WANT TO RENT.—Or lease a first class picture theater in the state of Ohio. Have had seven years' experience. ROSCOE CUNEO, Upper Sandusky, Ohio.

FOR RENT.—Am remodeling my twenty thousand dollar building into vaudeville and moving picture theater, size 114 x 32½ feet. Absolutely up to date. Hot water heat. Tenant to furnish all loose new fixtures, namely—scenery, curtain, machine, piano, chairs, electric light fixtures, matting, etc. Roomy; capacity 400 seats, center business block, next door to opera house. Rent monthly $100. Lease any term of years. Population, 5,000. Money maker for up-to-date man. Do not answer unless you comply with these terms. MRS. IVER LARSEN, 309 E. Water St., Decorah, Iowa.

FOR SALE.—Lease and equipment. Brand new, strictly up-to-date, 550-seat moving picture house, Chicago suburb 45,000. Cheap rent, big opportunity. Best reasons for selling. Investigate. Address THEATER, care of M. P. World, Chicago, Ill.

PRETTY NEW THEATER.—Just opened. Owner cannot operate. Only one in town. $500 cash. POSTMASTER, Roswell, Georgia.

THEATERS FOR SALE OR RENT.

PICTURE THEATER.—Fully equipped in good town in Pennsylvania, $2000 or will take partner with half interest to manage business. No triflers need apply. Address F. S., c/o Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

EQUIPMENT WANTED.

WE BUY.—Pathe professional machines complete or mechanism only. Send manufacturer's serial number. Price and condition. Manager CHRYSTAL THEATER, Minnneapolis, Minn.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

TRIPOD SALE.—Tilt, panorama and revolving swings, fit any camera, extra long legs, new. Make offer. H. HOOVER, 10 East 14th St., N. Y. City.

COMPLETE EQUIPMENT.—Of Lyric Theater, Janesville, Wis. Will sell all or whatever you want. Come and investigate.

FOR SALE.—24 in. Kimble Electric Ventilating Fan, reversible and variable speed, 60 cycle, 104 volts; has been used less than 50 hours. W. F. BENTLEY, Middlebury, Vt.

POWERS 6A.—Bargains we purchased 4 Powers 6A complete with motor and Loop setters that were used one week at the exposition at Grand Central Palace. Will sell cheap. Address P. T. E. CO., 21 East 14th St., N. Y. City.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

BRASS POSTER FRAMES.—For one, three and six-sheets. Also brass easels, brass railings. Write for complete catalog. THE NEWMAN MFG. CO., Cincinnati, O. 101 4th Ave., N. Y.

FOR SALE.—Any part of my moving picture theatre; opera chairs 65c. each, Simplex machines $125; Power's 6A $100; all goods used three months, have many other bargains in other fixtures. A. GLEN, Room 200, Houser Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

FOR THEATRE EQUIPMENTS.—Such as seats, picture machines, etc., see LEARS THEATRE SUPPLY CO., 509 Chestnut St., St. Louis, Mo.

NEW AND SECOND HAND CHAIRS.—At cut prices. Equipments bought and sold. We save you money on outfits. Designs and plans free. JOS. REDINGTON, Scranton, Pa.

FOR SALE.—A Pathe Head complete and ready to use. Address MGR. LYRIC THEATER, Fort Wayne.

FOR SALE.—Prestwick model professional camera, 6 magazines, 50 mm. lens, cases, tripods, complete outfit, used 3 months. H. J. BRYNIARSKI, Proctor's Theater, Plainfield, N. J.

ARC LAMPS.—13-10 Amp. Westinghouse, 1-10 Amp. Excello, 1-3 Amp. Daylight, D. C. Flaming Arc Lamps, 2-10 Amp. Westinghouse, 3-5 Amp. Stillvan and 1-10 Amp. Siemens-Shuckert, A. C. Flaming Arc Lamps, $10 each f. o. b. Milwaukee, Wis. COMMONWEALTH POWER CO.

FILMS WANTED.

WANTED.—To buy single and multiple reel subjects. Must be in strictly first class condition and all with paper, positively no junk wanted. Western, Indian and sensational subjects preferred. INDEPENDENT FILM & SUPPLY CO., Plaza Theatre Bldg., San Antonio, Texas.

WANTED.—Talking pictures. Few reels of pictures with Graphophone records. HOWARD MARTIN, care of Vogue Theater, Springfield, Ill.

WANTED.—Commercial reels, send list with name, make, condition, amount of paper and lowest cash price. H. A. P., care of Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

CAMERAMAN.—I specialize in features, news events, educational films. Send your films. Will represent good foreign concerns. GORDON, 314 Strand Theater Bldg., N. Y. City.

FILMS FOR SALE OR RENT.

FOR SALE.—Illinois and Wisconsin rights. Good feature, new print and paper. Never worked out of Chicago. Address FEATURE, care of Moving Picture World, Chicago, Ill.

FOUR REEL FEATURE FOR SALE.—Six cents (6c.) per foot, brand new, only run three times. "The Whirl of Destiny," a Mundstuk's Feature, 3,750 feet. Lots of paper. As I am not in the film business, will make this sacrifice. A. G. THOMAS, 1705 Fairacres Ave., Pittsburgh, Penn.

200 REELS.—$3 up, also Features. Reel cabinet holding 130 reels, $22. Powers machines $60, $75. Neostyle for making lists, $10. CONDOR FILM EXCHANGE, 154 Third Ave., N. Y. City.

PHOTOPLAY WRITING.—Evening course of three months' instruction in the theory and practice of scenario writing. AMERICAN PHOTOPLAY SCHOOL, 243 West 125th St., N. Y. City.

ORCHESTRA LEADERS—PIANISTS.—$1 money order brings you eight numbers. Piano, Violin, Drums or $1 for 25 assorted copies popular vocal and instrumental sheet music. GORDON MUSIC, 207 West 34th St., N. Y. City.

PACK YOUR THEATER.—Your dullest day I can make your capacity day. I am doing it. No souvenirs. Write for particulars. M. GRAVER, Mgr., Colonial Amusement Co., Jackson, Mich.

CAMERAS FOR SALE.

PROFESSIONAL MOVING PICTURE CAMERAS.—Two sizes. Tripods, Zeiss-Tessar 50 m. lenses, $150, $225. Special cameras to order. Repairing all makes. R. W. PITTMAN, 50 West St., New York City.

MISCELLANEOUS.

COMPLETE ARCHITECTURAL PLANS.—For convertible motion picture theater. Closed structure in winter, open air roofless inclosure in summer. Prices $50. HOMER JOSEPH DODGE, 615 Lamont St., Washington, D. C.

THE cheapest yet most profitable investment in the Moving Picture Business today —Advertising in

The Moving Picture World

Rates on request

INDEX

TO CONTENTS.

ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS 1819
"ACROSS THE BURNING TRESTLE" (Kalem).1803
ANDREW MACK JOINS RANKS.....1841

BIG FIRE AT LUBIN PLANT.....1803

CALENDAR OF LICENSED RELEASES.....1854
CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES..1856
CELEBRATED PLAYERS FILM CO.....1839
CHICAGO LETTER 1812
CHURCH PEOPLE IN THE PICTURE FIELD..1809
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Licensed).....1828
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Independent)....1829

DECISION IN POWERS-LAEMMLE SUIT.....1834
DOINGS AT LOS ANGELES.....1816
"DUTY" (Eclair Universal).....1833

ECHOES OF THE CONVENTION.....1809
EXHIBITORS ENTERTAINED AT THE BILTMORE 1810
EXHIBITORS' NEWS 1847

FACTS AND COMMENTS.....1799
FEATURE FILM STORIES.....1880
FILM "THE BEAST" AT EXPOSITION.....1814

GOOD PROGRAM AT TORONTO.....1835

"HIGHWAYMAN'S HONOR, A" (Mecca).....1802

INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES.....1870
INDEPENDENT FILM RELEASE DATES.....1892

"KRONSTADT" (Gaumont) 1838

L'AIGLON ARRIVES IN U. S.....1837
LANGUAGE OF ENCHANTMENT, A.....1801
LAST DAYS OF THE CONVENTION.....1804
LICENSED FILM STORIES.....1852
LICENSED RELEASE DATES.....1894

"MANON LESCAUT" (Playgoers Film Co.)....1908
MANUFACTURERS' ADVANCE NOTES.....1842
MICHIGAN CONVENTION 1836
MOVING PICTURE EDUCATOR, THE.....1815
MUSIC FOR THE PICTURE.....1817

NEW HOME OF THE MELIES BRAND.....1839

OBSERVATIONS BY MAN ABOUT TOWN....1818
"ONLY SON, THE" (Lasky).....1802

PAUL POTTER WRITES FOR RAMO.....1813
PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT, THE 1821
PLEADS N. Y. EXHIBITORS' CAUSE.....1835
PROJECTION DEPARTMENT 1823

ROBARDS, WILLIS L. 1833

SINGLE REEL, THE.....1800
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Licensed).....1852
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Independent).....1870
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Features).....1880

"VERY MUCH ALIVE" University).....1838

TO ADVERTISERS.

CARBON IMPORTERS.
KIEWERT, CHARLES L.....1900
REISINGER, HUGO 1897

ELECTRICAL & MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT.
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO.....1899
BELL & HOWELL.....1872
CALEHUFF SUPPLY CO.....1896
DETROIT MOTOR CAR CO.....1899
FOOS GAS ENGINE CO.....1895
FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC CO.....1898
HALLBERG, J. H.....1858
HOKE, GEORGE M., SUPPLY CO.....1864
KIMBLE ELECTRIC CO.....1875
PICTURE THEATER EQUIPMENT CO.....1883
SMITH, AL. C. & CO.....1845
SPRAGUE ELECTRIC WORKS.....1896
STRELINGER, CHARLES A., & CO.....1874
TYPHOON FAN CO.....1890
WESTINGHOUSE ELECTRIC CO.....1872

MISCELLANEOUS FEATURE FILMS.
ALBUQUERQUE FILM CO.....1881
ALL STAR FEATURE CORPORATION.....1777
ALL STAR FEATURE DISTRIBUTORS, INC...1869
APEX FILM CO.....1785
ARCTIC FILM CO.....1883
BOX OFFICE ATTRACTIONS & FILM RENTAL CO. 1867
CELEBRATED PLAYERS' FILM CO.....1879
CHICAGO FEATURE FILM CO.....1864
CHILD PLAYERS OF AMERICA.....1867
CONTINENTAL FEATURE FILM CO.....1781
ECLECTIC FILM CO.....Insert
ECLIPSE-URBAN 1877
EXCELSIOR FEATURE FILM CO.....1885
FAMOUS PLAYERS' FILM CO.....1774-75
FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO.....1862
GATES, ELEANOR, PHOTOPLAY CO.....1865
GENERAL FEATURE FILM CO.....1872
HEPWORTH-AMERICAN CO.....1877
ITALA FILM CO.....1789
LASKY, JESSE L., FEATURE PLAY CO.....1773
LIFE PHOTO FILM CORPORATION.....1787
LYNCH, E. W. 1788
MECCA, FEATURE FILM CO.....1879
MEXICAN WAR FEATURE FILM CO.....1863
NASH MOVING PICTURE CO.....1786
OZ MANUFACTURING CO.....1782
POPULAR PLAYS & PLAYERS, INC.....1776
SAWYER, A. H., INC.....1778-79-80
SHERMAN FEATURE CO.....1896
SCHILLER FILM CO.....1887
STERLING CAMERA & FILM CO.....1872
WARNER'S FEATURES, INC.....1784
WORLD FILM CORPORATION.....1790-91

FILM BROKERS.
WESTERN FILM BROKERS.....1864

FILM EXCHANGES.
APEX FEATURE SERVICE.....1874
BRADENBURGH, GEORGE W.....1896
ECONOMY FILM CO.....1864
FULTON, E. E.....1901
GREATER NEW YORK FILM RENTAL CO....1894
LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE.....1899
NORTHERN FEATURE FILM EXCHANGE....1872
STANDARD FILM CO.....1864
WENIZ, ISADORE 1864

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING CO....1893
GAUMONT CO. 1859
MAJESTIC MOTION PICTURE CO.....1902
NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CORP.....1792-93
THANHOUSER FILM CORPORATION.....1706
UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFAC. CO.....1768-69-70

LENS MANUFACTURERS.
GUNLACH-MANHATTAN OPTICAL CO.....1897

LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS.
BIOGRAPH COMPANY 1855
EDISON, THOMAS A.....1795
ESSANAY FILM MANUFACTURING CO....1767-71
KALEM CO. 1798
KLEINE, GEORGE 1783
LUBIN FILM MANUFACTURING CO.....1796
MELIES, GASTON, FILM CO.....1772
PATHE FRERES 1794
SELIG POLYSCOPE CO.....1903
VITAGRAPH CO. OF AMERICA.....1797

MISCELLANEOUS.
AUTOMATIC TICKET & CASH REGISTER CO.1885
BALKE, H. 1874
BOTANICAL DECORATING CO.....1899
CENTAUR FILM CO.....1895
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS 1889
CORCORAN, A. J.....1874
DADMUN CO. 1896
EASTMAN KODAK CO. 1895
FEALY, MAUDE 1860
GENERAL SPECIALTY CO.....1898
GUNBY BROTHERS 1899
INDUSTRIAL MOVING PICTURE CO.....1872
KRAUS MANUFACTURING CO.....1895
LATCHAW, E. R. 1898
NATIONAL MOVING PICTURE CO.....1901
NATIONAL TICKET CO.....1892
NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.....1895
PHOTO-CINES CO. 1874
RAW FILM SUPPLY CO. 1875
SMALLWOOD FILM CORPORATION.....1901
STANDARD FILM PRINT CO.....1874
THEATER BROKERAGE EXCHANGE.....1901
THEATER RECORDS LEDGER CO.....1898
TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO.....1845
VONNEGUT HARDWARE CO.....1891
TURNER, HALSEY CO.....1864

MOTION PICTURE CAMERA MANUFACTURERS.
GENNERT, G. 1897
SCHNEIDER, EBERHARD 1901

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
AMERICAN PHOTOPLAYER & SALES CO ...1974
DEAGAN, J. C.....1901
SEEBURG, J. P., PIANO CO.....1897
SINN, CLARENCE 1901

OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN SEATING CO. 1901
ANDREWS, A. H., CO.....1901
HARDESTY MANUFACTURING CO.....1901
STEEL FURNITURE CO. 1901
WISCONSIN SEATING CO.....1901

POSTERS AND FRAMES.
AMERICAN SLIDE AND POSTER CO.....1856
NEWMAN MANUFACTURING CO.....1873
THEATER SPECIALTY CO.....1864

PROJECTION MACHINE MANUFACTURERS.
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO.....1898
ERNEMAN PHOTO-KINETO WORKS.....1891
PHANTOSCOPE MANUFACTURING CO.....1900
POWERS, NICHOLAS 1904
PRECISION MACHINE CO.....1857

PROJECTION SCREEN MANUFACTURERS.
AFSCO, INC. 1861
GENTER, J. H., CO.....1881
DAY & NIGHT SCREEN CO.....1845

SONG AND ADVERTISING SLIDES.
ERKER BROTHERS 1896
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.....1896
VITASLIDE CO. 1896

THEATRICAL ARCHITECTS.
DECORATORS' SUPPLY CO.....1899

COOLING VENTILATION HEATING

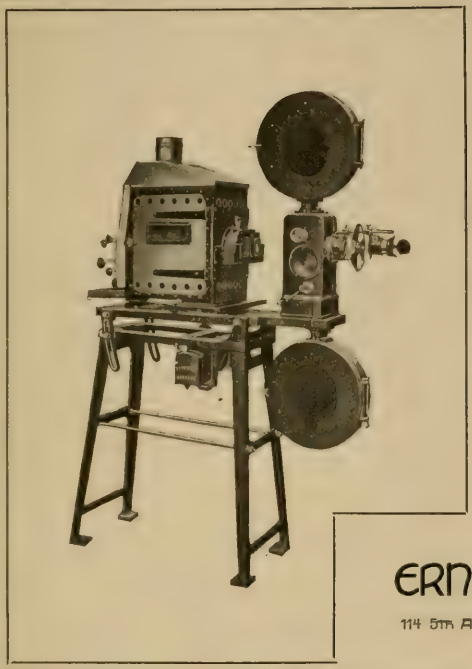
"TYPHOON BLOW-IN SYSTEM" has revolutionized the ventilating problem. You get in front of a desk fan to keep cool, not in back. Apply this common sense and blow the air in.

Don't waste money experimenting with exhaust fans.

The TYPHOON MULTIBLADE BLOWER will force air right through ordinary exhaust fans. Reversed, the air can be exhausted as well.

Our Catalogue W tells how to keep cool in summer and warm in winter.

TYPHOON FAN CO. NEW YORK CITY 1544 BROADWAY



Increase your bank account by pleasing your audience. You can do so by using THE KING of all Projecting Machines,

The Ernemann All-Steel Projector "IMPERATOR"

The only machine that shows an ABSOLUTE GUARANTEED FLICKERLESS PICTURE. Don't be behind time. Write for descriptive literature.

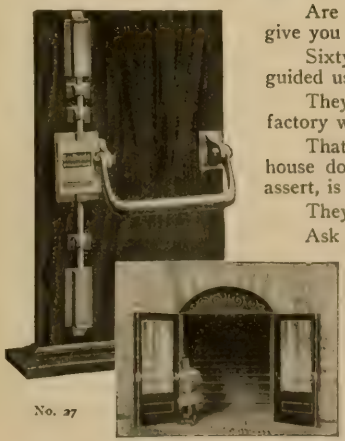
ERNEMANN-PHOTO-KINO-WORKS
114 5TH AVENUE NEW-YORK 114 5TH AVENUE

TRADE MARK
REG. U. S. PAT. OFFICE
No. 85021

Von Duprin

PAT.
U. S. AND CAN.

Self-Releasing Fire Exit Latches



No. 27

"Safe exit is a universal demand."

Are your Exit doors safeguarded? A few dollars' expense would surely give you mental relief—would it not?

Sixty years of experience in the merchandising of Builders' Hardware guided us in the production of these Latches.

They have stood the test in every competition, and have proved satisfactory wherever applied.

That the mechanism is as good as new after years of service on a school house door is proof positive of substantial construction. This quality, we assert, is found only in the Von Duprin Self-Releasing Fire Exit Latches.

They are the best.

Ask for list of theatres equipped with Von Duprin

Send for Catalogue 12D.

See Sweet's Index.

Vonnegut Hardware Co.
General Distributors
120-124 East Washington St., Indianapolis, Ind.

INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES

AMERICAN.

June 10—Sparrow of the Circus (Drama).....
June 15—Jim (2 parts—Drama).....
June 17—The Unmasking (Drama) .....
June 22—The Painted Lady's Child (Two parts—Drama) .....
June 24—Blue Knot, King of Polo (Drama)..
June 29—The Little House in the Valley (Two parts—Drama) .....
July 1—Nature's Touch (Drama).....
July 3—Mein Lieber Katrina Catches a Convict (Comedy) .....
July 6—Cameo of the Yellowstone (Two parts—Drama) .....
July 8—Feast and Famine (Drama).....

BEAUTY.

June 9—Nancy's Husband (Drama) .....
June 16—The Dream Ship (Drama).....
June 23—The Tale of the Tailor (Drama)....
June 30—Via the Fire Escape (Drama).....

"101" BISON.

June 13—The Isle of Abandoned Hope (2 parts—Drama) .....
June 20—The Forbidden Room (Three parts—Drama) .....
June 27—The Old Cobbler (Two parts—Western Drama) .....
July 4—The Hopes of Blind Alley (Three parts—Drama) .....

BRONCHO.

June 10—A Tragedy of the Orient (Two parts—Drama) .....
June 17—The Hour of Reckoning (Two parts—Drama) .....
June 24—Desert Thieves (Two parts—Drama)..
July 1—Shorty Gets Into Trouble (Two parts—Drama) .....

CRYSTAL.

June 16—Boxes and Boxers (Comedy).....
—Foolish Lovers (Comedy).....
June 28—In Wrong (Comedy).....
June 30—The Girl in Pants (Comedy).....
—Her New Hat (Comedy).....

DOMINO.

June 4—The Latent Spark (2 parts—Drama)..
June 11—A Relic of Old Japan (Two parts—Dr.)
June 18—In the Southern Hills (Two parts—Drama) .....
June 25—A Frontier Mother (Two parts—Dr.)...
July 2—His Hour of Manhood (Two parts—Drama) .....

ECLAIR.

June 10—Wife (2 parts—Drama).....
June 14—Aunty's Money Bag (Comedy-Drama)..
June 17—The Mask of Affliction (Two parts—Western—Drama) .....
June 21—The Blunderer's Mark (Western—Dr.)
June 24—Dead Men's Tales (Three parts—Western—Drama) .....
June 28—Prince Willy (Comedy).....
—Nutty and His Father (Comedy).....
July 1—Snow Drift (Two parts—Drama)....
July 5—The Greatest of These (Drama).....

FRONTIER.

May 60—Brother for Brother (Drama).....
June 4—The Girl Next Door (Drama).....
June 14—His Dress Rehearsal (Drama) .....
June 21—The Gun Men of Plumas (Dr.).....
June 28—On the Verge (Drama).....
July 5—The Broken Barriers (Drama).....

GOLD SEAL.

June 9—Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery—(Series No. 9—Two parts—Drama)..
June 16—Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery (Series No. 10—Two parts—Drama)
June 23—Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery (Series No. 11—Two parts—Drama)
June 30—Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery (Series No. 12—Two parts—Drama)

IMP.

June 15—The Baited Trap (Two parts—Dr.)..
June 18—The Fatal Step (Drama).....
June 22—Papa's Darling (Comedy).....
June 25—The Skull (Two parts—Drama).....
June 29—Adventures of a Girl Reporter (Two parts—Drama) .....
July 2—The One Best Bet (Comedy).....

JOKER.

June 10—Mike Searches For His Long Lost Brother (Comedy) .....
June 13—The Cure (Comedy).....
June 17—The Fatal Letter (Comedy).....
June 20—A Quiet Day at Murphy's (Comedy)..
June 24—Willy Walrus, Detective.....
June 27—Love and Electricity (Comedy).....
July 1—Bess the Detectress; or Tick, Tick, Tick (Comedy) .....
July 3—Captain Kid's Priceless Treasure (Comedy) .....

KAY-BEE.

May 29—The Embezzler (Two parts—Drama).
June 5—Tennessee (2 parts—Drama).....
June 12—From Out the Dregs (Two parts—Dr.)
June 19—The Voice at the Phone (Part 1—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 26—The Voice at the Telephone (Part 2—Two parts) .....
July 3—The Heart of a Crook (Two parts—Drama) .....

KOMIC.

May 31—An Exciting Courtship (Comedy)....
June 7—The Last Drink of Whiskey (Com.)..
June 14—Hubby to the Rescue (Comedy).....
June 21—The Deceiver (Comedy).....
June 28—The Wild Girl (Comedy).....
July 5—"Bill" No. 1 (Comedy).....

KEYSTONE COMEDIES

June 4—Her Friend the Bandit Comedy)....
June 6—Our Country Cousin (Comedy).....
June 8—(No release this day).....
June 11—The Knockout (Comedy).....
June 13—Mabel's Busy Day (Comedy).....
June 15—A Gambling Rube (Comedy).....
June 18—A Missing Bride (Comedy).....
June 20—Mabel's Married Life (Comedy).....

LUX.

May 1—Only an Iceman (Comedy).....
May 8—Jim's Mother-in-law (Comedy).....
—In Good Company (Comedy).....
May 15—The Girl in the Auto (Comedy).....
May 22—Just Neighbors (Comedy).....
May 29—Sweethearts (Comedy).....
—Venice (Scenic).....
June 5—In Love with a Suffragette (Comedy).
June 12—A Family Feud (Comedy).....
—View of the Alps (Scenic).....
June 19—The Newlyweds (Comedy).....
June 26—A Day's Outing (Comedy).....
—The Telephone Operator (Comedy)....

MAJESTIC.

June 14—The Rebellion of Kitty Bell (Two parts—Drama) .....
June 16—Their First Acquaintance (Dr.).....
June 21—The Severed Thong (Two parts—Dr.)
June 23—The Burden (Drama).....
June 26—The Idiot (Drama).....
June 28—The Tavern of Tragedy (Two parts—Drama) .....
June 30—(Title not yet announced).....
July 5—The Angel of Contention (Two parts—Drama) .....

NESTOR.

June 10—A Wife On a Wager (Drama).....
June 12—Sophie of the Films (Comedy Series No. 2) .....
June 17—'Cross the Mexican Line (West.—Dr.)
June 19—Sophie of the Films (Series No. 3—Comedy) .....
June 24—The Den of Thieves (Drama).....
June 26—Sophie of the Films (Series No. 4—Comedy) .....
July 1—The Lost Arrow (Drama).....
July 3—Those College Days (Comedy).....

POWERS.

June 5—Heart Strings (Drama).....
June 8—The Undertow (Drama).....
June 12—The Masked Rider (Drama).....
June 19—The Plot That Failed (Drama).....
June 26—The Love Victorious (Two parts—Dr.)
July 3—Pearl of the Sea (Drama).....

PRINCESS.

June 5—His Enemy (Drama).....
June 12—The Toy Shop (Drama).....
June 19—The Little Senorita (Drama).....
June 26—Professor Smith (Comedy).....
July 3—The Decoy (Drama).....

RELIANCE.

June 12—Dan Morgan's Way (Drama).....
June 13—The Horse Wrangler (Two parts—Drama) .....
June 15—Our Mutual Girl, No. 22.....
June 17—The Peach Brand (Dr.).....
June 20—The Stolen Code (Two parts—Drama).
June 22—Our Mutual Girl, No. 23 (News)....
June 24—Izzy's Night Out (Drama).....
June 27—The Broken Barrier (Two parts—Dr.)
June 29—Our Mutual Girl, No. 24.....
July 1—Izzy the Detective (Drama).....
July 4—The Weaker Strain (Two parts—Dr.)

REX.

June 11—The Awakening (Drama)..
June 14—The Pursuit of Hate (Drama).....
June 18—The Law Unto Himself (Two parts—Drama) .....
June 21—The Boob Detective (Comedy).....
June 25—The Woman in Black (Drama).....
June 28—Lost By a Hair (Comedy).....
July 2—The House Discordant (Two parts—Drama) .....
July 5—On the Rio Grande (Western Drama)

ROYAL.

June 13—Handle with Care (Comedy).....
June 20—Such a Business (Comedy).....
—The Busy Man (Comedy).....
June 27—A Hasty Exit (Comedy).....
July 4—Did She Run? (Comedy).....

STERLING.

June 18—Billy's Riot (Juvenile—Comedy)....
June 22—The Flirt (Comedy).....
June 25—A Jealous Husband (Comedy).....
June 29—It's a Boy (Juvenile—Comedy).....
July 2—The Crash (Comedy).....

THANHOUSER.

June 7—The Scrumb Lady (Comedy).....
June 9—Rivalry (Two parts—Drama).....
June 14—The Girl Across the Hall (Drama)...
June 16—Remorse (Two parts—Dr.).....
June 19—The Man Without Fear (Dr.).....
June 21—The Outlaw's Nemesis (Com.-Dr.).....
June 23—For Her Child (Two parts—Drama)..
June 28—The Widow's Mite (Comedy).....
June 30—The Harlow Handicap (Two parts—Drama) .....
July 5—The Cooked Goose (Comedy).....

UNIVERSAL IKE.

June 9—Universal Ike Is Kept From Being An Actor (Comedy) .....
June 16—Universal Ike, Jr., Bearly Won Her (Comedy) .....
June 23—Universal Ike, Jr., in a Case On the Doctor (Comedy) .....
June 30—Universal Ike, Jr., and the Vampire (Comedy) .....

VICTOR.

June 8—Uncle Sam In Mexico (Top. and Edu.)
June 12—Enmeshed By Fate (2 parts—Drama)..
June 15—The Sandhill Lovers (Western—Dr.)..
June 19—A Singular Cynic (Two parts—Com.)
June 22—The Silent Witness (Two parts—Dr.)
June 26—The Slavey's Romance (Drama).....
June 29—A Twentieth Century Pirate (Comedy-Drama) .....

HEPWORTH.

June 15—A Throw of the Dice (Two parts)....
June 22—Creatures of Habit—(Comedy) .....
June 22—Fair Game (Comedy).....
June 22—Flotilla the Flirt (Comedy).....
June 29—The Cry of the Captive (Drama)....

ECLIPSE-URBAN FILM CO.

June 15—Sammy and the Slit Skirt (Comedy).
June 22—The Bird of Prey (Drama).....
June 29—Sammy's Umbrella (Comedy).....
—Dupin Gets the Bird (Comedy).....
July 6—The Mystery of Green Park (Drama)

WHITMAN FEATURES.

GARRISON FILM CO. DISTRIBUTORS.

May 30—His Flesh and Blood (Three parts—Drama) .....
June 13—The Toll of Love (Four parts—Dr.)
June 27—Jane Eyre (Five parts—Drama)....
July 11—Lena Rivers (Five parts—Drama)....

ROLL TICKETS

PRICES

Five Thousand - -	$1.25
Ten Thousand - -	$2.50
Twenty Thousand - -	$4.50
Twenty-five Thousand -	$5.50
Fifty Thousand - -	$6.50
One Hundred Thousand -	$8.00

Your own special Ticket, any printing, any colors, accurately numbered; every roll guaranteed. Coupon Tickets for Prize Drawings, 5,000, $2.50. Stock Tickets, 60 per 1,000. Prompt shipments. Cash with the order. Get the samples. Send diagrams for Reserved Seat Coupon Tickets, serial or dated.

NATIONAL TICKET CO.
SHAMOKIN, PA.

SEE AMERICANS FIRST

Flying "A" and American Beauty Feature Films ~

"The Little House in the Valley"

A Two-Part Drama depicting spectacular encounter of Mexican Brigands with Corps of American Engineers.

Under direction of Thos. Ricketts.

Featuring ED COXEN and WINIFRED GREENWOOD, supported by an all star cast.

Release Monday, June 29th, 1914.

"American Beauty"

Presenting

MARGARITA FISCHER and HARRY POLLARD in

"Via The Fire-Escape"

A Breezy Newspaper Story.

Release Tuesday, June 30th, 1914.

"Nature's Touch"

Under direction of Sydney Ayres.

Featuring WM. GARWOOD and VIVIAN RICH.

Exploiting Psychological Tenets.

Release Wednesday, July 1st, 1914.

"Mein Lieber Katrina Catches a Convict"

Featuring GEORGE FIELD and IDA LEWIS in a rollicking comedy sketch under direction of Thos. Ricketts.

Release Friday, July 3rd, 1914.

AMERICAN FILM MFG. Co.

CHICAGO

LICENSED RELEASE DATES

RELEASE DAYS.

Monday—Biograph, Edison, Kalem, Pathe, Selig, Vitagraph.

Tuesday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Geo. Kleine, Pathe, Lubin, Melies, Selig, Vitagraph.

Wednesday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Melies, Selig, Pathe, Vitagraph.

Thursday—Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Melies, Selig, Vitagraph.

Friday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Selig, Lubin, Vitagraph.

Saturday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

BIOGRAPH.

June 13—The Opal's Curse (Drama).....
June 15—The Prize Employer (Comedy).....
—Brown's Bachelor Supper (Comedy)..
June 18—Her Neighbors Next Door (Drama)..
June 20—By the Old Dead Tree (Drama).....
June 22—The Song of Sunny Italy (Drama)..
June 25—The Ragamuffin (Drama).....
July 27—A Spanish Omelet (Comedy).....
—Ribbons and Boxing Gloves (Comedy)

EDISON.

June 16—The Gap (Sixth of "The Man Who Disappeared" series—Drama).....
June 17—A Modern Samson (Comedy).....
—On the Steps (Comedy).....
June 19—The Hand of Horror (Special—Two parts—Drama).....
June 20—In the Days of Slavery (Drama).....
June 22—The Basket Habit (Comedy).....
June 23—A Foolish Agreement (Drama).....
June 24—The Mysterious Package (Comedy)..
—On the Ice (a demonstration of fancy skating at Wengen, Switzerland—Sports).....
June 26—The Man in the Street (Special—Three parts—Drama).....
June 27—Dolly Plays Detective (Tenth of the Dolly of the Dailies—Drama).....
June 29—The Revengeful Servant Girl (Seventh of the Wood B. Wedd series—Com.)
June 30—The Mystery of the Fadeless Tints (Eighth of the Chronicles of Cleek series—Drama).....
July 1—Back to the Simple Life (Comedy)...
July 3—The Shattered Tree (Special—Two parts—Drama).....
July 4—Molly, the Drummer Boy (Drama)..

ESSANAY.

June 12—The Song in the Dark (Special—2 parts—Drama).....
June 16—The Little "He and She" (Com.-Dr.)
June 17—The Fable of the Brash Drummer and the Nectarine (Comedy).....
June 18—The Wooing of Sophie (Western Com.)
June 19—Finger Prints (Special—Two parts—Drama).....
June 20—Broncho Billy—Outlaw (Drama).....
June 23—The Countess (Drama).....
June 24—The Epidemic (Comedy).....
June 25—Sophie Finds a Hero (Comedy).....
June 26—The Chasm (Special—Two parts—Dr.)
June 27—Broncho Billy's Jealousy (Drama)..
June 30—The Daring Young Person (Com.-Dr.)
July 1—The Fable of "The Good Fairy" (Comedy).....
July 2—Sophie Gets Stung (Comedy).....
July 3—Trinkets of Tragedy (Special—Two parts—Drama).....
July 4—Broncho Billy's Punishment (Drama)

KALEM.

June 16—The Missing Jewels (Drama).....
June 17—Home Run Baker's Double (Special—Two parts—Drama).....
June 19—The Wages of Sinn (Comedy).....
—Military Tattoo at Aldershot, England (Topical).....
June 20—Brought to Justice (Drama).....
June 22—The Show Girl's Glove (Special—Two Parts—Drama).....
June 23—The Conductor's Courtship (Comedy-Drama).....
June 24—Through the Flames (Special—Two parts—Drama).....
June 26—An Elopement in Rome (Comedy).....
—Labor Demonstration in Hyde Park, London (Topical).....
June 27—The Gypsy Gambler (Drama).....
June 29—The Flaw in the Alibi (Special—Two parts—Drama).....
June 30—The Wire Chief's Reward (Drama)..
July 1—The Fatal Portrait (Special—Two parts—Drama).....
July 3—Fleeing from the Foes (Comedy)...
—Trooping the Colors (Topical).....
July 4—The Political Boss (Drama).....

GEORGE KLEINE.

May 12—The Toreador's Romance (Cines—Special—2 parts—Drama).....?
May 19—Mystery of the Fast Mail (Special—Eclipse—2 parts—Drama).....
May 26—The Cigarette Maker of Seville (Cines Spec.—Two parts—Drama).....
June 2—Trapped By Wireless (Eclipse—Two parts—Special—Drama).....
June 9—The Trap-Door Clue (Cello—Special—2 parts—Drama).....
June 16—One Woman's Way (Cines—Special—2 parts—Drama).....
June 23—A Midnight Guest (Cines—Special—Two parts—Drama).....

LUBIN.

June 10—The Changeling (Spec.—2 parts—Dr.).
June 11—The Lure of the Pit (Special—2 parts—Drama).....
June 12—Claim Number Three (Drama).....
June 13—He Changed His Mind (Comedy).....
June 13—A Bargain Automobile (Comedy).....
June 16—The Shell Comb Industry (Ind.).....
—Good Cider (Comedy).....
June 17—The Struggle Everlasting (Special—Two parts—Drama).....
June 18—The House of Darkness (Special—Two parts—Drama).....
June 19—The Parent Strain (Drama).....
June 20—Getting Solid With Pa (Comedy).....
—Long May It Wave (Comedy).....
June 23—Mice Nursery (Comedy).....
—Brown's Big Butler (Comedy).....
June 24—The Greater Treasure (Special—Two parts—Drama).....
June 25—The Candidate for Mayor (Special—Two parts—Drama).....
June 26—A Practical Demonstration (Drama)..
June 27—Who's Boss (Comedy).....
—His Sudden Recovery (Comedy).....
June 30—The Walko Sisters (Comedy).....
July 1—The Living Fear (Special—Two parts—Drama).....
July 2—The Shadow of Tragedy (Special—Two parts—Drama).....
July 3—The Doom of Duty (Drama).....
July 4—It's a Shame (Comedy).....
—The Kidnapped Bride (Comedy).....

MELIES.

June 16—On the Beach (Comedy).....
June 17—At the Mercy of the Waves (Drama).
June 18—Hidden Death (Spec.—Two parts—Dr.)
—His Dream Fulfilled (Comedy).....
—Everybody's Doing It (Comedy).....
June 20—Pills and Pills (Special—Two parts—Comedy).....
June 23—A Good Time Spoiled (Comedy).....
June 24—Mother (Drama).....
June 25—A Peculiar Inheritance (Comedy)....
June 27—A Shadow On the Wall (Special—Two parts—Drama).....

PATHE.

June 1—The Joking Bricklayers (Comedy).....
—Monaco (Architecture).....
—When Dreams Come True (Drama)...
June 2—Dogs of War (Drama).....
June 3—Pathe's Weekly No. 39 (News).....
June 6—The Lost Heir (Special—2 parts—Dr.)
June 8—Woof! Watch Whiffles (Comedy)...
—Picturesque Scandinavia (Travel)....
June 9—The Poison of Serpents (Educa.).....
—River Travel in Indo-China (Travel)..
June 10—Pathe's Weekly, No. 40—1914 (News)
June 15—Whiffles, the Spotter (Comedy).....
—Brittany, France (Travel).....
June 16—Simple Experiments in Electricity (Educational) .....
—Through the Bosphorus, Turkey (Travel)
June 17—Pathe's Weekly, No. 41—1914 (News)
June 22—Max the Magician (Comedy).....
Historic St. Cloud (Educational)....
June 23—Glacier National Park in Winter (Sc.)
June 23—The Mormot (Educational).....
June 24—Pathe's Weekly, No. 42—1914 (News)
June 29—Visit to Paris (Travel).....
—Rapids and Water Falls of New Zealand (Scenic) .....
June 30—A French Village in Senegal, West Africa (Scenic) .....
—Venomous Serpents (Educational).....
July 1—Pathe's Weekly, No. 43—1914 (News)

SELIG.

June 6—Rose o' My Heart (Drama).....
June 8—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 29..
June 8—Judge Dunn's Decision (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
June 9—Eugenics At Bar "U" Ranch (Com.).
June 10—The Doctor's Mistake (Drama).....
June 11—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 30..
June 12—Bombarded (Comedy) .....
June 12—Doc Yak's Zoo (Picture Cartoon).....
June 13—When the Night Call Came (Drama)..
June 15—The Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 13—The Court of Death (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 15—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 31 (News) .....
June 16—How Lone Wolf Died (Drama).....
June 17—Castles in the Air (Drama).....
June 18—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 32 (News) .....
June 19—Peter's Relations (Comedy).....
—Chicken (Comedy) .....
June 20—The Girl at His Side (Drama).....
June 22—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 33 (News) .....
June 22—Me An' Bill (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 23—The Servant Question Out West (Com.)
—Doc Yak and the Limited Train (Com.)
June 24—Somebody's Sister (Drama).....
June 25—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 34 (News) .....
June 26—The Captain's Chair (Drama).....
June 27—The Right to Happiness (Drama)....
June 29—The Leopard's Foundling (Special—Three parts—Drama) .....
June 29—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 35 (News) .....
June 30—Hearts of Men (Drama).....
July 1—The Empty Sleeve (Drama).....
July 2—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 36 (News) .....
July 3—Making Good With Her Family (Com.)
—Doc Yak Wishes (Novelty).....
July 4—The Little Hobo (Drama).....

VITAGRAPH.

June 1—Miss Raffles (Comedy-Drama).....
June 2—The Last Will (Special—2 parts—Dr.)
June 3—Wanted, a House (Comedy).....
June 4—A False Move (Comedy).....
June 5—The Maid from Sweden (Comedy)....
June 6—Too Many Husbands (Special—2 parts Comedy) .....
June 8—Eve's Daughter (Drama).....
June 9—The Right of Way (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
June 10—The Widow of Red Rock (Comedy)....
June 11—The Power to Forgive (Drama).....
June 12—The Accomplished Mrs. Thompson (Comedy) .....
June 13—Our Fairy Play (Spec.—2 parts—Com.)
June 15—The Crime of Cain (Drama).....
June 16—A Wayward Daughter (Special—Two parts—Comedy-Drama) .....
June 17—The Ladies' War (Comedy).....
June 18—Only a Sister (Drama).....
June 19—The Persistent Mr. Prince (Comedy).
June 20—Father's Flirtation (Special—Two parts—Comedy) .....
June 22—Maria's Sacrifice (Drama).....
June 23—The Passing of Diana (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 24—The "Bear" Facts (Comedy).....
June 25—Happy-Go-Lucky (Comedy-Drama)....
June 26—The Old Maid's Baby (Comedy).....
June 27—His Wife and His Work (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
June 29—The Gang (Drama).....
June 30—The Poor Folks' Boy (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
July 1—The Circus and the Boy (Comedy)....
July 2—Two Stepchildren (Drama).....
July 3—A Train of Incidents (Comedy).....
July 4—The Toll (Special—Two parts—Dr.).

Greater New York Film Rental Company
All Specials Supplied. Main Office: 126-132 West 46th Street, Depot: 116-118 East 14th Street, New York
Licensed Film Supplied to Licensed Exhibitors 1-1 1-1 1-1 Write or Call for Particulars

THE CENTAUR FILM COMPANY

The Oldest Independent Film Manufacturer

Has the largest commercial plant in America, the most up-to-date equipment, and an organization second to none.

Printing and developing in any quantity. Quality guaranteed. Prices interesting.

CENTAUR FILM CO.

Bayonne, N. J.

"WE TRIED YOUR REMEDY

for dull nights and found it a success."—Mystic Theatre, Bonham, Texas. This tells our Post Card story with more eloquence than we can command.

We Will Exhibit Our Art Publications at Dayton

Our Big Lobby Pictures of the Stars Draw Crowds of Admiring Fans

Semi-Photo Post Cards, $3.00 per thousand; formerly sold for $4.00. Over 400 different players.

Hand Colored Post Cards

For the better class of Souvenirs, 60 of the most popular players, all factions, $10.00 per thousand

Photo Post Cards

For hand coloring. NOTE: The Public buy cards from stationers and color them. It's a new fad—60 Popular Players $5.00 per thousand

PHOTOGRAPHS, SIZE 8 x 10, of all the prominent players, Association and Independent, 400 different names, 20 cents each.
LARGE PICTURE, semi-photo, glazed finish, size 11 x 14, $1 per doz.; 43 prominent players.
LARGE PICTURES, HAND COLORED, size 11 x 14, Prominent Association players, $2.00 for set of 12.
Photographs for lobby display of the two and three reel features of all of the Mutual multiple reels—set of 6, $1.00. Always ready 10 days ahead of release.
Special 22 x 28 Association and Mutual Hand Colored Pictures of 23 Favorites
75 Cents Each. Framed $2.50 Each

KRAUS MFG. CO. 14 East 17th St., New York

Send for Catalogue of over 400 players and samples free. Write us, giving details of your dull nights, and we will send you a remedy.

Film Quality

Quality in the film—quality from a technical photographic standpoint is as important to the Exhibitor as is interest in the story that the film tells.

There's one film that's recognized the world over as the standard of quality—that is always used by those whose effort it is to give the Exhibitors the very best goods and the very best service—Eastman film.

And it is identifiable. Look for "Eastman" on the perforated margin.

EASTMAN KODAK COMPANY,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

PUT in your own lighting plant and pay for it with your Central Station bills. A Foos generating set will produce current for less than 3 cents per kilowatt, and is more reliable than service from a Central Station.

Ask for Bulletin 98.

FOOS GAS ENGINE CO.
Springfield, Ohio.

EYE COMFORT Lighting System

So necessary to the success of every Motion Picture Theatre that we engineer 60 Theatres a month. This is a free service to Motion Picture Theatre Managers.

Distance Screen to Rear of Auditorium.....
Ceiling Height.....
Width of House.....
Height Under Balcony.....
Distance Rear Auditorium to Front of Balcony.....
Name .....

NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.
CHICAGO—229 W. Jackson blvd. NEW YORK—6 E. 39th St.

CALEHUFF SUPPLY COMPANY
(INCORPORATED)

Jobbers for Powers, Edison, Motiograph and Simplex

LARGEST LEADING SUPPLY HOUSE IN AMERICA

Mercury Arc Rectifier	Wagner Converters
Flame Arc Lamps	Brass and Wood Frames
Automatic Ticket Registers	Ticket Choppers
Exit Signs	Abestos State Booths
Slide Ink	Ft. Wayne Compensarcs
Carrying Cases	Fire Extinguishers
Tickets	Fire Boxes
Condensers	Carbons
Pianos	Cement
Chairs	Trap Drum Effects

MIRROR SCREENS
PROMPT SHIPMENTS BACKED BY A SOLID GUARANTEE
A Few Slightly Used Machines

N. W. corner 13th and Race Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

Features for Sale

G. W. BRADENBURGH, 802 Vine St., Philadelphia
Phone Walnut 534. Cable "Bradfilm"

TITLE	Length	Maker	Adv.	Price
WHAT HAPPENED TO MARY No. 1. to 12	1200	Edison	1-3	$360
THE WRECK	2880	Vitagraph	1-3-6	175
LEAP OF DESPAIR	3670	Itala	1-3-6	150
BRIGAND'S DAUGHTER	3950	Pasquali	1-3-6	150
FOUR DARE DEVILS (as new)	2840	Cosmo	1-3-6	125
MYSTERY OF THE DEATH HEAD	2800	Monarch	1-3-6	100
IN THE MIDST OF THE JUNGLE (First adventure Kathryn)	3000	Selig	1-3-6	150
BULL FIGHT: SPAIN VS. MEXICO (new)	3000	Huerta & Ross	1-3-6	120
WANTED BY THE POLICE	3000	Mittenthal	1-3-6	100
TOM BUTLER	2650	Eclair	1-3-6	125
SPANISH BLOOD (Asta Neilsen)	4200	Union	1-3-6	200
THE GYPSY (Exclusive Copy, new)	3200	Gaman	1-4	275
UNMASKED (Exclusive Copy, new)	2800	Gamsa	1-4	225
THE IRON MAN	2000	Urban	1-3-6	100
FIGHT FOR THE GREAT BLACK DIAMOND	3000	Nester	1-3-6	200
A DARE DEVIL RESCUE (Rodman Law)	3000	Roma	1-3-6	125
A BROKER'S SACRIFICE	3000	Itala	1-3-6	100
THE DREAD OF DOOM	3000	Itala	1-3-6	125

Terms cash with order. 100 additional features. Send for list and prices.

The cheapest house in the trade for second hand films. Ordinary films, comic and dramas for sale from $5.00 per reel up, with posters. Over three million feet to select from. Every film with title and sound condition. No Junk. Everything for the exchange man. Titles to order 5 ft. at 40 cents each, any color, leader stock $5.00 per 1000 feet. Cement, Pathe Formula $1.00 per quart.

Booking now for Wisconsin, Minnesota, North and South Dakota

"The Greyhound" In Five Reels

ALSO

"The Banker's Daughter"

In Five Reels

For Minnesota, North and South Dakota

SHERMAN FEATURE CO.

Temple Court Bldg. Minneapolis, Minn.

OZONE

The logical remedy for stuffy and ill-smelling theatres. It eliminates the disagreeable "crowd odors."

COMBINATION OZONATOR and ELECTRIC FAN

Send for Bulletin No. 49000

SPRAGUE ELECTRIC WORKS
OF GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY
Main Office, 527-531 W. 34th Street
New York, N. Y.
Branch Offices in Principal Cities

VITASLIDE

Advertisers are in constant search of a medium which is distinctive — novel — unusual. This is just what the "Vitaslide" is, and as it can be adapted to any line of business it forms the most attractive proposition before advertisers at the present time.

VITASLIDE COMPANY

GEO. BRECK, Manager.

70 Turk Street San Francisco, Cal.

WARNING TO BUYERS

Dadmun of Boston, only New England motion picture producer, maker of the weekly "New England in Motion," booked for the year at the Keith and leading New England theatres, will release about July first a three-reel feature, intense and compelling. Theme thrilling, action acute, interest incisive, photography phenomenal.

DADMUN CO.

1 Washington St. Boston, Mass.

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and anyone can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact, they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of $3.50 we will send, by parcel post, prepaid and insured, the following:

24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address:

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.

1733 West 9th St. Brooklyn, N. Y.

The EXHIBITOR SAYS

Complete Equipment
for The MOTION PICTURE THEATRE
Send for Complete Catalogue
608 OLIVE ST ERKER'S ST. LOUIS, MO

SEEBURG "MOTION PICTURE PLAYER"

It has solved one of the Big Problems of the Moving Picture Business.

"The wonder of them all"

Played either manually or automatically, it produces real music for the pictures.

Get Complete Information on it by Addressing

J. P. SEEBURG PIANO CO., Manufacturers, Republic Building 209 S. STATE STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

ONE GLANCE AT THE PICTURE after putting a

Gundlach Projection Lens

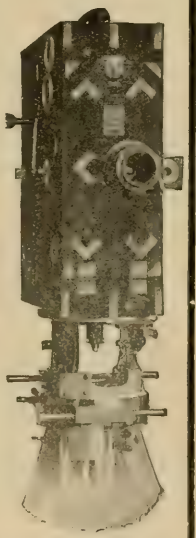
on the machine shows you it makes a sharper and more brilliant picture. We only ask you to give a Gundlach Projection Lens a trial and see for yourself how much it improves the picture. All Film Exchanges take orders for them. Specify Gundlach Lenses when buying any kind of a new machine. You must have Gundlach Lenses to get the best result.

IT'S ALL IN THE LENS

Gundlach-Manhattan Optical Co.
808 Clinton Ave., So., Rochester, N. Y.

U. S. AGENT FOR

WILLIAMSON'S MOTION PICTURE CAMERAS



Perforators, Printing Machines and Tripods

SEND FOR CATALOGUE

G. GENNERT
24-26 East 13th St., New York

THE CARBON FOR PERFECT PROJECTION

ELECTRA

HUGO REISINGER, 11 Broadway NEW YORK

MOTIOGRAPH ONCE USED ALWAYS USED

WHY?

SATISFACTION from a projection standpoint
SATISFACTION with a very small up-keep
SATISFACTION that the machine is always on the job
SATISFACTION because you have a satisfied audience

Mr. Theatre-Man

DON'T waste your time in a machine. A MOTIOGRAPH will fill your every requirement. You can't go wrong in selecting a 1914 MOTIOGRAPH. ABSOLUETLY ROCK-STEADY AND FLICKERLESS PICTURE.

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO.

564 W. Randolph St., Chicago, Ill. Western Office, 833 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.

As the Manager Sees It

This Manager looks prosperous and happy. You will feel the same way when you discard that old juice consuming rheostat and put in a

Fort Wayne Compensarc

It will increase your box office receipts because your patrons will notice at once how much brighter and clearer your pictures are. And what's more, it will

Cut 2-3 from Your Monthly Lighting Bill

That sounds as if we were stretching it, doesn't it? But we are not and just to show you, we will ship you one on 30 days free trial and let you prove it.

If it does not do all we claim for it, ship it back at our expense and it won't cost you one cent.

If this sounds "good" to you, send for our little booklet "Compensarc vs. Rheostat" and find out the particulars.

You are paying the Lighting Company half your profits every day you wait.

Fort Wayne Electric Works
of General Electric Company
1600 Broadway
Fort Wayne, Indiana

FWEW WOOD SYSTEMS FORT WAYNE IND'S C3

THEATRE RECORD LEDGER
NEW 1914-1915 EDITION NOW READY

I have just received from the publishers my New 1914-1915 Theatre Ledger which is a big improvement over all past editions. The New Theatre Record Ledger contains space for receipts and disbursements for 52 complete weeks. Guaranteed to be what you are looking for or your money refunded. Order from your nearest Film Exchange or Moving Picture Supply Dealer, otherwise send us $2.70, ($2.50 for the Ledger and 20c for Postage) and we will forward one direct by Parcels Post.

THE THEATRE RECORD PUBLISHING CO.
252 Hennepin Avenue
Minneapolis

THE OIL THAT STOOD THE TEST
Latchaw's Motion Picture Machine Oil
Gallons .....$4.00 Quarts $1.25
Pints ..... .75 Half Pints.... .50
Postpaid upon receipt of price.
E. R. LATCHAW & CO., Marietta, Ohio

Indirect Lights, Poster Frames and Exit Lights

Moving Picture Theatres

No. 62—12" Diam.....$4.00
No. 51—15" Diam..... 6.00
No. 52—20" Diam..... 8.00

Solid Brass. White Enam. Reflector. Wired, Ready to Attach.
Other Styles.
CIRCULAR

General Specialty Co.
409-11 Morgan Street, St. Louis, Mo.

DO THIS NOW!

If you do not receive a copy of "The Universal Weekly" every week, send me the name and address of your theatre and I'll see that you get it, NO MATTER WHAT PROGRAM YOU ARE USING. You can't know what's going on in the film business unless you read "The Universal Weekly." Here's a corking good chance to boost your business. Do it now!

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

205 West Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.
252 A Hennepin Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.
1122 Farnam Street, Omaha, Neb.
Hubbell Building, Des Moines, Iowa.

Agents for All Makes of Machines and Accessories

"The Biggest and Best Film Renter in the World"

Floral Decorations For Theatre, Stage and Parades

Best selections from the markets of Europe and America

Botanical Decorating Co.

504 So. 5th Ave. CHICAGO

Prices the lowest ever offered for reliable goods

LOCAL PICTURES

Your negative developed, printed and titled complete

5c per foot

delivered within 12 hours

We Set the Pace, Let Those That Can, Follow

Feature Work Our Specialty

Titles 6c per foot

GUNBY BROS., Inc.

145 West 45th St. N. Y City

Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

THE DECORATORS SUPPLY CO.

Archer Ave. and Lee St. CHICAGO, ILL.

Good Light Means Big Crowds

The Sandow Moving Picture Electric Light Plant gives perfect light any time you want it, at 1-10 the cost of public service. Light enough to ship as baggage. Carry your own electric lights. Catalog 201 tells you how and how much. Want it?

Detroit Motor Car Supply Company, Detroit, Michigan

REBUILT MACHINES AS GOOD AS NEW

All machines entirely rebuilt and only genuine parts used.

Powers No. 6	$140.00
Motiograph, 1913	150.00
Powers No. 5	75.00
Edison Exhibition	75.00
1912 Dissolving Motiograph	165.00

Many others. Write for complete list. All the machines are complete with the electrical attachments. A-1 condition guaranteed.

We carry complete line of new machines and supplies. Will take back your old machine in part payment of new one.

Time or Cash. Send for Catalog today.

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY COMPANY

160A NO. FIFTH AVENUE CHICAGO

DO YOU USE GAS?
TANKS OR PORTABLE
The "Guil Pastil"
DOUBLES Y UR LIGHT

"FULCO" Pastil Adapter
PRICE, $1.00 Each
Makes Pastil fit any burner.
See "Moving Picture World," June 13, letter from George Kraus, page 1539.
E. E. Fulton Co. 152 W. Lake St. CHICAGO
Sole American Distributors for GUIL PASTIL

CAMERA MEN OF PROVEN ABILITY

furnished for all occasions. We send our men to any quarter of the globe.

Special lighting equipment suitable for making interior scenes under any and all conditions rented with competent electricians by the day, week or month.

We make educational, dramatic or industrial pictures to order.

SMALLWOOD FILM CORPORATION
"Specialists in Industrial Motion Pictures"
949 Broadway, New York City

ORCHESTRA MUSIC
FOR MOVING PICTURES

The Orpheum Collection of dramatic and descriptive music for Piano and seven orchestra parts. Piano can be used alone. In two series:

No. 1 and No. 2

Piano, 58 cts. each. Both series, $1.15. Violin, 40 cts. each; both 75 cts. Cello-&-Bass same price as violin. Flute 35 cts. each. Both series, 65 cts. Clarinet, Cornet and Trombone same price as Flute. Drums, 30 cts. each. Both series, 55 cts.

Send for free sample page and further discounts, 3d series ready for piano only; 58 cts.

CLARENCE E. SINN
1501 SEDGWICK ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

WE BUY, SELL and RENT
moving picture machines, films and chairs
THEATRE BROKERAGE EXCHANGE
440 S. Dearborn Chicago, Ill

FILM MAKING OUTFITS

for Professional Film Work, for the Manufacturer, Traveler, Explorer, Scientist and Private. The well-known fool-proof Junior Camera, 200 feet capacity; Tripods, Tilts, Printers, Developing Outfits, Projectors, Lenses, Polishers, Measurers, Menders, Winders. Special Film Work. Quick, reliable repair.

Establ. 20 years. Largest Inst. in U. S.
EBERHARD SCHNEIDER
219 Second Ave. New York

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES
ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. NO. 31

The A. H. Andrews Co.
115-117 So. Wabash Ave. Chicago, Ill.
Branches in all Leading Cities
New York Office
1472 Broadway, Long Acre Bldg.
Seattle Office
508-10-12 First Ave., So.
San Francisco Office, 782 Mission St.

Largest Stock and Quick Deliveries on
Motion Picture Seating

Pleasing Designs. Reasonable Prices
Write for Illustrated Books

V-2 Veneer Seating. V-3, Upholstered Seating.
Send floor sketch for Free Seating Plan

American Seating Company
"Public Seating Exclusively"
14 E. Jackson Blvd., Chicago 18 E. 32nd St., New York
BOSTON PHILADELPHIA PITTSBURGH

The "Standardized" Theatre Chairs
Do you want a life-saving chair?
Do you want a space-saving chair?
Do you want a sanitary chair?
Do you want a scientifically built, double standard chair?
We operate the largest exclusive theatre chair factory in the world, AND SELL DIRECT TO YOU. WRITE US
THE HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio

GO INTO THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS

MAKE MONEY FAST! BE YOUR OWN BOSS!
$30 TO $50 PER NIGHT CLEAR
No Experience Needed
We furnish you with machine, film, curtain and complete outfit ready to go to work with ON OUR EASY PAYMENT PLAN.
Write Now for Our Large FREE Catalogue.
NATIONAL MOVING PICTURE CO.
Dept. M. P., Ellsworth Building Chicago

STEEL OR IRON STANDARDS

AGENCIES:
H. S. Ansley, 1476 B'way, Long Acre Bldg., New York City.
Telephone 5619 Bryant.
California Seating Co., 720 South Hill Street, Los Angeles, Cal.
H. A. Johnson Seating Co., 1214½ 3d Ave., Seattle, Wash.

The Wisconsin Seating Company
New London, Wisconsin, U.S.A.

Steel Standards will not break

Mr. Exhibitor:

DEAGAN MUSICAL ELECTRIC BELLS

Double receipts, kill competiton. Are played from piano keyboard.

Write for Catalog

J. C. DEAGAN
DEAGAN BUILDING
1776 Berteau Ave.
CHICAGO, ILL.

Non-Breakable and Sanitary STEEL
HIGH Quality
LOW Price
and CAST IRON
Opera Chairs

Immediate shipment on many styles; Second Hand Chairs; out-of-door seating. Send measurements for FREE SEATING PLAN. Mention this paper.

STEEL FURNITURE CO.
Grand Rapids, Mich.; New York, 150 Fifth Ave.; Pittsburgh, 318 Bissell Blk.; Boston, 69 Pearl St.

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

VOLUME XX

April to June, 1914

J. P. CHALMERS
Founder

PUBLISHED BY

CHALMERS PUBLISHING CO.
17 Madison Avenue, New York

Index to Contents of Vol. XX.

A

"Across the Atlantic" (Imp)....1668
"Across the Burning Trestle" (Kalem)....1803
"Across the Veldt" ("101" Bison)....74
"Actress' Redemption, The" (Features Ideal)....1704
Adler, Jacob P....1706
Advertising for Exhibitors, by Epes Winthrop Sargent....53, 204, 351, 507, 663, 812, 960, 1107, 1252, 1399, 1532, 1679, 1819
Albert Blinkhorn in Educationals....675
Alice Joyce in Serial....973
"Anne Boleyn" (Kleine-Eclipse)....943
Aoki Tsuru, Miss....1802
Arranging Show For Toronto....1415
"Atlantis" (Great Northern)....1520
"At the Hour of Dawn" (Gaumont)....339
At the Sign of the Flaming Arcs, by George Blaisdell....67, 219, 363, 522, 954, 1245, 1526

B

"Banker's Daughter, The" (Life Photo Film Corp.)....519
"Barrier of Ignorance, The" (Kalem)....1098
Bates, Frank....1097
Belasco on Motion Pictures....1513
Bell & Howell Co., The....200
Between the Lines....644
Big Doings Promised At Dayton....1699
Big Fire at Lubin Plant....1803
Biophone, The....347
Blache Forms New Company....653
"Black Triangle, The" (Films Lloyd)....655
"Blue Mouse, The" (De Luxe)....190
"Born Warrior, A" (Warner's Features)....1548
Brace of Edison One-Reel Comedies, A....946
"Brewster's Millions" (Lasky)....336
"Bringing In the Law" (Colorado M. P. Co.)....1548
Briscoe, Miss Lottie....1671
"Brother Against Brother" (Apex)....1522
Bruce-McRae to Famous Players....655
"Brute, The" (Famous Players)....798
Bushman Wins Big Contest....1120
"By Powers of Attorney" (Features Ideal)....658

C

"Cabiria" (Italia)....1030
Cabiria Shown on Broadway....1517
Candler Theatre Opening....1097
"Captain Alvarez" (Vitagraph)....799
Captain Kleinschmidt Off For Mexico....970
Carlyle, Francis....495
Celebrated Players Film Company....1839
Censorship Decision, The....343
Charlie De Forest Joins Crystal....528
Chat With Authors, A....499
Chicago Exhibitors' Ball....982, 1248
"Chicot the Jester" (Leading Players)....530
Church People in the Picture Field....1809
Clayton, Ethel....955
Clifford, William....1119
Cohen, Harry J....1099
Comedy Filmlet, A....201
Convention and Exposition of the International Association....1062
Crampton, Howard....811
Cromelin, Paul H....823
Crook Actors Escape From the Screen....1243
Cummings, Irving....528
"Curse of Greed, The" (Melies)....978

D

"Dance of Death, The" (Kalem)....366
Daniel Frohman Talks Pictures....195
Darmond, Grace....1396
Dayton Convention and Exposition....69
Decision in the Powers-Laemmle Suit....1834
Delta Theatre Corporation....649
Demand For Variety, The....1088
Dinner To John F. Skerrett....342
Dintenfass, Mark M....800
Director Hawley Takes Vacation....976
Director -Present and Future, The....49
"Dishonored Medal, The" (R. & M.)....942
Doings at Los Angeles, by Clarke Irvine....198, 348, 529, 660, 808, 957, 1103, 1248, 1395, 1525, 1676, 1816
"Double Cross, The" (Edison)....493
"Double Knot, The" (Majestic)....1391
Dramatizing the Song....1525
Dunbar, Helen....41
"Duty" (Eclair)....1833

E

Eastman Kodak Exhibition, The....367
Echoes of the Convention....1809
Eclair Factory Fire....45
Ed-An Inquest Dinner....72
Edeson Signs a Contract....1102
Efficient Publicity Work....1270
Eleanor Gates In Photoplay Field....1269
Enlarging Edison Studio....1270
Entertainment Features....1125
"Escape, The" (Reliance)....1515
"Escaped From Siberia" (Great Players)....795
Evening With Ben Wilson, An....335
Exhibitor and the Public, The....1232
Exhibitors Entertained at the Biltmore....1810
Exposition Attracts Crowds....1695

F

"Fable of the Brash Drummer and the Negatrine, The" (Essanay)....1666
"Faithful Until Death" (Selected)....1387
Feature Producers Affiliate....1268
Fighting Adverse Conditions....68
Film "The Beast" at the Exposition....1814
Fine Work....45
Fire Wrecks Edison Studio....196
"First Smart Circuit," A Great Success....970
"Floor Above, The" (Reliance)....339
Florida Convention....525
"Flurry In Hats, A" (American)....618
"Foolish Argument, A" (Edison)....946
"Forgiven" (Stellar Photoplay Co.)....501
For National Censorship....793
Forsberg, Edwin....1677
Fox Gets Balboa Pictures....828

Fox To Sell State Rights..... 977
Franklin B. Coates, Explorer..... 42

G

Gane, Nolen..... 792
"Gap of Death, The" (Leading Players)..... 1392
Garbutt, Frank A..... 1527
General For a Day, A..... 46
German Censorship..... 1249
Getting Belasco Atmosphere..... 1271
Getting Ready for Dayton..... 678, 1414
Gibson, Ella Margaret..... 982
Gish, Dorothy..... 337
Gish, Lillian..... 1702
Glimpse of the Golden Age, A..... 333
Glorifying the Trivial..... 1233
"Golden Heart, The" (Great Northern)..... 1412
Good Program at Toronto..... 1835
"Good-For-Nothing, The" (Essanay)..... 1092
Graduations In Service..... 645
Grand Central Show Ready..... 1382
"Great Diamond Robbery, The" (Playgoers)..... 47
"Greyhound, The" (Life-Photo)..... 1518
Gunning Joins Olcott..... 1410

H

Hackett, Florence..... 39
Hackett's Strong Argument For Pictures..... 1701
Half Gods..... 940
Hall, Ella..... 797
Handworth, Harry..... 677
Harte, Betty..... 1237
Has Capitalized His "Wasting" Proclivity..... 1701
Hearing on National Censorship..... 971
"Heart of Midlothian, The" (Great Northern)..... 1093
"Hearts of Oak" (Mohawk)..... 1119
Henderson, Lucius J..... 189
"He Never Knew" (Vitagraph)..... 338
Her Infinite Variety..... 1660
"Highwayman's Honor, A" (Mecca)..... 1802
"Hindu Nemesis, The" (Master)..... 217
"His Highness The Prince" (Great Northern)..... 367
"Home Run Baker's Double" (Kalem)..... 1418
"Home Sweet Home" (Reliance)..... 1233
"Horrors of War, The" (Leading Players)..... 1091
"House of Temperley, The" (London Film Co.)..... 974
Human Riddle, The..... 332
"Hunchback, The" (Majestic)..... 340

I

"In Search of the Castaways" (World Film)..... 1091
International Association Directors..... 68
"In the Hands of a Brute" (Warner's)..... 191
"In the Hands of London Crooks" (Apex)..... 1094
"In the Moonlight" (American)..... 650
International Exhibitors' Convention..... 679

J

"Jane the Justice" (Beauty)..... 1246
Jenkins Improves With Age..... 1095
Jennings, Al..... 1123
Jourjon Outlines Plans..... 216
"Jungle, The" (All Star)..... 1675

K

Kalem House Warming..... 804
Kain Gail..... 493
"Kangaroo, The" (World Film)..... 1669
Kansas State Convention..... 368
Kentucky Exhibitors Meet..... 826
"Kingdom At Stake, A" (Kleine-Eclipse)..... 334
Kitsee Talking Pictures, The..... 1243
"Kronstadt" (Gaumont)..... 1838

L

L'Aiglon Arrives in the United States..... 1837
Lambs Back from Gambol..... 1549
Language of Enchantment, A..... 1801
Last Days of the Convention..... 804
"Leaves of Memory" (Eclectic)..... 1665
"Leopard's Foundling, The" (Selig)..... 1516
Leslie, Lilie..... 1522
Let Us Stick to Facts..... 1381
Lichtman, Al, Leaves Famous Players..... 1704
"Life and Works of Verdi" (Arias)..... 825
Life in the Holy Land" (Holy Land Exhibition)..... 372
"Life of Our Savior, The" (Pathe)..... 188
"Lightning Conductor, The" (Hefeo)..... 1094
"Like Father Like Son" (American)..... 39
"Lily of the Valley, The" (Selig)..... 803
Linn, K. W..... 530
"Lion's Bride, The" (Eclectic)..... 1674
Lively Springfield Convention..... 827
Lorimore In a New Field..... 1206
"Love and Vengeance" (Sterling)..... 341
"Love, Luck and Gasoline" (Vitagraph)..... 496
"Lunatics, The" (Leading Players)..... 1703
Lund, O. A. C..... 195
"Lure of Millions, The" (I. S. P. Co.)..... 799

M

Madison, Cleo..... 43
"Magic Note, The" (Ambrosio)..... 950
"Man In the Street, The" (Edison)..... 1393
"Manon Lescaut" (Playgoers Film Co.)..... 1808
"Marriage of Psyche and Cupid, The" (Pathe)..... 944
Massachusetts Exhibitors Dine..... 1124
"Master Criminal, The" (World Film)..... 372
"Master Mind, The" (Lasky)..... 947
"Master of Death, The" (I. S. P. Co.)..... 950
"Master Rogue, The" (Kalem)..... 523
McKenzie, Donald..... 647
"Meddler With Fate, A" (Pathe)..... 950
"Memories That Haunt" (Vitagraph)..... 191
Metropolis Has Jubilee Opening..... 1102
"Michael Strogoff" (Popular Plays and Players)..... 1669
Michigan Convention..... 1836
"Militant Suffragette, A" (Pathe)..... 494
Mission of Reviewers, The..... 184
"Mistress of the Air, The" (Blinkhorn)..... 978
"Molly the Drummer Boy" (Edison)..... 1674
"Mother and Wife" (Edison)..... 802
"Mother of Men, A" (Warner's Features)..... 1238
Motion Picture Exhibitor, The 68, 220, 368, 524, 678, 826, 979, 1124, 1263, 1414
Motion Pictures In Central America..... 948
"Mountain Rat, The" (R. & M.)..... 1123
Moving Picture Educator..... 51, 202, 504, 661, 810, 1104, 1250, 1397, 1530, 1672, 1815
"Mr. Barnes of New York" (Vitagraph)..... 651
"Murdoch Trial, The" (Blinkhorn)..... 340
Music for the Picture, by Clarence E. Sinn..... 50, 505, 952, 1528
Mutual and Universal Against Censorship..... 1101
"My Official Wife" (Vitagraph)..... 1390

N

National Board of Censorship Bill, The..... 199
National Censors' Annual Report..... 1241
National Traits In Films..... 488
Native Life In the Philippines..... 365
Nilan, Marshall..... 1118
"Neptune's Daughter" (Universal)..... 796
New Blood In New Programs..... 1394
New Company Plans Big Things..... 1419
New Exhibitor, The..... 1661
New Lasky Picture Stars..... 953
New License Regulations..... 949
New Line-Up In Pittsburgh..... 525
New Mutual Publicity Men..... 1246
New York Association..... 1125
New York Association Meeting..... 981
New York Convention Peaceful..... 1699
New York Exposition..... 368, 528
New York League Convention..... 526
N. Y. Local No. 1 Permanently Organized..... 527
New York State League..... 1124
Nicholas Power Surprised..... 676
"Nina of the Theatre" (Kalem)..... 1239
No Censorship for Hoboken..... 69
No Longer Alone..... 792

O

Observations By Man About Town..... 52, 203, 350, 506, 662, 807, 956, 1106, 1247, 1398, 1529, 1678, 1818
Off the Screen With James Cruze..... 945
"One of Our Girls" (Famous Players)..... 1667
"On Life's High Sea" (Gloria)..... 648
Only a Story..... 37
"Only Son, The" (Lasky)..... 1802
Opening of the Panama Canal (Hagy's)..... 1519
Opening of the Strand..... 371, 502
"Outcast's Return, The" (Great Northern)..... 1521

P

Patent Case Decision..... 973
Pathe Opens Exchanges..... 975
Pathe Putting Out News Daily..... 1524
Pathescope, The..... 1524
"Pawns of Destiny, The" (Victor)..... 659
Pennsylvania Convention at Wilkes Barre..... 1124
"Perils of Pauline, The" (Eclectic)..... 38
"Perils of Pauline, The" (6th Episode) (Pathe)..... 1517
"Petrof the Vassal" (Savoia)..... 944
Photographic Dealers' Convention..... 215
Photoplay at Christening..... 951
Photoplaywright, The, by Epes Winthrop Sargent..... 55, 206, 353, 509, 665, 814, 962, 1109, 1254, 1401, 1534, 1681, 1821
Pictura, A Social Agent..... 1512
Picture In Education, The..... 200
Pictures To Carry Trade Message..... 1242
Picturing Thought..... 1089
"Pie for Sophie" (Essanay)..... 500
"Pierre of the Plains" (All Star)..... 647
"Pierrot the Prodigal"..... 1703
Planning National Convention..... 368
Poor Picture Leaders A Crime..... 1710
Praise for Harold Shaw..... 1101
"Port of Missing Men, The" (Famous Players)..... 976
President Wilson to Open Exposition..... 1544
Price, C. B..... 1270
"Price of Treachery, The" (World Film)..... 190
Primagraph's New Leading Lady..... 1271
Production Without Method..... 489
Projection Department, by F. H. Richardson..... 60, 208, 355, 511, 667, 816, 964, 1111, 1256, 1403, 1536, 1683, 1823
"Python Robbery The" (I. S. P. Co.)..... 658

R

Ralph Stuart A Picture tar..... 72
Rawlinson, Herbert..... 1266
Reehms, George..... 346
Religious Value of Pathe's "Life of Our Saviour"..... 188
Remarkable Achievement, A..... 805
Renters Organize For Protection..... 1242
"Ring and the Man, The" (Famous Players)..... 1411
Robards, Willis L..... 1833
Roussel, Arthur..... 197

S

Sawyer, Incorporated..... 977
Screen Children's Gallery, The..... 1413
"Seeds of Chaos" (Essanay)..... 491
Send-Off For Porter and Ford..... 1096
"Shadows of the Past, The" (Vitagraph)..... 1236
"Sheltering An Ingrate" (American)..... 1237
Shuberts and World Film In Big Deal..... 1700
Sid Olcott Going Abroad..... 1519
Single Reel, The..... 1800
Sindelar, Pearl..... 44
Solemn Joke, A..... 36
"Song of Solomon, The" (Edison)..... 346
"Southerners, The" (Edison)..... 649
"Sparrow, The" (Leading Players)..... 193
"Spartacus" (Kleine Pasquali)..... 1388
"Spartacus" At the Auditorium..... 1121
"Spoilers, The" (Selig)..... 186
Stage Plays..... 185
"Stain, The" (Eclectic)..... 1668
"Staircase of Death, The" (Gaumont)..... 654
Standardizing Modern Dances..... 71
Stanley, George..... 654
Stanley Theatre, Philadelphia..... 948
Starting Something in Ioway..... 524
Strong Climax In "The White Lie"..... 1235
Suggestions For Parks..... 955
"Swamp Fox, The" (Kalem)..... 646

T

"Tango in Tuckerville" (Edison)..... 946

"Tess of the Storm Country" (Famous Players) 40
Theatre Standard For Pennsylvania 526
Theby, Rosemary 499
"Thou Shalt Not" (Ramo) 1265
"Through Dante's Flames" (Ramo) 801
"Tracked Across the Desert" (Italia) 74
"Treasure of Sultan Abdar Rahman, The" (Pathe) 337
Turner, W. H. 659
Two Producers Go Abroad 975
Two Striking Apexes 490

U

Under Water Photography 497
Unique Theatre 492
Universal Syndicate Series 47
"Unopened Letter, The" (Edison) 44
Used Projector On Ocean Liner 1526

V

"Venetian Night, A" (Masko) 495
"Very Much Alive" (University) 1838
"Violin of M'Sieur, The" (Vitagraph) 1673
Vitagraph Company Not Exhibiting 192
Vitagraph Organ, The 806
Vitagraph Theatre Changes Bill 500, 1239

W

"Waif, The" (Eclectic) 975
Walpole, Stanley 1418
"War Is Hell" (Eclectic) 800
"War With Huerta" Is Convincing 1417
Washing Screen Club, A 1414
Whatton, Incorporated 349
What's in the Bottle 1380
"Where Is Coletti?" (L. S. P. Co.) 345
Whitman, Velma 1249
Whitney, Claire 46
"Whom the Gods Destroy" (Features Ideal) 1391
"William Tell," (Greene's Features) 652
Wisconsin Convention 525
"With His Hands" (Edison) 1099
Wizards of the Screen 941
"Woman of Mystery, The" (Blache) 1264
"Woman's Triumph, A" (Famous Players) 1122
"World, the Flesh and the Devil, The" (McEnnery Syndicate) 1547
"Wrath of the Gods, The" (N. Y. P. Co.) 1695

Index to Stories of the Films

For the benefit of the readers of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD, we have compiled a complete list of films with their dates which have been released during the past three months. Some of the films listed which have no page numbers indicate that synopses were not furnished.

License Releases

A

Accomplished Mrs. Thompson, The -June 12 (Vitagraph) 1442
Accusing Eye, The (Special—2 parts)—May 2 (Pathe) 710
Acid Test, The (Special—2 parts)—May 12 (Vitagraph) 848
Actor Finney's Finish—May 20 (Essanay) 1142
Advanced Styles For Fall and Winter, 1914-15 —May 22 (Kalem) 995
Adventure of the Counterfeit, The (Fifth of "Octavius, Amateur Detective Series" —May 18 (Edison) 998
Adventure of the Stolen Slipper, The (Fourth of "Octavius, Amateur Detective Series")—April 20 (Edison) 396
Adventure of the Missing Legacy, The (Sixth of the "Octavius, Amateur Detective Series") —June 15 (Edison) 1578
Adventure of the Rival Undertakers, The—May 20 (Vitagraph) 986
Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 8 (The Cruel Crown) (Special -2 parts -April 16 (Selig) 402
Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 9 (The Spellbound Multitude) (Special -2 parts -April 20) (Selig) 406
Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 10 (The Warrior Maid) (Special -2 parts—May 4 (Selig) .. 568
Adevtnures of Kathlyn, No. 11 (The Forged Parchment) (Special -2 parts—May 18) (Selig) 846
Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 12 (The King's Will) (Special—2 parts—June 1 (Selig) .. 1150
Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 13 (The Court of Death) (Special -2 parts—June 15) (Selig) .. 1292
A. Jonah.—June 11 (Biograph) 1586
Alaskan Interlude, An May 12 (Edison) 850
Alice Joyce, Series No. 1 (Nina of the Theater)—Special—2 parts—June 8 (Kalem) 1434
All in the Air—April 7 (Lubin) 104
All Mixed Up—April 10 (Selig) 260
Almost An Outrage—May 16 (Biograph) 854
Along Came a City Chap—April 27 (Biograph. 572
Ambitious Pa—April 18 (Biograph) 394
Ancient Ruins at Thebes, Egypt—April 7 (Pathe) 110
And He Came Back—April 15 (Essanay) 246
And the Dance Went On—May 29 (Kalem) .. 1146
Andy and the Hypnotist (Fifth of the "Andy" Series)—April 8 (Edison) 98
Andy Goes A-Pirating (Seventh of the "Andy" Series)—June 10 (Edison) 1436
Andy Plays Cupid (Sixth of the "Andy" Series) —May 13 (Edison) 850
Angel Unaware, An -June 2 (Essanay) 1296
Anne Boleyn (Special—3 parts) -June (Eclipse) 1454
Another Tale—April 28 (Lubin) 568
Antique Engagement Ring, The (Special -2 parts)—May 9 (Vitagraph) 706
Antony and Cleopatra (Special -2 parts)—May 21 (Pathe) 1158
Ashes of Hope (Special—2 parts)—May 15 (Essanay) 852
As Time Rolled On—May 22 (Selig) 995
At His Expense—April 11 (Lubin) 106
At Last We Are Alone—May 15 (Selig) 844
At the Mercy of the Waves—June 17 (Melies) 1860
Awakening of Barbara Dare, The—April 27 (Vitagraph) 560

B

Baby Spy, The (Special—2 parts) May 25 (Selig) 1150
Back to the Simple Life July (Edison) 1858
Bargain Automobile, A—June 13 (Lubin) 1588
Bargain Hunters, The -April 8 (Essanay) 100
Barrier of Ignorance, The (Special -2 parts) June 1 (Kalem) 1298
Basket Habit, The -June 22 (Edison) 1722
Battle of the Weak, The -April 13 (Vitagraph) 248
Batty Bill and the Suicide Club May 7 (Melies) 706
Batty Bill, Monkey and Pelican April 20 (Melies) 706
Batty Bill's Bustle Makes Everyone Hustle April 23 (Melies) 706
Batty Bill's House "Rough-Housed" March 26 (Melies) 104
Batty Bill's Love Affair—April 4 (Melies) .. 104
Batty Bill's Pertinacity—May 2 (Melies) 104
Batty Bill Wins a Baby—April 9 (Melies) .. 246
Beans—June 3 (Essanay) 1296
"Bear" Facts, The -June 24 (Vitagraph) 1723
Behind the Footlights (Special—2 parts) —May 6 (Lubin) 712
Bill Tell, Pawnbroker —April 4 (Biograph) 98
Billionaire, The (Special—3 parts) -June (Biograph) 1742
Black Mask, The (First of The Man Who Disappeared Series)—April 7 (Edison) 100
Blind Business, A—May 5 (Lubin) 712
Blind Man's Bluff—May 26 (Essanay) 1142
Blood Will Tell (Special—3 parts)—May (Essanay) 1318
Blotted Out—June 5 (Lubin) 1298
Bobby and the Banker—April 27 (Melies) 706
Bobby As a Guardian Angel—April 20 (Melies) 706
Bobby "Sees" Spiritualist -April 6 (Melies) . 104
Boer War, The (Special—5 parts) -March (Kalem) 1608
Bombarded June 12 (Selig) 1438
Bondage of Fear, The—April 13 (Biograph) 394
Bond of Love, The—April 3 (Selig) 258
Bottled Spider, The (Special -Two parts) May 27 (Kalem) 1144
Box Car Bridge, The June 12 (Kalem) 1434
Boys of the L. O. U., The—May 27 (Vitagraph) 1142
Breaking Even (Special -2 parts) April 25 (Pathe) 442
Brewerytown Romance, A—June 2 (Lubin) ... 1298
Broken Chain, The (Special -2 parts) May 5 (Cines) 712
Broncho Billy's Jealousy June 27 (Essanay) .. 1726
Broncho Billy's Punishment July 4 (Essanay) . 1852
Broncho Billy and the Mine Shark June 13 (Essanay) 1434
Broncho Billy and the Rattler—April 18 (Essanay) 246
Broncho Billy, Gunman -April 25 (Essanay) .. 394
Broncho Billy's Close Call -May 2 (Essanay) .. 566
Broncho Billy's Sermon—May 9 (Essanay) 708
Broncho Billy's Leap, May 16 (Essanay) 852
Broncho Billy's Cunning May 30 (Essanay) .. 1142
Broncho Billy's Duty—June 6 (Essanay) 1296
Broncho Billy, Outlaw June 20 (Essanay) 1584
Brought to Justice June 20 (Kalem) 1586
Brown's Bachelor Supper June 15 (Biograph) .. 1722
Brown's Big Butler -June 23 (Lubin) 1726
Brute Force (Special—2 parts)—April 25 (Biograph) 572
Buddy's First Call, May 13 (Vitagraph) 848
Building a Fire -May 9 (Lubin) 716
Bully's Doom, The April 7 (Lubin) 104
Bunco Bill's Visit -May 1 (Vitagraph) 562
Bunny Buys a Harem May 15 (Vitagraph) .. 850
Bunny in Disguise -May 8 (Vitagraph) 704
Bunny's Swell Affair—May 22 (Vitagraph) 996
Burglar's Sacrifice, The April 4 (Biograph) .. 98
Buried Crime, The May 23 (Melies) 1138
Business and Love -April 14 (Lubin) 252
By Parcel Post June 3 (Edison) 1293
By Taxi to Fortune -June 8 (Melies) .....
By the Old Dead Tree -June 20 (Biograph) .. 1722

C

Cabby's Nightmare -April 6 (Melies) 104
Call of the Tribe, The (Special -2 parts) June 3 (Kalem) 1298
Candidate for Mayor, The (Special -2 parts) June 25 (Lubin) 1728
Captain Alvarez (6 parts) June (Broadway Star Features) 1880
Captain Chap, The -June 26 (Selig) 1860
Captain Kidd, the Robl—June 6 (Biograph) .. 1436
Captured By the Mexicans (Special -2 parts) April 8 (Kalem) 98
Casey's Birthday May 5 (Lubin) 712
Castles in the Air -June 17 (Selig) 1578
Chance in Life, A -April 17 (Lubin) 252
Changeling, The (Special -2 parts)—June 10 (Lubin) 1442
Charm, The (Special -2 parts) June 26 (Essanay) 1726
Cherry—April 6 (Vitagraph) 102
Cherry Pickers, The (Special—2 parts)—April 13 (Selig) 402
Chicken! June 19 (Selig) 1578
Chicken Inspector, The—April 15 (Vitagraph) 248
Chinese Fan, The (Fifth of the Dolly of the Dailies Series)—April 11 (Edison) 100
Christian, The (Special—8 parts)—June (Vitagraph-Lieber Co.) 1542
Chronicles of Cleek, Series No. 6 (The Mystery of the Silver Snare) -April 28 (Edison) .. 562
Chronicles of Cleek, Series No. 7 (The Mystery of the Amsterdam Diamonds)—May 26 (Edison) 1146
"Chronicles of Cleek" Series No. 8 (The Mystery of the Fadeless Tints)—June 30 (Edison) .. 1858
Circus Time in Toyland —May 23 (Lubin) .. 1158
City of Agra, India, The—May 26 (Pathe) 1160
Circus and the Boy, The July1 (Vitagraph) 1806
Claim Number 3—June 12 (Lubin) 1442
Clarence and Percy's Sailing Party—April 6 (Edison) 98
Classmates (Special—4 parts)—May (Biograph K. & E.) 1322
Clock Went Wrong, The—May 26 (Selig) 1148
Col. Heeza Liar, Farmer—May 18 (Pathe) 1158
Col. Heeza Liar in Mexico—April 22 (Pathe) .. 472
Coming of Lone Wolf, The—May 30 (Kalem) 1146
Conductor's Courtship, The—June 23 (Kalem) 1723
Conquest of Chirce, The (Special—2 parts) May 23 (Pathe) 1160
Conscientious Caroline, June 1 (Edison) 1293
Cottage By the River, A —May 4 (Melies) 706
Counterfeiters, The June 6 (Edison) 1296
Countess, The June 23 (Essanay) 1724
Countess Veschi's Jewels, The (Special—2 parts)—May 16 (Vitagraph) 850
Country Girl, A—May 23 (Lubin) 1068
Courmalles-Brittany (France) —June 15 (Pathe) 1726
Court of Death, The (The Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 13) (Special -2 parts) June 15 (Selig) 1292
Coward and the Man, The May 16 (Edison) .. 850
Crime of Cain, The June 15 (Vitagraph) 1580
Cross and the Crescent, The (Special—2 parts) —April 28 (Vitagraph) 569
Crowning Glory, The (Special -2 parts) May 28 (Lubin) 1156
Cruel Crown, The (The Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 8) (Special -2 parts) April 16 (Selig) 406
Cupid Versus Money -May 4 (Vitagraph) 704
Curing a Husband—April 29 (Essanay) 566
Curse of Greed, The (Special—5 parts)—May 19 (Melies) 1322
Cutey's Wife (Special—2 parts) May 26 (Vitagraph) 1142

D

Dance of Death, The (Special -2 parts)—April 27 (Kalem) 560
Daring Getaway, A—May 30 (Biograph) 1156
Daring Young Person, The—June 20 (Essanay) 1852
Darktown Wooing, A -May 15 (Kalem) 844
Dawn, May 27 (Selig) 1148
Deadliest of Nature's Celebrities, The—April 28 (Pathe) 708
Death's Witness June 1 (Biograph) 1436
Death Warrant, The (Special -2 parts) April 25 (Lubin) 598
Detective Kelly (Special—2 parts)—April 11 (Pathe) 110
Detective's Sister, The (Special -2 parts) May 6 (Kalem) 702
Difference Between Tangos—April 30 (Melies) 706
Dippy's Dream—May 1 (Kalem) 560
Doctor's Mistake, The -June 10 (Selig) 1438
Doctor's Trust, The -March 30 (Biograph) .. 98
Doc Yak, Bowling—May 5 (Selig) .....
Doc Yak, Over the Fence and Out April 17 (Selig) .....
Doc Yak and the Limited Train June 23 (Selig) .....
Duck Yak Wishes, July 3 (Selig) .....
Doc Yak's Zoo—June 12 (Selig) .....
Doc Yak the Marksman—May 12 (Selig) .....
Dogs of War—June 2 (Pathe) 1297
Dolly of the Dailies, Series No. 5 (The Chinese Fan)—April 11 (Edison) 100

Dolly of the Dailies, Series No. 6 (On the Heights)—April 25 (Edison)..... 398
Dolly of the Dailies, Series No. 7 (The End of the Umbrella) –May 9 (Edison)..... 702
Dolly of the Dailies, Series No. 8 (A Tight Squeeze) –May 23 (Edison)..... 1006
Dolly of the Dailies, Series No. 9 (A Terror of the Night) June 13 (Edison)..... 1438
"Dolly of the Dailies" Series No. 10 (Dolly Plays Detective)—June 27 (Edison)..... 1722
Dolly Plays Detective (Tenth of the "Dolly of the Dailies" Series)—June 27 (Edison)..... 1722
Doom of Duty, The –July 3 (Lubin)..... 1868
Dorothy Fanebridge, Militant –May 18 (Vitagraph)..... 996
Double Cross, The (Third Story of The Man Who Disappeared Series)—May 5 (Edison)..... 702
Drastic Remedy, A—May 11 (Melies)..... 854
Dream of the Circus, A—April 25 (Lubin)..... 400

E

Easter Lily, An—April 10 (Vitagraph)..... 246
Elder Brother, The (Special –2 parts)—June 5 (Essanay)..... 1296
Elopment In Rome, An—June 26 (Kalem)..... 1724
Empty Sleeve, The—July 1 (Selig)..... 1862
End of the Umbrella, The (Seventh of the Dolly of the Dailies Series) –May 9 (Edison) 702
Epidemic, The—June 24 (Essanay)..... 1724
Estrangement, The—May 23 (Selig)..... 995
Ethics of the Profession, The—June 8 (Biograph)..... 1586
Etta of the Footlights (Special—2 parts)—May 23 (Vitagraph)..... 998
Eugenics at Bar "U" Ranch—June 9 (Selig)..1438
Everybody's Doing It—June 18 (Melies)..... 1440
Eve's Daughter—June 8 (Vitagraph)..... 1440
Evil She Did, The—May 6 (Selig)..... 716

F

Fable of the Brash Drummer and the Nectarine, The—June 17 (Essanay)..... 1582
Fable of "The Good Fairy," The—July 1 (Essanay)..... 1852
Facing the Footlights (Special—3 parts)—May (Pathe)..... 1318
False Move, A—June 4 (Vitagraph)..... 1438
Fatal Portrait (Special—2 parts)—July 1 (Kalem)..... 1852
Fancy Skating—March 31 (Selig)..... 394
Fanny's Melodrama—April 22 (Vitagraph)..... 394
Fatal Wedding, The (Special—3 parts)—May (Biograph, K. & E.)..... 1322
Father Scapegoat, The—May 18 (Biograph)..... 1156
Father's Flirtation (Special—2 parts)—June 20 (Vitagraph)..... 1582
Father's Heart, A (Special—2 parts)—April 15 (Lubin)..... 252
Female Cop, The—June 6 (Lubin)..... 1298
Few Minutes in Calcutta, India—April 28 (Pathe)..... 708
Fifteen Years Later—May 20 (Melies)..... 996
Fight On the Deadwood Trail, The—April 18 (Kalem)..... 246
Fine Feathers Make Fine Birds –April 9 (Melies)..... 246
Finger-Prints (Special—2 parts)—June 19 (Essanay)..... 1584
Fire! Fire!—June 6 (Lubin)..... 1442
Fire Jugglers, The—April 29 (Selig)..... 260
Flirt's Repentance, A—April 16 (Selig)..... 262
Flaw On the Alibi, The (Special—2 parts)—June 29 (Kalem)..... 1852
Fleeing From the Fleas—July 3 (Kalem)..... 1852
Flowers That Bloom In the Spring—April 15 (Pathe)..... 256
Forged Parchment, The (The Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 11) (Special—2 parts)—May 18 (Selig)..... 846
For Two Pins –May 26 (Lubin)..... 1156
'Fraid Cat –April 8 (Vitagraph)..... 102
Frederick the Great (Special—2 parts)—May 1 (Edison)..... 564
Fringe of the Glove, The (Special—2 parts) – May 18 (Kalem)..... 995
Fugitive from Justice, A –April 29 (Edison).. 564

G

Gamblers, The (Special –5 parts)—June (Lubin)..1456
Game of Life, The (Special –3 parts)—April 25 (Selig)..... 566
Gang, The—June 29 (Vitagraph)..... 1866
Gap, The (Sixth of The Man who Disappeared Series) –June 16 (Edison)..... 1578
Gertie Gets the Cash –April 10 (Kalem)..... 98
Getaway, The –May 1 (Lubin)..... 570
Getting Solid With Pa –June 20 (Lubin)..... 1588
Ghost, The (Special –3 parts) –April 18 (Pathe) 256
Gilligin's Accident Policy –May 7 (Biograph).. 854
Girl and the Gondolier, The—May 15 (Kalem). 844
Girl At His Side, The –June 20 (Selig)..... 1578
Girl Behind the Barrier, The—May 30 (Selig)..1150
Girl from Prosperity (Special –2 parts) –April 11 (Vitagraph)..... 246
Girl of the Cafes (Special—2 parts)—June 4 (Lubin)..... 1298
Glacier National Park in Winter –June 23 (Pathe)..... 1724
Golden Patch, The—March 19 (Selig)..... 258
Good Cider –June 16 (Lubin)..... 1586
Good Excuse, A –June 3 (Melies)..... 1298
Good-for-Nothing, The (Special –4 parts) – June (Essanay)..... 1454
Good Time Spoiled, A –June 23 (Melies)..... 1724
Grafters, The –April 8 (Pathe)..... 110
Greater Love, The (Special –2 parts) –April 9 (Pathe)..... 110
Greater Love, The—May 5 (Essanay)..... 708
Greater Treasure, The (Special –2 parts) –June 24 (Lubin)..... 1726
Gray Eagle's Last Stand (Special—2 parts) (Kalem)..... 406
Guaranteed Rainproof—April 18 (Lubin)..... 256
Gypsy Gambler, The—June 27 (Kalem)..... 1724

H

Hand of Horror, The (Special—2 parts—Drama) June 19 (Edison)..... 1580
Handsome Harry Minds the Shop—April 20 (Melies)..... 706
Handsome Harry's Wooing—March 26 (Melies). 104
Happy-Go-Lucky—June 25 (Vitagraph)..... 1723
Hasty Judgment, A—May 26 (Melies)..... 996
Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 14—April 4 (Selig)..... 406
Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 15—April 11 (Selig)..... 406
Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 16—April 18 (Selig)..... 406
Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 17—April 25 (Selig)..... 406
Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 18—April 27 (Selig)..... 406
Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 19—May 4 (Selig)..... 406
Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 20—May 7 (Selig)..... 406
Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 21—May 11 (Selig)..... 406
Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 22—May 14 (Selig)..... 406
Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 23—May 18 (Selig)..... 406
Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 24—May 21 (Selig)..... 406
Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 25—May 25 (Selig)..... 406
Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 26—May 28 (Selig)..... 406
Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 27—June 1 (Selig)..... 406
Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 28—June 4 (Selig)..... 406
Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 29—June 8 (Selig)..... 406
Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 30—June 11 (Selig)..... 406
Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 31—June 15 (Selig)..... 406
Hearst- Selig News Pictorial No. 32—June 18 (Selig)..... 406
Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 33—June 22 (Selig)..... 406
Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 34—June 25 (Selig)..... 406
Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 35—June 29 (Selig)..... 406
Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 36—July 2 (Selig)..... 406
Hearts Are Trumps—May 11 (Pathe)..... 852
Hearts of Men—June 30 (Selig)..... 1862
He Changed His Mind—June 13 (Lubin)..... 1588
He Never Found Out—May 2 (Lubin)..... 570
He Never Knew (Special—2 parts)—April 14 (Vitagraph)..... 248
Her Big Scoop—May 2 (Biograph)..... 572
Her Big Scoop (Special—2 parts)—April 25 (Vitagraph)..... 394
Her False Friend (Special—2 parts)—April 21 (Cines)..... 400
Her Grandmother's Wedding Dress—May 2 (Edison)..... 564
Her Horrid Honeymoon—May 19 (Lubin)..... 1006
Her Ladyship (Special—3 parts)—April 18 (Selig)..... 566
Her Mother's Weakness—May 14 (Biograph).. 854
Her Neighbors Next Door—June 18 (Biograph.. 1722
He Said He Could Act—May 16 (Lubin)..... 856
He Won a Ranch—May 19 (Lubin)..... 1006
He Wore a Wig—June 9 (Lubin)..... 1442
Hickville's Finest—April 11 (Biograph)..... 246
Hidden Death (Special—2 parts) –June 18 (Melies)..... 1580
High Life Hits Slippery Slim—April 16 (Essanay)..... 246
His Dream Fulfilled –June 18 (Melies)..... 1580
His First Ride—June 4 (Selig)..... 1438
His Last Call—May 7 (Vitagraph)..... 704
His Sob Story (Special—2 parts)—May 15 (Edison)..... 850
His Sudden Recovery –June 27 (Lubin)..... 1728
His Sweetheart's Child (Special—2 parts)—April 2 (Pathe)..... 108
His Symphony (Special—2 parts)—June 30 (Cello)..... 1748
Historic St. Cloud—June 22 (Pathe)..... 1724
His Uncle's Deception –June 11 (Melies)..... 1440
His Wife and His Work (Special—2 parts) – June 27 (Vitagraph)..... 1864
Home Run Baker's Double (Special—2 parts) June 17 (Kalem)..... 1584
Hop-Head's Dream—April 27 (Biograph)..... 572
Hour of Danger, The—June 6 (Kalem)..... 1298
House of Darkness (Special—2 parts)—June 18 (Lubin)..... 1588
How Lone Wolf Died –June 16 (Selig)..... 1578
Hubby's Night Off—April 10 (Kalem)..... 98
Hunger Knows No Law—May 28 (Vitagraph).1144
Hunted Animal, The (Second of The Man Who Disappeared Series)—April 21 (Edison)... 396

I

Idio, The—June 4 (Biograph)..... 1436
Impersonator, The (Special –3 parts) –April 10 (Edison)..... 98
In Amalfia, Italy April 3 (Selig)..... 1862
In Defiance of the Law (3 parts)—June (Selig) 1888
In Fate's Cycle –May 11 (Biograph)..... 854
In High Life (Fifth of the Wood B. Wedd Series)—April 27 (Edison)..... 562
Innocent, But Awkward –April 17 (Vitagraph) 248
In Real Life—May 12 (Essanay)..... 850
In Royal Bondage (Special—2 parts)—April 30 (Pathe)..... 708
In Spite of the Evidence—April 23 (Selig)..... 402
In Tangled Webs (Special—2 parts)—April 4 (Pathe)..... 108
In the Days of Guillotine—May 27 (Melies)..... 1724
In the Days of Slavery—June 20 (Edison)....1580
In the Moon's Ray (Special—2 parts—April 10) (Essanay)..... 100
In the Northland (Special—2 parts)—May 13 (Lubin)..... 854
Inventor's Wife, The (Special—2 parts)—April 29 (Lubin)..... 570
It's a Shame—July 4 (Lubin)..... 1868

J

Jack and His Motorcycle—May 28 (Melies)....
Jack's Inheritance—May 28 (Melies)..... 1434
Jane—June 9 (Essanay)..... 1434
Jerboa, The (Habitat, Africa)—May 12 (Pathe) 852
Johanna the Barbarian (Special—2 parts)—May 19 (Vitagraph)..... 996
Joking Bricklayers, The—June 1 (Pathe)..... 1297
Judge Dunn's Decision (Special—2 parts)—June 8 (Selig)..... 1292
Judith of Bethulia (Special—4 parts)—June (Biograph)..... 1608

K

Kidnapped Bride, The—July 4 (Lubin)..... 1868
Kingdom At Stake, A (Special—3 parts)—(April (Eclipse)..... 1868
King's Will, The (The Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 12) (Special—2 parts)—June 1 (Selig).1150
Kiss, The—April 16 (Vitagraph)..... 248
Kiss Me Good Night (Special—2 parts)—June 3 (Lubin)..... 1298
Klondike Bubble, The (Special—2 parts)—April 22 (Lubin)..... 398
Knight of Trouble, A—May 1 (Selig)..... 716
Knockabout Kelly, Magician in Spite of Himself —April 27 (Melies)..... 706

L

Labor Demonstration In Hyde Park, London—June 26 (Kalem)..... 1724
Ladies' War, The—June 17 (Vitagraph)..... 1582
Lady of Spirits, A (Sixth of the Wood B. Wedd Series)—May 25 (Edison)..... 1146
Last Man's Club, The—April 22 (Selig)..... 400
Last Will, The (Special—2 parts)—June 2 (Vitagraph)..... 1438
Leaf from the Past, A (Special—2 parts)—May 21 (Lubin)..... 1008
Leopold's Foundling, The (Special—2 parts)—June 29 (Selig)..... 1864
Life of Our Savior, The (Special—7 parts)—April (Pathe)..... 1008
Life's Lottery—May 22 (Lubin)..... 1008
Light On the Wall, The (Fourth Story of The Man Who Disappeared)—May 19 (Edison).. 998
Like Father, Like Son—May 21 (Melies)..... 1584
Lily of the Valley, The (Special—3 parts)—June (Selig)..... 1458
Little Breeches—April 25 (Lubin)..... 400
Little He and She, The—June 16 (Essanay)..1582
Little Hobo, The—July 4 (Selig)..... 1862
Little Madonna, A—April 23 (Vitagraph)..... 394
Little Miss Bountiful—April 30 (Selig)..... 716
Little Sheriff, The—April 9 (Vitagraph)..... 102
Living Fear, The (Special—2 parts)—July 1 (Lubin)..... 1866
Long May it Wave—June 20 (Lubin)..... 1728
Lord Algy (Special—2 parts)—April 8 (Lubin). 104
Lord Chumley (4 parts)—June (Biograph K & E)..... 1886
Lost—Pair of Shoes—May 27 (Edison)..... 1146
Lost Heir, The (Special—2 parts)—June 6 (Pathe)..... 1297
Lo! the Poor Indian—April 15 (Edison)..... 250
Love, Luck and Gasoline (Special—3 parts)—May (Broadway Star Features)..... 1318
Love's Long Lane (Special—2 parts)—May 20 (Lubin)..... 1008
Love Story of Her Youth—June 10 (Melies)..
Lucky Vest, The—May 6 (Edison)..... 702
Lure of the Pit, The (Special—2 parts)—June 11 (Lubin)..... 1442

M

Madam Coquette (Special—2 parts)—May 14 (Lubin)..... 886
Mad Love, A (Special—2 parts)—April 16 (Pathe)..... 256
Maid from Sweden, The—June 5 (Vitagraph). 1440
Making Good With Her Family—July 3 (Selig) 1862
Making Him Over—For Minnie –May 6 (Essanay)..... 708
Making Steel Rails—May 26 (Pathe)..... 1160
Man For a' That, A (Special—2 parts)—April 24 (Essanay)..... 394
Man Higher Up, The—May 4 (Pathe)..... 710
Maniacs Three—May 7 (Biograph)..... 854
Manila, Capital of the Philippines—May 4 (Pathe)..... 710
Man in the House, A—April 23 (Biograph).... 572
Man in the Street, The (Special –3 parts)—June 26 (Edison)..... 1722
Man's Soul, A (Special –2 parts)—May 13 (Kalem)..... 844
"Man Who Disappeared," Series No. 1 (The Black Mask) –April 7 (Edison)..... 100
"Man Who Disappeared," Series No. 2 (The Hunted Animal)—April 21 (Edison)..... 396
"Man Who Disappeared," Series No. 3 (The Double Cross)—May 5 (Edison)..... 702
"Man Who Disappeared," Series No. 4 (The Light On the Wall)—May 19 (Edison)... 998
"Man Who Disappeared," Series No. 5 (With His Hands)—June 2 (Edison)..... 1293
"Man Who Disappeared," Series No. 6 (The Gap)—June 16 (Edison)..... 1578

Mareen the Half Breed (Special—2 parts)—May 2 (Vitagraph) 562
Marian the Holy Terror—May 12 (Kalem) 844
Maria's Sacrifice—June 22 (Vitagraph) 1722
Marmot, The—June 23 (Pathe) .....
Marriage of Cupid, The (Special —2 parts)—May 9 (Pathe) 710
Marrying Gretchen—May 5 (Selig) 716
Martha's Rebellion—May 11 (Edison) 850
Master of the Strong, The—April 6 (Biograph) .. 246
Master Rogue, The (Special—2 parts)—May 4 (Kalem) 560
Maud's Glove—June 3 (Melies) .....
Max's Vacation—May 19 (Pathe) 1158
Max the Lady Killer—May 5 (Pathe) 710
Max, The Magician—June 22 (Pathe) .....
McBride's Bride—May 8 (Kalem) 702
Me An' Bill, (Special—2 parts)—June 22 (Selig) 1866
Meddler With Fate, A (Special—2 parts)—May 7 (Pathe) 710
Melody and Art—April 16 (Biograph) 394
Memories That Haunt, The (Special—2 parts)—April 4 (Vitagraph) 102
? Midnight ? Midnight 30 (Melies) .....
Midnight Call, The—March 31 (Selig) 258
Midnight Guest, A (Special —2 parts)—June 23 (Cines) 1748
Mike the Avenger—April 24 (Selig) 402
Militant Suffragette (Special—5 parts)—May (Pathe) 718
Military Tattoo at Aldershot, England—June 19 (Kalem) 1586
Million Bid, A (Special—5 parts)—April (Vitagraph) 264
Miser Murray's Wedding Present—May 11 (Vitagraph) 848
Miss Raffles—June 1 (Vitagraph) 1438
Missing Jewels, The—June 16 (Vitagraph) 1724
Mixed Mails—April 18 (Biograph) 394
Mix-up On the Plains, A—April 7 (Selig) 260
Modern Samson—June 17 (Edison) 1578
Molly, The Drummer Boy—July 4 (Edison) 1858
Monaco—June 1 (Pathe) 1297
Mother—June 24 (Melies) .....
Mother and Wife—May 30 (Edison) 1293
Mother of Seven, The—May 8 (Selig) 718
Mr. Barnes of New York (Special—6 parts)—May (Broadway Star Features) 1318
Mr. Bunnyhug Buys a Hat For His Bride—May 29 (Vitagraph) 1144
Mrs. Peyton's Pearls (Special—2 parts)—June 15 (Kalem) 1584
Mummy, The (Special—2 parts)—June 13 (Melies) .....
Music Hath Charms—Not—May 22 (Selig) 995
Mysterious Package, The (Special—3 parts)—June 24 (Edison) 1722
Mystery of Room 643, The (Special—2 parts)—May 8 (Essanay) 708
Mystery of the Fadeless Tints, The (Eight of the "Chronicles of Cleek" series)—June 30 (Edison) 1858
Mystery of the Hidden House, The (Special—2 parts)—May 30 (Vitagraph) 1144
Mystery of the Amsterdam Diamonds (Chronicles of Cleek, Series No. 7)—May 26 (Edison) 1146
Mystery of the Silver Snare (Chronicles of Cleek, Series No. 6)—April 28 (Edison) .. 562

N

Navajo Blanket, The (Special—2 parts)—April 15 (Kalem) 246
'Neath the Lion's Paw (Special—3 parts) —June 17 (Melies) 1744
New Medicine Man, The—May 9 (Kalem) 702
Nice Nursey—June 23 (Lubin) 1726
Night Riders of Petersham (Special—3 parts) April (Vitagraph) 430
Nina of the Theater (First of the Alice Joyce Series) (Special—2 parts)—June 8 (Kalem) .. 1434
Nurse and the Counterfeiter, The—April 25 (Kalem) 408

O

"Octavius," Amateur Detective, Series No. 4 (The Adventures of the Stolen Slipper)—April 20 (Edison) 396
"Octavius," Amateur Detective, Series No. 5 (The Adventures of the Counterfeit Money)—May 18 (Edison) 998
"Octavius," Amateur Detective, Series No. 6 (The Adventure of the Missing Legacy)—June 15 (Edison) 1578
Old Fire Horse and the New Fire Chief, The Special—2 parts—May 5 (Vitagraph) 704
Old Maid's Baby, The—June 26 (Vitagraph) .. 1723
One Woman's Way (Special —2 parts)—June 16 (Cines) 1582
Only a Sister—June 18 (Vitagraph) 1582
On the Beach—June 13 (Melies) 1860
On the Brink—April 10 (Lubin) 106
On the Heights (Sixth of the Dolly of the Dailies Series)—April 25 (Edison) 398
On the Ice—A Demonstration of Fancy Skating at Wengen, Switzerland—June 24 (Edison) 1722
On the Minute (Special 2 parts)—May 11 (Selig) 846
On the Steps—June 17 (Edison) 1578
Opal's Curse, The—June 15 (Biograph) 1586
Our Fairy Play (Special 2 parts)—June 13 (Vitagraph) 1442
Out in Happy Hollow—May 21 (Vitagraph) 996
Outwitting Dad—April 21 (Lubin) 398

P

Pack of Cards, A (Special—2 parts)—April 30 (Lubin) 570
Page from Yesterday, A—April 15 (Selig) 260
Pair of Stockings, A—May 13 (Selig) 844
Parent Strain, The—June 19 (Lubin) 1588
Particular Cowboys, The—May 26 (Lubin) 1156
Passing of Diana, The (Special 2 parts)—June 23 (Vitagraph) 1722
Pat Casey's Case—May 27 (Essanay) 1142
Pathe's Weekly, No. 24, 1914—Mar. 23 (Pathe). 106
Pathe's Weekly, No. 25, 1914—Mar. 26 (Pathe). 106
Pathe's Weekly, No. 26, 1914—Mar. 30 (Pathe). 256
Pathe's Weekly, No. 27, 1914—Apr. 2 (Pathe). 408
Pathe's Weekly, No. 28, 1914—Apr. 6 (Pathe). 408
Pathe's Weekly, No. 29, 1914—Apr. 9 (Pathe). 408
Pathe's Weekly, No. 30, 1914—Apr. 13 (Pathe). 572
Pathe's Weekly, No. 31, 1914—Apr. 16 (Pathe). 572
Pathe's Weekly, No. 32, 1914—Apr. 20 (Pathe). 712
Pathe's Weekly, No. 33, 1914—Apr. 23 (Pathe). 712
Pathe's Weekly, No. 34, 1914—Apr. 29 (Pathe). 854
Pathe's Weekly, No. 35, 1914—May 6 (Pathe). 1158
Pathe's Weekly, No. 36, 1914—May 13 (Pathe). 1158
Pathe's Weekly, No. 37, 1914—May 20 (Pathe). 1297
Pathe's Weekly, No. 38, 1914—May 27 (Pathe). 1586
Pathe's Weekly, No. 39, 1914—June 3 (Pathe). 1586
Pathe's Weekly, No. 40, 1914—June 10 (Pathe) 1726
Pathe's Weekly, No. 41, 1914—June 17 (Pathe) 1868
Pauline's Necklace (Special—2 parts)—June 4 (Melies) .....
Peacemakers Pay, The—April 4 (Lubin) 250
Peculiar Inheritance, A—June 25 (Melies) .....
Percy the Lady-Killer—May 21 (Biograph) .. 1156
Persistent Mr. Prince, The—June 13 (Vitagraph) 1582
Peter Loves Work—June 2 (Melies) .....
Peter's Relations—June 19 (Selig) 1578
Picturesque Coast of Catalonia—April 14 (Pathe) 256
Pierre of the North—April 14 (Essanay) 246
Pie Eaters, The—June 9 (Lubin) 1442
Pie for Sophie—April 30 (Essanay) 566

Pills and Pills (Special —2 parts)—June 20 (Melies) .....
Pills and Pills (Special 2 parts)—June 23 (Melies) 1860
Pirates of Peacock Alley, The—April 29 (Selig) 716
Plot That Failed, The—May 1 (Selig) 716
Poor Folks' Boy, The (Special—2 parts)—June 30 (Vitagraph) 1866
Political Boss, The—July 4 (Kalem) 1852
Power to Forgive, The—June 11 (Vitagraph) .. 1142
Practical Demonstration, A—June 26 (Lubin) .. 1728
Precious Twins, The (Special—2 parts)—May 16 (Pathe) 854
Price of His Honor, The—April 7 (Essanay) .. 100
Price of the Drinks, The—May 25 (Biograph) .. 1156
Princess of the Desert, A—April 18 (Edison) .. 250
Prize Employer, The—June 15 (Biograph) 1722
Professor Spuff's Romance—April 27 (Pathe) .. 708
Pups On the Rampage—April 6 (Vitagraph) .....

Q

Quack and the Would-Be Suicide—April 16 (Melies) .....
Quarantined—April 13 (Edison) 250
Queer Quarantine, A—April 1 (Essanay) 1722
Question of Hats and Gowns, A (Special—2 parts)—April 17 (Edison) 250
Quicksands, The (Special—2 parts)—June 10 (Kalem) 1434
Quits (Special—2 parts)—June 11 (Melies) ..

R

Race With the Limited, A—April 17 (Kalem). 246
Ragamuffin, The—June 25 (Biograph) 1858
Rastus' Riotous Ride—May 25 (Pathe) 1160
Reaping for the Whirlwind—June 5 (Kalem) .. 1434
Red Head and Ma's Suitors—April 17 (Selig) . 262
Red Head Introduces Herself—April 10 (Selig) 260
Red Riding Hood of the Hills—May 23 (Essanay) 1142
Redskins and Rangers, The (Special—2 parts)—May 20 (Kalem) 905
Regeneration (Special—2 parts)—May 11 (Kalem) 844
Resurrection of Caleb Worth, The—April 14 (Edison) 250
Revengeful Servant Girl (Seventh of the "Wood B. Wedd" Series)—June 20 (Edison) 1858
Ribbons and Boxing Gloves—June 27 (Biograph) 1890
Right to Happiness, The—June 24 (Selig) 1892
Right of Way, The (Special—2 parts)—June 9 (Vitagraph) 1440
Rings and Robbers—April 11 (Biograph) 246
Rival Collectors, The—April 4 (Melies) 104
Road to Plaindale, The—May 23 (Biograph) .. 1156
Romance of the Forest Reserve, A—April 14 (Selig) 260
Romeo and Juliet—May 21 (Biograph) 1156
Root of Evil, The (Special—2 parts)—April 9 (Lubin) 106
Rose O' My Heart—June 6 (Selig) 1292
Royal Box, The (Special —4 parts)—June (Selig) 1456
Ruben Duck, The—April 21 (Lubin) 398
Rube, The—April 8 (Selig) 260
Ruins of Angkor, India, The—April 14 (Pathe) 256
Rummage Sale, The—June 3 (Selig) 1292

S

Salt Mackerel Mine, A—April 24 (Kalem) 408
Salvation of Nance O'Shaughnessy, The (Special 2 parts)—Mar. 31 (Selig) 262
Sandy and Shorty Start Something—May 6 (Vitagraph) 704
Saving Presence, The—Mar. 4 (Biograph) 854
Scar, The—April 20 (Biograph) 572
Sentence of Crime, The (Special —2 parts)—May 28 (Biograph) 1156
Schooling of Mary Ann—April 28 (Selig) 716
Sea Gull, The—May 14 (Vitagraph) 848
Second Childhood—May 29 (Selig) 1150
Second Wife, The—April 21 (Selig) 402
Secret Crime, A—May 2 (Kalem) 560
Secret Formula, The (Special —2 parts)—April 26 (Kalem) 406
Secret Vault, The (Special —2 parts)—April 14 (Cines) 262
Seeds of Chaos (Special —2 parts)—May 1 (Essanay) 566
Sentimental Burglar, A—May 25 (Vitagraph) 1142
Seraphina's Love Affair—May 20 (Edison) 998
Setting the Style—April 29 (Vitagraph) 560
Servant Question Out West, The—June 23 (Selig) 1890
Seven Days (2 parts)—June (Biograph K & E) 1886
Shadow of Tragedy, The (Special —2 parts)—July 2 (Lubin) 1868
Shadow on the Wall, A (Special —2 parts)—June 27 (Melies) .....
Shattered Tree, The (Special —2 parts)—July 3 (Edison) 1858
Sheep Runners, The—June 2 (Selig) 1292
Sheil Comb Industry—June 16 (Lubin) 1586
Shotgun Jones (Special—2 parts)—April 27 (Selig) 568
Show Girl's Glove, The (Special —2 parts)—June 22 (Kalem) 1724
Siamese Customs (Indo-China)—April 22 (Pathe) 412
Signal, The—May 15 (Lubin) 856
Simple Experiments in Electricity—June 16 (Pathe) 1726
Simp Simpson and the Spirits—May 26 (Selig). 1148
Skelley's Birth day—April 4 (Biograph) 98
Slippery Slim and the Stork—April 23 (Essanay) 394
Slippery Slim's Stratagem—May 14 (Essanay). 852
Snakeville Epidemic, A—May 7 (Essanay) 708
Snakeville Romance, A—May 21 (Essanay) 1142
Snakeville's New Sheriff—April 19 (Essanay) .. 100
Snakeville Volunteer, The—June 11 (Essanay) . 1434
Somebody's Sister—June 24 (Selig) 1860
Song in the Dark, The (Special—2 parts)—June 12 (Essanay) 1434
Song of Solomon, The (Special—2 parts) —May 8 (Edison) 702
Song of Sunny Italy—June 22 (Biograph) 1858
Sonny Jim at the North Pole—April 20 (Vitagraph) 394
Sophie Finds a Hero—June 25 (Essanay) 1726
Sophie Gets Stung—July 2 (Essanay) 1852
Sophie Pulls a Good One—June 4 (Essanay) .. 1296
Sophie Starts Something—May 28 (Essanay) .. 1142
Soul of the Desert, The—April 30 (Biograph) .. 572
Southerners, The (Special—3 parts) May 22 (Edison) 1006
Spanish Omelet—June 27 (Biograph) 1860
Spellbound Multitude, The (The Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 9) (Special—2 parts) —April 20 (Selig) 406
Spirit and the Clay, The (Special —2 parts)—April 21 (Vitagraph) 394
Spirit of the Madonna, The—April 21 (Essanay) 394
Spoilers, The (Special—9 parts)—April (Selig) .
Sport and Travel in Central Africa (Special—5 parts)—June (Pathe) 1456
Squaw's Revenge, The—June 13 (Kalem) 1434
Stolen Formula, The (Special—2 parts) May 28 (Melies) .....
Stolen Rembrandt, The (Special—2 parts) April 29 (Kalem) 560
Story of Diana, The—April 4 (Selig) 258
Straw Hat Industry in Fiesole—April 21 (Pathe) .....
Strength of the Family Ties, The (Special—2 parts)—April 16 (Lubin) 252
Strength of the Weak, The (Special—2 parts) May 14 (Pathe) 852
Strenuous Ride, A—April 18 (Lubin) 250
Strongheart (3 parts)—June (Biograph K & E) 1886
Struggle Everlasting, The (Special—2 parts)—June 17 (Lubin) 1588
Stung—May 1 (Kalem) 560
Summer Love—June 2 (Lubin) 1298
Swamp Fox, The (Special—3 parts) -May (Kalem) 718

T

Taint of Madness, The—May 16 (Selig) 844
Tale of a Chicken, The—April 28 (Lubin) 568
Tangled Tangoists—April 24 (Vitagraph) 394
Tango in Tuckerville, The—June 8 (Edison) .. 1436
Tango Tragedy, A—May 23 (Lubin) 1158
Tango Craze, The (Special—2 parts—April 23 (Pathe) 412
Tango Plat, The—April 23 (Biograph) 572
Tattoo Mark, The (Special —2 parts)—April 28 (Vitagraph) .....
Teaching Father a Lesson—May 20 (Selig) 995
Termite, the Insect Architect, The—April 8 (Pathe) 110
Terrible Alternative (Special—2 parts)—May 30 (Melies) .....
Terror of the Night, A (Ninth of the Dolly of the Dailies Series)—June 13 (Edison) 1438
Test of Courage, The—May 29 (Lubin) 1158
Their First Quarrel—June 4 (Melies) .....
This Is the Life—June 10 (Essanay) 1434
Three Geese—April 13 (Melies) .....
Three Knaves and a Heathen Chinee—May 20 (Edison) 998
Three Little Powders—May 13 (Essanay) 850
Through the Bosphorus (Turkey)—June 16 (Pathe) 1726
Through the Flames (Special 2 parts)—June 24 (Kalem) 1724
Thumb Print, The (Special 4 parts)—June (Melies) 1456
Ticket to Happiness, A—May 19 (Selig) 995
Tight Shoes—May 22 (Kalem) 995
Tight Squeeze, A (Eighth of the Dolly of the Dailies Series)—May 23 (Edison) 1006
Tivoli and Its Cascades (Italy)—Mar. 31 (Pathe) 108
Toll, The (Special 2 parts)—July 4 (Vitagraph) 1866
Tom's Greatest—April 20 (Vitagraph) 560
Too Many Husbands (Special —2 parts)—June 6 (Vitagraph) 1440

Toreador's Romance, The (Special—2 parts)—May 12 (Cines) 712
Train of Incidents, A—July 3 (Vitagraph)....1866
Trap-Door Clue, The (Special —2 parts)—June 9 (Celio) 1434
Trapped By Wireless (Special—2 parts)—June 2 (Eclipse) 1148
Treachery of Broncho Billy's Pal, The—April 11 (Essanay) 100
Treasure Ship, The (Special—2 parts)—May 25 (Kalem) 1144
Treasure of Abdar Rahman (Special—4 parts)—April (Pathe) .....
Treasure of Sultan Abdar Rahan, The (Special —5 parts)—June (Pathe) 1744
Trinkets of Tragedy (Special—2 parts) —July 3 (Essanay) 1852
Trip to St. Mt. Lowe—June 5 (Kalem)..... 1434
Trooping the Colors—July 3 (Kalem)..... 1852
Trunk Mystery, The (Special—2 parts) May 27 (Lubin) 1156
Two Girls—May 9 (Selig) 716
Two Stepchildren July 2 (Vitagraph)..... 1866
Two Vanrevels, The (Special—2 parts)—May 29 (Edison) 1148

U

Under Desperation's Spur—April 11 (Kalem).. 98
Under the Skin—May 9 (Biograph)..... 854
Uneven Balance, The—May 19 (Essanay)....1142
Unfortunate Idea, An June 2 (Melies)..... .....
Unopened Letter, The (Special—2 parts) —April 24 (Edison) 398

V

Vanity Case, The (Special—2 parts)—April 18 (Vitagraph) 250
Vengeance Is Mine—May 8 (Lubin)..... 716
Vengeance of the Vaquero, The—May 23 (Kalem) 995
Visit to the Volcano of Kilauea, A (Hawaii)— Mar. 31 (Pathe) 108
Voice in the Wilderness, The (Special—2 parts) —May 22 (Essanay) 1142
Voice of Silence, The—June 9 (Edison)..... 1436

W

Wages of Sin, The, June 19 (Kalem)..... 1584
Wallflower, The, May 12 (Lubin)..... 854
Walko Sister, The June 30 (Lubin)..... 1866
Wanted, A House, June 3 (Vitagraph)..... 1438
War Bonnet, The, May 16 (Kalem)..... 844
Warning From the Past, A, (Special—Two parts) June 12 (Edison)..... 1438
War of the Lilliputians, The (Special—Two parts) May 30 (Pathe)..... 1160
Warrior Maid, The (Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 10) (Special—Two parts) May 4 (Selig) 568
Wayward Daughter, The (Special—Two parts) June 16 (Vitagraph)..... 1582
Wedding Present, The (Special—Two parts) April 28 (Cines)..... .....
Week-End At Happyhurst, A, May 4 (Edison.. 702
When A Woman Guides, April 9 (Biograph).. 246
When Conscience Calls (Special—Two parts) May 7 (Lubin)..... 712
When Dreams Come True, June 1 (Pathe)... 1297
When East Met West in Boston, April 22 (Edison) 564
When the Lightning Struck (Special Two parts) May 29 (Essanay)..... 1142
When the Men Left Town (Special—Two parts) June 5 (Edison)..... 1296
When the Night Call Came, June 13 (Selig)..1438
When Thieves Fall Out, April 1 (Selig)..... 258
Whiffles' Affinity, April 5 (Pathe)..... 256
Whiffles Hunts the Swag, April 21 (Pathe)... 412
Whiffles' Night Out, April 7 (Pathe)..... 108
Whiffles Picks a Partner, April 1 (Pathe)..... 108
Whiffles the "Spotter"—June 15 (Pathe)....1726
While the Band Played, May 16 (Biograph).. 854
Who's Boss—June 27 (Lubin)..... 1728
Who's Who (Special—Two parts) June 6 (Melies) ....
Widow Muggins's Wedding, May 25 (Biograph)..1156
Widow of Red Rock, The, June 10 (Vitagraph)..1440
Wife Wanted (2 parts) June (Broadway Star Features) 1880
Wiles of Siren, The (Special—Two parts) April 13 (Kalem)..... 98
Will Blood Tell? April 24 (Lubin)..... 400
Willie's Haircut, June 4 (Selig)..... 1292
Winky Willy and the Cherries, April 23 (Melies) 706
Winky Willy's First Cigar, May 4 (Melies)... 706
Winky Willy's Maxims, May 11 (Melies)..... .....
Winner, The (Special —Two parts) April 17 (Essanay) 396
Winter Excursion to the Falls of Tannforsen, Sweden, May 5 (Pathe)..... 710
Wire Chief's Reward, The—June 30 (Kalem)..1852
With His Hands (Fifth Story of "The Man Who Disappeared") June 2 (Edison)..... 1298
With the Burglar's Help, May 9 (Lubin)..... 716
Wolf, or the Conquest of Quebec (Special —Five parts) May 25 (Kalem)..... 1322
"Wood B. Wedd" Series No. 5 (In High Life) April 27 (Edison)..... 562
"Wood B. Wedd" Series No. 6 (A Lady of Spirits) May 25 (Edison)..... 1146
"Wood B. Wedd" (Series No. 7) (The Revengeful Servant Girl) June 29 (Edison)..... 1858
Wood Carving and Turning at St. Claude, (Prance) May 12 (Pathe)..... 852
Wooing of Sophie, The, June 18 (Essanay)..... 1584
Woman Against Woman (3 parts)—June (Biograph K & E) 1884
Wrong All Around, April 22 (Essanay)..... 394

Y

Yarn A Tangle, April 28 (Essanay)..... 564

Independent Releases

A

Acres of Alfalfa, May 23 (Keystone)..... .....
Across the Atlantic (Three parts) June 11 (Imp) 1448
Adventurer Trapped, April 17 (Lux)..... .....
Adventures of a Girl Reporter (2 parts)—June 29 (Imp) 1874
Adventures of Limburger and Schweitzer (Two parts) May 11 (Powers)..... 1166
Adventures of Shorty—Shorty Escapes Matrimony (First Episode) (Two parts) April 29 (Broncho) 580
Adventures of Shorty, The (Shorty's Strategy) (Second Episode) (Two parts) May 13 (Broncho) 868
Alarm, The (Two parts) May 28 (Keystone)..... .....
Algy's Alibi, May 24 (Thanhouser)..... 1302
All the Dog's Fault, June 1 (Powers)..... .....
Almost a Bridegroom, April 26 (Crystal)..... 418
Almost a Hero, May 5 (Universal Ike)..... .....
Ambassador's Envoy, The (Two parts) May 28 (Domino) 1308
Angel of Contention, The (2 parts)—July 5 (Majestic) ....
Angel of the Gulch, The, May 27 (Reliance)..... .....
Animated Weekly, No. 107, March 25 (Universal) 114
Animated Weekly, No. 108, April 1 (Universal) 268
Animated Weekly, No. 109, April 8 (Universal) 414
Animated Weekly, No. 110, April 15 (Universal) 576
Animated Weekly, No. 111, April 22 (Universal) 722
Animated Weekly, No. 112, April 29 (Universal) 860
Animated Weekly, No. 113, May 6 (Universal) 1014
Animated Weekly, No. 114, May 13 (Universal).1168
Animated Weekly, No. 115, May 20 (Universal).1299
Animated Weekly, No. 116, May 27 (Universal).1450
Animated Weekly, No. 117, June 3 (Universal).1396
Animated Weekly, No. 118—June 10 (Universal).1734
Animated Weekly, No. 119—June 17 (Universal).1872
Apollo Fred Becomes a Homeseeker, April 26 (Apollo) .....
Apollo Fred Sees the Point, April 5 (Apollo)..... .....
Arsenal of Lloyd at Trieste, The, June 1 (Powers) ....
As Fate Willed (Two parts) May 4 (Victor)..1012
Ashes of the Past (Two parts) May 2 (Reliance 726
At the Court of Prince Make-Believe, Mar. 15 (Eclair) 112
At the Hour of Dawn (Three parts) April 4 (Gaumont) 272
Aunty's Money Bag, June 14 (Eclair)..... 1594
Aurora of the North (Two parts) May 7 (Rex).1012
Avenged, May 24 (Rex)..... 1448
Awakening, The, June 11 (Rex)..... 1448

B

Baby's Doll, The, April 5 (Rex)..... 416
Back Yard Theater, Mar. 30 (Keystone)..... .....
Baited Trap, The (2 parts)—June 15 (Imp)....1874
Bar Cross Liar, The, May 31 (Eclair)..... 1166
Baseball Fan, The, April 10 (Powers)..... .....
Bathhouse Beauty, A, April 13 (Keystone)..... .....
Beneath the Mask (Two parts) May 18 (Imp..1446
Bess the Detectress—June 6 (Joker)..... 1870
Bess the Detectress; or Tick, Tick, Tick—July 1 (Joker) 1870
Beyond the City, May 20 (American)..... 1016
Birthday Present, The, June 9 (Majestic)..... 1600
Bill, No. 2 (Komic) ....
Billy's Riot June 18 (Sterling)..... .....
Blue Knot, King of Polo—June 24 (American).1736
Blunderer's Mark, The, June 21 (Eclair)..... 1594
Boarder's Mishap, A, April 29 (Joker)..... 574
Body in the Trunk, The, May 3 (Majestic)..... .....
Bolted Door, The (Three parts) April 13 (Victor) 576
Bombsky and the Bombs, May 30 (Royal)..... .....
Boob Detective, The—June 21 (Rex)..... .....
Boob Incognito, A, April 16 (Rex)..... 266
Boob There Was, A, May 17 (Rex)..... 860
Bowery Boys, April 25 (Keystone)..... .....
Boxes and Boxers, June 16 (Crystal)..... 1592
Boy for a Day, A, May 16 (Royal)..... .....
Brand of Cain—June 19 (Powers)..... 1870
Breed O' the North, (Two parts) May 20 (Broncho) 1170
Broken Barrier, The (2 parts)—June 27 (Reliance) 1870
Broken Barriers, The—July 5 (Frontier)..... .....
Broken Bottle, The, May 6 (Reliance)..... 866
Broken Vows (Two parts) April 27 (Victor)..1012
Brother for Brother, May 30 (Frontier)..... 1164
Bucket Sharpers, The, May 2 (Joker)..... 1012
Burden, The—June 23 (Majestic)..... .....
Busy Day, A, May 7 (Keystone)..... .....
Busy Man, The—June 20 (Royal)..... 1878

C

Calamity Anne's Love Affair, May 8 (American) 724
Call Back, The, May 18 (Victor)..... 1012
Cameo of the Yellowstone (2 parts)—July 6 (American) ....
Captain Bill's Warm Reception, May 29 (Nestor) 1166
Captain Junior (Two parts) April 15 (Broncho) 270
Captain in a Kid's Priceless Treasure—July 3 (Joker) 1870
Card Sharps, The (Two parts) May 7 (Domino)
Career of Waterloo Peterson, The, May 10 (Rex) 720
Cast Adrift in the South Seas (Two parts) May 30 (Bison) ....
Caught in a Cabaret (Two parts) April 27 (Keystone) ....
Caught in the Rain, May 4 (Keystone)..... .....
Change of Complexion, May 26 (Crystal)..... 1164
Charlie and a Dog, May 3 (Crystal)..... 574
Charlie's New Suit, May 12 (Crystal)..... 858
Charlie's Rival, April 21 (Crystal)..... 418
Charlie's Waterloo, May 17 (Crystal)..... 858
Cheese of Police, The, May 3 (Apollo)..... .....
Children of Fate, June 3 (Nestor)..... 1299
Child's Prayer, A, April 10 (Lux)..... .....
Cigar Butts, April 28 (Majestic)..... 724
Circus Romance, A, May 22 (Princess)..... 1168
Closed Gates—June 7 (Rex)..... 1872
Collecting the Rent, April 18 (Royal)..... .....
Colonel's Orderly, The (Two parts) April 9 (Domino) 270
Common Mistake, A (Two parts) April 23 (Domino) 580
Cooked Goose, The—July 5 (Thanhouser)..... .....
Could You Blame Her, May 22 (Nestor)..... 1010
Count's Infatuation, The, May 18 (Powers)..... .....
Courting of Prudence, The, May 19 (Beauty)..1014
Cowboy's Chicken Dinner, The, June 10 (Reliance) 1598
Crash, The—July 2 (Sterling)..... .....
'Cross the Mexican Line, June 17 (Nestor)..... 1590
Cuckooville Goes Skating, April 30 (Frontier). 576
Cure, The, June 13 (Joker)..... 1164

D

Dad's Allowance, May 14 (Frontier)..... 860
Dad's Outlaws, May 13 (Reliance)..... .....
Dancing Craze, The, May 19 (Crystal)..... 1010
Dangers of the Veldt (Three parts) April 11 (Bison) 414
Dan Morgan's Way, June 12 (Rex)..... 1594
Daughter of a Crook, The (Two parts) April 24 (Victor) 416
David Grey's Estate, April 22 (American)..... 420
Dawn of Romance, The, (First Series of "The Love Adventures of Doris Mason") May 4 (Imp) 720
Dawn of the New Day, The, May 28 (Imp)....1448
Day's Outing, A, June 26 (Lux)..... .....
Dead Broke, May 26 (Crystal)..... 1164
Dead Men's Tales (3 parts) -June 24 (Eclair).1730
Debut in the Secret Service, A, April 7 (Thanhouser) 268
Deceiver, The—June 21 (Komic)..... 1878
Decoy, The—July 3 (Princess)..... .....
Deputy Sheriff's Star, The (Two parts) May 9 (Reliance) 866
Den of Thieves, The—June 24 (Nestor)..... 1730
Desert Thieves (2 parts)—June 24 (Broncho)..1736
Diamond in the Rough (Two parts) April 26 (Majestic) ....
Did She Run?—July 4 (Royal)..... .....
Different Man, The, May 5 (Majestic)..... .....
Disenchantment (Two parts) May 22 (Victor)..1446
Doctor's Testimony, The (Two parts) June 5 (Victor) 1590
Dog of Flanders, The (Two parts) May 19 (Thanhouser) 1168
Dolores De Arada (Lady of Sorrow) (Two parts) April 18 (Bison) 576
Double Knot, The (Two parts) May 24 (Majestic)
Down on the Farm, May 14 (Keystone)..... .....
Dream Ship, The, June 16 (Beauty)..... 1736
Drifting Hearts, June 2 (Beauty)..... 1310
Drug Traffic, The (Two parts) April 8 (Eclair) 112

E

Easy Money, June 2 (Crystal)..... 1290
Embezzler, The (Two parts) Mar. 31 (Cold Seal) 416
Embezzler, The (Two parts) May 29 (Kay-Bee).1452
End of the Feud, The, April 12 (Rex)..... 112
Enmeshed by Fate (Two parts) June 12 (Victor) 1730
Episode, An, April 30 (Rex)..... 574
Eugenics Versus Love, May 5 (Beauty)..... 724
Exposing the Handcuff Kings, May 4 (Powers) .....

F

Family Feud, June 12 (Lux)..... .....
Fascinating Eye, The, May 16 (Joker)..... 1164
Fashionable Dances, May 10 (Rex)..... .....
Fatal Dress Suit, The, April 8 (Komic)..... 268
Fatal Flirtation, May 25 (Keystone)..... .....
Fatal High "C", April 9 (Keystone)..... .....
Fatal Letter, The, June 17 (Joker)..... 1592
Fatal Mallet, The, June 14 (Keystone)..... .....
Fatal Step, The, June 18 (Imp)..... 1590
Fatal Wedding, The, April 30 (Sterling)..... .....
Feast and Famine—July 8 (American)..... .....
Feud, The (Two parts) May 29 (Powers)..... .....
Fickle Mary Jane, May 2 (Royal)..... .....
Finnegan's Bond, May 11 (Keystone)..... .....
Fires of Ambition, The (Two parts) May 21 (Domino) 1170
Flirt, The—June 22 (Sterling)..... .....
Flurry In Hats, A, April 28 (Beauty)..... 578
Foolish Lovers, June 16 (Crystal)..... 1592
Footprints of Mozart, (Two parts) May 18 (American) 1016
Forbidden Room, The (3 parts)—June 20 (Reliance) 1874
Forced to be Stylish, May 8 (Princess)..... .....
Forest Vampires, The (Two parts) May 14 (Domino) 868
Forgetting, Mar. 30 (Imp)..... 414
For Her Child (2 parts)—June 23 (Thanhouser)
For the Love of Baldy, April 28 (Crystal)..... 574
For the Sake of Kate (Two parts) May 23 (Reliance) 1302
Fox, The (Two parts) May 21 (Rex)..... 1014
Freckles (Two parts) April 2 (Domino)..... 118
Frontier Mother, A (2 parts)—June 25 (Domino) 1742
From Interlaken to Brienze, May 25 (Powers)..
From Kandy to Colombo, May 24 (Eclair)....1010
From the Flames (Two parts) April 28 (Thanhouser) 724
From the Shadows (Two parts) June 2 (Thanhouser) ....
Fruit of Evil, The, April 22 (Nestor)..... 418
Gambling Rube, A—June 15 (Keystone)..... .....
Geisha, The (Two parts) April 10 (Kay-Bee).. 270

Gems of Brittainy, April 3 (Lux)
Get Out and Get Under, April 7 (Crystal)..... 112
Getting Rid of Algy, May 3 (Thanhouser)..... 864
Girl Across the Hall, The, June 14 (Thanhouser)
Girl and the Hobo, June 7 (Frontier)..... 1299
Girl in the Auto, The, May 15 (Lux)
Girl in Pants, The—June 30 (Crystal)..... 1870
Girl in the Shack, The, May 15 (Reliance)..... 1016
Girl Next Door, The—June 4 (Frontier)..... 1732
Glimpse of the Oil Regions of Texas, April 6 (Powers)
Godfather, The, April 11 (Reliance)
Golden Dross, The (Two parts) May 16 (Reliance)
Golden Ladder, The, June 1 (Victor)..... 1590
Grandfather's Romance, April 12 (Eclair)..... 414
Greatest of These, The, July 5 (Eclair)..... 1870
Gringo, The (Two parts) Mar. 27 (Kay-Bee)... 116
Gun Men of Plumas, The, June 28 (Frontier)..1594
Gypsy Romance, A, April 8 (Nestor)..... 112

H

Handle With Care, June 13 (Royal)..... 1742
Happy Coercion, A, April 8 (American)..... 118
Harbor of Trieste, April 29 (Joker)
Harlow Handicap, The (2 parts) June 30 (Thanhouser)
Hasty Exit, A, June 27 (Royal)
Heart of a Crook (2 parts) July 3 (Kay-Bee)..
Hearts and Swords (Two parts) May 28 (Sterling)..... 1164
Heart's Highway, The (Two parts) April 15 (Eclair)..... 266
Heartstrings June 5 (Powers)..... 1730
Her Awakening, April 11 (Princess)..... 578
Her Birthday Present, June 9 (Majestic)
Her Cousin Bill, April 14 (Crystal)
Her Fighting Chance, April 27 (American)..... 578
Her First Lesson, April 3 (Princess)
Her Friend the Bandit—June 4 (Keystone)..
Her Heritage, May 12 (Beauty)..... 864
Her Husbands, May 1 (Nestor)..... 574
Her Moonshine Lover, April 10 (Nestor)..... 418
Her New Hat—May 20 (Crystal)..... 1870
He Went for a Rest, April 24 (Lux)
Hills of Silence, The (Three parts) May 16 (Bison)..... 858
Hiram and Zeke Masquerade, May 28 (Frontier)..1448
His Dress Rehearsal, June 14 (Frontier)..... 1594
His Enemy, June 5 (Princess)..... 1600
His Hour of Manhood (2 parts)—July 2 (Domino)..... 1878
His Last Chance (Two parts) June 1 (Imp)..1590
His Lucky Day, June 9 (Crystal)..... 1448
His Punishment, April 14 (Majestic)..... 420
His Reward, April 24 (Princess)
His Servant, May 3 (Eclair)..... 576
His Strenuous Honeymoon, May 8 (Nestor)....1010
His Wedding Day, April 5 (Sterling)
Hopes of Blind Alley, The (3 parts) (Bison)..
Horse Wrangler, The (Two parts) June 13 (Reliance)
Hour of Reckoning, The (Two parts) June 17 (Broncho)..... 1600
Hour of Youth, An, April 12 (Thanhouser)..
House Discordant, The (2 parts) –July 2 (Rex)
How Green Saved His Mother-in-Law, April 25 (Joker)
How Green Saved his Wife, May 13 (Joker).. 858
How to Keep a Husband, April 19 (Crystal).. 266
Hubby to the Rescue—June 14 (Komic)..... 1878
Hunchback, The, April 12 (Majestic)..... 420
Hungry Soldiers, The, May 4 (Powers)..... 720

I

Idiot, The—June 26 (Majestic)
In a Persian Garden (Two parts) May 20 (Eclair)..... 1010
Independence of Susan, The, April 15 (American)..... 268
Infant Heart Snatcher, An, April 19 (Thanhouser)..... 578
In Her Sleep, May 15 (Princess)
In Love With a Suffragette, June 5 (Lux)
Intercepted Getaway, An, April 7 (Majestic)..
In the Barracks of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police of Canada, April 27 (Powers)...
In the Cow Country (Two parts) May 15 (Kay-Bee)
In the Days of Padres (Two parts) Mar. 26 (Domino)..... 116
In the Fangs of Jealousy (Two parts) May 13 (Eclair)..... 858
In Good Company, May 3 (Lux)
In the Moonlight (Two parts) May 4 (American) 724
In the Shadow of the Mosque (Two parts) April 2 (Eclair..... 414
In the Southern Hills (Two parts) June 18 (Domino)..... 1600
In the Spider's Web, Mar. 31 (Majestic)..... 116
In Wrong—June 23 (Crystal)..... 1732
Intruder, The, May 31 (Reliance)..... 1170
Intruder, The (Two parts) June 7 (Majestic)....
I Should Worry, May 16 (Royal)
Isle of Abandoned Hope, The (Two parts) June 13 (Bison)..... 1446
It's a Boy—June 29 (Sterling)
Izzy and the Bandit, April 29 (Komic)
Izzy, the Detective—July 1 (Reliance)
Izzy's Night Out—June 24 (Reliance)
Izzy the Operator, May 20 (Reliance)..... 1302

J

Jane the Justice, May 26 (Beauty)..... 1308
Jealous Husband, A, June 18 (Sterling)
Jealous Husband, A—June 25 (Sterling)
Jim (Two parts) June 15 (American)..... 1596
Jim's Mother-in-Law, May 8 (Lux)
Johnnie From Jonesboro, May 21 (Frontier)..1010
Joys of a Chaperon, The June 4 (Frontier)...
Just Neighbors, May 22 (Lux)

K

Kids, June 15 (Sterling)..... 1299
Knockout, The—June 11 (Keystone)

L

Large Birds, May 23 (Keystone)
Last Drink of Whiskey, The, June 7 (Komic)..1600
Last of Their Race, The (2 parts)—May 29 (Powers)..... 1730
Last Supper, The (Two parts) April 13 (American)..... 268
Latent Spark, The (2 parts) –June 4 (Domino)..1452
Law Unto Himself, A (2 parts) –June 18 (Rex)..1872
Legend of Snow White, The May 29 (Thanhouser)..... 1302
Like Father, Like Son (2 parts)—April 6 (American)..... 118
Link in the Chain, The (2 parts) –May 27 (Eclair)..... 1166
Lion, The—April 30 (Victor)..... 416
Little House in the Valley, The (2 parts) June 29 (American)..... 1876
Little Mail Carrier, The (2 parts)—April 10 (Victor)..... 416
Little Senorita, The June 19 (Princess)..... 1876
Lost Arrow, The –July 1 (Nestor)..... 1870
Lost By a Hair June 28 (Rex)..... 1730
Lost Sermon (2 parts)—May 25 (American)...1170
Lost, Strayed, or Stolen—April 12 (Crystal)....112
Lost—A Union Suit—May 10 (Thanhouser)..... 1014
Love Adventures of Doris Mason (Series No. 1, The Dawn of Romance) –May 7 (Imp)..... 720
Love and Duty (2 parts)—April 17 (American). 420
Love and Electricity June 27 (Joker)..... 1730
Love and a Lottery Ticket May 21 (Imp)..... 1012
Love and Vengeance (2 parts)—April 23 (Sterling)
Love Victorious, The (2 parts) June 26 (Powers)
Lover's Gift, The (2 parts)—May 17 (Majestic).1310
Love's Sacrifice (2 parts) –May 1 (Kay-Bee).. 868
Love vs. Duty (2 parts)—April 17 (Kay-Bee)..
Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery (Series No. 1 2 parts)—April 14 (Gold Seal)..... 722
Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery (Series No. 2—2 parts)—April 21 (Gold Seal)..... 722
Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery (Series No. 3—2 parts)—April 28 (Gold Seal)..... 1168
Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery (Series No. 4 2 parts) –May 5 (Gold Seal)..... 1168
Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery (Series No. 5 2 parts)—May 12 (Gold Seal)..... 1448
Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery (Series No. 6—2 parts)—May 19 (Gold Seal)..... 1450
Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery (Series No. 7 2 parts) –May 26 (Gold Seal)..... 1592
Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery (Series No. 8—2 parts)—June 2 (Gold Seal)..... 1730
Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery (Series No. 9 2 parts)—June 9 (Gold Seal)..... 1876
Lured from Squash Center –April 13 (Powers)
Luttie's Lovers –April 22 (Joker)..... 858

M

Mabel at the Wheel –April 18 (Keystone)
Mabel Lovestruck—April 3 (Lux)
Mabel's Busy Day June 13 (Keystone)
Mabel's Married Life—June 20 (Keystone)....
Mabel's Nerve –May 16 (Keystone)
Mack At It Again—April 6 (Keystone)
Maguets, The –May 30 (Joker)
Man, A Girl and Another, A—April 30 (Rex)..1012
Man in the Couch, The—May 17 (Komic)....1016
Man's Best Friend –April 18 (Frontier)..... 268
Man Who Came Back, The –April 21 (Beauty). 578
Man Who Lost, But Won (2 parts) –June 8 (Imp)..... 1732
Man Within, The –May 20 (Nestor)..... 1010
Man Without Fear –June 19 (Thanhouser)....1876
Marriage for Money, A—June 7 (Eclair)..... 1299
Mashers, The—May 19 (Crystal)..... 1010
Masked Rider, The—June 12 (Powers)..... 1594
Mask of Affliction, The (2 parts) June 17 (Eclair)..... 1594
Mein Lieber Katrina—June 5 (American)..... 1300
Mein Leiber Katrina Catches a Convict—July 3 (American)..... 1876
Metamorphosis (2 parts—June 1 (American)..1300
Mexican Warrior, A—May 25 (Imp)..... 1590
Midnight Supper, A—June 2 (Bison)..... 1299
Mike and Jake in the Clutch of Circumstances —April 11 (Joker)..... 416
Mike Joins the Force –May 9 (Royal)
Mike Searches For His Long Lost Brother—June 10 (Joker)..... 1448
Million in Pearls, A (3 parts) –May 15 (Victor) 1164
Miniature Portrait, The—May 12 (Majestic)..
Miser' Reversion, The (2 parts) Mar. 24 (Thanhouser)..... 118
Miss Nobody From Nowhere (2 parts)—April 20 (Imp)..... 414
Missing Bride, A—June 18 (Keystone)..... 1876
Mlle La Mode—April 14 (Beauty)..... 268
Mohammedan Conspiracy, The (2 parts)—May 12 (Thanhouser)..... 1014
Morning Papers, The –May 7 (Keystone)
Mother Michael—May 24 (Eclair)..... 1010
Mountain Law—April 26 (Rex)..... 720
Musician's Daughter, The (2 parts) April 14 (Thanhouser)..... 418
Mutual Weekly, No. 65—Mar. 15 (Mutual Weekly)..... 118
Mutual Weekly, No. 66 –April 1 (Mutual Weekly)..... 270
Mutual Weekly, No. 67 –April 4 (Mutual Weekly)..... 420
Mutual Weekly, No. 68—April 11 (Mutual Weekly)..... 580
Mutual Weekly, No. 69 –April 18 (Mutual Weekly)..... 726
Mutual Weekly, No. 70—April 25 (Mutual Weekly)..... 866
Mutual Weekly, No. 71 –May 7 (Mutual Weekly)..... 866
Mutual Weekly, No. 72 –May 14 (Mutual Weekly)..... 1310
Mutual Weekly, No. 73—May 21 (Mutual Weekly)..... 1452
Mutual Weekly, No. 74—May 28 (Mutual Weekly)..... 1600
Mutual Weekly, No. 75—June 4 (Mutual Weekly)..... 1740
Mutual Weekly, No. 76—June 11 (Mutual Weekly)..... 1878
Mutual Weekly, No. 77—June 18 (Mutual Weekly)..... 1880
Mystery of the White Car, The (2 parts)—April 7 (Gold Seal)..... 114

N

Nancy's Husband—June 9 (Beauty)..... 1450
Narrow Squeak, A—April 18 (Joker)..... 574
Nation's Peril, The (2 parts) –May 9 (Bison).. 722
Nature's Touch July 1 (American)..... 1876
Navy Aviator—May 13 (American)..... 864
Nearly a Burglar's Bride –April 22 (Komic)..
Neighborly Quarrel, A –April 23 (Frontier)... 418
Neighbors—May 21 (Sterling)..... 1010
Nell's Eugenic Wedding –May 9 (Komic)....
Newer Woman, The—June 2 (Majestic)
Newlyweds, The –June 19 (Lux)
Newlyweds' Dilemma –May 15 (Nestor)
Notoriety—April 13 (Imp)..... 266
Nugget Nell's Ward –April 25 (Frontier)..... 418
Nutty and His Father –June 28 (Eclair)

O

Oath of Pierre, The (2 parts) –June 8 (American)..... 1450
Old California (2 parts) –April 25 (Bison)..... 722
Old Cobbler, The –June 27 (Bison)
Old Maids' Triumph, The –April 27 (Powers).. 574
Old Man, The—April 17 (Reliance)..... 1872
One Best Bet, The—July 2 (Imp)..... 1874
One Hour of Youth—April 12 (Thanhouser)... 418
Only An Iceman—May 1 (Lux)
On Suspicion—April 19 (Rex)..... 268
On the Chess Board of Fate (2 parts)—May 14 (Imp)..... 1166
On the Rio Grande—July 5 (Rex)..... 1872
On the Verge of War (3 parts) June 6 (Bison).1299
Our Country Cobsin –June 6 (Keystone)
Our Daughter—May 17 (Eclair)..... 858
Our Large Birds –May 23 (Keystone)
Our Mutual Girl, No. 10—Mar. 23 (Reliance).. 116
Our Mutual Girl, No. 11—Mar. 30 (Reliance)..
Our Mutual Girl, No. 12—April 6 (Reliance).. 270
Our Mutual Girl, No. 13—April 13 (Reliance)..
Our Mutual Girl, No. 14—April 20 (Reliance)..
Our Mutual Girl, No. 15—April 27 (Reliance). 726
Our Mutual Girl, No. 16—May 4 (Reliance)... 864
Our Mutual Girl, No. 17—May 11 (Reliance)..1016
Our Mutual Girl, No. 18—May 18 (Reliance)..1170
Our Mutual Girl, No. 19—May 25 (Reliance)..1170
Our Mutual Girl, No. 20—June 1 (Reliance)..1302
Our Mutual Girl, No. 21—June 8 (Reliance)..1452
Our Mutual Girl, No. 22—June 15 (Reliance)..1598
Our Mutual Girl, No. 23—June 22 (Reliance)..
Our Mutual Girl, No. 24 –June 29 (Reliance)..1878
Outlaw's Daughter, The –May 9 (Frontier)..... 720
Out of the Dregs (2 parts) –June 12 (Kay-Bee).1600
Out of the Far East (2 parts)—April 6 (Imp).. 114
Outlaw's Nemesis, The (Thanhouser)
Out of the Night (2 parts)—April 20 (Domino) 868
Out on Business—May 5 (Crystal)..... 720

P

Painted Lady's Child, The (2 parts)—June 22 (American)..... 1734
Pair of Birds, A—May 10 (Crystal)..... 720
Pair of Cuffs, A—June 3 (Reliance)
Papa's Boy—May 14 (Sterling)..... 1164
Papa's Darling—June 22 (Imp)..... 1732
Passing of Izzy, The April 11 (Keystone)
Passing of the Beast, The –May 27 (Nestor)..1164
Pawns of Destiny (3 parts)—May 8 (Victor).. 722
Peace Brand, The –June 17 (Reliance)
Pearl of the Sea –July 5 (Powers)
Pitfalls—April 17 (Powers)..... 860
Poison—April 11 (Frontier)..... 142
Plot That Failed—June 19 (Powers)
Politeness Pays—May 1 (Princess)
Pretzel's Baby April 8 (Frontier)..... 112
Price, The April 19 (Eclair)..... 266
Prince of Bohemia, A –June 3 (American)..1300
Prince Willy June 28 (Eclair)..... 1730
Princess For a Day, A –May 29 (Victor)
Professor Smith—June 26 (Princess)
Protecting New York's Millions from Fire—April 10 (Powers)
Pursuit of Hate, The –June 14 (Rex)..... 1592

Q

Quack, The—May 6 (Nestor)..... 720
Quicksands, The—May 1 (Majestic)
Quiet Day at Murphy's, A –June 20 (Joker)..

R

Race For a Bride, A –May 10 (Komic)
Rebellion of Kitty Bell (2 parts) –June 14 (Majestic)
Relic of Old Japan, A (2 parts) June 11 (Domino)..... 1600
Remorse (2 parts) June 16 (Thanhouser)...
Repentance (2 parts) –Mar. 31 (Thanhouser).. 120
Retribution –April 7 (Beauty)..... 114
Return of Val Chanson, The (2 parts)—April 11 (Reliance)..... 116
Right Dope, The—April 15 (Komic)
Rightful Heir, The (2 parts) April 24 (Kay-Bee)..... 578
Risen from the Ashes—April 25 (Rex)..... 426
Rivalry (2 parts) –June 9 (Thanhouser)..... 1598
Roll Your Peanut—May 16 (Joker)..... 1012
Rose Bush of Memories, The (2 parts)—June 6 (Reliance)..... 1302
Ruby Circle, The (2 parts) –April 9 (Imp)..... 416
Runaway, The May 2 (Frontier)..... 576

S

Sadder, But Wiser –April 4 (Royal)

Sand Hill Lovers, The—June 15 (Victor).....1590
Severed Thong, The (2 parts)—June 21
Scene of His Crime—May 10 (Komic).....
Schultz the Barber—May 9 (Joker).....1164
Secured by Cupid April 6 (Victor).....112
(Majestic).....1876
Scrub Lady, The—June 7 (Thanhouser).....1598
Sea Coast of Bohemia (2 parts) April 16 (Imp).....266
Seat of Trouble, The—April 6 (Powers).....112
Second Clue, The—April 10 (American).....118
Secret of the Well (3 parts)—April 29 (Eclair) 576
Sergeant Hoffmeyer May 7 (Sterling).....858
Shadowed Lives—May 28 (Rex).....1592
Sharps Want a Flat, The—April 25 (Joker).....858
Sheep Herder, The (2 parts)—May 25 (Victor).1590
Sheltering an Ingrate—May 27 (American).....1170
Sheriff's Story, The—May 23 (Frontier).....1010
Shorty Escapes Matrimony (Adventures of Shorty, first episode) (2 parts) -April 29 (Broncho).....580
Shorty Escapes Matrimony (2 parts)—May 6 (Broncho).....
Shorty Gets Into Trouble (2 parts)—July 1 (Broncho).....1878
Shorty's Strategy (The Adventures of Shorty, second episode) (2 parts)—May 13 (Broncho) 868
Shorty's Trip to Mexico (2 parts)—June 3 (Broncho).....1452
Shultz the Paper Hanger—April 8 (Joker).....416
Silent Sandy (2 parts)—May 30 (Reliance).....1598
Silent Witness, The (2 parts)—April 22 (Broncho).....422
Silent Witness, The (2 parts)—June 22 (Victor)
Singular Cynic, A (2 parts)—June 19 (Victor).1590
Si Puts One Over—April 8 (Crystal).....418
Siren, The—May 13 (Nestor).....860
Sisters—May 22 (Powers).....
Skeleton, The—April 13 (Powers).....720
Skull, The (2 parts) June 25 (Imp).....1732
Squire's Son, The (2 parts)—April 3 (Kay-Bee). 116
Slavey's Romance, The—June 26 (Victor).....1730
Slippery Spy, The—Mar. 29 (Eclair).....414
Smouldering Spark, The—April 29 (American). 578
Snitz Joins the Force—June 4 (Sterling).....1590
Snookem's Birthday—May 2 (Royal).....
Snow Drift (2 parts)—July 1 (Eclair).....1870
Sophie of the Films (Series No. 2)—June 12 (Nestor).....1870
Sophie of the Films (Series No. 4) -June 26 (Nestor).....1732
Social Ghost, The (2 parts)—May 22 (Kay-Bee).1170
Society at Simpson Centre—June 7 (Eclair).....1299
Some Bull's Daughter -April 12 (Apollo).....
Some Hero—May 31 (Crystal).....1164
Somnambulist, The May 17 (Thanhouser).....1168
Song of the Shore, The—May 26 (Majestic).....1598
Sophie of the Films (Series No. 1)—June 5 (Nestor).....1299
Sophie of the Films (Series No. 2)—June 12 (Nestor).....
Sophie of the Films (Series No. 3) June 19 (Nestor).....1590
Soul Astray, A (2 parts)—May 11 (American). 864
Soul of Honor, The—June 13 (Majestic).....1312
Sparrow of the Circus—June 10 (American).....1450
Spotted -April 28 (Crystal).....574
Star Boarder, The—April 8 (Joker).....
Star Boarder, The—April 4 (Keystone).....
Stiletto, The (2 parts)—April 18 (Reliance).....
Stirrup Brother, The (2 parts)—June 3 (Eclair).1299
Stolen Code, The (2 parts) -June 20 (Reliance)
Stolen Glory—May 8 (Powers).....720
Stolen Code, The—June 20 (Reliance).....1878
Stolen Radium, The—May 29 (Majestic).....
Stone in the Road, The—May 31 (Rex).....1448
Story of the Olive, The—May 6 (American).. 724
Stranger at Hickory Nut Gap, The—April 23 (Imp).....414
Strategy of Conductor 786, The—April 26 (Thanhouser).....724
Strenuous Life, The—May 23 (Joker).....1448
Strike, The (2 parts)—April 21 (Majestic).....
Substitute, The (2 parts)—May 9 (Kay-Bee). 868
Such a Businessss—June 20 (Royal).....1878
Such a Businessss—June 20 (Royal).....
Surgeon's Experiment, The (2 parts)—Mar. 29 (Majestic).....116
Suspended Ordeal May 9 (Keystone).....
Suzanne May 10 (Eclair).....722
Swede Larson (3 parts)—June 4 (Rex).....1592
Swedheads, The—May 20 (Rex).....
Swindlers, The—May 19 (Majestic).....1310

T

Taint of the Alien, The—April 24 (Powers).....720
Tale of a Cat, The—April 25 (Royal).....
Tale of a Tailor, The June 23 (Beauty).....1736
Tango Troubles June 6 (Royal).....
Tavern of Tragedy, The—June 28 (Majestic).1876
Telephone Engagement, A—May 5 (Crystal).... 720
Telephone Operator, The—June 26 (Lux).....
Telephone Strategy, A—May 29 (Princess)..1452
Temper vs. Temper—April 27 (Imp) 574
Tennessee (2 parts)—June 5 (Kay-Bee).....1600
Test, The—April 15 (Nestor).....266
Texas Bill's Last Ride—April 5 (Majestic)... 268
That Cuckooville Horse Race April 16 (Frontier).....268
Their First Acquaintance—June 16 (Majestic).
Their First Anniversary—June 3 (Joker).....1730
Their Honeymoon—April 24 (Nestor).....418
Their New Lodger—May 24 (Crystal).....1010
Their Picnic—May 12 (Crystal).....858
Their Vacation May 30 (Joker).....1012
Those College Days—July 1 (Nestor).....1870
Thieves (2 parts) —April 16 (Domino).....420
Three of a Kind—May 23 (Royal).....
Through the Eyes of the Blind (2 parts)—April 30 (Imp).....574
Toilers of the Sea—May 11 (Victor).....1164
Too Much Turkey—April 10 (Princess).....
Toy Shop, The—June 12 (Princess).....
Tragedy of the Orient, A (2 parts)—June 10 (Broncho).....1600
Tragedy of Whispering Creek, The (2 parts)—May 2 (Bison).....858
Transformation of Prudence, The—May 15 (Powers).....1166
Triumph of Mind, The (3 parts)—May 23 (Bison).....1012
Twentieth Century Pirate, A —June 29 (Victor).1872
Twenty Minutes of Love -April 20 (Keystone)
Two-Gun Man, The (2 parts)—May 1 (Powers). 574
Two Hungry Tramps—April 25 (Royal).....

U

Uncle Sam in Mexico—June 8 (Victor).....
Undertow, The—June 8 (Powers).....1446
Undesirable Suitor, An—April 7 (Crystal).... 266
Universal Ike Has His Ups and Downs—April 7 (Universal Ike).....418
Universal Ike Makes a Monkey of Himself—April 14 (Universal Ike).....266
Universal Ike and the School Belle—April 28 (Universal Ike).....574
Universal Ike Almost a Hero —May 5 (Universal Ike).....720
Universal Ike Gets a Line On His Wife—May 12 (Universal Ike).....858
Universal Ike in Pursuit of Eats May 19 (Universal Ike).....1010
Universal Ike, Jr., and His Mother-in-Law—May 26 (Universal Ike).....1732
Universal Ike, Jr., in a Battle Royal -June 2 (Universal Ike)
Universal Ike, Jr., Is Kept from Being An Actor -June 9 (Universal Ike).....1448
Universal Ike, Jr., Barely Won Her—June 16 (Universal Ike)
Universal Ike, Jr., In a Case On the Doctor—June 23 (Universal Ike).....
Universal Ike, Jr., and the Vampire—June 30 (Universal Ike)
Unlawful Trade, The May 14 (Rex).....860
Unmasking, The—June 17 (American).....1596
Unredeemed Pledge, An -April 21 (Majestic).. 578
Up and Down -April 19 (Apollo).....
Up-to-Date Cook, An April 14 (Crystal)..... 266
U. S. Government Inspection of Meat -April 17 (Victor).....576

V

Vanderbilt Cup Race April 1 (Komic).....
Vasco the Vampire—May 7 (Imp).....1012
Venice—May 29 (Lux).....
Via the Fire Escape—June 30 (Beauty).....1876
Victims of Speed—April 1 (Komic).....118
Views of the Alps June 12 (Lux).....
Voice at the 'Phone (Series No. 1). June 19 (2 parts).....1740
Voice at the 'Phone, The (Series No. 2 -2 parts) June 26 (Kay-Bee).....

W

Was She Right in Forgiving Him? (2 parts)—May 26 (Thanhouser).....1300
Water Dog, The—May 18 (Keystone).....
Weaker Strain, The (2 parts)—July 4 (Reliance)
Weary Tom's Dream—April 24 (Lux).....
Wharf Rat, The (2 parts)—May 27 (Broncho).1308
Wheels of Destiny, The (2 parts) May 10 (Majestic).....1310
When Algy Froze Up -April 24 (Thanhouser).. 578
When Reuben Fooled the Bandits—May 21 (Keystone)
When Sorrow Fades—Mar. 29 (Thanhouser).. 120
When the Girls Joined the Force (2 parts)—April 17 (Nestor).....266
When the Wheels of Justice Clogged —May 31 (Thanhouser).....1300
When They Grew Jealous May 25 (Powers)..1398
When Universal Ike Set April 21 (Universal Ike).....418
When Villains Wait—April 30 (Keystone).....
Where Hazel Met the Villain—April 23 (Keystone).....
Where There's a Will There's a Way—April 9 (Imp).....414
Whistling Hiram—May 7 (Frontier).....720
White God Hath Joined (2 parts) May 6 (Eclair).....722
Who's Who—May 1 (Victor).....576
Why Kentucky Went Dry April 2 (Frontier). 416
Widow's Investment, The (2 parts) April 20 (American).....420
Wife (2 parts)—June 10 (Eclair).....1446
Wife On a Wager, A—June 10 (Nestor).....1448
Will and the Muse—April 26 (Eclair).....722
Willy Walrus and the Baby—May 27 (Joker)..
Willy Walrus, Detective—June 24 (Joker) ..
Woman in Black—June 25 (Rex).....1014
Woman's Loyalty, A (2 parts)—May 5 (Thanhouser).....864
Women and Roses—April 29 (Nestor).....574
Won By Fire—May 16 (Frontier).....860

Feature Releases

A

Acquitted (4 parts)—April (Great Northern Preferred).....126
Across the Veldt (3 parts) -April (Otis Turner)
Actor, The (3 parts)—April 30 (F. R. A.).... 868
Actress' Redemption, The, (4 parts) -June (Features Ideal).....1880
Air Torpedo, The (3 parts)—May (Warner's Features).....1320
Alone With the Devil—April (Great Northern Special).....
Alpine Tragedy, An (5 parts) June (Apex) ...1888
And There Was Light (3 parts) April 15 (Helgar Corp.).....
Angel of the Mine, The (3 parts)—April (Ambrosio).....422
Atlantis (6 parts)—June (Great Northern Film Co.).....1744

B

Bandit King's Fate (3 parts)—May (Sawyer)..
Banker's Daughter (5 parts) -April (Life Photo Film Corp.).....124
Battle of the Sexes, The (5 parts) -April (Mutual).....424
Battle of Vera Cruz, The (2 parts) -June (Wheeler and Snowbook).....
Battle of Vera Cruz (2 parts) -June (Sawyer).
Beating Back (6 parts)—April 11 (Direct from Broadway Features).....
Bells (4 parts)—June (Sawyer).....1604
Bird of Prey, The (2 parts) -June (Eclipse-Urban Film Co.).....1882
Black Nissen (3 parts)—May 30 (Gaumont)..
Black Nissen, The Human Beast (3 parts) -June (Gaumont).....1888
Blackship, The (3 parts) -June (Dragon Features).....1606
Black Triangle, The (5 parts)—May (Films Lloyd).....734
Blindness of Innocence (5 parts)—April (Beacon Film Co.).....126
Blue Mouse, The (6 parts)—April (De Luxe Attractions Co.).....126
Born Warrior, A (3 parts)—May (Warner's Features).....
Brass Bottle, The (4 parts)—May (World Film Corp.).....1028
Brewster's Millions (5 parts) -April 15 (Lasky) 428
Bringing in the Law (3 parts) June (Warner's Features).....1880
Brother Against Brother (4 parts)—June (Apex).....1748
Brute, The (4 parts)—April 27 (Famous Players) 870
Brute, The (3 parts)—April (Warner's Features)
Bushranger's Bride, The (3 parts)—May (Sawyer).....
Bushranger's Bride, The (3 parts) -June (Sawyer).....1746
By Power of Attorney; or the Mystery of Jack Hilton (3 parts)—April 25 (Features Ideal) 734

C

Calvary of a Mother, The (3 parts)—May (Leading Players).....874
Capture of a Sea Elephant (5 parts)—May (Blinkhorn).....
Cardinal Richelieu's Ward (6 parts)—May (Thanhouser).....726
Chicot the Jester (3 parts)—May 10 (Leading Players).....584
Children of the West—June (Warner's Features).....1748
Claws of Greed, The (3 parts)—April (Ramo). 270
Coils of Calamity (3 parts)—May 15 (F. R. A.)
Conquerors, The (5 parts) -May (Ramo).....
Convict Hero, The (3 parts)—June (Sawyer)—1604
Cora the Temptress (3 parts)—May 5 (Films Lloyd).....
Counterfeit, The (2 parts—June (University Film Co.).....1746
Count Sarks (3 parts)—May (Great Northern Preferred).....874
Creatures of Habit—June (Hepworth-American Film Corp.).....
Cry in the Night, A (4 parts)—May (20th Century Feature Film Co.).....726
Cry of the Captive, The (2 parts) June (Hepworth-American).....1882
Crystal Ball, The (3 parts)—April (Warner's Features).....582

D

Darkness and Dawn (3 parts) April 6 (Great Northern Special).....
Dead Man Who Killed, The (4 parts)—May (Apex).....1024
Death Balloon, The (3 parts) -April (Globe Feature Film Corp.).....426
Delaware Whapping Post, The (3 parts)—May (Feature Photoplay).....732
Detective Hayes and the Duchess's Diamonds (4 parts) -June (Apex).....1608
Disaster of Shaft 19 (3 parts) April (Warner's Features).....
Double Reward, A -June (Warner's Features) 1748
Dr. Goudron's System (2 parts)—April (Leading Players).....584
Dungeon of Steel, The (3 parts) April (Films Lloyd).....424

E

Escaped from Siberia (5 parts) -May (Great Players Feature Corp.).....734
Evils of Divorce, The—June (Schiller Film Co.) 1884
Exiled (3 parts) -May (Warner's Features).....

F

Facing the Gatling Guns (4 parts)—May (Mittenthal Film Co.).....1018
Fair Game June (Hepworth-American Film Corp.).....
Faithful Unto Death (4 parts) June (Eclectic).....1606
False Evidence (3 parts)—May (Warner's Features).....1320
Fantomas (Series No. 5—3 parts) (The False Magistrate)—June (Gaumont).....
Fight for a Birthright (3 parts)—May 1 Warner's Features).....
Fight for Freedom, A; or Exiled to Siberia (Four parts)—April 24 (Solax).....584
Fighting Death (4 parts)—April 10 (Blache).. 270
Flames of Justice, The (5 parts)—April (Primagraph Co.).....586
Flooding and Opening of the Panama Canal, The (4 parts)—June (Hagy's Features).....
Floor Above, The (4 parts) April (Mutual).. 424
Flotilla, The Flirt—June (Hepworth-American Film Corp.).....
Forgiven; or The Jack of Diamonds (6 parts) April (Stellar Photoplay).....582
For the Honor of Old Glory (4 parts)—May (World Film).....

Gangsters, The (4 parts)—April (Mutual).... 424
Gap of Death, The (3 parts)—June (Leading Players) 1602
Giants-White Sox Tour of the World—June (Eclectic) 870
God of Vengeance, The (4 parts)—April (Chariot Film) 424
Golden Heart, The (3 parts)—May 19 (Great Northern Special) 1324
Great Deeds, The (3 parts)—May (Ed. H. Wagner) 870
Great Gold Robbery, The (3 parts)—April (Greene's Feature Photoplays) 424
Great Leap, The (4 parts)—April (Mutual)... 424
Great Python Robbery, The (4 parts)—April (L. S. P. Co.) 586
Greyhound, The (5 parts)—June (Life Photo Film Corp.) 1316

H

Hand of Destiny, The (4 parts)—June (Eclectic) 1460
Heart of Midlothian, The (5 parts)—May (Hepworth-American) 1314
Hearts of Oak (5 parts)—May (Mohawk)..... 1314
Highwayman's Honor, A (5 parts)—June (Mecca) 1884
Highway Man's Honor, The (5 parts)—June (Mecca Feature)..... 1884
Hindu Nemesis, The (4 parts)—April (Master Producers Film Co.)..... 428
His Flesh and Blood (3 parts)—May (Warner's Features) 1324
His Flesh and Blood (3 parts)—June (Garrison Film Co.) 1606
His Highness, the Prince (3 parts)—May (Great Northern Preferred) 872
Home Sweet Home (6 parts)—May (Mutual)..1312
Horrors of War—May 30 (Leading Players Film Corp.) 1028
Hostage, The (4 parts)—May (Ed. H. Wagner) 728
House of Correction, The (3 parts)—April (Union Features) 126
House of Temperley, The (4 parts)—May (Cosmofotofilm Co.) 1316
Human Bloodhound, The (4 parts)—May (Mittenthal Film Co.)..... 1018
Human Wolves, The (5 parts)—June (Feature Photoplay) 1458
Hunting Wild Game in the South Pacific Islands (5 parts)—May 18 (Blinkhorn)..... 1316

I

Incognito (3 parts)—May (Warner's Features).1324
In Mizzoura (5 parts)—April (All Star)..... 124
In Search of the Castaways (5 parts)—May (World Film) 1028
International 500-Mile Auto Race—June (Indianapolis Calcium Light Co.) 1316
In the Enemy's Power (3 parts)—May 15 (Canadian Bioscope Co., Ltd.)..... 1602
In the Hands of a Woman (3 parts)—April (Warner's Features) 124
In the Hands of the London Crooks (5 parts)—May (Apex) 872
In the Hour of Temptation (3 parts)—May (Great Northern Preferred) 874
In the Line of Duty (4 parts) -May (East India Feature Film Co.)..... 1316

J

Jealousy (4 parts)—April 29 (Eclectic)..... 584
Joliet Prison, Joliet, Ill. (4 parts)—April 23 (Abo Film Co.) 1316
Jungle, The—May 25 (All Star)..... 1316

K

Kadra Safa (5 parts)—May (Wilkar-Films).... 870
Kangaroo, The (5 parts)—June (World Film Corp.) 1316
King of Beggars, The (4 parts)—June (Feature Photoplay) 1606
Kronstadt (4 parts) June 13 (Gaumont) 1028

L

Last 1,000 Days of Napoleon, The April (A. H. Woods) 1316
Legion of Honor—April 4 (Masko)..... 1316
Lieutenant Rose and the Sealed Orders (3 parts) May (Italian-American) 1020
Life and Works of Verdi (6 parts)—May (Atlas Film Co.)..... 1020
Life in the Holy Land (6 parts) May (Holyland Exhibition Co.) 728
Life of Big Tim" Sullivan, The (4 parts)— April (Gotham Film Co.)..... 582
Life of General Villa, The (7 parts) June (Mutual) 1312
Life of Shakespeare, The (6 parts) June (Trans-Oceanic Films, Inc.)..... 1602
Lightning Conductor, The (5 parts)—May (Sawyer) 1316
Lightning Conductor, The (6 parts) June (Sawyer) 1746
Lights of London (5 parts) June (World Film Corp.) 1316
Littlest Rebel, The (5 parts) April (Photoplay Productions) 872
Lottery of Life, The (3 parts)—May (F. R. A.) 1318
Loyalty (5 parts)—April 10 (Eclectic)..... 272
Lucrezia Borgia (2 parts) May (Leading Players)
Lure of Millions, The (4 parts)—May (L. S. P. Co.) 732

M

Madonna (3 parts) April 24 (Ramo)..... 1316
Magic Note, The, or How the Clouds of Darkness Rolled Away (3 parts)—May (Ambresio) 1020
Manon Lescaut—Man 18 (Playgoers' Film Co.) 1884
Mariner's Compass (3 parts)—May 15 (Canadian Bioscope Co., Ltd.)..... 1604
Master Criminal, The (4 parts)—Apr (World Film Corp.) 422
Master Mind, The (5 parts) -May 11 (Lasky) .1312
Master of Death, The (4 parts)—May (L. S. P. Co.) 1020
Master of the World, The—June (F. R. A.)..1744
Mendel Beilis (6 parts)—April (French-American Film Co.)..... 1316
Merchant of Venice, The (4 parts)—April (Universal Special Features)..... 1316
Mexican Mine Fraud, A; or The Game That Failed (5 parts)—May (Pasquali-American Co.) 1604
Mexican War Pictures (2 parts)—June (Mexican War Film Corp.) 1316
Michael Strogoff (5 parts)—June (Popular Plays and Players) 1882
Michael Strogoff; or the Courier to the Czar (5 parts)—June 1 (Popular Plays & Players, Inc.) 1316
Million Dollar Mystery (4 partse)—May (Solax).1318
Mistress of the Air, The (3 parts)—May 7 (Hepworth-American) 1460
Modern Mephisto, A; or the Oath On the Bible (6 parts)—April (Greene's Feature Photoplays) 122
Monomanic (3 parts)—May (Great Northern Special) 1316
Mother Love (6 parts)—June (Warner's Features) 1316
Mother Love—June (Warner's Features)..... 1880
Mother of Men, A (3 parts) -June (Warner's Features)..... 1458
Murdock Trial, The (4 parts)—April (Hepworth-American) 424
Mystery of Green Park, The (2 parts)—June (Eclipse-Urban) 1882
Mystery of the Castle, The (3 parts)—April 3 (F. R. A.) 1316
Mystery of the Glass Cage, The (2 parts)—Mar. 28 (Ambrosio) 270

N

Nell Gwynne (4 parts)—May (Sawyer)..... 1316
Nell Gwynne (4 parts) June (Sawyer)..... 1746
Neptune's Daughter (7 parts)—June (Universal Special Features) 1452
Norwegian Spy, The—May 20 (Chariot Film)..1028
Not Guilty (3 parts)—May (Apex)..... 726

O

One Million Dollar Pearl Mystery; or The Stolen Necklace (3 parts)—June (Dragon Features) 1606
One of Our Girls (4 parts)—June (Famous Players) 1746
On Life's High Seas (4 parts)—May (Gloria-American Co.) 1312
Only Son, The—June 15 (Lasky)..... 1316
Opium Smugglers, The (3 parts)—May 2 (Gaumont) 1028
Other Man's Wife, The (6 parts)—April (Gloria-American Co.) 426
Outlaw Reforms, The (4 parts)—May (World Film Corp.) 732

P

Pair of Queens, A—June (University Film, Inc.)
Pagan Rome (4 parts)—April (Vero Educational Society) 274
Path of Sorrow, The (3 parts) -May (Warner's Features) 1324
Perils of Pauline (First Episode) -April (Eclectic) 572
Perils of Pauline (Second Episode)—April (Eclectic) 572
Perils of Pauline (Third Episode)—April (Eclectic) 572
Perils of Pauline (Fourth Episode) -May 4 (Eclectic) 718
Perils of Pauline (Fifth Episode) -May 18 (Eclectic) 1604
Perils of Pauline (Sixth Episode) June 1 (Eclectic) 1606
Perils of Pauline (Seventh Episode) June 15 (Eclectic) 1606
Peteroff the Vassal (3 parts) -May 20 (Features Ideal) 870
Pierre of the Plains (5 parts) May (All Star)
Poison Needle (6 parts) May (Mittenthal Film Corp.) 1316
Port of Missing Men, The (5 parts) May 1 (Famous Players) 1316
Python Robbery (Four parts) May (L. S. P. Co.)

Q

Queen of the Fairy Thieves (Four parts) May (Apex) 728
Queen of the Smugglers, The (Three parts) May (Sawyer) 1316
Queen of the Smugglers, The (4 parts) June (Sawyer) 1748

R

Range War, The (Three parts) April (Warner's Features) 1316
Reckoning, The (Four parts) April 10 (Eclectic) 120
Red Club, The (Four parts) May 8 (F. R. A.)
Redemption of David Corson, The (Four parts) April 10 (Famous Players) 582
Red Flame of Passion, The (Four parts) May (Mittenthal Film Co.) 1018
Ring and the Man, The (Four parts) June 1 (Famous Players) 1602
Road to Ruin, The (Three parts) April (Warner's Features) 272
Rose of Surrey (Two parts) April (Blinkhorn) 120
Round Up, The (4 parts)—June (Superior Film Mfg. Co.) 1316

S

Samson (Six parts) April (Universal Special Features) 274
Saved by the Boys in Blue (Three parts) June (Sawyer) 1604
Saved From Himself (Three parts) June 1 (Canadian Bioscope Co., Ltd.)..... 1602
Sealed Orders (Three parts) April (Sealed Orders Film Co.)
Sensation of the Age, The (Chariot Film Co.) 1884
Shadows of Yesterday (Three parts) April (Ammex) .....
Shore Acres, April (All Star)
Should a Woman Tell (Four parts) April (Apex) 580
Sky Monster, The (Four parts) May (Universal Player) 126
Spitfire, The (4 parts) June 20 (Famous Players) .....
Spy, The (Four parts) June (Universal Special Features) 580
Stain, The (6 parts) June (Eclectic)..... 1746
Staircase of Death, The (Three parts) April 18 (Gaumont) 732
St. Elmo (Six parts) May (Box Office Attractions) .....

T

Tale of Love (4 parts—June (Garrison Film Co.) 1880
Tempting of Justice, The (Five parts) June 8 (Eclectic) 1606
Tess of the Storm Country (Five parts) Mar. 30 (Famous Players) 124
Thou Shalt Not (Two parts) May 18 (University) 1458
Thou Shalt Not Steal—June (University Film, Inc.) .....
Three Musketeers, The (Six parts) April (Cosmos) 428
Three Shadows, The (Three parts) April (Gaumont) 272
Through Dante's Flames (Four parts) May (Ramo) 732
Through Fire to Fame (Four parts) May (Apex).1314
Throw of the Dice (2 parts)—June (Hepworth-American) 1882
Tiger, The (Four parts) April (Gloria-American) 124
Tiger Countess, The—June (F. R. A.)..... 1880
Tito, The Terror (Three parts) April (Warner's Features) .....
Toll of Mammon (Four parts) June (Excelsior)
Tower of Terror, The (Four parts) May (Mittenthal Film Co.) 1018
Tracked Across the Desert (Three parts) April 8 (Italia) 582
Trail of the Lonesome Pine, The (Five parts) May (Broadway Producing Co.)
Trapped in the Great Metropolis (Five parts) April (Rolands Film Co.)
Treachery (Four parts) May (Mundstuk)..... 1028
Tricked by a Vampire (Three parts) May (Warner's Features) .....
Triumph of Right, The (Four parts) April (Pan-American Co.) .....
Twilight (3 parts) June (Warner's Features) 1748

U

Uncle Sam in Mexico (Five parts) May (Magnet Film) .....
Under the Mask of Honesty (Three parts) April (Warner's Features) 582
U. S. Mexican War on the Border, May (War Feature Film Co.)
Uriel Acosta (Five parts) May (Great Players)

V

Vampires of the Night (Five parts) April (Greene's Feature Photoplays) 122
Venetian Night, A (Four parts) April (Masko. 426
Very Much Alive—June (University Film, Inc.

W

Waif, The (Six parts) May (Eclectic) 870
Warden's Crime, The (Four parts) April (Apex) 580
War is Hell (Four parts) May 1 (Eclectic)..... 870
War With Huerta (Two parts) June (Magnet Releasing Co.) .....
Washington at Valley Forge (Four parts) Mar. 30 (Universal Special Features)..... 272
Way Down East, May (Wm. A. Brady)
Where is Colette? (Four parts) April (L. S. P. Co.) 426
White Dove's Sacrifice, June (Sawyer)
White Ghost, The (Three parts) May (Warner's Features) 1320
White Lie, The (Three parts) May 16 (Gaumont) 1316
Whom the Gods Destroy (Three parts) June (Features Ideal) 1602
Wifey's Charms (Four parts) April (Pan-American Co.)
William Tell (Five parts, May (Greene's Feature Photoplays) .....
With the Army and Navy in Mexico (Two parts) June (International Film News)
Woe to the Conqueror or The Law of War (Four parts) April (Italian-American) 580
Woman of Mystery, The (Four parts) May 16 (Blache Features) 874
Wonderful Prophecy (Three parts) May (American Kinetic) 734
Woman's Triumph, A (Four parts) May 16 (Famous Players) 1316
Won in the Clouds (Three parts) April (Universal Special Features)..... 274
World of Destiny, The (Four parts) May (Mundstuk's Features) .....
Wrath of the Gods; or the Destruction of Sakura Jima (Five parts) June (Mutual) 1458

Y

Yellow Traffic, The (4 parts)—June (Blache Features) 1744

Z

Zingo and the White Elephant (Three parts) April (Warner's Features) 122
Zingo in Africa (Three parts) April (Warner's Features) 122
Zingo's War in the Clouds (Three parts) April (Warner's Features) 122

The Majestic Motion Picture Co.

Releases Sunday, June 28, the Two Reel Feature

DOROTHY GISH

The youngest comedienne of distinction in America, whose charming personality is to be found only in Majestic releases and "Griffith" specials.

"ARMS AND THE GRINGO"

William Christie Cabanne
Director

An interesting and timely subject telling of an episode of present conditions along the Mexican Border, featuring

DOROTHY GISH

This charming little comedienne also appears in a snappy burlesque comedy that made us laugh and we believe will make you laugh—"THE SUFFRAGETTES' BATTLE IN NUTTYVILLE," a good-natured travesty in which, of course, the women win.

The Majestic Guide for Exhibitors

(In which we endeavor to tell the truth about all Majestic releases)

THE SEVERED THONG, two reels, release date Sunday, June 21. It will hold spectators in genuine suspense and will please by its reverent sentiment.

THE BURDEN, one reel, release date Tuesday, June 23. "Fair to middling," but not exceptional.

ARMS AND THE GRINGO, two reels, release date Sunday, June 28. An excellent offering that we think will draw business and please your patrons.

THE LAND OF LIBERTY, one reel, release date Friday, June 26. Interesting picture showing just how immigrants arrive in New York and pass inspection at Ellis Island.

THE SUFFRAGETTES' BATTLE IN NUTTYVILLE, one reel, release date June 30. A fast and furious burlesque farce described above.

D. W. GRIFFITH supervises the production of all Majestic releases

The Majestic Motion Picture Co.

STUDIO:
4500 Sunset Blvd., Los Angeles, Cal.

BUSINESS OFFICES:
29 Union Sq. West, New York City.

GET THE WINNER! FOR "THE TWICE OVER" HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL MONDAYS AND THURSDAYS

CHEER UP! LIVE AND LAUGH! SECURE SELIG'S COMEDIES THAT MADE "FUNNY FRIDAYS" FAMOUS

The Leopard's Foundling

Written, acted and directed by

KATHLYN WILLIAMS

An attractive and adventurous romance of African wilds, filled with surprises and sensations; and fascinating with a throbbing love interest. An alluring novelty, a splendid vital supplement to "The Adventures of Kathlyn."

IN THREE REELS—RELEASE JUNE 29th

June 30th—"HEARTS OF MEN"

A man unjustly charged with crime is hunted into the desert by the relentless sheriff. They square accounts in a desperate adventure and finally part friends. A thrilling story of a lonely, thirsty land.

July 1st—"THE EMPTY SLEEVE"

The love affair of soldiers' children involves the heads of their families; but is surprisingly settled to the satisfaction of all concerned. A clever little colorful romance.

July 3rd—"MAKING GOOD WITH HER FAMILY"

Young Stone is in love with Ruth Strong, and she insists he get acquainted with her family. He does and the fun is fast and furious thereafter. On the same reel with

"DOC YAK WISHES"

If wishes were reality, Doc would be completely covered with auto-experience medals.

July 4th—"THE LITTLE HOBO"

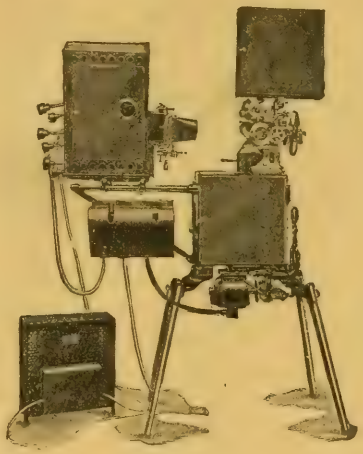
A lonely orphan girl disguised as a boy, takes to the road as a tramp, averts a great railway wreck and wins a home for life. A pathetic, exciting and ingenious story.

THE HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL

A standard success that gives the greatest sort of satisfaction in winning and pleasing patronage—"The World Before Your Eyes." Released every Monday and Thursday.

N. B.—SELIG'S posters have combined charm of delightful drawing, and superb color. They tell a story at a glance and impress favorably. Get the line to beautify your Lobby. One sheets on all releases; threes and sixes on all multiple reels.

THE SELIG POLYSCOPE COMPANY
CHICAGO



NO group of words that has ever been written by the brightest of scientific minds with intent to describe motion picture projecting machines can tell as much as the one word

POWER'S

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

Ninety Gold Street New York City